The fund provides for the acquisition, operation, and maintenance of floating and land-based plant and equipment used in civil works functions; for temporary financing of services finally chargeable to civil works appropriations and for the furnishing of facilities and services for the military functions of the Department of the Army and other governmental agencies and private persons (67 Stat. 199).

Budget program—Operating costs.—Operating costs are expected to remain at about the same level in 1965 and 1966.

Capital outlay.—Land and structures includes replacement costs of buildings, facilities and related land. Dredges and other floating plant includes replacement and improvement costs for dredges and dredging equipment and other vessels such as tugs, tenders and towboats. Land-based equipment includes replacement and improvement costs of transportation equipment, construction equipment and fixed land equipment such as shop tools and fixed power driven equipment.

The 1966 land and structures program includes $0.3 million to replace the South Atlantic Division laboratory near Marietta, Ga., and $0.5 million to replace the concrete laboratory at the Waterways Experiment Station, Vicksburg, Miss.

Outlay for dredges in 1965 includes: $1.2 million to complete conversion of the dredge Goethals to direct pumpout; $0.6 million to complete modification of a surplus Navy vessel to provide sidecasting dredging capability; $3.5 million for initial construction costs of the hopper dredge McFarland; $60 thousand for design costs of a shallow draft hopper dredge; and $0.3 million for initial rehabilitation costs of pipeline dredges Wahkiakum and St. Genevieve.

Included in 1966 are: $8.2 million for construction costs of the hopper dredge McFarland; $90 thousand for design costs of the shallow draft hopper dredge; and $0.7 million for rehabilitation costs of the pipeline dredges.

Financing.—Costs of operations are financed from reimbursements or advances from appropriations or individuals utilizing the services or facilities, at rates to cover all operating costs. Income in 1965 and 1966 includes a provision for increased costs of replacing plant and equipment. Earnings derived from depreciation and sales of wornout and obsolete equipment recover only original cost of equipment replaced, hence are inadequate to provide for present or future replacement costs. Commencing January 1, 1964, a factor to cover this inadequacy is included in charges to projects on which the equipment is used and is credited to revolving fund income. Earnings from this source in 1964 covering a 6 months' period amounted to $3.5 million and are estimated at $8 million in 1965 and $8.6 million in 1966.

Operating results and financial condition.—The unreserved deficit at the end of 1963 was $289 thousand. Earnings during 1964 of $652 thousand increased unreserved earnings at the end of 1964 to $363 thousand. Unreserved earnings are expected to increase to about $600 thousand in 1965 and remain at that level through 1966.

Earnings reserved for equipment replacement are expected to amount to $11.5 million at end of 1965 and $20.1 million at end of 1966. Use of these earnings is shown in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

	1964 actual	1965 estimate	1966 estimate
Annual additional earnings realized.....	3,452	8,000	8,600
Unapplied earnings from prior years.....	-----	2,780	3,480
Applied to equipment replacement.....	672	7,300	8,150
Reserved for future application.....	2,780	3,480	3,930

The initial capital of fund was provided by assumption of the assets, liabilities, and obligations of the plant accounts as carried on the records of the Corps of Engineers—Civil on June 30, 1953, and by an appropriation from the general fund of $100. Capital (Government equity) of the fund amounted to $125.9 million at June 30, 1964, and is limited to $140 million (67 Stat. 199). In 1964 capital was increased by adjustments to liability for annual leave of employees, net transfer of assets from other agencies without reimbursement and by increases in retained earnings. Increases in capital are expected to continue through 1966. Since these increases are expected to raise total capital above the $140 million level, an increase in authorized capital is proposed.

Consolidated summary of personnel.—The revolving fund is used to initially finance all payrolls of the Corps of Engineers—Civil.

The table which follows shows the distribution of personnel and salary costs to appropriations of the Corps of Engineers and to other accounts. Direct obligations cover services of employees working full time at project sites. Indirect obligations cover personnel charges for services provided through the revolving fund.

Public Law 88-609 approved September 22, 1964, authorizes a Commission to study the feasibility of constructing a sea-level canal between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans; the cost of this study is not to exceed $17,500 thousand, and it is to be completed by June 30, 1968.

The Commission will prepare a report setting forth its findings and conclusions on the feasibility of and most suitable site for an interoceanic sea-level canal, the best means of construction, whether by conventional or nuclear means, and the estimated cost.

It is anticipated that the $400 thousand appropriated for 1965 will be used for organization and staffing of the Commission and development of a plan of survey.

This appropriation supports the objective of the act of July 12, 1960, as amended, to provide for the promotion of economic and social development in the Ryukyu Islands, and finances the administration of these islands by the United States, which exercises jurisdiction pursuant to the treaty of peace with Japan. Executive Order 10713 of June 5, 1957, as amended, establishes under the Secretary of Defense a civil administration of the Ryukyu Islands to execute the administrative, legislative, and jurisdictional powers reposed in the United States. To protect the security of the free world, the United States will continue responsibility for the administration of the Ryukyu Islands as long as conditions of threat and tension in the Far East require the maintenance of military bases in these islands.

Administration.—The program will provide for the general operating expenses of the office of the High Commissioner and for the staff necessary to plan and execute the aid program and to assist the Government of the Ryukyu Islands in its responsibilities for administration.

Aid to the Ryukyuan economy.—The principal elements of the program are summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

Additional economic aid is furnished by the United States through other programs. One of these is the free distribution of foodstuffs under the Food for Peace program. A second is the provision of long-term credit for purchase of surplus commodities under the same program.

The General Fund of the Civil Administration is also available for assisting the economic and social development of the islands. It receives income from business-type instrumentalities and from investments in financial institutions. A statement of cash receipts and expenditures and the assets of the fund follow (in thousands of dollars):

Income from operations is derived primarily from the net earnings of the corporations, from the purchase and resale of petroleum products, from interest and from dividends.

The earnings of the development loan, electric power, and water corporations, are reinvested within the respective corporations each year. Receipts from the sale of petroleum products are distributed in part directly to the Government of the Ryukyu Islands, in lieu of taxes which might normally be expected from such sales, and are retained in part for contributions to social and economic development programs for the Islands. A cash balance is retained in the fund to meet emergency requirements.

A major program for the development of increased water supplies and the construction of expanded storage and distribution facilities was started by the Ryukyu Domestic Water Corporation in 1963. For this purpose $6 million was contributed under this appropriation during 1964 and 1965 to the capital of the corporation. In addition $2.5 million was contributed from the General Fund in 1964, and it is planned to contribute $5 million in 1965 and $4.6 million in 1966.

The total amount of external funds being made available for Ryukyuan economic and social development by the United States and Japan is summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

The Government of the Ryukyu Islands was created by the United States Civil Administration on April 1, 1952, and its continuation was confirmed by Executive Order 10713, as amended. The Government of the Ryukyu Islands has not been authorized by the United States to incur deficits in its governmental fiscal operations or to borrow for any purpose, and it must, therefore, maintain a minimum working balance in its treasury. CONSTRUCTION OF POWER SYSTEMS, RYUKYU ISLANDS—Con.

The appropriation is being used as a loan to the Ryukyu Electric Power Corporation to assist in the construction of the Kin powerplant at a cost of $15.2 million. Of this, $4.7 million is being provided from earnings of the Corporation and $10.5 million through a loan from this appropriation. The unobligated balance reflects savings from reduced construction cost estimates.

The plant will consist of four 20,000-kilowatt generating units and ancillary facilities. The plant will be completed in 1965.

A $750 thousand appropriation enacted in 1958 and an appropriation of $19,250 thousand enacted in 1959 provided $20 million for constructing a high-level bridge across the Panama Canal at Balboa, Canal Zone, as authorized and directed by the Act of July 23, 1956 (ch. 665, 70 Stat. 596). The bridge was inaugurated October 12, 1962, thereby fulfilling the U.S. commitment to the Republic of Panama under the terms of point 4 of the General Relations Agreement between the United States and Panama of May 18, 1942 (Executive Agreement Series 452), and of item 5 of the Memorandum of Understandings Reached, signed January 25, 1955. It is anticipated that the total cost will not exceed $19,050 thousand. The unobligated balance of $950 thousand is programmed to lapse in 1965.

The Panama Canal Company is a wholly owned Government corporation chartered by the Act of June 29, 1948 (62 Stat. 1076), as amended by the Act of September 26, 1950 (64 Stat. 1041), for the primary purpose of maintaining and operating the interoceanic canal at the Isthmus of Panama. In furtherance of that mission, and in consideration of the international agreements under which the canal enterprise is operated, the Company conducts necessary supporting operations.

The administration of the Company is integrated with that of the Canal Zone Government, an independent agency financed by appropriations. The Governor of the Canal Zone is ex officio president of the Company. The Company is expected to be self-sustaining and is required to reimburse the U.S. Treasury for the net cost of the Canal Zone Government, the cost of interest on the net direct investment of the United States in the Company, and for annuity payments made by the United States to the Republic of Panama pursuant only to the Treaty of 1903 as amended in 1936.

Budget program—1. Transit operations.—Operation and maintenance of the canal proper is the primary mission of the Company, and it is toward the successful accomplishment of that task that the transit operations are directed. Current and projected operating results, including income from tolls, are reviewed and evaluated at least annually by the Company's Board of Directors.

The services performed by this activity and the funded cost of each are shown in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

	1964 actual	1965 estimate	1966 estimate
Maintenance of channels and harbors.....	4,978	5,333	4,814
Navigation service and control.....	11,452	11,812	12,197
Locks operations.....	8,681	10,263	9,634
General canal expense.....	1,820	1,644	1,766
Net funded costs.....	26,931	29,052	28,411

Major variations in the foregoing cost estimates reflect provision for an overhaul of the Pedro Miguel locks in 1965, and a start in 1966 on the 1967 overhaul of Gatun Locks; the assumption of Thatcher Ferry Bridge maintenance costs; a reduction in maintenance dredging expenditures in 1966; and the increasing expense required to handle the expected rise in canal traffic volume in 1965 and 1966 as shown by the following workload data (dollars in thousands):

	1963 actual	1964 actual	1965 estimate	1966 estimate

Other transit revenue.....	$5,612	$6,229	$6,270	$6,370

Capital outlay costs, funded, which will amount to $3,659 thousand in 1966, include $1.5 million for continuing the canal capacity program, and $750 thousand primarily for processing, additional hauling, and depositing cut-widening spoil as a base for the proposed $11 million dam across the Trinidad arm of Gatun Lake.

2. Supporting services.—These auxiliary activities of the Company, individually described below, provide services and materials essential to the accomplishment of the transit operations program.

(a) Maritime services.—This program provides for the operation of vessel repair and harbor terminal facilities. Funded costs, which are directly related to customer demand for services, and to Company floating plant overhaul schedules, are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

	1964 actual	1965 estimate	1966 estimate
Vessel repair.....	3,904	3,789	3,916

Net funded costs.....	8,027	8,845	9,077

Capital outlay costs, funded, for 1966 amount to $694 thousand for equipment, pipeline valves, and paving.

(b) Employee services.—As shown below, these include housing and marketing operations serving eligible employees against whom charges are made to reimburse the Company. Funded cost estimates, which reflect increasing sales by the marketing operation are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

	1964 actual	1965 estimate	1966 estimate

Capital outlay costs, funded, for 1966 are estimated at $1,067 thousand and include $400 thousand for replacement housing, $115 thousand for modernizing existing quarters structures, and $277 thousand for equipment.

(c) Transportation and utilities services.—The various types of service and the funded costs of each are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

	1964 actual	1965 estimate	1966 estimate
Railroad.....	1,804	1,825	1,875

Less intra-agency recoveries.....	8,600	9,233	9,380
Net funded costs.....	4,366	4,259	4,534

Capital outlay costs, funded, total $5,345 thousand for 1966 including $1,970 thousand to complete a $5,250 thousand steam turbine generator for the power system, $652 thousand for additional water mains to serve Panama, $506 thousand for additions and improvements to the power transmission and substation system, $466 thousand for equipment, and $428 thousand for replacing motor vehicles.

(d) Other supporting services.—These activities chiefly consist of the Company's construction, maintenance and supply functions. Funded costs, which reflect the varying demand for the services performed herein, are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

	1964 actual	1965 estimate	1966 estimate
Tivoli guest house.....	632	710	676

Net funded costs.....	2,765	2,335	2,769

Capital outlay costs, funded, for 1966 are estimated at $700 thousand principally for the replacement and addition of equipment.

3. General corporate expense.—This includes payments to the Treasury for the net cost of Canal Zone Government and interest, general and administrative expenses under statutory limitation, and other general charges. The scope of general and administrative expenses under statutory limitation includes virtually all general charges other than interest on the investment of the United States, the net cost of the Canal Zone Government, and annuity payments to non-U.S. citizens formerly employed by the Company. Funded costs are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

	1964 actual	1965 estimate	1966 estimate
Net cost of Canal Zone Government.....	16,300	18,554	19,003
Interest expense.....	10,950	11,370	11,665

Total general corporate expense, funded.....	39,752	43,658	43,513

Financing.—The Company is authorized to obtain appropriations for its capital needs and to cover losses sustained in the conduct of its activities. In addition, under Public Law 86-200 (73 Stat. 428), approved August 25, 1959 the Company may borrow from the Treasury, interest-bearing amounts not exceeding a total of $10 million outstanding at any time. The latter authorization, along with available resources and anticipated revenues and receipts will enable the Company to fund its program through 1966 without recourse to appropriations. The unobligated balance is estimated at $3,927 thousand on June 30, 1966.

Operating results and financial condition.—There will be an increase in retained earnings in 1965 estimated at $3,760 thousand and a further increase in 1966 estimated at $5,670 thousand wholly representing net operating income for those years. The Government's equity will be reduced by $240 thousand in 1965 as a result of expenditures made by the Company for maintenance and operation of the Thatcher Ferry Bridge. In accordance with Public Law 753 (84th Congress), approved July 23, 1956, such expenditures have been treated as extraordinary expenses, not related to the operations of the Panama Canal Company, and as such may be applied as a reduction of the Government's interest-bearing investment (even though the bridge replaced a ferry, the operations of which were financed as a normal cost of the Company). For 1966, language is proposed which would permit such expenditures (including depreciation but not interest) to be treated as a cost of maintaining the Panama Canal and the amount of $283 thousand has been included for maintenance and operation under transit operations (funded) and $316 thousand for depreciation under expenses of transit operations (unfunded).

The Company has outstanding, at all times, contingent and continuing liabilities in indeterminable amounts arising principally from monthly relief payments payable to retired alien employees; benefits payable under provisions of the Federal Employees Compensation Act; commitments for construction work, supplies and services; and pending suits and claims.

The annuity payments to be made to retired alien employees in fiscal year 1965 are estimated at $1.6 million. Commitments under uncompleted construction contracts and unfilled purchase orders amounted to $9.7 million at June 30, 1964. The maximum liability which could result from outstanding claims and lawsuits is estimated to be $1.4 million.

The laws enforced hereunder are designed to protect consumers against adulterated and misbranded foods, drugs, cosmetics, therapeutic devices, and household products containing hazardous substances.

1. Medical evaluation.—Medical policy is developed and promulgated with respect to efficacy and safety of drugs and devices for man and animals. Advice is furnished the Commissioner concerning the health effects of toxic substances found in foods, drugs, cosmetics, and household substances. New drug applications for human and veterinary drugs and claims for investigational drugs are evaluated; an adverse drug reaction reporting program and clinical studies of drugs and devices are conducted; and medical aspects of FDA's inspectional and investigational programs and court cases are developed.

2. Research.—Broad and long-range research is conducted concerning foods, drugs, and cosmetics and related products. The research includes fundamental research concerning the effects and interrelationships of substances occurring in the products that FDA regulates and experimentation to find new and better methods of detecting and identifying harmful and insanitary substances to add to the cumulative knowledge concerning man and the products he consumes.

3. Scientific evaluation.—Scientific evaluations are made of pesticide, food additive, color additive, and food standards petitions, and the labeling of hazardous substances. Regulations are developed and promulgated for pesticide tolerances and exemptions, food additives, color additives, food standards, antibiotic, and insulin. Antibiotics, insulin, and certain colors are certified. Toxicological evaluations are performed concerning investigational drugs and new drug applications. Methods and bases for evaluation of petitions and tolerances are developed and studied.

4. Education and voluntary compliance.—This activity encompasses the planning, conduct, and evaluation of programs to obtain voluntary compliance with laws on the part of the regulated industries and to inform consumers of the objectives of the laws and to help prepare them to achieve a greater degree of self-protection. Upon request, advisory opinions relating to the laws and regulations are furnished to industry.

Informational and guidance materials are prepared and distributed to assist industry in voluntary compliance and to promote understanding of FDA regulations and policies. Working relationships are established and maintained with industry, trade, and professional organizations. Studies, surveys, and evaluations are made of consumer attitudes, interests, prejudices, purchasing, and other trends. Printed and graphic materials are prepared and published on subjects of consumer interests for dissemination to the general public and news media. Consumer consultants are used to provide consultation services, furnish information and materials, and make speeches and presentations to consumer and other groups.

5. Regulatory compliance.—Nationwide inspectional, investigational, and analytical programs are conducted to enforce the Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, Hazardous Substances Labeling Act, and related statutes. Central direction and coordination of the inspectional and analytical programs and operations performed in the 18 district offices insures consistency in the enforcement of the laws. Inspectional, investigational, and other field actions are reviewed to evaluate the degree of compliance or non-compliance with the provisions of the law; from these reviews determinations are made for securing compliance through legal or voluntary action. Initiates and directs the preparation of legal cases for enforcement of the law and those designed to test and interpret the law.

6. Executive direction and technical support.—This activity includes the establishment of goals and policy; the formulation and promulgation of agencywide plans, regulations, and directives; the allocation of resources; the day-to-day direction of the agency; and the evaluation of performance and accomplishments. Programs are conducted to promote cooperative Federal-State relations; to disseminate information to the press and general public, to prepare for operations under emergency conditions, and to obtain the services of outside consultants. Technical support is provided on an agencywide basis in the areas of financial management, facilities planning, laboratory cleaning and needed preparation services, technical reference services, procurement and property, records, data processing, management services, personnel, and training.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1963, $1,279 thousand (1964 adjustments, $2 thousand); 1964, $855 thousand; 1965, $13,472 thousand; 1966, $3,945 thousand.

This appropriation consolidates all activities related to the planning, construction, and equipping of buildings and facilities for the Food and Drug Administration.

Since 1958, the Food and Drug Administration in collaboration with the General Services Administration has been engaged in a program to improve and enlarge its field facilities, and funds have been appropriated for all phases of modernization for 13 of the 18 FDA district offices.

In addition to improvements in its field facilities, FDA has also made progress in upgrading its space and facilities at headquarters. A new headquarters laboratory building (Federal office building No. 8) will be ready for occupancy by scientific personnel by the end of 1965. A Special Pharmacological Animal Laboratory was occupied during 1964, and in 1965 a special dog whelping facility will be completed to provide necessary dog colonies for the pharmacological animal laboratory. In addition, FDA's 1965 appropriation includes funds for the construction of a laboratory facility at the Beltsville site.

The program proposed for 1966 calls for:

(1) Acquisition of portable laboratory equipment for Federal office building No. 8 and the modification of office space to accommodate additional scientific personnel in 1966.

(2) Planning for an additional headquarters laboratory facility at the Beltsville site to house approximately 450 personnel.

(3) Construction of district office facilities at St. Louis and San Francisco, and the equipping of district office facilities authorized for construction at Chicago, Denver, and Philadelphia.

The Food and Drug Administration certifies batches of antibiotics, insulin, and color additives for use in food, drugs, or cosmetics; it also establishes tolerances for residues of pesticide chemicals in or on raw agricultural products and for color additives in foods, drugs, and cosmetics. These services are financed wholly by fees paid by the industries affected.

In 1964, this account was converted from an indefinite special fund to a self-sustaining revolving fund.

The workload in pesticide tolerances decreased sharply in 1964 as a result of the establishment of a new requirement for certification that caused most manufacturers to withhold their petitions until certain time-consuming reproduction studies were completed and their results could be included with the petitions. This means that activity in this area will return to normal in 1965; i.e., to a level comparable to that maintained in 1963.

Under the Vocational Education Act of 1963 and the George-Barden Act, matching grants are made to the States, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, and the District of Columbia, for support and improvement of vocational education programs. Training for gainful employment as semiskilled or skilled workers and for business and office occupations is emphasized, and construction of area vocational schools is included. Grants previously included under Defense educational activities are made to support the training of highly skilled technicians. It is estimated that the number of students served under these programs will total 5.8 million in 1966 compared to 5.2 million in 1965 and 4.4 million in 1964.

Grants are made for research and special project activities designed to meet special vocational education needs of youths, particularly those in economically depressed communities that have academic, socioeconomic, or other handicaps that prevent them from succeeding in the regular vocational education programs. A work-study program provides employment for students enrolled in vocational classes who are in need of financial assistance in order to continue their education. Funds will be provided to construct and operate a residential vocational school in the District of Columbia to attack problems of school dropouts and youth unemployment.

Payments are made to assist in the maintenance and operation of schools in areas where enrollments are affected by Federal activities. Such payments are made principally to school districts; however, where such districts cannot assume responsibility for educating federally-connected children, payments are made to other agencies for the provision of such education under Federal auspices. Also, under certain circumstances, the Commissioner of Education may make arrangements for the provision of free public education for children of members of the Armed Forces on active duty, not residing on Federal property.

Payments will be made in 1966 to about 4,300 eligible school districts and Federal agencies on account of the attendance of approximately 2 million federally-connected children in all States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, and Wake Island. This provides for payments of 100 percent of entitlements.

Payments are made to assist in construction of schools in areas where enrollments are affected by Federal activities. From 1951 through 1965, $1,233 million has been appropriated for this program, aiding in the construction of an estimated 63,000 classrooms to house about 1.84 million pupils in the 50 States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and Wake Island.

The estimate for 1966 will allow funds to pay all approvable construction projects of local educational agencies in federally affected areas and assist in providing approximately 2,300 classrooms for 68,000 pupils.

1. Assistance to local educational agencies.—Grants are made to local districts for school construction, principally on behalf of increased numbers of children residing on Federal property or residing with a parent employed on Federal property.

2. Assistance for school construction on Federal properties.—Where the local educational agency is unable to provide school facilities for increased numbers of children living on Federal property, the Commissioner of Education is authorized to arrange for the construction of schools. Under certain circumstances, the Commissioner may also arrange to provide school facilities on a temporary basis for children of members of the Armed Forces on active duty, who do not reside on Federal property.

3. Payments for technical services.—Technical services are rendered by the Housing and Home Finance Agency in connection with the construction of school facilities.

Grants and payments are made to States, educational institutions, and individuals. Amendments passed in 1964 (Public Law 88-665) expanded several programs.

1. Student loans.—Funds are allotted among the States for payments to institutions of higher education, including post-secondary business schools and technical institutes to provide capital contributions to student loan funds. These payments must be matched at the rate of one dollar from institutional sources for each nine Federal dollars. In addition, loans are made to institutions which are unable to provide matching funds.

2. Instructional assistance.—Grants are made to States on a matching basis for acquisition of equipment and minor remodeling of laboratory or other space in order to strengthen instruction in science, mathematics, foreign languages, history, civics, geography, English, and reading. Loans are made to nonprofit private schools for similar uses, and matching grants are made to States for supervision and administration of the program.

3. Graduate fellowships.—Grants are made to institutions of higher education for expansion of graduate programs, and include both fellowship stipends for individuals and cost-of-education allowances for participating institutions. A primary objective is to promote better geographic distribution of graduate facilities throughout the Nation. In selection of fellows, preference is given to persons interested in college teaching.

7. Grants to States for statistical services.—Grants are made on a matching basis to assist the States in improving educational statistics. Total payments to any State may not exceed $50 thousand annually.

8. Institutes.—Contracts are made with institutions of higher education for full costs of institutes for teachers or supervisors (or student teachers or supervisors) of modern foreign languages, reading, history, geography, English, disadvantaged youth, school library personnel, and educational media specialists. 1. Vocational rehabilitation services.—Federal matching grants are made to assist the States in rehabilitating handicapped individuals so that they may prepare for and engage in remunerative employment to the extent of their capabilities. The rehabilitation services provided by the States include medical restoration, training, guidance and placement services. The requisite State matching rate varies between States according to per capita income, and averages approximately 38% of the total program.

2. Extension and improvement.—Federal grants are made to the States to assist them in initiating projects for new or improved vocational rehabilitation services. The more favorable matching rate of 25% is designed to encourage development of new methods and techniques.

This appropriation includes all proposed direct construction items of the Public Health Service except construction of Indian health facilities, and all continuing projects except construction of shellfish laboratories (appropriated under Milk, food, interstate, and community sanitation in 1962), and the following facilities of the National Institutes of Health:

1. Mental health-neurology research facility—appropriated under Mental health activities and Neurology and blindness activities, 1961.

2. Rocky Mountain Laboratory construction—appropriated under Allergy and infectious disease activities, 1962.

The following construction projects will necessitate the provision of additional funds in 1966:

1. Communicable disease facility, San Juan, P.R.—The proposed facility will replace the inadequate, unsafe, and unsuitable space in which the laboratories and offices are presently located. The new facility will include space designed specifically for schistosomiasis investigations, a current critical requirement. The 1966 request provides funds to plan this facility.

2. Pacific Northwest shellfish sanitation research center.—Funds are provided for planning a shellfish sanitation research center in the Pacific Northwest in which to conduct and expand the research program now carried on in a small, inadequate, temporary building at Purdy, Wash.

3. Water pollution control laboratories.—The Federal Water Pollution Control Act Amendments of 1961 (Public Law 87-88) provide for establishment of at least seven water pollution control laboratories in different regions of the Nation. These new facilities will give technical support to the various elements of the Federal water pollution control programs. Personnel housed in these facilities will conduct applied research, investigations, field demonstrations, and studies, and provide training for Federal, State, and local personnel. To date, locations have been selected for all laboratories, except the Middle Atlantic region. Funds have been appropriated for planning all seven laboratories, and funds for construction and equipment have been provided for six of these. The 1966 request will provide for construction of the laboratory in the Middle Atlantic region.

4. Facility for field evaluation of advanced waste treatment.—A major goal of our research program in water is directed toward the development and demonstration of practical means for treating waste to remove the maximum amounts of pollutants to permit repeated reuse of water. Funds are provided to design and construct experimental field facilities to evaluate the adsorption process of advanced waste treatment on a pilot plant scale.

5. Modernization of PHS hospitals.—Planning funds are requested for the modernization of five general hospitals; and for the modernization of the Carville Leprosarium.

6. Child health and human development research facility, NIH.—The primary purpose of this proposed facility is to conduct research in the developmental sciences that is not being conducted elsewhere, with principal emphasis given to the areas of reproductive biology. Funds are provided to plan a facility consisting of a research laboratory building and a primate colony support building.

7. Multi-level parking facilities—(a) General office building extension, NIH.—The proposed facility, to be located in the vicinity of the new general office building, would be a three-level structure providing parking for approximately 650 automobiles. The 1966 request provides funds to plan this facility.

(b) Cancer-mental health-neurology research building, NIH.—Funds requested in 1966 will provide for planning a four-level reinforced concrete parking facility adjacent to the new cancer and mental health-neurology research buildings.

8. Solid waste research facility.—Funds are provided to construct a pilot plant for cooperative research with the Tennessee Valley Authority on health aspects and economic feasibility of combining treatment of community solid wastes with raw sewage sludge for agricultural purposes.

9. Repairs and improvements.—In 1964 the Public Health Service inaugurated a continuing program of major alterations, repairs, and improvements for maintenance of buildings and facilities of the Service. The 1966 request provides funds for community health, environmental health, the National Institutes of Health, the National Library of Medicine, and the Bureau of Medical Services.

10. NIH animal center (farm).—Funds provided through 1962 for the NIH animal center permitted acquisition of a site, alterations, minor construction, planning and construction of phase I, including a farm animal building, two residences and powerplant and utilities. Funds appropriated in 1963 provided for construction of a primate wing, an animal behavior building, and planning for future construction. Funds appropriated in 1965 provided planning funds which, in addition to funds available, permit planning of phase II. Phase II will include a small animal production building, agricultural management building, a third wing for the kennel, a third residence, a waste chemical disposal facility, and cages for the caged animals. It is anticipated that construction funds will be required in 1967.

11. Environmental health sciences center.—The 1961 appropriation included an amount of $785 thousand for planning additional environmental health facilities. The 1965 appropriation included $1,000 thousand which together with the $785 thousand previously appropriated will provide for the preparation of plans and specifications for this center in the Raleigh-Durham-Chapel Hill, N.C., area to be used for the conduct of environmental health sciences activities.

12. Laboratory facility, Cincinnati, Ohio.—Funds requested in 1966 will provide for master planning for a laboratory facility in Cincinnati, Ohio, to provide additional permanent facilities for environmental health activities to house staff now occupying leased space.

13. Appalachian environmental health field station.—Funds requested in 1966 will provide for master planning for an environmental health field station in West Virginia which will house program activities dealing with the environmental health problems of the Appalachian area.

14. Water quality standards research laboratories.—Funds for construction of two water quality standards laboratories were appropriated in 1963. Sites have been selected at Narragansett, R.I., and at Duluth, Minn., for the salt water and fresh water laboratories, respectively. The architects' contracts were awarded in 1964, and planning is in progress. Funds were appropriated in 1965 for portable equipment for these two installations.

15. Arctic health research center.—Planning funds were provided in the 1964 appropriation and construction funds in 1965 for a building at the University of Alaska for the Arctic Health Research Center. An architect's contract has been awarded and planning is in progress. This facility will replace the 4 rented buildings and 17 additional structures in which the center is now housed. Medical, biological, and environmental research on the problems and conditions in low temperature areas will be continued in the new facilities.

16. General office building extension, NIH.—Funds were provided in 1962 for planning an addition to the general office building which will provide offices and conference rooms to house 1,100 office personnel now located in rental quarters. The funds appropriated in 1965 will provide for the construction of this addition.

17. Gerontology research facility, NIH.—In 1962, funds were appropriated for planning a facility for basic research in gerontology. Funds appropriated in 1965 will provide for the construction of this facility. This building, to be located in Baltimore, Md., will be used in collaboration with the Baltimore city hospitals to increase the amount and quality of research on all aspects of aging, to provide for adequate laboratory facilities, and animal and patient resources which can be utilized on a regional basis, and to develop an environment where associations between scientists and clinical investigators can be maintained on a daily basis to encourage interdisciplinary collaboration in research.

18. Extension to clinical center cafeteria, NIH.—This facility will include a kitchen separate from the facility used for patient feeding and an increase of 5,000 square feet in the seating capacity to accommodate employees of this and nearby buildings.

19. Library relocation, NIH.—Funds were provided in 1964 to relocate the NIH library and provide more adequate library services for the research program in new buildings, including space for study cubicles, reading and reference areas, and additional storage stacks.

20. Warehouse extension, building 13, NIH.—Funds were provided in 1964 for the planning and construction of 43,000 gross square feet of additional warehouse space on the NIH reservation.

21. Mental health-neurology-cancer cafeteria, NIH.—The 1964 appropriation included funds for planning and construction of a separate cafeteria to serve the new cancer and mental health-neurology building complex as well as other nearby facilities.

22. Biologics standards laboratory annex, NIH.—The 1964 appropriation provided construction funds to build an annex to the Biologics Standards Laboratory building, including equipment, access roads, parking facilities, and utility connections.

23. Communicable disease center.—Construction on the new expanded Communicable Disease Center facilities located at Clifton Road in Atlanta, Ga., was started in January 1964 with a completion date of December 1965. Construction of the offsite animal breeding and holding facilities near Lawrenceville, Ga., was begun March 25, 1963, and completed in September 1964.

24. Cancer research facility, NIH.—The new cancer research facility, scheduled to be completed in August 1967, will serve to consolidate the intramural and extramural components of collaborative research programs in cancer chemotherapy.

25. Service building, NIH (building 12).—Central service activities, now dispersed throughout the reservation, will be consolidated by extension and modification of building 12. Construction is scheduled for completion in July 1965.

26. Master utilities extension, NIH.—The extension to the master utilities will provide a system adequate to service additional planned structures and will also alleviate an already serious overload on present utility resources.

27. Laboratory facilities, Puerto Rico, NIH.—Funds were provided in 1963 for planning and construction of a laboratory facility on the grounds of the Puerto Rico Medical Center. This facility will provide for laboratories, some central services, offices, and for caged animal space for the collaborative project in cerebral palsy and mental retardation.

28. Research facilities, Lexington, Ky., NIH.—The construction of the research facility at the Addiction

Research Center, Lexington, Ky., is scheduled for completion by July 1965.

29. Animal quarters, NIH.—The conversion of wings F and G from office space to the originally intended purpose of animal production was completed in 1963.

30. Library facilities.—This facility is complete except for contractor's claims, engineering service charges, and minor reservation items.

31. Dental research building, NIH.—This building is complete.

32. Surgical facilities, NIH.—The new surgical facilities for heart and neurosurgery were completed during 1963 and are in operational use.

33. General office building, NIH.—The general office building was accepted for operational use in 1962.

1. Grants—(a) Research.—Research grants are awarded to organizations, institutions, and individuals to support investigations in the causation and control of injuries. In 1966 emphasis will be given to the development of control measures for concussions, fractures, and other injuries sustained in motor vehicle accidents, in falls, and in other nontransport situations; prevention of injury due to burns; and prevention of childhood injuries. By providing support for independent research, the research grants program makes possible the tapping of scientific manpower resources not otherwise available to the mission of the Division. Approximately 47 research grants will be supported in 1966.

(b) Fellowships.—Grants will be awarded to individuals to support the graduate and postgraduate training of scientists in order to increase research manpower in the field of control of injuries from accidents. This new activity will provide seven grants.

(c) Training.—Grants will be awarded to institutions to support programs which are designed to provide instruction and experience in research methodology related to injury control problems. Funds in this new activity will provide for two such grants.

2. Research, training, and technical services.—This activity provides for surveillance and developmental research to determine the extent and cause of accidental injuries and the development of sound techniques for their prevention and control.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1963, $1,956 thousand (1964 adjustments, -$46 thousand); 1964, $3,527 thousand; 1965, $3,527 thousand; 1966, $3,527 thousand.

The mission of the chronic diseases and health of the aged program is to encourage and assist States and communities in developing, operating, and improving programs for preventing the occurrence and the increase of disability and dependency. This is accomplished through a coordinated program of intramural and extramural research, training, and technical services.

1. Grants—(a) Research.—Grants are awarded to organizations, institutions, and individuals for research into methods of planning, conducting, and evaluating community programs and techniques to overcome barriers to the application of new-found knowledge in the prevention of chronic diseases and disability and in the care of the chronically ill and aged. Approximately 53 research projects will be supported in 1966 as compared to 40 in 1965.

(b) Formula grants to States.—Grants are made on a formula basis to assist States in developing and improving cancer and heart disease control programs, including the support of activities such as casefinding, rehabilitation, education, community services, and training. Grants are also made on a formula basis to assist States in expanding and improving programs for the development of community facilities and out-of-hospital services for the care of the aged and chronically ill, including the support of home health services, programs to improve the quality of care in nursing homes and homes for the aged, and training of health personnel. Increased emphasis will be placed on assisting States in following up their comprehensive mental retardation planning carried out in 1964 and 1965.

(c) Project.—Grants are awarded to institutions, organizations, and individuals for surveying, developing, and improving community services; for applying and evaluating control methods and techniques; and for expanding professional and supporting competencies in cancer and neurological and sensory disease control. Grants are also awarded to States and other public or nonprofit agencies for studies and demonstrations which look toward the development of new or improved methods of providing health services outside the hospital, particularly for chronically ill and aged persons. The increase of $2.66 thousand in 1966 will enable support of new projects for cancer prevention and education activities; improved community detection, control, and training programs for mental retardation programs; and assistance to communities in establishing artificial kidney centers for demonstrating and improving the life-saving dialysis technique.

(d) Training.—Grants will be awarded to organizations and institutions for increasing the number of trained research investigators capable of performing research into the community aspects of chronic diseases and chronic disease control. In 1966, approximately four grants will be supported.

2. Research, training, and technical services.—This activity provides for the development and improvement of techniques and methods for the identification and prevention of chronic illness, for the care and restoration of the chronically ill and aged, and for meeting special health problems of older people. Assistance is given to State and local health departments, voluntary organizations, and other interested agencies through consultation, epidemiological investigations, demonstrations, loan of professional personnel and equipment, and training. Major emphasis is given to control programs in cancer, diabetes, arthritis, heart disease, neurological and sensory disorders, mental retardation, and for improving health services available to the long term ill and aged. The increase requested in 1966 will be used for establishing a National Clearinghouse for Smoking and Health, conducting a national nursing home cost study, and improving preventive efforts in cancer, kidney, and heart diseases.

ratory services, are provided to State and local health departments through investigations, consultations, and demonstrations. Important disease control programs include hepatitis, aseptic meningitis, poliomyelitis, viral encephalitis, the enteric diseases, staphylococcal and other institutionally acquired infections, the acute fungal diseases, diseases of animals transmissible to man, and the vector borne diseases. Professional competence in the investigation of epidemic outbreaks is afforded to the States through the staff of the Epidemic Intelligence Service which is constantly alert to the epidemic situation in the country. These officers provide a wide range of service, including epidemic aid, epidemiological field investigations, consultations in communicable disease control, surveillance of infectious diseases, and collaborative field and laboratory research. The 1966 increase provides for the relocation of the encephalitis field station from Greeley, Colo., to Fort Collins, Colo.; expansion of epidemic services; and expansion of medical audiovisual services.

1. Project grants.—These grants provide assistance to States for programs designed to implement the report of the Surgeon General's task force on syphilis control, The Eradication of Syphilis. This implementation includes programs designed to apply epidemiologic techniques of case interview and followup of named contacts and other suspects; to improve case reporting by private physicians; and to assure epidemiologic intelligence through followup of syphilis positive blood reports from public and private laboratories.

2. Research, training, and technical services.—Research and evaluation activities are directed toward maintenance of uniformly satisfactory nationwide serologic services; development and introduction of new syphilis diagnostic tests; development of an immunizing agent for syphilis; improvement of diagnostic techniques for gonorrhea; evaluation of more effective methods of therapy; and the improvement of control procedures. Scientific and general information about venereal disease for both professional and lay groups is disseminated through State agencies.

Epidemiologic services are directed toward maintaining national and international intelligence and providing technical assistance to State and local health departments in programs directed toward the eradication of syphilis.

The 1966 estimate provides for continued implementation of the task force report.

1. Grants—(a) Research.—Grants are made to health agencies, educational institutions and other research organizations to support investigation in dental health. Foremost among the research areas in community dental health which will be emphasized in 1966 are therapeutic and preventive dental services, and the organization, economics and administration of dental care programs. Grants are also available for supporting research into more effective methods of utilizing dental and auxiliary personnel, in the newer methods of communicating knowledge to health practitioners and the public, in the characteristics of dental diseases and conditions in populations and into the social and interpersonal aspects of health behavior. Approximately 33 research projects will be supported in 1966 as compared to 28 in 1965.

(b) Training.—Grants in support of research training in the public health field are one of the best means for alleviating the shortage of research personnel. The increase of $150 thousand will permit the establishing of a research training grants program in universities and health agencies. This amount will support two grants in 1966. Grants and awards will also be made to 46 schools of dentistry in 1966 for training dental students in the effective use of dental assistants and other auxiliaries. The $130 thousand increase will permit participating schools to maintain their programs at levels already authorized under existing grants.

(c) State control programs.—Grants will be made to States to stimulate the development of State and community resources for the prevention and control of dental diseases.

2. Research, training, and technical services.—Funds are provided to study the status of the Nation's dental health and of its dental manpower supply, to conduct studies and demonstrations relating to the development and application of methods for preventing and controlling dental diseases and disorders which can be applied on a community basis, to investigate and develop methods for extending the availability of dental care to the American people, and to provide professional and technical assistance relating to these activities. The increase in 1966 will be used primarily in the development of the epidemiological and training programs at the Dental Health Center, and in research and development in dental technology.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1963, $191 thousand (1964 adjustments, -$5 thousand); 1964, $219 thousand; 1965, $219 thousand; 1966, $219 thousand.

The division of nursing is concerned with the quality and quantity of nursing care essential to meet the health needs of the Nation. Its objective is the improvement of nursing practices of all kinds in hospitals, homes, health agencies and other allied medical care facilities. The problems related to education, nurse supply, distribution of nursing services, and nurse-patient relationships are dealt with by means of a balanced program of intramural research, consultation, research grants, fellowships, training grants, projects for improvement of nurse training, and payments to diploma schools of nursing.

1. Grants—(a) Research.—Grants are made to institutions and to individuals to undertake projects in the area of nursing research. Approximately 63 research projects will be supported in 1966, compared with 55 in 1965 and 64 in 1964.

(b) Fellowships.—Grants are awarded to individuals in order to increase the research manpower in the field of nursing. An estimated 75 fellowships will be supported in 1966, compared with an estimated 65 in 1965 and 66 in 1964.

(c) Training.—Research training grants are made to graduate schools of nursing to establish and expand training programs and to provide stipends to nurses. Approximately 5 grants will be awarded in 1966, compared with 5 grants in 1965 and 1964.

Grants are provided for traineeships to prepare graduate nurses to be teachers, supervisors, and administrators in all fields of nursing. The estimated number of trainees in 1966 is approximately 1,918 in the long-term program and 5,000 in the short-term program for a total of about 7,000 trainees compared with 1,643 long-term and 5,000 short-term trainees in 1965.

(d) Projects for improvement of nurse training.—These grants are to collegiate, associate degree and diploma schools of nursing to improve the quality of nurse training by means of expanding the content of programs of nursing education and improving the quality of teaching. The estimated new projects for 1966 are 15. It is estimated that approximately 50 projects in total will be supported in 1966.

(e) Payments to diploma schools of nursing.—These grants are made to diploma schools of nursing to defray a portion of the cost of training students whose enrollment can be attributed to the Nurse Training Act of 1964.

2. Research, training, and technical services.—By means of research, consultation, application of research findings, and administration of grants, professional guidance and leadership are provided to meet the goals of adequate nursing care. An increase in this activity in 1966 will provide for the ongoing program in improvement of nursing practices, insure the economical use of the new funds resulting from the Nurse Training Act of 1964 by supplying the supporting administrative services, and initiating a program of communication of nursing health knowledge.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1963, $282 thousand (1964 adjustments, -$1 thousand); 1964, $235 thousand; 1965, $235 thousand; 1966, $235 thousand.

Federal funds are provided on a grant or loan basis to assist States, other public agencies, and nonprofit organizations in the construction and modernization of hospitals, public health centers, etc.; special project planning grants; and hospital and medical facilities research. Funds for construction programs, other than the funds available for construction of university-affiliated facilities for the mentally retarded, are allocated to the States on the basis of a formula which takes into account population and per capita income.

1. Grants—(a) Construction of hospitals under the Public Health Service Act.—Federal funds are provided for the construction and modernization of hospitals, long-term care facilities, rehabilitation facilities, diagnostic or diagnostic and treatment centers, public health centers, and related health facilities. The modernization program which starts in 1966 will provide funds for the improvement of quality care hospitals that have become functionally or structurally obsolete and are becoming increasingly inefficient or unsafe to operate. The $260 million requested for 1966 will provide a $780 million program for that year, assuming that the Federal participation will average 33 1/3%.

(b) Construction of facilities for the mentally retarded.—Grants are made for the construction of university-affiliated facilities for the mentally retarded and for facilities for the mentally retarded. Funds available for the construction of university-affiliated mental retardation facilities are approved on a special project basis. The $22 million requested for 1966 will provide a $45 million program for that year, assuming that the Federal participation will average 50%.

2. Special project planning grants.—Grants are made to local lay and professional groups and organizations in the activation and continued operation of the areawide health-facility planning program. The $5 million requested for 1966 will stimulate the organization and operation of such groups.

3. Hospital and medical facilities research.—Funds are provided to permit research, experiments, and demonstrations relating to the effective development and utilization of hospital services and resources, and to make grants-in-aid to States, political subdivisions, universities, hospitals, and other public and private nonprofit institutions or organizations for such projects; funds are also provided to public and nonprofit agencies for the construction of experimental units of hospital and other health facilities.

4. Operations and technical services.—State agencies are provided technical assistance in making inventories of their hospitals, public health centers, and other health facilities in determining the type, size, and location of additional facilities required, and in developing programs, to meet the indicated needs. Technical assistance is also provided to States and to communities regarding the planning, programing, and design of hospital and other medical facilities, including facilities for the care of the mentally retarded. Proposed hospital and other health facility projects are reviewed to determine eligibility and compliance with the law and regulations. State plans and their annual revisions are reviewed and approved. Project applications, plans and specifications, wage rates, and contracts are reviewed for compliance with standards, and surveillance is maintained over projects under construction. Payments are computed and made as construction progresses and when final payment is in order.

Federal funds are provided on an individual project basis to assist in the construction of medical, dental, pharmaceutical, optometric, podiatric, osteopathic, and public health teaching facilities under the provisions of Public Law 88-129 (approved September 24, 1963) and the construction of schools of nursing under the provisions of Public Law 88-581 (approved September 4, 1964). These funds provide the basis for expanding and rehabilitating teaching facilities and represent an important step in increasing the supply of vitally needed physicians, dentists, nurses, and other health professions personnel.

1. Grants—(a) Construction of teaching facilities for medical, dental, and other health personnel.—Grants are made to public and other nonprofit agencies and organizations for construction of teaching facilities for medical, dental, and other health personnel. As of July 31, 1964, institutions have submitted 184 letters of intent. Of these, 137 estimates have been received, indicating a need of over $1 billion in total construction costs. The $75 million requested for 1966 will provide a $150 million program for that year, assuming that the Federal participation will average 50%.

(b) Construction of teaching facilities for nurses.—Grants are made to public and other nonprofit organizations for construction of teaching facilities for nurses. As of July 31, 1964, institutions have submitted 67 letters of intent. Of these, 43 estimates have been received, indicating a need of over $65 million in total construction costs. The $15 million requested for 1966 will provide a $30 million program for that year, assuming that the Federal participation will average 50%.

2. Operations and technical services.—Planning agencies and sponsoring institutions are provided technical assistance in (a) assessing and evaluating their teaching facility needs, (b) determining the type, size, and location of additional facilities required, (c) developing coordinated and well-balanced teaching programs, and (d) planning, programing, and designing teaching facilities. Applications for aid in constructing teaching facilities are reviewed to determine their eligibility and compliance with the law and regulations. Site visits are made of proposed projects for the purpose of evaluating the validity of and need for teaching facilities proposed and establishing the basis for determination regarding relative priority. Plans and specifications are reviewed for compliance with standards, surveillance is maintained over contract awards, payment of approved wage rates and other aspects of construction, and payments are certified based on the inspections of site work. Funds for construction purposes are committed for the projects after consultation with the appropriate National Advisory Council. Payments are computed and made as construction progresses.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders 1963, $0; 1964, $154 thousand; 1965, $154 thousand; 1966, $154 thousand.

This appropriation finances extramural and intramural research and training activities which are basic to all environmental health programs. These activities, together with those funded by the categorical appropriations, make possible a unified approach to the study of the health of man in his total environment.

1. Grants—(a) Research.—Research grants which are multicategorical in purpose or scope and which cannot be appropriately funded in a categorical appropriation are awarded to organizations and institutions for the conduct of basic research in all environmental health scientific areas. This includes the establishment of institutes for research and research training which are located within academic institutions regionally distributed throughout the Nation. Approximately 59 projects will be supported in 1966 as compared to 37 in 1965 and 23 in 1964; 5 of the 59 projects proposed for 1966 will be university institutes for environmental health sciences.

(b) Training.—Grants are made to colleges and universities to provide support for the development and improvement of broad-based engineering and scientific competencies required for environmental health research. Approximately 55 projects will be supported in 1966 as compared to 45 in 1965.

2. Arctic Health Research Center.—At the research center in Alaska, studies are conducted on problems of environmental sanitation, endemic and epidemic communicable diseases, including diseases transmissible from animals to man, and the nutritional and physiological aspects of arctic life. The increase requested in 1966 will be used for the transfer of the environmental sanitation section from Anchorage, Alaska to the new water pollution control field laboratory in Fairbanks, Alaska.

3. Research, training, and technical services.—Research on problems of common interest to all environmental health programs is undertaken in environmental toxicology, epidemiology, and pesticides. The increase requested in 1966 will permit emphasis on development of more sensitive methods for toxicological analysis and biological assessment; expansion of the pesticide registration program, the pesticide intelligence system, and the nine community studies initiated in 1965, together with initiation of three new ones.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1963, $993 thousand (1964 adjustments, -$112 thousand); 1964, $992 thousand; 1965, $992 thousand; 1966, $992 thousand.

The Public Health Service has the responsibility for the investigation of the causes of air pollution, the determination of the effects of air pollution upon life and property, the development of effective means of prevention and control of air pollution, and the development of air quality criteria. These problems are dealt with through a coordinated program of basic applied research, grants-in-aid to air pollution control agencies, abatement proceedings in certain cases, technical services to State and local agencies, and a training program designed to provide competencies necessary to cope with the complex problems of air pollution. To augment and accelerate the research program, extensive use is made of existing technical facilities in other Federal agencies and other public and private research organizations through grants and contracts.

1. Grants—(a) Research.—Research grants are made primarily to universities and institutions to conduct research into air pollution problems. Approximately 138 grants will be supported in 1966 as compared to 138 in 1965 and 111 in 1964.

(b) Fellowships.—Fellowship awards support individual post-graduate training in air pollution research and control activities. It is estimated that 57 fellowships will be supported in 1966 as compared to 38 in 1965 and 19 in 1964.

(c) Training.—Grants are awarded to universities to support the development and improvement of graduate level air pollution curricula and to provide student stipends. Approximately 26 grants will be awarded in 1966 as compared to 19 in 1965 and 17 in 1964.

(d) Control programs.—Grants are made to State and local air pollution control agencies on a matching basis for the purpose of establishing, developing, or improving programs for the prevention and control of air pollution. This new authority has been provided in the Clean Air Act as a basic means for assisting the States and communities in meeting their air pollution problems more effectively. Approximately 200 grants will be awarded in 1966.

(e) Survey and demonstration.—Grants are made to States and communities for surveys to assess their air pollution problems. In 1966, it is estimated that from 30 to 40 survey grants will be awarded. Demonstration grants will be awarded in future years after completion of the assessment program.

2. Research, training, technical services, and abatement.—Research activities concerned with the extraction of sulfur from fuels, development of air quality criteria, and development of devices and processes for the prevention of air pollution will be expanded to meet the responsibilities placed upon the program by the Clean Air Act. Meteorological studies concerned with the intra- and inter-urban transport of air pollutants and assessment of automotive emission control through design and modification of engines and related equipment will receive emphasis. Short-term technical training on all aspects of air pollution is provided by the Public Health Service to State and local agency personnel and to industrial personnel responsible for industrial plant air pollution control. Technical services provided to State and local agencies, universities, and industry through consultations, collaborative surveys, and dissemination of technical information are of importance as a result of the increased responsibilities under the Clean Air Act. A technical information center, which will serve as a clearinghouse for all air pollution information and coordinate the collection and dissemination of a wide variety of technical information, will be activated. Abatement activities required under the provisions of the Clean Air Act, including those relating to pollution from Federal facilities, will become operational in 1965. These activities include the technical fact finding, conference and hearing procedures, and related administrative and legal aspects provided for in the act.

This program provides national leadership for improving public health protection through research and technical assistance to States, municipalities, and industry to assist them in coping with health problems of the environment. To assure that only safe water, milk, shellfish, and food supplies are served to the public and to the 2 million travelers carried per day on interstate conveyances, and to stimulate creation and maintenance of healthful environments, the operating functions of research, standards development, and application must be augmented and improved in areas affected by rapidly changing technology.

1. Research grants.—The research grants program enables investigators at universities and other research institutions to conduct research in milk, food, and shellfish sanitation and technology, solid wastes disposal, individual water supply and sewage disposal, recreational sanitation, swimming pool and bathing place microbiology and control, and engineering in relation to planning to alleviate health problems of metropolitan areas. Approximately 209 research projects will be supported in 1966, as compared to 232 in 1965 and 234 in 1964.

2. Research, training, and technical services.—By means of research, standards development, interstate regulatory and certification activities, consultation, application of research findings, technical assistance, training, and inspections, professional guidance and leadership are provided to States and local communities for improved health protection of the public. The increase in 1966 will provide for research on the prevention of botulism poisoning; for developing a program of housing hygiene and related residential environmental health; for an environmental sanitation demonstration project in a selected United States-Mexico border area; and for additional resources to carry out basic interstate shellfish certification responsibilities.

The Public Health Service has responsibility for conducting a national program for the prevention and control of radiological hazards to public health. The Service is conducting a program to assess the levels and effects of radiation exposure and, in cooperation with other agencies at Federal, State, and local levels, to minimize such dangers. Such a program involves both basic and applied research on the sources, levels, and effects of radiation as well as means of protecting the public; the provision of technical information and assistance to State and local agencies in developing their own radiation protection programs; and a training program to provide the competencies needed in this new and expanding area of radiation protection and control.

1. Grants—(a) Research.—Research grants are administered to complement intramural research as an integral part of the overall research effort and to capitalize on the talents of nongovernmental scientists. Approximately 96 research projects will be supported in 1966 as compared to 95 in 1965 and 98 in 1964.

(b) Training.—Grants are made to institutions to provide support of new or expanded programs for training of radiological health specialists of the professional and technical level. Support of approximately 65 training projects will be provided in 1966 as compared to an estimated 61 in 1965 and 46 in 1964.

(c) State program development.—Grants are made to States to provide financial assistance in the development of comprehensive State radiological health programs. Funds are allotted in accordance with a formula based on population, financial need, and the extent of the problem, with the requirement that they be matched by State funds on a 1-to-1 basis.

2. Research, training, and technical services.—Measurement and surveillance is performed to determine the levels of radiation exposure of man from all sources. Research is carried out to determine the biological effects, somatic and genetic, of such exposure, as well as means by which exposures can be reduced or prevented. Technical services are supplied to other Federal agencies, States, and local authorities. Training courses for State, local, and industry personnel are conducted through the training facilities in Rockville, Md., and at the Sanitary Engineering Center, Cincinnati, Ohio, as well as at various field locations such as Montgomery, Ala., Las Vegas, Nev., and Winchester, Mass.

Overall program operations for 1966 will remain at approximately the 1965 level. Due to the "limited test-ban treaty" some deemphasis in environmental contamination from radioactive materials, especially in the frequency of sampling and analysis for fallout due to atmospheric testing, is planned; consequently, a relative increase in measurement and surveillance activities related to medical and dental X-rays is proposed. The increased funds requested for 1966 are for annual rental costs of the new leased facility for the Southwestern Radiological Health Laboratory at Las Vegas, Nev., and equipment costs necessary for the operation of the facility.

Grants are made to State, municipal, intermunicipal, and interstate agencies to stimulate and assist in the construction of sewage treatment works. Funds are allocated to States and other jurisdictions on the basis of population and per capita income. Funds allotted to a State which are not obligated within 6 months following the end of the year for which appropriated are subject to reallocation to States having unmet needs. Before any funds are withdrawn from a State, however, additional grants may be made to communities experiencing Federal impact. State water pollution control agencies certify individual project priorities on the basis of the extent of water pollution and financial need. The Federal Government makes grant offers directly to the municipal or other sponsor of certified projects and administers the grants.

A grant may not exceed $600 thousand or 30% of the cost of the project for which it was awarded, whichever is smaller. Where a project serves more than one municipality, the grant is computed on the basis of each community's share of the project cost, under the 30% or $600 thousand limitations, but the aggregate amount of the grant may not exceed $2.4 million.

The 1961 amendments to the Federal Water Pollution Control Act authorized an annual level of Federal grant money of $90 million for 1963 and $100 million for 1964-67. However, in 1964 and 1965 Congress appropriated $90 million on the basis of a $100 million allocation.

This estimate provides the maximum amount authorized for 1966.

1. Inpatient and outpatient care.—With the closing in 1965 of the Chicago and Memphis hospitals, the remaining 10 general hospitals, 2 psychiatric hospitals, and a leprosy hospital will be operated to provide medical and dental care to the legal beneficiaries of the Public Health Service. In the general hospitals, the primary direct beneficiaries cared for are American seamen, coastguardsmen and their dependents and Government employees injured in the course of their work. Reimbursable care is furnished for patients of other agencies, the largest segment thus provided for being Department of Defense personnel and their dependents. Estimated inpatient workloads by type of hospital are expected to be as follows:

The estimates for 1966 reflect savings from the proposed closing of two hospitals, cost of care of patients hospitalized in contract facilities, provision of staff for the added workload of increased outpatient visits and the care of new fisherman beneficiaries, staff increases to improve patient-staff ratios, enlargement of the intern and resident training program, and the initiation of a 4-year plan to eliminate the backlog of equipment replacement needs in these hospitals. Funds are included in the budget estimate for the Buildings and facilities appropriation to plan the modernization of the five largest hospitals.

2. Coast Guard medical services.—Medical services are provided for Coast Guard personnel at shore stations and on vessels.

3. Operation of health units.—The Service operates health programs for Federal agencies on a reimbursable basis. Consultative and related services are performed for Federal agencies relative to their employee health programs.

4. Personnel detailed to other agencies.—Medical, dental, and other professional personnel are detailed to certain other Federal agencies on a reimbursable basis.

5. Payments to Hawaii.—Grants are made to Hawaii to defray the cost of care and treatment of persons afflicted with leprosy. Average daily patient load is expected to be 268 in 1966, compared with 274 in 1964 and 272 in 1965. A supplemental appropriation is anticipated for 1965.

Quarantine and visa medical examination activities.—Aliens and visa applicants are examined in order to exclude those who are physically or mentally defective and to prevent issuance of visas to persons medically excludable from the United States. Other inspections are made to prevent the introduction into the United States of quarantinable and other communicable diseases.

Increases in 1966 are for (a) cost of increased social security contributions; (b) increased reimbursements to State Department for administrative support; (c) increased cost of civil service retirement for foreign service nationals; and (d) extending to two new locations in foreign countries the physical examination of visa applicants by personnel under contract with the Public Health Service.

NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH

The National Institutes of Health constitutes the primary research arm of the Public Health Service. It is made up of the following nine individual institutes, each with responsibility for a particular disease category: National Institute of General Medical Sciences, National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, National Cancer Institute, National Institute of Mental Health, National Heart Institute, National Institute of Dental Research, National Institute of Arthritis and Metabolic Diseases, National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, and the National Institute of Neurological Diseases and Blindness. There are also three program divisions, the Division of Biologics Standards, the Division of Research Facilities and Resources, and the Division of Computer Research and Technology.

Operations of the Institutes and Divisions are divided between grant programs largely for support of research and for training of individuals and activities performed directly or through contracts by the Service. A portion of the funds from each of the operating appropriations is pooled through a management fund to provide central services for all Institutes.

A distribution of obligations for the National Institutes of Health by major activity follows (in thousands of dollars):

The major activities shown in the table above are common to all Institutes and are described below. The workload, where applicable, is shown under the appropriate

Institute together with an explanation of any unique activities.

Grants—Research.—Grants are made to institutions and to individuals to undertake research projects in the medical and biological sciences. Grants are awarded by the Surgeon General on the basis of merit after review and recommendation by scientifically competent study groups and the appropriate national advisory council.

Fellowships.—Grants are made to individuals in order to increase the research manpower in the medical sciences. There are several different types of awards such as predoctoral, postdoctoral, special, research career awards, and foreign research fellowships, each designed to develop research talent. Fellowships are reviewed by specialty boards and advisory councils and are awarded on the basis of merit.

Training.—Grants are made to institutions to develop or support training programs in the medical sciences and to individual trainees to enable them to undertake special training at an institution of their choice. Awards are made to both graduates and undergraduates. Both institutional and individual grants are awarded by the Surgeon General on the basis of merit after review by an appropriate advisory council.

State control programs.—Funds are provided to States and Territories on a formula basis for strengthening State and local clinical and educational services in mental health areas.

Direct operations—Research.—The National Institutes of Health conduct research activities largely within the framework of the various specific Institutes, directed to the disease categories represented thereby.

Collaborative studies.—Categorical research programs are conducted by investigators in collaboration with other Federal institutions and non-Federal institutions through direct operations or contracts in Bethesda and in dispersed geographical locations.

Professional and technical assistance.—Professional guidance and leadership in mental health activities are provided to States and other interested organizations in the knowledge and application of research findings through the provision of consultative services, demonstrations, training, field studies, and investigations of improved methodology.

Review and approval of grants.—Applications for research grants, fellowships, and training grants are reviewed for merit by panels of private professional and lay persons distinguished in the field of medical science. Staff of the National Institutes of Health provide the administrative support and executive direction for the national advisory councils and study sections.

The Office of International Research, the Division of Research Facilities and Resources, and the Division of Computer Research and Technology are financed from the appropriation General research and services.

There is an appropriation for each of the other nine Institutes and for the Division of Biologics Standards which is responsible for the Public Health regulations pertaining to control and preparation of biological products and conduct of related research.

The program for translation of research publications is designed to continue to encourage and support international communication in the sciences relating to health. Research projects on collection and analysis of morbidity and mortality data are also supported.

The National Library of Medicine constitutes a national resource for the collection, analysis, and dissemination of worldwide scientific information related to medicine, public health, and biomedical research, and for the support and development of biomedical communications conducted through the national medical library network. It provides interlibrary loans, reference and search services, and has developed and activated the Medical Literature Analysis and Retrieval System (MEDLARS), a computerized system for the improved analysis, management, and dissemination of published information related to medicine for the purpose of strengthening the medical communication process.

The 1966 program includes funds to strengthen basic library services in response to increasing demands, and for the expansion and improvement of bibliographic and reference services through the central MEDLARS system, as well as for the establishment of additional decentralized MEDLARS search centers at university locations. Funds are provided to support the development of new methods of indexing and input for the MEDLARS system, and for strengthening photoduplication services, including the preservation of the Library's collections in the face of deterioration. Special attention will be given to improving the organization, management, and dissemination of published drug information.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1963, $15,050 thousand; 1964 adjustments (-$165 thousand); 1964, $11,936 thousand; 1965, $5,340 thousand; 1966, $8,235 thousand.

1. Medical stockpile.—The goal of this activity is to insure to the greatest extent possible the availability of adequate and usable medical supplies and equipment for civilian needs in time of disaster. Medical supplies and equipment are assembled into emergency hospitals that are pre-positioned in strategic locations under written agreement between the Federal Government and the custodial State. Funds previously appropriated provided for 2,820 such hospitals. The estimate for 1966 provides for the partial replacement of deteriorated supplies in the stockpile; the procurement of supplies to increase the operational capability of 1,930 pre-positioned hospitals having a 3-day supply to a 30-day supply of materials; increased maintenance activities of stock surveillance and quality control measures; and for placement of reserve bulk stocks in secured underground storage facilities.

Under proposed legislation, 1966.—Legislation is recommended:

1. To begin a 5-year program to establish regional medical care, research, and training complexes to be operated in conjunction with university medical schools and planned jointly with the communities to be served. Each would include regional centers capable of providing complicated expensive diagnostic and treatment services for a variety of ailments, including heart disease, cancer and stroke. These centers would be supported by diagnostic and treatment stations in existing community hospitals. Grants will be available for construction and operating expenses.

2. To authorize a 5-year program of grants to support initial staffing costs of community mental health centers which provide comprehensive services. The aid would be limited to the first few years of operation on a progressively decreasing basis.

3. To provide operating support for schools of medicine and dentistry, the grants to be determined, in part, by the increase in enrollment resulting from enactment of the Health Professions Educational Assistance Act of 1963.

4. For other proposals to (a) assist in the establishment of group practice facilities through loans and guaranteed loans, (b) provide Public Health Service wide authority to make grants to universities for specialized research and training facilities, and (c) authorize program development grants for mental retardation programs.

Under proposed legislation, 1966.—As part of the Administration's program for the control of environmental pollution and promotion of natural beauty, legislation is proposed to stimulate action to prevent and eliminate pollution caused by combined storm sewers and sanitary sewers. Combined sewer systems are the source of substantial river pollution, especially in the vicinity of our older cities. Funds proposed will be used to make project grants for research and demonstrations, and construction of separate sewers or other means for avoiding pollution from combined sewers.

The estimate also includes funds (a) to strengthen enforcement of water and air pollution control measures, (b) to provide for increased grants to State water pollution control agencies, (c) to make possible additional control funds to State and local agencies under the Clean Air Act, and (d) to initiate research, demonstrations and construction of facilities for the disposal of refuse and other solid waste.

The National Institutes of Health management fund was established to facilitate the conduct of operations of the National Institutes of Health which are financed by two or more appropriations. The activities of the fund are financed primarily from advances and reimbursements from the several institutes. Formulas for determining the contribution from each institute are designed to reflect utilization of services performed by the management fund. Taken into consideration are such factors as the number of activated beds in the clinical center, number of laboratory workers, total personnel, and dollar level of grant, direct research, and direct operations funds obligated by the Institute. A small portion of the funds comes from reimbursements from outside sources, principally cafeteria receipts, and from other Government agencies.

The centralized organizations of the National Institutes of Health provide supporting services to all programs as follows:

1. Research supporting services provide the central administration and operation of services for the conduct of research activities such as the planning and supervising the design, construction, and development of new research facilities; providing laboratory animals, culture media, and glassware; design and fabrication of laboratory instrumentation; operating the NIH medical reference library including the translation of medical literature; scientific photography and medical arts; maintenance and alteration of all physical facilities including utility services; and environmental engineering services.

2. Clinical supporting services consist of the operation of the 516-bed clinical center together with the laboratory space required for the treatment of research patients.

3. Administrative management includes personnel, supply, financial management, office services, plant safety, management audit and analyses, audit of activated grants, and printing and reproduction.

4. Program direction provides for the executive direction and planning of intramural and extramural research.

5. Review and approval of grants provides procedures and policies governing the scientific and technical review of applications for research project grant programs, program project grants, fellowships, and training grants. Performs application processing services, program reporting and analytical services, overall program coordination, central records, and administration.

6. The cafeteria of the clinical center is operated by the nutrition department and furnishes meals for sale to the employees and visitors at rates sufficient to cover the reasonable value of the meals served. Income and expenses for 1964, 1965, and 1966 are as follows:

Budget program.—The principal activities of the fund are carried out at (a) the Supply Service Center (formerly the medical supply depot) at Perry Point, Md., which maintains inventories of medical stock and supplies to meet, in part, the requirements of the Public Health Service and requisitions of other Government organizations; (b) the National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Md., which maintain a central supply of scientific and general-use materials, supplies, and special equipment; and also provides services such as animal production, statistical processing, and instrumentation for the Institutes; and (c) the Division of Finance, Washington, D.C., which finances accounting, auditing, and electronic data processing services for bureaus and divisions of the Public Health Service.

Operating results.—Retained earnings amounted to $358 thousand as of June 30, 1964, and are being retained in the fund against the possibility of future losses.

Budget program.—Farms and other industries operated at the Fort Worth, Tex., and Lexington, Ky., narcotic hospitals provide patients with occupational outlets as a part of their therapeutic rehabilitation. Useful products are made for sale to the hospitals and other Government institutions (42 U.S.C. 258). The investment of the U.S. Government at the end of 1966 is estimated at $615 thousand including $134 thousand in appropriation and $95 thousand in donated assets. Earnings are retained to meet possible future losses.

Saint Elizabeths Hospital provides treatment and care for the mentally ill who are either beneficiaries of the Federal Government or residents of the District of Columbia, the latter group representing approximately 80% of the average daily patient load. The hospital conducts training in the medical, nursing, and associated disciplines concerned with the treatment of psychiatric patients, and conducts, or cooperates in, scientific research activities dealing with mental illness.

Programs of the hospital are financed by this appropriation covering treatment and care of Federal beneficiaries and by reimbursements made to the hospital for services rendered other patient groups, principally residents of the District of Columbia. Federal appropriations to the hospital are of the indefinite type, under which the hospital receives in appropriated funds the difference between the amount of reimbursements actually received during the fiscal year and the total program costs approved by the Congress. Reimbursement rates for reimbursable patient groups other than District of Columbia residents are based on a pro-rata share of the total program costs. Charges to the District of Columbia are based on the estimated current mean cost per patient day experienced by the upper 10% of State mental hospitals—a cost of $9.74 in 1965 and $10.43 in 1966. The total cost of this hospital's operation, including research and training, is estimated at $13.89 per patient day.

Increases in the 1966 appropriation are primarily the result of (a) larger stipends paid to interns and residents training at Saint Elizabeths, and (b) an increase in the amount of equipment that will need replacing during 1966.

1. Operation and maintenance.—This activity covers the protective, therapeutic and rehabilitative programs of the hospital, maintenance of hospital buildings, procurement of supplies and materials, and the provision of necessary administrative services. Actual and estimated average daily patient load is as follows:

2. Training and Education.—The training and education program at Saint Elizabeths Hospital provides multi-disciplinary clinical training for professional and ancillary personnel engaged in or interested in mental health activities.

3. Research.—The hospital plans, develops and carries out coordinated research programs and projects for the purpose of obtaining a better understanding of the causes of mental disorders, and of the factors bearing upon their development, treatment and possible prevention. A close working relationship with the National Institute of Mental Health is maintained and the resources of both institutions are often combined in unified endeavors.

This appropriation covers all construction and facility improvement items of Saint Elizabeths Hospital. Projects underway or proposed for initiation in 1966 are set forth below:

1. Construction and equipment, continued treatment building (rehabilitation center).—Plans and specifications for this 450-bed treatment facility are complete. Solicitation of bids for the construction contract has been deferred pending resolution of the building's relationship to community mental health program plans for the District of Columbia.

2. Miscellaneous improvements of existing facilities.—Funds requested will provide for (a) rewiring and extension of electrical facilities, (b) installation of insect screens in patients' buildings, (c) modernization of dishwashing installations, (d) plumbing modernization and improvement, (e) improvements in the hot water generation system, (f) renovation of a portion of the hospital's railroad roadbed, (g) air conditioning of a treatment building, (h) improvement of the ventilation systems in two treatment buildings, (i) a comprehensive facility survey of the hospital, (j) construction of an addition to the fire house, (k) improvement of employee locker facilities, (l) replacement, improvement, and extension of bedpan sterilizing facilities.

3. Construction and equipment, treatment and cafeteria building.—This facility houses 250 patients and provides food service for these plus 400 others from two adjacent buildings. Construction and landscaping are complete, the building is fully occupied, and final installation of certain items of fixed equipment will be completed early in the current fiscal year. Demolition of old structures to be replaced by this facility will also be undertaken during 1965.

4. Extension and modernization of administration building.—The hospital's administration building has been remodeled to provide more adequate space and facilities. All remodeled areas are now in use. Certain areas of the basement are being waterproofed and when this phase of the work is completed early in the current fiscal year, the project will be complete.

5. Construction and equipment, maximum security building.—Construction and equipping of the hospital's 396-bed maximum security facility was completed during 1964.

6. Construction and equipment, security facility.—Funds requested will provide for the development of a comprehensive program statement for a security facility, housing 400 patients, which will contain maximum, medium, and minimum security features. The proposed construction will make possible the demolition of two antiquated patient buildings, constructed in 1879 and 1899.

The old-age, survivors and disability insurance program protects over 90 percent of the workers in the United States and their families against the loss of earnings due to old-age, disability or death. People covered under this program contribute a small portion of their earnings during their work years to pay for this protection. Employers match the contributions made by their employees. These contributions are deposited in the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund and the Federal disability insurance trust fund, from which benefit payments and administrative costs are paid.

Major amendments to the Social Security Act have been enacted during the last 15 years. These amendments have increased the protection provided by the retirement and survivors insurance phase of the program, and have added a disability program which provides for monthly insurance benefits for disabled workers of any age and their dependents.

1. Maintenance of earnings accounts.—Eligibility for insurance benefits and the amount of benefit payments are based on records of an individual's earnings maintained by the Social Security Administration and the volume of work is related to certain factors such as level of employment and rate of turnover. Continuing increases in covered employment in 1965 and 1966, as the total labor force grows and unemployment declines, will result in a greater number of postings to workers' accounts.

Earnings items:	1964 actual	1965 estimate	1966 estimate
Received.....	272,508,786	285,676,000	301,700,000
Processed.....	272,095,910	285,676,000	301,700,000

2. Processing OASI claims.—Prospective beneficiaries file claims in more than 600 district offices located throughout the country. Claims received increase in 1965 and 1966 because of the expected increase in the number of aged persons in the population, in the size of the total population insured for survivor benefits, and in the proportion of persons reaching retirement age who are insured.

OASI claims applications:	1964 actual	1965 estimate	1966 estimate

Processed.....	2,816,150	2,916,900	3,016,000

3. Maintenance of OASI beneficiary rolls.—The beneficiary rolls require continuous revision to insure the prompt mailing of benefit checks each month to beneficiaries who are entitled to them, and to discontinue such checks when eligibility for benefits is interrupted or ends. The number of OASI beneficiaries in current pay status and consequently the amount of OASI benefit payments will continue to rise each year.

OASI beneficiaries in current pay status at end of year.....	1964 actual	1965 estimate	1966 estimate
	17,954,085	18,837,000	19,572,000
OASI benefit payments (in millions).....	$14,579	$15,253	$16,030

4. Processing disability claims and maintaining beneficiary rolls.—Claims for disability insurance benefits are filed in the Administration's district offices. Most of these cases are sent to State agencies where determinations of the existence of a disability are made. These determinations are reviewed in the central office of the Social Security Administration to assure uniformity among States. Enactment of legislation (Public Law 88-650) during the second session of the 88th Congress removed the 18-month limitation on retroactively establishing a period of disability which will increase the proportion of claims applications requiring a disability determination. Also, a total of 51,000 applications from disabled workers who previously filed for benefits but who could not qualify because of the existence of this limitation, will be processed in 1965. The applications from these workers plus those expected from their dependents are included in the estimates below and cause the larger than normal increase in 1965.

The number of disability beneficiaries in payment status and the amount of benefit payments will continue to rise with the increase in the disability claims load.

	1964 actual	1965 estimate	1966 estimate
Disability claims applications:
Received.....	681,386	794,700	757,000

Disability benefit payments (in millions).....	$1,251	$1,416	$1,485

5. Hearings and appeals.—Individuals whose claims are disallowed have a right to appeal to the Bureau of Hearings and Appeals. The increased number of hearings requests anticipated in 1965 and 1966 are related principally to the projected increase in disability claims, to an expected higher proportion of initial claims moving to the appeals stage, and to the effect of legislation removing the limitation on establishing a period of disability.

Requests for hearings:	1964 actual	1965 estimate	1966 estimate
Received.....	21,355	27,545	29,260
Processed.....	23,362	26,800	30,000

6. Administration.—This activity includes direction and management of the Social Security Administration, program planning and evaluation, actuarial and statistical services, and general service functions.

7. Internal Revenue Service enumeration project.—This project covers work done by the Social Security Administration for the Internal Revenue Service in issuing account numbers for taxpayer identification purposes. The work performed in 1963 and 1964 was financed initially from the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund with reimbursement to be made after the completion of the project in 1964.

8. Contingency reserve.—This reserve ($10 million) represents funds to be made available only to the extent necessary to process workloads not anticipated in the budget estimates. An estimated $8.7 million will be used from the contingency in 1965 principally because of the unbudgeted work loads related to disability legislation enacted in the second session of the 88th Congress.

Funds are requested from the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund and the Federal disability insurance trust fund to provide for construction of an additional office building and warehouse at headquarters in Woodlawn, Md., and for acquisition of sites, design and construction of 13 district offices.

1. Headquarters construction.—Continued growth of the social security program has rendered existing headquarters facilities inadequate. The 1965 limitation provided $450 thousand for planning an additional office building and warehouse and the 1966 request of $8,729 thousand provides for construction of these buildings. Construction of additional buildings at the headquarters site will permit the release of all commercial space currently leased in the Baltimore area with the exception of district offices and provide housing for additional staff requirements related to the growth of the present program over the next 10 years.

2. District office construction.—Construction is planned in areas where improvement in district office space is needed and construction is both advantageous and feasible. The 1965 limitation provided $5.3 million for the acquisition of sites, and for design and construction of 25 district offices for the Social Security Administration. Funds requested for 1966 will permit the construction of 13 additional offices. This proposal contemplates that funds for additional district office construction will be requested in 1967 and 1968.

Grants to States for old-age assistance, medical assistance for the aged, aid to families with dependent children, aid to the blind, and aid to the permanently and totally disabled are made to States that have plans for these programs approved by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Effective October 1, 1962, as an alternative to separate plans for each program, it became possible for States to receive grants under a combined single plan for the adult assistance programs, that is old-age assistance, medical assistance for the aged, aid to the blind, and aid to the permanently and totally disabled. As of December 1, 1964, 14 jurisdictions had a combined single plan for the adult assistance programs and 3 additional jurisdictions were expected to have such plans during the year 1965. Fifty-four jurisdictions including all the States, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands have approved plans for aid to families with dependent children; 37 jurisdictions, separate plans for old-age assistance and for aid to the blind; and 36 separate plans for aid to the permanently and totally disabled. Under the Social Security Amendments of 1960, Federal participation in programs for medical assistance for the aged became effective on October 1, 1960. State legislation was necessary in most States before they could initiate programs for medical assistance for the aged. The number of jurisdictions expected to have approved plans for this program is 44 in 1965 and 45 in 1966, including the 15 jurisdictions that will administer this program in each year under a combined single plan for the adult assistance programs.

Provisions for determining the Federal share of assistance payments—1. Provisions applicable under separate plans for programs of old-age assistance, aid to the blind, and aid to the permanently and totally disabled.—The amount of assistance payments subject to Federal participation is limited to a monthly average expenditure of $70 per recipient. (In addition under old-age assistance the Federal Government participates in up to an additional $15 per month in the form of payments for medical or remedial care, as described under item 3.) The average monthly amount is based on expenditures for money payments to recipients and direct agency payments to vendors for medical or remedial care. Within this maximum, the Federal share is twenty-nine thirty-fifths of the first $35 per recipient plus a proportion of the balance, which varies among States from 50 to 65% depending upon the per capita income of the State.

The foregoing provisions apply in all jurisdictions except Guam, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands; for these jurisdictions the Federal share is one-half of total expenditures within a maximum monthly average of $37.50 per recipient subject to an overall limitation on the total annual Federal funds for assistance and administration for all programs combined for each jurisdiction.

2. Provisions applicable under a single plan for the adult assistance programs.—Except for recipients of medical assistance for the aged, the provisions are the same as those applicable under the separate plans, as described in item 1. (Provisions for additional Federal participation in assistance payments, based on the amount of direct agency payments to vendors for medical or remedial care, known as vendor medical payments, are described under item 3.)

3. Provisions applicable under separate plans for old-age assistance and under a single plan for the adult assistance programs.—Additional Federal participation in assistance payments, beyond that described in items 1 and 2, is based on the amount of direct agency payments to vendors for medical or remedial care (vendor medical payments).

For States with average monthly payments over $70, the Federal Government participates in the expenditures in excess of that amount except that such participation is limited to the amount of the average vendor medical payment, with a maximum of $15. The Federal share in the excess expenditure consists of the "Federal medical percentage" for the State, which ranges from 50 to 80% under a formula based on per capita income.

For States with average monthly payments of $70 or less, the additional Federal share in average vendor medical payments up to $15 is an additional 15% over the usual "Federal percentage" (based on per capita income) applicable to the amount of payments falling between $35 and $70.

This percentage, when added to the usual "Federal percentage" for the second part of the payment, results in a total Federal share of from 65 to 80%. The additional Federal share of 15% also is available to States with average monthly payments over $70 when it is advantageous to them as an alternative to the method described in the preceding paragraph. For Guam, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, comparable provisions for direct agency payments to vendors for medical or remedial care are in effect.

4. Provisions applicable in medical assistance for the aged.—For all 54 jurisdictions the Federal share of expenditures for the program of medical assistance for the aged is the "Federal medical percentage" of the amounts expended by the State for such assistance. The "Federal medical percentages" for the individual States range from 50 to 80% under a formula based on per capita income. The Federal share is the same regardless of whether the program is administered under a separate plan or under a single plan for the adult assistance programs.

5. Provisions applicable in aid to families with dependent children.—For the 50 States and the District of Columbia, the amount of assistance payments subject to Federal participation is limited to a monthly average expenditure of $30 per child or adult recipient in the family. The average monthly amount is based on expenditures for money payments to recipients and payments to vendors for medical or remedial care. Within this maximum, the Federal share is fourteen-sevenths of the first $17 per recipient plus a proportion of the balance, which varies among States from 50 to 65%, depending upon the per capita income of the States. For Guam, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands the Federal share is one-half of total expenditures within a maximum monthly average of $18 per recipient and within an overall limitation on total annual Federal funds for assistance and administration for all programs combined for each jurisdiction. For purposes of determining the amount of payments subject to Federal participation, the count of recipients in all jurisdictions includes dependent children under 18 years of age, one relative caring for the children (usually the mother), and a second parent living in the home, if incapacitated or unemployed.

Provisions for determining the Federal share of administration, services, and training.—The Federal share is 75% of: (1) The cost of providing preventive and rehabilitative services that are specified by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare as (a) services that will help dependent persons to develop their capacities for self-care and self-support and to achieve greater family stability, and (b) services that may be provided, at their request, to persons likely to become dependent; and (2) the cost of staff training, including educational leave, and agency training sessions.

The Federal share of costs, other than those specified above, is 50%. These provisions are applicable in all programs and all jurisdictions.

Provision for demonstration projects.—Section 1115 of the Social Security Act provides that for 1963–67 up to $2 million of the amount appropriated for any year may be used to help meet the State share of costs of demonstration projects that could be expected to contribute significantly to existing knowledge about the kinds and scope of services or methods of work which enhance the agency's capacity to assist needy persons in solving problems that threaten the stability of family life and prevent persons from attaining self-support or self-care. The 1965 Appropriation Act contains a proviso, however, which prohibits the use of funds appropriated for 1965 for grants to States for public assistance to carry out the provisions of section 1115 of the act. It should be noted that prior to August 17, 1964, the date the Senate Appropriations Committee reported out the 1965 appropriation bill containing the above mentioned prohibition, grants totaling $279,650 for demonstration projects commencing in 1965 had been approved under Joint Resolution Authority. In addition, $1 million was transferred from the Office of Economic Opportunity, pursuant to Supplemental Appropriation Act of 1965 (Public Law 88–635) for the continuation of demonstration projects approved in the prior year under section 1115 of the Social Security Act, as amended.

Amount of request.—For 1966, the total amount of Federal, State, and local expenditures for assistance, for administration, services, and training, and for demonstration projects is estimated at $5,598.8 million of which $3,264.1 million represents the Federal share. The appropriation request of $3,242.1 million is $22 million less than the estimated Federal share, because the States will have available for expenditures $22 million representing the Federal share of collections and adjustments for prior years. Of the total Federal share, $1,403.8 million is for old-age assistance; $351.4 million for medical assistance for the aged; $1,125.7 million for aid to families with dependent children; $52 million for aid to the blind; $329.2 million for aid to the permanently and totally disabled; and $2 million is for demonstration projects. Of the total amount of $2,136.4 million for the adult categories, about $508.2 million represents the amount that will be spent in the States claiming Federal funds under title XVI, which permits States to have a combined single plan for the adult assistance programs.

It is estimated that a supplemental appropriation of $407.9 million will be required for 1965 in addition to the $2,781 million already appropriated. The supplemental is needed to finance costs beyond the amount appropriated under each of the public assistance programs for 1965 and to complete requirements for the fiscal year 1964.

The appropriation request of $3,242.1 million for 1966 is $53.2 million more than the adjusted appropriation of $2,781 million plus the supplemental request of $407.9 million for 1965. Excluding the amount of $41.9 million used from the 1965 estimate to complete requirements for 1964, and allowing for an increase of $11.9 million in the estimated amount of collections and adjustments for prior years in 1966, the amount of the increase from 1965 to 1966 is $106.9 million. All programs contribute to the increase for 1966 over 1965, with the largest increases, $43.6 million and $32.2 million, occurring in the programs of medical assistance for the aged and aid to families with dependent children, respectively.

The figures used in the tables appearing under the activities below include an anticipated supplemental request of $407.9 million for 1965; the figures shown in the program and financing schedule include only the $2,781 million already appropriated ($2,780 million in the regular 1965 Health, Education, and Welfare Appropriation Act and $1 million transferred from the Office of Economic Opportunity).

2. State and local administration, services, and training.—The Federal share is 75% of State and local costs of providing preventive and rehabilitative services, as defined by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare; and of the costs of training State and local personnel for more effective performance in administering the public assistance programs; and 50% of the other costs of State and local administration that are found by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare to be necessary for the proper and efficient administration of the State public assistance programs. The Federal share contributes toward the salaries and expenses of about 76,200 (including 1,900 additional staff to be hired in 1966 to give preventive and rehabilitative services) State and local personnel.

Total costs in 1966 are estimated at $26 million more than in 1965; $23 million of this increase will come from Federal funds. The increase in costs is attributable primarily to (1) staff increases to handle a larger number of recipients including those who are to receive medical assistance for the aged and to provide social services to recipients directed toward self-care, self-support, and strengthened family life; and (2) salary increases given to keep pace with rising living costs and to compete successfully with other professions and agencies for staff.

Under existing legislation, 1965.—In connection with its consideration of the regular Labor-Health, Education, and Welfare appropriation bill for 1965, Congress approved an appropriation of $2,780 million for grants to States for old-age assistance, medical assistance for the aged, aid to families with dependent children, aid to the blind, and aid to the permanently and totally disabled under titles I, IV, X, XIV, respectively, of the Social Security Act, as amended; or for assistance payments made under title XVI of the act, as amended.

Recent program trends and estimates submitted by the States indicate that the appropriation for 1965 will fall short of meeting the Federal share of State expenditures by an estimated $407.9 million. This amount includes $41,853 thousand from the 1965 appropriation used to complete 1964 requirements.

ASSISTANCE FOR REPATRIATED UNITED STATES NATIONALS

Public Law 86-571, approved July 5, 1960, provides for hospitalization and services to repatriated mentally ill U.S. nationals until arrangements can be made for assumption of responsibility by States of residence or family. This estimate assumes that a total of 87 mentally ill repatriates will require hospitalization in 1966. This compares with 79 who required hospital care in 1964, and 83 in 1965.

Public Law 87-64, approved June 30, 1961, as amended by Public Laws 87-543, approved June 25, 1962, and 88-347, approved June 30, 1964, authorized, under a new section 1113 of the Social Security Act, temporary assistance to U.S. citizens and their dependents who return to this country because of destitution, illness, or international crises and who are without available resources. Temporary assistance is provided for under this program as follows: (a) persons returned from Cuba—it is estimated an average of 3 cases per month will receive assistance in 1966 as compared to 22 in 1965 and 52 in 1964; and (b) persons returned from other countries—it is estimated a total of about 116 cases will require some form of assistance in 1966 as compared to 106 in 1965 and 96 in 1964.

The Bureau is responsible for the administration of grant-in-aid programs for old-age assistance, medical assistance for the aged, aid to families with dependent children, aid to the blind, and aid to the permanently and totally disabled. Approximately 8 million individuals are expected to receive aid under these programs in 1966, involving more than $5.5 billion in Federal, State, and local funds, of which over $3.25 billion will be Federal. These programs are intended to provide financial assistance, medical care, and other social services to assure the minimum essentials of living for specified groups: needy aged, blind, disabled, and children in families broken by death, incapacity, or absence of a parent, and for some families hard pressed because of unemployment.

The Bureau also administers a program of assistance for repatriated U.S. nationals who are returned from abroad because of mental or other kinds of illness, destitution, or international crises and who are without available resources.

1. Program policies and standards.—Requirements of the Social Security Act are interpreted and specialized technical assistance is provided to State agencies. There is special emphasis to assure that problems of public welfare, including methods of administration, are dealt with constructively. Considerable emphasis is being placed on alleviating and preventing dependency to the maximum extent possible through methods such as: increased development and utilization of social services, including community resources; community work and training programs; and better trained public welfare personnel.

2. Review State plans and grants, evaluate State operations.—Action is taken on new State plans and on amendments thereto to assure conformity to the act; reviews are made of operations and findings are used to assist States in administering their programs; consultation and advice are provided on problems arising in day-to-day operations; grants are processed; information is provided to the public.

3. Research and statistics.—Information is collected in cooperation with State agencies. Special analyses are undertaken to provide national statistics and other information on public assistance which are used by the Bureau and the States in formulating policies, planning program content, setting standards, making legislative recommendations, justifying appropriation requests, answering requests, and guiding administrative action.

The States are required to match one-half of the amounts appropriated for maternal and child health and crippled children's services. The remainder is distributed to the States in proportion to their financial need, except that not to exceed 12½% of the appropriations for the above programs is available for special project grants to State agencies and to public or nonprofit institutions of higher learning. The States are required to match all appropriated funds for child welfare services but the percent of matching required varies from 33½ to 66%. There are no specific matching requirements for the programs of grants for research, training, or demonstration projects in child welfare or grants for research projects relating to maternal and child health and crippled children's services.

1. Maternal and child health services.—Grants are provided to States for the extension and improvement of health services for mothers and children, especially in rural areas. It is proposed that $4.75 million of these grants be earmarked for special projects for mentally retarded children.

2. Crippled children's services.—Grants are made to States to extend and improve services for crippled children including medical, surgical, corrective, and other care, especially in rural areas. It is proposed that $3.75 million of these grants be earmarked for special projects for crippled children who are mentally retarded.

3. Child welfare services.—Grants aid States to establish, extend, and strengthen child welfare services for the protection and care of homeless, dependent, and neglected children, and children in danger of becoming delinquent, and for the return of runaway children to their own homes in other States. 1. Maternal and child health.—Studies, research, research planning, and research training in maternal and child health and handicapping conditions are proposed for eight countries because of research opportunities in special health fields to gain knowledge of value to the United States, to the country involved, and internationally.

2. Social welfare.—Studies of urban social welfare and specialized social services are proposed in seven countries because of country experiences and research facilities in programs such as urban migration, community development, methods to strengthen family life, improve child care and prevent juvenile delinquency, and services for the aging. Cooperative projects are undertaken to contribute new knowledge valuable to social welfare programs in the United States, the country concerned, and internationally.

A program to assist Cuban refugees in the United States was established by the President in 1961. During 1961 and 1962, the program was carried out under authorities in the Mutual Security Act of 1954, and the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961. On June 28, 1962, Public Law 87-510 was enacted which provides for assistance to such refugees.

As of June 30, 1964, 172,572 refugees had registered at the Cuban Refugee Center in Miami and 79,230 had been resettled under Government auspices to other locations in the United States. It is estimated that about 85,000 refugees remained as of that date in the Miami area. The program provides the following services for Cuban refugees in the United States:

1. Direction and coordination of program including reception, registration, and classification of refugees.—Provides Federal direction of the program and includes work with the refugees to prepare them for resettlement and employment. New registrations are estimated to total 5,200 persons in 1965 and 3,900 in 1966.

2. Welfare assistance and services.—State and private welfare agencies provide, on a reimbursable basis, to needy refugees financial assistance, hospitalization, surplus food as well as care for unaccompanied children. 30,300 persons were receiving financial assistance in Florida at the end of 1964. Primarily through resettlement-ment, the number is expected to decline to 20,000 at the end of 1965 and to 17,000 at the end of 1966.

3. Resettlement and employment opportunities.—Through contracts with various agencies, refugees are provided homes and jobs in areas other than Miami. During 1964, 16,742 persons were resettled. It is estimated that 15,600 and 13,000 persons will be resettled in 1965 and 1966.

4. Education.—Selected training is provided to equip the refugees for employment and resettlement. The average daily child population on whose behalf payments are made to meet part of the added cost to the Miami public schools is expected to decline from 16,690 in 1964 to about 15,400 and 8,000 in 1965 and 1966. Loans made to needy college students are expected to rise from 2,300 in 1964 to 3,000 and 3,500 in 1965 and 1966.

5. Health services.—These services are provided to new arrivals and to needy refugees in Miami and include medical screening, outpatient clinic services and care of patients with tuberculosis and mental illness.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

PUBLIC LAND MANAGEMENT

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

The Bureau of Land Management is responsible for the conservation, management and development of some 464 million acres of the Nation's public lands. This includes some 289 million acres of federally owned lands located in Alaska.

In addition, the Bureau administers mining and mineral leasing on other federally owned lands, on former Federal lands where minerals have been reserved in public ownership, and on the submerged lands of the Outer Continental Shelf.

The work of the Bureau produces revenue from various sources which is distributed as follows (in millions of dollars):

1. Lease and disposal of lands and mineral resources.—Applications are acted upon for all types of land use and for lease of mineral resources, principally oil and gas. Comprehensive inventory of land resources and field investigations are made in order to determine the best use of the resources. General information is disseminated to the public, including information contained in the land records, which are being modernized.

2. Management of grazing lands.—The 177 million acres of public lands available for grazing which are used by over 26,000 stockmen are managed and protected. Proper management of these lands provides protection from fire, erosion, overuse, unseasonal use and trespass, thereby perpetuating forage resources. The increase in 1966 will accelerate multiple-use management of the public lands, including the management of wildlife habitat.

3. Forestry.—A total of 46 million acres of commercial forest lands and 111 million acres of woodland-type lands are managed. The 1966 program includes the sale of 1.376 billion board feet of timber for anticipated receipts of $38.1 million. The 1966 program will provide for increased fire protection of forested areas.

4. Cadastral surveys.—Surveys are performed to: locate and identify legal boundaries of lands under application for lease or disposal, including submerged lands on the Outer Continental Shelf; assist in the resource management of public lands; provide legal descriptions needed by other Federal agencies; and to permit States to obtain title to lands granted them by law.

5. Soil and moisture conservation.—Public lands in critical condition from erosion are rehabilitated and restored to productivity. Areas infested by halogeton, medusahead and other noxious weeds are treated. Co-operative programs with local groups will be expanded. Increased funds will be used to halt deterioration and for cooperative wildlife management work with State agencies.

6. Fire suppression.—Fires are fought on or threatening lands under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Land Management. During the first 5 months of the current year, costs of suppression approximated $3.2 million. A supplemental appropriation for 1965 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

7. Maintenance of physical facilities.—Physical maintenance is provided for about 630 structures used as storehouses, equipment shelters, fire crew barracks and similar purposes. The increase in 1966 will provide for the increasing costs of current and deferred maintenance and for maintenance requirements resulting from construction of additional sanitation and protection facilities.

8. Maintenance of access roads.—Maintenance is provided for access roads on Coos Bay Wagon Road grant lands and on the public lands. The increase in 1966 will provide for the acceleration of repair work to restore roads to usable condition. Preventive as well as corrective maintenance will be performed on nearly 5,800 miles of existing roads.

9. General administration.—Executive direction is provided and services such as financial and personnel management, procurement, management analysis, and internal auditing are performed in support of the programs of the Bureau. The increase in 1966 will provide for expansion in administrative support of enlarged resource management programs, and for augmented staffs to improve administrative systems, especially those that can contribute to better manpower and fund utilization.

1. Educational assistance, facilities and services.—The Bureau operates Federal school facilities where public schools are not available or cannot meet the special needs of Indian children. Financial assistance is extended to public schools enrolling Indian children where tax-free Indian lands result in financial problems for the local districts and where other special problems exist that are not covered by Federal impact legislation, administered by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Grants are made to Indians to attend schools beyond the secondary level and assistance is given to adult Indians through an education and training program.

In 1964 there were 133,000 Indian children in school—60% attended public schools, 33% attended Federal schools and 7% attended mission and other schools. Indian children enrolled in Federal facilities and receiving higher education grants are as follows:

Loans are made to tribes for relending to individuals, to tribal business enterprises, and to individual Indians for farming and business purposes.

NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

The Service's primary responsibility is to administer national parks and other nationally significant areas of unusual historic, scenic, scientific, or recreational character so that they may be preserved for public use and enjoyment.

1966 will be the final year of the 10-year Mission 66 program to provide adequate personnel and facilities needed to serve the ever-increasing number of visitors to park areas, and at the same time preserve park values. Visitation to parks is expected to increase from 102.5 million in 1964 to 117.5 million in 1966.

General and special funds:

MANAGEMENT AND PROTECTION

For expenses necessary for the management and protection of the areas and facilities administered by the National Park Service, including protection of lands in process of condemnation; [and for] plans, investigations, and studies of the recreational resources (exclusive of preparation of detail plans and working drawings) and archeological values in river basins of the United States (except the Missouri River Basin); [$29,075,000, including not to exceed $680,000 for travel and transportation of persons] and not to exceed $25,000 for the Roosevelt Campobello International Park Commission, $33,215,000.

[For an additional amount for "Management and protection", for the United States' share of the expenses of the Roosevelt Campobello International Park Commission, as authorized by Public Law 88-363 (78 Stat. 299), $155,000, to remain available until expended.] (5 U.S.C. 124-132; 16 U.S.C. 1, 1b, 1c, 1d, 3, 17j-2, 17, k, n, 81c, 431-433, 459r, 460, 460a-2, 461-467, 590a, 590f, 594; 40 U.S.C. 484(k); 43 U.S.C. 620(g); 50 U.S.C. 1622h(1); E.O. 6228 of July 28, 1933; Act of May 29, 1930 (46 Stat. 482, 483); Act of August 17, 1949 (63 Stat. 612); Department of the Interior and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1965; Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1965; Act of July 7, 1964 (78 Stat. 299).)

1. Management of park and other areas.—The estimate contemplates the administration of 218 parks comprising about 26 million acres located in 44 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. The program increase proposed is to provide for (a) administration of 11 new park areas; (b) park areas activated since the beginning of Mission 66 now partially financed; (c) operation of newly constructed facilities and to meet requirements generated by increased visitor use and general park program expansion in pre-Mission 66 areas; (d) commercial power and telephone connection charges; (e) commencement of a program for surveying and monumenting park boundaries; (f) safety staffs in five of the regional offices and to strengthen the safety staff in the Washington office; (g) additional motion picture and audiovisual productions; (h) enlarge the natural sciences studies program; (i) commencement of a park operations study program; (j) eight additional U.S. Park Police positions and supporting expenses; and additional staffing and general expense funds for management, protection, and interpretation functions for the National Capital Region; (k) production of additional free informational and sales publications; and (l) payment to the Bureau of Employees' Compensation, Department of Labor, as required by Public Law 86-767, approved September 13, 1960. The estimate also provides $25,000 for the Roosevelt Campobello International Park Commission.

The following tabulation shows the actual and estimated visitor and revenue receipts (in thousands):

1964 estimated.....	102,500
1965 estimated.....	110,000	5,847
1966 estimated.....	117,500	1,477

2. Forestry and fire control.—Vegetation such as forests, brushland, and grassland totaling over 13 million acres are protected from fire, destructive insects, diseases and other preventable damage. The program increase proposed is to provide for operating requirements generated by increased visitor use, activation of new park areas, and general park program expansion. A supplemental appropriation for 1965 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

3. Soil and moisture conservation.—The program will permit corrective measures in 36 parks in accordance with the Service's long-range soil and moisture conservation program.

4. Park and recreation programs.—Studies are conducted to determine the significance and suitability of natural, historical and recreational areas proposed for inclusion in the National Park System; and to determine the boundaries of proposed areas and recommend changes in existing area boundaries as needed. Assistance is provided other Federal agencies, the States, and their political subdivisions upon request, in general development planning, site planning, consultation on design, construction, and operational matters, interpretative planning, and guidance in protection and preservation of historical and archeological values on lands involved. Studies and investigations are carried out leading to establishment and acquisition of rights to sources of water supply; and technical assistance is provided in acquiring lands and in solving problems relating to both normal and adverse uses made of some of the park lands. The Service participates in the negotiation of agreements with State and local government agencies for recreation administration on lands developed with Federal funds; conducts archeological investigations and salvage programs in areas threatened by inundation through reservoir construction; and conducts surveys of historic sites and buildings to document for present and future use pertinent information with respect to them and to determine the ones that should be preserved as a part of the American heritage.

The program increase proposed is to provide for (a) a comprehensive plan for the protection, preservation, and interpretation of the newly authorized Ice Age National Scientific Reserve in Wisconsin; (b) participation in interdepartmental comprehensive river basin studies (except in the Missouri River Basin); and (c) correcting inadequacies in the provision of realistic land appraisal data in connection with new area proposals.

5. Concessions management.—There are over 200 concessioners operating in the parks and other areas. Services to be rendered are determined; contracts are negotiated or permits issued; rates are established and records are audited. The program increase proposed is to provide for additional operating expenses generated by the activation of new park areas and for a more adequate overall program.

1. Buildings, utilities, and other facilities.—The 1966 program is the last year of a 10-year program to provide essential facilities to meet visitor requirements. A summary of the 1966 program by major type of construction follows (in thousands of dollars):

Camping and picnicking facilities.....	2,089
Public service and administrative units.....	11,184
Utilities.....	6,657
Employee housing.....	3,106
Miscellaneous.....	2,791
Total.....	25,827

2. Acquisition of lands and water rights.—Approximately 621,000 acres of privately owned lands are located within the areas administered, most of which should be acquired to facilitate public use of these areas. Performance for the current year contemplates completion of acquisitions authorized in the 1965 and prior year appropriations. For 1966, the program is included in the budget of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation under authority of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965.

Rights to water must be obtained, frequently by purchase in many of the areas, for use of visitors and employees, and for fire protection.

4. Parkways.—The costs scheduled under this activity are against carryover balance of prior appropriations authorized by the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1952. The program authorized by title 23, U.S. Code, is obligated against the contract authority provided by that title and is shown under the appropriation Construction (liquidation of contract authorization), National Park Service.

5. Roads and trails.—Costs scheduled for 1965 include the amount appropriated for immediate reconstruction work on portions of the road system at Glacier National Park which were damaged or destroyed by heavy floods, and the balance provided during 1960 for construction of parking areas for the District of Columbia Stadium. The program authorized by title 23, U.S. Code is obligated against the contract authority provided by that title and is shown under the appropriation Construction (liquidation of contract authorization), National Park Service.

6. Undistributed costs.—These costs represent end-of-year variations in clearing accounts involving operations such as automotive shops, corrals, and facilitating services. The costs are distributed to the various activities served based on predetermined rates. Such rates are studied and adjusted at least once annually to provide for adequate operations.

The Alaska Railroad is authorized to perform generally all the usual duties of a common carrier by railroad so as to best aid in the development of agricultural, mineral and other resources of Alaska, the settlement of public lands, and in the national defense effort (48 U.S.C. 301-308). The Railroad's main line extends 470.3 miles from Seward to Fairbanks, and 12.4 miles from Whittier to Portage Junction. There are also 194.8 miles of branch lines, passing and spur tracks, and yards.

The revolving fund is derived from earnings of the Railroad and is used for operating and maintenance expenses, as well as improvements and additions. Except for repair of damage caused by the 1964 Alaska earthquake direct appropriations have not been necessary since 1956.

Budget program.—A return to a normal operations and maintenance rail line program and the continuation of the related capital improvements program are planned for 1966. Improvements deferred when forces were diverted to disaster recovery will be accomplished. The Railroad sustained $27 million in damages as a result of the Alaska earthquake. The major portion of the restoration work will be done in 1965 with completion scheduled for 1966.

Financing.—An appropriation of $3 million for 1966 will complete the financing of the earthquake disaster recovery costs.

Operating results.—The estimates for 1965 and 1966 are predicated upon annual revenue of $15 million. There are indications, however, that these amounts may not be realized. During the first 4 months of 1965 revenues declined more than 6½% compared with the same period last year. If this trend continues revenues will be about $1 million less than originally estimated. The drop in large part is attributed to the complete cutoff of movements of petroleum products from Seward as a result of the disaster. This traffic will not be restored. The major oil companies have enlarged their storage facilities in Anchorage and now bring in petroleum by tankers. Unless new sources of revenue are found a similar effect on 1966 financial results may be expected. Deficit operations for both years under these circumstances may result.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1963, $5,835 thousand (1964 adjustments, -$4 thousand); 1964, $7,117 thousand; 1965, $7,117 thousand; 1966, $7,117 thousand.

The Geological Survey provides basic scientific data concerning water, land, and mineral resources, and supervises the development and production of minerals and mineral fuels on leased Federal and Indian lands.

1. Topographic surveys and mapping.—Topographic maps portray the elevation, shape, and position of the natural and manmade features of the earth's surface. These maps, at various scales, are a fundamental part of the background information required to inventory, develop, and manage the natural resources of the country. They also have numerous other uses such as the location and development of highways and lines of communications, urban planning, and military and civil defense. It is estimated that topographic surveys and mapping completed during 1965, added to surveys already available, will result in a total of about 2,530,000 square miles of coverage (over 71% of the United States) in either the 7½- or 15-minute standard map series. In addition, it is expected that about 30,000 square miles of existing coverage in the 15-minute series will be resurveyed for the 7½-minute series. During 1966, mapping of about 106,000 square miles of previously unsurveyed or inadequately surveyed areas in the United States will be started. In addition, about 5,800 square miles of revision will be added to the program and about 215 special maps at various scales will be published.

2. Geologic and mineral resource surveys and mapping.—Increases for 1966 will provide for an expanded and accelerated effort needed in all major components. Geologic research and investigations produce: (a) new or improved methods and instruments for mineral exploration; (b) geologic, geophysical, and geochemical maps that show the distribution, age, composition, structure, and physical properties of the rocks and mineral deposits at and beneath the surface of the earth; (c) information on the chemistry and physics of the earth and the geologic processes by which it was formed and is being continually modified; and (d) geologic data that are directly applicable to urban development, land utilization, and the solution of land construction problems. The diverse studies underway and planned in this activity provide knowledge essential to intelligent exploration and utilization of our natural resources.

As a part of this activity in 1966, the Survey will assume direction of the program for the discovery of the minerals reserves of the United States, its Territories and possessions, by encouraging exploration for minerals, excluding organic fuels, by private industry. This program, formerly administered by the Office of Minerals Exploration, includes administration of contracts entered into prior to June 30, 1958, under section 303 of the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended.

3. Marine geology and hydrology.—This program, begun in 1963, includes geological and geophysical mapping and investigation of the Nation's continental shelves; research on geologic and hydrologic processes, techniques, and instruments; and research on the hydrology of river mouths, estuaries, and lagoons to provide data for understanding conditions involved in the use of resources.

4. Water resources investigations.—This program includes determinations of the flow and sediment discharge of rivers, location and safe yields of underground waters, temperature and chemical quality of waters, and availability of water supplies as related to present and future demands; research concerning the occurrence of water, its movement, and its interaction with the environment; and hydrologic appraisals of areas of existing or potential water problems. Funds requested for 1966 will be directed toward implementing the Geological Survey's new and enlarged responsibilities with respect to Bureau of the Budget Circular No. A-67, which prescribes guidelines for coordination of Federal activities in the acquisition of certain water data; strengthening the nationwide effort in the collection of basic water information; conducting basinwide water-resource studies; expanding fundamental studies of ground water-surface water relationships and chemical relations within ground-water bodies; participation in the International Hydrologic Decade; and strengthening education and training in hydrology.

5. Soil and moisture conservation.—This program provides land management agencies of the Department of the Interior with basic hydrologic and geologic data needed for maintaining and improving the productive value of public lands.

6. Conservation of lands and minerals.—This program supervises development and production of minerals and mineral fuels on leased Federal, Indian, and Outer Continental Shelf lands. Federally owned and controlled lands are classified for their mineral and waterpower values. The program in support of State conservation laws will be phased out by the close of 1966. The supervised leases during 1965 are expected to produce minerals valued at $1.5 billion and return royalties of about $205 million. The States' share of public land production is 37½% of the royalties except Alaska which receives 90%; the Reclamation fund receives 52½% and 10% is retained in the U.S. Treasury. In 1966, production and royalty values are expected to reach $1.6 billion and $218 million, respectively. Increased demands are being made for mineral and waterpower classification services, and for the accelerated reclassification and restoration of lands previously withdrawn. In 1966, it is expected that 1.3 million acres of Federal lands withdrawn in aid of classification will be mapped geologically and classified as compared with 1.2 million acres in 1965 and 1.15 million acres in 1964.

8. Special-purpose buildings.—The 1966 program provides for design of special facilities at the Denver, Colo., field center.

Reimbursable obligations.—Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are from States and municipalities for making cooperative topographic and geologic surveys and water resources investigations (44 Stat. 963), proceeds from sale to the public of copies of photographs and records (43 U.S.C. 45), proceeds from sale of personal property (40 U.S.C. 481(c)), reimbursements from permittees and licensees of the Federal Power Commission (16 U.S.C. 797), and reimbursements from friendly countries and international organizations for technical assistance (22 U.S.C. 2357). Reimbursements from other Federal agencies (31 U.S.C. 686) are for special purpose mapping and investigations performed at the request of the financing agency, much of which contributes to the basic objectives of the Geological Survey.

An unobligated balance of $400 thousand is carried forward each year to pay the expenses of reimbursable work pending collection from cooperating agencies. This advance is not available for obligation.

1. Stabilization payments.—This program provides for stabilization payments for lead and zinc ores and concentrates in order to stabilize the mining of lead and zinc by small domestic producers.

Payments are computed for lead at 75% of the difference between 14½ cents per pound and the average market price for the month in which the sale occurred and for zinc at 55% of the difference between 14½ cents per pound and the average market price for the month. The total amount of payments which may be made in each calendar year of the program is limited, as are the tons of lead and zinc on which payments may be made. Current estimates indicate that funds available will exceed requirements to finance the program which will terminate on December 31, 1965. Approximately $2 million will remain unobligated after all expected expenses are paid at the close of 1966.

2. Administration.—This activity finances the processing and certification of applications from small domestic producers, the establishment of quotas and allocations and the processing of claims for payment.

Provision is made for conserving, evaluating, and developing mineral resources.

1. Research—(a) Coal.—The chemical and physical properties of coal and lignite, and their preparation, combustion, carbonization, and gasification are studied. Research is continuing on the development of a stationary coal-burning gas turbine to provide a method of increasing the efficiency of steam-generating equipment.

(b) Petroleum.—Research is conducted to conserve petroleum and natural gas resources by improving the processes of recovery and utilization, and to promote improved efficiency in processing and use of raw materials produced from these resources. The work is carried out in cooperation with Federal and State agencies and with industry associations, and is partially supported financially by many of these agencies and associations.

(c) Oil shale.—Research is carried out on oil shale to determine the composition of the various products obtainable, to test the applicability of those products to different uses, and to develop and evaluate new retorting concepts. Basic studies initiated on in situ recovery of oil from oil shales show potential for considerable reduction of the costs of retorting oil shale.

(d) Metallurgy.—Research is carried out seeking improved processes for extracting metals and nonmetals from their ores by physical, chemical, and electrical techniques, and for producing superpure materials. Study of the structure of metals, alloys, and ceramic compounds and the physical and thermodynamic properties of materials is included. Emphasis is being placed on ferrous metal scrap problems, particularly the economic utilization of auto-body scrap and the elimination of unsightly junk heaps now marring roadside areas throughout the country.

(e) Mining.—Research effort applies physics and mining engineering principles to all phases of mineral mining. Fundamental studies range from the physical nature of rock structures through the application of rock mechanics to exploration, development, and operational problems of mining. Highly specialized research is conducted on the mechanisms of penetrating and breaking rock. The problem of ground control is attacked by developing methods of stabilizing underground openings and techniques for designing efficient open-pit slopes. New work will include extension of applied rock mechanics studies into coal mines to develop engineering principles required for safe economic physical design of modern coal mining systems, engineering application of results of previous studies in underground metal mines and increased effort on studies of nature and behavior of rock and rock masses in relation to the mining processes.

(f) Marine mineral mining.—Research is devoted to the conception, development, testing, and evaluation of instruments and hardware for undersea mining. Investigations are concerned with the nature and extent of oceanic deposits and the mining and processing of materials recoverable from such deposits. During 1966, the scale model of a recovery device will be prepared for tank testing and evaluation, and construction will be undertaken of a prototype for field study.

(g) Explosives.—Research is conducted to provide information and guidance to industry, other Federal agencies, and State and local governments on safe handling and use of commercial explosives and blasting agents; the safety characteristics of explosives certified for use in underground coal mines; the hazards of gas and vapor explosions from flammable liquids and/or gases; and the means of controlling fires in mineral fuels and their products. The program for 1966 provides for a study of the aerodynamics of explosions and an investigation of the relationship between the physical characteristics of various types of ammonium nitrate prills.

2. Resource development.—(a) Statistics.—Mineral statistical programs and systems, are carried out. Reports on mineral production and consumption are issued for use of Federal, State, and local government agencies, the press, professional and technical publications, and industry. Modernization of data collection and processing will be accomplished by electronic automation of selected statistical surveys.

(b) Economic analysis.—Economic information concerning mineral supply and demand, tariffs, taxes, trade, and other economic matters is furnished to Government and industry to aid in planning industry and Government research efforts, and industry expansion and investment.

(c) Bituminous coal.—Comprehensive technical and economic information is provided relating to production, recovery, processing, transportation, and utilization of coal and related products. Guidance is provided for technological and economic research carried out by industry.

(d) Anthracite.—Research is directed to the development of engineering and economic data on anthracite required by Government, industry, and the general public to assist in promoting the economic well-being of the Pennsylvania anthracite industry; to increase the safety of mining operations and conserve fuel and energy reserves through proper control and drainage of anthracite mine water; and to eliminate hazards to public health and safety brought about by past mining practices.

(e) Petroleum.—Technical and economic studies cover the location, extent, and utilization of energy resources contained in petroleum, natural gas, and marginal bituminous substances. Present and possible future trends in production, technology, and practices and their effects on various sectors of the petroleum and natural gas industries will be considered and evaluated on a continuing basis.

(f) Minerals.—Resource investigations are made of mineral deposits to gain better knowledge of the location, quantity, quality, and recoverability of specific mineral resources. Investigations of marginal or submarginal mineral deposits are aimed at determining possible future utilization. Economic forecasting is undertaken, with special attention to shifting demand for mineral commodities, to help guide industrial, business, and Government planning and assist in the direction of mineral research. Increasing attention is given to production cost levels and to technologic trends. During 1966, systematic investigations will be made of the mineral resources of wilderness areas within the national forests as directed by the Wilderness Act of 1964 (Public Law 88-577).

(g) International activities.—Technical and economic data on foreign mineral resources, production and consumption, and international trade are compiled and analyzed for Government use in coping with problems of mineral supply and to assist industry in planning domestic and foreign minerals ventures.

This fund is used for the production, conservation, purchase, and sale of helium; location and development of helium properties and reserves; and research on the properties and uses of helium to promote its wise and effective use. Production is primarily for the Department of Defense, Atomic Energy Commission, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, which reimburse the fund for products received. Other Federal agencies and non-Federal consumers also buy helium for medical, scientific, and commercial uses.

Budget program.—Production of helium from the five Government-owned plants is estimated at 767 million cubic feet during 1966. Sales of helium in 1966 are estimated at 675 million cubic feet. Production plant facilities, related shipping facilities, and helium conservation storage facilities will be operated and maintained to produce and market helium as authorized under the program.

The Helium Research Center, Amarillo, Tex., will continue to expand their program in basic and applied research. Improvements in processes, helium production methods, purification, liquefaction and utilization will continue to be explored to increase technical literature and knowledge of helium and helium-bearing gas mixtures.

The Bureau of Mines will purchase an estimated 3.0 billion cubic feet of helium in 1966 from the four private companies operating five helium plants. The 1966 budget reflects an estimated cost of $32.7 million for conservation helium which will be transported in the Bureau's pipeline to Government-owned underground storage near Amarillo.

Appropriation acts have previously granted authority to enter into long-term contracts and agreements committing the Government to pay a maximum of $47.5 million in any one fiscal year. An increase of $12.5 million is now requested to stop the waste of this additional helium, as authorized by the Helium Conservation Act of 1960.

Financing the budget program.—Funds borrowed from the Treasury will be used to supplement the revenue received from sales of helium. Additional borrowing authority of $16,780,000 is requested for 1966. The sales price of helium is established at a rate sufficient to cover costs of operations and to provide for future repayment of debt, including accrued interest.

Operating results and financial condition.—As of June 30, 1963, the Government's equity in helium was $61.5 million of which $38.8 million is required to be repaid to the Treasury leaving a net balance of $22.7 million. It is estimated that the Government's equity on June 30, 1966, will be $152 million of which $82.9 million is to be repaid to the Treasury leaving a net balance of $69.1 million. The $46.4 million estimated increase in net Government equity is due to an increase in retained earnings which is expected to accrue during 1964, 1965, and 1966. The retained earnings, resulting from the favorable cost-sales price relationship existing during the early years of the conservation program, are used for the purchase of crude helium for storage and other capital assets to minimize borrowing requirements from the Treasury.

This program for contract research seeks to develop new and improved products, processes, or techniques for mining, preparing, and utilizing coal which may offer the likelihood of expanded markets for coal in any of its energy forms or byproducts.

The research activities seek to develop such expanded uses on the basis of sound economics as well as technical breakthroughs. The proof of the benefits emerging as an end result from such research activity will be in the form of expanded new markets and the retention of markets.

1. Administration and contract supervision.—This aspect of the Office of Coal Research function deals with the operation, administration, and supervision of Office of Coal Research-sponsored contract research. It involves the initial evaluations of proposals submitted by public and private organizations, and internal activities relating to monitoring of contract activity from a technical and administrative standpoint, contract audit activities, controls on Government property and equipment, consultant hire, processing of proposals from the time of initial receipt through the time of contract initiation, and subsequent details regarding interpretations, amendments, desk audit, and payment of vouchers.

2. Contract research.—All research activity is performed with public and private research organizations through the medium of contracts. Research proposals submitted for consideration are carefully evaluated prior to contract, and continuously checked thereafter, to avoid any possibility of duplication with work previously performed in Government or industry, or currently being performed in such areas.

This fund is used for making loans to segments of the fishing industry unable to obtain commercial loans on reasonable terms for financing operations, maintenance, replacement, repair, and equipment of fishing gear and vessels, and for research into basic problems of fisheries. Loans bear interest at 5% annually and mature in not more than 10 years. Loan commitments against the fund are made on approval of the Secretary of the Interior, and referred to the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries for closing in the field and rendering loan servicing functions required (70 Stat. 1119). Authorization for this program expires on June 30, 1965. New legislation is proposed to extend the program.

Budget program—Loans made.—As of September 30, 1964, a total of 1,532 applications amounting to $40.9 million had been received. Of these, 811 loans totaling $18.3 million had been approved and 387 applications amounting to $9.3 million had been declined.

Administrative expenses.—These expenses include processing of loan applications, closing of loans, and collection of repayments and interest.

Financing.—Appropriations of $13 million provide capital for the fund. It is estimated that this program can be carried through 1966 without additional appropriations. Additional financing is provided from interest on outstanding loans.

Operating results.—The existing deficit is expected to be eliminated by future interest earnings.

1. Management of fishery resources.—Eighty-eight fish hatcheries are operated. The Black Bass Act regulating shipment of fish across State boundaries is administered, and administrative staffing for the development of a National Fisheries Center and Aquarium is provided.

2. Extension and training.—Technical assistance is provided to Federal, State, Indian, and other public or private entities in management of sport fishing and fish propagation; and 13 cooperative fishery units are operated at universities.

3. Fishery research.—These research studies include nutrition, genetics, and diseases of fish; improved methods of fish husbandry and management of public water areas for fishing; effects of pesticides; and conservation of marine sport fishes.

4. Administration of wildlife resources.—The Bureau manages 296 wildlife refuges in the 48 contiguous States, consisting of 3.8 million acres for migratory waterfowl and 6 million acres for rare birds and mammals. This includes eight new refuges which will be put under management in 1966. In addition, there are 18 refuges in Alaska and 1 in Hawaii totaling 19 million acres. The Bureau also enforces the Migratory Bird Treaty and Lacey Acts for protection of migratory birds and regulation of interstate and foreign shipments of game and conducts migratory game bird surveys.

5. Control of predatory animals and injurious rodents.—Predatory animals and injurious rodents are controlled on public lands. Technical assistance and supervision are provided to State and local cooperative control programs for protection against harmful animals and nuisance birds. The 1966 estimate reflects a shift in emphasis in the Federal program from direct supervision and control to technical assistance. State and local cooperator funds are expected to total $4.8 million in 1966.

6. Wildlife research.—Research is conducted on management and conservation of migratory birds and other wildlife, and on diseases, parasites and pesticides. Wildlife units are also maintained in cooperation with the Wildlife Management Institute and land-grant colleges at 18 locations to give technical training in wildlife management, conduct research, and demonstrate improved management practices.

7. Soil and moisture conservation.—This activity covers work on 121 national wildlife refuges in combating erosion and depletion on 10 million acres of soil.

8. River basin studies.—This activity covers studies of the effects on fish and wildlife resources of water-use projects of Federal agencies and licensees. Recommendations are made for measures to protect and improve these resources. Additional funds, totaling $1.5 million in 1966, are provided for this activity from the Bureau of Reclamation and the Corps of Engineers.

9. Pesticides registration.—The Department of Agriculture refers applications for registration of pesticides to the Bureau. These are reviewed to determine the hazards to fish and wildlife. Recommendations are made regarding approval of the applications and the instructions to appear in the labels on the containers.

Funds for four of the above activities are supplemented by moneys appropriated under the permanent accounts, Federal aid in fish restoration and management, Federal aid in wildlife restoration, and appropriations from national wildlife refuge receipts, as follows (in thousands of dollars):

WATER AND POWER DEVELOPMENT

BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

The Bureau plans, constructs, and operates facilities to irrigate lands, furnish municipal or miscellaneous water supplies, and develop related hydroelectric power and flood control in the 17 Western States and the State of Alaska.

Appropriations to the Bureau are made from the general fund and special funds. The special funds are (a) the Reclamation fund, largely derived from certain irrigation and power revenue; receipts from the sale, lease, and rental of public lands; and certain oil and mineral revenue; (b) the Colorado River Dam fund, derived from the revenue of the Boulder Canyon project; and (c) the Colorado River development fund, derived from transfers of money from the Colorado River Dam fund. The estimates of appropriation for the budget year are summarized by source, as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Appropriation title	Estimate of appropriation	General fund	Reclamation fund	Colorado River Dam fund	Colorado River development fund	Other

The total appropriation request of $314.4 million represents a decrease of $13.3 million compared with the current year appropriations and a decrease of $43.9 million compared with the preceding year.

General and special funds:

For carrying out the functions of the Bureau of Reclamation as provided in the Federal reclamation laws (Act of June 17, 1902, 32 Stat. 388, and Acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto) and other Acts applicable to that Bureau, as follows:

GENERAL INVESTIGATIONS

For engineering and economic investigations of proposed Federal reclamation projects and studies of water conservation and development plans and activities preliminary to the reconstruction, rehabilitation and betterment, financial adjustment, or extension of existing projects, including not to exceed [$450,000] $529,000 for investigations of projects in Alaska, to remain available until expended, [$11,404,000] $11,520,000, of which [$10,054,000] $10,091,000 shall be derived from the reclamation fund and $500,000 shall be derived from the Colorado River development fund: Provided, That none of this appropriation shall be used for more than one-half of the cost of an investigation requested by a State, municipality, or other interest: Provided further, That $370,000 of this appropriation shall be transferred to the United States Fish and Wildlife Service for studies, investigations, and reports thereon as required by the Fish and Wildlife Coordination Act of 1958 (72 Stat. 563-565) to provide that wildlife conservation shall receive equal consideration and be coordinated with other features of water-resource development programs of the Bureau of Reclamation. The program consists of advance planning, preconstruction activities, and construction of authorized projects; operation and maintenance of completed facilities prior to project completion; and rehabilitation of existing facilities. Investigations for units of the Missouri River Basin are included under that project.

Work will be underway in 1966 on 32 projects and 15 units and divisions of the Missouri River Basin project including initiation of construction on 4 projects with estimated costs totaling $99.7 million. Two projects and 1 unit of the Missouri River Basin project will be completed in 1966. The program also includes rehabilitation and betterment work on 7 projects. During the year facilities will be completed to supply water to 74,800 acres of land, to provide 41,200 acre-feet of water annually for municipal and industrial use, and to provide 125,000 kilowatts of hydroelectric power.

The following workload table summarizes the program goals and accomplishments.

The Bureau operates and maintains the power-generation and transmission facilities, and generally the storage dams and reservoirs, of completed projects. Where necessary, irrigation works are operated and maintained until the water users are able to undertake the responsibilities. In 1966 a total of 42 projects will be operated and maintained for irrigation, power, municipal and industrial water supplies, and other benefits with funds made available under this appropriation. The Fort Peck project revolving fund finances the operation and maintenance of power facilities physically integrated with the Missouri River Basin project.

Provision is also made for flood control operations on certain projects, soil and moisture conservation operations, halogeton control on public lands under jurisdiction of the Bureau, the Colorado River front work and levee system program, and examination of existing structures.

Energy sales from Bureau power operations financed from above sources are as follows:

	Kilowatt-hours of energy (millions)	Gross energy sales (thousands)
1964 (actual).....	29,937	$79,861
1965 (estimate).....	32,046	89,172
1966 (estimate).....	33,607	94,001

Commercial power is sold to wholesale customers such as municipalities, Rural Electrification Administration-financed cooperatives, private utilities, and other Government agencies. These revenues are deposited in the reclamation fund, the Colorado River Dam fund, the general fund and revolving funds.

The programs include $2,926 thousand in 1966 for the purchase of energy and wheeling. The establishment in 1961 of a net billing procedure for certain of these power transactions between the Federal Government and non-Federal utilities precludes the need for an additional $2,965 thousand for this purpose in 1966.

1. Construction of recreational facilities.—The program continues the work in progress in 1965 to develop public recreational facilities at reservoirs of the Colorado River storage project. Work will continue at five reservoirs in 1966, one of which will be put under interim management. Work at two additional reservoirs will be completed, and the areas placed under interim management. Work will also be completed on one reservoir appearing earlier, but not in the 1965 program.

2. Construction of fish and wildlife facilities.—The program for 1966 continues the work in progress in 1965 to develop fish and wildlife facilities as part of the Colorado River storage project. Work will be conducted at six sites in 1966, including one national wildlife refuge.

¹ Balances of selected resources are identified on the statement of financial condition.

This fund defrays the expense of operating the power-generation and transmission facilities of the Fort Peck project, Corps of Engineers—Civil, and emergency expenses to insure continuous operation (16 U.S.C. 833).

Budget program.—Funded operating costs in 1966 are substantially the same as in 1965, and the capital outlay program is completed except for minor continuing capital expenditures from Operation and maintenance appropriation.

Financing.—The operation of the Fort Peck project power and transmission facilities is financed by this fund and capital outlays for transmission facilities by advances from the appropriation Construction and rehabilitation. The accompanying statements consolidate the financing from the Continuing fund for emergency expenses, Fort Peck project, Montana, and Construction and rehabilitation.

Operating results.—Net income is estimated at $1,028 thousand for 1966, a slight decrease from the 1965 estimates. Earnings in excess of current operating needs are retained so as to maintain a continuing emergency fund of $500 thousand. The balance is paid into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts toward amortizing with interest that part of the Government investment allocated to power generation and transmission. Such payments totaled $930 thousand in 1964 and are estimated at $1.7 million in 1965 and 1966.

² The Fort Peck project and the Missouri River Basin project interchange power in their marketing operations. Rather than exchange funds for settlement on the balance of the interchange, the revenues of each project are covered into deposit funds pending distribution to the appropriate fund or receipt account.

³ The changes in these items are reflected on the program and financing schedule.

¹ Advanced planning.² Balances of selected resources are identified on the statement of financial condition.

The fund defrays the cost of advance planning, construction, operation and maintenance of the Colorado River storage project and participating projects, a comprehensive basinwide development which will make possible the control and utilization of the water resources of the Upper Colorado River Basin. The storage project will regulate and conserve the flows of the Colorado River and its major tributaries through holdover storage in large reservoirs, permitting increased consumptive use of water in the upper basin as well as the production of hydroelectric power. Excess revenue from the sale of power will be applied to repayment of costs allocated to irrigation which are beyond the ability of the water users to repay. The participating projects consist of power, irrigation, and municipal and industrial water supply developments.

Construction costs of the storage project and participating projects are financed through appropriations advanced to the fund. Project revenue will be credited to the fund and will cover costs of reimbursable operation and maintenance. Revenue in excess of these costs will be utilized to repay project costs allocated to power, municipal and industrial water supply, and irrigation. Nonreimbursable operation and maintenance expenses of facilities operated and maintained by the United States are defrayed from appropriated funds.

Budget program—1. Advance planning.—Funds for this activity in 1966 will provide for the continuation of studies on the Central Utah, Fruitland Mesa, and Savery-Pot

Hook participating projects, and for quality of water studies.

2. Colorado River storage project.—Construction will be underway on two units and on the Transmission division.

3. Participating projects.—Work will continue in 1966 on four participating projects and construction will start on the Bostwick Park project.

4. Drainage and minor construction.—This activity will fund work in 1966 on three participating projects which have been substantially completed, but which require additional funds for miscellaneous finishing activities and drainage construction. Construction is scheduled to be completed on the Navajo unit of the storage project.

Operation and maintenance program.—The Bureau of Reclamation operates and maintains four units of the Colorado River storage project and the power generation and transmission facilities with revenues from the sale of energy and water. Two participating projects (Central Utah, Vernal unit and Hammond) are operated and maintained with funds advanced by the water users, and power operations of the Seedska-dee participating project will be financed from operating revenues. Nonreimbursable costs allocated to flood control and fish and wildlife purposes will be financed from appropriated funds.

Financing.—The 1966 programs for advance planning and construction of the storage and participating projects will be financed principally by appropriations to the fund and to a minor degree from construction revenues. The operation and maintenance program in 1966 will be financed by funds advanced by the water users, from project revenues, and from appropriations for nonreimbursable operation and maintenance work.

Operating results and financial condition.—Budget expenditures will decrease to $47 million in 1966 from $62 million in 1965, due to a reduction in capital outlay and a substantial increase in operating revenue.

The total equity of the Government in the fund is expected to reach $648.4 million by the end of 1966.

The estimated net operating losses of $3.4 million in 1965 and $3.2 million in 1966 are due to water shortage in the first years of operation. The deficit, arising almost entirely from insufficient revenues to pay interest on the investment to the U.S. Treasury, will be overcome in subsequent years.

The Administration is responsible for the marketing of electric power produced at 29 Federal hydroelectric generating plants in service or under construction, and wheels and exchanges power for certain non-Federal utilities in the Pacific Northwest.

The 1965 budget included funds for planning a high voltage transmission line from the Bonneville system into southern Idaho. In place of this, pursuant to a congressional directive, negotiations are continuing with privately owned utilities for the wheeling of power to Bonneville Power Administration's customers in southern Idaho. Results of the negotiations will be reported to the Congress at an early date. If satisfactory contractual arrangements for wheeling cannot be obtained, consideration will be given to appropriations to initiate construction of a Federal transmission line and related facilities.

A schedule of Federal generation through 1974 of plants in operation or under construction follows:

	First generation (fiscal year)	Installed capacity (kilowatts, nameplate rating)
Projects in operation.....		6,678,150
Projects under construction:

The transmission facilities program also will enable the Administration to wheel and exchange power over the Federal grid from the non-Federal Boundary, Wells, and Mossyrock dams and the Hanford reactor.

The estimated amounts of peak generating capacity on the Federal system are as follows (in thousands of kilowatts):

	July 1, 1965	July 1, 1974

This program provides for operation and maintenance of the Administration's high-voltage electric grid system, and for commercial and administrative expenses in marketing wholesale electric power from Federal dams, and in wheeling power from non-Federal dams in the Pacific Northwest.

1. System operation and maintenance.—This activity consists of scheduling and dispatching of power; operation of substations; maintenance of transmission lines, substations and other facilities; power requirements and marketing studies; planning and integration of power resources; and system engineering.

Transmission facilities of the Administration are expanded as increased generating capacity becomes available. The system will be operated and maintained at a level which will insure safe operation and provide a reliable grade of service to customers.

The following table shows the rising trend in several of the more important indexes of the operation and maintenance activity:

3. Power contracts and rates.—This activity provides for negotiation of power sales and wheeling contracts; billing and servicing of contracts, including the development of service plans, and the establishment of wholesale rate schedules. Receipts which are deposited in the Treasury amounted to $79.4 million in 1964, and are estimated at $86.2 million and $93.3 million in 1965 and 1966, respectively.

A supplemental appropriation for 1965 is anticipated for separate transmittal to cover hourly wage board pay increases effective in July 1964.

This fund, accumulated from power receipts, is available permanently for emergency expenses necessary to insure continuity of service. It is also available in such amounts as may be approved annually in appropriation acts to cover costs in connection with the purchase of electric power and rentals for use of facilities for transmission and distribution of power. Electric power is purchased from private utilities and generating and transmission cooperatives. Power is transmitted to customers through wheeling arrangements with private utilities, and through use of transmission capacity in facilities owned by the generating and transmission cooperatives (16 U.S.C. 825s-1).

1. Research and development.—Both basic and applied research, development, and evaluation work are accomplished by means of contracts or grants to other Federal or non-Federal agencies, institutions, commercial organizations, and consultants. Estimates for 1966 will permit an expanded effort to advance desalting technology applicable to a wide range of water supply problems.

2. Administration and coordination.—This activity provides for administration of federally sponsored research, coordination of Federal and non-Federal research projects, and stimulation of private and public saline water research, including participation in activities of scientific and technical organizations.

A supplemental appropriation request for 1965 is anticipated to permit the immediate expansion of research and development activities.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1963, $0; 1964, $0; 1965, $5 thousand; 1966, $15 thousand.

The objective of this program is to stimulate, sponsor, provide for, and supplement present programs for the conduct of research, investigations, experiments, and the training of scientists in the fields of water and of resources which affect water, in order to assist in assuring the Nation at all times of a supply of water sufficient in quantity and quality to meet the requirements of its expanding population.

1. Assistance to States for institutes.—This activity provides for specific grants to all 50 States and Puerto Rico for assistance in establishing and carrying on the work of a competent and qualified water resources research institute at one college or university in each State. The function of such institute is to conduct research, investigations, and experiments of either a basic or practical nature, or both, in relation to water resources and to provide for the training of scientists through such research, investigations and experiments. States may elect to use their grants in support of regional institutes in which several States participate. A supplemental appropriation is anticipated for 1965 to provide for grants to States for institutes, and for administration.

2. Matching grants to institutes.—This activity provides for grants to match, on a dollar for dollar basis, funds made available to institutes by States or other non-Federal sources to meet the necessary expenses of specific water resources research projects which could not otherwise be undertaken.

3. Administration.—This activity provides for the administration of the Water Resources Research Act including the prescribing of rules and regulations; review and appraisal of institute programs and research proposals, making of allotments, contracts, and grants; establishment and maintenance of cooperation and coordination among the centers and between the centers and Federal and other organizations concerned with water resources.

Title II of the Water Resources Research Act authorizes grants, contracts or other arrangements with educational institutions (other than those establishing institutes under title I of the Water Resources Research Act), private foundations, or other institutions; with private firms and individuals; and with local State and Federal Government agencies, to undertake research into any aspects of water problems related to the mission of the Department of the Interior which may be deemed desirable and are not otherwise being studied. These estimates do not include proposals for implementation of title II pending the enactment of legislation which deletes a provision therein as requested by the President.

Since September 1961, the Office of Alien Property has been a section within the civil division of the Department of Justice under the supervision of the Assistant Attorney General in charge of that division. The expenses of handling litigation, claims, property liquidation and accounting and auditing functions pertaining to vested property are not financed from appropriated funds, but will continue to be financed from the proceeds of vested property maintained in the alien property fund in the Department of the Treasury. Actual and predicted workloads are reflected in the tables which follow.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is the investigative branch of the Department of Justice and obtains evidence for use in civil litigation and prosecution of criminal violations of Federal law. It has primary responsibility for the internal security of the Nation. It assists all law enforcement agencies in identification and technical matters.

The appropriation request for 1966 totals $165,365 thousand. This will provide for an increase of 392 full-year employees (190 agents and 202 clerks) when compared with the number required for 1965, along with an additional 100 automobiles. The additional personnel is needed to keep abreast of the growing volume of investigative work throughout the field service.

1. Security and criminal investigations.—This activity includes the Bureau's investigative responsibilities, the coordination and maintenance of the data gathered, and the maintenance of the Bureau's communications system. Data are disseminated to other Government agencies having an official interest in it. During 1964, the Bureau received 1,688,068 names for search through its files. An increase in name check work is anticipated.

2. Identification by fingerprints.—The identification division is the national repository of identification data based on fingerprint records. Fingerprints are acquired, classified, preserved, and exchanged with other duly authorized law enforcement agencies and 5,846,347 sets of fingerprints were received for handling during 1964, the highest volume in the past 19 years. The volume of fingerprint work is expected to increase. Sets of fingerprints on file on July 1, 1964, totaled 171,340,775.

3. Criminal and scientific laboratory.—The laboratory provides technical and scientific assistance to the FBI and all duly constituted law enforcement agencies and other Federal agencies which desire to avail themselves of the service. During 1964, scientific examinations totaled 257,060, a new high. The upward trend is expected to continue.

4. Training schools and inspectional services.—A Bureau-wide inspectional service and a personnel training program are provided. The Bureau assists, upon request, in providing various types of training to local law enforcement agencies.

A supplemental appropriation for 1965 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

The Bureau of Prisons contracts with some 777 approved State and local jails for boarding Federal prisoners for short periods of time. Such periods occur before and during trial, while prisoners await transfer to Federal institutions after conviction, and during commitments for short sentences. An average of 3,285 prisoners was boarded at a cost of $3.53 per man per day in 1964.

This is a wholly owned Government Corporation. A board of six directors appointed by the President controls its policies. Supervision is by the Director of the Bureau of Prisons who has jurisdiction over all industrial enterprises and vocational training programs in all Federal penal and correctional institutions. Products manufactured by inmates are sold only to the penal institutions and to other Government agencies. Earnings, in excess of operating requirements, are paid as dividends into the U.S. Treasury.

The Corporation is authorized, under the Attorney General, to establish and operate industries in Federal penal and correctional institutions and disciplinary barracks (18 U.S.C. 4121-4128). Its objectives are to provide employment for physically fit inmates; to provide maximum vocational training for qualified inmates in connection with regular institutional and industrial activities and to operate a placement service to assist released inmates to secure jobs. Earnings from the sale of these products pay expenses of the Corporation and have permitted payment of $55 million in dividends into the Treasury since January 1, 1935. It is anticipated that dividends of $3.5 million will be paid in both 1965 and 1966.

Budget program.—During 1964, the Corporation operated 55 shops and factories at 23 locations. The electronic shop started operations at Danbury, Conn., and a plastics industry was started at Terre Haute, Ind. The tank track shop at Texarkana, Tex., was discontinued and will be replaced by the tank road wheel rebuilding operations. During 1965, the print shop at Atlanta, Ga., will be moved to Sandstone, Minn. During 1966, a new enterprise will start operations at Marion, Ill., bringing the total shops and factories to 56 at 24 locations.

The following table indicates the scope of employment and training effort in the total prison program:

Operating results.—The Corporation has always operated at a profit and is expected to continue to do so. Earnings of the fund pay expenses of the Corporation, which include general administration and vocational rehabilitation. These two activities, although financed from fund receipts are subject to annual appropriation limitations. Earnings in excess of operating requirements are paid into the U.S. Treasury. As of June 30, 1964, the cumulative earnings amounted to $83.8 million, of which $28.8 million had been retained as working capital and $55 million had been paid into the Treasury. Earnings are estimated to be $4.7 million in both 1965 and 1966.

This new account consolidates the financing of all Manpower Administration personnel and operations. The activities now covered in this new appropriation account were formerly financed from four appropriation accounts. The appropriations Salaries and expenses, Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training, Farm Labor Contractor Registration Activities, and Limitation on salaries and expenses, Unemployment Trust Fund are being abolished and the Manpower development and training activities appropriation will hereafter finance only program costs and administrative expenses of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. All Labor Department personnel and administrative costs associated with the program will be carried in this new account.

The Manpower Administration was established by the Secretary of Labor on February 19, 1963, in recognition of the need to more effectively achieve integrated leadership, direction and coordination of the many manpower programs and activities of the Department. This consolidated account is one further step in meeting the need for a more integrated and coordinated manpower program and should result in improved personnel management and program operations. The undistributed program reduction of $1 million shown in the activity schedule reflects anticipated management improvements and the elimination of lower priority activities.

1. Employment security operations.—The Bureau of Employment Security provides national leadership in the development, improvement and operation of a nationwide Federal-State employment security system. Through its unemployment insurance service the Bureau is responsible for the direction of the national unemployment insurance system comprising three major income maintenance programs: State unemployment insurance, unemployment insurance for ex-servicemen, and unemployment insurance for Federal employees. Direction is provided for State operation of the training allowance provisions of the Manpower Development and Training Act. The Bureau gives national leadership, direction, and coordination for programs and operations of a nationwide system of public employment offices providing local manpower services. Responsibilities in this area include the basic employment service functions provided under the Wagner-Peyser Act as well as additional programs required by the Manpower Development and Training Act, Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, and the Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act. In 1966 the Bureau will emphasize services to youth by directing and coordinating the expansion and improvement of youth employment services in all major metropolitan areas; improve the quality, form and collection of job vacancy data; and continue to expand the automation of Bureau operation and management.

2. Apprenticeship and training operations.—The Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training provides promotion and technical assistance to employers, trade associations, labor unions and other national and community groups to develop, install and conduct apprenticeship and other on-the-job training programs. Programs designed to develop all-round skills of craftsmen, refresher training for journeymen and operators, and remedial and upgrading training for unemployed or underemployed workers are promoted by contact at national levels, and by cooperation with State and community agencies concerned with manpower development. In programs voluntarily subscribed to and administered by management and labor, more than 230,000 apprentices, journeymen, and allied industrial workers receive training each year. About 2,000 new programs are initiated and 3,000 improvements in training system administration, practices and content are obtained annually. The Bureau, working with employers, applicant training groups and other participating organizations, develops Manpower Development and Training Act on-the-job training projects for the unemployed. To assure effective projects, field representatives evaluate training facilities and needs, review and approve project proposals, and inspect training in progress to assure compliance with standards and training agreements. The Bureau arranges for the performance of similar promotional and technical services by appropriate State apprenticeship agencies. Skill requirements and training needs within particular industries are identified and training research is performed to develop information on the nature and extent of training in American industry as well as characteristics of trainees. In 1966 the Bureau will give emphasis to increasing the number of on-the-job training projects.

3. Manpower Administration operations.—This activity provides for the executive direction, supervision, overall planning, evaluation and coordination of the Department of Labor's Manpower Administration carried out by the Office of the Manpower Administrator. Through the Office of Manpower, Automation and Training, this activity provides a program of automation and manpower research. The research program includes, among others, studies of current and prospective manpower requirements and resources, skill requirements and supply, job opportunities and occupational outlook, factors which tend to impede labor mobility, manpower utilization, and occupational training problems of youth. This activity also funds manpower research contracts with other Government agencies and in academic and other private institutions. The Manpower Report of the President and the Secretary of Labor's Report on Manpower Requirements, Resources, Utilization, and Training are prepared and issued annually as required by the Manpower Act and a program of experimental and demonstration training projects is administered.

Through the Office of Financial and Management Services, the activity provides total administrative staff support to the Office of the Manpower Administrator and the Office of Manpower, Automation and Training, financial management of the Manpower Development and Training Act including contract administration, and personnel administration for the Manpower Administration.

It provides for the cost of conducting the training and for the cost of allowance payments made to trainees. Trainee allowances will be paid to certain unemployed heads of families or households who are selected for vocational education or on-the-job training. A limited number of unemployed youth will receive allowances, but at a lower rate than adult unemployed workers. In addition, this activity provides special programs of testing, counseling, guidance, job development and placement for disadvantaged workers.

2. State and local services.—This activity provides State and local services related to identifying occupations in which shortages or potential demand exist, selecting workers for training in these occupations, developing and providing training programs, and placing trainees in jobs.

3. Federal institutional training services.—This activity provides Federal program development and supervision by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare for institutional training programs under the act. The Department of Labor Federal services are included in the appropriation, Manpower Administration, Salaries and expenses. Positions included for the Manpower Admin-

Assistance to workers.—The Secretary is responsible for the administration of the provisions of the act for assistance to workers in industries in which an affirmative determination of injury due to tariff concessions has been made. This involves certification of the eligibility of groups of workers to apply for adjustment assistance and advising the President on termination of eligibility; administering adjustment assistance through State employment security agencies; and providing training and relocation for eligible workers. The Tariff Commission has not made any affirmative findings to date and none appear imminent. The need for a separate appropriation account has therefore not materialized and the minimum standby activities will be financed in the future as a part of the Bureau of International Labor Affairs.

Grants are made to the States for administration of the programs for the Unemployment Insurance Service and the Employment Service. Requirements for 1966 are estimated at $492,100 thousand, an increase of $36,464 thousand over the 1965 limitation primarily for increased tax workloads, State law changes, contested claims and appeals in Unemployment Insurance, Employment Service improvements and for increases in personal services costs related to increments and statewide compensation plan changes for State employees.

1. Unemployment insurance service.—State employment security agencies pay unemployment compensation to unemployed workers eligible under State unemployment insurance laws and collect unemployment taxes from employers who are subject to State unemployment insurance laws. Unemployment benefits are also paid to unemployed Federal workers and ex-servicemen from funds provided under Federal appropriation. Federal grants in 1964 provided State administrative costs to collect $3 billion in taxes, and to pay $2.6 billion in State benefits to unemployed workers. Insured unemployment is expected to decline from its 1964 level to 1.6 million average per week in 1965 and to 1.5 million in 1966.

2. Employment service.—Under the Federal-State employment service system, Federal grants finance a nationwide network of 1,900 local employment offices administered by State employment security agencies. The local offices provide a community manpower service by providing workers for employers having jobs to offer, by developing and carrying out programs designed to alleviate the employment, unemployment, and manpower utilization problems of the area, and by providing special services to employers, individuals, and community agencies or groups requiring and seeking them.

These basic employment service functions are supplemented by counseling and testing services to assist applicants in obtaining suitable jobs or upgrading their skills through further training, and by assisting employers in analyzing their skill requirements and in solving problems of recruitment and turnover.

In 1965 a new program was initiated to improve and expand youth employment services. This high priority effort was in response to (a) the fact that the unemployment rate for youth between 16 and 21 was about 15%; about three times the national average, and (b) the need to give special emphasis to alleviating the effects of poverty on young people. Funds in 1965 and 1966 will provide for a major expansion of youth employment services in all metropolitan areas with a population of over 200,000.

The program will be tied in closely, both locally and nationally, with antipoverty plans and programs. Specific procedures are in effect to insure that these expanded services are designed and administered, in each community, to contribute most effectively to that community's action plans to combat poverty.

The expanded youth employment assistance to be rendered is divided into three major categories: preparation for employment, development of job opportunities, and placement in a suitable job. The activities include counseling and testing, referral to training facilities, referral to other community agencies for diagnostic or remedial services, or referral to and placement in part-time, stop-gap, or regular jobs. Specialized attention is given to those youth who are educationally and environmentally disadvantaged, particularly, school dropouts, members of minority groups, and others coming from culturally deprived and poverty-stricken surroundings.

In 1965 the grants funds are being augmented by MDTA funds in order to get the program underway. In 1966 the available grants funds are insufficient to continue and expand the program and therefore the budget proposes a $39 million advance from general funds. These 1965 and 1966 funds will provide for a threefold expansion over the 1964 level in specialized youth employment personnel. These funds will also enable the Department to carry forward a program of collecting job vacancy information initiated on a pilot basis in 1965. About $2 million is identified for this purpose.

Special services are offered to displaced older workers, the handicapped, minority group job seekers, and veterans, in accordance with their needs. These services include job training and retraining, assistance in obtaining diagnostic or remedial services, and referral to and placement in temporary or permanent jobs.

Programs are carried on to aid communities to develop employment opportunities and to provide necessary employment services to workers and employers in areas where the establishment of full-time offices is not economically feasible. The services outlined above are provided for both farm and nonfarm workers and employers.

3. Administration and management.—State agency administrative staff provides leadership and direction for the program activities in the State and local offices; plan and guide the establishment and maintenance of a balanced, comprehensive program for the effective development and training of all State agency staff on both inservice and outservice bases; control the financial management and statistical reporting programs of the employment security system to assure their effectiveness, efficiency and economy; and provide all administrative support services.

4. Contingencies.—An allowance is provided to meet increases in administration costs due to unforeseen increases in the number of claims filed for unemployment compensation, changes in State unemployment compensation laws, and for additional costs due to changes in State employee salary rates brought about by changes in State compensation plans embracing employees of the States generally.

Funds are allocated to the States for payment of unemployment compensation to eligible Federal employees and ex-servicemen. The schedule above does not include $20 million for Federal employees and ex-servicemen to be requested in a supplemental appropriation for 1965.

1. Payments to Federal employees are made in accordance with the State unemployment compensation laws. The cost of the program will decrease by $2 million in 1966. An estimated increase of $2.1 million resulting from a higher average weekly benefit amount related to changes in State laws and the pay raise of Federal civilian personnel, Public Law 88-426, approved August 14, 1964, will be offset by a decrease of $3.3 million due to an anticipated decrease in weeks compensated, and a decrease of $0.8 million for a reduction in the adjustment factor for supplemental and point claims.

Mexican agricultural labor is imported for use in areas having a shortage of domestic agricultural workers. All costs except for Compliance Activities, are paid from the Farm labor supply revolving fund. Authorization for this program expires December 31, 1964 (75 Stat. 761).

1. Determining Mexican labor requirements.—The agricultural areas needing Mexican workers and the number of workers required are determined. Farm labor reports are developed, controlled, and analyzed to evaluate the Mexican labor program. Technical assistance is provided the States in preparation of these reports.

2. Supplying Mexican labor.—Workers are recruited in Mexico and transported to centers in the United States where employers contract for their use. In 1964, 181,801 were contracted. An estimated 94,300 workers will be contracted in 1965.

¹ Balance of selected resources are identified on the statement of financial condition.

This fund covers transportation and other costs directly involved in importing Mexican farmworkers (7 U.S.C. 1461-1468). Public Law 87-345 dated October 3, 1961, extends the authority until December 31, 1964.

Budget program.—The program involves the recruitment, selection, and importation of Mexican workers for agricultural work on farms in the continental United States. Mexican workers recruited and selected by the Mexican Government are sent to three migratory stations in Mexico where they are examined for ability to do farmwork, screened for subversive activities, vaccinated, and transported to three reception centers in the United States where they are X-rayed, examined and treated for disease, and contracted to employers. This requires the establishment and operation of reception centers to provide housing, subsistence, and medical care; 182,054 Mexican farmworkers were imported in 1964 and an estimated 94,300 will be imported in 1965 during the period July 1 through November 19, 1964, when contracting will cease.

Financing.—The costs of operation of this program are met by fees charged the employer for each worker contracted. These rates are $15 per worker for both contracting and recontracting. The fees provide for the cost of importing workers and for State activities and for the serological testing administered by the Public Health Service.

Operating results and financial conditions.—Revenue from operations is estimated to be approximately $303 thousand less than expenses in 1965 after allowing for a net transfer of $800 thousand to Salaries and expenses, Mexican farm labor program. The program will be liquidated after December 1964.

This fund established by the Employment Security Act of 1960 (74 Stat. 970) makes advances without fiscal year limitation to the employment security administration account in the Unemployment trust fund. The purpose of this fund is to finance the Federal and State administrative costs of the employment security programs on a repayable basis from the beginning of the fiscal year until the Federal unemployment tax receipts become available in February of the same fiscal year.

During 1964, the fourth year of operations, $239.7 million was advanced to the employment security account and $244.2 million was repaid. The difference of $4.5 million was borrowed to pay for 1963 operations and repaid from tax receipts in 1964. In addition, the balance of the fund is used to finance the program in 1965 until the Federal unemployment tax receipts are received in February 1965. During 1965 about $283.7 million of the fund will be used to finance the program until the Federal unemployment tax receipts are received during February 1965.

The fund will be needed until the employment security administration account accumulates a carryover balance of $250 million. Earnings are retained to meet future requirements.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1963, $54 thousand; 1964, $137 thousand; 1965, $137 thousand; 1966, $137 thousand.

This appropriation covers activities necessary to the administration and enforcement of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959 (LMRDA); the Welfare and Pension Plans Disclosure Act (WPPDA) as amended, the several provisions of law respecting reemployment rights of veterans, reservists, and National Guardsmen on training duty, and to other functions required to sustain and carry out responsibilities of the Secretary of Labor in labor-management relations matters.

1. Employee-management relations services.—Assistance is provided to unions, employers, groups of employees, and Federal agencies, in meeting long-range, complex, and critical labor problems that arise from major changes in patterns of collective bargaining, technology, and other economic adjustments. Included are arrangements for special studies and analysis, guidance in identifying and utilizing available public and private services, and technical assistance in estimating and planning for economic adjustments as they will affect labor-management relations. Department of Labor interagency activities on labor-management relations matters are coordinated and, as requested, Federal action with regard to particular disputes is coordinated. Inquiries concerning collective bargaining and other aspects of the labor-management relations area are answered. Funds requested in 1966 will permit expansion of such assistance to management, unions, and Federal labor-management relations agencies. The functions vested in the Secretary of Labor under Executive Order 10988 on Federal employee-management relations are performed, including the development and issuance of appropriate interpretations, policies, and procedures. Recommendations for issuance, rescission or amendment of rules and regulations are made to the Administrator. Advice and assistance are provided with respect to Executive Order 10988, the Standards of Conduct, the Code of Fair Labor Practices, and advisory decisions and determinations. Requests of agencies and employee organizations for nominations of arbitrators are processed and appropriate actions are taken. Cooperative advice and assistance are provided the Civil Service Commission in carrying out the latter's responsibilities under Executive Order 10988.

2. Labor-management policy development.—Recommendations are developed for the Administrator and the Secretary with respect to policy for labor-management relations legislation, Executive orders, objectives for Federal programs affecting collective bargaining, and matters before the President's Advisory Committee on Labor-Management Policy. Studies are made of private policies affecting collective bargaining and of the performance of collective bargaining in relation to meeting current and prospective economic and social needs; labor-management relations research functions in the Department of Labor are coordinated and special studies are made of particular situations. Research programs pertaining to the LMRDA and the WPPDA are developed and executed.

3. Administration of reporting and disclosure laws.—This activity covers the administration and enforcement of the LMRDA and WPPDA. Approximately 79% of the obligations are devoted to LMRDA activities and approximately 21% to WPPDA activities. Reporting forms and instructions are devised and reports from labor organizations, union officers and employees, employers and labor relations consultants, and welfare and pension plan administrators are examined for compliance with the acts (approximately 228,000 reports will be received in 1966), with comprehensive analysis made of selected reports. Reports are made available for disclosure to the public. Interpretations and regulations pertaining to the acts are developed and promulgated, as are policies and standards for the conduct of elections. Technical assistance to further voluntary compliance, including clinics and workshops (325 in 1966), publications and visual aids, is provided to those affected by the acts. Under the provisions of the acts, complaints alleging violations of the law are investigated and special investigations are conducted in areas where evidence exists of persistent or willful violations. Investigations involving approximately 4,000 alleged violations are estimated in 1966. Supervision is provided for the conduct of rerun elections held under court order or waiver. The 1966 request reflects management improvements in the processing of LMRDA reports. The programs related to disclosure under the LMRDA, and to technical assistance, investigation and enforcement under both acts are conducted primarily through 24 area offices and 11 resident offices, under the direction of 5 regional offices.

4. Promotion of compliance and assistance to veterans.— Assistance is provided veterans, reservists, and National Guardsmen on training duty to secure reinstatement with their preservice employers and other employment advantages to which they may be entitled, based on seniority accrued while in military service. Compliance is advanced by informing employers and labor organizations of their reemployment responsibilities. Specific complaints of ex-servicemen are investigated and if violation of law is apparent, litigation is recommended when voluntary compliance cannot be achieved.

1. Improving State labor legislation.—This is accomplished by assisting and advising States on labor law administration and the enactment of appropriate labor legislation and by negotiating Federal-State agreements to eliminate duplication in inspection. Assistance was provided to all 50 States, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia in 1964.

2. Improving conditions of migratory workers.—Cooperation is maintained with Federal and State agencies and voluntary organizations to improve the working and living conditions of migratory workers. Services were given to 38 States on migratory labor matters and assistance to 26 State committees in 1964.

3. Reducing industrial accidents.—This involves providing engineering consultation, technical advice, educational and promotional assistance in all phases of occupational accident prevention to States, labor unions, maritime and special industries, and Federal agencies. During 1964, training courses were conducted for 60,600 trainees.

4. Protecting young workers.—Regulatory standards for young workers are developed under the child-labor provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act. Advisory standards are formulated for young workers, aimed at improving their working conditions with due regard for their health, safety, and well-being. Functions relating to the promotion of youth employment and to job adjustments will no longer be performed by this bureau and the funds and positions related thereto have been deleted. The functions, if necessary, can be performed by the Manpower Administration.

5. Promoting employment of the handicapped.—A continuing program of public information and education is conducted through the President's Committee to advance employment of the handicapped citizens; cooperation is maintained with all national groups interested in the field, including the Governors' committees in the States and 1,500 local committees.

The Division obtains compliance with minimum standards respecting wages, hours, and other employment conditions in industries engaged in interstate commerce and in certain establishments furnishing goods to the Government.

1. Enforcement.—Information media are used to inform employers and employees of their rights and responsibilities under the law. Investigations are made to correct violations and to assist employers in meeting legal requirements and workers in recovering wages due. During 1964 a total of 56,000 establishments were investigated and 364,000 employees were found to be due wages in the amount of $59.7 million of which employers agreed to pay $22.7 million. In 1965 and 1966, a survey will be conducted through the investigation of 16,000 establishments selected in accordance with approved statistical sampling procedures to determine the general level of compliance with the acts administered by the Division. Beginning in 1965, each investigation made will include a determination of the equal pay compliance status of the firm. In 1965 and 1966, it is anticipated that investigation findings will increase as a result of greater efficiencies in manpower utilization and investigative techniques.

2. Wage determinations and regulations.—During 1965 the minimum wage rates under the Fair Labor Standards Act for 31 industries in Puerto Rico will be reviewed. In 1966, industry committees will review the minimum wage rates in seven industries in the Virgin Islands, five industries in American Samoa, and six industries in Puerto Rico. It is estimated that applications for special minimum wage certificates will continue at an annual rate of 5,500 during 1965 and 1966. The wage determinations program under the Walsh-Healey Act is planned at a level of four determinations in 1965 and six determinations in 1966. Regulations and interpretations are prepared to give effect to the Fair Labor Standards Act. Emphasis will be directed to development and revision of issuances affected by amendments to the act and changes in industry practices.

3. Research and legislative analysis.—Economic research on the effects of the wage, hour, and equal pay provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act and Public Contracts Act and analysis and development of statistical data are provided. Studies were conducted in 1964 to provide current data for reports to the Congress and to provide statistical data needed in the consideration of administrative problems and legislative proposals. Further studies will be conducted in 1965 and 1966.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid, undelivered orders, 1963, $73 thousand; 1964, $190 thousand; 1965, $100 thousand; 1966, $100 thousand.

1. Manpower and employment statistics.—The Bureau collects, issues, and analyzes comprehensive data on employment, unemployment, hours of work, earnings, and labor turnover. It publishes monthly estimates of the labor force, employment and unemployment, as well as providing greater detail on various labor force characteristics and industrial employment. Estimates of manpower requirements and supply, reviews of long-range labor force and employment trends, and special studies on manpower problems are prepared. Detailed studies of the outlook for specific occupations are made. It is proposed to (a) strengthen the estimates of employment and unemployment by expanding the sample by 50 percent and to increase the number of special surveys of the labor force on issues such as the extent of overtime work or the desire of the long-term unemployed for additional training; (b) develop employment, hours and earnings data for 20 additional standard metropolitan statistical areas and national series for additional nonmanufacturing industries; and (c) plan survey procedures, forms, and instructions, and summarize and analyze the results of job vacancy statistics collected by BES for 150 areas.

2. Prices and cost of living.—The Consumer Price Index is published covering urban wage earners and clerical families for the Nation as a whole, for selected large cities, and for selected cities in Alaska. The Wholesale Price Index is issued monthly covering more than 2,000 industrial and agricultural products in primary markets. Special analytical studies of price changes are undertaken. In 1966 new programs proposed are (a) development of industry sector output price indexes for additional manufacturing industries; (b) improve and maintain international price comparisons for metals and machinery products; (c) to initiate the development of indexes of prices paid by the Federal Government; and (d) to begin the updating of standard budgets for city workers' families and elderly couples.

3. Wages and industrial relations.—Information is compiled on wages and related benefits in nonsupervisory employment for 80 major labor markets and for selected major industries; and on salaries in selected professional, administrative, and technical occupations. Monthly information is prepared on industrial relations developments, and annual reports on employer expenditures on fringe benefits are issued. Studies of collective bargaining agreement provisions, trade union organization and private welfare and pension plans are made. It is proposed in 1966 to (a) expand the survey of professional, administrative, technical and clerical pay to include smaller establishments and more localities; (b) improve the occupational coverage; (c) improve the statistical quality of the survey; and (d) begin work in the field of State and local government salaries. It is also proposed in 1966 to expand the studies of employer expenditures for fringe benefits.

4. Productivity and technological development.—Annual indexes of output per man-hour and analyses of productivity trends are provided. Studies are conducted on development in automation and other technology with analysis of adjustments to technological change. Studies are made of labor requirements for selected types of construction.

5. Industrial hazards.—The Bureau provides quarterly and annual information on industrial injuries, and detailed analyses of the causes of injuries for selected industries.

6. Foreign labor conditions.—Information, reports, and advisory services for policy and program work are provided on labor in foreign countries, including price levels, wages, employment, unemployment, unit labor costs, labor law, and labor standards.

7. Program staff services.—The Bureau establishes policies for the maintenance of statistical standards and improvement of statistical methodology. Special economic reports are prepared for the Commissioner, the Secretary, the Council of Economic Advisers, and other Government agencies, and research is conducted into problems of economic growth. This activity coordinates the Bureau's research and reports activities; plans and edits all publications and releases; and maintains a central inquiry service.

The role and responsibilities of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity are being reviewed in relation to title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which established a national policy making unlawful the practice of discrimination in employment. Title VII provided for the establishment of an Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to investigate any alleged violations; and the budget provides funds for staffing and operating the Commission. The 1965 and 1966 estimates of agency contributions required for the support of the committee are, therefore, tentative and will be revised, following completion of the current review, to reflect actual program plans and operating requirements.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

Mail volume.—The budget estimates for 1966 are based on expected volume of 73.8 billion pieces of mail, compared to 71.6 billion anticipated for 1965 and 69.7 billion in 1964.

The 1966 forecast includes 39.3 billion first-class letters and cards; 1.6 billion airmail items; 9.0 billion magazines, newspapers, and other publications; 19.5 billion pieces of printed matter and small parcels; and 1.1 billion zone-rate parcels, catalogs, and other fourth-class matter. Comparisons of these and other items of postal workload and related 1966 revenues with corresponding 1965 estimates and 1964 results appear in the table on page 668.

Financing.—Six separate limitations are enacted for the Post Office Department for operation of the postal service and other assigned responsibilities. The limitations apply to the postal fund which is financed by the deposit therein of postal revenues and other receipts and by an appropriation from the general fund of the Treasury for the balance.

Only the appropriation from the general fund to the postal fund (being equal to the excess of obligational authority over revenues) is considered new obligational authority for purposes of the Federal budget. Further, only the excess of the Department's disbursements over its receipts (exclusive of the general fund appropriation) is considered as budget expenditures.

The six individual limitations control obligations incurred by the Department and are therefore requested and accounted for in terms of obligations. However, the program and financing schedules show funded accrued costs for each principal activity reconciled in total to obligations.

The schedule of revenue and expense shows operating costs on a full accrual basis including provision for employees' accrued annual leave and costs funded by other agencies. Costs attributable to public services as defined by 39 U.S.C. 2303 and amended by Public Law 87-793 are shown in total on the revenue and expense statement.

The Postal Policy Act of 1958 (Public Law 85-426), as amended by the Postal Service and Federal Employees Salary Act of 1962 (Public Law 87-793), provides that postal rates and fees be adjusted as required to produce the amount of revenue approximately equal to the total cost of operating the Postal Establishment less the amount determined to be attributable to the performance of public services.

Transactions outside the postal fund.—Postal money orders issued and cashed, postal savings system, and deposits resulting from U.S. savings bond sales are excluded from the tables of this chapter. The postal money orders outstanding are included in the figure for checks outstanding for the Government in table 5 of the budget, and a corresponding sum is included in Treasury cash. Balances for the postal savings system and savings bond sales are included in part II of this document.

Revenue from mail and other services of the Post Office Department is placed in the postal fund, which was established as a revolving fund in 1950 (39 U.S.C. 2202). In addition to the obligations and expenditures under limitations enacted in annual appropriation acts, the fund is also used without annual action by Congress for the purchase of stamp-embossed envelopes and for payment of certain indemnities, claims, and judgments.

Postal revenue comes primarily from private postal patrons. It also includes receipts from various Federal agencies for the handling of official mail and the payment by the Congress for franked mail. Reimbursements received for nonpostal services and other recoveries are likewise deposited in the postal fund.

The aggregate of postal revenues is less than the obligations authorized for payment from the postal fund. An indefinite appropriation is made from the general fund of the Treasury to make up the difference. After taking into account anticipated changes in funded working capital, the net budget expenditures for the postal service for 1966 are estimated to be $714 million, compared to $718 million for 1965, and $578 million for 1964. The increases in 1965 and 1966 are principally due to the recently enacted salary increases amounting to $222 million in 1965 authorized by Public Law 88-426.

Legislation will be proposed to authorize the Post Office Department to undertake a program for the Federal construction of major postal facilities. Financing of this program will be proposed through a new appropriation, Construction, postal facilities in the amount of $92.2 million.

This no-year appropriation provides for a research, development, and engineering program estimated for 1966 at $13 million, a decrease of $5 million from 1965 and an increase of $0.9 million over 1964.

1. Direct operation.—This activity provides for the administration of a research, development, and engineering program for the Postal Establishment. It includes the conduct of research, development, and engineering activities not performed under contract, and the development of: (1) preliminary layouts and designs for postal buildings and mechanized equipment, (2) better work methods, procedures, and manpower utilization systems, and (3) the Headquarters program for the design, development and testing of new postal equipment and materials. It also funds the personal services required for the operation of the postal laboratory.

2. Contract engineering.—This activity provides for contract procurement of engineering services used primarily in the replacement and modernization of facilities and equipment. The replacement of that portion of the contract engineers who are presently engaged in research and development and management engineering activities with permanent civil service personnel is planned in 1966.

3. Contract research and development.—This activity includes funds for the design, development, test and evaluation of new postal equipment, materials and techniques required to reduce costs, improve service and improve employee working conditions. The work is primarily performed by other government agencies or by private industry under contract. Funds are also included in this activity for supplies and material used in testing and evaluating equipment at the postal laboratory.

Work performed under most research and development contracts runs over a period of more than 1 year and, because of its nature, is generally done on cost-plus-a-fixed-fee basis. At times the scope is of such magnitude as to require several years for completion. Therefore, obligations incurred in any one year are not necessarily indicative of the level of work actually performed. In order to provide flexibility required in programming research projects, funds in this appropriation are available until expended.

Funds provided in this appropriation pay the personal services and related expenses required to perform the primary function of the Post Office Department—collecting, sorting, and delivering the mail. The employees paid with these funds include postmasters, who administer the operation of the postal installations; supervisors and clerks, who direct and process the handling of mail along with providing window services to patrons; city carriers, special delivery messengers, and rural carriers, who collect and deliver the mail; maintenance personnel, who keep the buildings and equipment in operating condition; and the vehicle maintenance employees, who service the Government-owned trucks used in hauling mail.

Funds requested for 1966 total $4,334 million, an increase of $99 million over the estimate for 1965. The additional funds will provide the manpower and cover the related expenses necessary to handle the estimated increase of 2.1 billion pieces of mail in 1966, provide delivery service to the additional area and patrons, improve existing services, and cover the full year cost of the pay increase granted under Public Law 88-426, effective July 4, 1964.

1. Administration of postal installations.—Services are performed under this activity by postmasters, assistant postmasters, supervisors, and technical personnel. These employees are engaged in the local management and supervision of all postal units. Technical personnel under this activity include accounting, finance examiner, medical, safety, and personnel employees.

2. Mail handling and window service.—This activity provides for the separation and distribution of all mail received in the postal units, including highway and railway post offices. It also includes rendering of window service to patrons, payment for the operation of contract stations, dispatch control of trucks hauling mail, and reimbursements to the Federal Reserve banks for handling deposits made by postmasters.

It is expected that continued benefits from the efforts to improve operating procedures and cooperation of the mailing public in the pre-preparation of its mailings along with continued mechanization and other programs directed toward a more efficient Postal Service will enable the increase of 3.0% in mail volume to be handled with an increase of 1.6% in clerical manpower in this activity. This compares with a 1.6% increase in manpower to handle a 2.7% increase in mail volume experienced in 1964, and a 1.4% increase in manpower to handle a 2.8% increase in mail volume expected in 1965.

The following table shows a comparison of employment and workload.

3. Collection and delivery service.—This service provides for delivery of mail to residences and business places in cities and their suburbs, collection of mail from over 313,000 street letter boxes and 14,230 building mail chutes in these areas, delivery of mail on rural routes, and delivery of special delivery articles. This service also includes the local pickup and delivery of mail between stations and the post office and other installations. In some instances drivers transport mail between cities. Possible city delivery stops per man-year worked in 1966 are estimated to increase approximately 0.8%. The estimated increase in number of possible stops results from the continuous growth in housing. The number of rural routes to be established in 1966 will be offset by conversions of rural routes to city delivery service and the consolidation of rural routes for economic reasons.

4. Maintenance service.—The services under this activity relate to the maintenance of equipment and protection and cleaning of buildings used by the postal service. The employees under this activity include, among others, guards, mail handling elevator operators, janitors, and mechanics to service mechanical and electronic mail handling and office equipment.

5. Vehicle service.—This activity provides for the maintenance and operating cost of vehicles used for the local collection and delivery of mail and in some instances the transport of mail between cities. This includes employment of vehicle mechanics; the purchase of parts, gasoline, oil, tires, and contract maintenance; and the cost of hired vehicles used in lieu of Government-owned vehicles when it is economically advantageous.

1. Surface transportation—(a) Water.—Domestic water transportation service is utilized for the transportation of mail on the inland and coastal waterways at per annum contract rates ($0.8 million in 1966) and at pound rates ($4.2 million in 1966). Pound rate service is utilized for Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, where there is a substantial increase in mail volume.

Foreign water transportation covers carriage of mails by steamship to foreign countries at per pound rates ($10.6 million including $0.2 million for shipment of empty mail bags in 1966). It also includes terminal charges by foreign countries for handling such mail at the port of entry and charges for mails transiting such countries ($6.2 million in 1966). The advantages offered by fast air service between the United States and foreign countries is the apparent reason for the steady decline in the utilization of foreign water transportation.

(b) Highway.—This includes transportation of mail by star route, buses, mail messenger, and highway post offices. The estimates for 1966 are as follows:

	(Millions)
Star route service.....	$102.3
Area bus contracts.....	.8
Mail messenger service.....	17.2
Highway post offices.....	6.5
Total.....	126.8

Star route service is the major function in the overall highway transportation activity and provides service between post offices. The uptrend in the average cost per mile of star route service and in highway transportation generally is caused by the growing need for larger and more expensive truck equipment where mail volume is steadily increasing, and by the higher costs due to the growth in the national economy.

	Number of routes (end of year)	Scheduled miles of travel (thousands)	Annual obligations (thousands)	Average rate per mile (cents)

1966 (estimate).....	12,019	512,780	99,223	19.35

Mobile highway post offices provide mail distribution en route in contract highway vehicles where adequate train service of this nature does not exist. General price increases have resulted in higher costs to the performing contractors and subsequent adjustment in contract rates is the reason for the increase in the average cost per mile.

Order No. E-21514, effective October 1, 1964, reduced mail transportation rates for U.S. carriers on the transatlantic and transpacific routes approximately 25%. This order had the effect of reducing foreign airmail transportation costs $4 million in 1965 and $6 million in 1966.

This appropriation provides for expenses of occupying postal facilities, for supplies and certain types of contractual services required by the postal service, and for field service organizations operated by the Bureau of Facilities.

1. Building occupancy.—This activity provides for rental of postal facilities; cost of communications, fuel, and utilities; one-time payments for improvements to leased buildings; installments on lease-purchase contracts; and the acquisition and resale of sites to lessors under the commercial leasing program. The recoveries from the resale of such land shown under Advances and reimbursements are applied to the purchase of additional sites for resale. Increased rental costs result from (a) the acquisition of additional postal space, (b) increased rental rates, and (c) replacement of inadequate or substandard space in Government buildings.

This appropriation provides funds to alter and improve Federal buildings used for postal purposes; for procurement of equipment, including installation of major mail-processing machines; and for procurement of vehicles and garage equipment for the Post Office Department vehicle fleet. The program and financing schedule shows, in addition to obligations, the extent to which yearly costs are expected to be incurred with the corresponding increase or decrease in the amount of assets on order, which is indicated by changes in selected resources applied to the program.

1. Federal buildings improvement.—This activity provides for modernizing and extending Government-owned buildings to make them adequate and efficient for postal purposes. Air conditioning, heating plant improvements, and the purchase of additional land adjacent to Federal buildings are included in this activity.

2. Major mechanization projects.—This activity provides for the installation of major mail processing machinery and equipment in large postal facilities designed for such installations. It also provides for modification of existing installations to adapt them to changing concepts of mail handling. This mechanization consists of bulk transport conveyors, tray transport conveyors, parcel sorting machines, and sack sorting machines. Since 1957 such mechanization has been ordered for 54 facilities. By the end of 1965, 7 additional installations will be on order or in the process of completion, and 12 installations will be ordered in 1966.

3. Vehicle program.—This activity provides for replacement of wornout vehicles, for additions to the fleet required by growth of the postal service, for vehicles to augment the carrier mechanization program, and for the purchase of garage equipment. The estimate provides for the purchase of 5,384 vehicles of ½-ton capacity and over for local transportation and special delivery, and 4,941 small vehicles for the carrier mechanization program. Of the larger vehicles, 3,602 will be for replacement and 1,782 will be for new service. Of the smaller vehicles, 3,218 are for extending the carrier mechanization program and 1,723 are for replacement.

It includes equipment for maintenance of buildings, grounds, and other equipment; furniture and office equipment; mail and material handling equipment and for individual items of mechanized equipment which are not part of a major mechanization project.

The reimbursements from foreign air transportation and sale of sites to prospective lessors amount to 92.6% of the total reimbursements estimated to be received in 1966.

4. Foreign air transportation: Transportation of military mail (Department of Defense).—The Department of Defense pays for the overseas portion of the transportation of mail moving to and from military post offices in foreign countries. Because it is set up to do so, the Post Office Department makes the arrangements with and pays the bills of commercial air carriers who haul this mail overseas. The Department of Defense makes a reimbursement to the Transportation appropriation for the costs thus incurred by the Post Office Department. The trend in volume growth experienced during the past several years is expected to continue through 1966 although CAB Order E-21514 effective October 1, 1964, decreased the ton-mile rate for this type of service resulting in a decrease in the reimbursement in 1965 and 1966.

5. Building occupancy: Sale of sites and related costs to prospective lessors.—This program provides for purchase of sites for construction of leased postal facilities and payments of architect-engineering fees for the design of such buildings. The sites are resold to successful bidders upon award of the agreement to lease, and the proceeds reimbursed to the Facilities appropriation. The amount estimated for 1966 results from the larger value of awards which will be made in 1966 as compared with 1965.

1. Executive direction and policy formulation.—The Secretary is assisted in the formulation of policy and direction of the Department's activities by the appropriate staff officers, specialized offices, and functional bureaus of the Department.

2. Conduct of diplomatic and consular relations with foreign countries.—This includes representation of the United States and its citizens abroad, political and economic negotiations and reporting, consular operations, and oversea administrative services. Major items of increase are for the establishment of new posts, intensification of efforts to expand U.S. exports, staff to meet increased consular and communication workloads, improvement of physical security at oversea posts, and increases for rising prices and local employee wage rates. A continued rise in travel of U.S. citizens abroad is anticipated in 1966 as reflected in the following annual number of passports applied for in the United States:

1,026,027	1,091,470	1,200,000	1,320,000

3. Conduct of diplomatic relations with international organizations.—In collaboration with other Government agencies, U.S. policy is developed and coordinated on political and security issues and in such specialized fields as world health, education, labor, and refugee activities.

4. Domestic public information and liaison. This program provides for informing the American public on international policies and also keeping the Department informed on American attitudes relative to foreign policy and issues.

5. Central program services. These provide personnel and physical security measures, direction and administration of the Foreign Service Institute, and the administration of a global communications system for all civilian activities of the Government, including services for other agencies on a reimbursable basis. The increase is mainly for additional security and communications staff in Washington, and for expenses incurred in Washington in connection with improvement of physical security at oversea posts.

6. Administrative and staff activities. This includes normal domestic administrative activities, as well as funds to provide more adequate educational facilities abroad for U.S. Government dependents. Major items of increase are for the dependents' schools program and for automated data processing facilities.

A supplemental appropriation is anticipated in 1965 for additional security protection.

The foreign buildings program provides consolidated office space for the Foreign Service and other Government agencies abroad, and living quarters for American employees. This program also finances real property leases of 10 years or more (shorter term leases are included in Salaries and expenses, above), procurement of initial furniture and furnishings, and repair, maintenance, and operating costs of these facilities.

The following table shows present and estimated property holdings by type of structure and geographic area (dollars in thousands):

Outmoded or otherwise unsatisfactory Government-owned or leased office space is replaced with structures designed specifically to meet the particular needs of the Foreign Service and other Government civilian operations overseas. Housing is provided American employees in localities where suitable housing is otherwise unavailable.

Appropriations are made pursuant to periodic congressional authorizations. In 1961, the remainder of the authority enacted in 1952 was only $10.7 million, which was required almost entirely for operating expenses. In 1962 and 1963, interim authorizations of $10 million each year similarly provided only for operating expenses, so that the acquisition and construction of facilities during the three years 1961-1963 was not significant.

However, the program was able to approach its earlier level of activity when Public Law 88-94, approved August 12, 1963, authorized $26.3 million for capital projects. The 1966 appropriation is expected to exhaust this authority and the acquisition and construction of additional facilities will depend on a further extension of the Foreign Service Buildings Act, which will be requested of the 89th Congress.

Public Laws 88-94 and 88-414 allow for appropriations of close to $12 million for each of the four years from 1964 through 1967 for operating expenses. Additional authority will be required for appropriations for operating expenses after this period.

Starting in 1961, a separate appropriation has been enacted annually pursuant to the authority of section 104(1) of Public Law 480, as approved September 1958, which provided for the purchase of excess foreign currencies generated from sales abroad of U.S. surplus agricultural commodities. These currencies supplement the regular building fund and are used principally to acquire capital assets in the form of real property, thereby accelerating the building program. Countries in which these currencies will be available to the program in 1966 are Brazil, Burma, India, Israel, Nepal (through use of Indian rupees), Pakistan, Poland, United Arab Republic, and Yugoslavia. These funds will be credited to and expended under the regular appropriation.

This fund finances on a reimbursable basis certain central services in the Department of State, including duplicating, editorial, microfilming, telephone, motor pool, laborers, supply and dispatch (5 U.S.C. 170 (u)). At the inception of the fund on July 1, 1964, assets of $292 thousand, consisting of inventories valued at $161 thousand and net fixed assets valued at $131 thousand, were transferred to the fund. These assets were offset by an unfunded liability of $251 thousand for accrued annual leave, leaving the fund with donated capital of $41 thousand.

Provided here are the U.S. contributions to help defray the costs of the United Nations, 8 of its specialized agencies and the IAEA, 6 inter-American organizations, 7 regional organizations, and 12 other international organizations. Included, for the first time, are two new international private law organizations, and, as part of the regular submission, the International Control Commission for Laos.

The increase for the United Nations results from anticipated higher bond repayments, establishment of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) as an organ of the General Assembly, additional staff to provide greater emphasis on certain priority programs in the technical fields of economic and social development, normal statutory salary increments and other emoluments and expansion of activities of the United Nations special missions to Palestine and India/Pakistan. Partly offsetting these increases are savings under other budgetary items, mainly meetings and conferences, nonrecurring physical plant improvements, reduced costs for UNEF and implementation of economy class travel standards. The increase in the U.S. contribution is offset, in part, by a larger repayment on the U.S. loan to the United Nations than the previous year.

Other major contribution increases are for: (1) the Food and Agriculture Organization due to a change in the method of requesting appropriations whereby one fiscal year appropriation will relate to one fiscal period of the Organization rather than two as heretofore; (2) the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization attributable to increased program activity in the fields of education and the application of science to development, resulting to a large degree from the United Nations Conference on Science and Technology, and increases due to a sharp rise in the costs of goods and services; (3) the World Health Organization resulting from normal statutory increments, costs of taking occupancy of the new headquarters building and program expansion in such fields as health education, nurses training, and grant assistance to teaching; and (4) Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development due to an expected upward revision of staff salaries and emoluments and increased costs attributable to the new headquarters building.

This appropriation funds the cost of official U.S. participation in multilateral international conferences, and other international activities not otherwise provided for, that are necessary in the conduct of foreign affairs. This includes: (a) participation in conferences of the United Nations, its subsidiary bodies and specialized agencies; (b) meetings of regional and other international organizations, including inter-American bodies, commodity groups, and other conferences of an economic, political, cultural, or scientific nature; (c) participation in international conferences not directly associated with international organizations; (d) defraying the expenses of participating members of international secretariats to meetings, conferences and related activities held under U.S. auspices; and (e) contributions to new or provisional organizations.

This appropriation request provides only for regularly planned and scheduled conferences, and for predictable U.S. contributions to new or provisional organizations. The 1966 estimate does not provide for unforeseen contingencies.

The requested 1966 increase of $242 thousand is required primarily for participation in the U.N. Conference on Trade and Development and the ITU Administrative Radio Conference.

1. Rio Grande international dams program.—Construction of Amistad Dam, the second major international storage structure on the Rio Grande contemplated by the 1944 Water Treaty, will be continued in 1966.

An amount is also requested for settlement of damage claims arising from operation of Falcon Dam and Reservoir.

2. Lower Rio Grande flood control.—Mexico is continuing to investigate the feasibility of control structures on certain of its tributaries to the Lower Rio Grande. Pending completion of these studies, which could permit rectification of the main channel of the Lower Rio Grande and abandonment of interior floodways and levee works, all except certain minor but urgently needed works are being deferred. No funds are requested for 1966, as work will be financed with the unobligated balance of prior year funds.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Equipment, 1964, $0; 1965, $30 thousand; 1966, $30 thousand.

This appropriation provides financing, as authorized by the American-Mexican Chamizal Convention Act of 1964, for compliance with the Chamizal Convention between the United States and Mexico. The Convention provides for the relocation of the Rio Grande channel in the El Paso-Juarez sector; the establishment of the center-line of the new channel as the international boundary; and the transfer of lands between Mexico and the United States. These actions will require relocation of public facilities, and acquisition of land and improvements for relocations and for transfer to Mexico.

This work is being prosecuted at a maximum rate. Funds are already available for $30 million of the estimated $41.4 million cost. If progress indicates that additional funds can be effectively utilized in 1966, a recommendation for such an appropriation will be made to the Congress.

The Migration and Refugee Assistance Act of 1962, approved June 28, 1962 (Public Law 87-510), provides legislative authority for assistance to migrants and refugees, both on a multilateral basis through contributions to the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration (ICEM) and the UN High Commissioner for Refugees, and through bilateral assistance to European, Chinese and Tibetan refugees.

The 1966 request reflects reductions in U.S. contributions for resettlement of national migrants through ICEM, a lower level of support for the care and maintenance of European refugees, a smaller influx of Chinese refugees into Hong Kong and Portuguese Macau, increased support by other nations for the resettlement of Tibetan refugees, and the closing of three overseas refugee field offices.

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to purchase securities or make loans (including participations therein and guarantees thereof) to aid in financing projects for civil defense purposes upon certification by the Secretary of Defense (50 U.S.C. App. 2261, sec. 104, Reconstruction Finance Corporation Liquidation Act and Executive Order 10952 of July 20, 1961). No new loans have been authorized since the close of 1955.

This corporation was abolished October 4, 1961, by Public Law 87-353 (75 Stat. 773), and its remaining assets were transferred to the Secretary of the Treasury.

The corporation has been in liquidation for several years, its only remaining activities being the collection of non-interest-bearing notes sold to the Federal land banks on June 30, 1955, paying the proceeds as dividends to the Treasury, and the payment of outstanding bonds payable upon presentation by rightful owners.

civilian Federal agencies, except the Post Office Department, the U.S. marshals, and certain Government corporations. Savings bonds are also issued for Federal employees enrolled under the payroll savings plan.

2. Processing deposits of withheld tax payments.—Employers and certain business enterprises deposit monthly, with designated banks, excise, withheld income, railroad retirement, and withheld social security taxes, to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States. The Federal Reserve banks, acting as fiscal agents of the Treasury, issue depository receipts which the employers attach to their returns as evidence of payment of taxes. The work volume is estimated at 12,810,000 depository receipts in 1965 and 13,260,000 in 1966 as compared with 12,372,591 in 1964. The increase in obligations estimated for 1966 of $59 thousand over 1965 is due to the increase in the estimated volume of depository receipts to be processed and the related increase in the purchase of depository receipts and envelopes.

3. Financial reporting and maintenance of the Government's central accounts.—This activity includes the maintenance of central accounts of appropriations, receipts and expenditures which provide data for financial statements. It also includes the preparation and publication of financial reports on the Government's fiscal operations, such as the annual Combined Statement of Receipts, Expenditures, and Balances; the Monthly Treasury Statement; the Secretary's Annual Report; the Treasury Bulletin; and reports on foreign currencies acquired without payment of dollars.

4. Accounting and reporting development and internal audit.—This activity includes furnishing technical accounting advice and assistance to other agencies in relation to central accounting, reporting, disbursing and depository matters; participation in the Governmentwide financial management improvement program; performing systems work within the Fiscal Service and the Bureau of Accounts; performing internal audit in the Bureau, and other audits of a departmental character.

5. Banking, insurance, investment, international claims, and other services.—Banking facilities are provided for all agencies of the Government through the designation of selected institutions to act as official depositories of the Government's funds. Investments in interest-bearing securities are processed for certain funds, such as the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund, the unemployment trust fund, the veterans insurance trust fund, and various Government retirement funds. The work includes accounting for purchases, sales and redemptions of securities, processing of capital stock subscriptions of Government corporations, payment of international and other claims and examination of the financial condition of companies issuing surety bonds in favor of the United States.

6. Executive direction.—This provides for the overall management for the Bureau of Accounts.

This revolving fund was created as self-insurance to cover losses in shipment of Government property such as coin, currency, securities, certain losses incurred by the Post Office Department, and losses in connection with the redemption of savings bonds (5 U.S.C. 134). Since these claims are only partially offset by recoveries, the net losses have gradually increased to $1,895 thousand as of June 30, 1964, and are expected to increase to $1,970 thousand by June 30, 1965. It is estimated that the creation of this fund has resulted in a savings of over $118 million of insurance premiums on shipments of Government property.

The Bureau of Customs collects the duties and taxes on imported merchandise, inspects all international traffic, regulates certain marine and aircraft activities, combats smuggling, undervaluation, and frauds on the customs revenue, and performs related functions in connection with the importation and exportation of merchandise.

Direct obligations are estimated to be $82,850 thousand for 1966, an increase of $6,300 thousand over the amount now appropriated for 1965.

The unobligated balance of $300 thousand is a special fund available to this account when necessary to help pay the expenses of reimbursable customs work pending the collection of receivables from private interests.

A supplemental appropriation is anticipated for separate transmittal.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing designs, manufactures and supplies all major evidences of a financial character issued by the United States. It is the sole source of U.S. currency and Federal Reserve notes, various public debt instruments, and most of the minor evidences of a financial character issued by the United States, such as postage, internal revenue, customs and savings stamps. In addition, the Bureau prints a wide variety of miscellaneous commissions, certificates, etc., as well as postage and revenue stamps for the various territories administered by the United States.

The anticipated work volume is based on estimates of requirements submitted by agencies served. The program comprises the following activities:

1. Engraving and printing—(a) Currency.—Deliveries in 1965 and 1966 are anticipated to be approximately 13 percent higher as compared with the total 1964 deliveries. With the exception of a small quantity of U.S. currency ordered in 1964 for delivery in 1965, all of the requirements in the current and budget years will be for Federal Reserve notes, with the bulk of the deliveries being the new $1 Federal Reserve note which replaced the $1 silver certificate in compliance with the provisions of Public Law 88–36 approved June 4, 1963.

(b) Stamps.—The overall requirements in 1965 and 1966 for this class of work, which comprises primarily postage and internal revenue stamps, are substantially the same as for 1964. An analysis of the work program disclosed no material differences in each of the years in the quantity of stamps to be delivered on the various items.

(c) Securities.—This program encompasses the production of a wide variety of bonds, notes and debentures for the Bureau of the Public Debt and certain other agencies of the Government. The anticipated requirements of the agencies reflect an increase of 6.4% in 1965 and 5% in 1966 over 1964.

(d) Commissions, certificates, etc.—The anticipated requirements of most of the agencies who requisition this type of work reflect very little change in 1965 as compared with 1964. The large increase in the unit deliveries for 1966 is due to a special project to be performed for the Department of Defense. However, the production costs associated with all of this miscellaneous work represent a very small percentage of the overall engraving and printing program of the Bureau.

2. Cost of operation and maintenance of incinerator and space utilized by other agencies.—Charges are made to other agencies on an actual cost basis for use of the incinerator and maintenance services provided for the space they occupy in the Bureau's buildings.

3. Other direct charges for miscellaneous services.—Charges for a wide variety of miscellaneous services performed by Bureau personnel are made to the agencies concerned on an actual cost basis.

Bureau operations resulted in a loss of $33 thousand during 1964. This loss, together with a deficit of $36 thousand brought forward from prior years, will be recovered from any profits accruing in subsequent years, in accordance with provisions of 31 U.S.C. 181–181e. Budget expenditures are expected to be in excess of receipts in the amount of $3,514 thousand in 1965 and below receipts in the amount of $260 thousand in 1966.

The capital of the fund is expected to remain at $25.3 million represented by an appropriation of $3.3 million and donated assets of $22 million.

The Coast Guard enforces maritime law, provides limited security of ports and waterfront facilities, saves life and property, provides navigational aids to maritime commerce in navigable waters, promotes the safety of the American merchant marine, and maintains a state of military readiness to serve as a part of the Navy in time of war or national emergency.

Direct program—1. Vessel operations.—Multifunctional vessels are strategically stationed along the coast and inland waterways to perform search and rescue; tend aids to navigation; operate an international ice observation and patrol service in the North Atlantic Ocean; perform limited ice breaking in navigable lakes, rivers, canals, and harbors; to enforce laws; and to operate the ocean station program.

trol anchorage areas, supervise the loading and unloading of dangerous cargoes, and screen merchant seamen and longshoremen to bar subversive elements from merchant vessels and critical waterfront areas.

Buoys, lightships, lighthouses, fog signal stations, light attendant stations, radiobeacons, and loran stations are maintained as navigational aids in the waters of the United States, its possessions and military bases overseas. Radio stations provide rapid communication essential for Coast Guard operations and maintain a guard on the international maritime distress frequencies. Marine inspection offices and merchant marine details administer laws and issue regulations on safety equipment and inspection of merchant vessels, and on licensing and certification of merchant marine officers and crews. They review plans for construction or alteration of merchant vessels, investigate marine accidents, and handle disciplinary cases. These offices also administer the small-boat safety program.

This appropriation provides for the acquisition, construction, rebuilding, and improvement of vessels, aircraft, shore facilities, and aids to navigation.

Direct program—1. Vessels.—A program to replace overage, obsolete, and deteriorated vessels of the Coast Guard will be continued in 1966 with the construction of replacements for three high endurance cutters, four medium endurance cutters, and two inland tenders. Two lightships will be replaced by offshore platforms. The program also provides for one additional river tender with associated facilities for servicing aids to navigation on the Missouri River, one medium endurance cutter and three patrol craft for search, rescue, and law enforcement. Modernization and improvement of existing facilities in 1966 includes installation of bow thrusters on two seagoing tenders and improvements on icebreakers, including installation of a helicopter hangar on one and habitability improvements on another. To improve the operating capability of ocean station vessels, secure communications and oceanographic equipment will be installed. Space on four 255-foot cutters will be modified to accommodate electronic equipment. One vessel from the Navy reserve fleet will be activated for Reserve training use.

2. Aviation facilities.—Under this activity the program provides for the acquisition of nine replacement helicopters, eight additional helicopters, one replacement electronic survey aircraft, and ground support equipment. The program also provides for construction of permanent facilities at four air stations.

3. Shore stations and navigational aids.—The program under this activity provides for the establishment of and changes to aids to navigation marking river and harbor improvements effected by the U.S. Corps of Engineers, and other urgent needs. Other projects are included to: (a) establish one new station at Saugerties, N.Y. (which replaces two existing stations), and one multipurpose station at Rio Vista, Calif.; (b) construct facilities at five units; (c) extend a wharf to accommodate 210-foot vessels at Corpus Christi, Tex.; (d) provide mooring at Ocean City, Md.; (e) construct one loran-A station; and (f) conduct preliminary surveys and prepare designs for future projects. In addition, improvements will be made in the communications system, 11th Coast Guard District.

4. Repair and supply facilities.—Improvements at three bases will be continued in 1966 and a replacement gantry crane will be procured at the Coast Guard yard. Administration-laboratory and supply buildings will be constructed at the Electronic Engineering Station, Wildwood, N.J.

5. Training and recruiting facilities.—The program of extension and/or improvement of facilities at the Coast Guard Academy provides for the development of the waterfront in 1966. Replacement of buildings at Recruit Training Center, Cape May, N.J., will be continued with the construction of a barracks building. A galley-mess hall will also replace an existing structure at Training Center, Alameda, Calif.

Reimbursable program—6. Loran to meet Department of Defense requirements.—This program is accomplished by the Coast Guard with reimbursement from the Department of Defense. The 1966 program contemplates reimbursement of $13 million for the construction of additional transmitting stations, monitor stations, and support facilities.

This appropriation provides for retired pay of military personnel of the Coast Guard and Coast Guard Reserve, members of the former Lighthouse and Lifesaving Services, and for annuities payable to beneficiaries of retired military personnel under the Retired Serviceman's Family Protection Plan (10 U.S.C. 1431-1446).

Members are added to and removed from the rolls each month. The average numbers on the rolls will rise in 1966 and will continue to rise in future years. The actual number on the rolls at the end of 1964 was 10,674 and the number estimated to be on the rolls at the end of 1965 and 1966 is 11,294 and 12,093, respectively. The following tabulation shows the average number of personnel on the rolls during 1964 compared with estimated numbers for 1965 and 1966.

Under the provisions of the Retired Serviceman's Family Protection Plan, retired Coast Guard military personnel who elect to receive reduced amounts of retired pay may provide for monthly payments to their survivors. Appropriation requirements are reduced by the difference between the amount deducted from retired pay and the amount paid as survivors' benefits. The liability for future payments is not funded. The analysis of the accumulated deductions is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Purpose.—The Coast Guard Reserve is designed to provide a trained implementing force of 45,200 officers and enlisted personnel in the Ready Reserve, available for active duty in time of war or national emergency and at such times as the national security requires, to fill the needs of the Coast Guard.

Training.—The Coast Guard Reserve training program is organized into categories compatible with the required phases of mobilization. The first or primary category is organized to provide trained units and personnel for specific assignments or tasks within 15 days of the outset of mobilization. This program provides 48 paid drills each being of at least 2 hours duration, and 2 weeks active duty for training for personnel who are assigned to organized training units and who occupy positions that require continued training in critical specialties, in order to maintain a high standard of proficiency for unit or specific mobilization assignments. The second category is designed to provide specialized training to additional individuals, scheduled for early mobilization, in nonpay units and/or 15 to 30 days periodic active duty for training. The third category is comprised of personnel scheduled for mobilization within 6 months of the outset of mobilization who, due to previous training either in units or on active duty, and in some cases whose civilian occupations are closely allied to their military specialties, do not require frequent training.

Program.—The proposed program for 1966 will provide a total of 29,910 officers and enlisted personnel in all categories of the Ready Reserve by the end of the fiscal year.

Direct program by activities—1. Trainee expense.—The program for 1965 provides for an increase from 19,260 to 20,020 in the number of reservists to receive training of the types required for mobilization purposes. The program for 1966 provides for the number of trainees to receive training to remain the same with the man-days of training increasing from 1,502,177 to 1,590,588. A new 2 by 6 program will be initiated in 1966 with an input of 500 trainees. No increase in group D training is planned.

The Coast Guard supply fund, in accordance with 14 U.S.C. 650, finances the procurement of uniform clothing, commissary provisions, general stores, and technical materials. The fund is financed by reimbursements from sale of goods.

Costs of approximately $18 million to be incurred under this fund in 1966 are divided 11% for uniform clothing, 61% for commissary provisions, 28% for general stores and technical materials, including electronics.

Sales are expected to be $1,806 thousand more in 1965 than 1964 actual and $2,260 thousand more in 1966 than 1964. These increases are attributable to full-year activity in 1965 of the additional inventory acquired late in 1964, a rise in numbers of military personnel to be provided clothing and commissary supplies, and an increase in types and numbers of general stores items stocked.

Under this fund, purchases and sales are generally equal with no significant change in the level of inventories. The cash balance will remain approximately the same.

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE

The purpose of the Internal Revenue Service is to administer the Federal tax laws. The growth in the taxpayer population and the national economy are reflected in the following figures:

Year	Tax returns filed [in millions]	Gross revenue collections [in billions of dollars]
1963 actual.....	97.8	105.9
1964 actual.....	100.1	112.3
1965 estimate.....	101.9	112.2
1966 estimate.....	103.8	117.6

About 97% of the revenue collected each year comes from what people themselves report on their tax returns and from withholding. This high level of voluntary compliance allows Internal Revenue to collect more than $100 billion at a cost of less than 50 cents for every $100 collected, the lowest rate of any nation in the world. To protect this high level of compliance, the Service maintains an effective enforcement program, strengthened by continued conversion to the ADP Master File system.

The funds provided in this appropriation are required to receive and account for all tax returns, information documents, and payments; deposit moneys received; verify mathematical accuracy of returns; establish and maintain taxpayer files and an account for each taxpayer; pay refunds or offset refunds against delinquent accounts; issue notices of accounts receivable; provide investigation leads; assist in the selection of tax returns for audit; prepare annual reports in the statistics of income series; and prepare other studies and forecasts.

The appropriation requested for 1966 provides for the additional manpower and ADP equipment necessary to extend coverage of the master file ADP system, to continue development of the nonmaster file data center, and to cope with additional workload represented by 1.9 million additional tax returns.

1. District manual operations.—This activity provides for receiving tax returns, depositing tax payments, and settling questions about the returns before sending returns to service centers for processing. It also requisitions, issues, and controls internal revenue stamps and other receipts for payment of taxes. It is responsible for taxpayer contact by telephone, mail, or personal call; adjustments of tax returns; maintaining tax return files and furnishing information from the files as requested; and providing tax forms to taxpayers upon request.

2. Service center automated operations.—This activity provides for overall direction of revenue accounting and processing functions, and for operation of Regional Service Centers, the National Computer Center, and the IRS Data Center. It is responsible for processing, verifying, and computing tax liabilities and maintaining master files of taxpayers and an account for each taxpayer. It performs revenue accounting, except where this function has not yet been transferred from the districts, and issues tax bills and notices of delinquencies and establishes delinquent accounts. It pays refunds or, where possible, offsets them against delinquent accounts. It compares information documents with tax returns and assists in the selection of returns for audit; and it provides investigation leads to potential failures to file tax returns.

3. Statistical reporting.—This activity provides for the extraction and analysis of information from tax returns to be used in preparing and publishing annual reports and other studies, including the Statistics of Income series for use by the Treasury Department, the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, the Council of Economic Advisers, the Internal Revenue Service, State governments, and others.

1. Payment and reconciliation of checks.—This activity maintains checking accounts of Government disbursing officers and Government-owned corporations; processes documents crediting Government disbursing accounts; performs centralized payment function of all checks drawn on the Treasurer of the United States; reconciles deposits claimed and checks issued as reported by disbursing officers with the deposits credited and checks paid by the Treasurer and determines the outstanding checks in each disbursing account.

2. Processing check claims.—This activity processes all claims for proceeds of Government checks, including the allowance or disallowance of claims against the United States and the enforcing of claims of the United States against banks, endorsers, principals, and sureties or other parties having liability due to the fraudulent or otherwise improper negotiation of checks.

4. Retirement of currency.—U.S. currency unfit for further circulation is verified and destroyed by the Federal Reserve Banks on a reimbursable basis. Unfit currency received from local sources as well as all mutilated currency is processed for retirement in Washington. The total pieces of all denominations of currency to be retired and destroyed are expected to drop from 1,038 million in 1964 to 947 million in 1965 and to 681 million in 1966.

5. Maintenance of the Treasurer's accounts.—Controlling accounts covering receipts and disbursements are maintained for all funds placed in the custody of the Treasurer, and reports are prepared, including the Daily Statement of the U.S. Treasury and a monthly statement of money held in the Treasury and paper currency in circulation.

6. Payment and custody of securities.—This activity pays the principal and interest on public debt obligations, including those of Government corporations, and provides safekeeping facilities for securities, trust funds and savings bonds.

7. Procurement and transportation of U.S. currency.— All U.S. paper currency is procured, stocked and issued by the Treasurer. The Bureau of Engraving and Printing is reimbursed for the production of this currency and the Post Office Department is paid for the transportation of such currency to the Federal Reserve Banks and depositaries.

Until the conversion of $1 silver certificates to $1 Federal Reserve notes under Public Law 88-36, approved in June 1963, the purchase of currency was the largest single expenditure of this office. Upon depletion of the remaining small supply of $1 and $10 silver certificates, the Treasurer will issue only $2 and $5 U.S. notes and $5 silver certificates. Currency inventories are sufficient to meet projected needs through 1966.

The Check Forgery Insurance Fund was established in the amount of $50,000 by the Act approved November 21, 1941 (31 U.S.C. 561) for use by the Treasurer in making settlement with the payees or special endorsees in cases of checks drawn on the Treasurer which have been paid on forged endorsements and in which it appears that recovery from those liable may be delayed or be unsuccessful. As a result of continuing increases in volume of claims paid each year, the capital was increased to $100 thousand by an appropriation of an additional $50 thousand to this Fund by the Treasury Department Appropriation Act, 1964.

The Atomic Energy Commission procures raw materials; manufactures special nuclear materials and atomic weapons; develops improved weapons; conducts research and development aimed at generation of atomic power; conducts research concerning protection of health against possible hazards arising from atomic energy operations; conducts investigations in the physical and biomedical sciences related to atomic energy, including investigation of controlled thermonuclear reactions; conducts research and development in civilian applications of isotopes and nuclear explosives; establishes and enforces regulations for civilian uses of atomic energy; promotes industrial participation in atomic energy development for peaceful purposes; encourages scientific and industrial progress through the dissemination of atomic energy information; and participates in programs of international cooperation in peaceful applications of atomic energy.

The program is administered through field offices. Most of the AEC activities are carried on in Government-owned facilities by industrial concerns and educational institutions operating under contracts. Coordination with the armed services is achieved through the Military Liaison Committee of the Department of Defense.

Total program costs in 1966 are estimated at $2,273.6 million or $72.5 million less than the estimated 1965 costs of $2,346.1 million, and $150.3 million less than actual costs of $2,423.9 million for 1964. The principal 1966 increases are for reactor development, physical research, biology and medicine, and the civilian application of isotopes and nuclear explosives. These increases are more than offset by decreases in the raw materials, special nuclear materials, and weapons programs.

In 1966, the total program obligations will be more than program costs, the difference being obligations to be incurred for future years' costs. Total program obligations for operating expenses in 1966 are estimated to be $2,314.1 million compared to $2,333.2 million in 1965 and $2,463.1 million in 1964.

The schedule of costs by activity does not include non-budgetary costs such as depreciation charges, accrued annual leave earned but not taken by AEC employees, the cost of source and special material consumed and sold, etc.; in total, these are as follows: 1964, $326 million; 1965 estimate, $365 million; 1966 estimate, $370 million.

1. Raw materials.—Uranium concentrates are procured for processing in the AEC production facilities. Procurement of concentrates in 1966 is estimated at 12,845 tons based on current contractual commitments and an estimated total domestic deferral of 15,000 tons under the stretchout program. It is expected that all contractual amendments related to the domestic stretchout program will be completed during fiscal year 1965. The 1966 estimate reflects a decrease of 2,830 tons from the 1965 estimate of 15,675. Procurement in 1964 was 18,654 tons.

2. Special nuclear materials.—Special nuclear materials are produced to meet weapons production schedules and requirements for other programs. Uranium concentrates are processed into feed materials from which plutonium and other products are produced in the reactors at Richland, Wash., and Savannah River, S.C., and the isotope uranium 235 is extracted in plants at Oak Ridge, Tenn., Paducah, Ky., and Portsmouth, Ohio. Production of special nuclear materials will decline somewhat in 1966 as a result of reduced cascade power and the first full year of operation after the shutdown of four production reactors during 1964 and 1965. Work will continue on process improvements to assure continuity and safety of operation and more economical methods of production.

3. Weapons.—The weapons program encompasses the production of atomic weapons; the maintenance of stockpiled weapons in a state of constant readiness; the design, development and underground testing of new weapons types; preparation for and maintenance of a readiness capability to resume atmospheric testing; and participation with the Department of Defense in the development of test detection methods.

4. Reactor development.—This program includes the development of reliable and economic nuclear power plants for central station application and the development of power and propulsion reactors and reactor systems for a variety of military and space applications, together with research and development on advanced reactor systems, nuclear safety, and general reactor technology. The costs by major category are (in thousands of dollars):

The civilian power reactor program establishes a foundation of technical knowledge through a program of research and development on promising reactor concepts, including those with water desalting applications; design, fabrication, and operation of power reactor experiments; development and testing of experimental reactors; and development of conceptual designs for prototype powerplants.

Costs of $33.8 million will be incurred for the cooperative power reactor demonstration program in which AEC provides financial aid in development and construction of full-scale power reactors built by private utilities and public power bodies. This aid provides a basis for a privately financed nuclear power industry. The 1966 estimates include costs of $22 million for proposed new cooperative arrangements for a high-temperature gas-cooled power reactor and a large seed-blanket reactor.

The Euratom program provides for research and development under a joint program with the European Atomic Energy Community, for which costs of $5.9 million will be incurred in 1966.

The merchant ship reactors program provides for the development of propulsion reactors for commercial ship application. In 1965 the NS Savannah was turned over to the Maritime Administration for licensed operation.

The Army power reactors program provides for the development of portable and mobile reactor systems to meet military needs for powerplants for use at remote locations and for unique military purposes. Effort will continue in 1966 on the development of mobile nuclear powerplants for field use and on improvements to portable reactors for central power use at remote locations to provide more efficient, economical, and safe plants.

The naval propulsion reactors program, carried out with the Department of Defense, will be continued in 1966 to provide for the development of propulsion reactors for submarine and surface combatant ships.

The rocket propulsion reactors program (Project Rover) is carried out in cooperation with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to develop nuclear rocket engines for space application. The program of ground-based research, engineering, and testing will continue.

The missile propulsion reactors program (Project Pluto) will be terminated in 1965 due to the absence of Department of Defense needs.

The satellite and small power sources program (Project SNAP) is carried out in cooperation with the Department of Defense, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and other Government agencies, to develop nuclear reactors and small power sources for satellites and other special purpose applications. Development of reactor power systems for possible application to large communication satellites, reconnaissance systems, and space probes will be continued.

To provide broad support for developmental reactor projects, AEC conducts research in general reactor technology, which includes general research and development on materials, components, moderators, control techniques, fuel elements, spent fuels reprocessing and waste processing.

The advanced reactor systems research and development program is devoted to the development and testing of experimental reactors and research and development on promising advanced reactor concepts.

In its nuclear safety program, AEC conducts investigations related to nuclear safety problems which have general application. The 1966 estimate provides for additional work on related engineering field tests on postulated safety problems and on aerospace safety.

The AEC also operates the National Reactor Testing Station in Idaho, including two test reactors which provide irradiation services for the AEC programs. The Advanced Test Reactor (ATR), when completed at Idaho during 1966, will contribute to these irradiation services.

The cost categories in the table above may be recapitulated to indicate approximately the relative efforts placed on central station civilian atomic power applications, space program applications, and all other applications. This comparison, exclusive of plant and capital equipment, is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Development and support related primarily to civilian nuclear power.....	161,787	170,574	181,300
Development and support related primarily to space program application..	194,696	193,416	190,570
Military and other reactor development programs.....	145,816	130,132	128,580
Total reactor development program.....	502,299	494,122	500,450

5. Physical research.—This program is directed toward basic and applied research relevant to the Commission's responsibilities for the development, use, and control of nuclear energy. Within this framework investigations are undertaken in the fields of physics, mathematics, chemistry, metallurgy and materials, and controlled thermonuclear research. By major category, the costs are (in thousands of dollars):

Category:	1964 actual	1965 estimate	1966 estimate
High energy physics.....	77,398	87,860	100,500
Medium energy physics.....	5,458	5,600	7,500
Low energy physics.....	23,722	24,840	27,250
Mathematics and computer research...	4,498	5,200	5,900
Chemistry research.....	43,563	46,400	49,850
Metallurgy and materials research....	20,128	22,600	24,500
Controlled thermonuclear research (Project Sherwood).....	20,994	21,500	23,500
Total physical research.....	195,761	214,000	239,000

Research in high energy physics continues to expand as new accelerators, on which construction was initiated in prior years, phase into operation. Medium energy physics includes research investigations in the intermediate energy range (50 Mev–1,000 Mev) for the purpose of developing and improving knowledge of nuclear structure. The increase in low-energy physics is primarily due to the operation of research tools acquired in prior years. Increased work is planned in mathematics and computer-related techniques. Chemistry and metallurgical research are aimed at advancing basic knowledge in these fields of science and developing such knowledge for practical operations of the atomic energy program. Controlled thermonuclear research is directed toward ultimate production of power from the controlled fusion of heavy hydrogen nuclei.

Approximately 75% of the physical research program is conducted at 15 laboratories and installations owned by or operated for the Commission, and the remainder, comprising approximately 600 research projects, is supported in more than 150 universities, colleges, institutes and independent laboratories.

6. Biology and medicine.—Research is conducted on the effects of radiation on living things. It includes investigations of the biological effects of radioactivity in the body and the development of methods for minimizing exposure to radioactive materials of all kinds and for minimizing and protecting against the injurious effects of radiation. Support is given to the development of methods of utilizing radioactive materials for human welfare and for the diagnosis, treatment, and understanding of human diseases, such as cancer. Evaluation of the significance of human exposure to radioactivity from all sources is given special emphasis. Studies being carried out include the measurement of radioactivity (including fallout) in the atmosphere, soils, fresh waters, oceans, and biosphere proper. Research provides the basis for establishment of standards to insure that AEC activities are conducted with safety. This program recognizes the needs and responsibilities of other agencies of the Government conducting programs in biomedical research. Close relationships have been continued with such agencies as the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Department of Defense, and the U.S. Weather Bureau.

The major portion of the research is carried on at 18 laboratories which are owned by or operated for the Commission, and the remainder, comprising approximately 650 off-site research projects, is supported in more than 230 universities, colleges, hospitals and independent laboratories. The program includes the operation of several facilities in the United States devoted to cancer research and, through the National Academy of Sciences, in Japan for the determination of long-term effects of atomic bomb radiation on the affected population.

7. Training, education, and information.—This activity includes conduct of specialized courses; granting of graduate and postdoctoral fellowships; assistance to colleges and universities, operation of the Puerto Rico Nuclear Center; and dissemination of technical information, including participation in international conferences and exhibits on nuclear science and technology.

Under the fellowship program in 1966, approximately 317 college fellowships, compared to 276 in 1965 and 228 in 1964, will be offered for graduate studies in nuclear science and engineering. In 1966, 102 fellowships will be offered in the fields of radiological physics, industrial hygiene and industrial medicine, which compares to 91 fellowships in these fields in 1965 and 80 in 1964. The nuclear traineeship program is expected to include 92 participants in 1966, as compared to 50 participants in 1965. Assistance to schools to provide for educational programs in nuclear science and engineering will be continued. Grants are made to universities to help them acquire nuclear training equipment, teaching aids, demonstration apparatus, and special laboratory equipment. University summer and academic year courses in radiobiology are made available to high school and university science teachers. Special training in the nuclear aspects of the engineering, life, and physical sciences for university faculty members is provided.

In order to assist the States in the implementation of Public Law 86-373, approved September 23, 1959 (which authorizes the Commission to transfer certain regulatory functions to the States and also authorizes related training activities), training courses and on-the-job orientation are conducted in radiation safety, radiological health protection, waste disposal, etc., for State and local government employees. No tuition charges are made for these courses.

To broaden the dissemination of information on matters relating to atomic energy, AEC provides technical information services, maintains libraries, performs translation services, operates domestic traveling atomic energy exhibits, participates in and supports selected international conferences and presents international nuclear energy exhibits.

8. Civilian applications of: Isotopes.—This program provides the new technology necessary for developing uses of radioisotopes and high level radiation. Continuing research is done to develop economic uses of fission product wastes arising from nuclear reactor operation. Effort is also directed to development of nuclear technology for solution of problems in meteorology, seismology, control of environmental pollution, water resources development, and food pasteurization. An increasingly important area is the development of isotopic power and heat sources for space and terrestrial applications. To the maximum extent possible, the research and development work supported under this program is designed so as to promote, encourage and utilize industrial cooperation in furthering the beneficial uses of ionizing radiation.

Nuclear explosives.—This program (Plowshare) provides for the investigation and development of peaceful uses for nuclear explosives, as well as development of such explosives. Current emphasis is on the development of explosives and technology for nuclear excavation. In addition to research work and work with industry on contained underground applications, one full scale cratering experiment is planned for 1966 as well as continuation of promising work on explosives capable of producing heavy elements.

9. Communities.—Although legislation has been enacted to terminate Government ownership of the town of Los Alamos, N. Mex., over a period of the next few years, the AEC will continue to operate the community through 1966. The program estimate of $8.9 million includes $6.5 million for the Los Alamos community of which $75 thousand is for assistance to the hospital and $6.4 million is for operation of the town. The remaining $2.4 million is for assistance payments to the former Atomic Energy Commission communities of Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Richland, Wash., in accordance with the Atomic Energy Community Act of 1955, as amended. Operating revenues at Los Alamos (budgeted under revenues applied) are estimated at $5.1 million.

10. Program direction and administration.—This program includes the salaries and other costs for employees of the Federal Government engaged in executive direction, general management, and technical supervision of the atomic energy program; the negotiation and administration of contracts; establishment and enforcement of regulations for civilian uses of atomic energy; and other related administrative activities. Employees under this program are located in the Washington headquarters and in field offices. The 1966 increase of $1.4 million is to meet the cost of 5,540 employees, which is 71 employees over the June 30, 1965 end strength of 5,469 employees.

11. Security investigations.—The Atomic Energy Act of 1954 requires background investigations of those persons proposed for access to restricted data of the atomic energy program. The number of full background investigations to be requested in 1966 is estimated at 15,826 compared with 18,136 for 1965 and 17,221 for 1964.

12. Cost of work for others.—In furthering the objectives of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 concerning utilization of atomic energy for peaceful purposes, AEC furnishes materials and services, apart from those which it provides normally for its own basic programs, to industrial organizations and other private parties. Costs for these are incurred only upon the request of others. Charges made for such products and services are reflected in the budget under receipts and reimbursements from non-Federal sources (revenues applied) and are applied as a source of funds, thereby reducing the amount of appropriations required. The items included are (in thousands of dollars):

This appropriation provides for the construction of plants and facilities and for the acquisition of capital equipment, all required for the production, research and development, and supporting programs of the Atomic Energy Commission. Of the new obligational authority of $250 million being requested for 1966, $90.2 million applies to new construction projects; $700 thousand is applicable to construction projects previously authorized by the Congress; and $159.1 million is required for the acquisition of capital equipment not related to construction.

1. Raw materials.—This activity provides for minor construction to support the Government-owned procurement installations and for procurement of capital equipment necessary to support the operating program. Obligational requirements of $60 thousand in 1966 include $25 thousand for new construction projects and $35 thousand for capital equipment not related to construction.

2. Special nuclear materials.—This activity provides for additions, modifications, and improvements to the feed materials plants, the gaseous diffusion plants, and the production reactor installations, and for procurement of capital equipment necessary to support the operating program. Obligational requirements of $27.6 million in 1966 include $11.1 million for new construction projects and $16.5 million for capital equipment not related to construction.

3. Weapons.—This activity provides for construction and modification of weapons production, development and testing facilities and for procurement of capital equipment to support the operating program. Major construction projects include a sodium pump test facility, an electron linear accelerator, and a re-entry burnup test facility.

5. Physical research.—This activity provides for construction of large research machines, laboratory buildings and associated support facilities, and for procurement of capital equipment necessary to support the operating program. It includes modification and improvement of ultra-high energy particle accelerators in the multibillion electron-volt range, which will assist in obtaining new knowledge about the atomic nucleus and the elementary particles. Obligational requirements of $88.2 million in 1966 include $43.3 million for new construction projects, principally a bubble chamber and experimental area and a solid state science building at Argonne National Laboratory, an electron linear accelerator at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, other laboratory facilities to house various research efforts, and accelerator improvements. Also included is $44.9 million for capital equipment not related to construction.

6. Biology and medicine.—This activity provides for construction of facilities for biomedical research in atomic energy and for procurement of capital equipment to support the operating program. Obligational requirements of $9.1 million in 1966 include $4.6 million for new construction projects, principally for a virus control laboratory at Oak Ridge National Laboratory, and an animal laboratory at Brookhaven National Laboratory, and $4.5 million for capital equipment not related to construction.

7. Training, education and information.—This activity provides for construction in connection with the AEC training program, and for procurement of capital equipment to support the operating program. Obligational requirements of $880 thousand in 1966 include $200 thousand for general plant projects and $680 thousand for capital equipment not related to construction.

8. Civilian applications of: Isotopes.—This activity provides for procurement of capital equipment not related to construction required for developing uses of radioisotopes and high-level radiation. Obligational requirements in 1966 total $2.2 million.

Nuclear explosives.—This activity provides for procurement of capital equipment not related to construction for use in the investigation and development of peaceful uses for nuclear explosives. Obligational requirements in 1966 total $500 thousand.

9. Communities.—This activity provides for improvements and additions to community facilities at Los Alamos, N. Mex., and for procurement of capital equipment to support the operating program. Obligational requirements of $3.5 million in 1966 include $2.6 million for new construction projects, $700 thousand for construction previously authorized in connection with disposal of the Los Alamos, N. Mex., community, and $186 thousand for capital equipment not related to construction.

10. Administrative.—This activity provides for improvements and modifications of administrative facilities at the Commission headquarters in Germantown, Md., and for procurement of capital equipment to support the operating program. Obligational requirements of $587 thousand in 1966 include $100 thousand for general plant projects and $487 thousand for capital equipment not related to construction.

11. Construction planning and design.—This activity provides for advance architect-engineer work to develop precise information on the characteristics of proposed projects and the development of sound and reliable estimates of cost prior to proposing such projects for authorization.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Any appropriation available [under this or any other Act] to the Atomic Energy Commission may initially be used subject to limitations in this Act during the fiscal year [1965] 1966 to finance the procurement of materials, services, or other costs which are a part of work or activities for which funds have been provided in any other appropriation available to the Commission: Provided, That appropriate transfers or adjustments between such appropriations shall subsequently be made for such costs on the basis of actual application determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles.

Not to exceed 5 per centum of appropriations made available for the fiscal year [1965] 1966 for "Operating expenses" and "Plant and capital equipment" may be transferred between such appropriations, but neither such appropriation, except as otherwise provided herein, shall be increased by more than 5 per centum by any such transfers, and any such transfers shall be reported promptly to the Appropriations Committees of the House and Senate.

No part of any appropriation herein shall be used to confer a fellowship on any person who advocates or who is a member of an organization or party that advocates the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence or with respect to whom the Commission finds, upon investigation and report by the Civil Service Commission on the character, associations, and loyalty of whom, that reasonable grounds exist for belief that such person is disloyal to the Government of the United States: Provided, That any person who advocates or who is a member of an organization or party that advocates the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence and accepts employment or a fellowship the salary, wages, stipend, grant, or expenses for which are paid from any appropriation contained herein shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both: Provided further, That the above penal clause shall be in addition to, and not in substitution for, any other provisions of existing law. (42 U.S.C. 2011; Public Works Appropriation Act, 1965.)

1. Operation of traffic control system.—This activity covers the operation on a daily 24-hour basis of a national system of air traffic management in the United States and its possessions. With the aid of radar, communications, and other facilities, traffic management personnel at 28 centers monitor and control en route flights of civil and military aircraft conducted under instrument conditions to assure safety and to expedite the flow of traffic. Control towers are operated at 290 major civil airports to guide traffic movements on and in the vicinity of the airports. Some 346 domestic and international flight service stations transmit weather and other information to pilots and relay traffic control data between ground controllers and pilots. In 1966 the costs of operating newly commissioned air traffic control facilities and of handling growing workload are more than offset by increases in productivity and other economy measures.

2. Installation and materiel services.—This activity covers the direction and engineering services related to the establishment and improvement of facilities and equipments in the traffic control system; procurement, contracting and materiel management programs; supply support and leased communications services for the traffic control system; and supply support for Agency aircraft except for aircraft related to research and development programs. Increases in 1966 are to provide supply support and leased communications services for new air traffic control and air navigation facilities. These added costs are offset in part by the elimination of nonessential facilities, and more efficient manpower utilization.

3. Maintenance of traffic control system.—This activity covers the technical operation and maintenance of a national network of air navigation and traffic control aids in the United States and its possessions. Increases in 1966 for maintenance of air traffic control and navigation aids commissioned during part of 1965 and of new facilities in 1966 are more than offset by the discontinuance of nonessential facilities and increased productivity.

4. Administration of flight standards program.—This activity covers the establishment and enforcement of the civil air regulations which are designed to assure the high standards of safety in aviation. Inspections are made and certificates issued for aircraft, airmen, aircraft operators, and air agencies that meet safety or competency requirements. Facility flight inspection functions and management and maintenance of Agency aircraft are also included in this activity. The decreased requirements in 1966 result primarily from efficiencies achieved in all program areas of this activity and particularly in the conduct of flight inspection.

5. Administration of medical programs.—This activity covers the development of regulations governing the physical and mental fitness of airmen and other persons whose health affects safety in flight; health and medical programs for Agency personnel; the administration of an aviation medical research program, the project costs of which are financed under Research and development; and the operation of the Civil Aeromedical Research Institute Building.

6. Research direction.—This activity covers the direction and administration of the research and development program, the direct project costs of which are financed under the Research and development appropriation; and administrative support for the operation of the National Aviation Facilities Experimental Center at Atlantic City, N.J.

7. Administration of airports program.—This activity includes costs of preparing the annual National Airport Plan; development of airport planning, design, and construction standards; furnishing of planning and engineering advisory services; administration of the Federal-aid airport program; assuring compliance of public agencies with the provisions of agreements relating to airports; and promoting airport safety.

Under this appropriation, the Federal airways system is being improved by the installation of new equipment and the construction and modernization of facilities. This request proposes continuation of the program started in prior years to automate the en route air traffic control system. In addition, the appropriation finances major capital items required by other agency programs such as aircraft for facility flight inspection and experimental facilities for the research and development program. The 1966 estimate will carry forward the program to increase the capacity of the airways system and to make its operations more efficient and safer. Operating costs of facilities procured under this appropriation are financed by the appropriation entitled "Operations."

The Federal Aviation Agency carries out a program to improve and modernize the national system of aviation facilities through the development of new systems, procedures, and devices. The Agency also carries out a program of medical research to aid in the development of rules and regulations governing the certification of airmen and to assure aviation safety.

Research and development is conducted through contracts with qualified private firms, universities, and individuals, or by agency staff or other government agencies. The data, procedures, or equipment resulting from this program are tested and evaluated to determine their potential value in meeting air traffic control and navigation needs.

1. Air traffic control.—This provides for improving the airways system by applying existing technology to air traffic control problems and by long-range research and development to meet future needs. Studies of present airways system operations and future requirements and work in the fields of data processing and display, data acquisition, and communications are included.

2. Navigation.—This provides for modernization, expansion, and improvements of the common system navigation facilities in the United States and in overseas areas where international agreements require U.S. participation. Work in the fields of landing systems, short- and long-distance navigation, and flight inspection are included.

3. Aviation weather.—This provides for a program, coordinated with the Departments of Defense and Commerce, to develop devices and techniques to improve the quality of aviation weather information and services. The effects of weather on air traffic management techniques and systems are also analyzed.

4. Aircraft safety.—This activity provides for a program, coordinated with the Department of Defense and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, to study, develop, and evaluate devices to enhance the safety of aircraft by providing practical solutions to critical safety problems and a sound basis for airworthiness standards and safety regulations.

5. Airports.—This provides for research and experimentation to establish criteria for designing airports and development and test of airport equipment.

6. Aviation medicine.—This provides for conducting an aeromedical research effort directed toward the identification and elimination of those physical, physiological, and psychological factors which may jeopardize safety in flight.

This appropriation finances management, operations, protection and capital outlay costs for equipment and maintenance projects for the Washington National Airport. The 1966 estimate provides a modest increase for maintenance and servicing to accommodate forecast traffic growth.

Direct operating costs and capital outlays of the airport are currently financed by direct appropriations with revenues, for services to tenants and other users, being deposited in the U.S. Treasury.

The following statements reflect financial results of the total operations including computation of unfunded depreciation and interest on a basis comparable to that used by other major commercial airports, and total actual revenue together with amounts representing the value of services furnished other Government agencies for which no collections are made. This unrealized revenue includes landing fees for Government aircraft and rental charges for office and hangar space used by Government agencies.

Operations at Washington National Airport reflect a profitable position in spite of increased maintenance costs resulting from the aging of original facilities and expanded operating costs due to new facilities and legislative salary increases. The sound financial position is attributable to the implementation of schedules of rates and charges commensurate with additional services and improved facilities.

This appropriation finances management, operation and protection expenses together with capital costs for equipment and minor maintenance projects at the federally owned Dulles International Airport. The 1966 estimate provides for an increased level of facility maintenance and servicing related to the expected growth in airport traffic. The following statement reflects the anticipated result of operations, including the computation of unfunded depreciation and interest on all assets on a basis comparable to that used by other major commercial airports.

Direct operating costs and capital outlays for the airport are financed by direct appropriations, with revenues received for services to tenants and other users to be deposited in the U.S. Treasury.

Although the financial statements reflect deficits during the next few years, the rate structure at the airport is on a basis that will assure the recovery of operating costs, interest expenses, and an appropriate return on the Government's investment during the airport's useful life.

Under the Federal Airport Act, grants are made to public agencies to aid the development and improvement of public airports. These grants generally cover 50% of project costs and are limited to facilities deemed essential under the criteria of safety, convenience, and efficiency. Contract authorizations were provided for this program through 1961. These authorizations together with the appropriations to liquidate obligations incurred under the authorizations are reflected in the schedules for Grants-in-aid for airports (liquidation of contract authorization).

Public Law 88-280 approved March 11, 1964, amended the Federal Airport Act to provide additional appropriation authorization of $75 million for each of the years 1965, 1966, and 1967. This account covers appropriations authorized under that Act as well as appropriations of prior years, beginning with 1962.

The following table summarizes activity under both the contract authority and that part of the program which is funded by direct appropriations:

The Federal Airport Act, as amended in 1955, provided for contract authorization of $42.5 million for 1956 and $63 million for each of the succeeding years 1957 through 1961. These authorizations continued a program of grants to public agencies to assist them in the development and improvement of a national system of airports to serve civil aviation.

Public Law 87-255, approved September 20, 1961, and subsequent authorization further amended the Federal Airport Act to provide for funding of grants through direct appropriations rather than contract authority. Appropriations proposed pursuant to these authorizations are shown under heading Grants-in-aid for airports. The narrative statement for that account includes data on the total airport grant program financed by both contract authorization and direct appropriations.

A 2-year program of research and development was started in 1962 to determine whether the construction of a safe and commercially sound supersonic transport is technically and economically feasible. In 1964, funds were appropriated to continue these investigations and to finance the preparation of specific design proposals.

Based on an initial design competition, completed in January 1964, two airframe and two engine manufacturers were selected to continue work on promising concepts. The results were submitted to the Federal Aviation Agency in October 1964 and are being evaluated. Meanwhile, the Department of Commerce is conducting additional studies of the economics of alternative designs. Investigations of the effects of sonic boom are also underway and will be evaluated by a special committee of the National Academy of Sciences.

The results of these efforts will be considered early in calendar year 1965 by the President's Advisory Committee on the Supersonic Transport. Recommendations with respect to the 1966 program will be transmitted to the Congress at a later date.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders 1963, $589 thousand; (1964 adjustments - $207 thousand); 1964, $1,701 thousand; 1965, $739 thousand; 1966, $739 thousand.

This appropriation provides for the basic real property operations of General Services Administration, including acquisition, operation, maintenance, protection and utilization of general-purpose buildings and space; and for overall direction of buildings design, construction, repair and modernization.

The appropriation request for 1966 of $230,618 thousand is a net increase of $4,834 thousand above a comparable amount for 1965. The 1965 amount includes proposed transfers of $2,543 thousand for annual costs of expansion space acquired in 1964, not provided for in GSA's 1965 budget, and $382 thousand for annual costs of expansion space acquired on July 1, 1964. Also included is an estimate of $1,871 thousand proposed for separate transmittal for full-year costs of 1964 wage board increases effected between September 15, 1963 and June 30, 1964, and $1,295 thousand for increased pay act costs in 1965 under the Government Employees Salary Reform Act of 1964. The request for 1966 includes $133 thousand for full-year costs of wage board increases effected July 1 through September 12, 1964, but does not include increases effected subsequent to September 12, 1964.

The net increase of $4,834 thousand provides primarily for management and operation of new Federal buildings scheduled for occupancy in 1965 and 1966, offset by credits for space released resulting from new construction.

No funds are included in the 1966 estimate for agency expansion space to be leased after July 1, 1964. Such space will be reimbursable in 1965 and the full-year cost will be financed by appropriation transfers in 1966, in accordance with the language in the 1965 Independent Offices Appropriation Act.

The net increase for 1966 of $4,904 thousand over the comparable amount for 1965 is composed of increases in operation and protection of Government-owned space, $7,628 thousand; and temporary space and moving costs incident to new buildings, $400 thousand; offset by reductions in rental, operation, and protection of leased space, $3,124 thousand. A supplemental appropriation is proposed for separate transmittal in 1965.

2. Space management.—This activity provides for (a) acquisition of real property by lease, purchase, exchange, or donation, including appraisal and management of building sites pending construction; (b) assignment and reassignment of Government-owned and leased space; and (c) review, analysis, and determination of Federal space requirements and the development of programs and projects.

This appropriation provides for maintaining, repairing, remodeling, improving and other alterations in federally owned buildings under the jurisdiction of the General Services Administration for these purposes, except extensions and conversions estimated to cost $200 thousand or more. The budget for 1966 provides for continuation of the long-range program initiated in 1957 to alleviate deterioration and obsolescence of buildings which adversely affect efficient operations of occupying agencies.

Fair value of personal property received from other appropriations or funds without cost for use by GSA is as follows: 1964, $92 thousand; 1965, $47 thousand; 1966, $47 thousand.

1. Maintenance repair and small improvements.—Normal needs for day-to-day repairs and minor improvements and renovations to buildings and equipment are programmed at a rate of about $0.22 per net square foot for general purpose space and $0.08 per net square foot for warehouse type space. About 10% of the activity provides for minor capitalized items.

2. Major repairs and improvements.—Elimination of major obsolescence and deterioration of buildings is provided by bringing the properties up to modern standards of usefulness. It is estimated that about 40% of this work will be capital improvements.

3. Air conditioning.—Improvements in working conditions are provided for occupants of buildings located in areas of high temperature and humidity. Since only new installations are included under this activity all costs are considered capital improvements.

4. Program direction.—Overall direction and program development are provided under this activity.
