FOREWORD

This volume is one of a group of three documents which together constitute the official budget of the United States Government. The Budget of the United States Government, 1964, is a compact volume in a page size similar to that of an ordinary book. It contains the Budget Message of the President, summary tables and statistical information, and various special analyses.

The Budget of the United States Government, 1964—Appendix contains the text of appropriation estimates proposed for the consideration of the Congress together with specific reference materials on the various appropriations and funds. The contents of this volume are further explained at the beginning of each of its three parts.

The Budget of the United States Government, 1964—The District of Columbia is a volume which relates specifically to the estimates for the municipal government of the District of Columbia.

In addition, a pamphlet type of publication, The Federal Budget in Brief, 1964, is available for those who wish a much more brief presentation than any of the three official volumes.

NOTE.—Unless otherwise indicated, all references to years in this volume are to fiscal years ending June 30. Financial tables in Parts I and II are nearly always stated in thousands of dollars; details may not add to the totals because of rounding.

EXPLANATION OF ESTIMATES FOR FEDERAL FUNDS

Part I contains supporting details for Federal funds, including various types of tables and schedules, explanatory statements of the work to be performed and the money needed, and the text of the language proposed for enactment by Congress on each item of authorization. Material is also included on a few trust funds which require congressional action. This part is arranged in chapters reflecting the organization of the Government.

TYPES OF FEDERAL FUNDS

Federal (Government-owned) funds are of four types, as follows:

The general fund is credited with receipts which are not earmarked by law for a specific purpose, and is charged with expenditures that are payable from appropriations (except appropriations of earmarked receipts) and those payable from borrowing. Both in number of items and in amounts, most of the Government's business is transacted through the general fund.

Special funds are those which are established to account for receipts that are earmarked by law for a specific purpose. They exclude the funds which carry on a cycle of operations for which there is continuing authority to use the receipts (as described in the next paragraph). Some special funds are subject to annual appropriation by Congress. Others are automatically available under the laws which created the funds.

Public enterprise (revolving) funds are those which finance a cycle of operations, in which the expenditures generate receipts coming primarily from the public and available for continuing use. They include nearly all of the Government-owned corporations, the postal fund, and various unincorporated enterprises.

Intragovernmental revolving and management funds (including consolidated working funds) are those which are created to facilitate financing operations within and between Government agencies. They consist of two types—intragovernmental revolving funds which finance a cycle of operations, like public enterprise funds but with receipts primarily from within the Government; and management funds which permit the pooling of advance payments from two or more appropriations to carry out certain activities.

Other funds, for which the Government serves in a fiduciary capacity, are of two types—trust funds and deposit funds. They are explained at the beginning of part II.

FORM OF DETAILED MATERIAL

For each appropriation, this appendix includes certain detailed material, as follows: (1) appropriation language, if applicable; (2) a schedule of program and financing; (3) a narrative statement on program and performance; (4) a schedule of object classification. An exception occurs in the case of certain permanent appropriations and older appropriation accounts on which only a residual balance remains; such accounts of a bureau or independent agency are often combined into a single presentation instead of having separate schedules. Where the obligations fall in a single object class, the classification is identified in the program and financing schedule, rather than in a separate schedule.

For revolving funds, there are usually three additional schedules covering (5) a summary of sources and application of funds; (6) revenue, expense, and retained earnings; and (7) financial condition.

The basic schedules usually exclude supplemental estimates which it is expected will be transmitted to Congress later, for 1963 and 1964; these usually are covered by a separate, brief schedule of program and financing. Similarly, appropriation language is not shown for items proposed for later transmittal.

Supplementals required in 1963 to meet costs of recently-enacted pay legislation constitute an exception. The costs involved are included in the regular program and financing schedules, and the estimated supplemental appropriations (or transfers) are shown on separate lines of such schedules.

In the case of revolving funds, supplementals required for program purposes sometimes appear in the regular schedules because their omission would make the business-type statements difficult to prepare and to understand.

APPROPRIATION LANGUAGE

The language proposed for inclusion in the 1964 appropriation acts is printed at the head of each item requiring action by Congress, except for those items which are not formally recommended at this time but will be proposed for separate transmittal. The language of the 1963 appropriation acts is used as a base. Following the language are citations to relevant laws and the appropriation act from which the text is taken, as in this example:

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses in the Office of the Secretary, including the operation and maintenance of the Treasury Building and Annex thereof; services as authorized by section 15 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U.S.C. 55a); [and] the purchase of uniforms for elevator operators; [$4,510,000] and not to exceed $3,000 for official reception and representation expenses; $5,080,000. (5 U.S.C. 3, 22, 22(a), 22-1, 133-15, 241, 242, 244, 245(a), 246, 246(a), 2131, 2201, 2203, 2205; 57 Stat. 230; Reconstruction Finance Corporation Liquidation Act (67 Stat. 231); Treasury Department Appropriation Act, 1963.)

Roman type shows the text used in the 1963 appropriation acts. Italic type indicates proposed new language. Brackets enclose material which it is proposed to omit.

SCHEDULE OF PROGRAM AND FINANCING

This schedule consists of two parts. In the section for program by activities, costs or obligations are classified by purpose, program, or project.

The financing section shows the appropriation provided and other means of financing the program, and the disposition of amounts not used during the year.

Where the data are available in the accounting system, cost-type budgets are presented, as in the preceding example. Figures opposite the activity entries are the value of goods and services consumed in carrying out the program, in the case of operating costs; and they are the value of capital assets acquired, in the case of capital outlay programs.

The relation of costs to obligations is summarized in an entry "Change in selected resources." For appropriation accounts, this entry is supported by a footnote identifying the amounts of the resources involved. For revolving funds, the items are identified on the statement of financial condition and the appended tabulation.

Obligations refer to orders placed, contracts awarded, loan agreements made, and services received during the year, regardless of the time of payment. Total obligations are always shown; activities are reflected on an obligation basis where cost data are not available. Appropriations or other obligational authority must be provided by the Congress before obligations can be incurred.

NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The work planned and services proposed to be carried out are described briefly in a narrative statement for each appropriation or fund. Where practicable the narrative statement indicates the expected accomplishment in relation to the financial estimates, and gives some measures of program and performance.

SCHEDULE OF OBJECT CLASSIFICATION AND PERSONNEL SUMMARY

There is shown for each account a classification of obligations, costs, or accrued expenditures according to a uniform list of objects, as follows:

Object Classification (in thousands of dollars)

	1962 actual	1963 estimate	1964 estimate
11 Personnel compensation:

The object classes reflect the nature of the things or services purchased, regardless of the purpose or the nature of the program for which they are used.

The complete list of object classes is as follows:

- | | |
|---|---|
| 10 PERSONAL SERVICES AND BENEFITS | 30 ACQUISITION OF CAPITAL ASSETS |
| 11 Personnel compensation | 31 Equipment |
| 12 Personnel benefits | 32 Lands and structures |
| 13 Benefits for former personnel | 33 Investments and loans |

A personnel summary is appended to the object classification schedule, as illustrated:

Personnel Summary

Total number of permanent positions.....	472	486	502
Full-time equivalent of other positions.....	6	6	6
Average number of all employees.....	444	471	487
Number of employees at end of year.....	454	468	488
Average GS grade.....	9.0	9.1	9.1
Average GS salary.....	$8,140	$8,794	$8,944
Average salary of ungraded positions at hourly rates.....	$4,934	$4,884	$4,916

Permanent positions are those of a full-time nature which are of indefinite duration. Some are filled by persons with temporary appointments. The "number of employees at end of year" represents the number of (a) full-time and regularly scheduled part-time employees in pay status on the last workday in June, and (b) intermittent employees who work at any time during June. This is the basis for reports of the Civil Service Commission. Because some agencies have heavy summer seasonal activity, the June employment may not indicate a representative level of employment in all cases.

Average grades and salaries are computed arithmetically. Thus the average salary sometimes falls outside the salary range of the average grade.

STATEMENT OF SOURCES AND APPLICATION OF FUNDS

For all revolving funds, there is a summary statement of sources and application of funds. This statement shows total obligations adjusted to gross expenditures (on a cash basis), revenue and other receipts adjusted to applicable receipts (on a cash basis), and budget expenditures.

Summary of Sources and Application of Funds (in thousands of dollars)

Budget expenditures.....	-1,380	-3,536	-375

STATEMENT OF REVENUE, EXPENSE, AND RETAINED EARNINGS

For revolving funds there is also presented a statement of revenue and expense, computed on an accrual basis, and the resulting net income or loss for the year. This statement is usually on a full accrual basis, including sums for depreciation, provision for losses on receivables, etc. Where a fund consists of several programs, revenue and expense may be identified for each; otherwise, they are shown only for the fund as a whole, as here illustrated:

Revenue, Expense, and Retained Earnings (in thousands of dollars)

Adjustment of prior year revenue.....	11	-----	-----
Equity of Treasury, end of year.....	6,859	3,845	3,641

The statement includes an analysis of the retained earnings or the cumulative deficit. This analysis shows any additions to earnings, other than net income for the

TABLE ON UNEXPENDED BALANCES

A table at the end of each chapter shows the balances of budget authorizations carried forward at start and end of the past, current, and budget years. These balances are summarized in Table 10 of the Budget document.

Many budget authorizations are available for obligation for only 1 year, but some are available for longer periods of time or without time limit. In the case of those which are for a specific period of time, unobligated balances are written off at the end of that time, but obligated balances are carried forward indefinitely to pay outstanding obligations lawfully incurred.

In the case of salaries and wages, travel, and like items, the lag between obligations and expenditures is usually year, any charges made against retained earnings, and the balance of profits kept in the enterprise as of the end of the year (whether in the form of cash, inventories, other current assets, or fixed assets).

STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL CONDITION

For each revolving fund there is presented a balance sheet of assets, liabilities, and investment of the Government at the close of the year, as in this example:

Financial Condition (in thousands of dollars)

	1961 actual	1962 actual	1963 estimate	1964 estimate
Assets:
Treasury balance.....	1,775	655	191	66
Accounts receivable.....	221	131	50	47
Collateral acquired in liquidation of loans (at lower of cost or appraised values).....	172	158	143	128
Loans receivable, net.....	6,751	5,997	3,540	3,429
Total assets.....	8,919	6,941	3,924	3,670
Liabilities:
Current.....	154	82	79	29
Government equity:
Non-interest-bearing capital: Equity of Treasury.....	8,765	6,859	3,845	3,641

The balance sheet excludes balances of appropriations and borrowing authorizations which have not yet been paid into the revolving fund. The section on investment of the Government is divided into three subsections as appropriate: (a) interest-bearing capital, (b) non-interest-bearing capital, and (c) retained earnings.

Because the balance sheet is on an accrual basis, it does not reflect the obligations incurred which have not yet matured into liabilities, nor does it reflect unfilled customer orders received and available as a basis for obligation in the case of intragovernmental revolving funds. Therefore, there is normally appended to the balance sheet an "Analysis of Government Equity" which shows obligations other than liabilities, the unobligated balance, unfilled customers' orders on hand (where relevant), and invested capital and earnings, as in the following example:

Analysis of Government Equity (in thousands of dollars)

Undisbursed loan obligations.....	1,481	254	-----	-----
Unobligated balance.....	533	608	305	212
Invested capital and earnings.....	6,751	5,997	3,540	3,429
Total Government equity.....	8,765	6,859	3,845	3,641

no more than a few weeks or a few months. In the case of construction, major procurement, certain research contracts and similar items, the lag between obligations and expenditures may be 1 or 2 years or even longer.

The unobligated balance for each account represents the difference between the unexpended balance and the net obligations outstanding. Net obligations outstanding represent the unpaid obligations (both those which have accrued into liabilities and those which are undelivered or unperformed) less the accounts receivable and intragovernmental orders for services or material which have been accepted but have not yet become receivables.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

The Library of Congress, established in 1800, is not only the library of the Congress itself, but is also the principal general library of the Government of the United States. Its collections are comprehensive and varied, and include outstanding collections of books, periodicals, newspapers, documents of the national governments of the world, literature in the Oriental languages, etc., and manuscripts, maps, music, motion picture films, sound recordings, prints, and photographs. In addition to maintenance of the collections and the rendering of the general and basic services connected therewith, including the Legislative Reference Service, certain specialized functions are performed: registration of copyrights, catalog card distribution, and the service of books in raised characters and talking books to the blind. In terms of these broad fields of activity comparative obligations (including only those chargeable to annual appropriations) for 1962 and estimated 1963 and 1964 are (in thousands of dollars):

In addition to funds appropriated annually by Congress, there are also available a number of gift and trust funds, working funds, and allocations.

Estimates for the physical equipment, maintenance and operation of the Library buildings are carried under the request of the Architect of the Capitol.

1. Acquisition of library materials.—The Library's collections are developed in accordance with established acquisition policies: materials are procured by purchase, gift, exchange, copyright deposit, transfer and official deposit; and materials are selected for addition to the permanent collections. The objective for 1964 is: intensification of acquisitions activities and continued improvement in acquisitions procedures and in exchange relations with institutions in the more important areas of the world. The collections totaled 41,880 thousand items as of June 30, 1962, and consisted of 12,534 thousand books and pamphlets; 17,989 thousand manuscript pieces and 11,356 thousand maps, pieces of music, reels of microfilm, photographs and other miscellaneous items. Of the items received, about one million are added to the permanent collections annually. Those received from various sources in 1962 and estimated for 1963 and 1964 are as follows (in thousands):

The objectives for this activity in 1964 are the cataloging on a current basis of all important materials received during the year, the reduction of cataloging arrearages, and improved cataloging methods and procedures to assure the usefulness of the collections.

Selected performance data for 1962 and estimated for 1963 and 1964 (not including processing activities performed by the Reference Department and the Law Library) are as follows (in thousands):

4. Maintenance and protective services.—A staff of 197, including 82 part-time charwomen, preserves, cleans, and maintains the two Library buildings, collections, and grounds; operates telephone switchboards, elevators, check stands, and motor vehicles; procures and maintains furniture, office supplies, housekeeping materials, and miscellaneous equipment; assigns space; and operates the receiving and stock rooms. The Guard Force staff of 75 is necessary to prevent fire and theft, to maintain order, and to provide regular inspections of all areas in both buildings in which is assembled one of the greatest accumulations of national treasures in the world.

The Copyright Office is responsible for recording copyright claims, assignments, and renewals, for supplying copyright information to the public, for collecting and accounting for copyright fees, and for printing complete and indexed catalogs for each class of copyright entries. The Office is conducted for the most part on a self-sustaining basis. The amount requested is substantially counter-balanced by fees received for services rendered and the value of books and other library materials deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act and transferred to the Library of Congress. The income and costs for 1962 and estimates for 1963 and 1964 are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

The program and performance under each of the activities described are predicated on an estimated 270 thousand copyright registrations during 1964, an estimated 262 thousand during 1963, and an actual 255 thousand during 1962.

1. Receiving and accounting for applications, fees, and correspondence.—Materials received by the Copyright Office are assembled and routed; accounts are maintained for all moneys received; records relating to the registration of copyrights are filed; and materials are deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act. 3. Indexing and cataloging materials received.—The Register of Copyrights is required to print complete and indexed catalogs of all items registered. The catalog entries prepared by the Copyright Office are made available in part to the Library for its general operations. There were 255 thousand registrations cataloged in 1962 and estimates for 1963 and 1964 are 262 thousand and 270 thousand respectively.

4. Reference services.—The Copyright Office makes available to the public information concerning the provisions of the Copyright Act, including procedures, policies, and rulings; information concerning registrations is furnished on a fee basis. Obtaining compliance with registration requirements is also part of this activity. Performance data are as follows (in thousands):

The Legislative Reference Service prepares research reports, digests, etc., and supplies information in answer to inquiries from Members and committees of Congress.

1. Research and analysis.—The Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 lists 19 specific fields of congressional concern in which top-level research by senior specialists is authorized. These fields correspond in general to the areas of committee responsibility. The following 13 fields are now covered by one or more senior specialists: International economics, international relations, taxation and fiscal policy, American government and public administration, conservation, American public law, labor, engineering and public works, agriculture, price economics, national defense, social welfare, and science and technology. The senior specialists provide authoritative research and consultative services. In addition, 6 subject matter divisions, upon request, furnish to Members and committees information on, or analysis of, public affairs problems in report form or otherwise, charts, translations, and bibliographies, and answers to spot reference questions. In 1962, 99 thousand congressional inquiries were answered. The number answered in 1961 was 84 thousand. The number of inquiries in 1963 is estimated at 105 thousand; and in 1964, 110 thousand.

2. Preparation of indexes and digests.—The Digest of Public General Bills covers all public bills and resolutions. It is expected that there will be about the same number of bills to be digested during the first session of the Eighty-eighth Congress as were digested for the first session of the Eighty-seventh Congress.

3. Reference files, bibliographic and congressional reader services.—Reference files, containing clippings, pamphlets, and documents, are maintained as the basis for reply to a high percentage of inquiries; researchers are supplied with bibliographic and reference tools; selective and comprehensive bibliographies are prepared for Members and committees of Congress; and reader services are provided by the congressional reading room. During 1962, 107 thousand reference file items were processed, 15 thousand bibliographic citations prepared, 125 thousand published items acquired and processed, and 4 thousand readers served.

The card division sells copies of the Library's printed catalog cards and publications. It maintains a stock of over 104 million catalog cards representing approximately 4 million titles, and fills orders from over 14 thousand regular subscribers—mostly libraries—in the United States and abroad. In fiscal 1962, 119% of this appropriation was recovered in the form of receipts from card and publication sales. Receipts of $2,792 thousand were deposited in miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury in 1962. The objectives for 1964 are: meeting the increased demand for catalog cards and maintaining a reasonable level of service and economy; providing older series of cards by a more economical and quicker reproduction process thereby conserving space and providing fuller service; and the continued development of the National Union Catalog as the country's major bibliographic and locational tool.

1. Supplying cards for the Library of Congress.—The number of cards supplied to the Library of Congress in fiscal 1962 was 4,862 thousand; estimated for 1963, 4,900 thousand; and for 1964, 5,100 thousand.

2. Supplying cards for other libraries.—The number of cards sold in 1962 was 42,386 thousand; estimated for 1963, 47 million; and for 1964, 50 million.

3. Preparation, printing, and distribution of publications related to cataloging.—These publications are an integral part of the cataloging activities of the Library of Congress and include the Classification Schedules, lists of Subject Headings, Rules for Descriptive Cataloging, Cataloging Service Bulletins, and similar publications.

4. Preparation, printing, and distribution of the National Union Catalog.—This catalog (a cumulative author list) is issued monthly and cumulated quarterly and annually. Subscribers also receive issues of Motion Pictures and Filmstrips (quarterlies with annual cumulation), and Music and Phonorecords (issued on a 6-month basis and annual cumulation). There were 1,186 paid subscriptions for all issues in calendar year 1961, and it is estimated that there will be 1,200 subscriptions for 1962 and 1,400 for 1963. Included under this activity is the National Library of Medicine Catalog.

5. Preparation, printing, and distribution of the Subject Catalog.—This catalog is issued in three quarterly volumes with an annual cumulation. There were 467 paid subscriptions for calendar year 1961. It is estimated that there will be 475 paid subscriptions in 1962 and about 500 in 1963.

This appropriation is used to acquire domestic and foreign trade publications, both current and noncurrent. The publications acquired by purchase constitute a very important part of the Library's acquisitions although they represent only a small portion of the material received annually. The objectives for 1964 are: to continue the program for procurement of important research materials to strengthen the Library's collections; to acquire selected important foreign newspapers and periodicals; to increase the acquisition of important materials from critical areas, particularly from Eastern Europe, Africa, and Asia; to increase the acquisition of materials in the fields of science and technology; to continue the purchase of selected current titles on microfilm as an economy measure in lieu of binding; and to continue the microfilming of deteriorating materials as a necessary preservative and space-saving measure.

This appropriation constitutes the only means of acquiring law books published in the regular domestic trade (except for copyright deposits) and many foreign law books published in countries all over the world. The legal publications acquired by purchase constitute a most important part of the law library's acquisitions, although a substantial part of the annual receipts is received by means other than purchase. The special objectives for 1964 are: to improve the procurement of current foreign legal materials by placing purchase orders for certain necessary publications now received only irregularly through exchange or gift; to increase procurement of both current and noncurrent materials needed to strengthen the law library's already comprehensive coverage of critical areas in Eastern Europe, Asia, and Africa; to acquire photoduplicates of important research items, especially those from critical areas, which are no longer obtainable in the original; and to initiate a program for the microfilming or acquiring of microreproductions of deteriorating legal materials as a necessary preservative and space-saving measure.

The division for the blind is responsible for administering a national program to provide reading material for the blind of the United States, U.S. territories and insular possessions. It has two closely related operations.

1. Procurement and distribution.—It provides books in embossed characters, and talking books with their associated reproducers. The books are distributed through 31 regional libraries which assume responsibility for their custody and circulation. The reproducers are distributed through 54 State agencies. The maintenance and procurement of these books are shown in the following table:

blind readers and to complete the replacement of single-speed machines, and (4) continued increased emphasis on research in sound reproduction.

2. Cataloging, reference, circulation, and training services.—Catalogs of talking and braille books are prepared and maintained, including a Union Catalog of Hand Copied Books in Braille which brings together a record of holdings of all libraries for the blind. The division also maintains a unique collection (about 30 thousand volumes) of books in braille not available elsewhere for loan in the United States. During the past 5-year period 1958-62 the number of readers throughout the country requiring catalogs from which to select reading matter has grown from 59 thousand to 78 thousand and circulation from 1,646 thousand units (volumes or containers) to 2,513 thousand. The number of readers and circulation are expected to continue to increase in 1963 and 1964. Inquiries are received concerning library and related services available to the blind. Individuals throughout the Nation who are interested in transcribing or proofreading braille are trained and those qualified are certified. During fiscal 1962, 531 individuals were certified, and it is anticipated that this level will continue during 1963 and 1964.

The purpose is to preserve their contents and to make them more readily available for research. The program was started in fiscal year 1959 with an appropriation of $107 thousand. The objectives for the 6th year will be to provide negative and positive service copy on microfilm of material arranged and indexed, and to continue publishing indexes by photo-offset in editions of 1,000 copies each.

Section 104(n) of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (established by Public Law 85-931, approved Sept. 6, 1958) authorizes the Librarian of Congress to use foreign currencies accruing under this act to provide information of technical, scientific, cultural, or educational significance to the United States through the collection of foreign library materials and the distribution of copies thereof to libraries and research centers in the United States. The program is being continued on a full year's basis in three countries in 1963: India, Pakistan, and United Arab Republic. It is proposed to continue the program in 1964 on a slightly expanded basis in these countries. Also the initiation of similar programs in Burma, Indonesia, and Israel on a 6-month basis is proposed. Of the total amount requested, $898 thousand will be used to purchase foreign currencies, while $80 thousand will provide U.S. dollar support.

1. Acquisition of books and other library materials.—Based upon the information received during the exploratory stage concerning materials available in the three additional countries and the requirements of other Federal agencies and certain research libraries in the United States, publications and other library materials will be purchased in multiple copies from six countries and distributed to selected libraries and research centers in the United States, including the Library of Congress.

2. Bibliographic listings.—Accessions lists of materials acquired in the six countries will be prepared and distributed to libraries and research centers in the U.S. to inform scholars of the range of books, serials, and other library materials available under this program. Cataloging information will also be provided.

3. Operation of centers.—Centers staffed with foreign nationals and a limited number of U.S. personnel will handle acquisition, listing, cataloging, and microfilming.

The work programs of the Office of the Superintendent of Documents are of a service nature, and hence there is no control over the volume of work which is required by law.

1. Sales distribution.—Government publications are purchased from the Public Printer to be placed on sale. Acquisition costs are paid from sales receipts; hence no appropriation is required for printing sales copies. By law, the sale price is set at the cost of manufacture plus 50%. At the end of each year, excess receipts from sales not required for purchasing additional publications are turned in to the Treasury Department as miscellaneous receipts. For 1962, earnings from the sale of publications amounted to $5,770 thousand. It is estimated that earnings for 1963 will be $5,800 thousand and $6,000 thousand for 1964. These earnings more than cover the appropriation required to finance the sales program.

The sale of Government publications has been steadily increasing, and in the last 10 years the sales volume has more than doubled. The current public interest in the Government's publishing program points to a continuing increase in the volume of sales.

2. Distribution for other agencies and Members of Congress.—The Superintendent of Documents maintains mailing lists, including the list for the Congressional Record, and performs mailing operations upon request of any Government agency. Mailing services for farmers' bulletins, soil surveys, and other publications which are allocated to Members of Congress on a quota basis are also provided.

3. Depository library distribution.—Upon request, 1 copy of every Government publication is supplied to libraries which are designated depositories for Government publications.

4. Cataloging and indexing.—This activity covers the preparation and distribution of catalogs and indexes of all publications issued by the Federal Government, the principal series being the Monthly Catalog of the United States Government Publications and the Numerical List and Schedule of Volumes.

5. Contingency fund.—This fund is to be used only with the approval of the Public Printer, and only to the extent necessary to provide for expenses (excluding permanent personal services) for workload increases not anticipated in the budget estimates and which cannot be provided for by normal budgetary adjustments.

The Government Printing Office executes orders for printing, binding, and blankbook work, placed by Congress and the various departments and independent establishments of the Federal Government, and furnishes on order, blank paper, inks, and similar supplies. Operations are subject to the authority of the Joint Committee on Printing (44 U.S.C.).

A separate appropriation has been established for authorized printing and binding for the Congress; for printing, binding, and distribution of the Federal Register; and printing and binding of Government publications authorized by law to be distributed without charge to the recipients (76 Stat. 693).

All work for Government agencies is done on a reimbursable basis and financed through the Government Printing Office revolving fund.

Receipts from sales of publications by the Superintendent of Documents are deposited to the revolving fund and cost of publications paid therefrom. All profits accruing from these transactions are transferred to the Treasury general fund (44 U.S.C. 63).

Sec. 103. Whenever any office or position not specifically established by the Legislative Pay Act of 1929 is appropriated for herein or whenever the rate of compensation or designation of any position appropriated for herein is different from that specifically established for such position by such Act, the rate of compensation and the designation of the position, or either, appropriated for or provided herein, shall be the permanent law with respect thereto: Provided, That the provisions herein for the various items of official expenses of Members, officers, and committees of the Senate and House, and clerk hire for Senators and Members shall be the permanent law with respect thereto: Provided further, That the provisions relating to positions and salaries thereof carried in House Resolutions [331, 341, 348, 402, 449, 487, 509, and 560] of the Eighty-seventh Congress shall be the permanent law with respect thereto: Provided further, That the provisions of House Resolution 476 of the Eighty-seventh Congress shall be the permanent law with respect thereto.]

Sec. 104. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be paid as compensation to any person appointed after June 30, 1935, as an officer or member of the Capitol Police who does not meet the standards to be prescribed for such appointees by the Capitol Police Board: Provided, That the Capitol Police Board is hereby authorized to detail police from the House Office, Senate Office, and Capitol Buildings for police duty on the Capitol Grounds.

Sec. 105. No part of any amount appropriated in this Act shall be available to finance, under authority of section 4167(a) of title 39, United States Code, the mailing and delivering of mail matter sent through the mails with a simplified form of address under the franking privilege by any Member or Member-elect of Congress to postal patrons, including those patrons on rural or star routes.

[Sec. 106. (a) This section shall apply to—]

[(1) Each employee of the Senate whose compensation is paid from the appropriation for Salaries, Officers and Employees under the heading "Office of the Secretary", except the Assistant to the Majority, and the Assistant to the Minority.]

[(2) Each employee of the Senate whose compensation is paid from such appropriation under the heading "Office of Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper", except employees designated on the rolls as "special employees".]

[(3) Each employee of the Senate whose compensation is paid from such appropriation under the heading "Official Reporters of Debates".]

[(4) Each employee of the Senate whose compensation is paid from such appropriation under the heading "Offices of the Secretaries for the Majority and the Minority".]

[(6) Telephone operators, including the chief operator and assistant chief operators, on the United States Capitol telephone exchange.]

[(7) Members of the Capitol Police.]

[(b) An employee to whom this section applies shall be paid during any period of continuous service as such an employee additional basic compensation (hereinafter referred to as "longevity compensation") at the rate of $120 per annum if at the time of such payment the annual rate of basic compensation (exclusive of longevity compensation) of the position in which employed is less than $1,800, or $180 per annum if at such time such rate is $1,800 or more, for each five years of service performed as such an employee during such period. No employee shall receive more than four such increases upon the basis of any period of continuous service, and nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize the payment to any employee of total compensation, including longevity compensation, in excess of the maximum amount prescribed by law for Senate employees generally. Notwithstanding the first sentence of this subsection, the first increase under this section for telephone operators (exclusive of the chief operator and assistant chief operators), who on September 1, 1962, have more than 25 years of service as a telephone operator on the United States Capitol telephone exchange shall be $240 basic per annum. In computing length of continuous service for the purposes of this section only service performed subsequent to August 31, 1957, shall be credited, and in the case of employees of the Official Reporters of Debates of the Senate there shall be credited any service as such an employee performed during the period beginning on September 1, 1957, and ending on June 30, 1960, whether or not compensated from the appropriation referred to in subsection (a). Continuity of service for the purpose of this subsection shall not be deemed to be broken by separations from service of not more than thirty days, by the performance of service as an employee, other than an employee subject to the provisions of this section, whose compensation is disbursed by the Secretary of the Senate or the Clerk of the House of Representatives, or by the performance of active military service in the armed forces of the United States, but such separations and service shall not be credited for the purposes of this section. Longevity compensation under this section shall be payable on and after the first day of the first month following completion of the five-year period upon which such compensation is based.]

[(c) The Act of February 13, 1945 (Public Law 2, 79th Cong.; 2 U.S.C. 60i), is repealed, and no longevity increase payable under authority of such Act prior to the effective date of this section shall be payable on or after such date.]

[(d) Section 105 of the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1959 (Public Law 85-570) is repealed. Any member of the Capitol Police who prior to the effective date of this section completed service entitling him to be paid at a rate specified in such section 105 shall be entitled, so long as he continues to serve without break in service of more than thirty days as a member of the Capitol Police, to continue to be paid at such rate and, in addition, to receive any longevity increases for which he may become qualified under subsection (b) of this section, except that while receiving compensation at a rate specified in such section 105(1) no such member shall receive more than three longevity increases under subsection (b) based upon any period of continuous service, and (2) in computing length of service for the purpose of such longevity increases, only service performed subsequent to the date on which such member began receiving compensation at a rate prescribed by such section 105 shall be counted.]

The Court of Claims has jurisdiction over all cases involving claims against the United States (except in pension suits) instituted upon constitutional grounds or under Federal law or regulations, all claims arising out of any contract with the Federal Government and its agencies, and claims for the refund of taxes. It also has general jurisdiction to hear and determine claims for damages other than tort actions, provided the claimants would have the right to sue in law or equity if the United States were not immune to such suits. It has jurisdiction in suits against the United States by contractors dissatisfied with the findings and decisions of contracting agencies under terminated war contracts, and jurisdiction concurrent with that of the courts of appeals to review district court decisions in cases involving tort actions. It has exclusive jurisdiction to review the decisions of the Indian Claims Commission on appeal from the Commission. It also has jurisdiction in special act cases referred to the court by the Congress.

This appropriation provides for the statutory fees and allowances of jurors, fees of jury commissioners, fees and related benefits of U.S. commissioners who serve primarily as committing magistrates, and compensation of voting referees appointed pursuant to the provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1960.

The amount of service and the compensation of jurors depends largely on the number of jury trials requested by the parties to civil and criminal cases in the U.S. courts and to the administration of the jury system. The increase in the total jury costs is due primarily to the creation of 63 additional district judgeships by Public Law 87-36, approved May 19, 1961.

The earnings of commissioners are directly related to the volume of cases presented by law-enforcement officials.

The estimate for 1964 will provide for the modernization and expansion of telephone facilities, an anticipated increase in the volume of transcripts in forma pauperis, continuation material required to maintain court libraries, and other miscellaneous expenses. The amount requested is, however, $50 thousand less than the sum appropriated for 1963 by reason of a deduction for nonrecurring expenses authorized for new judges appointed pursuant to the act of May 19, 1961. A supplemental appropriation for 1963 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

The Office of Emergency Planning serves as a staff office to advise and assist the President with respect to the nonmilitary defense programs of the United States. This includes the coordination of emergency preparedness activities of Federal agencies, the development of emergency preparedness programs not covered by the responsibilities of the regular departments and agencies, and the performance of other duties in the areas of stockpiling, telecommunications, Federal disaster relief, and imports affecting the national security.

1. Emergency preparedness.—This activity finances the development of emergency preparedness plans and programs at all levels of government. Plans and programs are developed to assure the continued operation and control of governmental authority and to mobilize the country's economic resources under emergency conditions.

(a) Economic readiness.—Plans and programs are developed to improve the ability of the U.S. economy to perform under emergency conditions—from international crisis to nuclear war. These include supply-requirement studies, stockpiling policies, standby controls, dispersal policies, investigations of imports affecting the national security, and developing governmentwide plans for the mobilization and management of resources in an emergency.

(b) Governmental readiness.—Plans and programs are developed to ensure the continued functioning of governmental leadership and control in an emergency. These include achieving a standby capability for emergency operations on the part of existing government agencies; relocating essential governmental functions in an emergency; and the recruitment and training of qualified executive reservists who would be called to duty in an emergency.

(c) Regional, State, and local readiness.—Eight regional offices of the Office of Emergency Planning work with State and local governments on emergency preparedness planning. They also coordinate Federal assistance under natural disasters and assist the Federal offices in the field in developing a capability to perform their functions in an emergency.

(d) Policy development and program review.—Assistance is provided to the Director of the Office of Emergency Planning, the Office of Emergency Planning staff, and other Federal agencies on over-all emergency preparedness problems. Basic policies on emergency preparedness are developed and specific emergency preparedness programs are reviewed and evaluated against stated objectives.

2. Telecommunications.—This activity includes: (1) assignment of radio frequencies to Federal Government stations; (2) long-range planning for Federal Government radio frequency requirements; (3) review of the Government's use of radio frequencies; (4) coordination of telecommunication activities of the executive branch of the Government; (5) assisting the Department of State on international telecommunication matters; (6) stimulation of research in the telecommunications field; and (7) planning for the mobilization and use of the Nation's telecommunications resources. A supplemental appropriation for 1963 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

3. Administration and executive direction.—The necessary staff support is provided to the Director of the Office of Emergency Planning and other Office of Emergency Planning offices under this activity. Services include general administration, public information and liaison and legal assistance. Funds are also included to finance the housekeeping expenses of the Office of Emergency Planning in Washington. This activity also includes the salaries of the Director of the Office of Emergency Planning, the Deputy Director, three Assistant Directors and their immediate staff. The Director is a principal advisor to the President on nonmilitary defense. He serves as a member of the National Security Council and participates in meetings of the Cabinet by invitation of the President.

4. Research and development.—This activity finances technical studies of emergency preparedness problems which cut across the functional responsibilities of other Federal agencies. Contracts are made with universities and private organizations when it is not feasible nor economical to hire a permanent Office of Emergency Planning staff.

5. Civil defense.—Obligations reflected under this activity cover civil defense operating functions in 1962 prior to their transfer to other agencies.

Under the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, designated agencies are authorized with Presidential approval to incur obligations and make expenditures to secure expanded production of critical materials in furtherance of the defense effort. The program is conducted primarily through a revolving fund financed by borrowings from the Treasury. The amount borrowed may not exceed $2.1 billion outstanding at any one time, but the act permits contingent liabilities to be considered as obligations only to the extent of the probable ultimate net costs to the United States, rather than in the full amount of the gross commitments outstanding. To the extent that money must be expended to fulfill commitments even though the expenditures are considered to be ultimately recoverable (through repayment of loans and sale of inventories, for example), portions of the borrowing authority are used for working capital on a current basis. Due to the imminent exhaustion of this borrowing authority, a direct appropriation of $108 million was enacted for 1959, thus providing cumulative financing authority of $2,208 million.

The following agencies have been designated to carry out programs to expand production capacity as follows:

General Services Administration.—Purchase and resale of metals, minerals, and machine tools, and research and pilot plant operations to develop new materials, and new techniques for utilizing low-grade domestic ores.

Department of Agriculture.—Purchase and resale of agricultural commodities.

Department of the Interior.—Loans and grants to encourage exploration for strategic and critical minerals.

Treasury Department.—Loans to domestic private enterprises.

Export-Import Bank of Washington.—Loans to foreign private enterprises.

Programs must be certified as essential to the national defense by the Office of Emergency Planning.

Allocations of borrowing authority by the Office of Emergency Planning and net borrowing from the U.S. Treasury as of June 30, 1962, were as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Authorized agency	Borrowing authority allocated	Borrowings outstanding	Net available for borrowing
General Services Administration ¹	1,854,000	1,789,700	64,300
Treasury Department.....	106,600	90,550	16,050
Department of Agriculture.....	76,400	64,578	11,822
Department of the Interior.....	35,800	31,000	4,800
Export-Import Bank of Washington.....	20,500		20,500
Office of Emergency Planning—reserve.....	6,700		6,700
Total.....	2,100,000	1,975,828	124,172

¹ In addition a direct appropriation of $108 million for liquidation of borrowing from the Treasury was applied to General Services Administration borrowings, thus providing total financing of $1,962 million to that agency.

As one of the inducements for expanding production most of the contracts provide a guaranteed market for the production from expanded facilities. Significant amounts of materials have been delivered to the Defense Production Act inventory under these contracts. Investment in inventory of $1,484 million on June 30, 1961, and $1,500 million on June 30, 1962, is expected to decrease to $1,464 million by June 30, 1964.

Progress has been made in disposing of Defense Production Act materials primarily by sales to other government agencies and industry and steps are being taken to increase and accelerate the disposal program for these materials wherever this can be accomplished without undue effects on the market.

Interest continues to accrue, payable by the fund to the Treasury, not only on the borrowings invested in loans and inventories, but also on the borrowings which have been used to cover expenses and losses. Since there is no way for the fund to recover its realized losses or reduce inventories appreciably in a short period of time, the perpetuation of the interest-bearing arrangement on such expended capital merely makes the cumulative deficit even greater as the interest accrues.

General Services Administration.—Financing of $1,962 million has been authorized by the Office of Emergency Planning as of June 30, 1962, to cover the expansion of productive capacity for strategic metals, minerals, and machine tools. This amount includes $1,854 million in borrowing authority and a direct appropriation of $108 million made in 1959.

The bulk of the expansion programs have been completed, with the major problems now being custody, maintenance, and eventual disposition of the materials and facilities. The exercise of option rights by contractors has been carefully examined with a view to reducing deliveries to the Government as far as possible within the terms of the contracts whenever basic stockpiling objectives have been attained. Between July 1, 1957, and June 30, 1962, a reduction of $351.3 million in gross commitments under the Defense Production Act was attained through renegotiation of contracts.

A summary of transactions involving strategic minerals and metals (including work-in-process inventory) under this fund follows (in millions of dollars):

Sales receipts.....	38	30	28
Loss on sales.....	3	9	6
Cost of goods sold.....	41	39	34
Closing inventory.....	1,500	1,489	1,464

As of June 30, 1962, a total of $7,508.7 million in gross value of contracts has been entered into by the General Services Administration under Defense Production Act authority. Of this amount a total of $7,218 million has been completed as measured by procurement, expiration of contractors options on guaranteed production, completion of facilities, completed research, etc. The balance of $290.7 million includes a total of $201 million of commodity contracts, of which probable deliveries are estimated at $40.9 million.

Department of Agriculture.—The purchase, management, and resale of agricultural commodities, except forest products, were carried out by the Commodity Credit Corporation, which was reimbursed from this fund for the net costs involved. The Secretary of Agriculture has been allocated borrowing authority for this purpose.

All programs certified to the Secretary of Agriculture under the Defense Production Act were completed by 1961.

Department of the Interior.—Department of the Interior operations to expand defense production under section 303 of the Defense Production Act of 1950, were limited to the encouragement of exploration for strategic and critical mineral commodities. The operations were administered by the Defense Minerals Exploration Administration until September 11, 1958, when the Office of Minerals Exploration was established under authority of Public Law 85-701. As successor agency, the Office of Minerals Exploration was empowered to use appropriated funds to administer the Defense Minerals Exploration Administration contracts under which royalty obligations remain, as well as to conduct a similar exploration assistance program.

On June 30, 1962, borrowing authority certified by the Office of Emergency Planning to Interior amounted to $35.8 million and $31 million had been borrowed. On July 1, 1962, notes totaling $16 million became due with interest of $1.5 million which necessitated the executing of a new note for $17.1 million and increased the total of notes outstanding to $32.1 million. The tables attached have been prepared on the assumption additional borrowing authority will not be required during 1963 and 1964. In preparing the 1964 budget the Office of Minerals Exploration has assumed that interest will continue to accrue. Interest accruals will exceed royalty receipts and interest payable on notes of $5 million which will mature on July 1, 1964, will necessitate additional borrowing.

The last 3 of the 1,159 contracts executed under the Defense Minerals Exploration Administration program were terminated and certified during 1962 raising to 399 the total certified. Royalty obligations remaining on 366 contracts amount to $12.3 million. Royalties on production from any of these projects within the specified period (usually 10 years—a few of 31 years) will be applied toward the Government funds spent. Royalties on production from Defense Minerals Exploration Administration projects total $4.3 million and are estimated at $350 thousand each for 1963 and 1964. Losses realized on 793 closed contracts stand at $6.7 million.

Treasury Department.—The function of making and administering loans to private business enterprises under the authority of section 302 of the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, was assigned to the Secretary of the Treasury by Executive Order 10489, dated September 26, 1953. Applications for loans are considered only upon certification of essentiality by the Office of Emergency Planning.

No new loans were authorized during 1962. It is anticipated that there will be no additional loans authorized in 1963 and 1964. However, one loan was purchased under a deferred participation commitment during 1962.

The changes in loans and deferred participation commitments estimated for 1963 and 1964 are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

	Loans	Deferred participation commitments
Outstanding June 30, 1962.....	121,307	1,488
Repayments 1963.....	—3,768	—829
Outstanding June 30, 1963.....	117,539	659
Repayments 1964.....	—8,905	—280
Outstanding June 30, 1964.....	108,634	379

Export-Import Bank of Washington.—Pursuant to section 311 of Executive Order 10480 of August 14, 1953, which superseded Executive Order 10161, the Export-Import Bank, with funds provided under section 304 of the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, is responsible for making and administering all loans under section 302 of the act, upon receipt of certificates of essentiality issued by the Director of Defense Mobilization or the General Services Administrator, where the expansion, development, or production so financed was carried on in foreign countries.

No certifications were received and no new loans were authorized in 1962. The Bank does not anticipate any additional certifications, consequently, no additional obligational authority will be required.

The net budget receipts for 1962 were $15.3 million and the cumulative net receipts from Export-Import Bank's operation under this program was $5,019 thousand.

The balance of the borrowing authority allocated to the Bank and available in 1962 was $20.5 million. Under date of August 15, 1962, the Office of Emergency Planning canceled the entire amount. All obligations due the U.S. Treasury were repaid during 1962.

One loan with a balance of $32 thousand was outstanding and past due at June 30, 1962; efforts to recover are currently pending in court. If legal action is not successful the balance of this loan will, undoubtedly, be charged off in 1963.

The military assistance program is designed to strengthen the security of the free world by contributing to the development, maintenance, and training of modern military forces.

More than 60 free-world countries are receiving grant aid under this program. They and some others are eligible to buy military equipment on cash or credit terms. Their combined military forces are numerically much greater than the U.S. Armed Forces, and provide free-world defensive capability, depth in reserves, and flexibility. Many of these countries have joined in regional defense pacts, such as North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, and Central Treaty Organization, or in bilateral defense arrangements with the United States. Most of the U.S. contributions to these regional organizations are derived from military assistance program funds.

Most of the military equipment and supplies which the United States provides to its foreign allies are obtained by placing orders with the U.S. military services. Military assistance funds are reserved when the orders are placed, and the military services are paid when the items are delivered.

The kind of materiel supplied by the United States varies with objectives in each area and the requirements and capabilities of the individual countries. The present emphasis is on modernization of conventional equipment in less-developed areas where U.S. assistance is needed to supplement their production or financial capability. Whenever possible, materiel already on hand but excess to the needs of U.S. forces is supplied, at no charge to the military assistance program except for the cost of rehabilitation and transportation.

Grant aid operations: Reservations for requirements ordered from U.S. military services—1. Aircraft.—In 1963 and 1964, aircraft will be funded partly through reservations and partly by direct obligations as shown above. Emphasis is to be placed on more advanced aircraft in selected countries. At the same time, the air forces of many less-developed countries are replacing obsolete planes with later model aircraft.

2. Ships.—New construction of patrol, mine-sweeping and other type vessels is included in the 1964 program. Reactivation and rehabilitation of ships from the U.S. "mothball" fleet to meet other naval requirements of our allies can only be met under authority of ship loan legislation.

3. Tanks, other vehicles, and weapons.—Included is combat and support equipment ranging from artillery, tanks, and other heavy vehicles to small arms and jeeps. Some of these items are supplied from existing U.S. stocks. The 1964 program includes continuing replacement of worn-out or obsolete equipment in the forces of less-developed countries.

4. Ammunition.—Most of the ammunition to be supplied as grant aid in 1964 will be used for training allied troops.

5. Missiles.—Programing for modernization of forces with ballistic and other guided missiles, primarily in NATO, reached a peak in 1961 and continues at a decreased level in 1964. In addition, the 1964 program provides for maintenance of certain of the equipment previously furnished.

6. Electronic equipment.—The 1964 program continues the modernization of military communications systems in less-developed countries.

7. Military public works.—Materiel and equipment directly supplied by the United States for military assistance construction are procured through the military service supply systems. Other U.S. costs for this construction are met initially by the military assistance program and are cited in paragraph 14 below.

8. Other.—A variety of special purpose equipment, and other supplies, and repair and rehabilitation of used equipment not covered above are provided through orders placed with the U.S. services.

Because of the timelag in manufacturers leadtime, and the worldwide supply operation, a large proportion of the items delivered by the U.S. services in any year result from orders placed in previous years.

The following table reflects the undelivered orders placed with the military services in prior years, the new items ordered, and the deliveries and payments made (a detail table appears in Defense—Military chapter).

[In millions of dollars]

Payment for deliveries.....	813.6	1,016.0	760.0

Obligations for requirements other than through reservations—9. Offshore procurement.—The procurement of equipment and supplies abroad for the military assistance program is subject to the provisions of section 604(a) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended.

10. Supply operations.—The annual cost of packing, handling, storing, and transporting military assistance materiel varies in proportion to the types, volume, and destination of goods delivered.

11. Training.—Training programs in free-world countries are required to insure effective use of the new weapons and equipment supplied through the military assistance program, teach basic skills to forces of less-developed nations, and create favorable attitudes toward the United States and its policies.

12. Administration.—The administrative expenses of the program incurred by U.S. military assistance advisory groups, the unified commands overseas, and the departments are included.

13. Contributions to international military headquarters and agencies.—Included are the assessments levied against the United States in accordance with cost-sharing agreements for the administrative support of the military headquarters and agencies, including the standing group of the NATO, SEATO, and the CENTO.

14. Contributions to construction of facilities in other countries.—Included are (a) construction of military and logistical facilities under the jointly financed NATO infrastructure program, and (b) contract costs, architect-engineering services and related overhead items for military assistance construction.

15. Research and development.—Provides technical assistance for prior year projects relating to research and development of weapons and weapons systems of common interest undertaken by our allies in certain fields in which their facilities showed promise of prompt success.

16. Other activities.—These include U.S. support for programs of coordinated weapons production in Europe.

Sales operations.—Military materiel is purchased in the United States by many countries, including some which do not receive grant aid. Most sales financed by the Department of Defense on a credit basis are initially financed by military assistance appropriations. Depending on the circumstances, repayment of credit sales may be in dollars, in local currency, or in materiel.

The following table shows the repayments and their reuse for new credit sales (in millions of dollars):

Unused collections, beginning of year.....	43.8	40.0	5.4
Collection of credit sales.....	14.6	45.0	52.8
Collections reused.....	18.4	79.6	55.1
Unused collections, end of year.....	40.0	5.4	3.1

Local currency repayments may be used directly to finance additional programs or converted into dollars to finance additional credit sales. Such dollar conversions are included in the above table.

1. Development grants.—These grants are used in less developed countries to (1) provide the advisers, teachers, equipment and supplies required for the improvement of human resources, especially in administrative, educational, technical, and professional skills; (2) assist in the control and eradication of major diseases and other menaces to health; (3) establish and improve institutions, including American-sponsored schools abroad, which further economic and social development; (4) assist in planning and surveys of development programs and projects; (5) establish or improve basic physical facilities, such as communications and transport, in those relatively few countries where the economies are unable to carry the obligations entailed by development loans; (6) pay transportation charges on shipments of supplies by approved American nonprofit voluntary agencies; and (7) finance research concerning the problems of economic development.

2. Development grants (Special foreign currency programs).—This appropriation is for purchase of excess foreign currency on deposit in the Treasury in order to finance completion of a U.S.-sponsored children's hospital in Poland.

3. Surveys of investment opportunities.—This program encourages private enterprise to undertake surveys of investment opportunities in the less developed areas of the world. Up to 50% of the total cost of such surveys is paid by AID in the event that the concern sponsoring the survey does not proceed with an investment. If such payment is necessary, the survey becomes AID property for use in attracting other investors.

4. International organizations and programs.—Increases anticipated for contributions to international organizations during 1964 can be attributed to four elements. First, it is anticipated that other countries will have increased their pledges to the United Nations Technical Assistance and Special Fund programs sufficiently to require $55 million in fulfillment of the U.S. pledge of 40% of any total amount pledged up to $150 million. Second, it is estimated that contributions for the United Nations economic program in the Congo will increase substantially. Third, an increased grant to the Indus Basin Development Fund will be required according to present plans. Finally, $2 million is included for the United States contribution to the new United Nations World Food Program.

5. Supporting assistance.—Support is provided through this account to countries which need help in maintaining defensive forces or in attaining economic and political stability of urgent importance to U.S. national security and foreign policy objectives. Provision is usually made on a grant basis and, to the extent feasible, supporting assistance funds are used for purposes which also contribute to development. In several cases country situations have recently stabilized sufficiently to permit significant reductions in supporting assistance and increased concentration on development. Sixty percent of present supporting assistance requirements are in Korea, Vietnam, and Turkey, countries on the immediate periphery of the Sino-Soviet bloc.

6. Contingencies.—These funds are used to meet urgent requirements which cannot be foreseen at the time the budget is prepared. They are available not only to provide emergency assistance in disasters, but also to meet important unforeseen program developments when required in the U.S. national interest.

7. Alliance for Progress.—The Appropriation Act of October 23, 1962 (Public Law 87-872) provided $425 million for development loans and $100 million for development grants to initiate the Alliance for Progress, a new cooperative approach to the development of Latin America. It is proposed that this development program be increased considerably in 1964, reflecting the importance which the United States attaches to the development of this area. With U.S. efforts complementing those of the Latin American countries, this program will make an effective contribution to the economic and social advancement of the area.

8. Social Progress Trust Fund.—In accordance with an agreement of June 19, 1961, between the United States and the Inter-American Development Bank, the Bank administers a Social Progress Trust Fund, financed by the United States, from which loans and technical assistance grants are made to foster social progress in Latin American countries. An appropriation of $200 million is requested to replenish the Fund. The $394 million obligated for the Fund in 1962 will be entirely committed by the Bank by the end of 1963. Funds are not advanced to the Bank until needed to meet disbursements from the Fund. Advances to and disbursements by the Fund are as follows (in thousands of dollars and dollar equivalents):

9. Administrative expenses (AID).—These funds are used by the Agency for International Development in Washington and overseas missions to administer economic programs.

10. Administrative and other expenses (State).—Administrative expense funds are requested for the Department of State for support of personnel involved in the administration of the foreign assistance program and in administration of the Battle Act.

Loans.—A major portion of U.S. resources provided through foreign economic programs in less developed countries is in the form of loans. Data on loans made under the development loan activity, under the Alliance for Progress, and under the authority of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act are shown in separate schedules. A small portion of economic program funds available for grants are loaned each year rather than granted. These loans are made for economic development or essential support purposes, and may be repayable in either dollars or foreign currency. The tables below show the current status of these loans.

The following table gives summary data on loans made from current obligational authority, repayable in dollars and foreign currencies, in millions of dollars and dollar equivalents.

Through 1961, a portion of the mutual security dollar appropriations was used to purchase surplus agricultural commodities which were then sold to friendly countries for their currencies. Sales of these commodities are now being made through the Food for Peace program. Local currencies accruing from the sales through 1961 under the mutual security program are deposited in a special account and are used for economic and military activities in furtherance of objectives of the U.S. foreign assistance program. These activities include the local costs of projects, budget support of the less-developed countries and procurement of supplies and equipment for third countries.

Pursuant to authorization in section 252 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, the Congress appropriated $425 million in 1963 to be used for development lending under the Alliance for Progress to remain available until expended.

In the Latin American region a dramatic change is taking place in the programs of assistance. A small bilateral program primarily emphasizing technical assistance has been changed to a major cooperative effort in which the United States is a partner with its free Latin American neighbors. This effort is a joint attack upon the economic and social problems of the hemisphere. A major aspect of United States participation in the Alliance for Progress is lending for economic development keyed to steady progress in making vital social and economic reforms. Various facets of this changed direction in giving assistance are reflected in (1) emphasis on specific reforms and "self-help" measures, (2) development of sound plans and programs, (3) elimination of numerous minor activities, (4) involvement of other industrialized nations, other financial institutions and U.S. land-grant universities, (5) orientation of the program towards major goals, such as economic integration, (6) relation of assistance programs to commodity and trade problems, and (7) reorientation of field missions. The development lending program has as its objective the rapid progress of the Latin American economies to the point of self-sustaining growth.

An Alliance for Progress development loan program of $602.2 million is proposed for 1964 compared with $426.4 million in 1963, and with $189.6 million financed from Development loans—revolving fund in 1962. The increase will enable the Agency to give greater emphasis to the use of development loans for such purposes as housing, agricultural development, industrial development, assistance to small business, and education.

Under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, a five-year long-range program for development loans of $7.2 billion was authorized to be administered by the new Agency for International Development. This program replaces the Development Loan Fund which was abolished November 3, 1961. $1,112.5 and $975 million have been appropriated under the new program for loans during 1962 and 1963, respectively.

Development loans are repayable in U.S. dollars on such terms and conditions as may be determined by the President. In view of the relative incapacity of most developing countries to service needed long-term loans repayable in foreign exchange, most development loans from this fund are very long term (30–40 years), carry a ¾% credit fee in lieu of interest, and provide for a grace period up to 10 years prior to commencement of repayments. Loans to financially stronger countries may be on harder terms. A revolving fund was created into which all loan repayments and interest collections are deposited. These receipts, which are estimated to be $498 thousand in 1963 and $2,400 thousand in 1964, together with all funds appropriated, continue available until expended. Dollar and foreign currency receipts generated by loans entered into prior to 1962 by the Development Loan Fund are returned to the Treasury and are not available for this revolving fund.

Development loans are being made to promote the economic development of less-developed friendly countries and areas, with emphasis upon existing long-range plans and programs designed to develop their economic resources and to increase their productive capacities. Criteria for the development loans are delineated in the statutes. In making development loans, the Agency for International Development must take into account (1) whether free world financing is available on reasonable terms, (2) the economic and technical soundness of the activity to be financed, (3) whether the development of economic resources or the increase of productive capacities gives reasonable promise of being furthered, (4) consistency with other development activities or realizable long-range objectives, (5) the extent to which the recipient country is demonstrating its determination to take effective self-help measures and (6) possible effects upon the economy of the United States. Development loans will not be made unless there is a finding of a reasonable prospect of repayment. Additional loan criteria and standards are established by an inter-agency Development Loan Committee. The Committee is chaired by the Administrator of Agency for International Development, and has as its members the President of the Export-Import Bank of Washington, the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for International Affairs, the Assistant Secretary of State for Economic Affairs and the Assistant Administrator for the Office of Development Finance and Private Enterprise.

A development loan program of $1,250.8 million is proposed for 1964 compared with $991.8 million in 1963 and $906.6 million in 1962. This increase reflects the growing need for development assistance as a result of (1) an increase in effective development planning in many countries, (2) the increasing ability of countries previously receiving supporting assistance grants to utilize dollar repayable loans for long term economic development purposes, and (3) an enlarged capacity among growing countries to utilize new development capital.

The Development Loan Fund was established as a corporation by the Mutual Security Act of 1958 to extend loans, credits, and guarantees to American or foreign individuals, businesses, financial institutions, or foreign governments in order to provide capital for projects and programs contributing to the economic growth of less-developed free countries.

Under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, the Development Loan Fund corporation was abolished and its functions were transferred, effective November 3, 1961, to the New Agency for International Development. As of this date the fund had approved 217 loans and allocations and 3 guarantees for development assistance in 50 countries amounting to $2,008.5 million. Of this total, 203 loans and guarantee agreements had been signed totaling $1,887.7 million of which $632.9 million was actually disbursed, leaving $1,254.8 million undisbursed loan and guarantee agreements still outstanding. In addition, the fund had $120.8 million unobligated funds outstanding to provide for approved but unsigned loans. The agreements were in such fields as power, irrigation, transportation, and industry which contribute to basic economic development. Approximately 24% of all loans were repayable in dollars and 76% in foreign currencies. A total of $2,000 million was appropriated for the fund, in addition to which receipts from operations totaling approximately $15.5 million were also available, including $5.8 million realized from foreign currency receipts sold to the U.S. Treasury for dollars.

Subsequent to November 3, 1961, the fund has remained open for the purpose of liquidating outstanding obligations and approved but unsigned loans. As of June 30, 1962, the undisbursed loan agreements amounted to $1,033.1 million. It is estimated that this balance will be decreased to $677.2 million in 1963 and to $252.8 million in 1964. Loan repayments and interest collections are to be credited with the U.S. Treasury and are not available for lending under the liquidation account. Loan repayments and interest earned totaled $51.4 million in 1962 and are scheduled to be $58.1 million in 1963 and $64.6 million in 1964. In 1962, unobligated foreign currencies of $64.4 million (in dollar equivalents) was transferred to the U.S. Treasury. $27.7 million reserved for guarantees and fee collections of $0.1 million were transferred to the Foreign Investment Guarantee Fund.

The investment guarantee program encourages and facilitates participation by U.S. businesses in developing the economies of the underdeveloped countries. There are three statutory types of investment guarantees. First, there are the specific risk guarantees which insure a U.S. investor against loss from inconvertibility of the local currency, from expropriation or confiscation, or from war, revolution or insurrection. Second, there are the extended risk guarantees through which up to 75% of an investment may be insured against loss from any causes other than the investor's own misconduct or normally insurable risks, such as fire and theft. Third, there is an extended risk guarantee available only for selected self-liquidating pilot housing projects in Latin America.

Guarantees are available for investment in those countries whose governments have agreed with the Government of the United States to institute the investment guarantee program, and where there are suitable arrangements to protect the interests of the United States Government in connection with assets or claims acquired as a result of having provided relief under a guarantee. Substantial progress has been made in reaching these agreements with countries that had previously not participated, particularly in Latin America. This program is now instituted in 47 of the developing countries.

A portion of the reserves available to discharge obligations of the U.S. under investment guarantees is obligated each time a guarantee is issued. The fractional reserve, initially authorized in 1956, has been lowered from 25% to 12% for specific risk guarantees and from 50% to 25% for extended risk guarantees following the suggestions of the Appropriations Committees made during the hearings on the Foreign Assistance and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1963. The 1962 amendments to the act placed the full faith and credit of the United States Government behind these guarantees. In light of this, the executive branch will propose substantive legislation this year to eliminate the practice of obligating a portion of the reserve each time a guarantee is issued. No additional appropriations are being requested to increase the size of the reserves for fiscal year 1964.

As of November 1962, total reserves available for all authorized investment guarantees exceeded $265,000,000. The reserves are derived from (1) fee collections, (2) proceeds of notes accepted by the Secretary of the Treasury, (3) transfers of former appropriations to the Development Loan Fund obligated behind Development Loan Fund guarantees, (4) recovery of subrogated assets after payment of claims, and (5) fiscal year 1963 appropriations of $30 million. It is contemplated that since guarantees are obligations of the general credit of the United States, that amount will suffice to handle any claims that might reasonably be anticipated to mature before a supplemental appropriation could be obtained from the Congress to restore the liquidity of the program.

Because of the recent and rapid increase in the use of investment guarantees, the following increases in the authority to issue investment guarantees are requested:

(a) Specific risks.—Inconvertibility, expropriation, war, revolution and insurrection—$1.2 billion. This will allow outstanding specific risk guarantees to amount to $2.5 billion (the present such authority is $1.3 billion).

(b) Extended risk.—For general projects, $120 million. This will allow $300 million in outstanding extended risks guarantees (the present such authority is $180 million).

(c) Extended risk.—For Latin American housing projects, $90 million. This will allow $150 million in outstanding housing guarantees (the present ceiling is $60 million).

Operating costs and administration.—Several claims have been paid out of reserves. The more substantial of these was the amount of $650,000 paid pursuant to a Development Loan Fund all-risk guarantee. A lesser claim in the amount of $9,922 was paid pursuant to an inconvertibility guarantee for an investment in the Congo. A subsequent claim is being processed for that same investment, and until the foreign exchange position of the Congo improves, the claim can be anticipated to continue to recur. It should be pointed out in connection with the inconvertibility claim, that the Congo francs acquired by the U.S. pursuant to the investment guarantee have been used by the U.S. so that the net loss with respect to the payment of $9,922 was $1,823. It is anticipated that claims will increase, because investment guarantees since 1959 have been issued only for investments in the less developed countries. In 1962 $366.6 million in specific risk guarantees were issued. It is estimated that $440 million and $500 million will be issued in 1963 and 1964, respectively. It is estimated that extended risk guarantees will increase from $170 million in 1963 to $270 million in 1964. Administrative expenses to date have been paid from funds appropriated for the general administrative expenses of the economic assistance programs.

As an addition to established programs in the Agency for International Development for acquisition and utilization of excess personal property, section 608 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 created a revolving fund to provide for more effective use by the Agency for International Development of U.S. Government-owned domestic and foreign excess property in foreign assistance programs by authorizing such property to be acquired and renovated in advance of specifically known requirements for country programs. This includes many types of excess property, such as tractors, construction and roadbuilding equipment, machinery, and machine tools, the general needs for which can be anticipated with a high degree of certainty. Costs include accessorial charges only, i.e., transportation, renovation, storage, packing, crating and handling, paid initially from a revolving fund established for the purpose in 1962 and subsequently charged to the recipient government or program. Proceeds from these charges are deposited to the credit of the revolving fund. The law limits the value of domestic excess property which may be held at any one time to $15 million in total original acquisition value. There is no legal limit with respect to the value of foreign excess property which may be held at any one time. No addition to the revolving fund is proposed.

Seven domestic marshalling sites have been established, primary sites being located at Schenectady, N.Y.; Memphis, Tenn.; and Stockton, Calif. Four foreign marshalling sites are being established, two of which are to be located in Europe and two in the Far East.

Public Law 86-147 (73 Stat. 299), approved August 7, 1959, provided for membership of the United States in the Inter-American Development Bank, and authorized an appropriation of $450 million as the initial U.S. subscription. The Bank is an institution sponsored by the nations of the Organization of American States and is designed to accelerate the economic development of the American republics by providing capital and technical assistance and by encouraging private investment in development projects.

The U.S. subscription consists of three parts. The first is a subscription of $150 million for paid-in shares of capital stock, payable in three installments. The first installment of $30 million was paid in June 1960; the second and third installments of $60 million each were paid in October 1961 and October 1962, respectively. The second part is $200 million of callable capital stock which can be called only to meet obligations of the Bank on securities which it has issued in the private financial market or on loans which it has guaranteed. Funds were appropriated for this purpose in 1960. Third is a subscription of $100 million in the Fund for Special Operations of the Bank. Fifty million dollars of this was paid in June 1960, and the other $50 million in October 1961.

The present request is made in conjunction with the proposal of new authorization of a U.S. subscription to expand and restore the liquidity of the Fund for Special Operations.

The Bretton Woods Agreements Act of July 31, 1945, authorized the acceptance of membership in the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the subscription of $3,175 million to its capital stock. On June 17, 1959 (73 Stat. 80), the Bretton Woods Agreement Act was amended to increase the U.S. subscription to callable capital stock by $3,175 million, in connection with the approximate doubling of the Bank's authorized capital to its present level of $21 billion, of which $20.5 has been subscribed.

The United States paid $635 million of the original subscription in cash and non-interest-bearing nonnegotiable notes. The remaining balance of obligational authority ($5,715 million) will not be called unless required to meet the Bank's obligations. Calls on unpaid subscriptions must be a uniform percentage of the amounts subscribed by each member country.

By the end of June 1962, the Bank had made net loans totalling $6.5 billion in 60 member countries and territories.

Public Law 86-565 (74 Stat. 293), approved June 30, 1960, authorized membership of the United States in the International Development Association and authorized $320.3 million to be appropriated for subscription to the Association.

The International Development Association is an affiliate of the International Bank which provides development financing on flexible terms to less developed member countries. Most of its initial resources are being provided by countries other than the United States including $443 million from other economically advanced countries. Total subscriptions, including those of the less developed countries, are scheduled at $1 billion of which the U.S. portion is about 32% of this total.

Subscriptions are to be paid by the members in five annual installments, beginning in 1961. The $61.7 million herein requested is for the fourth payment in this series. The first installment of $73.7 million was paid in 1961; the second and third installments of $61.7 million each were paid in 1962 and 1963. Additional installments of $61.7 million each are planned for payment in 1964 and 1965.

As of June 30, 1962, the Association had made credit commitments totalling $235 million in 11 countries and territories. Upon completion of negotiations with other countries, authorization for replenishment of the Association's resources will be requested in 1964, though appropriations of newly authorized funds will not be necessary until 1966.

LOANS TO THE INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND

For loans to the International Monetary Fund, as authorized by the Act of June 19, 1962 (Public Law 87-490), $2,000,000,000, to remain available until expended. The indefinite appropriation for the payment of interest on the public debt (31 U.S.C. 711), shall be available for the payment of charges in connection with any purchases of currencies or gold by the United States from the International Monetary Fund. Public Law 87-490 authorized an appropriation of $2 billion to complete action requisite for the United States to adhere to a Decision of the Executive Directors of the International Monetary Fund of January 5, 1962. Public Law 87-872 contained the necessary appropriation, and on October 24, 1962, the United States formally deposited an instrument "setting forth that it has adhered in accordance with its law and has taken all steps necessary to enable it to carry out the terms and conditions" of the Decision. U.S. action brought into effect a ten-nation, $6 billion arrangement providing, under specified conditions, for loans by the participants to the Fund to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary system. The United States is now in a position to lend up to $2 billion to the Fund, but would not be expected to do so in the absence of a substantial improvement in its balance of payments position. No loan is presently contemplated, nor is such a loan likely under present conditions.

1. Volunteer and project costs.—The purpose of the Peace Corps is to provide skilled Americans to interested countries in need of manpower, and, in the course of meeting this need, to promote understanding between the people of the United States and the people served. Americans serving in the Peace Corps are selected initially to insure that they possess the skills and the personal characteristics and abilities to achieve both these ends. The intensive training they receive is designed to develop these attributes, to provide them with knowledge of the countries to which they go and the languages of those countries, and to allow an opportunity for further careful selection based on day-to-day observation.

Peace Corps volunteers engage in activities at the request of the host countries. Their placement is jointly planned by officials of the country and Peace Corps staff. To the maximum extent possible, relatively large numbers of volunteers—40 or more—of similar or complementary skills are involved in any one country program. Maximum association with the people of the host country is insured by planning the placement of volunteers in small groups throughout a region or country, and by the fact that, in most cases, they work for an indigenous national organization. For most purposes, volunteers are responsible to host country nationals in their jobs, although Peace Corps staff representatives in each country supervise their progress closely.

Peace Corps planning and budgeting are based upon a "program year" which runs from the beginning of September through the end of the following August. On August 31, 1961, 484 volunteers were in training for or serving in eight countries. On August 31, 1962, 3,578 volunteers were in training for or working in 38 countries. A total of approximately 9,000 volunteers in 51 countries is projected for August 31, 1963, and 13,000 for August 31, 1964. Regional totals for these dates are:

⁴ The rate of increase of countries in which the Peace Corps program has been or will be initiated in 1962 and 1963 is not applicable to 1964. It is assumed that during 1963, programs will have been developed for the majority of countries in which the Peace Corps at present has a potential for service.

Requests for Peace Corps assistance in new countries and for new activities in countries in which volunteers are already working continue to mount. For 1964 it is anticipated that in all countries in which the Peace Corps is operating, there will be a continuing demand for volunteers. Most countries are requesting an increasing number to serve in fields of activity to which volunteers already are contributing their skills as well as in new fields of activity. The proposed 1964 program by region is as follows:

Africa, 3,750 volunteers.—On August 31, 1962, 1,110 volunteers were training for or working in 13 African countries: Cameroon, Ethiopia, Ghana, Ivory Coast, Liberia, Niger, Nigeria, Senegal, Sierra Leone, Somali Republic, Tanganyika, Togo, and Tunisia. By far the largest number were engaged in teaching. Since that date, volunteers have commenced training for or are working in Morocco, Nyasaland, and Gabon. Continued expansion of these programs will occur throughout 1963.

For 1964 it is foreseen that programs will continue in all African countries where the Peace Corps volunteers will be working on August 31, 1963. The increase of 1,000 volunteers anticipated between that date and August 31, 1964, will be largely the result of the initiation of new activities in old countries and of expansion of present activities in those countries.

Far East, 1,750 volunteers.—At the end of 1962, 799 volunteers were in training for or at work in projects in Malaya, the Philippines, North Borneo/Sarawak, and Thailand. These programs are in the fields of health, education, and rural community action, but they are distinguished by an emphasis on physical education and English teaching, particularly at the elementary level.

The Peace Corps Far East program for 1963 includes the expansion of programs in these countries and the initiation of a program in Indonesia. The 1964 program for the Far East will involve mainly the replacement of volunteers completing their 2-year term of service.

Latin America, 6,150 volunteers.—On August 31, 1962, 1,230 volunteers were in training for or working in 13 Latin American countries. The greatest expressed need in terms of manpower in Latin America is for middle-level workers in agriculture and rural and urban community work. Consequently, the majority of volunteers are training for or are engaged in agricultural extension and rural and community action programs.

In 1963 the number of volunteers is increasing substantially as activities have been initiated in seven new countries and are expanded in many countries with programs already underway. Training will also begin for replacement of volunteers in three countries, whose terms of service will be completed.

In 1964 the Latin American program will double in size as new and expanded country programs are undertaken primarily in the fields of agriculture and community action. Latin American nations working under the Alliance for Progress are finding in Peace Corps volunteers a timely and effective adjunct to their social progress and development programs. This underlies the rapidly increasing demands for volunteers in this region.

Near East/South Asia, 1,350 volunteers.—On August 31, 1962, 439 Peace Corps volunteers were in training or overseas for projects in eight countries: India, Pakistan, Afghanistan, Ceylon, Cyprus, Nepal, Turkey, and Iran.

The 1963 program is characterized chiefly by the expansion of these programs. Probably its most striking feature is the anticipated rapid expansion of the Pakistan program during the summer of 1963, principally in the fields of irrigation and water desalinization.

In keeping with the emphasis on growth in Latin America and Africa during 1964, the Near East/South Asia program during that period will consist almost exclusively of the replacement of volunteers completing their term of service in on-going programs.

2. Administration and program support.—This activity provides for all Peace Corps expenses except those which are directly related to volunteer and project costs. In Washington, it includes policy and program direction; program planning, development, and evaluation; direction of the recruitment, training, and selection of volunteers; procurement; financial, administrative, and management services; direction of the medical program; and research. Overseas it includes program management; medical support; and all financial, administrative, and management services.

The ratio of administration and program support costs to total requirements continues to decline. For 1962, 1963, and 1964 these ratios are 33%, 26%, and 19%, respectively.

These funds enable the President to relieve unemployment and spur economic expansion in eligible areas of high unemployment or low income. This is accomplished by accelerating both Federal assistance to local public works and Federal public works projects. The program is carried out by the Federal agencies responsible for the several portions of the program and is coordinated by the Secretary of Commerce with the assistance of the Area Redevelopment Administration.

1. State and local projects.—Grants are made to eligible State and local governments for public works, primarily water and sewage systems, waste treatment works, hospital additions, and related health facilities. Grants are made for 50% of the project costs, although areas of most severe unemployment are eligible for grants up to 75%. The local recipients are required to increase local expenditures for public works by at least the amount of the local contribution.

2. Direct Federal projects.—Public works projects which are the direct responsibility of Federal agencies are accelerated in eligible areas. Such projects cover a wide variety of activity including improvement of facilities, small flood control and erosion projects, forest and other conservation work, and recreation facilities, etc.

3. Administration.—Funds are provided for those administrative expenses which cannot be absorbed by the agencies responsible for the larger programs and by the coordinating agency.

A supplemental appropriation for 1963 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

TRANSITIONAL GRANTS TO ALASKA

TRANSITIONAL GRANTS TO ALASKA

For grants to the State of Alaska to assist in accomplishing an orderly transition from Territorial status to statehood and to facilitate the assumption of responsibilities hitherto performed in Alaska by the Federal Government, and for expenses of providing Federal services or facilities in Alaska for an interim period, as authorized by law (73 Stat. 151), $3,000,000. Section 44 of the Alaska Omnibus Act (73 Stat. 151) authorizes grants to the State of Alaska for a 5-year period ending June 30, 1964, to facilitate assumption by the State of responsibilities hitherto performed in Alaska by the Federal Government.

These funds are to enable the President (a) to make grants to the State to assist in financing functions transferred from the Federal Government and (b) to finance continued Federal operations for an interim period when the State requests a delay in transfer of functions. In June 1959, the State requested that the Federal Government continue operation of 17 primary and intermediate airports, and allocations were made to the Federal Aviation Agency for this purpose.

The $3 million requested for 1964 is the maximum authorized by law.

The Service conducts basic and applied research relating to the production and utilization of agricultural products, research on nutrition and consumer use, and carries out those control and regulatory programs of the Department which involve enforcement of plant and animal quarantines, meat inspection, the control of diseases and insect pests of animals and plants, and related work.

1. Research—(a) Farm research.—Improved breeding, feeding, and management practices are developed for farm livestock, poultry, and domestic fur animals. Practical methods are sought for control of diseases and parasites affecting them.

Investigations are conducted to improve varieties of food, feed, fiber and other plants, and to develop new crops; to improve crop-production practices, including methods to control plant diseases and nematodes; and to improve chemical, biological, and other methods for control of harmful pests affecting farm production.

Research is conducted to improve fertilizers, soil management, irrigation, and conservation practices; to study hydrologic problems of agricultural watersheds; to determine the relation of soils to plants, animals, and human nutrition; and to apply engineering principles to improve efficiency and reduce costs of agricultural production.

Continuous review is maintained to emphasize work which will meet the problems of agricultural surpluses. The research is aimed at the profitable production of an adequate supply of food, feed, fiber, and other agricultural products of desired quality at minimum costs. Increased attention has been given to the production of agricultural products having industrial uses. The proportion of farm research funds going into basic research has steadily increased, and is currently estimated at 38% of the total funds for research. This basic research undergirds the other research efforts.

(b) Utilization research and development.—Chemical, physical, and biological research is conducted to develop increased industrial uses of farm products, and new and improved foods, feeds, and fabrics; and to develop improved methods for processing agricultural commodities.

(c) Nutrition and consumer use research.—Studies are made of nutrition, consumer use and food economics, and clothing and housing.

(d) Contingency research fund.—Beginning in 1962, $1 million is available to meet urgent research needs that develop unexpectedly during the year, when such needs cannot be met by redirection of resources from other projects.

The 1964 estimates include increases for staffing research laboratories recently authorized by Congress; for a nationwide food consumption survey; and for research on water management and engineering, livestock, and insect problems. These are partially offset by decreases due to elimination of 1963 construction items.

2. Plant and animal disease and pest control.—(a) Plant disease and pest control.—Provision is made (1) through port-of-entry inspection to exclude from this country destructive insects, plant diseases, and nematodes that cause great damage to agricultural crops in other parts of the world; (2) to cooperate with States in eradicating or preventing spread of crop pests that become established in this country; and (3) to assist States in suppressing incipient and emergency outbreaks of crop pests when and where they occur. Increases proposed in 1964 for strengthening plant quarantine protection necessary at ports-of-entry because of increased travel and shipping and to meet the cost of space rentals at international airports are more than offset by a reduction in the plant pest control activities relating to the eradication of the fire ant and gypsy moth pests. The volume of workload is indicated in the following table (in thousands):

(b) Animal disease and pest control.—Programs are conducted to exclude communicable diseases of foreign origin from this country; to prevent the spread of diseases through interstate shipments of livestock or distribution of impure or impotent veterinary biologics; to control and eradicate livestock diseases; and to maintain, through a marketing agreement with manufacturers and handlers, adequate supplies of hog cholera virus and serum for protection of swine. The estimates for 1964 propose increases for more adequate animal inspection and quarantine at ports to reduce the hazard of introduction of foreign animal diseases; expansion of the hog cholera eradication program and activities relating to veterinary biologics under the Virus Serum Toxin Act. Funds are requested for continuation of the screwworm eradication program in the Southwest. The increases are partially offset by a decrease of $150 thousand due to elimination of 1963 construction items.

(c) Pesticides regulation.—This activity is concerned with administration of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act, and related provisions of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act. The 1964 estimates propose an increase of $148 thousand to handle increased registration and enforcement activities.

3. Meat inspection.—Federal meat inspection is required for all meat in interstate commerce and is conducted to assure a clean and wholesome meat supply for human consumption, free from adulteration, and truthfully labeled. The work includes inspection of animals, carcasses and meat, and meat-food products at various stages of handling and processing. Measures are enforced to insure informative labeling, and meats imported or exported are inspected. The estimates for 1964 include a proposed increase for additional inspection staff to service the expanding demand for Federal meat inspection.

The volume of inspections and examinations is indicated by examples given in the following table:

Foreign currencies, generated by the sale of surplus agricultural commodities under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, are used by the Department for market development research under section 104(a) and for agricultural and forestry research under section 104(k) of the Act. Work is carried on through agreements, in both basic and applied fields, by research institutions and organizations in foreign countries. This research serves to develop new foreign markets and to expand existing markets for agricultural commodities, including cotton, dairy products, fats and oils, grain, feed, livestock and meat, poultry, fruits and vegetables, and tobacco. It also provides for supplementary research on farm, forest, marketing, utilization, agricultural economics, and human nutrition problems. Total estimated cost in U.S. dollars (charged to regular appropriations) for the initiation and supervision of projects in 1964 is $317 thousand.

In 1964, it is proposed that foreign currencies also be used for translations of foreign language scientific publications, as authorized by section 104(k) of the act.

An additional $500 thousand was provided by the Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1961, under the appropriation, Construction of facilities, for the remainder of the total estimated cost of $900 thousand for the new facilities. The Orlando property was sold in 1961 for $400 thousand, which will be applied toward the construction of the new laboratory. The laboratory is under construction and is expected to be available for occupancy by June 1963.

The primary function of the nationwide system of cooperative extension work is out-of-school applied education in agriculture, home economics, and related subjects. This educational work takes research results, technological advancements, and situation and program facts of the Department of Agriculture, the State agricultural colleges and experiment stations, and incorporates them into a national educational program for action. Its objective is to provide farm people and others with information and assistance upon which they may make social and economic adjustments necessary for an efficient agricultural industry and improved rural homes and rural life.

1. Payments to States and Puerto Rico.—Funds are used primarily for the employment of State and county extension workers who work with rural families, marketing concerns, and others by providing advice and assistance in the application of improved methods involved in production, marketing, and family living. They assist local leadership to determine extension programs of work. Work with youth is accomplished largely through 4-H Clubs.

The proposed increase in payments for cooperative agricultural extension work would be paid to the States to provide more effectively for extension work in connection with the rural areas development program and for educational programs in furtherance of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962.

2. Retirement and employees' compensation costs for extension agents.—The increase proposed is required to meet these costs for cooperative extension agents. The mandatory retirement contribution is authorized under 70 Stat. 747-748. The employer's contribution to the Federal retirement fund, to match contributions of these agents, is provided by this Federal appropriation. The proposed increase in payments to States and Puerto Rico will result in an increase in the required employer's Federal contribution to the retirement fund. The increase proposed will provide for the increased costs. The increase also provides an amount equal to the benefits received by the cooperative agents to be paid to the Employees' Compensation Fund, as required by 5 U.S.C. 785.

3. Penalty mail.—Funds to cover the cost of penalty mailings for State extension directors and cooperative extension agents in the States are provided under this appropriation. The increase provides for increased postal costs pursuant to Public Law 87-793.

4. Federal Extension Service.—The Federal Extension Service provides leadership, counsel, and assistance to the States and Puerto Rico in developing extension programs, improved teaching methods, efficient use of available resources, evaluation of programs, in-service training for extension personnel, and administrative services. The Federal Extension Service also coordinates the educational activities of other U.S. Department of Agriculture agencies. The proposed increase would provide for special emphasis on educational support to the States on poultry marketing and dairy utilization and for increased pay and postal costs pursuant to Public Law 87-793.

Much of this work is carried on in cooperation with land-grant colleges, the Extension Service, and other Federal and State agencies. Research financed by advances from the Agricultural Marketing Service and the Economic Research Service in 1963 and prior years will be financed by direct appropriation to the Farmer Cooperative Service in 1964.

The proposed 1964 increase will enable the Farmer Cooperative Service to better help farmers meet their economic needs through their own business organizations.

(d) technical assistance to group enterprises with water control problems that can best be solved through group action; (e) the granting of special equipment acquired from Federal Government surplus to soil conservation districts for use in the application of planned conservation practices; (f) water supply forecasts developed from snow surveys in Western States which serve as a basis for planning for efficient seasonal use of water; (g) the selection and testing of plant materials to determine their suitability for erosion control purposes; (h) technical assistance to Agricultural Conservation Program participants in establishing specified conservation practices; (i) technical assistance to participants in other programs involving specified conservation practices and land use adjustments; (j) technical assistance in planning and applying the soil and water conservation practices for which loans are made by the Farmers Home Administration; and (k) consultation and assistance to local rural areas development committees, program planning and consultation in urban fringe areas.

Combinations of needed soil and water conservation practices are planned together and in relation to each other so as to have a well balanced program in each district and for each farm. Both vegetative and structural practices are used in accordance with the conservation needs of the land and decisions of the cooperating farmer or rancher. The Soil Conservation Service technician explains the soil conditions, develops land use and treatment alternatives with each cooperator, helps him evaluate the costs and returns of conservation farming, and furnishes assistance in applying the needed treatments. These conservation programs provide immediate and long-term benefits to the land where installed and to the general welfare. Modern soil and water conservation practices are essential to our continued efficient use of our fixed land base for agricultural purposes as the future needs of the nation may require. There is an urgent need to speed up the rate of applying land treatment work as estimated above to prevent further soil deterioration and to protect our remaining good land while using and improving it.

The Department cooperates with the States and other agencies in planning and installing works of improvement in small watersheds to reduce damage from floodwater, sediment, and erosion and for the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water. It provides loans to local organizations to help them finance their share of the costs of certain works of improvement. The Department also cooperates with other agencies in making surveys and investigations of watersheds of rivers and other waterways as the basis for the development of coordinated programs.

1. Small watershed project investigations and planning.—Surveys are made by the Department of proposed small watershed projects, and work plans are prepared in cooperation with the local sponsors. These plans outline the soil and water management problems in the watershed, the steps that have been or are authorized to be taken to alleviate these problems, the proposed works of improvement to be installed, the estimated benefits and costs, cost-sharing and operation and maintenance arrangements, and other facts necessary to justify Federal participation in project development.

2. Watershed works of improvement.—The Department provides technical and financial assistance to local organizations to install the watershed works of improvement for watershed protection, flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife development features specified in the work plans.

(a) Pilot demonstration watersheds.—Sixty-two pilot watersheds were started in 1954 in cooperation with local sponsors under authority of the Act of April 27, 1935 (16 U.S.C. 590a-590f) to demonstrate and evaluate the effectiveness of works of improvement installed in small watersheds for watershed protection and flood prevention. As of June 30, 1962, work had been discontinued in eight projects and completed as planned in 44 except for project evaluation studies which will be underway until 1970 in some of these. The following table shows the current status of the pilot watershed projects. Obligations for project evaluation studies are not reflected in the table subsequent to 1959 as these costs were determined not properly chargeable to projects. Obligations for such studies amounted to $144 thousand in 1962 and are estimated at $128 thousand in 1963 and $127 thousand in 1964.

¹ Includes obligations for project evaluation studies prior to the fiscal year 1960 on all projects on which these studies were carried out.

(b) Public Law 566 watersheds.—After local sponsoring organizations have developed watershed work plans with the Department's assistance and the projects have been approved as suitable for Federal participation (projects involving an estimated Federal contribution in excess of $250 thousand, or any single structure having a capacity in excess of 2,500 acre-feet require Congressional approval), technical services and cost-sharing assistance are provided for specified works of improvement. On non-Federal lands local sponsoring organizations must contract for construction work, operate and maintain the projects, and in the case of multiple-purpose structures, bear a share of construction costs. In addition, local organizations must acquire water rights and furnish land, easements, and rights-of-way for all structural measures except that the Federal Government may pay up to one-half the cost of land, easements, and rights-of-way allocated to public fish and wildlife and recreational developments. Federal agencies do this work on Federal lands which they administer with appropriate contributions being made by the local people who receive benefits.

Advance engineering and technical assistance is furnished to all approved projects before they are advanced to the construction stage. During the advance engineering and technical assistance stage, surveys and investigations are made and detailed designs, specifications, and engineering cost estimates are prepared for construction of structural works; areas are delineated where easements are required and technical assistance is furnished for accelerating planning and application of land treatment measures.

The project construction stage begins with execution of the first project agreement for construction of works of improvement, after required easements are obtained or assured and the local organization has met all other requirements. Under a project agreement the local sponsoring organization agrees to construct a segment of the project which may consist of an individual or an inter-related group of structures. The agreement obligates the Department to furnish its share of the construction cost. Payments are made to the local contracting organization in accordance with the project agreement as the work progresses. Engineering and other services are provided for the preparation of contracts and inspection of construction. Technical assistance in planning and installing land treatment measures is continued.

The following tabulation shows the status of Public Law 566 projects and amounts obligated or estimated to be obligated. The table does not reflect minor obligations for project evaluation studies ($51 thousand cumulatively as of June 30, 1962) or for balances remaining in the undistributed equipment account ($337 thousand cumulatively as of June 30, 1962).

The 1963 program contemplates initiation of construction in about 60 watershed projects, involving 1963 estimated obligations of $15.3 million and total Federal cost of $52.5 million. The 1964 estimate provides for starting about 36 projects, with 1964 obligations of $10.2 million and total Federal cost of $36 million.

3. Loans and related expense.—Loans are made to local organizations to finance the local share of the cost of installing planned works of improvement in approved watershed projects. Repayment with interest is required within 50 years after the principal benefits of improvements first become available. Of the 1964 estimate for watershed protection, not to exceed $3 million is to be available for such purpose together with unobligated balance of loan funds carried over from prior years.

4. River basin program development and coordination.—Section 6 of Public Law 566, 83d Congress, as amended, authorizes the Department to cooperate with other Federal, State, and local agencies in making surveys and investigations of the watersheds of rivers and other waterways as a basis for the development of coordinated water and related land resources programs. The Department is currently participating in cooperative surveys and investigations of 25 river basins with the Corps of Engineers and other interested Federal and State agencies. The Department is represented on the Inter-Agency Committee on Water Resources which was established to coordinate water and related land resource activities of Federal departments and agencies. The Department also maintains representation on various river basin interagency committees, which serve as points of contact and coordination between representatives of this Department and of other Federal departments and agencies and the States in these basin areas, to keep all concerned mutually informed of the activities of the member agencies and to facilitate matters of interagency coordination. The Department, in 1962, maintained such representation on committees in the Arkansas-White-Red, Columbia, Missouri, northeast, and southwest areas.

This Department and the Departments of the Army, the Interior, and Health, Education, and Welfare have jointly considered river basin surveys and investigations currently needed to attain the goal proposed by the Senate Select Committee on National Water Resources and recommended by the President for surveying the river basins of the Nation. Based on this joint consideration, the Department, beginning in 1964, will participate cooperatively with these other departments in surveys of the Puget Sound area in Washington; the Colorado River Basin; the Missouri River Basin; the White and St. Francis River Basins in Missouri and Arkansas; various river basins in east Texas; the Grand and Fox River Basins in Michigan, Wisconsin, and Illinois; the upper Mississippi-Great Lakes and Big Muddy River Basins; the Connecticut, St. John, and other northeast river basins; and the Pascagoula River Basin in Mississippi.

1. Installation of works of improvement.—The Department cooperates with soil conservation districts and other local organizations in planning and installing works of improvement for flood prevention and for furthering the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water in the 11 watersheds authorized by the Flood Control Act of 1944. The Federal Government shares in the cost of works of improvement for flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife development features.

The Department furnishes additional technical, and in certain instances financial, assistance to landowners to accelerate planning and installation of land-treatment measures for runoff retardation, sediment control, and water management. Local sponsoring organizations must furnish all land, easements and rights-of-way, water rights, and the entire cost of works of improvement for nonagricultural water management measures, except those for recreation and fish and wildlife development, and operate and maintain all completed works of improvement.

2. Loans and related expense.—Loans are made to local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of planned works of improvement. Repayment with interest is required within 50 years after the principal benefits of improvements first become available. Of the 1964 esti-

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1961, $15,788 thousand; 1962, $17,261 thousand; 1963, $19,000 thousand; 1964, $21,700 thousand.

Cost-sharing contracts and technical assistance are offered by the Department to aid farmers and ranchers to develop and carry out long-range conservation plans designed to minimize climatic hazards and protect their lands from erosion and deterioration by natural causes. This is a voluntary program which supplements other conservation programs and activities in designated counties of the 10 Great Plains States. Cost-sharing contracts extend from 3 to 10 years and include a plan of operations for the farm and ranch and a time schedule for installing eligible conservation practices. December 31, 1971, is the final date for entering into contracts with cooperators. The maximum cost-share rate offered in any contract does not exceed 80% of the average cost of installing each eligible practice. Federal cost-sharing for constructing, enlarging, deepening or lining any individual dam, pit, or pond for irrigation water is limited to $2,500. Furthermore, cost-sharing for conservation irrigation practices in any one contract must not exceed (1) $2,500, or (2) approximately one-fourth of the total Federal obligation, whichever is the larger. Producers are also limited to a Federal cost-sharing ceiling of $25 thousand for any one contract. The total cost-share that may be paid to producers is limited to $25 million for any one program year and $150 million for the total program.

The producer who signs a Great Plains program contract is responsible for accomplishing his plan of operations as scheduled, and is encouraged to use all available sources of assistance under other local, State, or Federal programs that contribute to achieving conservation land treatment and economic stability of the farm or ranch unit.

The Department will share in the cost of installing works of improvement and also provide loans to local sponsoring organizations and individuals to help them finance their share of the cost of certain improvements.

The work under this program will consist of planning and installing measures to conserve, develop and manage soil, water, grass, forest, and wildlife habitat, including development of recreational facilities and income-producing enterprises in approved project areas. It includes (a) investigations, surveys, and planning necessary to help develop coordinated work plans in areas approved for Resource Conservation and Development projects; (b) technical assistance needed to install the planned works of improvements within projects; (c) financial contributions and other assistance to local public agencies and to project sponsors to help install planned measures which provide substantial public benefit; and (d) loans to

The Service has been developing irrigation farming units for sale on the Eden Valley project in Wyoming where the Bureau of Reclamation has constructed the water storage facility and the principal canals. Land development for irrigation has been completed in accordance with the project plan prepared cooperatively with the Bureau of Reclamation. The farms developed in the project have been sold with exception of four. One of these is being operated by the State of Wyoming as a demonstration farm under a memorandum of agreement. The sale of the other three tracts of land has been deferred because of irrigation water shortage. The Eden Valley Project Office has been closed. A soil conservation district has been organized and staffed to furnish technical assistance in soil and water conservation to the project settlers. Sufficient funds are available from prior-year appropriations to provide a reserve in case of need to protect the investment of the Government in the unsold tracts until they are disposed of and no new appropriations will be required.

Agricultural economics research in the Department is administered by the Economic Research Service. The results of the research program are relied upon by (a) producers, dealers, importers and exporters as aids in planning the most profitable adjustments in their operations, (b) Government agencies in formulating and administering agricultural programs, and (c) Congress in considering agricultural legislation.

1. Farm economics.—Research is conducted to measure, appraise, and analyze on a continuing basis, economic changes that occur in farming and in the use of rural resources and to indicate needed adjustments.

Research on the economics of farm production includes the economics of organization and management of farms; adjustments in production to prospective demands, and changing technologies; appraisals of costs and returns on farms representative of important types, sizes, and locations, and the appraisal of costs of producing important commodities; development of measures of farm output and productivity; problems of farm size and capital requirements; financing of farm enterprises, taxation, insurance and land values; and appraisal of alternative agricultural production policies and programs.

Resource development economics is concerned with the management of the Nation's land and water resources and particularly the changing rural economy and institutional structure. It includes economic development; improvement of income opportunities in depressed areas; rural renewal; analysis of river basin and watershed programs, land tenure, and resource organization and policy.

The increase requested for 1964 would permit intensified analysis of the requirements and potentials for land and water use on both a regional and national basis.

2. Marketing economics.—This activity covers economic aspects of marketing farm products, including the nature of farmers' bargaining power; potentials for new products and new uses; market structure, costs and margins; the economic effects of school lunch, special milk, food stamp, and direct food distribution programs.

3. Domestic and foreign economic analysis.—Domestic economic analysis is concerned with identifying, measuring, and analyzing: (1) the factors affecting demand, supply, and price of agricultural commodities; (2) relationships between the agricultural sector and the national economy; (3) farm income and the income of the farm population; (4) demand and consumption of farm products; (5) long-term projections of economic growth and farm products demand; (6) farm population, manpower and levels of living; and (7) historical developments in the policies, programs, and organization of the Department.

Foreign economic analysis includes trade studies and the investigation of supply-demand relations. The trade and market studies focus on the problems of developing foreign markets and the effect of these developments on agricultural production. Research is carried on in more than 100 countries, focusing on the forces affecting supply, demand, and trade in farm products, and their impact on U.S. agricultural exports.

The 1964 increase proposed would permit strengthening of domestic commodity outlook and situation reports and related analyses of alternative farm program proposals; expansion of analysis of world trade in farm products; and appraisal of impacts of multi-national and commodity arrangements on U.S. agricultural exports.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1961, $312 thousand; (1962 adjustments, $8 thousand); 1962, $317 thousand; 1963, $317 thousand; 1964, $317 thousand.

The Service administers programs relating to crop and livestock estimates and statistical research and service. The statistical and economic data developed on food and agriculture are essential to farmers, processors, and handlers in making production and marketing decisions, and to legislators, administrators and others concerned with developing and administering agricultural programs. The basic facts provided by this service are also essential to economic analyses and other agricultural research programs.

1. Crop and livestock estimates.—This service provides the official estimates on this Nation's agriculture, including acreage, yield, and production of crops, stocks, and value of farm commodities, numbers and inventory value of livestock items, and prices paid and received by farmers. These data also are basic to computation of parity prices. Data on approximately 150 crop and livestock products are covered in some 700 reports issued each year. The activity is conducted through 43 State offices serving 50 States, most of which are operated as joint State and Federal services. Cooperative arrangements with State agencies provide a considerable volume of additional data which would not be collected or made available from Federal funds. During 1962 cooperating States expended an estimated $1.6 million of their own funds on these associated State programs. A comparison of activity data for 1961 and 1962, including work performed under cooperative arrangements, is as follows:

Separate mailings of inquiry forms, average per field office.....	359	388
Total questionnaires handled:
Number distributed.....	9,320,000	9,650,000
Number of returns tabulated.....	3,000,000	3,100,000
Number of objective survey contacts (measurements and interviews).....	90,300	103,000
Number of official reports issued, all offices.....	9,300	9,600
Copies of reports distributed.....	13,400,000	13,700,000
Publications distributed.....	3,570,000	3,520,000
Special requests for information answered by field offices.....	64,400	65,300

The increase for 1964 would be used to place the long-range program to improve the crop and livestock estimating service on a full operating basis in 11 Western States and on a pilot basis in 13 States and for reimbursement to the Post Office Department for certain mail surveys previously handled on a nonreimbursable basis.

2. Statistical research and service.—This work includes review of all statistical forms, survey plans, and reporting and recordkeeping requirements originating in the Department and requiring Bureau of the Budget approval; liaison for coordination of statistics within the Department and with other statistical agencies; development of new and improved methods and techniques, and providing technical consulting services to other agencies of the Department; research on and development of sampling, forecasting, and other basic statistical techniques and methods to improve the crop and livestock estimates of the Department; use of and consultation on automatic data processing to develop and adopt this medium for improving the accuracy and timeliness of crop and livestock estimates; and conduct of special surveys relating to the marketing of agricultural products. A comparison of activity data for 1961 and 1962 is as follows:

Improvement of crop and livestock estimating methods:
Number of research projects.....	12	12

The increase for 1964 would be used for the development and adoption of modern automatic data processing methods related to basic data currently and previously collected.

Domestic agricultural marketing and distribution functions of the Department are concentrated primarily in the Agricultural Marketing Service. The marketing job is increasing in complexity as the market structure is subjected to near revolutionary changes such as concentration in food retailing, trend toward direct buying, decentralization of processing, growth of interregional competition, and growing trend toward vertical integration and contract farming.

The estimate for 1964 includes an increase to meet the additional pay and postal costs resulting from Public Law 87-793.

1. Marketing research.—This work is directed toward developing practical answers to problems encountered in moving products from the farm to the consumer. In cooperation with public and private agencies and trade groups, efforts are made to develop objective methods to determine quality, reduce losses from waste and spoilage, and improve efficiency in the physical handling of farm products as they move through marketing channels. The work includes research at each stage of marketing, such as assembly points, terminal or central markets, and retail markets.

2. Market news service.—This service provides current information on supply, movement, and prices at specific markets for practically all agricultural commodities. This daily market information enables American farmers to determine where and when to sell and at what price. Information is collected and disseminated at year-round and seasonal offices maintained in more than 130 cities and towns, often with local and other support and cooperation, generally from State Departments of Agriculture.

3. Inspection, grading, classing, and standardization.—Nationally uniform standards of quality of agricultural products are established and applied to specific lots of produce to promote confidence between buyers and sellers; reduce hazards in marketing due to misunderstandings and disputes arising from the use of nonstandard descriptions; encourage better preparation of uniform quality products for market; and furnish consumers with more definite information on the quality of products they buy. The standards are applied by or under the supervision of Federal employees at the request of any interested party, and generally for a fee. The mandatory inspection of poultry for wholesomeness is also carried on under this project. Approximately 55% of the total cost of this work was offset by fees and other revenue in 1962, which are shown principally under Agricultural Marketing Service trust funds in part II of the budget appendix.

The increase for 1964 would be used for inspecting the increasing volume of poultry produced and supervising new and enlarged poultry processing facilities.

4. Regulatory activities.—These include the administration of regulatory laws such as packers and stockyards, standard container, United States warehouse, and Federal seed, to assure fair play in the market place; to protect producers and handlers of agricultural commodities from financial loss due to careless or fraudulent marketing practices; and to preserve free and open competition in the marketing of farm products. Assistance is also provided to farmers and others in obtaining and maintaining equitable and reasonable transportation rates and services on farm products and supplies.

The increase for 1964 would be used to provide for more effective administration of the U.S. Warehouse Act. A supplemental estimate for 1963 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

Payments are made on a matching fund basis to State marketing agencies for carrying out specifically approved marketing service programs designed to bring about improved marketing. Under this activity, marketing specialists work with farmers, marketing firms, and agencies in solving marketing problems and in putting to use marketing research results.

This program covers such projects as methods of maintaining and improving the quality of products; ways of reducing marketing costs; expanding outlets for surplus products; and the collection and dissemination of special State and local market information and statistics. Through this cooperative approach, the Federal Government's leadership and money are coupled with State resources and experience to aid in the solution of the most urgent local and area marketing problems.

In 1963, 43 States are conducting about 130 projects under this program.

This program is designed to increase the consumption of fluid milk by children in nonprofit schools of high school grade and under, child-care centers, summer camps and similar nonprofit institutions.

From its inception in 1955 through 1962, the program was financed through advances from Commodity Credit Corporation funds. The Agricultural Act of 1961 changed the financing to a direct appropriation beginning July 1, 1962.

1. Cash payments to States.—Funds are advanced to State agencies to reimburse eligible participants for a part of the cost of the fluid milk consumed. An initial reserve is established at the beginning of the fiscal year for each State based on the total amount of reimbursement payments made during the preceding fiscal year adjusted for average growth. In selected needy schools, reimbursement payments may be made for the full cost of this milk for children who are unable to pay.

In 1962 over 2.6 billion half-pints of fluid milk were consumed by children—nearly six times the quantity in 1955, the first year of operation of the program. This represents over 2.5% of the total nonfarm consumption of fluid milk in the United States. Efforts are being continued in 1963 to bring the benefits of this program to more needy schools and needy children in areas of high economic distress.

Program activities from 1961 through 1964 are as follows:

2. Operating expenses.—Administrative and technical assistance is furnished to State agencies, participating schools, and child-care institutions. Policies, procedures, and standards are developed for administering the program and determining eligibility. The program is administered directly in 7,260 outlets where the State agency is prohibited by law from disbursing funds to such participants.

1. Food assistance, in the form of both funds and food, is provided to the States and possessions in serving lunches to school children. Each State's portion of the funds available was determined by a statutory formula through fiscal year 1962. The formula took into account the number of school-age children in the State and the relationship between the per capita income of the State and the average United States per capita income. The amendment to the act, effective July 1, 1962, changed the formula to include participation in place of school-age population. A new provision is also included in the amendment for providing special cash assistance to needy schools in serving free or reduced price lunches.

The increase for 1964 would provide for growth in the program, some further cushioning of the impact of transition to the new formula, and initiating a program of special assistance to needy schools.

The program is operated under an agreement entered into by the State educational agency and the Department of Agriculture. Schools make application to the State agency and if accepted are reimbursed for a part of the food cost of each meal served. In 1962, the States contributed to this program $892 million, most of which came from payments by children. This was far in excess of the statutory matching requirement of $3 for each Federal dollar of cash payment.

This appropriation is also used to purchase food for distribution to the schools to round out their nutritional needs. Transfers are made to this appropriation from the fund Removal of surplus agricultural commodities for the purchase and distribution of agricultural commodities and other foods. Further, commodities acquired under price support and surplus removal programs, and assistance through the special milk program are available to the schools. The volume of surplus commodities distributed to schools, however, depends upon market conditions.

The program during the peak month in 1962 provided lunches to over 32% of the approximately 43,400,000 school children in the country. The number of lunches served, increased approximately 6.68% over 1961. Participation in the program in December 1961 reached 14,200,000 children in 64,447 schools and an appreciable increase is expected in 1963 and 1964.

During 1962 over $781 million worth of agricultural commodities were used in the program. Over 23% of this amount represented commodities contributed under section 6 of the School Lunch Act and the Federal surplus removal and price support programs. About 77% of the food used in the program was purchased by the schools through local suppliers.

Participation in the program from 1961 through 1964 is as follows:

Number of schools (month of peak participation).....	64,303	65,965	64,800	65,300

Under section 32 of the act of August 24, 1935 (7 U.S.C. 612c), an amount equal to 30% of customs receipts during each calendar year (except for an amount equal to 30% of such receipts collected on fishery products transferred to the Department of the Interior to encourage the distribution of fishery products), and unused balances up to $300 million are available for expanding domestic and foreign market outlets for farm commodities. As provided in recent appropriation acts, transfers have been made from this fund to the school lunch program for the purchase and distribution of agricultural commodities and other foods pursuant to section 6 of the National School Lunch Act. Section 32 funds are also authorized for the administration of marketing agreements and orders, and the section 22 import-control programs. The basic legislation provides that funds devoted to any one commodity or product thereof must not exceed 25% of funds available. It also provides that the funds must be devoted principally to perishable agricultural commodities other than those receiving price support under title II of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended. It has been determined that this provision can be legally satisfied by reserving the principal portion of section 32 funds for the use of perishable nonbasic agricultural commodities when the occasion arises warranting their use for such purpose.

1. Commodity program payments are of four types: (a) Direct purchases are donated to the school lunch program, charitable institutions serving needy persons, and persons certified by welfare agencies as eligible for relief; (b) Diversion payments enable processors to purchase surplus commodities on the domestic market, divert them to by-products and new uses, and sell them at prices comparable to competing products, thus creating new markets for surplus commodities; (c) Export payments enable exporters to purchase surplus commodities on the domestic market and sell them on the world market at competitive world prices; (d) Production payments, none of which were made in 1962, help to reestablish farmers' purchasing power. During the past 2 years assistance under these programs was given to the following commodity groups (in millions of dollars):

Total.....	253.2	143.7

The use of section 32 program funds is contingent upon economic conditions. The estimates for both 1963 and 1964 reflect in total the requirements based on the situation as now foreseen. Distribution of the total in advance would be highly tentative since the type of program to be used is dependent upon a determination at the time of the kind of action which will best meet the particular need which had developed. If troublesome surpluses not now foreseen should develop, steps will be taken to use additional available funds for their removal or diversion as conditions might warrant.

2. Food stamp program payments aim to encourage increased domestic use of agricultural food commodities among low-income families through issuance of food coupons which may be used in retail stores for the purchase of commercial-brand foods. In September 1962, 131,811 needy persons were participating in the 8 pilot areas in operation last fiscal year. In the 40 additional areas in which the program has been offered, there are an estimated 398,000 needy persons eligible for participation.

A supplemental appropriation for 1964 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

3. Operating expenses occur mainly in connection with purchasing, exporting, and diverting surplus commodities and in distributing section 32 and Commodity Credit Corporation commodities to eligible outlets. Distribution in 1962 including that under section 6 of the National School Lunch Act, is summarized below (in millions):

	Number of recipients (peak month)	Value of commodities distributed	Pounds of commodities distributed

Supervisory assistance is furnished local and State groups to encourage the preservation of surpluses for year round use. In cooperation with the food trade, press and radio, greater consumption of abundant foods is encouraged. In 1962 the monthly plentiful foods list contained an average of 8 foods, and 7 national and 30 area, State, and local drives were conducted.

4. Marketing agreements and orders are put into effect upon request of producers or handlers after hearings and investigations, and approval by producers (and handlers in case of marketing agreements). They help to stabilize prices and benefit producers and consumers by establishing and maintaining orderly marketing conditions. Administration at the local level is financed by assessments upon handlers. On June 30, 1962, there were 83 orders in effect for milk and 44 covering tree fruits, tree nuts, and vegetables. Agreement and order programs including developmental work pursuant to the Agricultural Act of 1961 are being financed under this project. The cost of developmental work, consisting of the expenses of advisory committees, public hearings and referenda, is expected to decrease in 1964.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: 1961, $2 thousand; 1962, $1 thousand; 1963, $1 thousand; 1964, $1 thousand.

License fees are deposited in this special fund and are used to meet costs of administering the Perishable Agricultural Commodities, and the Produce Agency Acts (7 U.S.C. 491-497, 499a-499s). Public Law 87-725, enacted October 1, 1962, authorizes an increase in fees from $25 to a maximum of $50. Effective January 1, 1963, the fee will be increased to $36.

These acts are intended to assure equitable treatment to farmers and others in the marketing of fresh and frozen fruits and vegetables. Commission merchants, dealers, and brokers handling these products in interstate and foreign commerce are licensed. Complaints of violations are investigated and violations dealt with by (a) informal agreements agreeable to both parties, (b) formal decisions involving payments of reparation awards between parties, and (c) suspension or revocation of license and/or publication of the facts. Approximately 25,000 licenses were in effect on June 30, 1962, and some decrease is expected by 1964 due to additional exemptions authorized by the amendment approved October 1, 1962. Complaints received are expected to number about 2,300 in 1964—about 300 more than in 1962.

The primary function of the Foreign Agricultural Service is to help American agriculture in maintaining and expanding foreign markets for its products.

The agency performs three principal kinds of service functions: (a) It maintains a worldwide agricultural intelligence and reporting service, to assist U.S. agricultural industry in its export operations. This is done through a continuous program of analyzing and reporting foreign agricultural production, markets, and policies; (b) it helps to develop foreign markets for U.S. farm products through administration of special export programs and through helping to secure international trade conditions that are favorable toward our products; (c) it coordinates Department of Agriculture activities and relationships in the foreign field, including relations with international organizations and foreign governments.

1. International agricultural affairs.—The Service directs and coordinates Department participation in the formulation of trade programs and agreements to stabilize and expand world trade in American agricultural products, and to reduce restrictive tariff and trade practices against import of American agricultural commodities. Of special importance at this time is the relationship with the European Common Market and intensive efforts are being made to maintain access to the Market for U.S. agricultural commodities. This requires comprehensive analysis of the developing situation in the Common Market countries and related trade areas and appropriate representation to officials of the European Economic Community. Recommendations for the departmental positions on trade agreements and international commodity agreements are formulated. Continuous review is made of the trade regulations of signatories to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade as these regulations affect the movement of American farm products in international trade. Policies, programs, positions, and standards of participation in public and private international organizations are developed. The Service administers a program of import controls in accordance with section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1935, as amended.

2. Agricultural attachés.—Agricultural attachés located in 55 countries assist in the development of markets abroad for U.S. agricultural commodities. A comprehensive schedule of foreign agricultural market and trade reporting is maintained to meet the needs of the American agricultural industry.

3. Export programs.—Maintenance and expansion of foreign markets for surplus agricultural products are promoted by (a) developing agreements with foreign countries for sales of U.S. agricultural commodities under Public Law 480, and following up on the shipments of those commodities; and (b) directing and financing the operation of market development projects for agricultural products. Market development projects are, in most cases, carried out in cooperation with commodity trade groups under cooperative agreements. These projects carried out in foreign countries expand markets for U.S. agricultural commodities.

4. Commodity programs.—Information on foreign market requirements for specific commodities is obtained, analyzed, and made available to farm and trade groups. Market programs are developed for use by producers, exporters, and Government officials to maintain and expand the market abroad for U.S. farm products. Assistance is rendered to domestic trade representatives in negotiations with foreign government officials, importers, and consumers and for bringing together American exporters and foreign importers under conditions favorable to trade.

5. Barter and stockpiling.—The Service, in cooperation with other Government agencies, conducts a barter program designed to utilize surplus agricultural commodities, in lieu of dollars, in acquiring goods, materials and equipment required by other government agencies from other countries. This work is financed with funds transferred from Administrative expenses, Commodity Credit Corporation.

6. General sales management.—The Service conducts a program to develop sales, and pricing policies and programs for sales for export including sales for credit. The program also now includes price and quality review. Foreign data on prices and stocks, and rail, truck, barge, and ocean freight rates and other market information is collected and recorded for use in program development. Information concerning prices and other sales terms, sales programs and commodity availabilities is furnished to U.S. exporters, foreign importers and foreign government officials. This work is financed with funds transferred from Administrative expenses, Commodity Credit Corporation.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1961, $3 thousand (1962 adjustments, -$1 thousand); 1962, $4 thousand; 1963, $4 thousand; 1964, $4 thousand.

The major objectives of the Commodity Exchange Authority are to maintain fair and competitive pricing in the commodity futures markets by preventing manipulation and other abusive trading practices. Enforcement of the Commodity Exchange Act requires supervision over futures trading in 18 commodities on 17 exchanges currently designated as contract markets. Transactions on contract markets were estimated at 9,900,000 in 1962, compared with 11,500,000 in the 1961 fiscal year. The average of month-end open contracts in all commodities was approximately 179,000 in 1962, compared with approximately 134,000 in 1961, a continuation of the long-term rising trend in the utilization of futures markets.

1. Licensing and auditing of brokerage houses.—This consists of (a) prevention of the misuse of customers' funds by the analysis of financial statements of futures commission merchants and the periodic audits of their books and records; and (b) annual registration of futures commission merchants and floor brokers.

This is an appropriation account to cover expenses of programs administered by, and functions assigned to, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. The funds in this account, which include transfers from the Commodity Credit Corporation and miscellaneous advances from other sources, are available for operating expenses at the National, Commodity office, State, and county levels.

The Commodity offices and the data processing center in Kansas City play an important role in administering price support programs and the field operations stemming from producer loan and purchase agreements, inventory management and merchandising activities.

The ASC State committees, appointed pursuant to the provisions of section 8(b) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, are in general administrative charge of all programs carried out in their respective States. Within the framework of national policy, the State committees determine policies to be followed and direct the adaptation of the national programs to the State.

The ASC county committees are responsible for the local administration of programs and functions dealing directly with farmers. The elected county committee is in charge of the county office.

The programs and activities carried out by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service include: acreage allotments and marketing quotas; agricultural conservation program; conservation reserve program; special programs for feed grains and wheat; Sugar Act program; land use adjustment program; storage, wool, and price support programs.

1. Formulation, appraisal, audit and investigation.—The supply adjustment, conservation, and price support programs and the management and merchandising of commodities acquired under the price support program have a tremendous impact on the national and, to a lesser extent, the international economy. This activity provides for constant review of the effectiveness of these programs and the analysis of data to formulate even more effective programs. The work includes the audit and investigation of these programs at all operating levels, including about 3,000 county offices.

2. Operation of supply adjustment, conservation, and price support programs.—Includes (a) development of program regulations and procedures, (b) holding meetings with employees and producers to discuss new programs or changes in programs, (c) collecting and compiling basic data for individual farms, (d) establishing individual farm allotments, (e) establishing proportionate shares for sugar farms, when necessary, (f) notifying producers of allotments, proportionate shares, productivity indexes, and payment rates, (g) determining farm marketing allocations, (h) handling appeals, (i) determining county normal yields, (j) conducting referendums and certifying results, (k) checking compliance and use of diverted acres, including spot checking, (l) developing pooling agreements under which several farmers in a community unite to solve a common conservation problem which cannot be solved by individual action, (m) issuing marketing cards so that production from the allotted acreage of crops can be marketed without penalty, and (n) processing producer requests for conservation cost sharing.

3. Inventory management and merchandising.—Includes (a) overall management of CCC-owned commodities including inspection of commercial storage facilities and stored commodities, (b) selling commodities, (c) donating CCC-owned commodities, and (d) accounting for loans and commodities. The value of the commodities is currently estimated at about $5 billion. The increase in 1964 results from including CCC administrative expenses for the first time in this account.

To illustrate the volume of work, there are set forth below items of work for some of the major programs which were performed in fiscal year 1962. It is assumed that work will be at about the same level in fiscal year 1963.

SUGAR ACT PROGRAM

Total U.S. requirements and quotas are determined to provide consumers with adequate supplies of sugar at reasonable prices, to protect the domestic sugar industry, and to promote the export trade of the United States. The quota for each domestic area is allotted to individual sellers when necessary to achieve orderly marketing, and restrictive farm acreage allotments are established for producers when necessary to avoid surpluses.

Recent legislative changes in the Sugar Act increased quotas for domestic producing areas, established specific foreign quotas, plus a global quota on which the premium over world prices paid to foreign suppliers was reduced.

Payments are made to domestic producers of cane and beets (a) for compliance with specified conditions of employment, production and price; and (b) for abandonment of planted acreage and crop deficiencies on harvested acreage due to natural calamities.

The increase of $2.3 million as proposed for 1964 is due principally to increased conditional payments to sugar producers. If later production estimates confirm current forecasts, consideration may need to be given to a supplemental estimate for 1964.

This program is designed to encourage conservation by sharing with farmers and ranchers the cost of carrying out approved soil-building and soil- and water-conserving practices, including related wildlife-conserving practices, which farmers generally would not perform to the needed extent with their own resources. The rate of cost-sharing which may be given in the form of conservation materials and services or a payment after completion of the practice, averages approximately 50% of the cost.

Conservation measures for which cost-sharing is offered include those which are primarily for (1) establishment of permanent protective cover, (2) improvement and protection of established vegetative cover, (3) conservation and disposal of water, (4) establishment of temporary vegetative cover, (5) temporary protection of soil from wind and water erosion, and (6) benefits to wildlife.

Under the 1961 program, new or additional practices were established on 1,216,556 farms and ranches, consisting of 182,000,000 acres of cropland and 433,000,000 acres of farmland. This compares with 1,029,279 farms and ranches, comprised of 152,000,000 acres of farmland on which practices were established under the 1960 program. The following practices, along with others, were installed under the 1961 program:¹

This program, initiated in 1956, has as its objectives (1) the adjustment of total crop acreage more nearly in line with demand by withdrawing cropland from production, and (2) establishment and maintenance of sound conservation practices on the land withdrawn. The Secretary was authorized, through calendar year 1960, to enter into 3- to 15-year contracts with producers. In return for removing designated cropland from production and for establishing necessary conservation practices, the producer receives an annual rental payment each year of the contract period, and cost-sharing assistance for the establishment of the required practices. Total annual rental payments to a producer are limited to $5 thousand. A supplemental appropriation for 1963 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

Cost-sharing assistance (up to 80% of the cost of carrying out approved practices) is offered to assist and encourage farmers to rehabilitate farm lands damaged by natural disasters.

Legislation provides that assistance will be made available only when, as a result of wind erosion, floods, hurricanes, or other natural disasters, new conservation problems are created which (1) if not treated, will impair or endanger the land, (2) materially affect the productive capacity of the land, (3) represent damage which is unusual in character and, except for wind erosion, is not the type which would recur frequently in the same area, and (4) will be so costly to rehabilitate that Federal assistance is or will be required to return the land to productive agricultural use.

Funds for emergency cost-sharing assistance are distributed among States on the basis of needs for restoration of damaged lands.

LAND-USE ADJUSTMENT PROGRAM

For necessary expenses to promote the conservation and economic use of land pursuant to the provisions of section 16(e) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590h, 590p), as amended by the Act of September 27, 1962 (76 Stat. 606), $27,000,000, to remain available until expended.

This program provides for long-range agreements with farm and ranch owners and operators to make changes in their cropping systems and land-uses to (1) change permanently to better productive use cropland that is not well suited for crop use, and (2) temporarily shift to better productive use land that is suitable for crop use but not currently needed for crops.

The agreements provide for payments, the furnishing of materials and services, and other assistance to farmers in consideration of their obligations to change the land use and to install and maintain conservation practices. The agreements are limited to a maximum of 10 years, except that those providing for tree cover may not provide for annual payments for more than 5 years.

The legislation limits the assistance to farmers to $10 million for any calendar year. In addition, it provides for extension of expiring contracts under the conservation reserve program, but limits assistance to farmers for this purpose to calendar year 1963 and to not more than $15 million. A supplemental appropriation for 1963 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

A number of statutes provide for the facilities of the Commodity Credit Corporation to be used in carrying out programs for the exportation of surplus agricultural commodities thereunder and authorize appropriations to reimburse the Corporation for costs incurred in connection with such programs.

Prior to 1962, the Corporation was reimbursed for the costs of these activities by direct appropriations subsequent to incurrence of the costs. Beginning in 1962, the Congress appropriated funds for estimated costs of these activities on a pay-as-you-go basis. Advances are made to the Corporation each month for estimated costs incurred. Subsequent requests will include funds for each ensuing year on the same basis as for other programs of the Department.

Although the appropriations are made in a specified amount for these programs, the Congress has recognized the fact that the appropriation is not fully controlling since authority under basic law permits the Government to enter into agreements and commit the Government to expenditures which must be financed from subsequent appropriations. If the amounts appropriated prove to be inadequate, the Commodity Credit Corporation will still finance authorized costs which may be in excess of the appropriations provided and subsequent appropriations would include such additional amounts used. On the other hand, any unused appropriations, which remain available until expended, will be used to reduce the subsequent appropriation requests for these programs.

Activities are currently being carried out under these programs pursuant to the following specific authorizations:

Public Law 480: Sale of surplus agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I); Commodities disposed of for emergency famine relief to friendly peoples (title II); Long-term supply contracts (title IV).

International Wheat Agreement Act.

Bartered materials for supplemental stockpile (Agricultural Act of 1956, title II).

1. Sale of surplus agricultural commodities for foreign currencies.—Under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1701-1709), surplus agricultural commodities are sold for foreign currencies. These currencies may then be used within certain limitations by the United States Government for agricultural market development, purchase of strategic materials, military equipment, facilities, and services for the common defense, payment of U.S. obligations, military housing, and other specified purposes.

If regular appropriations are available for any unrestricted purpose for which foreign currencies are used, the agency must buy the currency for dollars which are credited to the Commodity Credit Corporation. Special appropriations have been made for uses of foreign currencies in excess of amounts needed for regular operations or where use of currencies is restricted by international agreement or understanding. As these currencies are used, the Corporation will receive reimbursement therefor from these appropriations. The budget estimate proposes the application in 1964 of such proceeds from sales of foreign currencies to the reduction of unrecovered prior years' costs rather than to the reduction of the appropriation request. The Budget estimate proposes, in addition, that dollar repayments received by Commodity Credit Corporation in fiscal year 1963 of foreign currency loans made under section 104 of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act be applied to the reduction of unrecovered prior years' costs.

Section 509 of Public Law 86-500, approved June 8, 1960 (74 Stat. 186), provides that at least 75% of the total cost of any family housing project or community facility hereafter constructed or acquired in any foreign country (with certain specific exceptions) by any military department shall be paid for from foreign currencies acquired by the Corporation under title I. The Department of Defense reimburses the Corporation for foreign currencies used for military family housing from quarters allowances and net rental receipts from such housing.

Through June 30, 1962, a total of 310 agreements, or supplements to agreements, had been signed with 44 countries for commodities representing an export market value of $8,115.6 million including ocean transportation of $895.8 million. The major commodities included were wheat, cotton, and fats and oils which together amounted to 73% of the total market value of the agreements. Through that date commodities with an export market value of about $5,578.7 million had been shipped. The total dollar equivalent of foreign currencies deposited in the Treasury through June 30, 1962, amounted to $5,775.9 million.

Appropriations are authorized to reimburse the Corporation for its net costs in carrying out this program. Through December 31, 1961, a total of $11.25 billion was so authorized.

Public Law 87-128, approved August 8, 1961, provides a limitation of $4.5 billion for a 3-year period January 1, 1962, through December 31, 1964, and a proviso limiting to $2.5 billion that amount that may be appropriated in any calendar year to reimburse the Commodity Credit Corporation.

2. Commodities disposed of for emergency famine relief to friendly peoples.—Under title II of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, Public Law 480, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1703, 1721–1724), the Commodity Credit Corporation makes its surplus stocks of agricultural commodities available to the President for famine relief and other assistance to friendly nations and friendly peoples in meeting famine or other relief requirements and pays ocean freight charges for the shipment of donated commodities.

Public Law 86–472, enacted May 14, 1960, authorized payment of transportation to point of entry of landlocked countries and general average contributions arising out of ocean transport of commodities transferred under title II. Public Law 87–92, approved July 20, 1961, continued the authority of the President under section 202, title II, to utilize surplus agricultural commodities to assist needy peoples and to promote economic development in underdeveloped areas of the world.

Under this program, the Corporation will also transfer surplus agricultural commodities from its stocks and finance ocean freight charges to carry out participation of the United States in the 3-year experimental World Food Program established by resolutions of the General Assembly and of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations.

Appropriations are authorized to reimburse the Corporation for its costs in carrying out the program. Through December 31, 1959, a total of $800 million was authorized. From January 1, 1960, $300 million per calendar year is authorized through December 31, 1961, plus unused balances of the previous authorization, making a total of $1.4 billion.

Public Law 87–128, approved August 8, 1961, amended section 203 of title II limiting to $300 million, plus any unused preceding year's authorization, the appropriations to reimburse Commodity Credit Corporation (including Commodity Credit Corporation's investment in commodities made available) which can be made in any calendar year beginning January 1, 1961, and ending December 31, 1964, and extending to December 31, 1964, the programs of assistance which may be undertaken under this title.

During 1962, a total of 9 agreements or amendments to agreements were signed with 6 countries for commodities representing an export market value of $57 million, including ocean transportation.

The International Wheat Agreement Act, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1641-1642), which was renewed for a period of 3 years effective August 1, 1962, operates to provide an assured market for wheat to exporting countries at stable and equitable prices. The maximum and minimum prices in the 1962 agreement are $2.02½ and $1.62½ per bushel, respectively, for the basic grade of wheat, No. 1, Manitoba Northern, at Fort William/Port Arthur, Canada, in terms of Canadian currency at the parity for the Canadian dollar determined for the purposes of the International Monetary Fund as at March 1949. The total quantity traded under the agreement in the 1961-1962 crop year represented about 39% of world trade in wheat, yet the 10 exporting member countries export inside and outside the agreement over 97% of all wheat moving in world trade.

The Commodity Credit Corporation makes available wheat or wheat flour to carry out the provisions of the agreement, including the payment-in-kind to the exporter for the difference between the prevailing sales price of wheat under the agreement and the domestic market price. A cash payment for this differential is made for flour.

Under its corporate charter (15 U.S.C. 714-714p), and specific statutes where applicable, the Commodity Credit Corporation engages in buying, selling, lending, and other activities with respect to agricultural commodities, their products, food, feeds, and fibers, for the purpose of stabilizing, supporting, and protecting farm income and prices; assisting in the maintenance of balanced and adequate supplies of such commodities; and facilitating their orderly distribution. The Corporation also makes available materials and facilities required in connection with the production and marketing of such commodities.

The Corporation has an authorized capital stock of $100 million held by the United States and authority to borrow up to $14.5 billion.

Programs.—The budget is based on (1) price support, export, supply, and related programs and (2) special activities.

Obligations and expenditures for these programs include primarily loans, purchases, purchase agreements, carrying charges, incentive and other payments, operating and interest expenses, and advances and current obligations incident to special activities as authorized by specific legislation.

Budget assumptions.—The following general assumptions form the basis for the Corporation's 1963 and 1964 budget estimates: (a) employment, production, and national income will rise moderately both in 1963 and 1964 from the present level; (b) on the average, the general level of prices will be the same as or increase slightly over the present level; (c) developments in international relations will not be such as to affect Government civilian programs generally; (d) exports of agricultural commodities in the fiscal year 1964 will be at about current levels; (e) yields for the 1963 crops generally are based on recent averages adjusted for trend; and (f) acreage allotments and marketing quotas will be in effect for the 1963 crops of peanuts, rice, wheat, cotton, and certain kinds of tobacco. Compliance with provisions of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962, the provisions of the 1962 and 1963 special agricultural conservation program for feed grains and the wheat stabilization programs should result in substantial acreage reductions in those commodities. The estimates for the feed grain and wheat stabilization programs assume diverted acreage based on probable signups by cooperators. However, the full impact of these programs cannot be accurately predicted until the final returns of actual participation are received for these crops.

In considering these estimates, it should be recognized that it is difficult to estimate requirements for the year ending June 30, 1964. They are dependent upon weather conditions and all other factors affecting volume of production of crops not yet planted in this country and abroad, economic conditions generally, food needs in this country and abroad, availability of dollar exchange, and other complex and unpredictable factors.

PRICE SUPPORT, EXPORT, SUPPLY, AND RELATED PROGRAMS

Price support.—Price-support operations are carried out under the Corporation's charter powers (15 U.S.C. 714) and in conformity with the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1421), and other applicable legislation including the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962, Public Law 87-703. Under the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, price support is mandatory for the basic commodities—corn, cotton, wheat, rice, peanuts, and tobacco—and specific nonbasic commodities; namely, tung nuts, honey, milk, butterfat, and the products of milk and butterfat, barley, oats, rye, and grain sorghums. Price support for wool and mohair is mandatory under the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1781-1787), through the marketing year ending March 31, 1966. Price support for other nonbasic agricultural commodities is discretionary except that whenever the price of either cottonseed or soybeans is supported, the price of the other must be supported at such level as the Secretary determines will cause them to compete on equal terms on the market. This program may also include operations to remove and dispose of or aid in the removal or disposition of surplus agricultural commodities for the purpose of stabilizing prices at levels not in excess of permissible price-support levels.

Price support is made available through loans, payments, purchase agreements, purchases, and other operations, and, in the case of wool and mohair, through incentive payments based on marketings. Producers' commodities serve as collateral for price-support loans. With limited exceptions, price-support loans are nonrecourse and the Corporation looks only to the pledged or mortgaged collateral for satisfaction of the loan. Purchase agreements generally are available during the same period that loans are available. By signing a purchase agreement, a producer receives an option to sell to the Corporation any quantity of the commodity he may elect within the maximum specified in the agreement. Direct purchases are made from producers and processors depending on the commodities involved. Under section 308 of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, purchases of animal fats and edible oils and products thereof are authorized as will tend to maintain the support level for cottonseed and soybeans without requiring the acquisition of such commodities under the usual loan and purchase agreements of the price-support program. Under section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, price supported commodities in private stocks are made available for donation in order to prevent the waste thereof before such commodities can be disposed of in normal domestic channels without impairment of the price-support program or sold abroad at competitive world prices. The incentive payment program for wool and mohair is described under Special activities.

In all its price support operations, the Corporation utilizes normal trade facilities to the maximum extent practicable. In its lending activities the Corporation uses local banks, cooperatives, and other financial institutions. Commercial storage facilities are used to a great extent in the storage of loan collateral and of stocks acquired by the Corporation.

Disposition of commodities acquired by the Corporation in its price-support operations is made in compliance with sections 202, 407, and 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, and other applicable legislation, particularly the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, Public Law 480, 83d Congress, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1691), title II of the Agricultural Act of 1956, as amended, the Agricultural Act of 1961, the act of August 19, 1958, in the case of cornmeal and wheat flour, Public Law 86-299 (7 U.S.C. 1427 note) along with Public Law 87-127, with respect to sale of livestock feed in emergency areas, and the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962.

Price-support commodities in Commodity Credit Corporation inventory which are disposed of through the commodity export program, redemption of payment-in-kind certificates, and special activities such as sales for foreign currencies are, for accounting purposes, credited to the price-support program.

Commodity export.—The Corporation promotes the export of agricultural commodities and products through sales, barter, payments, and other operations. Other than in barter for stockpiling purposes, such commodities and products may be those held in private trade channels as well as those acquired by the Corporation in its price-support operations. This program is carried out under the authority contained in the Corporation's charter, particularly sections 5(d) and 5(f), and in accordance with specific statutes where applicable, such as sections 407 and 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, the International Wheat Agreement Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1641), the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, title I of the Agricultural Act of 1954, title II of the Agricultural Act of 1956, as amended, and section 9 of the act of September 6, 1958. In general, transactions involving foreign currencies are conducted pursuant to the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended. However, other such transactions may be conducted under the charter authority.

Based on recommendations of the Executive Stockpile Committee, approved by the President on September 20, 1962, the emphasis of the barter program will be shifted from acquisition of strategic and critical materials for the supplemental stockpile to its use in various types of off-shore procurement programs for the Department of Defense, the Agency for International Development, and other agencies. Commodity Credit Corporation will be reimbursed for off-shore procurement by the recipient agencies.

To the extent that appropriations are not provided under Foreign assistance programs, obligations under the International Wheat Agreement, and titles I, II, and IV of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, are paid by the Corporation subject to reimbursement from appropriations authorized for such purpose. These programs are further described under special activities and Foreign assistance programs.

In addition to the exports under the International Wheat Agreement, Corporation-owned wheat is available for export under barter programs of the Corporation at competitive world prices and under the Corporation's export credit sales program. It is also made available to exporters, in payment of the price differential between the prevailing world export sales price and the domestic market price which is earned on exports of free-market wheat outside the International Wheat Agreement and under this agreement. Cash payments are made on all exports of wheat flour either under the International Wheat Agreement or outside the agreement. Wheat and flour payments outside the agreement are made on exports to countries not participating in the agreement.

In order to encourage movement of cotton, corn, barley, grain sorghums, oats, rye, rice and nonfat dry milk from free-market supplies into export channels, export payments are made in the form of these commodities from the Corporation's stocks. Cotton held in the Corporation's inventory is also sold for unrestricted use on a competitive price basis.

The Corporation conducts a cotton products export program designed to protect the competitive position of the domestic cotton industry in relation to sales of cotton products manufactured abroad from American cotton purchased at export prices. Equalization payments, based on the raw cotton content in the products exported, are made to exporters on cotton products of upland cotton grown and wholly processed in the United States.

The Corporation also purchases wheat and other products from processors or processes its own stocks of such commodities for foreign and domestic distribution. In certain cases, payments for such products or processing costs are made in payment-in-kind export certificates.

Also, the Corporation furnishes agricultural commodities and products for distribution or exhibition at international trade fairs to aid in the development of foreign markets for such commodities.

Storage facilities.—This program is carried out under the authority contained in the Corporation's charter, particularly sections 4(h), 4(m), and 5 (a) and (b). The Corporation may (a) purchase and maintain (in storage deficient areas) granaries and equipment for care and storage of grain owned or controlled by the Corporation; (b) make loans for the construction or expansion of farm-storage facilities; (c) provide storage-use guarantees to encourage the construction of commercial storage facilities; and (d) undertake other operations necessary to provide storage adequate to carry out the Corporation's programs.

Supply and foreign purchase.—This program is carried out under the authority contained in the Corporation's charter, particularly sections 5 (b) and (c) thereof. The Corporation procures foods, agricultural commodities, their products, and related materials to supply the requirements of Government agencies, foreign governments, and relief and rehabilitation agencies, and to meet domestic requirements. Foods, agricultural commodities and their products are procured or aid is given in their procurement to facilitate distribution or to meet anticipated requirements during periods of short supply. The Corporation may also, through purchases, loans, sales or other means, make available materials and facilities required in connection with the production and marketing of agricultural commodities.

Operations involving procurement for other Government agencies are conducted in accordance with section 4 of the act of July 16, 1943 (15 U.S.C. 713a-9), which requires that the Corporation be fully reimbursed for services performed, losses sustained, operating costs incurred, or commodities purchased or delivered to or on behalf of any other Government agency from the appropriate funds of such agency. Operations not subject to section 4 of the act may involve losses if such are necessary to the accomplishment of the objectives of the particular operation.

The main activities now carried on are procurement for other Government agencies of specialized commodities not in the Corporation's price-support inventory.

Feed grains.—Under section 16 (c), (d), and (g) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, the Secretary of Agriculture utilizes Commodity Credit Corporation funds, facilities, and stocks of feed grains in redeeming or marketing payment-in-kind certificates issued to producers who divert acreage from the production of 1961 crops of corn and grain sorghums and 1962 and 1963 crops of corn, grain sorghums, and barley under this program. The Corporation is also authorized to use its capital funds to pay administrative expenses necessary to carry out this program through June 30, 1963. (See Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.)

Wheat stabilization.—Under section 124 of the Agricultural Act of 1961, Public Law 87-128, approved August 8, 1961, and section 307 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962 and section 339(b) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as added by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962, the Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized to utilize its capital funds and other assets for the purpose of making payments to producers who divert acreage from the production of 1962, 1963, 1964 and 1965 crops of wheat under this program. Payments are made by issuance of Commodity Credit Corporation sight drafts which may be cashed or used for the acquisition of wheat from Commodity Credit Corporation stocks. The Corporation is also authorized to use its capital funds to pay administrative expenses necessary to carry out this program through June 30, 1963. (See Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.)

Undistributed expenses.—There are a number of expenses which are not allocated to a specific program. These include interest on (a) the capital stock of the Corporation, (b) borrowings from the Treasury, and (c) other obligations evidencing loans made by lending agencies; administrative expenses; and other miscellaneous costs, including expenses of the agricultural stabilization and conservation county committees and Federal Reserve banks in connection with the Corporation's programs.

Administrative expenses are for the operating staff, including the services of employees of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service engaged in the Corporation's activities, services performed by other agencies of the Department, costs of audit, and payments to the General Services Administration for space in the District of Columbia and rent of field office space. Estimates for 1964 include a limitation of $43.9 million for costs of administration including a reserve of not less than 7% for contingencies. The requested authorization excludes administrative expenses in connection with the supply and foreign purchase program, the wool and mohair program under the National Wool Act of 1954, the International Wheat Agreement, and the sale of long-staple cotton transferred from the national stockpile, since it is contemplated that full reimbursement will be received for these expenses. Such reimbursement will be obtained and used in 1964 in the same manner as in previous years.

Expenses in connection with the acquisition, operation, maintenance, improvement, or disposition of property which the Corporation owns or in which it has an interest have been treated as program rather than administrative expenses. Such expenses include inspection, classing and grading work performed on a fee basis by Federal employees or Federal or State licensed inspectors and work performed on a contract basis by agricultural stabilization and conservation county committees. Capital funds of the Corporation are transferred to the consolidated appropriation, Expenses, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service as indicated under that appropriation item for operating expenses relating to the Corporation's programs. Also, expenses of other Federal agencies whose services are utilized in the handling of Commodity Credit Corporation property are treated as program expenses. These include the fleet storage operation of the Maritime Administration conducted intermittently since 1949 and the services of the General Services Administration in connection with the strategic, critical, and other materials acquired by the Corporation.

Under the special agricultural conservation programs for feed grains and the wheat stabilization program, capital funds of the Corporation are authorized to pay administrative expenses of these programs through June 30, 1963.

SPECIAL ACTIVITIES

These activities are carried out under authority of section 5(g) of the Corporation's charter and specific statutory authorizations or directives with respect thereto which are currently in effect or which may subsequently be enacted. A summary of current activities will be found on p. 143.

The Corporation receives reimbursement for costs of these activities as described under each.

Activities currently being carried out are as follows: (See Foreign assistance programs for details of items (1)–(5).)

(1) Sale of surplus agricultural commodities for foreign currencies.—Under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1701–1709), surplus agricultural commodities are sold for foreign currencies. These currencies may then be used within certain limitations by the United States Government for agricultural market development, purchase of strategic materials, military equipment, facilities and services for the common defense, payment of U.S. obligations, military family housing, and other specified purposes.

(2) Commodities disposed of for emergency famine relief to friendly peoples.—The Commodity Credit Corporation, through December 31, 1964, is directed, under title II of Public Law 480, 83d Congress, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1703, 1721–1724), to make its stocks of agricultural commodities available for emergency assistance to friendly peoples in meeting famine or other urgent relief requirements and to pay ocean freight charges for the shipment of donated commodities.

(3) Long-term supply contracts.—Under title IV of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act (7 U.S.C., Supp. 1, 1731–1736), the President, in order to stimulate and increase sales for dollars, is authorized to make agreements with friendly nations, including their financial institutions, or with the private trade, under which the United States would deliver surplus agricultural commodities over periods of up to 10 years and accept payment in dollars with interest over periods of up to 20 years.

(4) International Wheat Agreement (7 U.S.C. 1641–1642).—This agreement, which was renewed for a period of 3 years effective August 1, 1962, operates to provide an assured market for wheat to exporting countries and assured supplies of wheat to importing countries at stable and equitable prices.

(5) Bartered materials for supplemental stockpile.—The Commodity Credit Corporation is directed under title II of the Agricultural Act of 1956 (7 U.S.C. 1856) to transfer strategic and other materials acquired as a result of barter and exchange of agricultural commodities, other than those acquired for the national stockpile or for other purposes, to the supplemental stockpile.

(6) Military housing (barter and exchange).—During 1957 a contract was completed for the disposition of Commodity Credit Corporation-owned commodities valued at $50 million, for the construction of military housing in France with foreign currencies obtained from this transaction. Proceeds from rental and quarters allowances will be paid by the Department of Defense over a long period of years to reimburse the Corporation pursuant to the act of September 1, 1954 (5 U.S.C. 171z–1).

(7) National Wool Act.—Under the provisions of the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended, incentive payments are being used to encourage the annual domestic production of approximately 300 million pounds of shorn wool. Support of prices of wool and mohair is mandatory. Incentive payments are made to eligible producers on a percentage basis, reflecting the amount required to bring the national average received by all producers up to the announced incentive level. The incentive level can not exceed 110% of parity. In a referendum conducted in September 1962, wool and lamb producers voted to continue the deduction from their incentive payment of an amount not to exceed 1 cent per pound of wool and 5 cents per hundredweight of unshorn lambs marketed. These funds financed promotional advertising, and related market-development activities by the American Sheep Producers' Council, Inc., under an agreement with the Secretary of Agriculture. In order to simplify program and financing operations, the marketing year under this program will be placed on a calendar year basis on January 1, 1964.

Funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation are used to carry on the wool incentive program. A permanent appropriation is provided to reimburse the Corporation, but the yearly amount is limited to 70% of all duties collected on wool and wool manufactures during the preceding calendar year.

(8) Grain for migratory waterfowl feed.—The Commodity Credit Corporation is directed to make available to the Secretary of the Interior (7 U.S.C. 442–445), such grain acquired through price-support operations and certified by the Commodity Credit Corporation to be available for such purposes or in such condition as to be undesirable for human consumption, as the Secretary of the Interior shall requisition. This appropriation item is now included under that Department.

(9) Surplus grain for game birds.—The Secretary of the Interior (Public Law 87–152, approved August 17, 1961 (75 Stat. 389)), is authorized to requisition Commodity Credit Corporation grain for feeding starving migratory birds. Any State, under Public Law 87–152 cited above, upon the finding of the Secretary of the Interior that resident game birds and other resident wildlife are threatened with starvation, may also requisition grain from Corporation stocks. Appropriations will be requested in a later budget to reimburse the Corporation for this activity.

(10) Grading and classing activities.—The Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized to make advances to the Agricultural Marketing Service for classing and grading of agricultural commodities without charge to producers (7 U.S.C. 414a). Such advances used for classing cotton and grading tobacco not placed under price-support loan are financed by appropriations. This appropriation item is now included under the Agricultural Marketing Service.

(11) Soil bank program.—Pursuant to section 120 of the Agricultural Act of 1956 (7 U.S.C. 1808) the Secretary of Agriculture utilizes the facilities of the Corporation for making payments to farmers under this program. (See Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.)

(12) Land use adjustment.—Pursuant to section 101 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962, approved September 27, 1962, Public Law 87–703, the Secretary is authorized to utilize the services, facilities, and authorities of the Commodity Credit Corporation for the purpose of making disbursements to producers under programs formulated pursuant to sections 8 and 16(e) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended.

(13) Transfer of long-staple cotton from national stockpile for sale by Commodity Credit Corporation.—The act of July 10, 1957, (71 Stat. 290), authorized the transfer of 50 thousand bales of domestically grown extra long-staple cotton from the national stockpile to the Corporation for sale. Approximately 219,000 bales of extra long-staple cotton, both American-Egyptian and foreign grown, remaining in the stockpile were also made available to Commodity Credit Corporation for disposition pursuant to Public Law 87–548, approved July 25, 1962. Proceeds less costs incurred, including administrative expenses, are covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

(14) Loans to Secretary of Agriculture for conservation purposes.—Under section 391(c) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1391), the Corporation advances funds to the Secretary in amounts not to exceed $50 million annually to purchase conservation materials and services. Repayments of the loans plus interest are made as soon as practicable in the succeeding fiscal year from funds appropriated for the agricultural conservation program. (See Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.)

Financing.—The programs of the Commodity Credit Corporation are financed by capital stock, borrowings, guarantees to purchase notes or other obligations evidencing loans made by lending agencies, issuance of certificates of interest in loans held by the Corporation, appropriations to reimburse Commodity Credit Corporation for net realized losses, appropriations to reimburse the Corporation for costs of special activities, advances and reimbursements from Foreign Assistance Program appropriations, and receipts from operations.

Borrowing authority.—The Corporation has an authorized capital stock of $100 million held by the United States and authority to borrow up to $14.5 billion.

Funds are borrowed from Treasury and may also be borrowed from private lending agencies. In connection with loan guarantees, the Corporation reserves a sufficient amount of its borrowing authority to purchase at any time all notes and other obligations evidencing loans made by lending agencies or certificates of interest issued in connection with the financing of price-support operations. All bonds, notes, debentures, and similar obligations issued by the Corporation are subject to approval by the Secretary of the Treasury as required by the act of March 8, 1938 (15 U.S.C. 713a–4).

Interest on borrowings from the Treasury (and on capital stock) is paid in accordance with a policy of the Treasury that the rate shall be based upon the average interest rate on all outstanding marketable obligations (of comparable maturity date) of the United States as of the preceding month. Interest is also paid on certificates of interest and lending agency obligations for the period the agencies have their funds invested.

On the basis of the budgetary assumptions heretofore described, the consequent estimated program requirements currently indicate no need for an increase in borrowing authority. Since there are so many uncontrollable factors affecting the programs of the Corporation involving crops which have not even been planted, it must be recognized that estimates of the use of borrowing authority are highly tentative. Should program developments occur which would indicate a need for funds in excess of those contained in these estimates, additional new obligational authority would be requested.

Legislation is being proposed to permit the Corporation, at its option, to tender notes to the Treasury for cancellation accompanied with an equivalent reduction in the borrowing authority of the Corporation. Such tenders would usually be made for unreimbursed realized losses.

Note.—This table does not reflect the following charges: accounts payable, accrued liabilities, and obligations outstanding other than obligations to purchase notes and certificates held by banks. These do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowings from Treasury or loans or certificates held by banks.

Reimbursement for net realized losses.—Pursuant to Public Law 87-155 (75 Stat. 391), annual appropriations are authorized for each fiscal year commencing with fiscal year ending June 30, 1961, to reimburse the Commodity Credit Corporation for net realized losses sustained as reflected in its accounts and shown in its report of financial condition as of the close of each fiscal year. This law repealed sections 1 and 2 of the act of March 8, 1938, as amended (15 U.S.C. 713a-1), which provided for an appraisal by the Secretary of the Treasury of the assets and liabilities of the Corporation and authorized restoration of capital impairment or surplus payments to Treasury based on such appraisal.

The realized losses reflected in the accounts of the Corporation and in its report of financial condition as of June 30, 1962, were $2,799.4 million. A 1964 appropriation in this amount is proposed in the estimates.

Inventory revaluation and accounting for carrying charges.—It had been the Corporation's practice for a number of years to treat as additions to the book value of commodity inventories the costs incurred for storage, handling, and transportation of such inventories. After approval by the General Accounting Office, the Department of the Treasury, the Bureau of the Budget, and applicable Congressional committees, the Corporation, in order to report inventory values on a more realistic basis, revalued its inventory as of June 30, 1961, by removing all accumulated storage, handling, and transportation costs incurred subsequent to acquisition of inventories and recording them as current operating expenses. In this connection, resale loan storage costs are similarly handled.

Net realized losses due to the inventory revaluation amounted to $1,268.5 million. The 1963 appropriation act included $211.5 million to reimburse the Corporation for approximately one-sixth of these losses. Subsequent budgets may include additional reimbursement of these losses if needed to finance operations.

The net realized losses of the Corporation have previously been reimbursed as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Purpose and financial organization.—The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, a wholly owned Government Corporation, was created on February 16, 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1501–1519), to carry out the provisions of the Federal Crop Insurance Act. The purpose of this act is to promote the national welfare by improving the economic stability of agriculture through a sound system of crop insurance and providing the means for the research and experience helpful in devising and establishing such insurance. The Corporation provides all-risk insurance protection to farmers against loss from unavoidable causes. Since 1948, the crop insurance program has been conducted on a limited basis in selected counties and on selected crops to obtain adequate actuarial data for the expansion of the program to a national basis. Based on past experience, the Corporation began with the 1962 crop year, to expand the crop insurance program at a more rapid rate to additional counties and commodities.

Capital stock of $100 million is authorized to be subscribed by the United States. As of June 30, 1962, the Secretary of the Treasury held receipts for $40 million of the authorized stock, leaving $60 million unissued.

Funds from the issuance of capital stock provide working capital for the Corporation. Receipts which are for deposit to this fund come mainly from premiums for insurance protection afforded farmers on their investment in the production of insured crops. The principal payments from this fund are for indemnities to insured farmers who suffer crop losses arising from causes against which crop insurance provides protection, the direct cost of adjusting losses, and part of the operating and administrative expenses. The annual appropriation for the major portion of the operating and administrative expenses of the Corporation is presented earlier in the budget.

Budget program.—The Corporation plans to continue the accelerated expansion of the program to additional crops and counties. For the 1963 crop year (fiscal year 1964) the crop insurance program will be extended to 100 new counties, and insurance will be offered on 3 additional commodities. The following table indicates the scope of the insurance program planned for 1962, 1963, and 1964. Amounts in the 1962 column are actual and pertain to the 1961 crop year. The 1963 column pertains to the 1962 crop year and reflects the current favorable growing conditions for the 1962 insured crops. Indemnities shown in the 1964 column are estimated at 90% of the premium.

Financing.—Income from operations for the past 5 years will provide adequate operating funds for 1964, unless unforeseen losses should occur on the 1962 crop between now and the time of harvest. Therefore, no additional capital funds are now being requested for program operations. There follows a table of premiums and indemnities for 1957, 1958, 1959, 1960, and 1961.

Operating results and financial condition.—Current estimates for crop year 1962, fiscal year 1963, indicate a favorable loss ratio for the sixth consecutive year. Premiums of $22.3 million are estimated to exceed indemnities by $6.4 million. For the crop years 1948 through 1961, premium income of $262.5 million exceeded indemnity costs of $246.6 million by $15.9 million. Premium income exceeded indemnity costs in 8 years of the 14 year period.

As of June 30, 1962, the Corporation's retained earnings level was $7.6 million. The favorable loss experience which occurred the past 5 years is responsible for the current favorable financial condition of the Corporation.

The following table summarizes the insurance operations by commodities for 1962, 1963, and 1964.

Funds for making repayable loans are borrowed from the Secretary of the Treasury.

1. Rural electrification.—This capital investment program is financed through loans which bear 2% interest and must be repaid within a period not to exceed 35 years. Loans are also made for shorter periods at 2% interest to electrification borrowers to be reloaned to their consumers for the purpose of financing the wiring of premises and the acquisition and installation of electrical and plumbing appliances and equipment including machinery.

The loans bear 2% interest and must be repaid within a period not to exceed 35 years.

In 1950, when the telephone program started, the Census of Agriculture showed 38.2% of all farms with telephone service, fewer in both number and percentage than in 1920. Approximately 71% of the farms now have telephone service. Cumulative REA loans through June 30, 1962, will eventually provide initial or improved service to an estimated 1,753 thousand rural subscribers.

LOAN AUTHORIZATIONS

Legislation will be proposed for the establishment of a "Rural Electrification Administration Loan Account" which will reflect the net cost of the loan programs by showing it as the excess of the aggregate of the loans to be made over the current receipts on loans previously made. The account will be budgeted on a net expenditure basis. Loan receipts are estimated to be $151 million in 1964, adjusting new obligational authority as follows:

Rural housing direct loans are authorized by title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, to be made to farm- and non-farm-owners of real estate in rural areas, to long-term farm leaseholders, and to elderly persons who are or will be owners of land in rural areas. Loans are made only to persons unable to obtain housing credit from other sources upon reasonable terms and conditions. Direct loans to individuals are repayable in not more than 33 years and bear interest at 4%. Grants are made for minor building repair. In addition to the direct loans and grants, insured loans are made to provide housing for domestic farm labor, and to provide rental housing for elderly persons in rural areas.

1. Rural housing loans and grants.—Direct farm enlargement and development loans, along with building loans, are made to farmowners on potentially adequate farms who need to develop their farms so as to increase their income sufficiently to repay the loans. Grants are made to farmowners, to owners of other real estate, and leaseholders in rural areas for such minor items as repairing roofs, providing sanitary facilities, providing a convenient and sanitary water supply, and supplying screens. In some cases, combination building loans and grants are made, but the loan, grant or combination may not exceed $1 thousand.

2. Loans to the elderly.—Direct housing loans are made to elderly persons who own land or can buy a small tract in a rural area with loan funds.

3. Building loans.—Direct building loans are made to farmowners and to owners of other real estate to construct, improve, alter, repair, or replace dwellings and essential farm-service buildings.

Insured housing loans.—Insured loans are made through the Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund to farmowners or to organizations to provide modest living quarters and related facilities for domestic farm labor. These loans, made with funds advanced by private lenders, are repayable in not more than 33 years and bear interest not in excess of 5%. Annual payments of principal and interest to lenders are fully guaranteed. Insured loans are also made to individuals, corporations, associations, trusts, or partnerships to provide moderate cost-rental housing and related facilities for elderly persons in rural areas. These loans, made with funds advanced by private lenders and insured through the Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund, are repayable in the number of years best suited to the individual case and bear interest at 5¾%. No loan may exceed $100 thousand. Annual payments of principal and interest to lenders are fully guaranteed.

The Government retains at least one-half of 1% of the interest on insured loans as an insurance premium. The Administration services these insured loans, makes collections, and pays the lender.

Under existing legislation, 1963.—A supplemental appropriation is anticipated to employ additional personnel and meet other costs in making loans for rural housing for the elderly authorized by the Senior Citizens Housing Act of 1962, Public Law 87-723; and for additional activity related to expansion of insured loan authority for real estate loans from $150 million to $200 million authorized by Public Law 87-798.

Under proposed legislation, 1964.—Supplemental funds will be needed to make and service loans under proposed legislation which would authorize the Secretary to insure rural housing loans made by private lenders. At present such rural housing loans are made from Federal funds. An additional $5,350 thousand would be required to administer a total rural housing loan program of $400 million (both direct and insured loans) in 1964.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1963, $0; 1964, $500 thousand.

This program was authorized by section 102 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962. Loans will be made to local public agencies or groups for rural renewal development projects which are specifically related to conservation and land utilization. Each project will be an important component of the overall rural renewal plan previously developed to rebuild the economy of the designated area. To be eligible for designation as a rural renewal area, the locality must be one of chronic underemployment on farms and unemployment in the surrounding communities. The area must also be one in which agriculture or forestry contribute substantially to the economy.

Program operations include selection and designation of rural renewal areas, technical assistance to local public bodies, or officials, or organizations in the preparation of an economic development plan, and counsel to local agencies and groups for meeting legal requirements necessary for borrowing funds. The borrowing agency will be designated by the State legislature or Governor to receive rural renewal loan funds and will be vested with authority under State and local laws to borrow funds, buy and sell property, raise revenue, meet financial obligations and transact other necessary business functions.

Rural renewal loans are repayable in not more than 30 years, with repayment of principal and interest deferred up to 5 years, if necessary. Loans bear interest at the average rate paid by the U.S. Treasury on obligations of similar maturity. The rate for fiscal year 1963 is 2.936%. Loans in excess of $250 thousand will require approval of the Agriculture and Forestry Committees of the Congress.

Direct loan account.—This account was established on October 16, 1961, pursuant to section 338(c) of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961. Loans are made under the authorities of subtitles A and B of the act to farmers unable to obtain credit from other sources at reasonable rates. Loans made under these and similar prior authorities are reported and accounted for in this account. In 1963, the total available for loans is $350 million including a $50 million reserve for operating loans to be used only to the extent required during the year under the then existing conditions for the expeditious and orderly conduct of the loan program, and also including $10 million for operating loans made available by the Second Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1962. In 1964, it is proposed to carry out the estimated loan program of $360 million through utilization of receipts to the Direct loan account representing collections on loans outstanding. No new borrowing authorization is estimated for 1964.

In addition to the direct loans, farm ownership and soil and water conservation loans advanced by private lenders will be insured within the annual statutory insurance authority of $200 million for these purposes. Contingent liabilities for these insured loans are reflected in the Agricultural credit insurance fund schedules.

1. *Real estate loans—*a. Farm ownership loans.—Direct and insured loans are made to farmers and ranchers for acquiring, enlarging, or improving farms, including farm buildings, land and water development, use and conservation, forestry development, recreational uses and facilities, refinancing existing indebtedness, and for loan closing costs. Loans are confined to farms which are not larger than family farms. A loan cannot exceed $60 thousand in any case. In addition, the indebtedness against a farm or other security, including the amount of the loan, cannot exceed $60 thousand or the normal value of the farm and any additional security.

Loans to associations also are made for shifts in land use including the development of recreational facilities. Farms may be improved with loans to individual farmers. For loans to individuals, a loan cannot exceed $60 thousand in any case; in addition the indebtedness against a farm or other security, including the amount of the loan, cannot exceed $60 thousand or the normal value of the farm and any additional security. For loans to associations, the unpaid principal indebtedness is limited to $500 thousand in the case of a direct loan and $1 million in the case of an insured loan.

Loans are repayable in not more than 40 years and bear interest not in excess of 5%. Insured loans are made with funds advanced by private lenders. Annual payments of principal and interest to lenders are fully guaranteed. Lenders can receive up to 4½% interest of the 5% paid by the borrower. The Government retains at least one-half of 1 percent of the interest as an insurance premium. The Administration services these insured loans, makes collections, and pays the lender.

2. Operating loans.—Direct loans are made to farmers and ranchers for paying costs incident to reorganizing a farming system for more profitable operations; for a variety of essential farm operating expenses such as the purchase of livestock, farm equipment, feed, seed, fertilizer, and farm supplies; for financing land and water development, use and conservation including recreational uses and facilities; for refinancing indebtedness; for other farm and home needs; and for loans closing costs. Loans are confined to operators of not larger than family farms. The outstanding principal loan balance for operating loans is limited to $35 thousand. A supplemental appropriation for 1963 will be requested to initiate this program pursuant to the Senior Citizens Housing Act of 1962. Loans will be made under the authority of sec. 515(a) of title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, to private nonprofit corporations and consumer cooperatives to provide modest cost rental housing and related facilities for elderly persons of low or moderate income in rural areas. These direct loans, made from the revolving fund, are repayable in not more than The Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961 (title III of Public Law 87-128) changed the name of the Disaster loan revolving fund to the Emergency credit revolving fund and repealed the previous legislation. The legislation continued the same principles of extending emergency credit to farmers and ranchers in the event of natural disasters in areas where agricultural credit is not readily available. Authority for economic emergency loans and for emergency assistance in furnishing feed and seed have been discontinued. Loans may be made to previously indebted borrowers to permit orderly repayment of such indebtedness.

Budget program—(a) Emergency loans.—Loans are made at 3% interest to farmers and ranchers and to domestic corporations or partnerships engaged primarily in farming in any designated emergency area or to persons or corporations outside such areas who have suffered severe production losses not general to the area.

(b) Other loans.—Where necessary to protect the Government's investment, obligations are incurred in connection with outstanding loans to provide for payment of such costs as taxes and insurance. Such advances are charged to the borrowers' accounts.

Administrative expenses.—The principal administrative expenses are related to the loan programs of the Farmers Home Administration. These expenses are estimated at $3.6 million in 1963 and $3.5 million in 1964. Administrative expenses for the Office of the General Counsel are estimated at $29 thousand in each of the years 1963 and 1964.

Financing the budget program.—No new budgetary authorization is required for 1964. A net loss of $2.2 million is estimated on an accrual basis. Net expenditures of $3.0 million are anticipated on a cash basis due primarily to excess loans made over loan repayments during the year. During 1964, the program will be wholly financed by receipts from operations.

Operating results and financial condition.—Revenue for 1964, consisting principally of interest on loans, is estimated at $3.4 million, compared to expenses of $5.5 million, resulting in an estimated loss of $2.1 million. A net loss of $3.3 million is estimated for 1963, and a net loss of $2.9 million resulted in 1962.

Loans receivable, after allowance for losses, are expected to amount to $81.4 million on June 30, 1964, as compared to $80.9 million at June 30, 1963, and $72 million on June 30, 1962.

The Government investment at June 30, 1964, is expected to be $114.6 million consisting of $205.8 million appropriated and donated, less a deficit of $91.2 million.

This fund is used to insure farm ownership loans, soil and water conservation loans, farm labor housing loans and loans for rental housing for the elderly, as authorized by subtitle A of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961, and sections 514 and 515(b) of title V of the Housing Act of 1949. The insurance endorsement on each insured loan includes an agreement by the Government to purchase the loan after a specified initial period of not less than 3 years, at the holder's option. The initial fund of $1 million is supplemented by loan insurance charges collected from insured loan borrowers and by borrowing from the Secretary of the Treasury. A portion of such loan insurance charges equal to at least one-half of 1 percent of the outstanding principal obligations must be deposited to the fund to cover losses. The remainder of such charges may be used for administrative expenses. Loans other than farm labor housing loans may be made directly from the fund from available receipts or borrowings from the Treasury for the purpose of acquiring blocks of loans if there is reasonable assurance that the loans can be sold to investors without undue delay. Not more than $25 million for farm ownership and soil and water conservation loans and not more than $10 million for loans for rental housing for the elderly may be held in the fund at any one time. Interest paid the Secretary of the Treasury on borrowings is based on the current average market yield of outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having maturities comparable to the notes issued for borrowings from the Treasury for operation of the fund.

Budget program.—Loan disbursements and purchases are estimated at $181.4 million in 1964, an increase of $17.7 million over 1963 and an increase of $72.2 million over 1962. Included is $97 million in 1963 and $95 million in 1964 for making loans from the fund which will later be sold on an insured basis. The increase in 1963 and 1964 in sale of loans from the fund is expected to result from the relatively more favorable market for insured loans. Insured loans outstanding which are contingent liabilities against the insurance fund are expected to increase from $315.8 million on June 30, 1962 to $507 million at June 30, 1963, and to $687 million by June 30, 1964.

Financing.—Net repayments to the Treasury in 1964 are estimated at $10.5 million and in 1963 at $6.8 million.

Operating results and retained earnings.—Total income, consisting principally of loan insurance charges is estimated at $4.6 million in 1964, an increase of about $712 thousand from 1963.

Outstanding loans receivable of $20 million are estimated at June 30, 1964. Retained earnings, available to cover future losses, are estimated to be $15.6 million at the end of 1964. These earnings, when added to the $1 million appropriation and estimated borrowings of $6 million from the Treasury, represent a $22.6 million Government investment.

Under proposed legislation, 1964.—Proposed legislation would amend title V of the Housing Act of 1949 to provide for a program of insured rural housing loans. Included in the legislation would be authority for the Federal National Mortgage Association to include these loans in its secondary market operations. A $350 million level of insured housing loan activity is anticipated if the insured loan program becomes operative early in 1964. Families in the lower income levels would require an estimated $250 million, and an estimated $100 million would be needed for other applicants. In addition to the $200 million in loans made from the proposed new fund for later sale, it is expected that approximately $150 million in loans from private sources will be insured. The legislation would also provide authority to insure the farm labor housing and rental housing for the elderly loans presently insured through the Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund. All of these loans would be made and serviced by the Farmers Home Administration.

The Office has responsibility for the information work of the entire Department. Its major objective is to report to farmers, agricultural, and closely related groups, and to the public the Department's research, action, regulatory, and other programs, using all information media. This work is carried on in close cooperation with the land-grant institutions and with private industries which serve agriculture. Workload depends upon Department program demands, direct requests, and legislative requirements.

1. Publications review and distribution.—The Department's printed publications are reviewed, published, and distributed. Processed publications are reviewed. Publications include farmers' bulletins, leaflets, periodicals, scientific, research, and marketing publications, and agricultural statistics.

2. Review and distribution of current agricultural information.—The Department's widespread activities require extensive preparation of information material for press, radio and television use, as well as for specific agricultural outlets and the general public. Over 4,000 periodic crop, price, and market reports and press releases are issued annually. Digests, newsletters, special articles, and other editorial services are made available to press associations, farm and general publications, trade publications, daily newspapers, and encyclopedic annuals. Radio is used to reach farmers locally through single stations, and to broadcast nationally through the major networks. Films, television packages, and other services are prepared for the use of land-grant institutions, television farm broadcasters and TV networks. Information campaigns involving activities of cross-agency interest are developed, using all media. The Yearbook of Agriculture is published by the Office and distributed by Members of Congress.

3. Review, preparation, and distribution of visual agricultural information.—Motion pictures for the Department and nonprofit organizations associated with agriculture, produced on a reimbursable basis under the Department's Working capital fund, are distributed through nearly 75 cooperating State film libraries. Still photographs, illustrations, and graphics are similarly produced for use in official publications. News and general-type photographs of Department programs and activities are available to news media from a centralized library. Exhibits are produced and supplied to State extension workers for their use in State exhibit showings and to fairs and other exhibitions on request.

This nonrecurring appropriation provided for planning and carrying out activities related to the centennial observance of the establishment of the Department of Agriculture and the founding of the land-grant colleges in 1862.

1. Coordination with trade, industry, and commodity groups.—A program for the participation by agricultural trade, industry, and commodity groups in the centennial observance was developed and coordinated by the Department of Agriculture. This part of the centennial observance was in addition to, and coordinated with, centennial activities carried out directly by the Department, the land-grant institutions, and other governmental agencies. The trade, industry, and commodity groups financed the costs of the activities in which they participated.

2. Additional printing costs of the 1962 Yearbook of Agriculture.—The 1962 Yearbook of Agriculture commemorated the centennial year since the establishment of the Department of Agriculture. In dealing with the Department's role in agriculture over the past century, the higher costs of the yearbook, above those provided under Salaries and expenses, Office of Information were paid from this item.

The National Agricultural Library, cooperating jointly with the two other national libraries—the Library of Congress and the National Library of Medicine—provides coverage and servicing of worldwide publications in the agricultural, chemical, and biological sciences. It serves the research, extension, regulatory, and other programs of the Department and State agricultural agencies. It contains approximately 1,200,000 volumes, probably the most extensive agricultural collection in existence. Since the Library's primary purpose is to provide for research needs, substantive publications in the animal sciences, plant sciences, agricultural chemistry, agricultural engineering, soils, forestry, agricultural products, home economics, world sociology, agricultural economics, and agricultural statistics are acquired and preserved. Publications are regularly acquired from more than 50 countries on subjects ranging from apiculture to zootomy. In addition, printed information of agricultural societies, organizations, cooperatives, and general material in the field of agriculture are collected and made available for use.

Information contained in the agricultural literature is disseminated through bibliographies, loans, photocopies and reference services to agricultural colleges and universities, research institutions, Government agencies, agricultural associations, industry, individual scientists, farmers, and the general public in every part of the world.

During 1962, 13,043 volumes and 234,744 separate issues of periodicals were added to the collection by purchase, gift, and exchange. During the same period 238,064 loans of books and periodicals were made and 96,893 reference questions answered.

The increase proposed for 1964 would be used to provide faster and more specialized services to agricultural scientists through automation, and to increase purchasing, processing and maintenance of essential published source material.

Under proposed legislation, 1964.—Legislation is being proposed to provide for the stockpiling, storage and distribution of essential foodstuffs, including wheat and feed grains, to meet emergency defense needs.

The legislation would authorize the Secretary to utilize the Commodity Credit Corporation and other means available to him in maintaining the stockpiles. Ready-to-prepare foods, whether or not acquired initially by CCC in its price support operations, would be purchased with the appropriation made for the stockpile. To prevent loss through deterioration, these items would be rotated through the direct distribution programs to the maximum extent practicable on an exchange basis. Wheat and feed grains would continue to be owned by CCC with the stockpile appropriation bearing extra costs of relocation to deficit production and probable disaster areas, and of maintenance.

If the legislation is enacted, the $30 million appropriation requested for 1964 would permit orderly first steps to initiate the program at a level that could be effectively integrated with present related programs of the Department and also provide for development and testing of storage life, rotation period to maintain quality, methods of prolonging storage, and related matters.

FOREST SERVICE

The Service carries on three primary functions: (a) Protection, development, and use of about 186,000,000 acres of land in national forests and national grasslands in the United States and Puerto Rico; (b) research for all public and private forest lands and related ranges to improve protection from fire, insects, and diseases; to increase production of timber, forage, water, and other products; to improve methods for developing and managing recreation resources; to develop better utilization and marketing of forest products; and to maintain a current inventory of forest resources through a nationwide forest survey; and (c) cooperation with States and private forest land-owners to obtain better fire protection on approximately 450,000,000 acres of forest land and nonforest watersheds, and better forest practices on about 358,000,000 acres of privately owned commercial timberlands, to encourage reforestation and stimulate development and management of State, county, and community forests. These primary functions include construction and maintenance of roads and trails, control of forest pests, protection against floods, land acquisition and exchange, and a number of cooperative projects.

1. Forest land management—(a) National forest protection and management.—The 154 national forests and 18 units of national grasslands are managed under multiple use and sustained yield principles. The natural resources of outdoor recreation, range, timber, watershed, and wildlife are utilized in a planned combination that will best meet the needs of the Nation without impairing productivity of the land. These management and utilization principles were recognized in the Multiple Use-Sustained Yield Act of June 12, 1960 (Public Law 86-517, 74 Stat. 215). Work programs and budget estimates are related to the Development Program for the National Forests, a plan to meet the increasing demands for specific national forest resource needs through 1972 and for long-term objectives to the year 2000. Increases are provided in the budget to further attainment of these program objectives. Construction funds of $18.4 million in 1963 and $18 million in 1964 are budgeted, compared with $16.4 million used in 1962, for construction or rehabilitation of campground and picnic facilities and other recreation improvements, the construction of dwellings or barracks for employee housing, fire lookouts, service and storage buildings, communication facilities, and other improvements. Funds appropriated under Cooperative range improvements are merged with this appropriation for obligational purposes.

(b) Fighting forest fires.—This provides for employment of additional manpower and other facilities for forest fire emergencies which cannot be met by the fire control organization provided under national forest protection and management. Costs above the amounts estimated for the current and budget years are authorized to be met from advances from other Forest Service appropriations (repayments of such advances were made in 1962 to Expenses, brush disposal). In addition, a supplemental appropriation for 1963 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

Forest fires controlled (number).....	14,494	11,000	11,200

(c) Insect and disease control.—Activities to suppress and control destructive insects and diseases that threaten timber areas include two types of work carried on jointly by Federal, State, and private agencies: (1) Surveys on forest lands to detect and evaluate infestations of forest insects and infections of tree diseases and determination of protective measures to be taken, and (2) control operations to suppress or eradicate forest insects and diseases, including white pine blister rust.

(d) Acquisition of lands.—Lands are purchased to protect the watersheds of navigable streams and to increase the production of timber with the approval of the National Forest Reservation Commission.

2. Forest research.—Research is conducted at 10 regional forest experiment stations, the Forest Products Laboratory, and elsewhere.

(a) Forest and range management.—This research provides private and public land managers and owners with a sound basis for management of timber, forage, and watershed lands. Studies are conducted to maintain a sustained yield of products at the lowest possible costs; increase forage for domestic livestock and improve habitat for wildlife without damage to soil, watershed, or other values; assure maximum regular flow of usable water, and reduce floods and sedimentation; and improve methods for developing and managing recreation resources.

(b) Forest protection.—Research is conducted to develop sound measures for the protection of forests from damage by fire, insects, and diseases. Forest fire research provides improved methods of predicting fire danger, and preparing for and combating fire by combinations of ground and aerial methods. Insect and disease research develops direct controls, silvicultural measures, and biological agents to combat forest pests.

(c) Forest products and engineering.—Studies are conducted to develop new and improved forest products, reduction and utilization of waste, and use of low-quality wood and less-desirable species. They include studies to reduce costs of logging and wood utilization, and to develop basic knowledge of wood and disseminate this to forest owners, manufacturers, fabricators, and consumers. Research is also conducted to advance the mechanization and efficiency of forestry operations, and to develop and evaluate machines and similar equipment for such operations as logging, planting, timber-stand improvement, and protection of forests.

(d) Forest resource economics.—These investigations are conducted to inventory and appraise the condition of forest lands, volume and quality of standing timber, ownership of timber resources, annual growth and depletion, and the potential need for timber products. Studies of the economics of forest crop production and of marketing of forest products are also included.

3. State and private forestry cooperation.—This program, carried on in cooperation with the States, encourages private timber management. Privately owned forest lands comprise three-fourths of the Nation's commercial forest area and produce about 85% of all timber cut.

(a) Forest fire control.—Assistance is furnished 49 States in preventing and suppressing forest fires on private and State-owned lands by financial aid, training, procurement of equipment, and a nationwide fire prevention campaign. About 93% of the 450,000,000 acres of non-Federal ownership is now partially covered. During 1961 the acreage burned on protected areas was 0.27% as against an estimated 5.3% on unprotected lands. Of the total expenditures under this program, 81% is contributed by States and counties, 3% by private owners, and 16% by the Federal Government.

(b) Forest tree planting.—To encourage woodland owners to reforest unproductive portions of their holdings, and farmers to plant wind barriers around their fields and farmsteads—a total of more than 70,000,000 acres altogether—the States provide planting stock at reasonable prices. The Federal Government shares the cost of producing the stock with the State and private landowners.

(c) Forest management and processing.—In cooperation with State foresters, 533 projects in 2,278 counties are operated to aid small woodland owners in applying good management to their timber holdings. In 1962 these projects served some 91,418 owners and 4,800,000 acres.

(d) General forestry assistance.—Technical forest management assistance is provided to State, community, private, and other Federal agencies, forest industries, colleges, and landowners.

Roads and trails are essential to protection and management of national forests and utilization of their resources. The system consists of approximately 182,085 miles of earth- or gravel-surfaced roads and 106,500 miles of supplemental trails.

The Federal Highway Act of 1960 provides authorization of $40 million for 1963. The Federal Highway Act of 1962 provides an additional authorization of $10 million for 1963, $70 million for 1964, and $85 million for 1965. These authorizations are available for obligation a year in advance of the year for which authorized. This budget provides for utilization of $65 million of the $70 million 1964 authorization. At this level the 1964 program will involve the construction and reconstruction of about 582 miles of general purpose roads, about 817 miles of timber access roads to harvest national forest timber, and 284 miles of recreation access roads, a total of approximately 1,683 miles. This compares with 611 miles built in 1962 and 1,036 being built in 1963.

Of the amounts received annually from national forest activities 10% is available under the permanent appropriation Roads and trails for States, for construction and maintenance within the State from which such proceeds are derived. Such amounts are merged with this appropriation for obligational purposes.

In addition, a supplemental appropriation for 1963 to liquidate obligations incurred under the additional authorization is anticipated for separate transmittal.

This fund finances on a reimbursable basis various services such as repairing and replacing equipment, including aircraft, stocking and issuing supplies, operation of subsistence camps, operation of photographic and reproduction facilities, and tree nurseries in support of programs of the Forest Service (16 U.S.C. 579b, as amended). These service operations serve programs of fire protection, timber utilization, construction and maintenance of roads and other improvements, reforestation, grazing, watershed, forest and forest products research, and kindred conservation activities of the Forest Service, including cooperative assistance with other Federal agencies, States, counties, and individuals engaged in the same objectives.

Operating results and financial condition.—Government investment in the fund as of June 30, 1962, including donated assets and retained earnings for 1962, is $25.8 million. By the end of 1964 the investment is anticipated to be $30.9 million, an increase of $5.1 million which represents estimated earnings and donations during 1963 and 1964.

Receipts, nonoperating income, and retained earnings include an estimated $2 million as of June 30, 1964, identified as Income provision for increased cost of equipment replacements to be used for financing the increased cost of equipment replacement, i.e., the difference between the cost of the replacement unit and the cost at time of acquisition of the unit being replaced. A factor for this purpose is included in rental rates charged to program appropriations for equipment use and credited to the working capital fund.

Retained earnings as of June 30, 1964, will total an estimated $6.2 million which will consist of $2.1 million gain on sale of equipment, $2.1 million profit from operations, and $2 million for provision for increased cost of replacement of equipment.

This fund finances duplicating, central stocks of office supplies, health services, relocation expenses, and other common departmental services which can be operated better on a centralized basis (5 U.S.C. 607). Beginning in 1963, centralized accounting services which are being provided to certain areas of the Department through the accounting operations branch in the Office of the Secretary will be financed through the fund.

Sales are priced essentially at cost. Earnings which may accrue are paid to the Treasury periodically. Capital includes an appropriation of $100 thousand.

1. Operations.—Organizational and educational leadership is provided for the stimulation of local initiative. Locally prepared economic development programs are reviewed and project proposals for assistance to carry out such programs are evaluated and approved. Redevelopment guidance is provided in the form of surveys, technical data, procurement information and consultation on special community problems. Increasing emphasis will be placed on service and assistance to redevelopment areas at the local level.

2. Technical assistance.—Communities are aided in preparing economic development plans by providing basic information on natural resources, manpower, and the uses to which these can be put to establish stable and diversified local economies. Investigations are also made of State and regional economic development opportunities and of new or improved uses of resources in specific areas. An increase is requested to provide additional technical assistance to local communities.

The Area Redevelopment Act provides for long-term loans at low interest rates to aid in the construction or expansion of commercial or industrial facilities and of related public facilities for the purpose of alleviating unemployment and underemployment within designated areas. Interest rates on commercial facilities are set by law and will be 4% for 1963 for industrial and commercial loans. Interest rates on public facility loans will be 3½% in 1963. No change is anticipated for 1964. Industrial and commercial loans may run for 25 years and public facility loans up to 40 years. Loans may be made to States, localities, and public or private nonprofit organizations representing redevelopment areas when (a) the area is designated as a redevelopment area, (b) the project is consistent with an approved overall economic development program; (c) the project will provide more than temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment; (d) assistance will not be given to establishments that in relocating would cause unemployment in the originating area; (e) financial assistance is not otherwise available from private lenders or Federal agencies on reasonable terms; and (f) applicants have been approved by a State and local agency directly concerned with problems of economic development in the area.

The act authorized outstanding loans of not to exceed $100 million each for (a) industrial or commercial projects in urban areas of substantial and persistent unemployment designated within specific criteria, (b) industrial or commercial projects in nonurban areas which are among the highest in number and percentages of low income families and where substantial underemployment exists; and (c) public facilities necessary for improving the opportunities for employment. The budget program estimates reflect a proposed increase in these statutory limitations to $250 million for each of the first two categories and $150 million for public facility loans.

Budget program.—Reservations for industrial and commercial loans are estimated during the current and budget years at $139 million and $156 million, and for public facilities loans at $38 million and $35 million. The following table shows the relationship of reservations to programmed authorizations (in millions of dollars):

Fund reservations are made on approval of applications filed to determine eligibility and feasibility of the project. Reservations are converted into loan approvals after filing a full loan application and review by the Small Business Administration for commercial loans or the Housing and Home Finance Agency for public facility loans.

Financing.—The program was financed by a direct appropriation of $122.5 million in 1962 and $115 million in 1963. Appropriation of $190 million is requested for 1964. Disbursements are made as projects near completion, based on the following projected construction schedule (in millions of dollars):

Operating results.—During the initial stages of the program, revenues are expected to lag behind expenses. The deficit results primarily from the allowance for losses, which is established at the rate of 2%.

The Business and Defense Services Administration works with business in order to achieve an expanded economy. Its programs foster and promote industry and commerce and contribute to industrial mobilization readiness. Industrial and commodity intelligence is collected and interpreted. The results of commodity data analyses are used in foreign trade promotion and domestic marketing analyses. Economic studies dealing with industry problems and regional economic conditions are developed and disseminated. A distribution program deals with the structure, problems, and trends in marketing.

The Bureau is the principal fact-finding and statistical agency of the Federal Government.

1. Retail, wholesale, and service trade statistics.—Estimates are prepared for: Total retail trade and for a number of kind-of-business groups weekly; monthly sales for the United States, by kind of business; monthly sales for total retail trade by regions and for some of the larger States; general merchandise-apparel-appliances-furniture (GAF) sales for the 20 largest metropolitan areas; retail inventory and accounts receivable trends; and sales and inventories of merchant wholesalers. Annual surveys provide more detailed information on retail trade and estimates of service trades receipts. In 1963, estimates of service trade receipts will be provided monthly. In 1964, GAF sales data will be provided for 40 additional metropolitan areas; and the accuracy and coverage of the weekly sales series will be improved; and a monthly survey to develop physical and dollar volume indexes of retail inventories will be initiated.

2. Manufacturing and industrial statistics.—Periodic surveys are made of production, shipments, orders, and materials consumed for important commodities. Data on manufacturers' sales, orders, and inventories for total manufacturing and about 17 industry breakdowns, plus 2 subgroups, are provided monthly. An annual survey of manufactures produces data on the number, size, industrial classification, and location of manufacturing establishments and of measures of factory operations such as employment, shipments, inventories, etc. In 1963, additional periodic surveys will be undertaken for important new products and growth industries. In 1964, development of data on industrial capacity, utilization of capacity, and new plant investment will be initiated, and monthly reports of the consumption and stocks of materials will be published.

3. Transportation statistics.—Effective methods are developed and tested for undertaking periodic surveys in transportation areas as directed by statutory requirements. In 1964, a guide to the sources of transportation data will be prepared and a series of commodity transportation indexes for truck, water, oil, pipeline, and air will be initiated.

4. Agriculture statistics.—Information is compiled on cotton ginned at 11 dates during the ginning season.

5. Foreign trade and shipping statistics.—Monthly, quarterly, and annual reports are published on the kind, quantity, shipping weight, dollar value of imports and exports, and mode of shipping. In 1963, import commodity classifications will be revised to conform with the Tariff Classification Act, the export classifications will begin to be revised to conform with the standard industrial classification, and the publication of the comprehensive annual reports, Foreign Commerce and Navigation of the United States, will be resumed. In 1964, import data tabulations will be prepared on a cost, insurance, and freight basis.

6. Population statistics.—This activity includes current estimates of the number of households, the farm population, school enrollment, personal income, population mobility, and other characteristics of the population, as well as annual estimates of the population of the United States and of each of the States, and projections of future population. In 1963, work will begin on improving estimates of population for States and metropolitan areas. The quarterly survey of consumer buying intentions is being established as a regular census program. In 1964, current population estimates will be provided for State and a number of local areas, projections of future populations will be improved, and special demographic surveys on national and metropolitan area problems will be undertaken.

7. Construction and housing statistics.—Monthly reports are published for housing starts, residential construction authorized by building permits, and the volume of construction activity. Quarterly data are provided on expenditures for residential alterations and repairs. Construction price indexes are being developed. In 1963, a quarterly survey of non-Federal public construction will be initiated. In 1964, the monthly surveys on construction value-in-place and on housing starts will be improved, and construction price indexes for new houses will be developed. National estimates on the number of dwelling units that are vacant are computed quarterly and estimates of the proportion that are owner-occupied are published annually. In 1964, vacancy data will be provided for a number of standard metropolitan statistical areas, and a program of technical assistance to local areas for housing vacancy surveys will be initiated.

8. State and local government statistics.—Reports are published annually providing national estimates of total governmental finances, employment, and payrolls, and comparative statistics for State governments and larger cities. In 1963, quarterly estimates of revenues and expenditures will be provided. In 1964, a program of technical service to State and local governments will be initiated, annual data on finances and employment of local governments in the 122 largest standard metropolitan statistical areas will be provided, and a current directory of local governments will be established.

9. Statistical abstract and special reports.—Seasonally adjusted business cycle indicators are published monthly. The Statistical Abstract, issued annually, summarizes government and private statistics on the industrial, social, political, and economic activities of the United States. Historical and other general reports are published periodically, including a report showing for each county in the United States the number and kind of all business establishments and their employment and payrolls. Selected data, in which the unit of tabulation is the company rather than the establishment, are published annually. In 1963, the Congressional District Data Book, including redistricting, will be issued. In 1964 the county business report will be placed on an annual basis.

10. General research.—Research is conducted on statistical survey methods and techniques, and questionnaire response for the purpose of increasing accuracy, output, and usefulness of statistical data per unit of cost. For 1964, research in survey methods and techniques will be expanded, a research center for census and survey measurement methods will be established, and the feasibility of collecting certain new types of information will be tested.

Export controls are necessary to protect the domestic economy from excessive drain of scarce commodities, to safeguard the national security by regulating exports of strategic commodities, and to implement U.S. foreign policy. In the absence of improvement in relations with certain countries, these controls must be continued and, as necessary, extended to other areas to guard against transshipment. The Bureau of Customs is responsible for the policing of shipments at points of export.

The major functions of this Office are: Determine which firms are eligible to apply for adjustment assistance; define adjustment problems and obtain solutions to be incorporated in adjustment proposals submitted by firms for Commerce Department certification; expedite the collection, distribution, and analysis of information required for the decisions other agencies render in the provision of assistance; make the final determination whether to provide assistance, then ensure its timely and effective disposition.

The U.S. Travel Service was established June 29, 1961, to carry out a program to stimulate and encourage travel to the United States by residents of foreign countries. Nine overseas offices have been established which have distributed over 4 million pieces of sales promotion literature in 7 languages. The advertising program has been primarily for the European area, additional funds are requested to provide advertising in all areas serviced by USTS representatives.

This program is directed toward encouraging more deliberate, imaginative, and extensive use of technology in civilian industries in order to increase labor productivity and the competitiveness of U.S. products in foreign trade. A supplemental appropriation for 1963 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

1. Support of industrial research.—A variety of techniques will be used to support and facilitate industrial research and development. Through grants and contracts, primarily with universities and nonprofit institutions, research will be undertaken in technologies basic to product and process innovation of selected industries in which the possibilities for technological advance appear particularly promising. Attention also will be given to improvement of technical information resources and media necessary in order to assure availability of research results throughout these industries. Finally, in order to initiate technical work which is beyond the competence or interest of individual firms but potentially important to industry and the economy as a whole, grants will be made to participate with industry research associations and industrially oriented development institutions in jointly financed programs.

2. Industry university technical services.—A pilot program will be undertaken at 3 or 4 university schools of engineering directed toward improvement of technical practice, particularly in small firms. Any work undertaken on behalf of individual firms will be at the expense of the firm.

3. Program development and administration.—In cooperation with other interested agencies, studies will be undertaken in order to determine actions which might be taken in order to remove deterrents to desirable innovation; to investigate adaptation to civilian industry of methodology and technology developed in advanced space and defense activities; and to identify changes in Government procurement methods which might stimulate technological improvement. Independent studies of the effectiveness of pilot projects also will be supported in order to establish a sound basis for future program development.

The Survey makes oceanographic, geodetic, and magnetic surveys and investigations to obtain a better understanding of the static and dynamic properties of the ocean, and to provide cartographic data for the processing, compilation, production, and distribution of aeronautical, nautical, and special purpose charts, geodetic control data and other related publications; collects, analyzes, and disseminates seismological and astronomical data; and conducts basic and applied research and development in fields within the competence of the Bureau. The scope of operations is worldwide.

Increases in 1964 are primarily to support an expanded oceanographic program including the improvement and addition of ship base facilities; increased requirements for geodetic surveys and production of navigational charts; the operation of the worldwide seismological program; and expansion of research and development in the fields of oceanography, geomagnetism, seismology, geodesy, photogrammetry, and cartography.

Direct program—1. Oceanography.—Oceanographic, hydrographic, circulatory and tide and current surveys including the observation, recording, processing, analysis, and publication of the resulting data needed for the understanding and utilization of the oceans for economic as well as navigational purposes.

2. Physical sciences.—Geodetic, geophysical, photogrammetric, and cartographic data are provided for charting and scientific purposes and for defense needs. Surveys are made and assistance is given other agencies to upgrade work of their field survey parties in order to establish a network of horizontal and vertical control points in the United States and its possessions which are permanently marked on the ground for topographic, geologic and other types of mapping, for planning large-scale engineering projects, and for scientific and defense needs. The positions and descriptions of these points are published and distributed to Federal, State, and local agencies and the general public.

Earthquakes are located and investigated to determine their severity and to obtain engineering data for the design of earthquake-resistant structures and information concerning ground movements.

The Bureau operates 14 seismograph stations and cooperates with 290 domestic and foreign seismograph stations to determine the location of distant earthquakes; field investigates an average of 15 severe earthquakes annually; operates 70 strong-motion stations in western United States and seven in Latin America. The seismic sea wave warning program, a network of seismograph and tide stations, furnished data for four alerts for earthquakes; one off the coast of Mexico, two off the coast of Japan, and one off the coast of Chile.

3. Navigational chart production.—Nautical and aeronautical charts and related information are compiled and reproduced from field survey data, and distributed to civil and military users for safe navigation of ships and aircraft. Miscellaneous receipts returned to the Treasury from the sale of charts and related publications were $950 thousand in 1962 and are estimated to be $1,000 thousand during 1963 and $1,050 thousand in 1964.

Reimbursable program.—Special hydrographic and geodetic surveys and seismographic observations are made, and the resulting data processed for use by other Federal agencies. Nautical, aeronautical, and airport obstruction charts of the United States and its possessions are provided to user agencies when required. Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are primarily for geodetic surveys conducted for the States under the interstate highway program (33 U.S.C. 883).

The Bureau's ship construction program for 1964 provides for design, construction, equipment, and initial outfitting of:

One class II hydrographic surveying ship—to be delivered about April 1966.

Two class III coastal survey ships—to be delivered about September 1965 and January 1966.

Two auxiliary survey vessels equipped for wire-drag obstruction surveys in inshore areas—to be delivered about January 1965.

These ships are all replacements for aged and inefficient ships of the present fleet which conducts surveys required for production of nautical charts, to produce tidal and current information required for United States use, and to provide oceanographic data on the continental slopes in support of the National Oceanographic Program.

The Office administers laws governing the granting of patents for invention and the registration of trademarks.

The 1964 estimate provides for continued emphasis on the basic examining functions and on the research and development program. It also provides for additional modernization and mechanization measures. A supplemental appropriation for 1963 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

Receipts from fees were $8.2 million in 1962, and are estimated to be $8.7 million in 1963 and $9 million in 1964 under existing legislation. Legislation is proposed which would increase fees to eventually recover approximately 75% of the cost of Patent Office operations.

1. Examination and adjudication of patent applications.—Applications are examined to determine the patentability of claimed inventions; and quasi-judicial functions are performed in appeal or interference proceedings within the Office. Specifications and drawings of successful applications are printed and the issuance of patents is regularly published.

NATIONAL BUREAU OF STANDARDS

The National Bureau of Standards is the agency of the Federal Government responsible for the national standards of physical measurement. Against these standards, all the working standards of the Nation—those used by scientists and engineers in research and development, those used by industry in the measurement and production of interchangeable parts, and those used by other Government and State agencies to ascertain conformity—are calibrated. Closely associated with the standards activity, the Bureau serves science, industry, and Government as a national laboratory conducting research and development on methods of measurement and instrumentation; determining fundamental physical constants and basic properties of materials; developing improved methods for testing materials and equipment; developing codes and specifications; and assisting other Government agencies through advisory services on technical problems and by invention and development of devices to meet special needs.

General and special funds:

RESEARCH AND TECHNICAL SERVICES

For expenses necessary in performing the functions authorized by the Act of March 3, 1901, as amended (15 U.S.C. 271-278e), including general administration; operation, maintenance, alteration, and protection of grounds and facilities; and improvement and construction of facilities as authorized by the Act of September 2, 1958 (15 U.S.C. 278d); [$27,500,000] $33,250,000 of which not to exceed $1,700,000 shall be available for payments to the "Working capital fund", National Bureau of Standards, for additional capital: Provided, That during the current fiscal year the maximum base rate of compensation for employees appointed pursuant to the Act of September 2, 1958 (15 U.S.C. 278e), shall be equivalent to the maximum scheduled rate for GS-12. (15 U.S.C. 271-278e; 40 U.S.C. 14a; 5 U.S.C. 596a; Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1963.)

Note.—Includes $550 thousand for activities previously carried under "Salaries and expenses, Office of Technical Services." The amounts obligated in 1962 and 1963 are shown in the schedule as comparative transfers.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1961, $410 thousand (1962 adjustments, -$8 thousand); 1962, $860 thousand; 1963, $1,007 thousand; 1964, $1,167 thousand.

This will provide for an important strengthening of research programs and increased procurement of scientific equipment. The Bureau's programs of basic and applied research, development of instruments and methods of measurement, and general technical services are classified under six major activities.

1. Physics and electronics.—This includes the work of the metrology, heat, atomic physics, radiation physics, electricity, radio standards, instrumentation and data processing systems divisions. These divisions are primarily responsible for the Bureau's research underlying the national standards of physical measurement needed for our advancing technology and broadening range of scientific exploration. Particular emphasis will be given to expansion of radio standards research and calibration capability, extension and improvement of high temperature measurement capability, and development of radio-activity standards for various elements and basic data on high energy radiation.

2. Chemistry and metallurgy.—This includes the work of the analytical and inorganic chemistry, polymers, metallurgy, physical chemistry and inorganic solids divisions. The principal expansion of effort in this activity will be in the physical chemistry division in the mass spectroscopy, thermochemistry, and surface chemistry program areas.

3. Mechanics and engineering.—This includes the work of the mechanics, building research, and cryogenic engineering divisions. Particular emphasis will be given to developing force and pressure measurement capability and to extending the latter to the very low pressure (vacuum) end of the scale.

4. Radio propagation.—This includes the work conducted by the divisions comprising the Central Radio Propagation Laboratory at Boulder, Colo., and the supplementary field stations. The program for 1964 will emphasize basic research on physical phenomena of the troposphere and of the upper atmosphere, concentrating on processes of atmospheric gases and the collection of data on ionospheric and solar phenomena.

5. General services.—This includes those technical programs of the Bureau that are primarily directed toward supporting other activities of the Bureau as well as the calibration and standard samples services provided to the States. Included are the applied mathematics division, the office of weights and measures, the office of engineering standards, the reactor group, and certain special research programs.

6. Payment to Working capital fund.—Additional equipment required in support of the research programs will be procured by the Bureau's Working capital fund and added to the depreciable equipment inventory of that fund. It is estimated that in 1964 payments of $1,450 thousand will be made from the Research and technical services appropriation to the Working capital fund to finance these capital outlays.

RESEARCH AND TECHNICAL SERVICES (SPECIAL FOREIGN CURRENCY PROGRAM)

For purchase of foreign currencies which the Treasury Department determines to be excess to the normal requirements of the United States, for necessary expenses of the National Bureau of Standards, as authorized by law, [$500,000] $1,000,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That this appropriation shall be available, in addition to other appropriations to the Bureau, for the purchase of the foregoing currencies. (7 U.S.C. 1701, 1704; 15 U.S.C. 271-278e; 5 U.S.C. 596a; Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1963.)

National Bureau of Standards responsibilities for basic and applied research, improvement of standards, and dissemination of information on properties of materials, measurement techniques, and radio propagation are of sufficient breadth to permit ready utilization of research capabilities in other countries. The foreign currency program supplements the Bureau's existing program, allows an acceleration of research effort in selected areas, and permits economies in the Bureau's regular appropriations over the long term.

The 1964 program, authorized by section 104(k) of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, represents no increase in the size of the program started in 1962. Foreign currencies determined by the Treasury Department to be excess to normal requirements of the United States will be used in non-Soviet bloc countries where scientific talent is available. A cost of $20 thousand, U.S. dollars, charged to the appropriation for Research and technical services, will be required for the administration and technical supervision of the program.

1. Physics and electronics.—Work will be undertaken in solid state physics and calculation of energy levels from the atomic spectra of rare earths as well as in other areas.

2. Chemistry and metallurgy.—Data will be secured on thermodynamic properties of materials at high temperatures, vapor pressures of refractory materials, spectral changes due to adsorption of molecules and on other properties of materials.

3. Radio propagation.—Institutions in India, Israel, and Pakistan will cooperate in studies of electromagnetic wave propagation and electrical resistivity in the ground, and on measurement of properties of the ionosphere at low altitudes.

4. General services.—This activity finances travel and other miscellaneous expenses associated with technical direction of the program.

FIRE TECHNOLOGY

¹ Selected resources as of June 30, are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1963, $0; 1964, $424 thousand.

This appropriation will strengthen a program in fire research currently conducted by the National Bureau of Standards and financed through the appropriation for Research and Technical Services. There are also to be undertaken a variety of new activities to develop and disseminate information on new fire fighting and prevention techniques and to encourage the adoption of improved practice at the local level. Taken together these basic and applied research, cooperative, and informational activities will form a broad program in the area of urban and industrial fire prevention and suppression within the Department of Commerce, which will implement the most important recommendations which have been made in studies of urban fire problems by the National Academy of Sciences, National Research Council, and the Commerce Department.

In carrying forward the program, the National Bureau of Standards will cooperate with public and private agencies concerned with fire losses and improved fire protection. The Bureau will also serve as a clearinghouse for the systematic collection and publication of information regarding the causes and costs of fires.

1. Fire research.—These funds will carry forward the research in the basic physics of fire and testing fire resistance of materials currently being conducted by the National Bureau of Standards. To augment this nucleus program, grants and contracts will be made to: (1) provide support to certain additional fundamental research which is needed, (2) develop an applied engineering technology of fire prevention and suppression, and (3) provide a medium for developing, on a scientific basis, more effective methods of fire control, and for evaluating, testing, and applying these methods.

2. Regional fire centers.—During 1964 exploratory and pilot studies will be undertaken to determine what mechanism can most effectively translate research and engineering studies into actual improvements in local fire protection. It is anticipated that in future years a limited number of regional fire centers will be established to provide a means for dispensing information, to facilitate cooperation with local agencies, and to undertake applied research on practical problems identified by cooperating communities.

3. Program administration.—This activity will finance the direct administration of the program, including a payment to defray an appropriate share of the general overhead costs of the National Bureau of Standards.

PLANT AND FACILITIES

For expenses incurred, as authorized by section 1 of the Act of September 2, 1958 (15 U.S.C. 278c-278e), in the acquisition, construction, improvement, alteration, or emergency repair of buildings, grounds, and other facilities including [a plasma physics building, a] an addition to a radio warning service building, [and a paint shop; design of a radio standards laboratory] a high temperature laboratory, a field site building, an ionospheric radar research facility, and an observatory facility; and procurement and installation of special research equipment and facilities, therefor; [$2,000,000] $8,000,000, to remain available until expended. This will provide for construction and improvements to the plant and facilities of the National Bureau of Standards and procurement of major special facilities. The Bureau's laboratories and administrative offices occupy 86 buildings on a 68-acre tract in Washington, D.C. The Bureau also has a large laboratory on a 217-acre site at Boulder, Colo., and several small radio field stations, some of which are outside the continental limits. In addition, the Bureau has a new site near Gaithersburg, Md., on which facilities are being built to replace those in Washington, D.C.

Capital outlay—1. Improvements and modifications.—The budget includes $200 thousand for minor capital improvements of a general nature required for the Bureau's laboratories and field stations. Other minor improvements, when of a special, project-related character, are charged to the appropriation for Research and technical services. Noncapital alterations are charged to the operating costs of this appropriation.

2. General construction.—The budget includes $1,600 thousand for the construction of a high temperature laboratory building, $45 thousand for the construction of a field site building and $45 thousand for an addition to a field site building. Anticipated costs in 1964 include $1,284 thousand for additional facilities for the Boulder laboratories financed in prior years as well as $251 thousand associated with the budget year projects.

3. Special facilities.—This activity includes the acquisition of large equipment items and any building construction and land acquisition associated with them. The budget includes $1,100 thousand for the purchase and installation of Pilot data processing auxiliary equipment, $1,150 thousand for the acquisition of a megajoule condenser bank, $740 thousand for the acquisition of electromagnetic spectrum and radio noise recorders, $600 thousand for the installation of an ionospheric radar research facility, $250 thousand for the procurement of 5 ionosondes, $115 thousand for the acquisition of a low noise antenna, and $155 thousand for the purchase of a field site facility. Anticipated costs in 1964 include $66 thousand for the purchase and installation of a grazing incidence vacuum spectrograph, $100 thousand for the acquisition of a mobile very low frequency receiving facility, and $4,020 thousand for the construction of a nuclear research reactor, all financed in prior years, and $2,620 thousand for the seven projects in 1964.

Operating costs—1. Improvements and modifications.—Noncapitalized maintenance and repair projects are charged to operating costs. No new programs are anticipated in 1964.

3. Special facilities.—Noncapitalized facilities projects are charged to operating costs. No new programs are anticipated in 1964.

This appropriation finances the construction, equipping, and occupancy of new laboratory, administrative, and service buildings now being constructed on a site near Gaithersburg, Md., to house the activities of the National Bureau of Standards now conducted in Washington, D.C. The new facilities are replacements for present facilities and do not provide for new programs, although they will house certain equipment for radiation physics research and large force measurements not heretofore available.

The first increment of the construction program was provided in the 1961 budget. In 1962 and 1963 additional major increments of the program provided for the construction of seven general purpose laboratory buildings and administration, shops, and warehousing buildings. The 1964 budget provides for the final increment of the program, including construction of several special-purpose laboratory buildings and completion of site development, utilities, equipment, moving and occupancy.

1. Design and engineering.—Detailed planning and preparation of architectural designs and engineering drawings will be virtually completed by the end of 1963 except for some of the special-purpose facilities. Estimated costs for 1964 cover principally preparation of invitations to bid, bid analysis and awarding of construction contracts, and construction supervision. The proposed appropriation will complete the financing of the construction supervision costs.

2. Site acquisition.—It is anticipated that court action in the condemnation proceedings for the Gaithersburg site will be completed and its cost incurred during 1963.

3. Construction.—This activity includes the construction of laboratories and other buildings, including mechanical and electrical equipment, special laboratory services, site development, and utilities. Costs estimated for 1964 reflect continued activity on the items included in the second and third construction increments as well as initial activities under new contracts for special-purpose laboratory buildings.

4. Equipment.—Estimated costs for major scientific facilities are primarily for the linear electron accelerator and the large force measurement equipment financed by the 1961 appropriation. These facilities will be donated to the Bureau's Working capital fund and no depreciation charged against their use.

The budget for 1963 provided funds for the remaining large items of equipment and for many smaller items, the replacement for acquisition of which is necessitated by the relocation program. The 1964 budget will complete the financing of equipment for the new facilities. These items will be purchased through investment of working capital and the cost will be recovered by depreciation charges made during the expected useful life of the respective items. Payment of $9,250 thousand from the Construction of facilities appropriation to the Working capital fund to provide the necessary capital has been authorized.

5. Moving and occupancy.—This activity includes the costs of moving and installing scientific apparatus as well as certain furnishings for offices, library, cafeteria, and other areas. Estimated costs for 1964 are for moving of equipment into the first completed buildings. The proposed appropriation will finance the balance of the cost of furnishings.

This fund finances from advances and reimbursements all operations of the National Bureau of Standards except major construction projects. The principal of the fund, as of June 30, 1962, consisted of $5 million in appropriations, $3.5 million in capital provided by appropriations of the Bureau, and $53.6 million in net donated assets. The Government investment is estimated to grow through donation of cash and other assets financed by National Bureau of Standards' appropriations to $144 million by June 30, 1964.

Operating costs—1. Technical program.—Research and technical services are conducted by the National Bureau of Standards on the request of other Government agencies and the public, as well as in support of the Bureau's own research program. The total research and development program conducted on contract with other agencies is expected to decline proportionately as the Bureau's own appropriation increases, although in certain of the Bureau's divisions the demands of the missile and space programs are expected to result in increases in other agency programs. The provision of mathematical computation services to other agencies and the provision of calibration services to the public and other agencies are also expected to increase.

2. Plant improvement and special equipment.—This activity includes the costs of the Working capital fund which are reimbursed from the Bureau's capital outlay appropriations. The plant improvements and special equipment procured are donated to the fund upon completion and carried as assets of the fund at cost.

Capital outlay.—Working capital of the fund is invested in equipment which is subject to depreciation charges. In 1964 the equipment requirements of the expanded Bureau research program will require an augmentation of working capital, which will be accomplished through payments to the fund for additional capital from the National Bureau of Standards' appropriation for Research and technical services. Some of the equipment for the new laboratories of the Bureau will be purchased as investments of the fund, the additional capital being provided by payments from the appropriation for Construction of facilities. All other equipment and facilities financed by Bureau appropriations are shown as donated assets of the fund.

Operating results.—Retained earnings at the end of each year are transferred to Treasury the year following. This amounted to $39 thousand in 1962 and is estimated at $337 thousand and $250 thousand in 1963 and 1964, respectively.

The Office of Technical Services serves as a clearinghouse for the collection, processing, and dissemination of scientific and technical reports which set forth the results of unclassified Government-sponsored research and development, and translations of foreign scientific report literature. The Office is directed by statute to make this information available to other Government agencies, industry, business, the scientific community, and the general public. The Office also provides information and assistance to innovators in their efforts to introduce to the Federal Government and the civilian economy technical ideas of potential value, or new products and processes.

The Weather Bureau measures, records, reports, forecasts, and distributes information on weather conditions and river stages for the benefit of U.S. commerce, industry, agriculture, and the general public.

1. Weather measurements and forecasts.—Regularly scheduled forecasts are issued for U.S. territory and waters with special emphasis on severe storms. Special forecast and advisory services are provided for international and domestic aviation; fire-weather forecasts are furnished to assist in conservation of timber resources; and fruit-frost forecasts and warnings are prepared for areas where such crops form a major economic interest. Surface and upper-air weather measurements are taken at several hundred locations to serve forecasting requirements. Current weather information is disseminated widely for the benefit of aviation and other interests. In addition, expenses associated with acquisition, communication and utilization of data generated by TIROS satellites will continue to be financed through this activity in 1964.

Expansion of the Bureau's observation and service facilities is designed to keep pace with more exacting air-traffic control requirements as well as to advance general weather services. The 1964 estimate provides for: (1) the transfer of funding responsibility for 6 fixed ocean-station vessels from the Navy Department; (2) operation and maintenance of new instrumental equipment; and (3) improvements in the weather measurements and forecasts program.

2. River and flood forecasts and warnings.—The hydrologic service furnishes flood warnings and public forecasts of river height and flow on the country's principal rivers and their tributaries. The 1964 estimate provides for a flash-flood warning system and streamflow forecasts for water management.

3. Climatology.—The climatological service seeks to determine and record the various types of climate, to explain the causes of these climates, their variation, trends, geographical locations, and the effect climate has on the economy of the Nation, and to communicate this intelligence in such a manner as to insure the fullest realization of its potential benefits. The increase for 1964 provides for two additional State climatologists, and the processing of marine observations in accordance with the World Meteorological Organization agreement.

Research is conducted to increase fundamental knowledge of the science of meteorology and to improve the accuracy and time limits of weather forecasts. The development program is concerned with new instrumentation and procedures, including their test and evaluation. A new program will be initiated in 1964 to examine the system through which meteorological data is acquired, processed, communicated, and displayed, which will draw upon systems analysis and simulation techniques in order to guide the development of improved weather services.

1. Meteorological—(a) Hurricane, tornado and other severe storms.—To discover why and where these storms will form, when they will intensify, how they will move, and whether they can be modified so as to improve warnings and investigate future possibilities for modification of severe weather events. (b) Satellite.—Conduct of basic and applied research to explore new concepts of atmospheric dynamics which may be revealed through data newly acquired from meteorological satellites, together with exploratory studies of instrumentation suitable for satellite use. (c) Atmospheric processes, forecasting and observing techniques.—Basic and applied research and development dealing with the atmosphere, its circulation and constitution, together with studies of the physics of clouds and precipitation, short and long range weather forecasting techniques, development of instruments, and of the weather observation, forecasting, and dissemination system.

The increase in 1964 will permit the Weather Bureau to assume from the Federal Aviation Agency primary responsibility for research and development related to weather data acquisition and analysis problems particularly pertinent to aviation.

2. Hydrologic.—Efforts are concerned with improving techniques for forecasting stream-flow and river heights and with the utilization of weather radar to permit issuance of flash flood warnings. The increase for 1964 provides for increased studies of hydrologic forecasting.

3. Climatic.—Methods of analysis and presentation of climatic information are developed for application to operational and planning aspects of business, industry, commerce, and agriculture. Increases in 1964 provide for research on climate of water drought, aviation climatology, and air pollution and micro-climatology.

The accuracy of weather measurements, forecasts, and warnings is being improved by the procurement and installation of new instrumental equipment and by the modernization of existing facilities. The 1964 estimate is to carry forward the modernization program begun in 1956 to make possible a more accurate weather forecasting and warning system.

The cost of operating and maintaining equipment installed under this appropriation is covered by the appropriation Salaries and expenses, Weather Bureau.

1. Upper-air observational facilities.—Consists of ground installations to continuously track radio transmitters carried to altitudes of 100,000 feet by sounding balloons. It also includes miniaturized equipment for use on ship-board to obtain measurements of high altitude weather conditions over the oceans.

2. Weather surveillance radar.—Provides a continuous picture of changing weather conditions up to 250 miles from the stations, facilitating the preparation of forecasts and increasing the advance-warning time.

3. Surface observational facilities.—Modern electronic instruments that provide continuous automatic measurements of cloud height, visibility, temperature, humidity, wind direction and velocity, including computers to convert these data for optimum use in controlling air traffic.

4. Communications equipment.—Consists of high speed storage and retransmission equipment for use on express circuits so that weather analyses, including satellite cloud data, may be relayed to field weather offices over slower speed feeder circuits.

5. Construction of facilities.—Covers construction of office and housing units at places where these facilities are not available from any other source and construction of office space at airports where rent-free space is no longer available.

6. Engineering and technical support.—Provides staff for planning, site surveys, actual installation and initial calibration of equipment.

The Weather Bureau is responsible for the establishment and operation of a national system for observing world-wide meteorological conditions by space satellites. Its appropriation for Meteorological satellite operations finances: procurement, launch, and tracking of spacecraft; establishment and operation of ground facilities for NIMBUS spacecraft command and for acquisition and transmission of observed data to the National Meteorological Center, Suitland, Md.; conversion of NIMBUS data into forms suitable for use in weather forecasting and analysis and its archiving; and technical management of the program. Utilization of satellite-generated data and its dissemination to field forecast centers is financed through the appropriation for Salaries and expenses. In 1964 this appropriation will also finance the administrative expenses associated with the satellite program.

In 1962 over $45 million was obligated to the NASA to procure NIMBUS spacecraft and launch vehicles and to initiate construction of command and data acquisition stations for the NIMBUS program. Because of delays in development of the NIMBUS system the Weather Bureau in 1963 will procure several TIROS spacecraft in order to assure the continued availability of operationally useful satellite data until such time as this data may be obtained from NIMBUS. This interim operational TIROS program will supplement TIROS research and development launches financed by the NASA. The program planned for 1964 provides for procurement of additional NIMBUS spacecraft in anticipation of this system's successful development.

The Inland Waterways Corporation, in liquidation, is engaged in the collection of debt and the policing of operations of the successor carrier, Federal Barge Lines, Inc.

Under the repayment schedule, the debt owed by Federal Barge Lines, Inc., will be fully repaid by June 30, 1969. The United States is earning interest at the rate of 4% until June 30, 1964, with the remaining years at 5%.

Budget program.—Administrative costs cover policing and incidental expenses. Reserves are established at the estimated liability for suits against the Corporation.

Operating results.—Net income of $173 thousand is expected in 1963, representing excess of interest revenue over expenses.

This program covered all post-war construction activity prior to 1955. Final costs have been determined and all obligations completely liquidated. During 1961, $100 thousand was transferred to Maritime training as authorized by Public Law 86-451. The remaining unrequired balance of $20,580 is in the process of being covered into the Treasury.

This appropriation provides for payment of subsidies to ship operators in order to maintain a U.S. flag merchant marine in support of U.S. foreign commerce and capable of serving as a naval auxiliary in time of national emergency. To be eligible for subsidy, an operator must provide regular berth services on an essential trade route, show that Government aid is necessary to place the operation on a parity with its foreign competition, and employ vessels constructed in the United States and manned by U.S. citizens. The operations for which subsidy support is projected are detailed in the following table:

The budget estimate reflects contract authority for conduct of 1,900 voyages under approved contracts during 1964.

During calendar year 1961 the 15 subsidized operators incurred business expenses totaling $745.3 million in the operation of 302 ships. The items of expense for which subsidies are paid and amount thereof prior to recapture are detailed in the following table for calendar year 1961 voyages (in millions of dollars):

Percent of each item to total.....	84.2	2.0	5.3	8.5	-----

Passenger and freight services.—During calendar year 1961, 30 passenger or passenger/cargo ships and 272 cargo ships were engaged in subsidized voyages over routes detailed in the following table:

Recapture of excess profits.—All contracts for operating subsidy provide that 50% of the net profits earned from the contractors' subsidized operations and services incident thereto which over a 10-year period exceed 10% of capital necessarily employed shall be withheld from payments made by the Government. This recapture is effected annually based upon the cumulative profits earned since the beginning of the recapture period. The estimate for the current and budget years, shown in the program and financing schedule, assumes that the past year profit experience of each operator will be continued.

Status of unfunded contract authorization.—The computation and approval of final subsidy rates and audit of annual accountings will make it possible to make payments of 100% of subsidy payable on account of operations prior to December 31, 1959. The $110.7 million unpaid subsidy, as of June 30, 1964, represents a backlog consisting largely of amounts withheld pending final rate and audit determinations for operations subsequent to 1959, plus estimated amounts earned in the final quarter of 1964 for which bills will not be presented or paid during the year and the increase required to meet wage increases resulting from the 1961 negotiations between labor and management.

The amount of unpaid subsidy was greatly reduced by the authority granted in Public Law 87-243 increasing payments based on estimates from 75% to 90%.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

For expenses necessary for research, development, fabrication, and test operation of experimental facilities and equipment; collection and dissemination of maritime technical and engineering information; studies to improve water transportation systems; and supporting services related to nuclear ship operation; [$3,550,000] $8,250,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That transfers may be made to the appropriation for the current fiscal year for "Salaries and expenses" for administrative expenses (not to exceed $600,000), and any such transfers shall be without regard to the limitation under that appropriation on the amount available for such expenses: Provided further, That transfers may be made from this appropriation to the "Vessel operations revolving fund" for losses resulting from expenses of experimental ship operations. The States of Maine, Massachusetts, New York, Texas, and California maintain schools for the training of merchant marine officers, with Federal assistance given in the form of (a) direct grants of $75 thousand, if matched by State appropriations and if out-of-State students are enrolled; (b) allowance to cadets for uniforms, textbooks, and subsistence; and (c) repairs to Federal training vessels loaned to the schools.

The Maritime Academy Act (72 Stat. 622) provides contract authority for the Secretary of Commerce to enter into agreements with States to provide these grants and allowances over a 4-year period. This Act provides contract authority without limit as to amount or year. The new obligational authority includes the estimated obligations to be incurred under this authority. Maintenance and repair of training vessels are accomplished through annual appropriations.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—MARITIME ADMINISTRATION

No additional vessel shall be allocated under charter, nor shall any vessel be continued under charter by reason of any extension of chartering authority beyond June 30, 1949, unless the charterer shall agree that the Maritime Administration shall have no obligation upon redelivery to accept or pay for consumable stores, bunkers, and slopchest items, except with respect to such minimum amounts of bunkers as the Maritime Administration considers advisable to be retained on the vessel and that prior to such redelivery all consumable stores, slopchest items, and bunkers over and above such minimums shall be removed from the vessel by the charterer at his own expense.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Maritime Administration is authorized to furnish utilities and services and make necessary repairs in connection with any lease, contract, or occupancy involving Government property under control of the Maritime Administration, and payments received by the Maritime Administration for utilities, services, and repairs so furnished or made shall be credited to the appropriation charged with the cost thereof: Provided, That rental payments under any such lease, contract, or occupancy on account of items other than such utilities, services, or repairs shall be covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

No obligations shall be incurred during the current fiscal year from the construction fund established by the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, or otherwise, in excess of the appropriations and limitations contained in this Act, or in any prior appropriation Act, and all receipts which otherwise would be deposited to the credit of said fund shall be covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts. Under title XI, Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, the Maritime Administration received authority to insure construction loans and mortgages, with aggregate outstanding balances of up to $1 billion, on certain types of cargo and passenger-carrying vessels and other watercraft. Pursuant to the Fish and Wildlife Act of 1956 (16 U.S.C. 742e), authority to insure mortgages on fishing vessels, with amounts of loans outstanding at any one time limited to $10 million, has been transferred to the Department of the Interior.

Budget program.—The fund reflects the 1963 sale of the SS Coast Progress for $752 thousand with a downpayment of $188 thousand and a mortgage of $564 thousand payable in annual installments of $63 thousand over a period of 9 years. A loss of $311 thousand was incurred incident to the sale, which is the difference between the book value at time of sale of $1,063 thousand and the sale price of $752 thousand. No new mortgage defaults are reflected in the estimates for 1963 or 1964.

Operating results and financial condition.—As of June 1962, contingent liability of insured mortgages and loans not included in the statement of financial condition amounts to $395.2 million loan guarantees and $63.6 million commitments outstanding. The outstanding balances for loans and mortgages at the end of 1963 and 1964 are projected at $500 and $540 million, respectively.

No funds are programed to make advances to mortgagors with depleted working capital to permit them to meet mortgage installments.

In the event of new mortgage defaults the fund is authorized to borrow from the Treasury. Earnings, resulting from premium and interest receipts, are retained to meet possible additional requirements for advances to mortgagors. The fund in 1962 reflects (a) repayment of $1,400 thousand of borrowings from Treasury which are no longer available, and (b) liquidation of liability to the general fund of $1,525 thousand in 1963 and $303 thousand in 1964.

This fund, created in 1951, finances direct operation and charter of cargo vessels for transport of military and national interest cargo. It is also used for operation of Government-owned experimental vessels (70 Stat. 531).

Budget program—1. Vessel operations.—Cargo vessels are operated by private operators as agents of the Maritime Administration for the Military Sea Transportation Service.

2. Charter operations.—As of June 30, 1962, there were 3 Government-owned vessels under charter to private operators.

3. Experimental ship operations.—The world's first nuclear-powered cargo/passenger ship, NS Savannah, entered into service in 1962 under general agency agreement. During the period covered by these estimates the Savannah will be operated jointly by the Atomic Energy Commission and the Maritime Administration. The estimate provides for actual operation and maintenance costs. Costs for maintaining and operating the nuclear propulsion plant, including associated crew salaries, etc., and procurement of spare parts are reimbursed to the fund from Atomic Energy Commission appropriations.

Early in 1963 the vessel will undergo maintenance and modification after which it will visit selected domestic and foreign ports. The 1964 estimate provides for a second maintenance and upgrading period and for continued domestic and foreign operations.

HS Denison.—This hydrofoil ship will complete test operations in 1963 upon successful completion of which it is planned to convert the vessel to passenger accommodation for commercial service operations in 1964.

Operating results and financial condition—1. Vessel operation.—Rates charged the Military Sea Transportation Service cover full costs arising under general agency agreement for ship operations. During 1962 the fund was charged with a loss as a result of inventory adjustments resulting from the sales of surplus warehouse stock.

2. Charter operations.—A net income of $128 thousand will result over the 3-year period after meeting $371 thousand in costs for inventory purchases.

3. Experimental ship operations.—NS Savannah. The full costs of the NS Savannah program are charged to the fund; however, costs for maintaining and operating the nuclear propulsion plant and related costs $2.5 million in 1962, $3.2 million in 1963, and $3 million in 1964, are reimbursed to the fund from Atomic Energy Commission. Operating cost will also be offset by passenger and cargo revenue estimated at $100 thousand in 1963 and $705 thousand in 1964. The fund will also be reimbursed for losses incurred in operation of the Savannah from the appropriation Research and development estimated at $3.1 million for 1963 and $2.7 million for 1964.

HS Denison.—The full cost of testing and operating the Denison is charged to the fund. Due to the experimental nature of this vessel, it will not operate on a self-supporting basis. During 1964 the cost of operations, $1.3 million will be offset by revenue from passengers estimated at $625 thousand. This net loss as well as $10 thousand in 1963 will be reimbursed to the fund from the appropriation Research and development. The net loss of $983 thousand in 1962 for experimental ship operations is the result of the fund absorbing certain costs such as agents' compensation, port expenses, insurance, and maintenance and operation of the servicing vessel, Atomic Servant.

This fund provides war risk insurance in the event that commercial insurance is not available at reasonable terms and conditions (46 U.S.C. 1281, 1283). Commercial war risk insurance policies are at present subject to an automatic termination clause upon the outbreak of war (whether there be a declaration of war or not) between any of the following countries: United States of America, United Kingdom (or any other member of the British Commonwealth), France, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, the People's Republic of China, and exclude any claim for loss, damage or expense arising out of any prior hostile act or acts by any of the said countries resulting in such outbreak of war and occurring within a period of 90 days preceding such outbreak of war.

As of June 30, 1962, interim binders for war risk hull, protection and indemnity, and second seamen's insurance which become effective upon the outbreak of war, had been issued covering approximately $7.5 billion of insurance. War risk insurance was also in effect on 13 American vessels under construction in shipyards in the United States, covering the prelaunching period, totaling approximately $80 million of insurance.

Budget program.—At the request of the Secretary of the Navy, second seamen's war risk insurance is provided without premium, as authorized under sections 1205-6 of title XII of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, on tankers operated for the account of the Military Sea Transportation Service. On June 30, 1962, a total of 20 tankers were covered under this program. All losses on such insurance paid through this fund are reimbursed to the fund by the Secretary of the Navy. Expenses of the fund therefore consist only of fees paid to underwriting agents and for contract appraisal costs.

Financing.—Transfer of $10 million is authorized from the Vessel operations revolving fund if necessary as an emergency measure (65 Stat. 747). To date no transfers have been made and none are anticipated in 1963 or 1964. In addition, revenue is provided by insurance premiums and fees paid for the issuance of interim binders and builder's risk insurance.

Operating results.—The Government's investment consists entirely of retained earnings totaling $2.9 million on June 30, 1962. Retention of these earnings is necessary for this program to get underway immediately upon the outbreak of a national emergency.

Expenses for administration of the Federal-aid highway programs and for carrying on highway research are met by deductions from Federal-aid authorizations. Administrative services for other programs of the Bureau of Public Roads and for road construction programs of other Federal agencies are initially financed from this activity, and reimbursements of their pro rata share of administrative costs are collected periodically from these programs. Increases provide additional staff to permit more adequate field review of State highway department construction and right-of-way operations and to strengthen research and development, planning, and safety activities of the Bureau. Funds are provided for additional contract research and development projects and for headquarters rent formerly funded by the General Services Administration.

1. Engineering and administration.—Provides for direction and management of field operations and development of policies and procedures to implement highway legislation. The field operations are organized in 10 regions with division offices in each of the States, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico. These offices are responsible for administering the Federal-aid highway programs within the States; assisting in developing adequate State programs for highway planning, research, engineering construction, and maintenance; and carrying out direct Federal highway projects.

2. Highway planning.—Provides for systematic current and long-range planning, and broad programing in highway development, and supervision of State planning accomplished with 1½% grant funds provided under 23 U.S.C. 307b.

3. Highway research and development.—Provides for direct and cooperative research and development projects. Supervision is exercised in coordinating research carried out with 1½% grant funds provided the States.

4. Promotion of highway safety.—Provides leadership and support for highway safety activities designed to assist in reducing the large human and economic loss to the Nation through highway accidents. Support of the National Driver Register Service, the President's Committee on Traffic Safety, and the Interdepartmental Highway Safety Board is provided under this activity.

5. Training program.—Provides for recruitment, assignment to training courses, and the placement within the organization of college graduates.

Grants are made to States for construction and improvement of Federal-aid highways. Authorizations are provided in the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1956 to cover 90% of the costs of completing the 41,000-mile National System of Interstate and Defense Highways and to match State funds on a 50-50 basis for the primary, secondary, and urban programs. The Federal share of the cost is increased in those States with large areas of public domain. Payments to the States are made out of transfers from the Highway trust fund into which are deposited certain percentages of tax receipts on motor fuel, tires and tubes, tread rubber, trucks, buses, trailers, and truck use.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1961 authorized additional appropriations for the Interstate program which, based upon the latest estimated cost to complete the system, will insure the orderly prosecution of the program and completion by 1972 as was intended by the Congress in enacting the 1956 Highway Act. The 1961 Act also provided increased revenues to finance these increased authorizations. Additional annual authorizations of $950 million for 1964 and $975 million for 1965 were authorized by the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1962 to provide for the continuation of the Federal-aid primary, secondary and urban programs. These authorizations are available for use in the year prior to the year for which authorized.

As of October 1, 1962, more than 13,000 miles of the 41,000-mile Interstate System were open to traffic. Approximately 66% (8,607 miles) was built or improved under the Federal-aid Interstate program, most of it under the 90% Federal, 10% State matching program launched in 1956. Toll roads, bridges, and tunnels incorporated in the system totaled 2,302 miles. In addition to the sections open to traffic, 4,894 miles were under construction with Interstate funds, and engineering and right-of-way acquisition was in progress on another 10,785 miles. Thus, some form of work was underway or completed on 28,808 miles of the 41,000-mile system—about 71% of the total system mileage.

Construction projects involving 137,465 miles in the regular Federal-aid program (primary, secondary, and urban) have been completed since July 1, 1956, at a total cost of $9 billion, and contracts involving 25,827 miles at a cost of $3 billion were authorized or underway as of July 1, 1962. In addition, $633 million of engineering and right-of-way acquisition work had been completed and $490 million was underway.

Actual and estimated progress of Federal-aid programs are summarized in the following table:

1. Construction.—Main highways within or adjacent to the national forests are constructed and improved. Projects are jointly selected by the States, the Forest Service, and the Bureau of Public Roads on the basis of their contribution to meeting traffic requirements within the national forests. Authorizations are apportioned by States on the basis of national forest area and value in each State. Contract authorizations of $33 million are available for 1962, 1963, and 1964.

A supplemental appropriation for 1963 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

The 1964 estimate of $33 million finances the balance of the 1962 authorization and $29.2 million of the 1963 authorization, both of which were provided by the Federal Highway Act of 1960.

Actual and estimated progress of the program is summarized in the following table (dollars in thousands):

Fiscal year	Annual authorization ¹	Miles completed	Unobligated balance, end of year	Obligations for projects	Expenditures

2. Administration.—In addition to administration, this covers the costs of engineering supervision of the program.

Construction.—Highways through public lands are constructed and improved in those States with large areas of such lands. Contract authorizations totaling $24 million are available during 1963 and 1964. The authorization consists of an additional $6 million for 1963, and $9 million for each of the years 1964 and 1965, all of which are authorized by the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1962.

The 1964 appropriation estimate finances the balance of the 1963 authorization provided by the Federal Highway Act of 1960 and $2.7 million of the additional authorization for 1963 which was provided by the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1962.

The 1,555-mile Central American section of the Inter-American Highway is being constructed in cooperation with the Republics of Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, and Panama. These republics pay one-third of the cost of highways through their countries and have assumed responsibility for future maintenance.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1962 (76 Stat. 1146) authorizes an additional appropriation of $32 million, $12 million of which is contract authorization, to complete the highway to acceptable standards. An appropriation of $22 million will be required in 1964. This is composed of $6 million liquidation of contract authority and $16 million of new obligational authority. The remaining $10 million of the authorization will be required in 1965.

The Highway Revenue Act of 1956 (70 Stat. 374) provides for the transfer from the general fund to the highway trust fund of sums equal to certain percentages of taxes received on gasoline, diesel fuel, trucks, buses, tires, etc. The Secretary of the Treasury estimates the amounts to be so transferred. In turn, annual appropriations are authorized from this trust fund to meet expenditures for Federal-aid highways. Amounts in the fund not currently required are invested in U.S. securities, and interest thereon is added to the fund.

In order to provide revenues which will permit completion of the Interstate System by 1972 and continue the Federal-aid primary, secondary, and urban highway programs at authorized levels anticipated during that period, the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1961 increased the rates on certain taxes deposited into the highway trust fund and extended the fund to September 30, 1972.

Legislation will be proposed to retain aviation and motorboat gas tax revenue in the general fund after December 31, 1963, instead of continuing to transfer it to the highway trust fund.

Such additional costs were authorized by subsection (c) of section 512 of the Department of Defense Appropriation Act for 1963.

In addition, funds are anticipated for an increase in the basic allowance for quarters payable to military personnel. The law providing for this increase was enacted after transmittal of the 1963 budget estimates.

RESERVE FORCES

The following narrative statement covers the appropriations for the Reserve components of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force.

1. Reserve and National Guard personnel.—This program provides funds for training members of the Ready Reserve required for early mobilization needs of the Active Forces. Most of the paid Reserve components personnel perform 48 or 24 drills and attend 2 weeks of active duty for training each year. Other personnel not requiring as intensive training receive only a period of active duty for training (usually 2 weeks) during the year. Active duty for basic training is provided for personnel enlisting in a Reserve component who have not previously received military training. Service schools and special tours of active duty training provide additional training for limited numbers of the Ready Reserve.

	1963 estimate	1964 estimate
Army Reserve.....	300,000	300,000
Army National Guard.....	400,000	400,000
Totals.....	700,000	700,000

These personnel strengths have been authorized and programed, subject to the following provisions:

1. All units maintain at least 90% Military Occupational Specialty qualified personnel.
2. The Reserve components will apply the same recruiting standards as the Active Army.
3. No units will be permitted to exceed the authorized strength except those specifically authorized excess strengths to accommodate reservists on drill pay status who have been displaced by the realignment of the Army's reserve forces.

It is estimated that under these provisions it will be possible to obtain the participation of the following numbers of Reserve component personnel in paid drill training by the ends of 1963 and 1964 within the programed personnel strengths of 700,000.

2. Reserve officer candidates.—The Reserve Officers' Training Corps program provides training for reserve officer candidates who have enrolled in the course while attending a collegiate institution at which an ROTC unit has been established. The curriculum includes instruction in military and academic subjects together with a summer active duty training period with the Active Forces. College graduates who satisfactorily complete the 4-year program are commissioned and are either ordered to active duty for a minimum period of 2 years or to a 3- to 6-month period of active duty training.

The Navy also provides training for candidates for commissions as Regular officers who are selected on a nationwide competitive basis, appointed as midshipmen and required to complete a 4-year military training program while attending at Government expense one of the 53 collegiate institutions at which Naval ROTC units have been established. Successful candidates, commissioned in the Regular Navy or Marine Corps, become career officers who are required to serve at least 4 years on active duty.

Students attending other colleges or universities may also enroll in a Naval or Marine Corps officer candidate program, attend prescribed summer military training programs, and receive a commission after graduation. They are then required to serve at least 3 years on active duty.

In addition, the Army and Air Force provide 2 years of basic military training for college students who elect, or are required by the college, to enroll in the course for the first 2 years but who are not required to be candidates for officer commissions. The Army also provides training for students who elect to enroll at 40 military schools in a junior program.

Average annual enrollments in these programs are summarized below.

This estimate includes funds for the pay of all military personnel on the retired lists of the Department of Defense. The estimate represents the consolidated requirements of the military departments for (a) payments to retired officers and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force, (b) the retainer pay of regular enlisted personnel of the Fleet Reserve of the Navy and Fleet Marine Corps Reserve, and (c) survivors' benefits. The substantial gains to the retired rolls can be directly attributed to the greater number of individuals attaining eligibility for retirement after 20 or more years of active military service. The following tabulation shows the average number of personnel on the rolls during 1962 compared with the estimated numbers for 1963 and 1964.

AVERAGE NUMBER

Under the provisions of the retired serviceman's family protection plan, retired service personnel who elect to receive reduced amounts of retired pay are able to provide for monthly payments to be continued to their survivors. The reductions are determined on a basis designed to establish an actuarially sound system. Current appropriations provide only for the net payments to be made each year, and the liability for future payments of survivor benefits is unfunded. Administrative expenses of this family protection plan are provided as operation and maintenance costs of the military services. The accumulated difference between reductions in retired pay and actual payments of survivor benefits is indicated in the following table:

This appropriation provides for the day-to-day operations and activities of the Active Army with a beginning strength of 980,000 and ending strength of 975,000 and for training support of the Army Reserve. This includes the direct operational support of the Army forces deployed within the United States and overseas; the maintenance and operation of facilities used for the recruitment, training, administration, and logistical support of these forces; and the maintenance of a mobilization base for the expansion of Army forces in the event of emergencies or war. The Active Army Forces include Army units assigned to the unified and specified commands in Europe, the Pacific, the United States, and the Caribbean, air defense units in the United States, other combat forces, and the substantial support and training forces associated with combat units.

The 1964 estimates continue emphasis on improvements in the Army's readiness for both limited and nonnuclear general war. Major changes include continuation of the reorganization of Army units; further expansion of training both through field and local exercises of units and increased training of individuals; and increased emphasis on combat developments and troop tests of new equipment and tactics. New units, including an experimental air assault division will be organized and trained to test and evaluate new concepts of air mobility. The continued reorganization will materially increase the flexibility, mobility, and firepower of the units reorganized.

Other major changes in 1964 are: Following the 1963 funding pattern, estimates for family housing have been transferred to the Family housing management appropriation account of the Department of Defense; transfer of supply distribution functions to the Defense Supply Agency; and distribution to Training activities and Armywide activities of amounts previously reported under Joint projects, thereby eliminating this budget activity.

In addition to direct training and support of the operating forces, funds are required for the logistics system, which procures, stores, distributes, and maintains material; for expenses of the departmental and other major headquarters; and for local support costs. This latter category includes local activities, headquarters and administration, essential welfare and recreational activities, maintenance and repair of facilities and equipment, and logistics services.

This appropriation also provides for the expenses of administration and training of the Army Reserve Forces and for 6 months active duty training of Army Reserve and National Guard personnel at basic training centers, Army schools and with Army units.

A supplemental appropriation for 1963 is anticipated for separate transmittal to provide funds to finance the additional costs resulting from the two Army National Guard divisions and supporting units, called to active duty in 1962, remaining on active duty for the first part of 1963; and legislation authorizing increases in military per diem.

Obligations incurred during 1962 for support of the activated Army National Guard divisions and supporting units amounted to $119,074 thousand, $102,224 thousand of which was obligated under the authority provided by subsection (c) of section 612 of the 1962 Department of Defense Appropriation Act.

1. Operating forces.—This provides for the training and support of Army combat and combat support forces. These costs include the operation and maintenance of the installations where these units are stationed, and the operation and maintenance of the weapons, aircraft, vehicles and other equipment assigned to these units. In 1964 an increase is provided in the size of the Regular Army to organize, train, test, and evaluate new units, including the testing of the concept of an air assault division and other new air units. Emphasis will also be placed on realistic field training for all combat and combat support units, particularly those assigned to the Strike command. This unified command's program of large scale two-way maneuvers which pit combat units against each other will be expanded. The Army's special warfare units will be increased to help meet the growing importance of counterinsurgency operations in southeast Asia and other areas of the world. This program will also support the continued conversion of Army units to the new brigade structure, with its emphasis on increased mobility and firepower.

2. Training activities.—This provides for individual training of officers and enlisted men as contrasted with combat unit training. Two broad categories are included: career training with emphasis on doctrine, strategy, and tactics; and special skill training in such fields as missile maintenance, aircraft mechanics, electronic equipment repair, financial management, languages, and the operation of complex and intricate weapons and equipment of the modern Army. Most of this individual training is conducted through the Army service schools and colleges which conduct resident courses of instruction for Army personnel, reserve forces trainees, personnel from other services, and foreign military personnel; prepare and administer extension courses and other nonresident training; and prepare Army training texts and publications.

In addition, this activity finances the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, providing instruction for approximately 2,400 cadets annually for careers as Army officers.

Necessary resources, previously budgeted under Joint projects, are included to support the National War College and the Industrial College of the Armed Services which prepare selected personnel of the Armed Forces and other Government agencies for the exercise of joint and combined high-level policy, command and staff functions and for the planning of national strategy.

3. Central supply activities.—This program provides the supply support lifeline to the Army's combat forces by financing operation of the Army supply management and distribution system in peace and providing the necessary framework for the expansion of the procurement, production, and supply distribution system in war. The Army supply system manages and distributes a materiel inventory valued at over $12 billion.

The Army supply system begins with procurement contracting for approximately $5 billion worth of supplies and equipment. This contracting is supported by contract administration, quality control, value engineering, specification management, and standardization of items within the Defense Department.

The supply system moves the Army inventory in the materiel pipeline from procurement through its depots in the United States down to post supply agencies which supply the troop units. For the forces abroad the Army materiel moves from depots in the United States, through transportation terminal facilities, into supply depots overseas, and finally down to the ultimate consumers—the Army troop units. Materiel required on a priority basis is expedited through the pipeline directly to the using troop unit under a special handling and premium transportation fast-moving delivery system which bypasses the normal intervening stages in the pipeline.

Thirty-seven depots in the United States and 45 depots overseas receive, account for, store, and guard against deterioration of the Army inventory while the supply flows through the materiel pipeline to the elements wherever stationed.

The Army inventory and its distribution is controlled by 20 national inventory control points in the United States, 3 major transportation terminal commands at New York, San Francisco, and New Orleans, and by 9 overseas inventory control points. These supply control agencies are managed by the newly established Army Materiel Command.

The program also accomplishes the land, sea, and air movement of some 5 million tons of materiel from the depots, through the intermediate stages in the pipeline, to the using troop units. Included also is the maintenance and protection of standby production facilities for use in the event of mobilization.

A summary of total workload data specifically related to the central supply activities program follows (including reimbursable workload):

Short tons shipped.....	3,372	2,728	2,026
Short tons in storage ¹	8,660	8,336	7,582

The major change to this program in 1964 is the transfer to the Defense Supply Agency of the responsibility for distribution of Single Manager supplies. In 1964, as a result of the transfer, the Defense Supply Agency will operate 2 additional Army depots and will ship about 700 thousand tons of materiel previously shipped by the Army supply system.

4. Major overhaul and maintenance of materiel.—The primary objective of this program is to maintain the Army's equipment in combat-ready condition. To meet this objective, worldwide maintenance management and assistance is provided to field commanders through maintenance publications, maintenance engineering services and technical assistance as required by the introduction and use of complex modern equipment. Major overhaul and modification of equipment and the renovation of ammunition and special weapons are funded by this program. Also, this program provides for the major overhaul of materiel for the Military assistance program and other Defense agencies on a reimbursable basis.

Cost reduction is continually emphasized. In 1964 the Army will have in operation a new maintenance management system. This system will provide for the flow of data on the performance of combat-essential equipment to a central maintenance processing center. Information such as the frequency of failure of critical components, maintenance hours per vehicle, cost of maintenance and miles between failure will be compiled and evaluated. Redesign of components will be effected as necessary to secure improvement in the durability, reliability and maintainability of combat-essential equipment.

Of the total funds (direct and reimbursable) available for this program, approximately 50% will be used for overhaul and modification of equipment and ammunition renovation; and approximately 50% for maintenance assistance, engineering services and the procurement of on-vehicle parts and equipment, modification kits, and capital equipment.

5. Medical activities.—This activity covers the cost of medical care of Army active duty and Reserve personnel, the dependents of active duty personnel, and, on a space-available basis, retired personnel and their families. It includes the operation and maintenance of Army hospitals and certain other medical facilities, the costs of medical training for Army personnel, and operation of the Surgeon General's Office. It cost the Army $23 million in 1962 for care of dependents of its military personnel in civilian hospitals and these costs are estimated at $21 million in 1963 and $22 million in 1964.

Selected major workload items are shown in the following table:

6. Armywide activities.—This includes the management and direction of the Army and finances the headquarters in Washington, D.C., and the headquarters of the major field commands. In 1963 and 1964, headquarters costs under this program are reduced by the transfer of personnel and functions to other programs as a result of the reorganization of Department of the Army headquarters. Funds are provided for the operation and maintenance of those portions of the defense communications system assigned to the Department of the Army as well as certain strategic communications facilities required for the operation and security of Army forces worldwide. In 1964 an increase is provided to support communication elements transferred into this program and increased requirements in support of the national communications system. Funds are provided for the intelligence program which embraces activities of the Army in the field of intelligence, counter-intelligence, industrial and personnel security, communications security, and mapping and charting and includes such activities as the attaché system, the Army Intelligence Center, the Army Security Agency, intelligence corps units and mapping and charting installations and units. Mapping and charting costs are increased in 1964 to fulfill the Army's responsibility for the worldwide acquisition, production, maintenance and supply of military topographic maps, geodetic data and related materials for the common use of the military services and the Department of Defense. services are also provided for the entire Army, ranging from records centers and processing of military personnel to the education of dependents in oversea areas and financial accounting and auditing. Also included are the necessary resources, previously budgeted under Joint projects, for certain interdefense activities for which the Army has been assigned administrative or executive agent responsibility, international activities supporting national policy principally in the field of inter-American relations, unified command headquarters in Europe and the Caribbean, and classified activities. This activity provides support for training and administering the Army Reserve and includes the cost of reserve training performed at local training sites and at summer camps. An average of 163 thousand Reserve Officers' Training Corps students at colleges and universities will be supported in 1964.

Maintaining the current combat readiness of naval forces is the primary objective of this appropriation. These include carrier striking forces, submarine forces, antisubmarine forces, amphibious forces, and anti-air warfare forces, whose major mission is to protect the seelanes vital to the free world's survival and to project rapidly American power to danger spots around the world. The inherent flexibility and mobility of naval forces provides a rapid and measured response to aggression or potential aggression with force appropriate to the threat. The day-to-day operating and maintenance costs of the naval shore establishment, which provide supply, repair, training and other support services to the naval operating forces, are also financed from this appropriation.

Early in 1963 certain reserve forces which had been activated during 1962 as a result of increased world tensions, were released from active service, accounting for a slight reduction in the number of active fleet ships from 1962. The number of ships and the complexity of naval weapons systems are increased in 1964 over 1963. Expanded and improved training programs are required in order to provide the additional trained personnel necessary to operate and maintain the more sophisticated weapons systems. Growing needs in oceanography, communications, intelligence, and data maintenance must be provided for in order to attain and maintain the desired capability of the operating forces.

Combat readiness will be maintained through continued fleet training exercises. This budget provides 2.2 million steaming hours for active fleet ships and 3.8 million flying hours for naval aircraft. Funds are also included for the operation of 24 Polaris submarines by the end of the year—double the number operating in the current year.

Supply, communications, medical, construction battalion, and public works functions support the operations described above. The Navywide supply system will process 22 million separate supply actions in 1964 and will manage 1.2 million stock items. As executive agent for the Defense Department, the Navy will provide logistic support to the U.S. program for Antarctica. This support will include operation and maintenance of ships, aircraft, and facilities at a cost of $20 million.¹

A major change in the appropriation content is the transfer of the military family housing program to the appropriation Family housing, Defense.

1. General expenses, Navy personnel.—Modern naval operations dictate the recruiting and training of highly adaptable and capable personnel. The program includes training for approximately 143,000 recruits; technical, scientific, and professional training and education for approximately 400,000 officers and enlisted men; reserve training for approximately 125,000 reservists and support for over 11,000 NROTC midshipmen in civilian colleges. In addition, the Naval Academy will prepare 3,900 midshipmen for officer careers.

2. Weapons and facilities.—Naval and Marine Corps flight operations supporting the military missions of the Navy include combat operating forces, such as carrier air groups, Marine air wings, land-based patrol squadrons, and supporting units. Extensive flight training is programmed to provide the skilled crews to perform these complex missions. In 1964 flight operations in both the Regular and Reserve categories are higher than in 1963. The increasing number of missile-firing ships in the fleet results in increased funds for missile system support, including Polaris, while the costs of operating and maintaining higher performance aircraft continue to rise as greater numbers are added each year. The shore establishment supporting these weapons systems includes air stations, ammunition depots, and ordnance plants.

3. Ships and facilities.—This activity provides for operating and maintaining the ships in the Navy's attack, amphibious assault, antisubmarine, anti-air warfare and Polaris submarine forces, continually deployed in the major trouble spots of the world to assist in carrying out American policy. Cost increases in 1964 are primarily due to an increased number of ships, support of more complex ships and equipments, and an increase in the fleet rehabilitation and modernization program.

4. Medical care.—Medical care and hospitalization of Navy and Marine Corps personnel and their dependents is provided by operating naval hospitals, dispensaries, dental clinics, and other specialized medical facilities. Measures of the level of operations are shown in the following table:

5. Civil engineering.—Civil engineering services for the naval establishment include plant maintenance, operation of utilities and transportation, planning, engineering, and design and contract administration. Much of this work is accomplished at 6 public works centers operated in areas where several naval facilities are located, to provide centralized services common to the several facilities. The 12 Construction Battalions (Seabees) plus 2 headquarters staffs are also supported under this activity. These units are maintained in readiness to support the operating forces and also operate and build at stations from which Antarctic operations are conducted.

6. Service-wide supply.—The workload of this activity is directly responsive to fleet, air, and shore station operations, including major procurement actions. This activity encompasses the logistical support of major active forces, both continental and overseas, at shipyards and at 14 major supply depots and centers. Planning and programming for this support, including procurement and requirements determinations, is accomplished by 11 inventory control points of which the Aviation Supply Office in Philadelphia is the largest. Transportation costs of intra-Navy movement of materiel directed by these inventory control points, including shipment by Military Sea Transportation Service, are also funded by this activity. A summary of workload data for this activity follows:

7. Service-wide operations.—Facilities and programs under the management of the Chief of Naval Operations, including his headquarters staff, are the principal activities financed under this activity. Included are unified command headquarters, naval stations, naval district headquarters, the naval communication system, the Naval Security Group, the Oceanographic Office, the Naval Observatory, naval intelligence and programming services for command and control systems. Also under this activity are the operations of the offices of the Secretary of the Navy, the Judge Advocate General of the Navy, and the Chief of Naval Research. ¹ Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are principally from sales of surplus U.S. Government property; sales of goods and services to individuals, including laundry services and unofficial telephone service (10 U.S.C. 2481 and 7581; 70 Stat. 1105).

General.—The objective of the Marine Corps is to train and maintain the Fleet Marine Forces in a high state of combat readiness for service with the Fleet in amphibious operations or for such duties as the President may direct. The Fleet Marine Forces, composed of three reinforced Marine division-aircraft wing teams and related support units, are assigned to the Atlantic and Pacific Fleets, which are naval components of unified commands. In 1964, the deployment of these forces will remain substantially unchanged.

This appropriation principally supports the ground elements of the Fleet Marine Forces; the operations of the three Marine aircraft wings are financed primarily by the Operation and Maintenance, Navy appropriation. Other units supported by this appropriation include Marine detachments aboard naval vessels, landing force training units, Marine Reserve ground forces, and the security forces that guard naval bases, U.S. embassies and certain classified facilities. The major installations supported by this appropriation are:

1. Training and operations.—Operational deployments of Fleet Marine Force units with the Atlantic and Pacific Fleets will continue in 1964 at the present tempo of activity. Fleet Marine Forces training objectives stress vertical envelopment doctrine in amphibious operations through major exercises by combined air and ground units. To support training objectives, the Corps recruits and trains military personnel and operates four major combat-unit support bases, two recruit training depots and one school.

Significant workload data for this activity are:

Recruit training (average load).....	9,961	8,934	12,848

2. Depot supply system.—This activity includes the overhaul and preservation of major equipment and materiel and the receipt, issue, and storage of materiel to support combat forces. Major equipment repair is programed on the basis of balancing items repaired with new procurements to meet a maximum materiel readiness requirement within fund resources available. Supply activity workload is more directly related to the level of manning and operations of combat forces. Programing and planning for this logistic support is accomplished at the Marine Corps Supply Activity, Philadelphia; storage and issue functions are accomplished primarily at two major supply centers. In 1964, the Corps will continue a 4-year program of overhaul and modernization of amphibious landing vehicles commenced in 1962.

3. Transportation of things.—This activity provides funds for the movement of Marine Corps supplies within the continental United States and overseas, including stevedoring and port handling charges.

4. Marine Corps Reserve training.—The objective of this program is to provide a strong Reserve organization capable of rapid assimilation into the operating forces when needed. This activity finances the annual field training of Reserve units, maintenance and operation of Reserve training centers, and Marine Corps furnished supplies and equipment for ground and aviation units.

5. Cataloging.—This activity provides support for Federal stock numbering in accordance with the requirements of the Federal catalog system, cataloging, and publication and distribution of materiel lists.

6. Departmental administration.—The staff agencies of the headquarters, Marine Corps, which provide for the administration of the missions, functions, and worldwide operations of the Marine Corps are funded in this activity. Included in the funding are the pay of civilian employees, costs of electronic data processing, printing and reproduction, and other expenses incident to the operation of staff offices of the Commandant.

This appropriation finances the daily operating expenses required for Air Force combat and support forces. It provides the financial resources to transform the military personnel, facilities, and equipment financed by other appropriations into combat ready strategic, tactical, and defense forces. Inherent in maintaining military superiority are significant changes in the composition of the forces with parallel changes occurring in the support forces. These changes are brought about by the introduction of strategic, tactical, and defense weapons of improved performance accompanied by the phasing out of older weapons systems. These forces and their related training, logistic, and administrative support components will be manned in 1964 by an average active duty military personnel strength of 864,966 and 263,830 civilian personnel.

Examples of the changes occurring in the force structure of the Air Force are found in the strategic field. During 1964 the force of combat ready B-52 heavy bomber units will continue at the level reached in 1963, and most of these will be equipped with the Hound Dog air-to-ground missile. A further reduction in the B-47 medium bomber force will be accompanied by the activation of additional Titan II and Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missile squadrons. A greater poststrike capability is being developed through the increased dispersal of forces and modernization of weapons systems entering the active inventory. Provision has also been made for continuing “low level” and airborne alert indoctrination training in the strategic bomber force.

The air defense area reflects some changes in 1964. There will be some reduction in manned air defense aircraft units. The current SAGE direction center program will be adjusted by the end of 1964. The three ballistic missile early warning sites will be operational in 1964.

An overall improved posture is programed for the tactical forces. Manned aircraft units will receive the more modern F-4C and F-105 aircraft as replacements for the older F-84's and F-100's.

A supplemental appropriation for 1963 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

1. Aircraft fuel and oil.—This program provides for aviation fuel and oil to support the operation of all Air Force and Air Force Reserve aircraft except those assigned to research and development activities, the Air National Guard, and that portion of the airlift services of the Military Air Transport Service which is financed by the Air Force industrial fund. While there is an overall increase in flying hours from 1963 to 1964, there are numerous variations in the aircraft type and model composition of the total activity which result in cost reductions. Generally, the types of aircraft which will have increased usage, such as the F-105, T-37, and T-38, are less expensive to operate than the aircraft which will phase out, such as the B-47 and KC-97.

Total active aircraft, end of year:
Regular Air Force.....	13,238	11,932	11,731
Air Force Reserve.....	745	787	785
Aircraft flying hours:
Regular Air Force.....	5,376,021	5,183,570	5,271,995
Air Force Reserve.....	175,099	188,098	209,071

These flying hours provide for the training of strategic, tactical, and defense units and the flying training of individuals for subsequent assignment to flying units.

2. Logistical support.—This activity finances the operation of the Air Force depot system, including the costs related to procurement, storage, distribution, and maintenance of Air Force materiel. The composition of the Air Force continues to change in 1964 with greater emphasis on missiles, sophistication of the warning network, and higher performance planes in the aircraft inventory. These all affect the logistic support workload. The current concept provides for performing depot maintenance on missiles at the operational site, with only the components of the missile being returned to overhaul facilities. Depot level maintenance will be accomplished primarily by dispatching teams from central points to the missile sites.

Inventory control points.....	10	10	10
Number of prime stocked items.....	1,945,496	1,870,000	1,730,000
Tons received and shipped (U.S. depots).....	1,912,605	1,751,300	1,663,000

The 1964 estimate includes $146.5 million for certain replenishment spare parts and materials to be purchased from the Defense Stock Fund as a result of the transfer of initial procurement responsibility to the Defense Supply Agency. Funds for the procurement of these items have previously been included in various Air Force procurement appropriations.

3. Training support.—This provides for the basic, technical, and professional training of airmen, cadets, and officers as contrasted with the training of combat units financed under Operational support. Operating costs of the Air Force Reserve program are also included.

The decrease in technical training loads is related to lower Air Force military personnel strength in 1964. The undergraduate pilot training load increase is associated with cockpit requirements as computed in relation to the force requirements necessitating a need for more pilots.

Major elements of the Air Force training program are tabulated below:

Basic military and technical training (average training load).....	49,670	45,689	44,270
Service schools:
Advanced technical training (average training load).....	6,748	6,452	5,240

Reservists in pay status (average strengths).....	69,209	65,651	71,454
Air Force Reserve Officers' Training Corps graduates.....	3,333	3,385	3,648

4. Operational support.—This activity provides for the operating requirements at air base level of all the combat forces, the several operational support commands, SAGE, DEWLINE, BMEWS, and ballistic missile squadrons. This includes on-the-line maintenance of aircraft and weapons, upkeep of the airfields, operation of the control towers, maintenance of troop housing, and all other expenses necessary at base level to keep the forces operationally ready.

The following table shows comparative numbers of major installations supported under this program detailed by category of forces:

Type	1962 actual	1963 estimate	1964 estimate
Strategic.....	61	59	56
Air defense.....	32	31	31
Tactical.....	60	61	57
Other.....	21	23	22
Total.....	174	174	166

Cost reductions resulting from the decreased number of installations are partially offset by the operating costs of additional ballistic missile sites. With variations depending upon the particular weapon system involved, missile sites generally consist of a number of launch stations dispersed at varying distances from a launch control center. Each launch complex is self-sufficient with respect to electrical power and communications to assure that the highly complex equipment installed is in a state of constant readiness.

This program also finances that portion of the Military Air Transport Service airlift not financed under industrial fund tariffs. This airlift includes joint Army airborne training, medical evacuation, and special air missions.

The 1963 and 1964 estimates include funds for the Alaska Communication System, which provides telegraph and long-distance telephone service in Alaska for Department of Defense activities, other agencies of the Government and the general public. Heretofore, this activity has been financed by a separate appropriation.

5. Medical support.—This activity covers the cost of medical care of Air Force personnel, active and retired, and their families, and includes the operation and maintenance of hospitals and other medical-treatment facilities. It cost the Air Force $25.4 million in 1962 for the care of dependents of military personnel in civilian hospitals, and these costs are estimated at $24.5 million in 1963 and $25.5 million in 1964.

Selected major workload items are shown in the following table:

In Federal hospitals.....	785	771	771
Other.....	103	105	110

6. Servicewide support.—This program provides for the operations of Air Force and major command headquarters, air attaché and mission offices, intelligence and security activities, and for the leasing of commercial communication systems and networks. Costs of new and improved communications are expected to be partially offset by savings from systems consolidations and improved contracting procedures.

7. Contingencies.—These are extraordinary expenses approved and certified by the Secretary of the Air Force.

This appropriation provides the financial resources required by the Secretary of Defense for the support of his immediate office, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and activities and agencies of the Department of Defense which operate directly under the control of the Secretary of Defense.

1. Supply operations.—The Defense Supply Agency was established on November 6, 1961, as a single supply agency under the Secretary of Defense to provide common supply and service support to the military departments in the continental United States. It manages inventories for nine materiel categories: fuel, food, clothing, medical, general, industrial, construction, automotive and electronics. This management involves the maintenance of catalogs, technical data, and inventory control of items representing over $2.7 billion of inventory. In addition, the agency performs central procurement, including preparation of specifications, contracting and contract administration, inspection, standardization, and industrial support measures for current procurement and mobilization.

Other agency functions include the operation of a distribution system for the receipt, storage, and issue of items in the nine materiel categories for the support of the military forces. Distribution of items of supply, including general mobilization reserve stocks, will be made by principal distribution depots, specialized support depots and direct supply support points. The agency will operate five supply depots, the Logistics Services Center, including the Surplus Bidders Control Office, the Surplus Sales Offices, and the Traffic Management Service.

The Defense Supply Agency is also responsible for the administration and supervision of the Department of Defense coordinated procurement programs, the Federal catalog program, the Defense materiel utilization program and the Defense surplus personal property disposal program.

2. Field operations.—This program activity includes the funds required for the support of the Armed Forces Information and Education activities of the Department of Defense; the Defense Communications Agency; the Defense Atomic Support Agency; the Defense Intelligence Agency and classified activities.

3. Interdepartmental activities.—Provision is made for the Department of Defense participation in and support of various interdepartmental activities, including the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity, the Interdepartmental Committee on Nutrition for National Defense, the President's Council on Youth Fitness and several classified activities.

4. Management.—This covers the civilian salaries and other necessary expenses of the Office of the Secretary of Defense and of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Organization. Costs for the Weapons Systems Evaluation Group have been transferred to Research, development, test, and evaluation, Defense agencies in 1964. Intradepartmental activities formerly reflected as a separate activity are now reflected herein. Except for these activity changes, costs for the Office of the Secretary of Defense will continue at substantially the same level in 1964 as in 1963. The Joint Chiefs of Staff Organization reflects a slight increase in 1964 to strengthen the operational control of the unified and specified commands and for special studies involving a number of classified high priority projects.

This appropriation provides for the operation of Army National Guard installations. The 1964 program provides support for 10½ Nike missile battalions in the air defense program, 3½ less than in 1963. Five battalions will be converted from Ajax to Hercules equipment during the year. The operating expenses of these battalions include the costs of 4,566 State civilian employees who are members of these units, and who maintain Nike missile sites in a state of operational readiness which will permit their immediate use in the event of an emergency.

The program provides for employment of 193 civilians in the National Guard Bureau, and 17,076 man years for other State civilian employees in the administration of the units, maintenance and repair of equipment, and operation of State and Federal field training camps.

The Alaska Communication System provides telegraph and long-distance telephone service in Alaska for Department of Defense activities, other agencies of the Government, and the general public. In 1962 and prior years, this appropriation financed the operation, maintenance, and improvement of the system. Responsibility for the Alaska Communication System was transferred to the Air Force by Department of Defense Reorganization Order, effective July 1, 1962. Accordingly, operation and maintenance funds for the Alaska Communication System are included in the 1963 and 1964 columns of the schedules for Operation and maintenance, Air Force.

The United States Court of Military Appeals serves as the court of last resort for all of the more serious court-martial convictions of military personnel. The number of cases docketed in 1962 totaled 965, with approximately the same number of cases anticipated in 1963 and 1964. The court released 114 opinions in 1962 and expects to publish a similar number during 1963 and 1964.

In compliance with the Uniform Code of Military Justice, the court is maintaining a current docket with the review completed, as of November 30, 1962, in 16,620 cases out of 16,733 cases filed since the Court's establishment in 1951—leaving a remainder of 113 under review.

PROCUREMENT

The procurement appropriations of the Department of Defense finance the acquisition of capital equipment, such as aircraft, missiles, ships, combat vehicles, weapons, and communications; major items for support of the capital equipment when it is in service; the industrial facilities necessary to produce that equipment; and major modification of older equipment where modernization can be provided without buying new equipment. The capital equipment financed by these appropriations is either procured from private contractors or produced in Government arsenals, shipyards, and plants.

For greater clarity and completeness the activity structures of the appropriations for Procurement of equipment and missiles, Army, and Procurement of aircraft and missiles, Navy, have been expanded, and aligned with those of the other procurement appropriations.

The 1964 procurement program of the Department of Defense continues large-scale production of new weapons in support of the basic military missions of the armed services. Special emphasis has been placed on providing equipment and supplies for support of sustained operations under conditions of conventional warfare. The growing military capability to meet conventional and limited war threats anywhere in the world is supported by continuing programs for increasing the mobility and firepower of ground forces, strengthening the close support capabilities of the tactical air forces, and modernization of the airlift forces. The nuclear deterrent force will be further improved by the construction of 6 additional Polaris submarines and the procurement of additional intercontinental ballistic missiles to supplement the long-range bomber force. ¹ Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are principally the dollar value of Mutual Security Military Sales to friendly foreign nations (5 U.S.C. 172d-1).

This appropriation provides major items of combat and support equipment for approved Army forces in performing their assigned mission to meet successfully both atomic and nonatomic requirements of limited and general war. It also provides for the procurement of certain major component parts as well as for production engineering, tooling, and facilities in support of current procurement, arsenal modernization and production facilities.

In 1964, the Army's direct budget plan totals $3,316 million, as compared to $2,644 million and $2,632 million for 1963 and 1962 respectively. As in previous years this plan will be financed from new appropriations, unobligated balances, reprogramming of previous appropriations and budget plans, and anticipated reimbursements.

The 1964 program is especially directed toward filling essential equipment requirements for the authorized forces and providing equipment and supplies for support of sustained combat operations. Modernization of older equipment and supplies is also continued to provide the increased capabilities attainable through the availability of improved weapons, equipment, and supplies.

1. Aircraft.—This activity includes fixed and rotary-wing aircraft, and initial provisioning repair parts. The 1964 program, in providing additional quantities of Iroquois and Chinook helicopters and the fixed wing Caribous and Mohawks, continues to emphasize aerial mobility in meeting the Army's need for battlefield surveillance, troop movement, medical evacuation, and rapid logistical support for combat forces.

2. Aircraft replenishment spares and spare parts.—This provides for peacetime replenishment, maintenance of pipeline, and mobilization reserves of aircraft spares and spare parts that are not carried in the Army stock fund.

3. Missiles.—This activity covers both surface-to-air and surface-to-surface missiles. In the former category, procurement of the Nike-Hercules air defense missile system and the Hawk missile system is continued. Initial procurement of the Mauler missile system is planned in 1964 to provide mobile armor and infantry elements a more effective defense against air attack.

The surface-to-surface missile program continues procurement of tactical missiles and ground equipment for the helicopter-transportable Pershing, a two-stage, solid propellant ballistic missile developed to provide long-range surface-to-surface fire in support of a field army. Production of the improved Honest John and Little John rockets, and of the solid-fueled Sergeant missile, is continued to equip units from division to field army level. Antitank missile programs are continued.

4. Missile spare parts.—This covers both initial provisioning and replenishment repair parts.

5. Weapons and combat vehicles.—This activity covers all ammunition-expending items except missile systems, whether fired by crews or individuals, and armored vehicles. The 1964 program continues procurement of the M-60 tank, self-propelled artillery weapons, the M-113 personnel carrier and T-114 reconnaissance vehicle, and the modernization of small arms. Included in the family of self-propelled artillery weapons are the 105-mm., 155-mm. and 8-inch versions. Typical of these is the 155-mm. self-propelled howitzer, an armored, full tracked vehicle with 360° traverse, which is both air transportable and amphibious. The Davy Crockett procurement is continued to provide the commanders of battle groups, and tank and armored cavalry squadrons, a tactical nuclear deterrent. The program also procures the self-propelled carrier for the 4.2-inch mortar.

6. Tactical and support vehicles.—These are the unarmored wheeled vehicles which provide surface mobility to the field forces and the worldwide logistical system. The 1964 program continues the replacement of the basic ¼ ton, ¾ ton, 2½ ton and 5 ton trucks, and provides increased procurements of heavy trailers and transporters.

7. Communications and electronics equipment.—This covers the procurement of modern communications and electronics equipment and ancillary items to support both tactical and strategic operations. The 1964 program procures additional FM series vehicular and man-packed communications sets of improved communications capability; improved airborne terrain surveillance and reconnaissance equipment, and air-to-ground communications equipment to increase the air mobility of the tactical forces; the worldwide strategic electronics and communications command and control systems equipments; cryptographic and countermeasure equipments and devices; and modification improvements for fire control and direction radar equipments and systems.

8. Other support equipment.—This covers the logistical equipment essential to the mobility and maintenance of Army combat forces in the field. The 1964 program continues procurement of amphibious lighters which are designed for rapid over the beach movement of supplies; rolling liquid transporters employed in moving petroleum products from sea and air terminals to consumption points and within front line areas; mobile assault bridges and ramps, crane shovels, tractors, materials handling equipment, and other items essential to the balanced support of the combat forces.

9. Ammunition.—This activity includes the Army's chemical, anti-personnel and conventional ammunition.

The 1964 program continues procurement of the 7.62 mm. NATO standard round, anti-tank munitions, ammunition for the new family of artillery weapons, additional quantities of artillery ammunition, mines, fuzes and other explosives.

10. Production-base support.—This activity provides industrial facilities needed for production of end items and components, for production engineering, and for pilot lines required for new industrial production items. It also provides for initial layaway of Government-owned plants and equipment at the time production is completed and where it has been established that the facilities will be required in the event of mobilization.

This appropriation provides for the procurement of new aircraft, guided missiles, and supporting equipment for the Navy and Marine Corps. In addition, it provides for necessary safety-of-flight and operational modification to inservice aircraft as well as the procurement of drones and major flight and maintenance simulators. The funds requested in 1964 provide for a procurement program of 681 aircraft compared with 788 aircraft for the 1963 program.

1. Combat aircraft.—This activity provides for the continued modernization of the combat aircraft forces. The 1964 program provides for continued procurement of an advanced tactical fighter, additional carrier-based attack and antisubmarine aircraft, carrier-based early warning and intercept control aircraft. Antisubmarine helicopters, and helicopters to support the Marine vertical assault mission are also included.

2. Airlift aircraft.—The Navy does not plan procurement of new airlift aircraft in 1964.

3. Trainer aircraft.—Provision is made in this activity for procurement of aircraft which are used as flying classrooms for instruction of students in modern navigational systems; aircraft for pilot instrument training; and a basic jet trainer to provide future jet pilots with fundamentals of jet flying, including formation tactics, navigation and instrument training, air-to-air gunnery and carrier qualification.

4. Other aircraft.—Procurement of utility helicopters for air-sea rescue and a transport type turboprop aircraft to be used in conjunction with the fleet ballistic missile submarines are included in the 1964 program for this activity.

5. Modification of aircraft.—This activity provides the costs of modifying inservice aircraft. Approximately two-thirds of the 1964 program costs provides the second increment in a 3-year program to modify heavy jet-attack aircraft for tactical reconnaissance.

6. Aircraft replenishment spares and spare parts.—This activity provides for the procurement of follow-on spares and spare parts for maintenance and repair of operating aircraft.

7. Aircraft support equipment and facilities.—This activity provides for aircraft industrial facilities, component improvement, and miscellaneous production costs.

8. Ballistic missiles.—This activity provides for procurement of the Polaris ballistic missile and related support equipment.

9. Other missiles.—Procurement of air-to-air Sparrow and Sidewinder missiles continues. Procurement of the Shrike and Bullpup air-to-surface missiles is being increased. The procurement of the ship-launched surface-to-air missiles, Tartar, Terrier, and Talos is being continued in phase with the related ship program. Procurement of a submarine-launched antisubmarine missile will be accelerated in 1964.

10. Modification of missiles.—This activity provides for the modification of missiles in inventory to include improvements determined to be necessary in the test and fleet training programs.

11. Missile spare parts.—The amounts provided in 1964 are for spare parts for the missiles, target drones, and other end-items included in the 1964 procurement program.

12. Missile support equipment and facilities.—This activity provides procurement in support of the missile procurement programs. It includes funds for missile industrial facilities, primarily the replacement of machine tools used for production; procurement of target drones used for training and testing of weapons systems; and the procurement of a drone antisubmarine helicopter to be increased significantly in 1964. Continued support of the navigational satellite program is also included.

¹ Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are derived principally from deductions from carriers on account of loss of or damage to material in transit (31 U.S.C. 489(a)).

This appropriation provides for the construction of ships and the conversion of existing ships, including all installed machinery, propulsion equipment, electronic and electrical equipment, guns, torpedo- and missile-launching systems and communications systems. It also provides for the procurement of long-lead-time items for ships which are to be authorized in the 1965 program.

This increment of Navy's long-range shipbuilding plan continues a modernization and replacement program designed to provide the fleets with modern balanced forces which can respond effectively to a wide variety of challenges in supporting our national policies.

In this budget, as in previous years, the program represents the full cost to complete all ships including costs associated with changes in ship characteristics and design which can be expected to affect costs during the long building period.

1. Polaris ships.—The 1964 program provides for the construction of six additional nuclear-powered Polaris submarines. When these are completed, 41 ballistic missile-firing submarines will be in the fleet. In addition, provision has been made for the construction of a tender and conversion of a cargo ship to support Polaris submarines.

2. Other warships.—Six nuclear-powered attack submarines will be added to the Navy's undersea strength. In addition, 19 destroyers will receive substantial modernization to extend the effective service life of these ships and to provide them with modern weapons and electronics equipment. Five destroyers and two frigates will be converted to guided missile destroyers to increase the firepower capability of these fleet ships.

3. Amphibious ships.—The amphibious capability of the Navy will be enhanced by the construction of one tank landing ship and four amphibious transports, each transport designed to carry helicopters and a large number of smaller landing craft for beach landing.

4. Mine warfare and patrol ships.—The antisubmarine warfare capabilities of the fleet will be strengthened by the construction of 10 escort ships and by the modernization of 1 mine countermeasures support ship. In addition, the 1964 program includes six motor gun boats to improve the Navy's counterinsurgency warfare capability.

5. Auxiliaries and craft.—A modern fleet requires equally modern support ships to provide provisions, stores, fuel and ammunition. Included in the 1964 program is the modernization of three fleet oilers and three ammunition resupply ships. Three research ships will be built to provide scientific data on sea conditions. One ship will be converted to provide the fleet with modern command and communications facilities.

This appropriation contains all major Navy procurement except aircraft and missile procurement and ship construction. A large portion of the 1964 program is devoted to procurement of equipment to modernize fleet units assigned to general purpose forces and to provide larger inventories of weapons for these forces. The growing strategic force of Polaris submarines will be given additional capability by the procurement of equipment to improve earlier submarines, and the high level of readiness now being experienced by Polaris forces will be continued by meeting requirements for replacement parts and components. Significant amounts are included for general support programs such as communications equipment and training devices vital to effective operation of all naval forces. Throughout the programs in this appropriation, increased emphasis will be placed on enhancing our anti-submarine capability by the procurement of improved weapons, detection devices, and other equipment.

1. Ships support equipment.—This activity finances electronic and other ship and marine equipment programed for general purpose naval forces and for general support. Primary effort is placed on a stepped up program for procurement of antisubmarine warfare equipment which will increase the operating capability of deployed forces and assist in detecting and tracking enemy missile carrying submarines. Procurement of a variety of equipments is continued providing unified, fleet and tactical commanders with modern communications and information display equipment for more timely and efficient direction of the forces under their command. The 1964 program for such command equipment will include the Navy tactical data system designed to provide commanders with ready intelligence and control for defense against air attack.

2. Weapons and support equipment.—Concentration on antisubmarine weapons and detection devices continues in 1964 with the total antisubmarine program at a higher level than 1963. Asroc weapons and both submarine and air launched torpedoes, including the high performance MK46 torpedo, will be procured. Our antisubmarine mine inventory will be considerably improved by the procurement of three types of mines, and additional quantities of aircraft dropped submarine detection buoys are programed. Also at a higher level is the procurement of attack weapons for general purpose forces. Existing inventories of bombs and ammunition will be increased and the introduction of the Walleye guided bomb is scheduled. In addition to weapons, this activity finances ordnance equipment such as fire control systems for ship modernization and aviation support equipment. Major emphasis will be placed on providing Marine air wings with capability for short takeoff and landing from specially prepared airfields in forward areas.

3. Command support equipment.—Major 1964 programs are procurement of equipment for communicating with Polaris submarines, newly developed communication and cryptographic equipment to be installed in naval command and control centers, accelerated modernization of the naval communication system to meet defense communication system standards, and improved electronic devices to be used in intelligence functions.

4. Civil engineering support equipment.—Construction, weight handling and transportation equipment, almost all of which is programed for use by Navy general purposes forces, is financed in this activity. Significant in the 1964 program are equipments for the naval construction battalions (Seabees) enhancing their ability for rapid deployment to combatant areas where they will construct airfields, docks and other facilities.

5. Supply support equipment.—This activity finances self-propelled materials handling equipment required for rapid movement of supplies.

6. Personnel support equipment.—Training aids and other training equipment is procured in this activity. The procurement of antisubmarine warfare trainers represents over half of the 1964 program.

This appropriation provides the Marine Corps with weapons, ammunition, and related equipments most of which are programed for use by Marine general purpose forces such as Marine divisions, Marine aircraft wings, and tank and amphibious tractor battalions. These equipments provide the military hardware or support for seizure and defense of advanced naval bases, limited war landing operations, and general land warfare using a variety of tactics such as amphibious and vertical envelopment movements.

The 1964 program emphasizes improved firepower and mobility with rapid communication and display of information for use by field commanders. Tank and artillery ammunition and Hawk missiles will provide increased fire and staying power against ground and low-level aircraft targets. The modernization of small arms is continued. Increased mobility will result from completion of the M-48 and M-67 tank modernization program, purchase of mechanical mules and replacement of worn-out vehicles. The dispersal of forces and speed of weapons and weapon carriers is met in the 1964 program by increased emphasis on a variety of modern electronic equipments for communications, intelligence, and control such as those providing usable and timely information for detection and control for defense against air attack.

Also financed in this appropriation are equipments for general support of the Marine Corps including administrative and logistic vehicles, and engineer and materials handling equipment.

This appropriation provides for the procurement of aircraft, spares, components, industrial production facilities, supporting aerospace ground equipment, and modifications of inservice aircraft of all types. Management of the overall aircraft program is facilitated by bringing together in a single appropriation all funds for the prime aircraft weapon system and related specialized ground handling and test equipment. The funds requested provide for a procurement program for 1964 of 964 aircraft compared to 918 aircraft for the 1963 program.

1. Combat aircraft.—This activity provides for the procurement of aircraft to continue modernization of the combat forces. Under current plans, the 1964 procurement of jet tankers will complete the equipping of these vital units which support both the strategic and tactical forces. Provision is made for substantial, additional numbers of the advanced, versatile, tactical fighter first procured by the Air Force in 1962. Also included is an increase in the reconnaissance version of this aircraft. These procurements will continue the planned program for modernizing the tactical forces and strengthening capabilities for close support of ground forces. These improved tactical aircraft will be capable of being rapidly deployed to deliver conventional as well as nuclear munitions.

2. Airlift aircraft.—This activity provides for the procurement of aircraft to continue modernization of airlift forces to provide greater mobility in the event of need. Included in the 1964 procurement is an increased number of the all jet transport on which procurement was initiated in 1963 and a follow-on quantity of the heavy turbo-prop aircraft with which the airlift capability has been improved in recent years.

3. Trainer aircraft.—These include jet training aircraft to meet current training requirements for high performance supersonic combat aircraft.

4. Other aircraft.—Airplanes and helicopters are procured for reconnaissance, missile base support and rescue operations for the combat forces.

5. Modification of inservice aircraft.—This activity provides for safety features and other technical improvements enabling the fleet to keep abreast of the latest state-of-the-art.

6. Replenishment spares and spare parts.—Follow-on spares and spare components are procured for maintenance support of the aircraft inventory and to provide the approved stockage objectives.

7. Other support.—This activity provides for industrial facilities, component improvements, common aerospace ground support equipment and other charges.

This appropriation provides for procurement of missiles, guided air rockets, missile propellants, and drones, launching and ground support equipment, installation and check-out of equipment preliminary to activation of operational squadrons, and expansion of industrial facilities.

1. Ballistic missiles.—This activity provides funds for intercontinental ballistic missile systems required for operational squadrons and training. The 1964 estimate completes procurement of the Titan II intercontinental ballistic missile program and continues the production, installation, and check-out of the Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missile program. The estimates also provide for training missiles and equipment for the operational Atlas and Titan I squadrons.

2. Other missiles.—Procurement of the Shrike anti-radiation missile and the Sparrow III B air-to-air missile is initiated. Procurement continues for the Falcon air-to-air missile, the Bullpup air-to-ground missile, a Bullpup trainer, and the Firebee target drone.

3. Modification of inservice missiles.—The principal amounts required in 1964 are for retrofit of the operational Atlas, Titan, and Minuteman ballistic missiles to incorporate changes determined in the testing program. Lesser amounts are required for other operational missiles involving safety of flight and inservice revealed deficiencies.

4. Spares support.—The amounts contained in 1964 provide for initial and replenishment spares support for Atlas, Titan, Minuteman, and other missiles.

5. Other support.—Funds are provided in this activity for missile propellants, minor facility expansion, non-recurring maintenance, preparation for shipment of tools and equipment, and machine tool modernization for industrial facilities under Air Force cognizance, and for other projects.

1. Munitions and associated equipment.—The 1964 estimate provides for a variety of military munitions to increase further the capability of the Air Force to meet air defense and tactical force requirements. gram, continue in 1964. Initial procurements of the new antitank bomb and rocket-fusing systems will start in 1964. Other items planned for continued procurement in 1964 include: air-to-air rocket motors, atomic ordnance components (except for fissionable materials), 20-mm. cartridges, targets, biological/chemical warfare items, and miscellaneous munitions components including supplies and materials.

2. Vehicular equipment.—The 1964 estimate provides for orderly replacement procurements for the vehicle fleet; for increased procurements of new fire trucks (initiated in 1963) and special-purpose vehicle programs; for continued procurement of materials handling equipment to include support of the mechanized air cargo handling system; for increased procurements of supplies and materials to support the increased special-purpose vehicle and fire truck programs; and for modification of equipment in support of year-round operation of the vehicular fleet.

3. Electronics and telecommunications equipment.—The 1964 estimate provides for (1) increased support of the worldwide Defense Communications System; (2) continued support for the ballistic missile early warning system, the semiautomatic ground environment system, the semiautomatic backup system, and the surveillance and passive detection radar programs for North American and overseas air defense; (3) continued procurement of data processing and display equipment for the command and control systems of the Strategic Air Command and the North American Air Defense Command; (4) procurement of communications cable for operational ballistic missile sites; (5) augmentation of other weapon supporting systems including electromagnetic intelligence gathering, weather observation and forecast, and ground navigational aids; (6) cryptographic equipment including teletype and data encryption and voice security; and (7) spare parts and end-item modifications. The reduction in the 1964 estimate from the 1963 level results primarily from the near completion of hardware procurement for the Strategic Air Command control system and the ballistic missile early warning system.

4. Other base maintenance and support equipment.—The 1964 estimate provides for procurement at normal support levels for operational units and bases, worldwide. Items planned for continued procurement in 1964 at about the 1963 level include: common test and calibration equipment; personal, safety and rescue equipment; photographic equipment; and maintenance and repair shop equipment. Planned 1964 procurements of photo-processing and interpretation equipment provide for an increased effort over the 1963 program to support reconnaissance missions.

1. Military sciences.—This activity includes basic research in the life, physical, and social sciences to add to the store of fundamental scientific knowledge; applied scientific research of importance for military purposes; operations research; and the development of new materials, components, and techniques. Among the many and widely varied problems to be investigated under this activity in 1964 are materials with physical properties superior to those presently available, higher performance rocket fuels, thermoelectric materials, chemical and biological agents, neurosensory phenomena, radio astronomy, ities engaged in the conduct of research, development, test, and evaluation. The amounts for development, test, and evaluation of Air Force aircraft and missiles which were carried in procurement appropriations in the past are now included in this title and the appropriate adjustments have been made to place the schedules on a comparable basis. The appropriation Research, development, test, and evaluation, Defense Agencies, combines the financing for the Advanced Research Projects Agency and other Defense Agencies such as the Defense Atomic Support Agency and the Defense Communications Agency. Research and development related to civil defense responsibilities of the Department of Defense is carried in the separate title, Civil Defense, in this chapter.

In recent years, a major portion of Defense funding for research and development has been devoted to the simultaneous development of many large strategic weapons systems. By 1964, however, development, test, and evaluation of most of these programs will have either been essentially completed or will be in the final and less expensive phases.

The new major systems development programs being initiated are fewer in number allowing for a significant growth from 1962 to 1964 in general programs of research, in development efforts concerned with more conventional weapons and military material, in programs concerned with techniques, components, and subsystems, as well as in research and development at Defense Department laboratories—all within about the same total overall amounts for research and development. Resources devoted to space programs increased substantially from 1962 to 1963 and this high level of funding is continued into 1964.

This reallocation of research, development, test, and evaluation funding to the support of a broader base of critical efforts, most of which are individually less expensive than the major strategic systems, permits a diversification and a significant expansion of effort even with a more modest increase in overall funding than has been necessary in the last few years.

The budget plans and estimated obligations under the appropriations in this title for the Army, Navy, Air Force, the Defense Agencies, and the Emergency Fund are summarized below (in millions of dollars):

oceanography, high-altitude phenomena, advanced radar and sonar techniques and more reliable electronic components. The entire program of the Advanced Research Projects Agency including Defender and the program of other Defense agencies are included in this activity. In addition to the amounts in this activity, basic and applied research performed by industrial contractors within overhead arrangements on some procurement contracts is funded in the procurement accounts. The principal support of such organizations as the Naval Research Laboratory, Rand Corporation, the Research Analysis Corporation and Human Resources Research Office is provided under this activity in addition to work performed by universities, nonprofit organizations, and industry.

2. Aircraft and related equipment.—This activity funds research, development, test, and evaluation related to airframes, engines, and other installed equipment. The 1964 program in this activity continues the development of a new high-performance multi-purpose fighter aircraft and of prototype vertical takeoff and landing transport aircraft. These aircraft are intended to meet the needs of all military services. In addition, the program includes work on other aircraft to improve the mobility and reconnaissance capabilities of the ground forces, such as test of heavy lift helicopter. Development of the B-70 mach 3 bomber prototypes will continue as well as the development of reconnaissance strike components for possible application to various aircraft. Research and test centers funded under this activity include the Naval Air Test Center.

3. Missiles and related equipment.—This activity provides for research, development, test, and evaluation of guided missiles of all types. A major research and development effort is being continued in 1964 in the field of defense against ballistic missiles, including test of the Nike-Zeus system and the initial development of a more advanced antiballistic missile system. In addition, an extensive research effort on other advanced missile defense techniques is funded by the Advanced Research Projects Agency within the activity "Military sciences," above. In the strategic field, development will continue on an improved version of the Minuteman solid propellant intercontinental ballistic missile, recently declared operational. Substantial effort will also continue on ballistic missile reentry systems to improve the ability of our intercontinental ballistic missiles to penetrate enemy defensive systems. Improvements in the Polaris system will also be continued with a high priority. Development of a new solid propellant medium-range ballistic missile system will be continued; both mobile land-based and sea-based versions are under consideration. Other significant missile development projects on which work will be continued in 1964 include the Typhon for fleet air defense, the Subroc antisubmarine system, the Mauler tactical surface-to-air missile, and an improved division support missile for land combat. In addition to funding industrial participation in the missile research and development program, this activity is the principal source of funds for the operation of three national missile ranges: the Atlantic, Pacific, and White Sands Missile Ranges; the Naval Ordnance Test Station and Applied Physics Laboratory of the Navy; and the research divisions under the Army Missile Command at Huntsville, Ala.

4. Military astronautics and related equipment.—This activity provides for the conduct of programs directed at the improvement of space technology for military purposes, and the investigation and development of specific military applications of space vehicles. During 1964, work will continue on the navigation satellite, on military communications satellite systems, and on improvements in satellite tracking, identification and interception capability. The development of Dyna-Soar, a manned orbital vehicle with capabilities for controlled reentry, will continue. The Titan III, an improved multipurpose space booster system utilizing both solid and storable liquid propellants, will be developed as a part of the national launch vehicle program. Research and development on very large solid fuel rocket boosters will continue, as well as supporting research and development in such areas as secondary power, guidance, navigation components, and payload equipment for space and satellite systems.

5. Ships, small craft, and related equipment.—This activity provides for research, development, test, and evaluation related to ships and small craft, except that funds are included in the regular shipbuilding appropriation for the construction of ships of advanced design and ships employed in the development, test, and evaluation of new components and techniques. Funds in this activity will provide in 1964 for the development of advanced propulsion systems, hydrofoils, communications, sonar, radar, and catapults and arresting gear. Included is an increased effort related to antisubmarine warfare to counter missile carrying and other modern submarines. Development will be initiated on an advanced destroyer designed especially for antisubmarine warfare. A significant part of the research and development effort of the Naval Electronics Laboratory and David Taylor Model Basin is funded under this activity.

6. Ordnance, combat vehicles, and related equipment.—The Army's program includes improved artillery, combat vehicles, mortars, antitank weapons, tank armament, and small arms. The 1964 Army program continues development and evaluation of vehicles and weapons with particular emphasis on requirements on remote areas. The 1964 Navy program continues to emphasize antisubmarine weapons and includes a new torpedo, mines, depth charges, bombs, rockets, and other types of ammunition. Landing and amphibious vehicles for the Marine Corps are also provided for in this activity. This activity provides the principal support of the Naval Ordnance Laboratory and of research, development, test, and evaluation activities at several Army arsenals.

7. Other equipment.—This activity provides for research, development, test, and evaluation of equipment not separately provided under other activities. Examples of the types of equipment in the three services: chemical and biological agent detection and protection, combat surveillance, and mapping and geodesy for the Army; detection and warning equipment, and amphibious warfare support equipment in the Navy; and photographic and personal equipment, and aircraft control and warning, missile detection and other electronic systems in the Air Force. Much of the support of the research and development effort of the Lincoln Laboratories and the Signal Research and Development Laboratory is provided under this activity by the Air Force and Army, respectively.

8. Programwide management and support.—For the Army and the Navy this activity provides for those costs of operation, management, and maintenance of research, development, and test facilities of the Department of Defense which are not distributed directly to the other budget activities, and for certain costs of central administration. This activity provides for the costs of operation, management and maintenance of all Air Force managed research, development, test and evaluation installations except the Atlantic Missile Range which is included under activity 3.

9. Emergency fund.—The emergency fund enables the Secretary of Defense to defray the cost of prompt exploitation of new developments and to provide for other unforeseen contingencies in the research, development, test, and evaluation programs.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

The direct military construction programs for the Armed Forces, both Regular and Reserve, shown in the individual schedules of this title are summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

	1962 actual	1963 estimate	1964 estimate
Regular Forces.....	921,624	1,144,287	1,151,000
Reserve Forces.....	67,594	46,302	42,000
Interservice activities.....	12,262	55,377	50,700
Total.....	1,001,480	1,245,966	1,243,700

Most of the appropriations required for the military construction accounts are dependent on the enactment of authorizing legislation. The details of this legislation have been completed and are being submitted to the Congress for early consideration.

1. Major construction.—This category provides for acquisition of land for and construction of military projects in the United States and overseas as authorized in currently effective military construction acts and the new authorization referred to above. These authorizations include construction projects as defined in Department of Defense Directive 7040.2 where the estimated cost of such construction exceeds $25 thousand per project. Under this category the major program elements proposed for 1964 are as follows:

Strategic retaliatory forces.—Facilities are to be constructed for additional hardened Minuteman missiles in an improved configuration. Funds also are included to provide improvements for greater safety and more reliability to the earlier ballistic missile systems, Atlas and Titan. In order to maintain on a sustained basis a maximum number of missiles at sea, facilities, including those necessary for overhaul and test, are proposed to support the Polaris system in both the Atlantic and Pacific. Facilities are also included to improve the effectiveness of the manned bombers, their weapons, and associated refueling aircraft.

Continental air and missile defense forces.—Structures which will provide improvements to the Nike Hercules air defense missile system are proposed, including facilities and modifications to provide the system with protection against radiation fallout. Facilities to accommodate and maintain greater survival dispersion for the interceptor aircraft, such as the F-101, F-102, and F-106, are provided as well as facilities for the continued improvement of the aircraft control and warning net. Construction of facilities to augment and improve the coastal detection, classification, and tracking of submarines is provided, along with facilities to detect, identify, and determine orbits of earth satellites.

General purpose forces.—Facilities for these elements will be constructed in the various overseas areas of assignment and in the United States at their home ports or bases. The facilities include runway extensions, hangars, maintenance shops, hardstands, ammunition storage, troop housing, and other structures peculiar to either the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Air Force units stationed at the particular installation. Facilities to support these conventional forces represent 22% of the direct, total construction program.

Sealift and airlift forces.—Additional operational and maintenance facilities will be provided to increase the effectiveness of the transport aircraft assigned to the Tactical Air Command and the Military Air Transport Command.

Reserve forces.—The facilities required for the training of the Reserve Forces include: armories and training centers, nonarmory facilities such as maintenance shops and warehouses; and aviation facilities such as airfield pavements, maintenance shops, and training buildings.

Research and development.—The research and development projects include general laboratory structures which house many separate but associated activities such as the laboratories proposed for the Guidance Control and Aeroballistic Missile Facility, Redstone Arsenal, Ala.; the Environmental Medicine Laboratory, Natick, Mass.; and the Structural Mechanics Laboratory, Carderock, Md. Other facilities in this grouping are unique structures in themselves, such as the vacuum telescope, Sacramento Peak, N. Mex., and the rocket research test stands and related facilities at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. Facilities for testing the mobile medium range ballistic missile system are provided and further work is proposed for the Titan III/Dynasoar launching complex at Cape Canaveral, Fla. Facilities are provided for the continued improvement of both the Atlantic and Pacific missile ranges which control and record our missile, satellite, and space shots.

General support.—Projects in this grouping cover operational and training facilities, communication facilities, maintenance and production facilities, supply facilities, hospital and medical facilities, administrative facilities, troop housing and community facilities, and utilities and ground improvements. These projects though important to the effective functioning of the armed services, are not related directly to any one particular force, or weapon system, and, in fact, serve as common support for any number of forces or systems. In addition to the above requirements of the military services, this grouping covers the construction needs of the following Defense agencies: Defense Atomic Support Agency, Defense Communications Agency, Defense Intelligence Agency, Defense Supply Agency, National Security Agency, and the Advanced Research Projects Agency.

2. Minor construction.—Provision is made for construction of permanent and temporary projects that are not otherwise authorized by law but which are determined to be urgently required and do not exceed $200 thousand per project for the Regular Forces, and $50 thousand per project for the Reserve Forces. Provision is made in the applicable operation and maintenance appropriations for construction projects as defined in Department of Defense Directive 7040.2 where the estimated cost of such construction is $25 thousand or less per project.

3. Planning.—This provides for necessary planning of military construction projects, including design, standards, criteria, studies, appraisals, and other related activities.

4. Supporting activities.—Provision is made for activities such as the defense access road program and minor land acquisitions.

Loran stations.—These funds are advanced to the Coast Guard for construction of loran stations in areas essential to the defense of the United States. Loran transmitting stations permit safe and effective operation of ships, submarines, and aircraft of the military services in all kinds of weather by an electronic system of navigation which provides continuous navigational positions by means of intersecting lines of position.

Construction, Alaska Communication System.—In accordance with a Department of Defense reorganization order, effective July 1, 1962, responsibility for operation and maintenance of the Alaska Communication System was transferred from the Secretary of the Army to the Secretary of the Air Force. Pursuant to this transfer of responsibility, transfer of $426 thousand of the unobligated balance of funds from the appropriation Construction, Alaska Communication System, Army to the appropriation Military construction, Air Force was approved under the provisions of section 407 of the National Security Act of 1947, as amended (5 U.S.C. 172f(a)), and Executive Order 10530, dated May 10, 1954. In view of these actions language is proposed which will close out the account.

FAMILY HOUSING

In the Military Construction Act of 1962, authority was provided to establish the Department of Defense family housing management account to improve administration of the military family housing program. The account was established as of July 1, 1962, and was funded by transfers of amounts appropriated for support of family housing activities for 1963 in the Military personnel; Operation and maintenance; Research, development, test, and evaluation; and Military construction appropriations. These transfers amounted to $596.9 million. In addition, the $89.4 million unobligated balance of the Wherry housing revolving fund and $15.1 million of unobligated funds available for family housing in the June 30, 1962, balances of the military construction appropriations, were transferred to the housing management account. Together with anticipated reimbursements in the amount of $5.2 million, the total amount available for support of the family housing program in 1963 is estimated at $706.6 million.

For the 1964 program, authority is being requested in the 1963 military construction authorization legislation to support the family housing program by the appropriation of $734.4 million directly to the Defense housing management account (Family housing, Defense). Appropriation authority of $250 million is proposed for construction of additional family housing units, to acquire additional Wherry housing, and to improve existing family housing units. Appropriation authority of $489.6 million is proposed to operate and maintain family housing and related facilities, to lease family housing units, and to amortize the indebtedness assumed under the Capehart, Wherry and surplus commodity housing programs.

1. Construction—a. Construction of new housing.—In addition to the construction of new family housing units and associated facilities, this includes related land acquisition and site preparation, and the initial outfitting of housing with fixtures and other equipments which are integral components thereof, including major appliances. Facilities associated with family housing units include roads, driveways, walks, and utility systems which primarily serve the family housing units, and community facilities which are integral to a housing area and are provided for use by the residents. Family housing requirements have increased substantially in recent years due to the increasing marital rate among career military personnel. Funds were appropriated in 1963 for construction of 7,500 units of new family housing. It is proposed to construct an additional 12,100 units in 1964.

b. Acquisition of Wherry housing.—This consists wholly of the acquisition of Wherry family housing units and related facilities as authorized (69 Stat. 652, as amended). Through the end of 1962, 72,771 units of such housing were acquired at a total cost of $650.3 million. The planned acquisition of 6,210 units in 1963 and 2,023 units in 1964 is expected to complete this program.

c. Construction improvements.—This provides for the construction necessary to bring inadequate public quarters up to the established standards. Provision is also made for improvements to Defense-owned family housing units, including acquired Wherry housing, by alteration and replacement. Conversion of existing facilities to family housing use is also included. It is planned to complete the rehabilitation necessary to bring all of the acquired Wherry housing up to public quarters standards by the end of 1964 at a cost of $41.7 million in 1963 and $6.4 million in 1964. Improvements to other family housing facilities are estimated to cost $10.4 million in 1963 and $18.8 million in 1964.

d. Advance planning and design.—Preliminary studies are made in connection with the development of additional family housing facilities, including surveys of community assets, studies for site adaptation and determination of type and design of units. Also included are working drawings, specifications and estimates, project planning reports and final design drawings of family housing construction projects. The funds provided in 1963 and requested in 1964 for these purposes include $1 million in each year to provide for the costs of preliminary studies and advance planning and design which are incurred on proposed construction projects which subsequently may not be included in approved construction programs.

e. Rental guarantee payments.—This consists wholly of the authorized (66 Stat. 622) payment of amounts to private sponsors of family housing projects built in foreign countries for use by Defense personnel. Such amounts become due under agreements to maintain a guaranteed 95% occupancy level for a specified number of years. Of the $1.2 million requested for 1964, $0.7 million is estimated as the amount required for payment to sponsors of projects where the guarantee of 95% occupancy may not be met. The remaining $0.5 million is required to provide for the 1964 increment of rental guarantees on such housing in Morocco which is expected to be vacated during that year.

f. Other expenses.—This consists of those costs of the family housing program under the Construction budget activity which cannot be included in the foregoing subactivities. In 1963 these costs were as follows: $3 million for the payment to the sponsor of certain Air Force family housing units in Spain under the agreement entered into for the occupancy of this housing; and $31 thousand for commercial title search and title insurance for the Capehart housing projects on which the mortgagee required such search and insurance. No requirements are anticipated under this subactivity in 1964.

2. Operation, maintenance, and debt payment—a. Operation.—This provides for the expense of operating military family housing facilities, including the provision of utilities and other direct supporting services. It provides also for the initial outfitting of public quarters with furniture and other personal property, including the maintenance and replacement of such furnishings. Operating expenses are estimated at $182.5 million in 1963 and $183.6 million in 1964. Also included is the expense of leasing housing for use as public quarters. The leasing of 7,462 units in 1963 is estimated at $12.4 million and 9,865 units in 1964 at $18.6 million.

b. Maintenance of real property.—This provides for the maintenance and repair of family housing units and related facilities and the roads, driveways, walks, utility systems, and grounds care associated with family housing projects; and the maintenance, repair and replacement of fixtures and other equipment which are integral components of a family housing unit, including major appliances. It also provides for those incidental alterations to family housing units for which the total expenses at each installation for such projects within a year do not exceed $250 for any one family unit in any case, and an average of $50 per family unit for each installation consisting of ten or more family units. Improvement projects beyond these limitations are provided for under the construction subactivity, Construction improvements. With respect to both operation and maintenance of real property, program costs increase in 1964 in direct relation to the increased number of family housing units expected to be operated and maintained:

Average number of units.....	357,165	365,043	370,418
Number of units at year-end.....	357,757	366,272	371,872

c. Debt payment.—Payments are made on the outstanding principal amounts of Capehart and Wherry housing mortgages, and for interest charges. Also included are $10 million for payments to the Commodity Credit Corporation in 1964 for a part of the debt due for foreign currencies utilized to construct family housing and related facilities in foreign countries. These currencies were made available for this purpose from the sale of surplus agricultural commodities to foreign countries. Miscellaneous expenses anticipated in connection with the Capehart mortgagor corporations required to be established pursuant to the authority to incur mortgage debt to build such housing are also included.

d. Mortgage insurance premiums.—This consists wholly of amounts required to pay premiums due on mortgage insurance provided by the Federal Housing Administration: (1) through the Armed Services Housing Mortgage Insurance Fund on Capehart and Wherry mortgages assumed by the Department of Defense; and (2) for mortgages assumed by active military personnel for housing purchased under the provisions of section 124, Public Law 83-560.

The Department of Defense is authorized (68 Stat. 1125, as amended by 70 Stat. 1017) to construct or otherwise acquire family housing for occupancy as public quarters and community facilities in foreign countries utilizing foreign currencies to a value not to exceed $250 million. The foreign currencies are acquired pursuant to the provisions of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (68 Stat. 454) or through other commodity transactions of the Commodity Credit Corporation. In addition, the Department is authorized to use appropriated funds for not to exceed 25% of the total cost of each family housing and community facilities project as may be necessary to supplement the foreign currencies to obtain the required facilities. The Department reimburses the Commodity Credit Corporation in a dollar amount equivalent to the value of the foreign currencies utilized. Provision for these payments is made in the program and financing schedule for Family housing, Defense, under the heading Debt payment, principal.

OVERSEAS RENTAL GUARANTEE MILITARY FAMILY HOUSING

The Department of Defense is authorized (66 Stat. 622) to guarantee rental payments to private sponsors of family housing projects built in foreign countries for use by Defense personnel. The guarantee may not exceed 95% of the scheduled rentals the sponsors would receive from full occupancy of the housing by Defense personnel over periods ranging from 5 to 10 years depending upon the length of time Defense expects to occupy the housing and the prospect for its eventual use by native populations. The amount of such guarantees outstanding at any time may not exceed $100 million. The housing is wholly owned by the private sponsors who build, operate, and maintain it in accordance with the terms of the rental guarantee agreements. Commanders of the military installations served by the housing projects are responsible for maintaining occupancy by installation personnel at the guaranteed 95% level.

The following schedule indicates the extent to which the rental guarantee authority has been used and the estimated reduction of the Government's contingent liability under these guarantees through 1964. Under this program, 5,538 housing units were built at 34 locations in France and Morocco. The guarantees have expired on 2,194 units, leaving 3,344 units under guarantee at the end of 1962. In 1964, guarantees will expire on an additional 300 units, and it is anticipated that the 700 units in Morocco will be vacated leaving guarantees outstanding at the end of 1964 on 2,344 units for which the remaining contingent liability is estimated at $1.6 million. Anticipated payments to honor guarantees are included in the program and financing schedule for Family housing, Defense, under Rental guarantee payments.

program costs for development and execution of a nationwide fallout shelter program are included under the research account. In 1962 all these functions were financed under the appropriation Civil defense, Department of Defense. However, this account includes associated programs for radiological detection and monitoring, warning and alerting the population, civil defense communications, damage assessment, donation of Federal surplus property, and assistance to State and local governments.

1. Warning and detection.—This program provides nationwide indoor and outdoor warning systems to alert the population of attack or impending natural disaster emergencies and the detection, evaluation and dissemination of radiological fallout data during an emergency. In 1962, contracts were placed for prototype signal generators on 8 selected power systems to provide instantaneous warning into homes, offices, and factories served by the electric power companies. 1963 funds will be applied to engineering surveys of electric power systems and the funds requested for 1964 will permit continuation of the surveys and procurement and installation of additional generating equipment. The existing outdoor warning system for the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area will be improved in 1964. Procurement of radiological fallout detection instruments will be continued. By the end of 1964, sufficient stocks will be available to completely equip two-thirds of the nationwide network of 150,000 monitoring stations, provide instrument kits to about 200,000 shelter areas, and issue individual dosimeters to 2,000,000 civil defense workers.

2. Emergency operations.—This program provides for the development of a high degree of readiness for civil defense emergency operations. This includes (a) maintenance of an emergency communications capability; (b) protected radio facilities to provide emergency instructions and public information; (c) damage assessment for preattack and postattack planning; (d) an education and training program stressing community and individual protective measures, shelter analysis, and protective construction; and (e) public information media including radio, films and general and technical publications. In 1964, shelter management and radiological monitoring training through university extension outlets will be accelerated to make use of community shelter areas marked in prior years.

3. Financial assistance to States.—This activity provides financial assistance to States for procurement of survival supplies, equipment and training; construction of protected emergency operating centers for State and local governments; and personnel and administrative expenses necessary to maintain civil defense capability at all governmental levels. The increased funds for 1964 will be devoted primarily to strengthening State and local staffs to permit them to keep pace with the increased responsibilities resulting from the expanded Federal programs.

4. Management.—In addition to administrative expenses, this provides for reimbursement for the services of other elements of the Department of Defense in administering the civil defense program.

1. Shelters.—The 1964 program provides for incorporation of shelters in the facilities of nonprofit institutions and in existing Federal structures, for the construction of protected regional centers for Federal emergency operations in the field, and for experimental shelter programs. New legislative authority is proposed for these activities. The program also provides for continued survey, marking and equipping of public fallout shelters.

2. Research and development.—Research studies are made to improve the civil defense program. These include studies stressing increased protective capability of shelters, improved shelter management procedures, economy of hardware, improved effectiveness of shelter support systems, developing plans for coping with a postattack environment, damage assessment, and social and psychological problems.

This fund was established in 1956 (70 Stat. 1112) to finance the acquisition and initial improvement of Wherry Act housing as authorized by section 404 of the Housing Amendments of 1955 (69 Stat. 652), as amended. The Military Construction Act of 1962 (76 Stat. 236) established the Defense family housing management account, repealed the authority underlying the Wherry housing fund, and directed the transfer of the unexpended balances of the fund into the new housing management account. The transfer was effected as of the beginning of 1963, and all subsequent activities formerly financed under the Wherry fund are now financed under the new management account, Family housing, Defense.

As of the end of 1962, 72,771 units of Wherry housing had been acquired at an acquisition cost of $650 million.

Initial improvements to bring 71,148 of those units up to standards for assignment as public quarters had been financed at a cost of $154 million as of that date. The total acquisition and improvement costs of $804 million was financed as follows (in thousands of dollars):

DEFENSE PRODUCTION GUARANTEES

Guarantees are given on loans made by public and private financing institutions by the Army, Navy, and Air Force to facilitate performance of defense production contracts. When necessary, loans may be purchased by the Government. Administrative expenses are financed from guarantee fees and interest on loans receivable. Funds in excess of guaranteed loan program requirements may be transferred to miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury. Net earnings are retained to purchase loans when required under guarantee commitments and to cover possible future losses (50 U.S.C. app. 2091).

This fund finances the central procurement of civil defense materials toward which contributions to the States are authorized on a matching fund basis. The fund is reimbursed for purchases from Office of Civil Defense appropriations and from funds provided by the States (65 Stat. 61).

It is anticipated that the increased emphasis initiated by the States and local governments during 1962 for civil defense will be further expanded in the coming years. It is expected that under this expanded program greater emphasis will be directed toward the establishment of emergency operating centers and the provisioning of these centers. Hence, this estimate reflects increased obligational requirements, since the civil defense procurement fund will be utilized for the central procurement of equipment and supplies necessary under these activities.

This fund finances inventories of consumable supplies, minor items of equipment, and repair parts throughout the Army depot supply system, at certain stations in the continental United States, and in most of the depots of the major overseas commands. Material is purchased and held at these locations for resale and for mobilization reserve (10 U.S.C. 2208).

Supply and financial operations of the fund are centrally directed and controlled by the Department of the Army. In the financial statements the 500,000 items under the fund are classified into 15 categories which are managed through the Army Materiel Command, the Surgeon General, and the Continental Army Command. In 1963, the fund was extended to include certain aircraft parts and missile and rocket parts, and the statements include estimates for these items. Reflected in 1963 is the extension of the fund to Korea and Okinawa for subsistence and clothing. The 1963 estimates also reflect a realignment whereby aircraft, missile, and rocket parts are now included in the stock fund and high cost repair parts are financed from Procurement of equipment and missiles, Army. With the exception of these high cost repair parts, the stock fund now finances the initial procurement of all centrally controlled supply items, repair parts, and minor equipment.

The change in capitalized inventories of $1,321.7 million in 1962 was due principally to decapitalization of single manager material categories to the Defense stock fund. The change projected for 1963 is a decrease of $18.7 million consisting of decreases of $454.5 million due to the realignment program mentioned above and transfers to the Defense stock fund, partially offset by increases of $435.8 million. The increases include $392.5 million in aircraft, missile, and rocket parts, and $27.6 million through extension of the stock fund to cover subsistence and clothing in Okinawa and Korea. The change projected for 1964 is a decrease of $104.3 million resulting primarily from anticipated transfers to the Defense stock fund. Changes by category are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Budget program.—Obligations of $2,551 million in 1962 included $749 million for single manager activities now financed under the Defense stock fund. Except for this, obligations declined by $48 million from 1962 to 1964, the net of $124 million in increases to cover aircraft, missile, and rocket parts offset by decreases of $80 million for augmentation of war reserves and $92 million for operating stocks.

Continued emphasis is being placed on maximum utilization of long-supply stocks and on conservative procurement of material in relation to sales requirements. Excluding the single managers, obligations for operating stocks were 5% greater than sales in 1962; for 1963 and 1964 obligations for operating stocks are forecast at 91% and 93% of sales, respectively.

The program includes procurement for augmentation of war reserve stocks of $130.3 million in 1962, $73.5 million in 1963, and $50 million in 1964. The budget program provides for year-end inventories as follows (in millions of dollars):

During the 3 years inventories are forecast to decline by $2,402 million. Of this, $1,445 million will result from decapitalizations, the net of transfers of items to the Defense stock fund partially offset by inclusion of aircraft, missile, and rocket parts in the fund. The remaining reduction of $957 million is the net of $365 million in sale of peacetime stocks without replacement and $875

Costs exceeded obligations by $87 million in 1962, and are forecast to exceed obligations by $400 million in 1963 and $98 million in 1964, a total of $585 million for the 3 years. The major factor in this connection is the $957 million operating decrease in inventory explained above. Partially offsetting this are changes of $349 million in unpaid undelivered orders and $23 million in advances and unapplied customer credits. The change in unpaid undelivered orders involves an increase of $189 million for the single managers while they were financed through this fund in the first half of 1962, and $160 million for other activities financed through the fund. The latter increase results from the fact that unpaid undelivered orders were at an unusually low point at the start of 1962, and from the addition in 1963 of aircraft and missile items for which lead times are relatively long.

Financing the budget program.—Funds for financing the budget program are derived from sales to authorized customers. Except for single managers, now financed under the Defense stock fund, sales are forecast to increase by $233 million from 1962 to 1964, attributable largely to the inclusion of aircraft parts and missile and rocket parts in the fund and to the extension of the fund to Okinawa and Korea for clothing and subsistence. Collections exceeded expenditures by $121.1 million in 1962 and are expected to exceed expenditures by $111 million in 1963 and $54 million in 1964. These net negative budget expenditures reflect the continued emphasis on purification of inventories and the selling of existing inventory without replacement in kind.

Transfers of $240 million and $200 million were made to Military personnel, Army, in 1962 and 1963, respectively, and it is proposed to transfer $50 million to that appropriation in 1964. Incident to the transfer of functions to the Defense Supply Agency, a transfer of $45 million was made to the Defense stock fund when it was created in 1962.

Operating results and financial condition.—The net loss was $359 million in 1962 and is forecast at $315 million and $19 million for 1963 and 1964, due to losses on disposal or donation of stocks in long supply.

Government equity at the end of 1964 is estimated at $2,043.2 million, consisting of $9,646.4 million in inventory and other assets capitalized, less $3,220.9 million in net cash withdrawals or transfers from the fund and $4,382.2 million deficit.

This fund, initially established in 1893, finances the procurement and maintenance of inventories of common-use material and supplies for resale and mobilization reserve (10 U.S.C. 2208). It includes items in all levels of shore-based inventories and in inventories of fleet issue ships and service force vessels afloat.

In 1962, inventories capitalized under the fund decreased $392 million, due principally to the implementation of the Defense Supply Agency. The estimates reflect changes in the inventory capitalized under each major supply category of the fund as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Total inventory is estimated to decrease by $453.2 million from the beginning of 1962 to the end of 1964, the result of $436.5 million in decapitalizations and $16.7 million in other changes. Sale or disposal of long-supply stocks are almost completely offset by increases in operating stocks necessary to support new equipment and higher sales levels. For the 3 years presented here, obligations exceed costs by $51.2 million. This is the net of a $70.9 million increase in unpaid undelivered orders (after adjustment for single-manager changes) to support higher sales and items with longer lead times, offset by the $16.7 million reduction in inventory mentioned above and $3 million in other changes.

Financing the budget program.—Funds for financing the budget program are derived from sales of material to authorized customers. Expenditures exceeded collections by $61 million in 1962, and are estimated to exceed collections by $40 million in 1963. Collections are estimated to exceed expenditures by $20 million in 1964. Transfers were made in 1962 to Military personnel, Navy, of $35 million, and Defense Stock Fund, $5 million. In 1963, $15 million will be transferred to the Marine Corps stock fund.

The single manager for industrial supplies was financed through this fund until transferred to the Defense Supply Agency in April 1962. Inventories were transferred to the Defense Supply Agency, and about $40 million in items then on order were delivered to that agency from procurement. Payment has been made from the Navy stock fund for these items, while sales and collections will be realized from the Defense stock fund. Accordingly, it is necessary in 1963 to transfer $40 million from the Defense stock fund under authority of 10 U.S.C. 126.

Department of Defense stock funds are authorized to incur obligations in anticipation of future year business (10 U.S.C. 2210(b)). Pursuant to this authority, contract authorization in the amount of $160.3 million is shown for 1962. This is necessary because the lead time on material to be procured is greater than the time required to fill and collect for customer orders. As indicated in the statements, the current assets available for 1963 and 1964 will provide adequate resources for fund operations.

Operating results and financial condition.—An operating loss of $38.4 million is estimated for 1963 and $5.4 million in 1964, to result from losses on disposal of material in long supply.

Government equity at June 30, 1964, is estimated at $1,486.6 million, consisting of $321.6 million in appropriations and cash transfers, $2,013 million from capitalization of inventory and other assets, less $848 million deficit.

This fund commenced operations on July 1, 1953, and finances the procurement and maintenance of inventory for resale and mobilization reserve (10 U.S.C. 2208). All inventories except individual clothing are in the United States.

Budget program.—The fund was extended in 1962 to include additional items of engineer, communication, and general property. In 1963 and 1964, inventories are being transferred to the newly established single managers for automotive supplies, construction supplies, and electronic supplies in the Defense Supply Agency. Estimates contemplate changes in capitalized inventory under each category as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Obligations are estimated to increase by $11.1 million from 1962 to 1964. The increase results from initial parts requirements for new items, increased sales, and mobilization reserve. The budget program provides for year-end inventories as follows (in millions of dollars):

During the 3 years shown herein, inventories are forecast to decrease $39.6 million. Of this reduction, $29.2 million results from losses on disposal of surplus, and $25.3 million, net, of inventory will be decapitalized, the result of transfers of $29.9 million to single managers, new capitalizations of $1.6 million and other receipts of $3.0 million.

Financing the budget program.—Funds for financing the budget program are derived from sales to authorized customers. Sales in 1964 are estimated to increase $19.2 million or approximately 12% over 1962, largely in new items and in clothing and textiles, fuel, and subsistence—commissary. Cash receipts are expected to be below expenditures by $17 million in 1963. This reflects the reduction in long supply stocks which can be sold without replacement, as a result of transfers to single managers. A transfer to Military personnel, Marine Corps of $11 million in 1962 was effected. Department of Defense stock funds are authorized to incur obligations in anticipation of future year business (67 Stat. 357). Pursuant to this authority, contract authorization in the amount of $8.3 million is shown for 1962. This is necessary because the production lead time on material required to be procured is greater than the time required to fill and collect for customer orders. In 1963 additional working capital of $15 million is to be transferred from the Navy stock fund.

Operating results and financial condition.—Net losses of $7.2 and $6.1 million are forecast from 1963 and 1964 operations, respectively. These result largely from the disposal of excess and surplus material.

This fund, established July 1, 1950, finances for 1964 the procurement of approximately 10,000 items for resale and maintenance of operating and war readiness stocks (10 U.S.C. 2208). These items are stocked and sold at approximately 1,000 outlets worldwide. The scope of operations decreases during this period due to the transfer of general supply items to the Defense Supply Agency and to Air Force general fund financing. The effect of these changes in capitalized inventory is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Budget program.—Obligations increase $59 million in 1963, reflecting higher sales as well as increased inventory procurement requirements. In 1964, obligations will decrease by $16 million, reflecting a drop in sales. The budget program provides for year-end inventories as follows (in millions of dollars):

The decrease of $43 million in 1963 is due primarily to the phase out of general supply items, partially offset by an increase in aviation fuels operating stocks. Additional fuels war readiness and commissary operating requirements will cause an $8 million increase in 1964.

Costs and obligations are nearly equal over the 3-year period because most of the inventory decrease is achieved through decapitalization.

Financing.—Funds for financing the budget program are derived from sales to authorized customers. The sales program increases $39 million in 1963, reflecting higher demands for all categories except general supplies, which is being decapitalized on a phased basis. The sales will decrease $13 million in 1964, due primarily to the elimination of general supplies and completion of initial sales of a new lightweight blue uniform. A transfer of $70 million to Military personnel, Air Force is shown in 1963. No financing adjustment is proposed for 1964 due to the balanced operating cash position. Payments will exceed collections in 1963 by $43 million due to accelerated payment procedures within the Department of Defense. In 1964, payments will again be higher than collections, by $5 million, due to procurement of war readiness and operating stocks.

Operating results.—The net loss of $4 million in 1962 resulted primarily from the effect of a standard price reduction in the fuels category. The net losses of $1 million in 1963 and $2 million in 1964 are primarily due to differences between fuels standard prices and estimated costs. The deficit of $191 million at June 30, 1964, is largely attributable to downward revision of standard prices for items initially capitalized and losses sustained in the disposal of excess and surplus stocks. Stabilization of the scope of operations and revised accounting procedures should result in future operations basically on a "break-even" basis.

This fund began operations (10 U.S.C. 2208) on January 1, 1962 with 4 commodity single managers—clothing, subsistence, medical, and general supplies. Two additional categories—industrial on April 1 and construction on May 1—were added during 1962. During the first half of 1963, 3 additional commodity single managers—petroleum, automotive, and electronics—began operation.

This fund finances the procurement and maintenance of wholesale inventories of common use material and supplies for resale and for mobilization reserve. Wholesale inventories are maintained at selected storage points in the continental United States for resale to military service retail stock funds and to consuming appropriations. To present a complete 1962 program for comparative purposes, the 1962 single manager activities under the Army and Navy stock funds are reflected in the 1962 column of the program and financing schedule and the inventory schedule. Capitalization by material category is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Budget program.—The increase in obligations in 1964 reflects the anticipated increase in volume of activity as additional Federal supply classes are capitalized into the fund from the military services, and the inclusion of a full year of activity for those classes capitalized in 1963. Total obligations include procurement for augmentation of mobilization reserves of $14.6 million in 1963 and $70 million in 1964.

This program reflects a drawdown of peacetime on hand and on order stocks in 1963 of $247.6 million, the difference between $1,565.1 million in obligations and $1,812.7 million in sales. The 1964 program reflects a drawdown of peacetime on hand and on order stocks of $182.4 million, with $1,813.4 million in obligations to support sales of $1,995.8 million.

² Balances at June 30, 1961, were carried under the "Navy stock fund", and are shown for comparability.

During 1962 inventories were reduced a net of $67.6 million, notwithstanding increases for newly capitalized items and the accelerated procurement required to support the troop augmentation plan. During 1963 and 1964 inventories are expected to increase by $402.2 million, the net of $974.5 million in capitalization and $572.3 million in reductions. The reductions include sales in excess of purchases of $460.8 million plus disposals, inventory adjustments, and price changes of $111.5 million.

Costs exceed obligations by $411.5 million in 1963 and 1964, largely because inventory is being sold or disposed of at a much faster rate than it is being ordered. The $411.5 million is the net of the $572.3 million inventory drawdown from operations mentioned above, offset by a buildup of unpaid undelivered orders of $160.8 million associated with new activities added to the fund and greater sales volumes.

Financing the budget program.—Funds for financing the budget program are derived from sales to authorized customers. Sales increase because of inclusion of additional classes of material, and placing the additions on a full year basis. Cash receipts will exceed disbursements by an estimated $331.8 million in 1963 and $182.6 million in 1964. Department of Defense stock funds are authorized to incur obligations in anticipation of future year business (10 U.S.C. 2210(b)). Pursuant to this authority, contract authorization in the amount of $156 million is shown for 1962. This is necessary because the production lead time on material required to be procured is greater than the time required to fill and collect for customer orders. As indicated in the statements, the current assets available for 1963 and 1964 will provide adequate resources for fund operations.

Transfers of $150 million and $25 million to Military personnel, Army and Military personnel, Navy, respectively, are reflected for 1963 in accordance with the appropriation act. In connection with the transfer of functions from the Army and Navy stock funds a total of $50 million was transferred to this fund in 1962, and $40 million will be transferred to the Navy stock fund in 1963. Transfers of $50 million to Military personnel, Army, $30 million to Military personnel, Navy, and $20 million to Military personnel, Air Force, are proposed for 1964.

Operating results and financial condition.—The statements indicate net losses of $24.2 million in 1962, $35.2 million in 1963, and $30.9 million in 1964, resulting largely from disposal of excess and surplus inventories. These losses are expected to be reduced in future years as the amount of surplus material in the supply system is reduced, and as improved pricing of items in the system is developed. Although generation of excess stocks is inevitable in supply operations, every effort is being made to minimize disposal losses and to provide for the recovery of such losses as do occur from customer accounts, in order to protect the integrity of the capital of the fund.

Government equity at June 30, 1964 is estimated at $2,459.6 million, consisting of net capitalized inventory of $2,724.6 million, less net working capital transferred out of $174.7 million and a deficit of $90.3 million.

This fund finances 22 industrial and commercial type activities on a reimbursable basis (10 U.S.C. 2208). All of these activities are under the direction of the Army Materiel Command except the Army Pictorial Center, an activity under the Chief Signal Officer.

Munitions command.—This command is responsible for the integrated commodity management of nuclear and nonnuclear ammunition, rocket and missile warhead sections, chemical, biological, and radiological material, propellants and explosives, pyrotechnics, fire control devices, and propellant actuated devices. The principal missions of its industrial facilities are: research, development, engineering, pilot manufacturing, testing and evaluation of materials, components and prototypes. Small program increases are anticipated in 1963 and 1964. A substantial portion of the increase in 1963 is in materials, supplies, and parts used in the chemical arsenals.

Missile command.—This command is responsible for weapons systems management, including research, development, procurement, production, supply and maintenance involved in the fielding of complete missile systems. Its industrial facilities are also utilized in the research, development, and production of atomic artillery shells, radar platforms, rocket and missile components. Program costs are expected to total about the same in 1963 and 1964 as in 1962.

Weapons command.—This command is responsible for integrated commodity management of weapons and combat vehicles, including research, design, development, pilot manufacturing and maintenance engineering. Its industrial facilities are utilized in the development and production of artillery, mortars, recoilless rifles, gun carriages, recoil mechanisms, rocket launchers, a variety of small arms and accessories. Slight increases in labor and material are anticipated in 1963 and 1964; otherwise, estimated cost is consistent with actual in 1962.

Transportation terminal activities.—The principal mission of these activities is to plan, regulate, and control the export and import movement of cargo and personnel through Army terminals on the Atlantic, Pacific, and Gulf Coasts. In addition, this program includes the cost of auxiliary port services and support of tenants and satellites. The small decrease in costs forecast in 1963 is based on a significant decrease in the movement of cargo. This is partly offset by an anticipated increase in passenger movement, attributable to the removal of restrictions on dependent travel and shortened tours for military personnel. The higher cost in 1964 includes funding for underutilized capacity and increased support of tenants and satellites. Estimated workload is as follows (in thousands):

Cargo in measurement tons.....	9,002	8,616	8,576
Passengers transhipped.....	501	827	660

Depot maintenance and manufacturing activities.—Activities under this program are organizational units of multiple-mission installations. Included in this program are two Quartermaster shops, two Engineer shops, a Signal shop, and a Transportation shop. These shops rebuild and restore unserviceable equipment. The program includes a clothing factory for ten months of 1962. This activity was transferred to the Defense Supply Agency, effective May 1, 1962, which accounts for the lower cost estimates in 1963 and 1964.

Proving grounds and laboratories.—These activities include a proving ground engaged primarily in research, test and evaluation of ordnance weapons, materials and equipment, a proving ground for testing and evaluating chemical agents, and a laboratory specializing in work on fuzes. The substantial increase in program forecasts for 1963 and 1964 is attributable to the Army reorganization, requiring the financing of auxiliary services for additional agencies.

Army pictorial center.—This installation produces, procures, processes, distributes and evaluates motion pictures, foreign language recordings, film strips, recordings, and television programs for use in military training, research, orientation, and education. The program will increase in 1963 because of a large carryover of unworked orders from 1962 but is expected to recede to the normal level of output in 1964.

Financing the budget program.—This program is financed from customer orders. These orders constitute valid obligations of customers' appropriations and authorize activities financed through the fund to purchase material and to begin production. Costs are charged initially to the working capital of the fund and are billed to customers as jobs are completed or periodically as work progresses. The estimates of orders to be received in 1963 and 1964 are derived from a combination of factors, the current unworked orders on hand, program guidance from major customers, and managerial experience. New orders in 1963 are estimated at $32 million less and in 1964 at $17 million less than in 1962. The balance of unworked and unbilled customers orders is expected to be reduced from $494 million in 1962 to $439 million in 1963 and to $395 million in 1964.

REVOLVING AND MANAGEMENT FUNDS—Con.

The net gain of $1.1 million, primarily in the Munitions and Missile Commands, reflects an operating variance resulting principally from the use of standard costs and the pricing of customer billings at predetermined rates. Revenue and expense are projected to break even in 1963 and 1964, with the objective of avoiding either augmentation or overcharging of customer appropriations.

Collections exceeded expenditures by $6.3 million in 1962, and are forecast to exceed expenditures by $73.8 million in 1964 with implementation of new policies for billing for work to be performed.

In 1962, $100 million was transferred to Military personnel, Army and $650 thousand to the Defense industrial fund. The Government equity at the end of 1964 is estimated at $70.6 million, composed of $56.9 million in reappropriations and $13.8 million in capitalized assets, less an accumulated operating loss of $0.1 million.

This fund finances 67 industrial and commercial type activities on a reimbursable basis (10 U.S.C. 2208).

Budget program.—The Navy Industrial Fund was extended to eight additional activities during the latter part of 1962 and the first few months of 1963. The overhaul and repair departments at Alameda and San Diego, Calif., and the public works center at Guam, Mariana Islands, were chartered during March and April 1962. During the period July 1 through November 1, 1962, the overhaul and repair departments at Norfolk, Va.; Cherry Point, N.C.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Pensacola, Fla.; and the public works center at Subic Bay, Philippine Islands, were chartered under the fund. With the exception of the public works center at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, the Navy's immediate plans for the extension of the industrial fund are completed. While these eight additional activities were added to the program, the fund was withdrawn from the Naval Weapons Plant, Washington, D.C., the Marine Corps Clothing and Equipment Factory, Philadelphia, Pa., and two New York printing plants operating under the fund were consolidated. The net addition of five activities has increased the value of goods and services produced by activities under this program to approximately $2 billion a year.

Printing.—There are 30 printing plants, 6 of which are overseas, included in this program. These plants provide printing services at the seat of Government and throughout the field establishment. During 1962 the branch plant, located at Brooklyn, N.Y., was consolidated with the main plant in New York City. The increase in the printing program workload is generally related to the overall military program, and to the increased workload at the Philadelphia, Pa. plant to meet the printing requirements of the Defense Industrial Supply Center.

Ordnance.—With the closing of the Naval Weapons Plant, this program includes eight major activities engaged in the production of missile launchers, torpedoes, avionics equipment, guns and mounts, propellants, and other items of ordnance and ammunition. The cost of goods and services produced in 1963 is expected to exceed that of 1962 by $11.7 million, primarily as a result of the completion of torpedoes at Naval Ordnance Plant, Forest Park, which were ordered in 1962.

Shipyards.—The shipyard program includes 11 shipyards and 1 ship repair facility engaged in the construction, overhaul, repair and alteration of active and reserve fleet vessels. The shipyard workload for 1963 will be gradually reduced, from the heavy workload experienced during the second half of 1962, to a level which will provide for implementation of the congressional restriction in the 1963 Department of Defense Appropriation Act requiring placement of a minimum of 35% of the Navy repair, alteration, and conversion work in private shipyards. This reduction in workload will require approximately 2% reductions in naval shipyard employment during the first and second quarter of 1963. During 1964 the shipyard workload and employment is expected to continue at approximately the 1963 level.

Military Sea Transportation Service.—This organization provides ocean transportation of dry cargo, passenger, and petroleum products, and provides the ocean platforms for scientific and other special projects. The estimates include the costs of operating Government-owned ships and the procurement of commercial augmentation. The cargo and petroleum workload for 1962 was abnormally high as a result of increased military activity. The volume of business for 1964 reflects increases in passenger transportation and other categories of shipping. A summary of workload and costs is provided in the following table (dollars in thousands):

Marine clothing and equipment.—Effective August 1, 1962, the management of this factory was transferred to the Defense Supply Agency (Defense industrial fund) with unexpended funds in the amount of $921 thousand.

Research.—This program includes the Naval Research Laboratory and the David Taylor Model Basin, both in the Washington, D.C. area, and the Naval Ordnance Laboratory, Corona, Calif. These activities provide Navy inhouse research capability into the physical sciences, the shapes and forms of naval vessels, and other ship design problems, and into guided missile fuzes. The slight increase in the workload assigned to these activities continues the trend of the last several years, and is reflected in the estimates of the three activities.

Base services.—With the addition of the public works centers at Guam and Subic Bay, this program includes six activities engaged in providing utility, maintenance, custodial, and transportation services for customers in their geographic areas. The increase in the workload for this program is directly related to the two activities added during 1962 and 1963.

Aircraft maintenance.—During 1962 and 1963 this program increased from one to seven activities. These activities overhaul and repair aircraft and missiles, and manufacture aircraft parts and assemblies. The substantial increase reflected for 1963 relates primarily to the addition of the six activities to the Navy Industrial Fund program. The workload for these activities was abnormally high during 1962 as a result of the accelerated rework program under the third amendment defense buildup. The estimates for 1964 indicate higher workload as a result of customer requirements for aircraft and engine rework and repairable material.

Financing the budget program.—This program is financed by orders citing the customers' appropriations. Costs are initially financed by the working capital of the fund and subsequently billed to the customers' appropriations by periodic progress payments or upon completion of the work. During 1962 customer orders placed at the ordnance plants, shipyards, MSTs and aircraft maintenance activities were abnormally high as a result of the military buildup and related events. The 1963 and 1964 customer orders for these activities are expected to return to more normal levels. In addition, the shipyard orders reflect the assignment of 35% of the Navy repair, alteration, and conversion work to private shipyards. The increase in orders for the base service and aircraft maintenance activities results primarily from the work to be performed by the additional activities chartered under the Navy industrial fund during 1962 and 1963.

Operating results and financial condition.—The following table shows 1962 net revenue and expense by activity (in thousands of dollars):

	Revenue	Expense	Gain or loss (-)

Retained earnings decreased $1.5 million in 1962, the net result of the $2.6 million operating loss being offset, in part, by prior year revenue, expense, and inventory adjustments. During 1962 expenditures exceeded collections by $20.5 million primarily as a result of a lag in the collection of accounts receivable. Expenditures are expected to exceed collections in 1963 by $0.4 million, and in 1964 collections are expected to exceed expenditures by $144 million with implementation of new policies for billing for work to be performed. During 1962, $2 million was transferred to Military personnel, Navy; during 1963, $921 thousand has been transferred to the Defense industrial fund, and $20 million is planned to be transferred to Shipbuilding and conversion, Navy. In 1964, a transfer of $90 million to Military personnel, Navy, is proposed.

The significant decrease, between 1961 and 1962, in work in process and progress billings results from a change in the method of reporting shipyard work in process. The scope of the customer orders issued to the naval shipyards for construction and conversion type of work extends beyond the completion of the ship to include essential post delivery work, and these orders were held in work in process until all work was completed. This method of reporting has been revised and the cost of completed ships will not be included in work in process until the post delivery work has been accomplished. Government investment on June 30, 1964, is expected to decrease to $165 million representing $190 million in reappropriations and $25.3 million in retained earnings, offset, in part, by $50.7 million representing the excess of liabilities assumed over assets capitalized. Activity allocations on June 30, 1963 and 1964, are estimated at $186 million, with $4.4 million held available at the total corpus level as a modest reserve for emergency, short term requirements for additional working capital. In order to extend the Navy Industrial Fund program without an additional appropriation, cash allocated to the then existing activities was reduced by $27 million and reallocated to the new activities.

This fund finances industrial and commercial type activities on a reimbursable basis (10 U.S.C. 2208).

Budget program—Printing and duplicating service.—There are nine plants financed under this program. These plants provide area support to the Air Force and other military services on a reimbursable basis. Production in 1962 was 2.3 billion printing units and is estimated to increase to 2.4 billion in 1963 and 1964. The increased production is due to increased requirements of consumer appropriations and increased productivity per press unit due to upgrading of equipment and production techniques.

Laundry and dry cleaning service.—At June 30, 1962, there were 41 plants operating under this fund. Two plants will be added during 1963, with no further changes projected for 1964. Total production in 1964 is estimated at 108 million pieces of laundry and dry cleaning as compared with 105.8 million for 1963 and 101.9 million in 1962.

Military Air Transport Service.—The airlift service portion of the Military Air Transport Service was included under this fund on July 1, 1958. The size of MATS and the extent and nature of its operations are keyed to Joint Chiefs of Staff approved military wartime airlift requirements. These requirements are either critical or civil eligible. Because of their nature or the nature of the mission to be supported, the critical or hard core requirements must move in military operated aircraft. The civil eligible requirements can move in either military or civil operated aircraft.

To have the capability to surge to meet wartime airlift requirements, the military airlift aircraft must be exercised appropriately during peacetime. The peacetime airlift capability so produced is used in the interest of economy in meeting peacetime airlift needs of the Department of Defense. Military aircraft are used to provide air evacuation of patients; special air missions; training of airborne troops; and, as augmented by commercial aircraft, common-use airlift of passengers, cargo, and mail. Airlift service resources and workload are as follows:

Financing the budget program.—This program is financed by customer orders for services. These orders constitute valid obligations of the ordering appropriations and authorize activities financed through the fund to provide services requested. Costs are charged initially to the working capital of the fund and are billed to customers on the basis of established tariff rates for services provided.

Operating results and financial condition.—For 1962 revenues exceeded expenses by $1.1 million, mainly as a result of the operation of the MATS airlift service. Retained earnings increased an additional $3 million in 1962 as a result of adjustments of prior year revenues and expenses. Revenue is expected to increase over the 1962 level in both 1963 and 1964 due to anticipated increases in requirements for airlift service.

Collections exceeded expenditures by $16.8 million in 1962 due to an increase in the level of operations over the previous year as well as an increase in accounts payable. It is estimated that collections will exceed expenditures by $3.5 million in 1963 and $1.2 million in 1964.

Employee annual leave accruals, included in the statement as a current liability, were $2 million at June 30, 1962. Government investment is estimated at $75.7 million at June 30, 1964, consisting of $71.0 million in reappropriations and transfers and $5.6 million in retained earnings less $0.9 million representing the excess of liabilities assumed over assets capitalized.

Operations began under this fund in May 1962 (10 U.S.C. 2208). Two activities previously financed from the Army and Navy industrial funds, engaged in manufacture, modification and alteration of clothing and textile items, were transferred to the Defense supply agency, and are now operated as a single activity. The activity produces items required on short notice, in small lots, or to special measurement, or under other conditions which make procurement from commercial sources impractical or undesirable. The factory also serves as a pilot production plant to test design specifications and production methods, and provides a part of the production base for industrial mobilization.

Financing the budget program.—This program is financed from customer orders of which 95% are from the Defense stock fund. Annual sales are estimated at $11.1 and $11 million, respectively, in 1963 and 1964, a reduction of about $2 million from the previous production rates of the two separate factories. This reduction, combined with anticipated savings through consolidation of the former Army and Marine Corps factories, results in a total reduction of about 500 people and $2 million in operating costs from levels previously planned.

Operating results and financial condition.—The net loss of $35 thousand for the first two months of operation in 1962 is forecast to be recovered in 1963. The reduction in costs in 1964 reflects the planned reduction in personnel from the peak reached during 1963. Government investment of over $2 million at the end of 1962 results from transfer of the activity Treasury balance from the Army industrial fund and certain other Army and Navy assets, less liabilities assumed. This investment is increased to nearly $3 million in 1963 by transfer of the activity Treasury balance in the Navy industrial fund and the remainder of the materials and supplies, less accrued leave liability assumed.

This appropriation provides funds for the operation and maintenance of the national cemetery system and for the procurement and supply of headstones and markers for graves of eligible persons buried in national and private cemeteries. The workload and program requirements increase substantially each year.

1. Operation and maintenance.—The national cemetery system consists of 118 activities located in 33 States, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia. Included are 85 national cemeteries and 33 miscellaneous burial plots and monument sites. A total of 37,000 interments were made in 1962; 39,700 are estimated for 1963 and 42,550 projected for 1964. There will be 2,216 developed acres to be maintained in 1964. Funds are required for 759 man-years of cemetery labor, for contractual services for maintenance of cemetery installations; and for necessary operating supplies and equipment.

2. Construction.—Provision is made for 11 projects, including 1 gravesite development project. An amount is also included for engineering investigations and preparation of plans for future requirements.

3. Headstone procurement.—The basis of the 1964 program is a 5.6% increase in applications.

1. Surveys.—Navigation and flood control studies are made to determine the need and economic justification for proposed development of water and related land resources. A total of 25 navigation and flood control studies will be initiated during 1964 and 118 studies will be completed. Beach erosion control studies are undertaken to determine the need for shore protection and remedial measures at specific localities. Beach erosion studies will be started at 7 locations and 6 studies will be completed in 1964.

Special studies are made to resolve unique or especially complex water resources problems. The special studies of coastal hurricane protection, Great Lakes water levels, and the San Francisco Bay Area, are expected to be completed in 1964. Special studies of pumped storage on the Arkansas River and hurricane protection for the Texas coast will be started.

Comprehensive river basin planning provides for broad consideration of water and related land resources needs of river basins. Comprehensive studies will be initiated in the following basins:

- | | |
|--------------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| 2. Big Muddy River, Ill. | 9. Sabine River, Tex. |

Surveys and studies are made in coordination with Federal, State, and local agencies and interests, and give appropriate consideration to present and future requirements for all beneficial uses of water and related land resources, including navigation, flood control, water supply, irrigation, water quality control, power, recreation, and fish and wildlife conservation. Increased reliance is being placed on comprehensive river basin studies to develop plans for meeting these requirements.

2. Collection and study of basic data.—Funds are transferred to the Geological Survey for installation, operation, and maintenance of stream gaging stations; to the Weather Bureau for hydrometeorological studies and precipitation stations; and to the Fish and Wildlife Service for pre-authorization studies of the effects of proposed projects upon fish and wildlife. The Corps of Engineers participates on a number of engineering and control boards that study and control international streams mutually affecting the United States and Canada. Information on floods, potential flood damages, and general criteria for guidance in the use of flood plain areas is made available to States and local governmental agencies upon their request.

3. Research and development.—General beach erosion development studies deal with physical phenomena, techniques, basic principles, and remedial or control measures related to shore protection and improvement. The results of these studies are disseminated to other interested Federal, State, and local agencies and individuals.

Hydrologic studies include investigations of storms, rainfall, streamflow, sedimentation, and other phenomena to provide basic data used in the design, construction, and operation of water control structures.

Engineering studies are made to improve procedures for analysis of hydrologic and engineering data, refine design methods, develop better materials and practices for the construction and maintenance of hydraulic structures, and improve procedures used in formulating river basin plans for water resources development. Funds are also provided for operation of the research center at the Waterways Experiment Station, Vicksburg, Miss.

Construction of the Mississippi basin model at the Waterways Experiment Station will continue. The Mississippi River comprehensive study will be carried out on completed portions of the basin model to improve operation of the reservoir system in the Mississippi River basin and to study potential flood levels on the lower Mississippi River.

Nuclear explosives studies for civil construction are carried out as part of a joint research program with the Atomic Energy Commission, with the ultimate objective of developing an engineering capability to use nuclear explosives in construction of public works projects. The Corps of Engineers has primary responsibility for chemical explosive experiments and development of engineering, construction, and cost data.

The requested appropriation of $817 million represents an increase of $25 million compared with the amount appropriated for 1963, and an increase of $93 million compared with 1962. About 71% of the requested appropriation will be applied to 50 major projects in amounts of $5 million or more each.

The monetary authorization available for appropriation after 1964 for projects in this program amounts to $5,264 million. The projects shown include a number which are parts of approved comprehensive basin plans for which full monetary authorizations for construction are not yet available. The status of the overall construction program, excluding projects classified as inactive or deferred, but including projects completed in prior years, is summarized in the following table:

NUMBER AND ESTIMATED COST OF ACTIVE AUTHORIZED PROJECTS

² Program total, before undistributed reduction based on anticipated delays and savings: Actual appropriation request is $786.2 million.

1. Advance engineering and design.—Design studies establish project features and cost estimates required for preparation of contract plans. The funds requested will bring designs and plans for a number of high priority projects to the stage where they will be ready for construction, and will permit continuation or initiation of planning on other needed projects, and the restudy of certain deferred projects.

2. Navigation projects.—This activity includes construction of locks, dams, and canals, and improvement of channels and harbors by dredging and by construction of breakwaters, jetties, and dikes. Provision is also made for the construction of small navigation projects not specifically authorized by Congress.

With the funds requested, work will be continued in 1964 on 46 channel and harbor projects, of which 12 will be completed, and on 13 lock, dam, and canal projects. Construction will be initiated on 7 channel and harbor and 1 lock and dam projects or project modifications as follows:

CHANNEL AND HARBOR PROJECTS

1. Canaveral Harbor, Fla.
2. Savannah Harbor, Ga.
3. Calumet River and Harbor, Ill. and Ind.—1962 act.
4. Searsport Harbor, Maine¹
5. Buttermilk Channel, N.Y.
6. Columbia and Lower Willamette Rivers, 35 and 40 ft. channels, Oreg. and Wash.
7. Port Townsend, breakwater and mooring basin, Wash.¹

LOCKS AND DAMS PROJECTS

1. Racine Locks and Dam, Ohio and W. Va.

¹ To be completed with funds recommended for 1964.

3. Alteration of bridges.—Obstructive bridges over navigable waterways are altered under arrangements that provide for apportionment of the costs of alteration between the United States and the bridge owners. The funds requested will finance the Federal share of the cost of 1 continuing and 1 new bridge alteration project in 1964.

Existing law provides for Federal payment of 50% of the cost of beach erosion control works for the protection of non-Federal publicly owned or publicly used shores, and up to 70% of the cost of protection of State and other publicly owned shore parks and conservation areas that meet certain criteria. Provision is also made for small beach erosion control projects not requiring specific congressional authorization.

Construction will be initiated on the second phase of the Fire Island Inlet to Jones Inlet, N.Y., project and reimbursements will be made to compensate local interests on 5 projects, including 3 for which reimbursements will be made for the start or resumption of work. These 3 projects are:

1. Ventura-Pierpont Area, Calif.
2. Silver Beach to Cedar Beach, Conn.
3. Plymouth Town Beach, Mass.

7. Recreation facilities, completed projects.—Additional public use facilities will be provided at 70 completed projects to accommodate a rapidly increasing number of visitors.

8. Small authorized projects.—The Federal Government constructs or assists in the construction of authorized channel and harbor, shore protection, and flood control projects, each of which has a total estimated Federal cost of $400 thousand or less.

9. Fish and Wildlife Coordination Act studies.—This program provides for detailed studies and reports by the Fish and Wildlife Service to determine the effects on fish and wildlife resources of water-control projects of the Corps of Engineers.

10. Rehabilitation.—Rehabilitation work is undertaken on existing projects or parts of projects that have deteriorated to the extent that their usefulness has been impaired. Repair of breakwaters, revetments, and piers will be carried out on 29 navigation projects in 1964 under major rehabilitation. Minor rehabilitation, where the total cost of each item is $400,000 or less, will be accomplished on 11 navigation projects.

The Corps of Engineers—Civil is responsible for the flood control program for the lower Mississippi Valley from Cape Girardeau, Mo., to the Gulf of Mexico, including the main alluvial stream, the basins of the St. Francis and White, lower Arkansas, Yazoo, Tensas, and Atchafalaya Rivers, and Bayou Lafourche, and the alluvial lands around Lake Pontchartrain. The adopted plan calls for raising and strengthening about 1,600 miles of existing levees along the main river, for enlarging or constructing some 1,700 miles of levees on tributaries and in side basins, for channel improvement and bank stabilization on the main river, for dredging of the main river to provide a navigation channel 12 feet deep and 300 feet wide from Baton Rouge, La., to Cairo, Ill., and for five flood-detention reservoirs on minor tributaries.

The following tabulation sets forth the program for each activity:

The fund provides for the acquisition, operation and maintenance of floating and land-based plant and equipment used in civil works functions; for temporary financing of services finally chargeable to civil works appropriations and for the furnishing of facilities and services for the military functions of the Department of the Army and other governmental agencies and private persons (67 Stat. 199).

Budget program—Operating costs.—Operating costs are expected to remain at about the same level in 1963 and 1964.

Capital outlay.—Land and structures includes replacement and improvement costs of buildings, facilities and related land. Outlay for land and structures includes $284 thousand in 1962 and $750 thousand in 1963 for replacement of buildings at the Waterways Experiment Station, Vicksburg, Mississippi, which were destroyed by fire in October 1960. Dredges and other floating plant include replacement and improvement costs for dredges and dredging equipment and such other vessels as tugs, tenders and towboats. Outlay for dredges includes costs of $1.5 million in 1963 and $2.2 million in 1964 for the conversion of dredges Comber and Goethals to direct pump-out. Designs for the hopper dredge McFarland to replace the hopper dredge Mackenzie, a shallow draft dredge, and the modification and repowering of the pipeline dredge Multnomah are to be completed in 1963. Land-based equipment includes replacement and improvement costs of transportation equipment, construction equipment and fixed land equipment such as shop tools and fixed power driven equipment.

Financing.—Operations are financed by reimbursement or advances from the appropriations or individuals who utilize the services or facilities, at rates to cover all operating costs.

Operating results and financial condition.—Net income amounted to $513 thousand in 1962, thereby increasing retained earnings to $641 thousand. Retained earnings are estimated to be reduced to about $500 thousand at the end of 1963 and remain at this level in 1964.

The initial capital of the fund was provided by assumption of the assets, liabilities and obligations of the plant accounts, as carried on the records of the Corps of Engineers—Civil on June 30, 1953, and by an appropriation from the general fund of $100. Total capital of the fund amounted to $121.3 million at June 30, 1962. It is limited to $140 million (67 Stat. 199). The net increase of $1,166 thousand in the capital of the fund during 1962 resulted from the donation of assets valued at $1,243 thousand and the assumption of liability, in the amount of $77 thousand, for accrued annual leave of civilian employees of the Cold Regions Research and Engineering Laboratory.

Consolidated summary of personnel.—The revolving fund is used to finance initially all payrolls of the Corps of Engineers—Civil.

The table which follows shows the distribution of personnel and salary costs to appropriations of the Corps of Engineers and to other accounts. Direct obligations cover services of employees working full time at project sites. Indirect obligations cover personnel charges for services provided through the revolving fund.

This appropriation supports the objective of the act of July 12, 1960, as amended, to provide for the promotion of economic and social development in the Ryukyu Islands, and finances the administration of these islands by the United States, which exercises jurisdiction pursuant to the Treaty of Peace with Japan. Executive Order 10713 of June 5, 1957, as amended, establishes under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Defense a civil administration of the Ryukyu Islands to execute the administrative, legislative, and jurisdictional powers reposed in the United States. To protect the security of the United States and of the free world, the United States will continue responsibility for the administration of the Ryukyu Islands as long as conditions of threat and tension in the Far East require the maintenance of military bases in these islands.

2. Aid to Ryukyuan economy.—Provision is made for observation and study of democratic procedures by Ryukyuan leaders through visits to the United States; advanced study by Ryukyuan students in the United States; vocational and technical training of Ryukyuan in other Far East areas; technical assistance and education, and industrial development programs within the Ryukyu Islands; and transportation of donated welfare goods.

Grants are made to supplement revenues of the local government in meeting costs of extraordinary public safety and public health services for the benefit of U.S. Forces and as contributions toward the costs of government projects. Grants were $5 million in 1962; $6.5 million in 1963; and $8.4 million is proposed in 1964. In 1964, provision is also made for the transfer of $2 million to the Ryukyu Domestic Water Corporation for expansion and development of the integrated water system and for the transfer of $1 million to the general fund for disaster relief and rehabilitation.

Additional economic aid is furnished by the United States through other programs. In 1962 these programs included: Approximately 34,200,000 pounds of surplus foodstuffs furnished through voluntary relief organizations; $13 thousand from the military construction appropriation for resettlement of persons displaced from land taken for military purposes; $108 thousand for typhoon reconstruction, derived from prior-year allocations of foreign currency and surplus grains by the International Cooperation Administration and $14 million loaned by the Secretary of the Army to the Ryukyu Electric Power Corporation for construction of an 80,000-kilowatt power plant. In 1963, 33,300,000 pounds of relief foodstuffs are expected to be furnished; an additional $25 thousand of resettlement funds is expected to be obligated; and $800 thousand may be made available from the Agency for International Development to assist a program of Ryukyuan emigration to South America.

ADMINISTRATION—Continued

Beginning in 1963, the United States (Department of Agriculture) is entering into a sales contract agreement with the Ryukyuan Government through the Ryukyu Development Loan Corporation on behalf of the High Commissioner, for a 3-year program involving surplus commodities, under the authority of title IV, Public Law 480. The value of commodities concerned may reach $2 million in 1963 and $6 million in each of the following years. The purpose of the sales agreement is to provide working capital to develop and expand the livestock and poultry production, processing and distribution industry, and such other development programs as may be mutually agreed upon. The agreement is expected to provide that repayment for commodities furnished would be made over a 19-year period with interest at three-fourths of 1% per annum. In 1964, surplus commodity aid for relief purposes is expected to be continued; another increment of $15 thousand of resettlement funds is expected to be obligated; and an additional $4 million, of the total $18 million authorized, will be available for loan to the Ryukyu Electric Power Corporation, if required, for completion of the Kin powerplant.

In addition to this appropriation and other United States aid programs, the General Fund of the Civil Administration is available for economic aid and social development in the Ryukyus. It receives income from business-type instrumentalities and from investments in financial and public utility organizations. A statement of financial condition and a statement of cash receipts and expenditures of the general fund follow (in thousands of dollars):

Income from operations is derived primarily from the net earnings of the development loan, electric power and water corporations, from the purchase and resale of petroleum products, and from interest, rent and dividend receipts. Starting in 1962, that portion of the markup on petroleum sales, distributed to the Government of the Ryukyu Islands is included in the General Fund program both as a receipt and expenditure. This portion was previously covered directly into the GRI Treasury. Receipts from liquidation of investments include the transfer of cash which is surplus to the working capital requirements of the Petroleum distribution fund and the Okinawa Housing Corporation, the sale of the refrigeration plant in 1962 and the disposal of equipment used in the petroleum business. Other receipts include primarily the proceeds of fines and forfeitures levied by the civil administration court (74 Stat. 461).

The earnings of the development loan, electric power and water corporations are reinvested within the respective corporations each year. The investment in the water corporation will be increased in 1964 by $2 million transferred from appropriated funds. To advance the development on Okinawa of water sources and supply, a series of improvements and construction projects and an evaluation of stream characteristics are planned to be undertaken by the water corporation beginning in 1963 and extending through 1968. The source of financing some of these projects will be the general fund. An additional investment in capital expansion of the Bank of the Ryukyus is planned in 1963 from the general fund to enable the Office of the High Commissioner to continue to maintain its 51% interest in the Bank of the Ryukyus. Funds will also be invested in facilities of the petroleum operations. For 1963, grants to the local central government are programed for development of a medical insurance program, construction of a fourth floor to the GRI economics building, and in 1964 grants are programed for the initiation of a GRI retirement system. In each year funds are also programmed as grants to municipalities. A cash balance will be retained in the fund to meet emergency requirements.

The Government of the Ryukyu Islands was created by the United States civil administration on April 1, 1952. In addition to local revenue derived primarily from income and excise taxes, this Government receives grants to cover expenses related to requirements of the U.S. forces and for assistance in development of public facilities and services. The Government of the Ryukyu Islands has not been authorized by the United States to incur deficits in its governmental fiscal operations or to borrow for any purpose, and it must, therefore, maintain a minimum working balance in its treasury. Loans to Ryukyu Electric Power Corporation.—Obligations incurred in 1962 reflect an agreement to loan $14 million to the Ryukyu Electric Power Corporation by the Department of the Army as partial financing of the construction of a power generating plant. Additional loans from the unobligated balance of the appropriation may be required in 1965. The plant will consist of necessary housing for four 20,000-kilowatt generating units and ancillary facilities. The first 2 units are expected to be in operation in 1965, and additional units will follow, as required, to meet the demand load. When all the units are installed and in operation, it may permit the retirement from the integrated power system of certain over-age units presently operating at relatively high cost.

The financing of Kin powerplant is being undertaken with $18 million appropriated to the Army for a loan to the Ryukyu Electric Power Corporation, and $4.7 million from retained earnings of the Ryukyu Electric Power Corporation.
