OF THE

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

FOR THE FISCAL YEAR ENDING JUNE 30

U.S. GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE, WASHINGTON : 1966

For sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C., 20402 - Price $6.50 (paper cover)

FOREWORD

This is one of a group of five documents which relate to the budget for 1967. The Budget of the United States Government, 1967, is a compact volume containing the Budget Message of the President, summary tables and statistical information, and four special analyses.

The Budget of the United States Government, 1967—Appendix contains the text of appropriation estimates proposed for the consideration of the Congress together with specific reference materials on the various appropriations and funds. The contents of this volume are further explained at the beginning of each of its four parts.

The Budget of the United States Government, 1967—The District of Columbia is a volume which relates specifically to the estimates for the municipal government of the District of Columbia.

In addition, a pamphlet type of publication, The Budget in Brief, 1967, is available for those who wish a much more brief presentation than any of the three official volumes.

A second pamphlet type of publication, Special Analyses of the United States Budget, 1967, contains the four special analyses which are printed in the budget, and nine additional analyses.

NOTE.—Unless otherwise indicated, all references to years in this volume are to fiscal years ending June 30. Financial tables in parts I, II, and IV are nearly always stated in thousands of dollars; details may not add to the totals because of rounding.

EXPLANATION OF ESTIMATES FOR FEDERAL FUNDS

Part I contains supporting details for Federal funds, including various types of tables and schedules, explanatory statements of the work to be performed and the money needed, and the text of the language proposed for enactment by Congress on each item of authorization. Material is also included on a few trust funds which require congressional action. This part is arranged in chapters reflecting the organization of the Government.

TYPES OF FEDERAL FUNDS

Federal (Government-owned) funds are of four types, as follows:

The general fund is credited with receipts which are not earmarked by law for a specific purpose, and is charged with expenditures that are payable from appropriations (except appropriations of earmarked receipts) and those payable from borrowing. Both in number of items and in amounts, most of the Government's business is transacted through the general fund.

Special funds are those which are established to account for receipts that are earmarked by law for a specific purpose. They exclude the funds which carry on a cycle of operations for which there is continuing authority to use the receipts (as described in the next paragraph). Some special funds are subject to annual appropriation by Congress. Others are automatically available under the laws which created the funds.

Public enterprise (revolving) funds are those which finance a cycle of operations, in which the expenditures generate receipts coming primarily from the public and available for continuing use. They include nearly all of the Government-owned corporations, the postal fund, and various unincorporated enterprises.

Intragovernmental revolving and management funds (including consolidated working funds) are those which are created to facilitate financing operations within and between Government agencies. They consist of two types—intragovernmental revolving funds which finance a cycle of operations, like public enterprise funds but with receipts primarily from within the Government; and management funds which permit the pooling of advance payments from two or more appropriations to carry out certain activities.

Other funds, for which the Government serves in a fiduciary capacity, are of two types—trust funds and deposit funds. They are explained at the beginning of part II.

FORM OF DETAILED MATERIAL

For each appropriation, this appendix includes certain detailed material, as follows: (1) appropriation language, if applicable; (2) a schedule of program and financing; (3) a narrative statement on program and performance; and (4) a schedule of object classification. An exception occurs in the case of certain permanent appropriations and older appropriation accounts on which only a residual balance remains; such accounts of a bureau or independent agency are often combined into a single presentation instead of having separate schedules. Where the obligations fall in a single object class, the classification is identified in the program and financing schedule, rather than in a separate schedule.

For revolving funds, there are usually two additional schedules covering (5) revenue, expense, and retained earnings; and (6) financial condition.

The basic schedules usually exclude supplemental estimates which it is expected will be transmitted to Congress separately, for 1966 and 1967; these are covered by a brief schedule of program and financing, without appropriation language. However, the 1966 column of the basic schedules include (and identify) supplementals required to meet costs of military and civilian pay increases under recently enacted pay legislation.

The 1967 column includes, within the regular schedules, appropriations for recommended extension or renewal of expiring laws; however, money for new legislation is shown separately. Appropriation language is included for the former, not the latter.

APPROPRIATION LANGUAGE

The language proposed for inclusion in the 1967 appropriation acts is printed at the head of each item requiring action by Congress, except for those items which are not formally recommended at this time but will be proposed for separate transmittal. The language of the 1966 appropriation acts is used as a base. The text used in the 1966 appropriation acts is printed in roman type. Italic type indicates proposed new language. Brackets enclose material which it is proposed to omit, as in this example:

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the Office of Business Economics, [$2,500,000] $2,965,000. (5 U.S.C. 591, 596-597; 15 U.S.C. 171, 175; Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1966.)

Following the language, and printed in italics within parentheses, are citations to relevant authorizing legislation and to the appropriation act from which the text is taken.

BASIS FOR SCHEDULES

Where the data are available in the accounting system, cost-type budgets are presented. Detailed figures for each activity or object are the value of goods and services consumed in carrying out the program, in the case of operating costs; they are the value of assets acquired, in the case of capital outlay programs.

Total obligations are always shown; activities and objects are reflected on an obligation basis where cost data are not available. Obligations refer to orders placed, contracts awarded, loan agreements made, and services received during the year, regardless of the time of payment.

In the case of a few limitations which are on the basis of accrued expenditures, the detail and the totals are on that basis.

SCHEDULE OF PROGRAM AND FINANCING

This schedule consists of three parts. In the section for program by activities, costs or obligations are classified by purpose, program, or project for 1965, 1966, and 1967. This classification is individually developed for each appropriation or fund, and is not uniform on a Government-wide basis.

The financing section shows the appropriation provided and other means of financing the program, and the disposition of amounts not used during the year.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1964, $33 thousand; 1965, $57 thousand; 1966, $57 thousand; 1967, $57 thousand.

Where cost-type budgets are presented, the relation of costs to obligations is summarized in an entry "Change in selected resources." For appropriation accounts, this entry is supported by a footnote identifying the amounts of the resources involved. For revolving funds, the items are identified on the statement of financial condition and the appended tabulation.

Where programs are financed at a "preobligation" stage (such as the "program plan" for certain Defense items, and "commitments" for some loan programs) an extra three columns provide details on that basis.

The third section of the schedule shows receipts and other offsets (if any) to total obligations shown in the program section, obligated balances at the start and end of the year, and other items which affect the relation of obligations to expenditures.

Relation of obligations to expenditures:
71 Total obligations (affecting expenditures).....	2,348	2,550	2,965

77 Adjustments in expired accounts.....	-11
90 Expenditures excluding pay increase supplemental.....	2,275	2,400	2,800
91 Expenditures from civilian pay increase supplemental.....		47	3

For public enterprise revolving funds, there are two additional lines showing gross expenditures and applicable receipts of the fund.

NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The work planned and services proposed to be carried out are described briefly in a narrative statement for each appropriation or fund. Where practicable the narrative statement indicates the expected accomplishment in relation to the financial estimates, and gives some measures of program and performance.

SCHEDULE OF OBJECT CLASSIFICATION AND PERSONNEL SUMMARY

There is shown for each account a classification of obligations, costs, or accrued expenditures according to a uniform list of objects, as follows:

Object Classification (in thousands of dollars)

Identification code 06-15-1500-0-1-506	1965 actual	1966 estimate	1967 estimate
Personnel compensation:
11.1 Permanent positions.....	1,858	2,026	2,315
11.3 Positions other than permanent.....	23	10	10
11.5 Other personnel compensation.....	10	2	2
Total personnel compensation.....	1,891	2,036	2,325
12.0 Personnel benefits.....	141	152	174
21.0 Travel and transportation of persons.....	11	12	15
23.0 Rent, communications, and utilities.....	21	59	69
24.0 Printing and reproduction.....	122	121	129
25.1 Other services.....	29	33	60
25.2 Services of other agencies.....	117	113	133
26.0 Supplies and materials.....	11	17	21
31.0 Equipment.....	5	7	39
99.0 Total obligations.....	2,348	2,550	2,965

The object classes reflect the nature of the things or services purchased, regardless of the purpose or the nature of the program for which they are used.

The complete list of object classes is as follows:

10 PERSONAL SERVICES AND BENEFITS	30 ACQUISITION OF CAPITAL ASSETS
11 Personnel compensation	31 Equipment
12 Personnel benefits	32 Lands and structures
13 Benefits for former personnel	33 Investments and loans
20 CONTRACTUAL SERVICES AND SUPPLIES	40 GRANTS AND FIXED CHARGES
21 Travel and transportation of persons	41 Grants, subsidies, and contributions
22 Transportation of things	42 Insurance claims and indemnities
23 Rent, communications, and utilities	43 Interest and dividends
24 Printing and reproduction	44 Refunds
25 Other services
26 Supplies and materials

Several of the object classes are broken down into sub-classes—personnel compensation, for example, is shown separately for permanent positions, for positions other than permanent, and for certain other payments. A third digit is therefore used in the object schedules to identify the subclasses; a zero is used for the third digit when there are no subclasses. Additional entries are shown for unvouchered obligations (those for which accountability is waived; coded 91.0) and those which cannot be distributed by object class (coded 92.0), and for certain other adjusting entries to reach a total which agrees with the total obligations shown in the program and financing schedule.

A personnel summary is appended to the object classification schedule, as illustrated:

Personnel Summary

Total number of permanent positions.....	215	221	247
Full-time equivalent of other positions.....	2	2	2
Average number of all employees.....	204	211	234
Average GS grade.....	8.9	9.0	9.0
Average GS salary.....	$9,109	$9,615	$9,705

Permanent positions are those of a full-time nature which are of indefinite duration. Some are filled by persons with temporary appointments. Other positions include those of a temporary nature (a year or less), part-time jobs (less than a full workweek), and intermittent employment (occasional employees).

Average grades and salaries are computed arithmetically. Thus the average salary sometimes falls outside the salary range of the average grade.

STATEMENT OF REVENUE, EXPENSE, AND RETAINED EARNINGS

For revolving funds there is a statement of revenue and expense, computed on an accrual basis, and the resulting net income or loss for the year. This statement is usually on a full accrual basis, including sums for depreciation, provision for losses on receivables, etc. Where a fund consists of several programs, revenue and expense may be identified for each, as here illustrated:

Revenue, Expense, and Retained Earnings (in thousands of dollars)

Chartering program:
Revenue.....	14	14	14
Expense.....	69	121	129
Net operating loss, chartering program.....	-55	-107	-115
Examination program:
Revenue.....	3,819	4,207	4,474
Expense.....	3,821	4,063	4,381
Net operating income or loss, examination program.....	-2	144	93
Supervision program:
Revenue.....	1,177	1,281	1,409
Expense.....	940	1,225	1,297
Net operating income, supervision program.....	237	56	112
Net income or loss for the year.....	180	93	90
Analysis of retained earnings:
Retained earnings, start of year.....	1,394	1,574	1,667
Retained earnings, end of year.....	1,574	1,667	1,757

The statement includes an analysis of the retained earnings or the cumulative deficit. This analysis shows any additions to earnings, other than net income for the year, any charges made against retained earnings, and the balance of profits kept in the enterprise as of the end of the year (whether as cash, inventories, or other assets).

STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL CONDITION

For each revolving fund there is also presented a balance sheet of assets, liabilities, and equity of the Government at the close of the year, as in this example:

	1964 actual	1965 actual	1966 estimate	1967 estimate
Assets:
Treasury balance.....	1,179	1,354	1,424	1,474
Accounts receivable, net.....	636	711	782	857
Selected assets:¹
Advances.....	18	18	18	18
Deferred charges.....	5	3	2	2
Fixed assets, net.....	123	129	136	142
Total assets.....	1,961	2,215	2,363	2,493
Liabilities:
Current.....	566	641	697	736
Government equity:
Non-interest-bearing capital:
Donated assets.....	1	1
Donated property to surplus.....		1
End of year.....	1
Retained earnings.....	1,394	1,574	1,667	1,757
Total Government equity.....	1,395	1,574	1,667	1,757

The balance sheet excludes balances of appropriations and borrowing authorizations which have not yet been paid into the revolving fund. The section on equity of the Government is divided into three subsections as appropriate: (a) interest-bearing capital, (b) non-interest-bearing capital, and (c) retained earnings.

Because the balance sheet is on an accrual basis, it does not reflect the obligations incurred which have not yet matured into liabilities, nor does it reflect unfilled customer orders received and available as a basis for obligation in the case of intragovernmental revolving funds. Therefore, there is normally appended to the balance sheet an "Analysis of Government Equity" which shows obligations other than liabilities, the unobligated balance, unfilled customers' orders on hand (where relevant), and invested capital and earnings, as in the following example:

Unpaid undelivered orders ¹	10	3	3	3
Unobligated balance.....	1,239	1,421	1,507	1,592
Invested capital and earnings.....	146	150	157	162
Total Government equity.....	1,395	1,574	1,667	1,757

COMMUNICATIONS

For an amount for communications which may be expended interchangeably for payment, in accordance with such limitations and restrictions as may be prescribed by the Committee on Rules and Administration, of charges on official telegrams and long-distance telephone calls made by or on behalf of Senators or the President of the Senate, such telephone calls to be in addition to those authorized by the provisions of the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1947 (60 Stat. 392; 2 U.S.C. 46c, 46d, 46e), as amended, and the First Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1949 (63 Stat. 77; 2 U.S.C. 46d-1), $15,150. (Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1966.)

[ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS]

[Effective July 1, 1965, the paragraph relating to official long-distance telephone calls to and from Washington, District of Columbia, under the heading "Contingent Expenses of the Senate" in Public Law 479, Seventy-ninth Congress, as amended (2 U.S.C. 46c), is amended to read as follows:]

["There shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate, in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Committee on Rules and Administration of the Senate, toll charges on not to exceed twenty-four hundred strictly official long-distance telephone calls to and from Washington, District of Columbia, aggregating not more than twelve thousand minutes each fiscal year for each Senator and the Vice President of the United States: Provided, That not more than twelve hundred calls aggregating not more than six thousand minutes made in the first six months of each fiscal year shall be paid for under this sentence. The toll charges on an additional twelve hundred such calls aggregating not more than six thousand minutes each fiscal year for each Senator from any State having a population of ten million or more inhabitants shall also be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate: Provided, That not more than six hundred calls aggregating not more than three thousand minutes made in the first six months of each fiscal year shall be paid for under this sentence."]

[Effective July 1, 1965, the paragraph relating to payment of toll charges on official long-distance telephone calls, originating and terminating outside of Washington, District of Columbia, under the heading "Contingent Expenses of the Senate" in Public Law 479, Seventy-ninth Congress, as amended (2 U.S.C. 46d), is amended by striking out "$1,800" where it appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof "$2,200".]

[Any Senator may have the Sergeant at Arms compute his total maximum long-distance telephone allowance. The minutes and calls allowance shall be computed on a formula at the maximum rate with all calls considered as being person-to-person from Washington, District of Columbia, and terminating within the Senator's State. Any Senator or group of Senators may then request the Sergeant at Arms to contract for flat-rate long-distance telephone service such as wide area telephone service. All such contract costs shall be charged against their respective telephone allowances, and in no event shall the total cost of any contract service exceed the allowance of the Senator, or the group of Senators sharing any such service; any excess costs to be billed to the Senator. No change from the original form of the allowances or from any contract service shall become effective except upon the first of a month.]

[The third paragraph under the heading "Administrative Provisions" in the appropriation for the Senate in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1959, as amended (2 U.S.C. 43b), is amended by striking out "two" where it first appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof "six".]

[Effective July 1, 1965, the second paragraph under the heading "Administrative Provisions" contained in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1962 (Public Law 87-130, approved August 10, 1961; 2 U.S.C. 127) is amended by inserting at the end thereof the following: "Two additional mileage payments each fiscal year may be made, under the foregoing, to employees in the offices of Senators from States having a population of ten million or more inhabitants."]

[Effective July 1, 1965, the third paragraph under the heading "Administrative Provisions" contained in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1957 (Public Law 624, Eighty-fourth Congress; 2 U.S.C. 53), is amended by striking out "$150" where it appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof "$300".]

[The legislative subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations is hereby directed to study the manner in which stationery allowances are utilized, including the commutation thereof, and to make a report on its findings and recommendations to the Standing Committee on Appropriations no later than February 1, 1966.] (Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1966.)

1. Acquisition of Library materials.—The Library's collections are developed in accordance with established acquisition policies: materials are procured by purchase, gift, exchange, copyright deposit, transfer and official deposit; and materials are selected for addition to the permanent collections. The objective for 1967 is: intensification of acquisitions activities on a worldwide basis and continued improvement in acquisitions procedures. The collections totaled 44,189,137 items as of June 30, 1965, and consisted of 13,453,168 books and pamphlets; 18,838,280 manuscript pieces; and 11,897,689 maps, pieces of music, reels of microfilm, photographs, and other miscellaneous items. Of the items received, about 1 million are added to the permanent collections annually. Those received from various sources in 1965 and estimated for 1966 and 1967 are as follows (in thousands):

2. Organization of the collections.—Library materials are cataloged, classified, marked, and arranged; Library of Congress catalogs and the main National Union Catalog (card catalogs) are maintained; special collections are organized for use; and binding operations are controlled. The objectives for this activity in 1967 are the cataloging on a current basis of all materials of research value received during the year, the reduction of cataloging arrearages, and improved cataloging methods and procedures to assure the usefulness of the collections.

Selected performance data for 1965 and estimated for 1966 and 1967 (not including processing activities performed by the Reference Department and the Law Library) are as follows (in thousands):

3. Reader and reference services.—Books and other library materials are provided inside and outside of the Library, reference and bibliographic assistance is rendered, and custody of the collections is maintained. The objective of this activity for 1967 is to organize more material for use and to improve reference and circulation services. The workload in all major activities is expected to increase in 1966 and 1967 as follows (in thousands):

The Copyright Office is responsible for recording copyright claims, assignments, and renewals, for supplying copyright information to the public, for collecting and accounting for copyright fees, and for printing complete and indexed catalogs for each class of copyright entries. The Office is conducted for the most part on a self-sustaining basis. The amount requested is substantially counterbalanced by fees received for services rendered and the value of books and other Library materials deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act and transferred to the Library of Congress. The income and costs for 1965 and estimates for 1966 and 1967 are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

The program and performance under each of the activities described are predicated on an estimated 323,711 copyright registrations during 1967, an estimated 308,297 during 1966, and an actual 293,617 during 1965.

1. Receiving and accounting for applications, fees, and correspondence.—Materials received by the Copyright Office are assembled and routed; accounts are maintained for all moneys received; records relating to the registration of copyrights are filed; and materials are deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act. Performance data for 1965 and estimates for 1966 and 1967 are as follows (in thousands):

Registrations.....	294	308	324
Mail received and dispatched.....	640	673	706

2. Examining copyright applications.—All applications and deposits are examined before issuance of registration certificates or recordings of documents to determine whether the provisions of the Copyright Act have been satisfied. Performance data are as follows (in thousands):

Cases and documents examined.....	316	332	349
Registrations and recordation of docu- ments.....	308	323	340
Letters written.....	43	45	47

3. Indexing and cataloging materials received.—The Register of Copyrights is required to print complete and indexed catalogs of all items registered. The catalog entries prepared by the Copyright Office are made available in part to the Library for its general operations. There were 293,617 registrations cataloged in 1965 and estimates for 1966 and 1967 are 308,297 and 323,711 respectively.

4. Reference services.—The Copyright Office makes available to the public, information concerning the provisions of the Copyright Act, including procedures, policies, and rulings; information concerning registrations is furnished on a fee basis. Obtaining compliance with registration requirements is also part of this activity. Performance data are as follows (in thousands):

Letters and search reports written.....	22	23	24

5. Printing the catalog of copyright entries and bulletins of decisions.—Catalogs for each class of copyright entries and bulletins of copyright decisions are printed and made available to the public.

6. General supervision and legal services.—The work of the Copyright Office includes legal supervision and research into the present copyright law and international copyright relations. It also involves a study of improvement of the domestic law and our international copyright relations.

The fee bill and the complete overhaul of the law are the major goals of the Copyright Office.

1. Research and analysis.—The Legislative Reference Service assists Members and committees of Congress by preparing research reports, digests, translations, charts, and consultative services, and by supplying reference information and materials. The bulk of these services are furnished through seven subject-matter divisions: American law, economics, education and public welfare, foreign affairs, government and general research, natural resources, and science policy research. Under specific authorization of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, senior specialists are also available for high-level research and consultative services in the following fields: International economics, international relations, American Government and public administration, conservation, American public law, labor, engineering and public works, agriculture, price economics, national defense, social welfare, and science and technology. In 1965, 99,832 congressional inquiries were answered. The number of inquiries in 1966 is estimated at 110,000; and in 1967, 115,000.

2. Preparation of indexes and digests.—The Digest of Public General Bills covers all public bills and resolutions. It is expected that there will be about the same number of bills to be digested during the second session of the Eighty-ninth Congress as were digested for the second session of the Eighty-eighth Congress.

3. Reference files, bibliographies, and congressional reader services.—Reference files, containing clippings, pamphlets, and documents, are maintained as the basis for reply to a high percentage of inquiries; researchers are supplied with bibliographic and reference tools; selective and comprehensive bibliographies are prepared for Members and committees of Congress; and reader services are provided by the Congressional Reading Room. During 1965, 116,715 reference file items were processed, 29,248 bibliographic citations prepared, 140,817 published items acquired and processed, and 5,427 readers served.

The Card Division sells copies of the Library's printed catalog cards and publications. It maintains a stock of over 124 million catalog cards representing approximately 4,175,000 titles, and fills orders from over 17,000 regular subscribers—mostly libraries—in the United States and abroad. In 1965, 114 percent of this appropriation was recovered in the form of receipts from card and publication sales. Receipts of $4,354,637 were deposited in miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury in 1965. The objectives for 1967 are: meeting the increased demand for catalog cards and maintaining a reasonable level of service and economy, and the continued development of the "National Union Catalog" as the country's major bibliographic and locational tool.

1. Supplying cards for the Library of Congress.—The number of cards supplied to the Library of Congress in 1965 was 6,623,790; estimated for 1966, 7,300,000; and estimated for 1967, 8 million.

2. Supplying cards for other libraries.—The number of cards sold in 1965 was 61,489,201; estimated for 1966, 67 million; and for 1967, 73 million.

3. Preparation, printing, and distribution of publications related to cataloging.—These publications are an integral part of the cataloging activities of the Library of Congress and include the "Classification Schedules," lists of "Subject Headings," "Rules for Descriptive Cataloging," "Cataloging Service Bulletins," and similar publications.

4. Preparation, printing, and distribution of the "National Union Catalog."—This catalog (a cumulative author list) is issued monthly and cumulated quarterly and annually. Subscribers also receive issues of "Motion Pictures and Filmstrips" (quarterlies with annual cumulation), "Music and Phonorecords" (issued on a 6-month basis and annual cumulation), as well as the "Register of Additional Locations," and the "National Register of Microform Masters." There were 1,435 paid subscriptions for all issues in calendar year 1964 and it is estimated that there will be 1,600 subscriptions for 1965 and 2,000 for 1966.

5. Preparation, printing, and distribution of the "Subject Catalog."—This catalog is issued in three quarterly volumes with an annual cumulation. There were 529 paid subscriptions for calendar year 1964. It is estimated that there will be 600 paid subscriptions in 1965 and about 650 in 1966.

This appropriation is used to acquire domestic and foreign trade publications, both current and noncurrent. The publications acquired by purchase constitute a very important part of the Library's acquisitions although they represent only a small portion of the material received annually. The objectives for 1967 are: to continue the program for procurement of important research materials to strengthen the Library's collections; to continue the acquisition of selected important foreign newspapers and periodicals; to continue the program for procurement of important materials from critical areas, particularly from Eastern Europe, Africa, Asia, and Latin America; to continue to strengthen the Library's acquisitions in the fields of science and technology; to continue the purchase of selected current titles on microfilm as an economy measure in lieu of binding; to acquire a few important special collections long needed by the Library to fill gaps in the collections; to preserve important materials now on nitrate negative stills by converting them to a safety base film; and to continue the microfilming of deteriorating materials as a necessary preservative and spacesaving measure.

This appropriation constitutes the only means of acquiring lawbooks published in the regular domestic trade (except for copyright deposits) and many foreign lawbooks published in countries all over the world. The legal publications acquired by purchase constitute a most important part of the Law Library's acquisitions, although a substantial part of the annual receipts is received by means other than purchase. The special objectives for 1967 are: to continue the procurement of current foreign legal materials by placing purchase orders for certain necessary publications now received only irregularly through exchange or gift; to improve the procurement of important Hispanic, African, and Far Eastern materials; to continue the procurement of both current and noncurrent materials needed to strengthen the Law Library's already comprehensive coverage of critical areas in Eastern Europe, Asia, and Africa; to continue the acquisition of photoduplicates of important research items, especially those from critical areas, which are no longer obtainable in the original; and to continue a program for the microfilming or acquiring of microreproductions of deteriorating legal materials as a necessary preservative and spacesaving measure.

The Division for the Blind is responsible for administering a national program to provide reading material for the blind of the United States, U.S. territories and insular possessions. It has two closely related operations.

1. Procurement and distribution.—It provides books in embossed characters, and talking books with their associated reproducers. The books are distributed through 32 regional libraries which assume responsibility for their custody and circulation. The reproducers are distributed through 54 State agencies. The maintenance and procurement of these books are shown in the following table:

Salvaged—scrapped.....	5,000	5,000	7,500

Objectives for 1967 are: (1) the sustained procurement of braille books, (2) procurement of more titles of talking books including magazines, (3) procurement of a sufficient number of machines to equip newly registered blind readers and to replace additional obsolete machines, (4) replacement of a quantity of two-speed motors with three-speed motors in talking-book machines, and (5) the procurement of a limited quantity of tape-cassette machines with books to play on them.

2. Cataloging, reference, circulating, and training services.—Catalogs of talking and braille books are prepared and maintained, including a "Union Catalog of Hand Copied Books in Braille" which brings together a record of holdings of all libraries for the blind. The Division also maintains a unique collection (more than 30,000 volumes) of books in braille not available elsewhere for loan in the United States. During the past 5-year period, 1961-65, the number of readers throughout the country requiring catalogs from which to select reading matter has grown from 71,275 to 102,532 and circulation from 2,288,287 units (volumes, containers, and reels) to 3,945,382. The number of readers and circulation are expected to continue to increase in 1966 and 1967. Inquiries are received concerning library and related services available to the blind. Individuals throughout the Nation who are interested in transcribing or proofreading braille are trained and those qualified are certified. During 1965, 795 individuals were certified, and it is anticipated that this level will continue during 1966 and 1967.

Public Law 85-147 (71 Stat. 368), approved August 16, 1957, authorizes an appropriation of $720 thousand to remain available until expended, to arrange, index, and microfilm the Papers of the Presidents of the United States in the collections of the Library of Congress. This law was amended by Public Law 88-299 (78 Stat. 183), approved April 27, 1964, which removes the $720 thousand limitation and authorizes to be appropriated such amounts as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of Public Law 85-147. The purpose of the program is to preserve the contents of the Papers of the Presidents and to make them more readily available for research. It was started in 1959. The objectives for 1967 will be to provide negative and positive service copy on microfilm of material arranged and indexed, and to continue publishing indexes in editions of 1,000 copies each.

The objective of this program is to preserve, on a priority basis, the rapidly deteriorating and dangerous nitrate portion of the Library's valuable archival collection of motion pictures important to film history. With the $50 thousand appropriated in 1965, some 1,575,000 feet of 35-millimeter film were replaced by safety base film. With the $50 thousand appropriated for 1966, and the same amount requested for 1967, it is expected that film may be replaced at the accelerated rate, and more economically, of some 2,200,000 feet per year through direct purchase of acetate prints whenever available as well as by laboratory conversion.

act to provide information of technical, scientific, cultural, or educational significance to the United States through the collection of foreign library materials and the distribution of copies thereof to libraries and research centers in the United States. The program is being continued on a full year's basis in five countries in 1966: India, Indonesia, Israel, Pakistan, and the United Arab Republic; in addition, if circumstances permit, programs will be initiated in Nepal and Burma. The initiation of similar programs in Guinea, Ceylon, Tunisia, Poland, and Yugoslavia is proposed for 1967. Of the total amount requested, $2,492 thousand will be used to purchase foreign currencies, while $230 thousand will provide U.S. dollar support.

1. Acquisition of books and other library materials.—Based upon the information received during the exploratory stage concerning materials available in the 5 additional countries and the requirements of other Federal agencies and certain research libraries in the United States, publications and other library materials will be purchased in multiple copies from 12 countries and distributed to selected libraries and research centers in the United States, including the Library of Congress.

2. Program support (U.S. dollars).—U.S. dollars are required to pay certain expenses which cannot be paid by foreign currencies, such as salaries and personnel benefits of U.S. personnel abroad, salaries of the coordinating staff at the Library of Congress, travel in some instances, and equipment and supplies which cannot be procured abroad.

The Oliver Wendell Holmes Devise Fund was established by 69 Stat. 533 to (1) prepare a history of the Supreme Court of the United States, and, if deemed advisable, (2) to finance an annual lecture or series of lectures, and (3) publish a memorial volume of Justice Holmes' writings. The principal and interest on the fund are available for these purposes. The current program is devoted primarily to the preparation of the history of the Supreme Court; annual lectures are also financed by this fund.

The work programs of the Office of the Superintendent of Documents are of a service nature, and hence there is no control over the volume of work which is required by law.

1. Sales distribution.—Government publications are purchased from the Public Printer to be placed on sale. Acquisition costs are paid from sales receipts; hence no appropriation is required for printing sales copies. By law, the sales price is set at cost of manufacture plus 50%. At the end of each year, excess receipts from sales not required for purchasing additional publications are turned in to the Treasury Department as miscellaneous receipts. For 1965, earnings from the sale of publications amounted to $7,404 thousand. It is estimated that earnings for 1966 will be $7,500 thousand and $7,600 thousand for 1967. These earnings more than cover the appropriation required to finance the sales program.

The sale of Government publications has been steadily increasing, and in the last 10 years the sales volume has more than doubled. The current public interest in the Government's publishing program points to a continuing increase in the volume of sales.

2. Distribution for other agencies and Members of Congress.—The Superintendent of Documents maintains mailing lists, including the list for the Congressional Record, and performs mailing operations upon request of any Government agency. Mailing services for farmers' bulletins, soil surveys, and other publications which are allocated to Members of Congress on a quota basis are also provided.

3. Depository library distribution.—Upon request, one copy of every Government publication is supplied to libraries which are designated depositories for Government publications.

4. Cataloging and indexing.—This activity covers the preparation and distribution of catalogs and indexes of all publications issued by the Federal Government, the principal series being the Monthly Catalog of the U.S. Government Publications and the Numerical List and Schedule of Volumes.

5. Contingency fund.—This fund to be used only with the approval of the Public Printer, and only to the extent necessary to provide for expenses (excluding permanent personal services) for workload increases not anticipated in the budget estimates and which cannot be provided for by normal budgetary adjustments.

The Government Printing Office executes orders for printing, binding, and blankbook work, placed by Congress and the various departments and independent establishments of the Federal Government, and furnishes on order, blank paper, inks, and similar supplies. Operations are subject to the authority of the Joint Committee on Printing (44 U.S.C. 63).

A separate appropriation has been established for authorized printing and binding for the Congress; for printing, binding, and distribution of the Federal Register; and printing and binding of Government publications authorized by law to be distributed without charge to the recipients (79 Stat. 280).

All work for Government agencies is done on a reimbursable basis and financed through the Government Printing Office revolving fund.

Receipts from sales of publications by the Superintendent of Documents are deposited to the revolving fund and cost of publications paid therefrom. All profits accruing from these transactions are transferred to the Treasury general fund (44 U.S.C. 63).

The U.S. Court of Customs and Patent Appeals has exclusive jurisdiction in appeals from judgments of the U.S. Customs Court in all cases involving the construction of the law and facts respecting the classification of merchandise and the rate of duty imposed thereunder and all appealable questions as to the laws and regulations governing the collection of customs revenues. Its decisions are final unless taken to the Supreme Court on writs of certiorari.

The court also has exclusive jurisdiction of appeals from the Tariff Commission on questions of law only and in the matter of unfair practices in import trade, and appellate jurisdiction from decisions of the Patent Office in patent and trademark cases, except those involving equity.

The Court of Claims has jurisdiction over all cases involving claims against the United States (except in pension suits) instituted upon constitutional grounds or under Federal law or regulations, all claims arising out of any contract with the Federal Government and its agencies, and claims for the refund of taxes. It also has general jurisdiction to hear and determine claims for damages other than tort actions, provided the claimants would have the right to sue in law or equity if the United States were not immune to such suits. It has jurisdiction in suits against the United States by contractors dissatisfied with the findings and decisions of contracting agencies under terminated war contracts, and jurisdiction concurrent with that of the courts of appeals to review district court decisions in cases involving tort actions. It has exclusive jurisdiction to review the decisions of the Indian Claims Commission on appeal from the Commission. It also has jurisdiction in special act cases referred to the court by the Congress.

The statutory salaries and benefits of all active U.S. circuit and district judges, and all justices and judges who have retired or resigned in pursuance of law are payable from this appropriation. This item also includes the payment of annuities to surviving widows of Supreme Court Justices.

It is estimated that funds will be required to pay an average of 469 judges in 1967 as compared with 459 for which provision is made in the base appropriation. A reduction in the number of judgeship vacancies, from 15 to 10 and an increase in the number of senior and resigned judges from 90 to 95 is anticipated.

The primary and appellate jurisdiction of the courts of the United States are vested in the 91 district courts and 11 courts of appeals. Provision for the salaries of the administrative and legal aides required to assist the judges in the conduct of hearings, trials, and other judicial functions and to man the component offices of the courts including the Federal probation system, is under this heading.

The estimate for 1967 contemplates the appointment of 248 additional employees: 9 deputy clerks, 33 law clerks, 33 stenographers, and 36 messengers for the courts of appeals; 32 deputy clerks for the district courts; and 60 officers and 45 clerk-stenographers for the probation service. Provision also has been made for the conversion of 80 court crier positions to combination positions of crier-law clerk, and for within-grade salary advancements.

This appropriation provides for the statutory fees and allowances of jurors, fees of jury commissioners, and the fees and related benefits of U.S. commissioners who serve primarily as committing magistrates.

The earnings of commissioners are directly related to the volume of cases presented by law enforcement officials. The amount of service and the compensation of jurors depends largely on the number of jury trials requested by the parties to civil and criminal cases in the U.S. courts. The estimate for 1967 takes into account the increases in the attendance fees and subsistence allowances of jurors from $7 to $10 effective September 2, 1965. A supplemental appropriation for 1966 is proposed for separate transmittal.

The office, pursuant to section 604 of title 28, United States Code, under the supervision and direction of the Judicial Conference of the United States, is responsible for the administration of the U.S. courts, including the probation and bankruptcy systems. The principal functions consist of providing staffs and services for the courts; conducting a continuous study of the rules of practice and procedure in the Federal courts; examining the state of the dockets of the various courts; compiling and publishing statistical data concerning the business transacted by the courts; and administering the judicial survivors annuity system under title 28, United States Code, section 376. The office also is responsible for the preparation and submission of the annual budget estimates as well as supplemental and deficiency estimates; the disbursement of and accounting for moneys appropriated for the operation of the courts; the audit and examination of accounts; the purchase and distribution of supplies and equipment; and for securing adequate space for occupancy by the courts and for such other matters as may be assigned by the Supreme Court and the Judicial Conference of the United States.

The estimate for 1967 provides for 37 additional positions: An executive secretary and a clerk-stenographer for each of the 11 judicial circuits to assist in the administration of the Criminal Justice Act of 1964; 2 additional positions to assist in the administration of the judiciary salary plan; 5 positions to institute a program for compiling information on the record of Federal offenders following their discharge from prison or release from probation or parole supervision; and 8 positions to cope with an increased workload and for other purposes. Provision also has been made for within-grade salary advancements.

The district courts of the United States are constituted courts of bankruptcy, vested with original jurisdiction at law and in equity in proceedings brought under the bankruptcy statutes. This jurisdiction primarily is exercised through referees appointed by the several district courts. Their compensation and benefits are paid from this appropriation, which is derived from a special fund in the Treasury to which are deposited payments of fees and charges by parties to the proceedings. No appropriation from the general fund of the Treasury is required.

Office and other expenses of referees, including compensation and benefits of clerical employees, are payable upon authorization of the Director of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts. Caseload data appear under the account for salaries of referees. This appropriation is derived from a special fund in the Treasury to which are deposited payments of fees and charges by parties to the proceedings. No appropriation from the general fund of the Treasury is required.

The estimate for 1967 includes funds for the employment of 40 additional clerks to cope with an increased workload. Provisions also have been made for within-grade salary advancements and an increase in the cost of local and long-distance telephone service. Nonrecurring expenses and an anticipated savings in postage have been deducted in establishing the budgetary requirements for 1967.

The Bureau assists the President in the discharge of his budgetary, management, and other executive responsibilities. Provision has been made in the 1967 estimates for an increase in staff to provide for more intensive program examination and evaluation and for the re-establishment of a small field service.

1. Office of budget review.—Budget instructions and procedures are developed, review of agency estimates is coordinated, and the budget document is prepared.

2. Office of financial management.—Direction is given to programs for improving accounting and financial management in the executive agencies, in collaboration with the General Accounting Office and the Treasury Department.

3. Office of legislative reference.—Proposed legislation and agency reports on pending legislation and enrolled bills are reviewed for the President.

4. Office of management and organization.—Programs and plans are developed for improved Government organization and procedures, and guidance is provided in the work of the Bureau to improve agency management and operations.

5. Office of statistical standards.—Proposed agency reporting plans and forms are reviewed, and the Government's statistical activities, coverage, and methods are coordinated and improved.

6. Program divisions.—Agency programs, budget requests, and management activities are examined, appropriations are apportioned, proposed changes in agency functions are studied, and agencies are assisted in the improvement of their administration. Responsibility for this work with respect to particular agencies is divided among seven divisions: (a) commerce and housing, (b) education, manpower, and science, (c) general government, (d) health and welfare, (e) international, (f) military, and (g) resources and civil works.

7. Field service.—Six small field offices serve the Bureau in its contact with agency field operations and with State and local governments.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1964, $178 thousand; (1965 adjustments—$32 thousand); 1965, $287 thousand; 1966, $287 thousand; 1967, $287 thousand.

The Office of Emergency Planning serves as a staff office to advise and assist the President with respect to the nonmilitary defense programs of the United States. This includes the coordination of emergency preparedness activities of Federal agencies, the development of emergency preparedness programs not covered by the responsibilities of the regular departments and agencies, and the performance of other duties in the areas of stockpiling, Federal disaster relief, and imports affecting the national security.

1. Emergency preparedness.—This activity finances the development of emergency preparedness plans and programs at all levels of government. Plans and programs are developed to assure the continued operation and control of governmental authority and to mobilize the country's economic resources under emergency conditions.

(a) Economic readiness.—Plans and programs are developed to improve the ability of the U.S. economy to perform under emergency conditions—from international crisis to nuclear war. These include supply-requirement studies, stockpiling policies, standby controls, dispersal policies, investigations of imports affecting the national security, and developing Government-wide plans for the mobilization and management of resources in an emergency.

(b) Government readiness.—Plans and programs are developed to reduce the vulnerability of all levels of government to enemy attack and to insure the continued functioning of governmental leadership and control in an emergency. These include achieving a standby capability for emergency operations on the part of existing Government agencies; relocating essential governmental functions in an emergency; and the recruitment and training of qualified executive reservists who would be called to duty in an emergency.

(c) Regional, State, and local readiness.—Eight regional offices of the Office of Emergency Planning work with State and local governments on emergency preparedness planning. They also coordinate Federal assistance under natural disasters and assist the Federal offices in the field in developing a capability to perform their functions in an emergency.

(d) Policy, research, and review.—Basic plans and policies for the over-all emergency preparedness program are developed, including the National Plan for Emergency Preparedness. Research in the emergency preparedness field is coordinated and direction is provided to the National Resource Evaluation Center. Office of Emergency Planning research contracts are administered. National preparedness objectives are developed and progress measured against these objectives.

2. Administration and executive direction.—The necessary staff support is provided to the Director of the Office of Emergency Planning and other Office of Emergency Planning offices under this activity. Services include general administration, public information and liaison, and legal assistance. Funds are also included to finance the housekeeping expenses of the Office of Emergency Planning in Washington. This activity also includes the salaries of the Director of the Office of Emergency Planning, the deputy director, two assistant directors and their immediate staff. The Director is a principal adviser to the President on nonmilitary defense. He serves as a member of the National Security Council and participates in meetings of the Cabinet by invitation of the President.

3. Research and development.—This activity finances technical studies of emergency preparedness problems which cut across the functional responsibilities of other Federal agencies. Contracts are made with universities and private organizations when it is not feasible or economical to hire a permanent Office of Emergency Planning staff.

The Office of Telecommunications is responsible for advising and assisting the President on all communications matters.

1. Telecommunications management.—This activity includes: (1) providing policy direction for the development and operation of the National Communication System; (2) develop advanced concepts and plans for the application of new technology within the Government; (3) developing overall policies for the mobilization of the Nation's telecommunications in a national emergency; (4) assigning frequencies to Federal Government radio stations and developing procedures and rules for their use; (5) reviewing the actual usage of Government frequencies; (6) developing data on Federal Government frequency requirements; (7) providing assistance and advice to the Department of State on international telecommunications matters; (8) assisting the President with respect to his coordinating and other functions under the Communications Satellite Act of 1962; and (9) promoting efficiency and economy in the procurement and management of communication services throughout the Federal Government.

2. Research and development.—This activity will finance technical studies of telecommunications matters which are too broad in scope to be undertaken by any single department. Examples of such studies include methods of interconnecting the communications systems of individual agencies; and means of increasing the survivability of telecommunications resources.

Through a series of Executive orders the following agencies have been requested to prepare national emergency plans and develop preparedness programs under the general guidance and review of the Office of Emergency Planning, the President's principal staff agency for the nonmilitary defense program.

1. Agriculture.—The Department is responsible for mobilization and management of national food resources in an emergency. The 1967 program will continue emphasis on achieving readiness at the State and local level.

2. Commerce.—The Department develops long-range emergency preparedness programs for all forms of transportation. It is also responsible for mobilization of production facilities in the event of emergency. Census data is developed for the use of the National Resource Evaluation Center.

3. Health, Education, and Welfare.—Responsibilities have been assigned to this Department to improve the Nation's civil defense readiness in areas of emergency health and welfare. Food and Drug personnel are trained in radiological, biological, and chemical warfare. Measures are developed to insure safety of drugs in an emergency. Emergency welfare programs are developed and disseminated to State and local welfare agencies.

4. Interior.—The Department is responsible for preparedness programs covering electric power, petroleum and gas, solid fuels and minerals. These programs are carried on with the cooperation of private industry.

5. Labor.—The Department is responsible for insuring the availability of an adequate labor force to meet mobilization and civil defense requirements. A capability is also maintained for emergency wage and salary stabilization.

6. Treasury.—The Department develops national emergency plans relating to economic stabilization and emergency monetary programs.

7. Housing and Urban Development.—This Department develops plans and programs for provision of emergency housing and related community facilities.

8. Federal Communications Commission.—As part of the program to mobilize the Nation's communications resources under emergency conditions, the Commission is responsible for development of plans and programs with respect to privately owned communications facilities and services.

9. Interstate Commerce Commission.—The Commission is assigned responsibility, as a part of the national emergency transportation program, for guidance to the domestic surface transportation industry on disaster preparedness. This covers railroads, motor carriers, and inland waterways.

The National Advisory Commission on Food and Fiber was established by the President in Executive Order 11256, dated November 4, 1965, to assist the President's Committee on Food and Fiber, established in same Executive Order, in carrying out the Committee's primary function of appraising existing and alternative agricultural policies and related foreign trade policies. This appraisal will consider the current economic situation and trends in American farming, including productivity costs, prices, income, farm employment, labor standards, foreign trade, and related matters.

The Commission must submit its final report and recommendations to the Committee no later than 18 months after the date of its first meeting (January 11-13, 1966), with interim reports to be made as deemed necessary. The Commission must terminate 90 days after the submission of its final report, or approximately October 11, 1967:

GENERAL PROVISIONS

DEPARTMENTS, AGENCIES, AND CORPORATIONS

SEC. 501. Unless otherwise specifically provided, the maximum amount allowable during the current fiscal year in accordance with section 16 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U.S.C. 78), for the purchase of any passenger motor vehicle (exclusive of buses and ambulances), is hereby fixed at $1,500 except station wagons for which the maximum shall be $1,950.

SEC. 502. Unless otherwise specified and during the current fiscal year, no part of any appropriation contained in this or any other Act shall be used to pay the compensation of any officer or employee of the Government of the United States (including any agency the majority of the stock of which is owned by the Government of the United States) whose post of duty is in continental United States unless such person (1) is a citizen of the United States, (2) is a person in the service of the United States on the date of enactment of this Act, who, being eligible for citizenship, had filed a declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States prior to such date, (3) is a person who owes allegiance to the United States, or (4) is an alien from Poland or the Baltic countries lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence: Provided, That for the purpose of this section, an affidavit signed by any such person shall be considered prima facie evidence that the requirements of this section with respect to his status have been complied with: Provided further, That any person making a false affidavit shall be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than $4,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both: Provided further, That the above penal clause shall be in addition to, and not in substitution for, any other provisions of existing law: Provided further, That any payment made to any officer or employee contrary to the provisions of this section shall be recoverable in action by the Federal Government. This section shall not apply to citizens of the Republic of the Philippines or to nationals of those countries allied with the United States in the current defense effort, or to temporary employment of translators, or to temporary employment in the field service (not to exceed sixty days) as a result of emergencies.

SEC. 503. Appropriations of the executive departments and independent establishments for the current fiscal year, available for expenses of travel or for the expenses of the activity concerned, are hereby made available for quarters allowances and cost-of-living allowances, in accordance with title II of the Act of September 6, 1960 (74 Stat. 793).

SEC. 504. No part of any appropriation for the current fiscal year contained in this or any other Act shall be paid to any person for the filling of any position for which he or she has been nominated after the Senate has voted not to approve the nomination of said person.

SEC. 505. No part of any appropriation contained in this or any other Act for the current fiscal year shall be used to pay in excess of $4 per volume for the current and future volumes of the United States Code, Annotated, and such volumes shall be purchased on condition and with the understanding that latest published cumulative annual pocket parts issued prior to the date of purchase shall be furnished free of charge, or in excess of $4.25 per volume for the current or future volumes of the Lifetime Federal Digest, or in excess of $6.50 per volume for the current or future volumes of the Modern Federal Practice Digest.

SEC. 506. Funds made available by this or any other Act for administrative expenses in the current fiscal year of the corporations and agencies subject to the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended (31 U.S.C. 841), shall be available, in addition to objects for which such funds are otherwise available, for rent in the District of Columbia; services in accordance with section 15 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U.S.C. 55a); and the objects specified under this head, all the provisions of which shall be applicable to the expenditure of such funds unless otherwise specified in the Act by which they are made available: Provided, That in the event any functions budgeted as administrative expenses are subsequently transferred to or paid from other funds, the limitations on administrative expenses shall be correspondingly reduced.

SEC. 507. Pursuant to section 1415 of the Act of July 15, 1952 (66 Stat. 662), foreign credits (including currencies) owed to or owned by the United States may be used by Federal agencies for any purpose for which appropriations are made for the current fiscal year (including the carrying out of Acts requiring or authorizing the use of such credits), only when reimbursement therefor is made to the Treasury from applicable appropriations of the agency concerned: Provided, That such credits received as exchange allowances or proceeds of sales of personal property may be used in whole or part payment for acquisition of similar items, to the extent and in the manner authorized by law, without reimbursement to the Treasury.

SEC. 508. During the current fiscal year, any foreign currencies held by the United States which have been or may be reserved or set aside for specified programs or activities of any agency may be carried on the books of the Treasury in unfunded accounts.

SEC. 509. No part of any appropriation contained in this or any other Act, or of the funds available for expenditure by any corporation or agency, shall be used for publicity or propaganda purposes designed to support or defeat legislation pending before Congress. (Public Works Appropriation Act, 1966.)

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 1201. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year unless expressly so provided herein.

[SEC. 1202. The appropriations, authorizations, and authority with respect thereto in this Act shall be available from July 1, 1965, for the purposes provided in such appropriations, authorizations, and authority. All obligations incurred during the period between June 30, 1965, and the date of enactment of this Act in anticipation of such appropriations, authorizations, and authority are hereby ratified and confirmed if in accordance with the terms hereof, and the terms of Public Law 89-58, Eighty-ninth Congress, as amended.] (Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1966.)

Section 44 of the Alaska Omnibus Act (75 Stat. 151) authorized grants to the State of Alaska for a 5-year period ending June 30, 1964, to facilitate assumption by the State of responsibilities hitherto performed in Alaska by the Federal Government. The section was extended for an additional 2 years and an additional $23.5 million in grants was authorized to assist the State and local governments in recovering from the earthquake of March 27, 1964. The Deficiency Appropriation Act of 1964 appropriated $17 million under this additional authorization. In 1966, $4.5 million was appropriated under the same authorization.

These funds are to enable the President (a) to make grants to the State to assist in financing normal and extraordinary State and local government functions during a period when revenues would be curtailed and (b) to finance continued Federal operation for an interim period of functions to be transferred to the State. In the past the State has requested the Federal Government to continue to operate certain intermediate airports and allocations have been made to the Federal Aviation Agency for this purpose. It is expected that the State will assume the operation of these facilities during 1966.

1. Administration.—Funds are provided to administer and coordinate disaster relief assistance for the States. Simultaneously with the President's authorization of an allocation of funds to the Office of Emergency Planning for required disaster assistance, he authorizes an additional allocation to OEP for administrative purposes.

2. Aid to disaster areas.—Under Public Law 81-875, the Federal Government provides supplementary assistance to State and local governments in the event of a declared major disaster. Federal financial assistance is provided from the Disaster Relief appropriation, under which allocations may be made directly to a State, or to Federal agencies as reimbursement for expenditures in disaster relief work performed under this authority. Responsibility for administration of this program is delegated to OEP by Executive Order 10427. A supplemental appropriation for 1966 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

Under the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, designated agencies are authorized with Presidential approval to incur obligations and make expenditures to expand production of critical materials for programs certified as essential to the national defense by the Office of Emergency Planning. The program is conducted primarily through a revolving fund financed by borrowing from the Treasury. The amount borrowed may not exceed $2.1 billion outstanding at any one time.

Allocations of borrowing authority by the Office of Emergency Planning and net borrowing from the U.S. Treasury as of June 30, 1965, were as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Authorized agency	Borrowing authority allocated	Borrowings outstanding	Net avail- able for borrowing
General Services Administration ¹	1,959,000	1,944,700	14,300
Department of Agriculture.....	86,100	78,453	7,647
Department of the Interior.....	35,800	32,935	2,865
Office of Emergency Planning (reserve)---	19,100	0	19,100

¹ In addition, an appropriation of $108 million was applied to General Services Administration activities, thus providing financing of $2,067 million to that agency.

General Services Administration. The program for expansion of production capacity has included the purchase and resale of metals, minerals and machine tools, and research and pilot plant operations to develop new materials and new techniques for utilizing low-grade domestic ores. The expansion program has been completed; no materials contracts remain outstanding at this time. The major problems now are custody, maintenance, and disposition of the materials and facilities.

As one of the inducements for expanding production, most of the contracts provided a guaranteed market for production from expanded facilities. The option rights of contractors were examined with a view to reducing deliveries to the Government as far as possible within the terms of the contracts whenever basic stockpiling objectives had been attained. Between July 1, 1957, and June 30, 1965, a reduction of $449.1 million in gross commitments was attained through renegotiation of contracts. However, significant amounts of materials have been delivered to the Defense Production Act inventory under these contracts. Progress has been made in disposing of these materials primarily by sales to other Government agencies and industry. Steps are being taken to increase and accelerate the disposal program for these materials wherever this can be accomplished without disruptive effects on the market. Investment in inventory of $1,380 million on June 30, 1965, is expected to decrease to $876 million by June 30, 1967.

A summary of sales transactions involving the strategic minerals and metals under this fund follows (in millions of dollars):

Opening inventory (cost).....	1,464	1,380	1,163
Less cost of goods sold:
Sales receipts.....	75	139	185
Loss on sales.....	8	74	98
Cost of goods sold.....	83	213	283
Less transfer for upgrading.....	1	4	4
Closing inventory (cost).....	1,380	1,163	876

Department of Agriculture. The purchase, management, and resale of agricultural commodities, except forest products, were carried out by the Commodity Credit Corporation, which was reimbursed from an allocation to the Secretary of Agriculture from this fund. The program was completed by 1961, but interest expense still accumulates on borrowing covering the loss incurred.

Department of the Interior. Department of the Interior operations to expand defense production under the Act were limited to the encouragement of exploration for strategic and critical minerals. The operations are administered by the Geological Survey. This Office uses appropriated funds to administer the Defense Minerals Exploration Administration contracts under which royalty obligations remain.

As of June 30, 1965, there were 175 loan contracts amounting to $8,055 thousand on which repayments will be made, only if discoveries are made, at the rate of 5% per annum on gross production. Such loan repayments totaled $5,344 thousand through fiscal year 1965, and are estimated at $300 thousand for 1966 and $250 thousand for 1967.

Treasury Department. The function of making and administering loans to private business enterprises was assigned to the Secretary of the Treasury by Executive Order 10489, dated September 26, 1953.

No new loans were authorized during fiscal year 1965 and none are anticipated during fiscal years 1966 and 1967.

Loans outstanding are estimated to be reduced by $532 thousand in each of the fiscal years 1966 and 1967, leaving $3,166 thousand outstanding.

Financial Condition. Outstanding borrowings from the U.S. Treasury exceed $2 billion whereas assets under the DPA revolving fund are made up almost entirely of minerals and metals inventory which, on June 30, 1965, had a book value of about $1.4 billion and a market value of about $0.9 billion. Interest on borrowings, accruing at an annual rate of about $70 million, is currently more than offset by inventory sales. However, this sole remaining significant source of income will be insufficient even for interest payments within a few years.

The Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) is an intergovernmental institution, corporate in form, whose capital stock is owned by its member governments. The Bank promotes economic development in member countries through loans, technical assistance, and guarantees of private investment in development projects. Twenty Western Hemisphere republics, including the United States, are members of the Bank, and all have completed required payments on their original authorized subscriptions and quotas. Cuba is not a member of the Bank.

Ordinary capital.—The Bank's authorized ordinary capital is now the equivalent of $2,150 million of which $1,291 million had been subscribed as of November 30, 1965. Of the total subscribed, the equivalent of $381,580 thousand has been paid in, and the remaining $909,910 thousand is subject to call by the Bank if required to meet its obligations arising out of borrowings or guarantees. The Bank's original authorized capital of $850 million was enlarged to $2,150 million in 1964 through a $1 billion increase in callable capital, and a $300 million increase to provide for the possible admission of new members.

Public Law 86-147, approved August 7, 1959, authorized U.S. membership in the Bank, and authorized appropriation of $350 million to cover the U.S. subscription to ordinary capital, of which $150 million was paid in and $200 million was callable. Public Law 88-259, approved January 22, 1964, authorized appropriation of an additional $411,760 thousand to cover an increase in the U.S. callable subscription. The U.S. subscription, as of December 31, 1965, totaled $761,760 thousand.

By the end of November 1965, Bank commitments from ordinary capital had reached $629.8 million on 122 loans.

Fund for special operations.—In addition to its ordinary capital operations, the Bank lends from its fund for special operations in circumstances where ordinary capital financing is not appropriate. The initial resources of this fund totaled $146.3 million, one-half payable in dollars and one-half in member currencies. The resources of the fund were increased by 50% in early 1964, bringing total resources to $219.5 million. Public Law 86-147, approved August 7, 1959, authorized payment of the initial U.S. quota of $100 million; Public Law 88-259, approved January 22, 1964, authorized payment of $50 million for the 50% increase in the U.S. quota.

The resources of the fund for special operations were fully committed during 1965 for loans in support of Alliance for Progress objectives. In April 1964, the Board of Governors of the Bank recommended an increase in fund resources of $300 million per year for the years 1965, 1966, and 1967. The U.S. share of its increase, $250 million per year or a total of $750 million, was authorized by Public Law 89-6, approved March 24, 1965, and appropriations of the first two annual installments have been made.

As of November 30, 1965, commitments from the fund for special operations amounted to $224.7 million on 66 loans.

The International Development Association is an affiliate of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, established to provide long-term, low-interest loans to its less-developed member countries. U.S. membership was authorized by Public Law 86-565 (74 Stat. 293), approved June 30, 1960. The United States joined in August 1960, and the Association began operations in November 1960. The initial subscription of the United States totaled $320,290 thousand, paid in five annual installments, the last of which was paid in November 1964.

Seventeen advanced countries agreed in June 1964 to add to IDA's original resources through supplementary contributions totaling $750 million, payable in annual installments during 1966, 1967, and 1968. The U.S. share is $312 million, or $104 million per year. The 1967 appropriation request is for the second installment of $104 million which must be paid on or before November 8, 1966. Legislation authorizing U.S. participation in the increase and appropriation of the necessary amounts was approved on May 26, 1964 (Public Law 88-310).

By the end of November 1965, the Association had made credit commitments for high priority economic development projects totaling $1,192 million in 30 countries and territories. As of the same date, membership in the Association, which is open to all members of the International Bank, totaled 96 countries, with subscriptions aggregating $999 million of which approximately $776 million was in hard currencies.

Public Law 87-490, approved June 19, 1962, authorized an appropriation, to remain available until expended, of $2 billion for U.S. participation in a 10-nation, $6 billion arrangement providing, under specified conditions, for loans by the participants to the International Monetary Fund when needed to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary system.

Public Law 87-872 contained the necessary appropriation, and on October 24, 1962, the United States formally adhered to the arrangement, which was embodied in a decision of the Executive Directors of the International Monetary Fund of January 5, 1962. The arrangements have been drawn on by the Fund on two occasions in the total amount of $930 million. The United States did not participate in the loans made under the arrangements because the Fund's holdings of dollars have been fully adequate. The arrangements remain in effect until October 23, 1966. However, the arrangements provide that a decision on renewal must be taken prior to October 24, 1965, and the Executive Directors decided on October 15, 1965, to renew them for another period of 4 years. The United States' commitment to lend up to $2 billion to the Fund under the arrangements will continue during the renewal period.

The Bretton Woods Agreements Act of July 31, 1945, authorized the acceptance of membership in the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the subscription of $3,175 million to its capital stock. On June 17, 1959 (73 Stat. 80), the Bretton Woods Agreements Act was amended to increase the U.S. subscription to callable capital stock by $3,175 million. The Bank's total authorized capital stock is $22 billion, of which $21.6 billion has been subscribed by its 103 member countries.

The United States paid $635 million of the original subscription in cash and non-interest-bearing nonnegotiable notes. The remaining balance ($5,715 million) has been made available, but will not be called unless required to meet the Bank's obligations. Calls on unpaid subscriptions, were they ever to occur, would be a uniform percentage of the amounts subscribed by each member country.

By the end of November 1965, the Bank had made net loans totaling $9.1 billion in 77 member countries and territories.

Under proposed legislation, 1966.—A proposed 1966 supplemental appropriation of $120 million is anticipated for the U.S. contribution to the Asian Development Bank. The contribution represents $100 million in callable capital stock and $20 million for the first of five installments on paid-in capital. Subsequent appropriations of $20 million each will be sought for 1967, 1968, 1969, and 1970. One-half of the amount contributed to paid-in capital in 1966 and 1967 is payable in cash and will be expended; the remaining balances will be available, but no expenditure is anticipated.

The military assistance program strengthens the security of the free world by contributing to the development, maintenance, and training of modern military forces.

Military assistance in fiscal year 1967 does not include the requirements of combat operations in Vietnam. These requirements are included in the budgets of the military departments.

Military assistance is now greatly reduced from the programs of earlier years. Major countries in Europe no longer receive grant military assistance. In addition, other countries throughout the world are increasing expenditures on military forces as their economic capacities increase.

Some countries will receive grant aid under this program. Others will buy their military equipment on cash or credit terms. The combined military forces of these countries are numerically greater than the U.S. Armed Forces. They provide free world defensive capability, depth in reserves, and flexibility. Many of these countries have joined regional defense pacts, such as the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, or bilateral defense arrangements with the United States. Most of the U.S. contributions to regional organizations are derived from military assistance program funds.

The major portion of the military equipment and supplies which the United States provides under the military assistance program is produced in the United States and is obtained by placing orders with the U.S. military services. Military assistance funds are reserved when the orders are placed and the military services accounts are reimbursed when the items are delivered.

The kind of materiel supplied by the United States varies with our objectives and the requirements and capabilities of individual countries. The current emphasis is on the maintenance of existing forces and materiel. However, modernization is included where funds permit. Materiel already on hand but excess to the needs of U.S. forces is supplied, whenever possible, at no charge to the military assistance appropriation except for the cost of rehabilitation and transportation.

This appropriation will finance the following requirements:

Grant aid operations.—Reservations for requirements ordered from U.S. military services:

1. Aircraft.—Provision of more advanced aircraft to selected countries on a limited basis and the replacement of obsolete planes.

2. Ships.—New construction of patrol, minesweeping and other types of vessels is included in the 1967 program together with the reactivation, overhaul and modernization of some destroyer and destroyer escort type ships of the U.S. mothball fleet to meet naval requirements of our allies. The latter will require specific authority under ship loan legislation.

3. Tanks, other vehicles, and weapons.—Included is combat and support equipment ranging from artillery, tanks, trucks and bulldozers to small arms and jeeps. The 1967 program includes continuing replacement of wornout or obsolete equipment in the forces of less-developed countries.

4. Ammunition.—Most of the ammunition to be supplied will be used for training.

5. Missiles.—The 1967 program provides for the maintenance of certain guided missile systems previously furnished.

6. Electronic equipment.—The 1967 program continues the modernization of military communications systems in less-developed countries.

7. Military public works.—Materiel and equipment directly supplied by the United States for construction of facilities for foreign forces are procured through the military service supply systems and charged against the military assistance appropriation. Other U.S. costs for this construction are met directly by the military assistance program and are cited in paragraph 14 below.

8. Other.—This covers a variety of special purpose equipment and other supplies and the repair and rehabilitation of used equipment.

Obligations for requirements other than through reservations:

9. Offshore procurement.—This category includes the procurement of equipment and supplies abroad for the military assistance program.

10. Supply operations.—This includes cost of packing, handling, storing, and transporting military assistance materiel.

11. Training.—Training programs in free world countries will (a) assist foreign forces to make effective use of the new weapons and equipment supplied through the military assistance program, (b) teach basic skills, and (c) create favorable attitudes toward the United States and its policies.

12. Administration.—The administrative expenses of the program incurred by U.S. military assistance advisory groups, the unified commands overseas, and the military departments are included.

13. Contributions to international military headquarters and agencies.—Included are the assessments levied against the United States in accordance with cost-sharing agreements for the administrative support of military headquarters and agencies, including the standing groups of NATO, SEATO, and CENTO.

14. Contributions to construction of facilities in other countries.—Included is construction of military facilities under the jointly financed NATO infrastructure program.

Sales operations.—Included are funds to provide credit assistance for the purchase of military equipment and supplies in the United States by various countries. Funds are also included to guarantee exporters, financing institutions, or others doing business in the United States against risks of loss arising from sales of defense articles and services to eligible foreign countries and international organizations. The basic purpose is to promote private financing of sales of U.S. defense articles and services and thus minimize the use of military assistance funds. Loan guarantee sales reserves will be funded during 1966 and 1967 from the Foreign Military Sales Fund, Executive. There are also other sales which are financed through the military assistance trust fund.

Public enterprise funds:

FOREIGN MILITARY SALES FUND, EXECUTIVE

This revolving fund was established under the authority of section 201 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1965. It replaces reimbursements to the military assistance appropriation previously authorized under section 508 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended (22 U.S.C. 2316). The initial capital of the fund was provided by transfer of assets from the military assistance appropriation as of 1 July 1965. Assets transferred were $73,663 thousand in cash (Treasury balance) and $79,589 thousand in loans and accounts receivable. The fund will finance directly the sales of defense articles and defense services to foreign countries and international organizations on cash or credit terms, guaranty private credit for sales of defense articles and defense services, and absorb gains and losses resulting from sales of defense articles and defense services under fixed price negotiations.

The estimated loan commitments to be made will be approximately $305,500 thousand in 1966 and $180,100 thousand in 1967. The outstanding loan balances, including commitments, are estimated to be $613,200 thousand as of the end of 1966, and $530,100 thousand as of the end of 1967.

In addition to the initial capitalization of the fund, cash for operation of the fund is provided by principal repayments and interest income on credits financed by the fund and by the military assistance appropriation, proceeds from sales to lending institutions of evidences of indebtedness, conversions to U.S. dollars of foreign currencies accepted for cash or credit sales, fees and premiums earned on the guaranty of private credit, and gains on military sales under fixed price negotiations. Expenditures are for payments to suppliers under directly financed credits and losses on military sales under fixed price negotiations. Cash is set aside in the reserve fund to guaranty privately financed military credit sales. The requirement for the reserve fund is 25% of the maximum credit exposure. The difference between the total program requirement and net cash available from operation of the fund is financed by the military assistance appropriation.

1. Technical cooperation.—These grants are used in less-developed countries to (1) provide the advisers, teachers, and equipment required for the improvement of human resources, especially in educational, administrative, technical, and professional skills; (2) assist in the control and eradication of major diseases and other menaces to health; (3) establish and improve institutions which further economic and social development; (4) assist in planning and surveys of development programs and projects; (5) establish or improve basic physical facilities such as communications and transport, in those relatively few countries where the economies are unable to carry the obligations entailed by development loans; (6) pay transportation charges on shipments of supplies by approved American nonprofit voluntary agencies; and (7) finance research concerning the problems of economic development.

2. American schools and hospitals abroad.—To further the well-rounded training of qualified leadership in developing countries, the United States provides funds to American-sponsored institutions abroad. The increase in 1967 reflects program increases in assistance to educational institutions in the Near East and Latin America.

3. Surveys of investment opportunities.—This program encourages private enterprise to undertake surveys of investment opportunities in the less-developed areas of the world. Up to 50% of the total cost of such surveys is paid by AID in the event that the concern sponsoring the survey does not proceed with an investment. If such payment is necessary, the survey becomes AID property for use in attracting other investors.

4. International organizations and programs.—Voluntary contributions by the United States are provided to programs affiliated with the United Nations and its specialized agencies, and to the Indus Basin Development Fund associated with the World Bank. These programs advance U.S. objectives by promoting the economic and social development of the less-developed countries and by contributing to the maintenance of peace in threatened areas.

5. Supporting assistance.—To further U.S. national security and foreign policy objectives, support is provided countries which need help in maintaining defensive forces or in attaining economic and political stability. Grants for procurement of commodities and equipment are made and, to the extent feasible, are used for purposes which also contribute to development. In some cases country situations have stabilized sufficiently to permit reductions in supporting assistance and to increase concentration on development. An increased appropriation is required to finance economic programs to help Vietnam preserve its national independence against Communist subversion.

6. Contingency funds.—These funds are used to meet urgent requirements which cannot be foreseen at the time the budget is prepared. They are available not only to provide emergency assistance in disasters, but also to meet important international situations which create a need for immediate response in the U.S. national interest.

7. Alliance for Progress: Technical cooperation and development grants.—Grants for technical services and equipment are made to Latin American countries as part of the joint Alliance for Progress program.

8. Administrative expenses (AID).—These funds are used by the Agency for International Development in Washington and oversea missions to administer economic programs.

9. Administrative expenses (State).—Administrative expense funds are requested for the Department of State for support of personnel involved in the administration of the foreign assistance program and of the Battle Act.

Loans.—A major portion of U.S. resources provided through foreign economic programs in less-developed countries is in the form of loans. Data on loans made under the development loan activity, under the Alliance for Progress, and under the authority of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act are shown on separate schedules. A small portion of economic program funds available for grants are loaned each year rather than granted. These loans are made for economic development or essential support purposes, and may be repayable either in dollars or foreign currency. The tables below show the current status of these loans.

The following table gives summary data on loans made from current obligational authority, repayable in dollars and foreign currencies (in millions of dollars and dollar equivalents).

The Alliance for Progress was established in 1961 as a cooperative effort of the United States and Latin American countries to promote the economic and social development of Latin America. The United States is helping in these efforts by providing economic and technical aid. The Latin American countries, in addition to providing a steadily increasing share of their own resources to development, are carrying out substantial self-help and reform programs. Through 1966 the Congress has appropriated $1,851.9 million for development loans. Total Alliance for Progress appropriations of $543 million are requested for 1967. Of this amount $455.3 million is proposed for development loans, largely in support of programs for increased agricultural production and the development and encouragement of private enterprise; and $87.7 million is proposed for technical cooperation activities in such vital areas as agriculture, education and health.

The Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 authorized a 5-year, $7.2 billion program of development loans to be administered by the new Agency for International Development. A total of $618 million was appropriated for development loans in 1966 and $665 million is proposed for 1967 under new authorizing legislation.

Development loans are repayable in U.S. dollars. Under the provisions of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1964, interest charged on all loans, with the exception of those covered by special provisions relative to the use of the facilities of the International Development Association and those funds already committed to be loaned, will be at an interest rate of not less than 2½% per annum. Loan repayments must begin not later than 10 years following the date on which the funds are loaned. During the initial 10-year period the rate of interest shall not be lower than 1% per annum.

Development loans are made to promote the economic development of less-developed countries and areas, usually to assist in financing long-range development plans and programs. Before a loan is made, the Agency for International Development must take into account (1) whether financing could be obtained in whole or in part from other free world sources on reasonable terms, including private sources within the United States, (2) the economic and technical soundness of the activity to be financed, including the capacity of the recipient country to repay the loan at a reasonable rate of interest, (3) whether the activity gives reasonable promise of contributing to the development of economic resources or to the increase of productive capacities, (4) the consistency of the activity with, and its relationship to, other development activities being undertaken or planned, and its contribution to realistic long-range objectives, (5) the extent to which the recipient country is demonstrating its determination to take effective self-help measures, and (6) possible effects upon the economy of the United States. Development loans are not made unless there is a finding of a reasonable prospect of repayment. Additional loan criteria and standards are established by an interagency Development Loan Committee chaired by the Administrator of the Agency for International Development.

The Development Loan Fund was established as a corporation by the Mutual Security Act of 1958 to extend loans, credits, and guarantees to American or foreign individuals, businesses, financial institutions, or foreign governments in order to provide capital for projects and programs contributing to the economic growth of friendly less-developed countries.

Under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, the Development Loan Fund Corporation was abolished and its functions were transferred, effective November 3, 1961, to the Agency for International Development. As of that date, the Fund had approved 217 loans and allocations and 3 guarantees for development assistance in 50 countries amounting to $2,008.5 million. Of this total, 203 loans and guarantee agreements had been signed totaling $1,887.3 million of which $632.9 million was actually disbursed, leaving $1,254.8 million in undisbursed loan and guarantee agreements still outstanding. In addition, the Fund had $120.8 million unobligated funds outstanding to provide for approved but unsigned loans. Approximately 24% of all loans were repayable in dollars and 76% in foreign currencies.

A total of $2 billion was appropriated to the Fund, in addition to which receipts from operations totaling approximately $15.5 million was available including $5.8 million realized from foreign currency receipts sold to the U.S. Treasury for dollars. Subsequent to November 3, 1961, the Fund has remained open for the purpose of liquidating outstanding obligations and approved but unsigned loans. As of June 30, 1965, the undisbursed loan agreements amounted to $232.6 million. It is estimated that this balance will decrease to $101.1 million in 1966 and to $0 in 1967.

Loan repayments and interest earned totaled $134.8 million in 1965 and are scheduled to total $152.4 million in 1966 and $170.1 million in 1967.

The purpose of the guarantee programs is to encourage and facilitate those private U.S. investments abroad which further the development of the economic resources and productive capacities of such countries. Guarantees are available only for new investments, including new investments in existing enterprises. Guarantees are not available for existing investments or for investments which have been irrevocably committed before application for a guarantee has been made.

Under sections 221 through 224 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, Congress has authorized three investment guarantee programs:

1. Specific political risk guarantees against (a) inconvertibility of foreign currency, (b) loss by expropriation or confiscation, and (c) loss due to war, revolution or insurrection;

2. Extended risk guarantees which cover up to 75% of both political and business risks;

3. Extended risk guarantees covering up to 100% of losses on certain housing projects.

With the exception of the Latin America Housing Guarantees being issued under section 224 of the Foreign Assistance Act which does not require a Country Agreement, guarantees are available for investment in those countries whose governments have agreed with the Government of the United States to institute the investment guarantee program, and where there are suitable arrangements to protect the interests of the U.S. Government in connection with assets or claims acquired as a result of having provided relief under a guarantee. Continued progress has been made in reaching these agreements with countries that had previously not participated, particularly in Africa. Guarantees are available in 70 of the developing countries.

All guarantees are backed by the full faith and credit of the United States. As of June 30, 1965, total reserves available for all authorized investment guarantees was $281,121 thousand. That amount is expected to suffice to handle any claims that might reasonably be anticipated to mature before a supplemental appropriation could be obtained from the Congress to restore the liquidity of the program.

The current status in statutory authorizations for specific risk, extended risk, and Latin American housing programs are indicated below.

(a) Specific risk.—The presently authorized level of $5 billion is considered adequate to meet current demand.

(b) Extended risk.—No increase above the $300 million ceiling presently available will be requested for 1967.

(c) Extended risk.—For Latin American housing projects, a 2-year increase in authority from $250 million to $400 million was authorized in 1965. This issuing authority stems through June 30, 1967.

Operating costs and administration.—The value of guarantees issued is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Total guarantees issued.....	858,490	1,132,325	1,664,000

As of June 30, 1965, claims totaling $727 thousand have been paid out of that portion of the reserves representing accumulated fee income. Administrative expenses are paid from funds appropriated for the general administrative expenses of the Agency for International Development.

Section 608 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 created a revolving fund to provide for more effective use by the Agency for International Development of U.S. Government-owned excess property in foreign assistance programs by authorizing such property to be acquired and rehabilitated in advance of specifically known requirements for country programs. This includes many types of excess property such as tractors, construction and road-building equipment, machinery, and machine tools, the general needs for which can be anticipated with a high degree of certainty. Costs include accessorial charges only, i.e., transportation, rehabilitation, storage, and packing, crating, and handling of the property, paid initially from a revolving fund established for the purpose in 1962 and, upon shipment of the rehabilitated property, charged to the recipient program or government. Proceeds from these charges are deposited to the credit of the revolving fund. The law limits the value of domestic excess property which may be held at any one time until a funded order therefor is placed to $15 million in total original acquisition value. There is no legal limit with respect to the value of foreign excess property which may be held at any one time.

The Agency's program for inspecting and acquiring this property and supervising its transportation to marshalling sites, rehabilitation, and outshipment is carried out by three domestic regional offices (New Cumberland, Pa.; Atlanta, Ga.; and Lathrop, Calif.) and two foreign regional offices (Frankfurt, Germany and Tokyo, Japan). In the United States, major marshalling sites have been established under interagency support agreements with the U.S. Army at the three domestic regional offices. In Europe, rehabilitation services are being obtained under a U.S. Air Force interservice support agreement with the U.S. Navy in Spain and under an AID barter-type contract with a private commercial firm in Belgium. In the Far East, rehabilitation services are being obtained under interagency support agreements with the U.S. Army and the U.S. Navy in Japan, Okinawa, and Guam and under an AID barter-type contract with a private commercial firm in Korea.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 101. None of the funds herein appropriated (other than funds appropriated under the authorization for "International organizations and programs") shall be used to finance the construction of any new flood control, reclamation, or other water or related land resource project or program which has not met the standards and criteria used in determining the feasibility of flood control, reclamation and other water and related land resource programs and projects proposed for construction within the United States of America as per memorandum of the President dated May 15, 1962.

SEC. 102. Obligations made from funds herein appropriated for engineering and architectural fees and services to any individual or group of engineering and architectural firms on any one project in excess of $25,000 shall be reported to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives at least twice annually.

SEC. 103. Except for the appropriations entitled "Contingency Fund", "Alliance for Progress, development loans", and "Development loans", not more than 20 per centum of any appropriation item made available by this title shall be obligated and/or reserved during the last month of availability.

SEC. 104. None of the funds herein appropriated nor any of the counterpart funds generated as a result of assistance hereunder or any prior Act shall be used to pay pensions, annuities, retirement pay or adjusted service compensation for any persons heretofore or hereafter serving in the armed forces of any recipient country.

SEC. 105. The Congress hereby reiterates its opposition to the seating in the United Nations of the Communist China regime as the representative of China, and it is hereby declared to be the continuing sense of the Congress that the Communist regime in China has not demonstrated its willingness to fulfill the obligations contained in the Charter of the United Nations and should not be recognized to represent China in the United Nations. In the event of the seating of representatives of the Chinese Communist regime in the Security Council or General Assembly of the United Nations the President is requested to inform the Congress insofar as is compatible with the requirements of national security, of the implications of this action upon the foreign policy of the United States and our foreign relationships, including that created by membership in the United Nations, together with any recommendations which he may have with respect to the matter.

SEC. 106. It is the sense of Congress that any attempt by foreign nations to create distinctions because of their race or religion among American citizens in the granting of personal or commercial access or any other rights otherwise available to United States citizens generally is repugnant to our principles; and in all negotiations between the United States and any foreign state arising as a result of funds appropriated under this title these principles shall be applied as the President may determine.

SEC. 107. (a) No assistance shall be furnished under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, to any country which sells, furnishes, or permits any ships under its registry to carry to Cuba, so long as it is governed by the Castro regime, in addition to those items contained on the list maintained by the Administrator pursuant to title I of the Mutual Defense Assistance Control Act of 1951 as amended, any arms, ammunition, implements of war, atomic energy materials, or any other articles, materials, or supplies of primary strategic significance used in the production of arms, ammunition, and implements of war or of strategic significance to the conduct of war, including petroleum products.

(b) No economic assistance shall be furnished under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, to any country which sells, furnishes, or permits any ships under its registry to carry items of economic assistance to Cuba, so long as it is governed by the Castro regime, or to North Vietnam, unless the President determines that the withholding of such assistance would be contrary to the national interest and reports such determination to the Foreign Relations and Appropriations Committees of the Senate and the Foreign Affairs and Appropriations Committees of the House of Representatives. Reports made pursuant to this subsection shall be published in the Federal Register within seven days of submission to the committees and shall contain a statement by the President of the reasons for such determination.

SEC. 108. Any expenditure made from funds provided in this title for procurement outside the United States of any commodity in bulk and in excess of $100,000 shall be reported to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and the House of Representatives at least twice annually: Provided, That each such report shall state the reasons for which the President determined, pursuant to criteria set forth in section 604(a) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, that foreign procurement will not result in adverse effects upon the economy of the United States or the industrial mobilization base which outweigh the economic or other advantages to United States of less costly procurement outside the United States.

SEC. 109. (a) No assistance shall be furnished to any nation, whose government is based upon that theory of government known as communism under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, for any arms, ammunition, implements of war, atomic energy materials, or any articles, materials, or supplies, such as petroleum, transportation materials of strategic value, and items of primary strategic significance used in the production of arms, ammunition, and implements of war, contained on the list maintained by the Administrator pursuant to title I of the Mutual Defense Assistance Control Act of 1951, as amended.

(b) No economic assistance shall be furnished to any nation whose government is based upon that theory of government known as communism under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended (except section 214(b)), unless the President determines that the withholding of such assistance would be contrary to the national interest and reports such determination to the Foreign Affairs and Appropriations Committees of the House of Representatives and Foreign Relations and Appropriations Committees of the Senate. Reports made pursuant to this subsection shall be published in the Federal Register within seven days of submission to the committees and shall contain a statement by the President of the reasons for such determination.

SEC. 110. None of the funds appropriated or made available pursuant to this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used for making payments on any contract for procurement to which the United States is a party entered into after the date of enactment of this Act which does not contain a provision authorizing the termination of such contract for the convenience of the United States.

SEC. 111. None of the funds appropriated or made available by this or any predecessor Act for the years subsequent to fiscal year 1962 for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used on or after 60 days from the date of enactment of this Act to make payments with respect to any contract for the performance of services outside the United States by United States citizens unless the President shall have promulgated regulations that provide for the investigation of such citizens for loyalty and security to the extent necessary to protect the security and other interests of the United States: Provided, That such regulations shall require that any such United States citizen who will have access, in connection with the performance of such services, to information or material classified for security reasons shall be subject to such investigation as may otherwise be provided by law and executive order.

SEC. 112. None of the funds appropriated or made available under this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used to make payments with respect to any capital project financed by loans or grants from the United States where the United States has not directly approved the terms of the contracts and the firms to provide engineering, procurement, and construction services on such projects.

SEC. 113. Of the funds appropriated or made available pursuant to this Act not more than $12,000,000 may be used during the fiscal year ending June 30, [1966] 1967, in carrying out section 241 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended.

SEC. 114. None of the funds appropriated or made available pursuant to this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used to pay in whole or in part any assessments, arrearages or dues of any member of the United Nations.

SEC. 115. None of the funds made available by this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be obligated on or after April 30, 1964, for financing, in whole or in part, the direct costs of any contract for the construction of facilities and installations in any underdeveloped country, unless the President shall, on or before such date, have promulgated regulations designed to assure, to the maximum extent consistent with the national interest and the avoidance of excessive costs to the United States, that none of the funds made available by this Act and thereafter obligated shall be used to finance the direct costs under such contracts for construction work performed by persons other than qualified nationals of the recipient country or qualified citizens of the United States: Provided, however, That the President may waive the application of this amendment if it is important to the national interest.

SEC. 116. No assistance shall be furnished under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, to any country that sells, furnishes or permits any ships under its registry to carry to North Vietnam any of the items mentioned in subsection 107(a) of this Act unless the President determines that the withholding of such assistance would be contrary to the national interest of the United States and reports such determination to the Congress.

The Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 inaugurated a determined effort to eliminate poverty in America. Ten new programs were authorized by the act. These new programs, together with existing Federal programs for aiding the poor, offer the opportunity for a coordinated comprehensive program designed to extend the opportunities for education and training, a decent job, and a life of self-respect and dignity to every American citizen.

1. Youth programs—(a) Job Corps.—The Job Corps provides work and training in residential centers away from their home environment for young people aged 16 through 21 who are out of school and out of work.

Rural conservation centers range in size from 90- to 224-enrollee capacity and are managed by the Interior and Agriculture Departments and through contracts with various State governments. They aim at raising the level of basic education, work attitudes and habits, and pre-vocational and basic work skills.

Urban centers range from 250 to 3,300 enrollees and are operated under contract by industrial organizations, universities, and nonprofit entities. Young men and women in these centers receive more highly specialized vocational training as well as general education, counseling, and improvement in work attitudes and habits.

Job Corps program levels are estimated at:

(b) Neighborhood Youth Corps.—Youths aged 16 through 21 are supported in productive full-time or part-time work in State and local public agencies and nonprofit organizations. The program is designed for youths who are in danger of having to leave school for financial reasons or who have dropped out of school and cannot find a job. Youths also receive counseling and related services designed to increase their employability. The funds, which are matched by 10% local participation, will finance the following numbers of training spaces:

In-school program.....	102,000	100,000	125,000
Out-of-school program.....	62,000	60,000	64,000
Summer program.....	144,000	165,000	165,000

2. Community action program.—This program (CAP) provides financial support, assistance, and guidance to communities across the Nation in developing and carrying out comprehensive local antipoverty programs. Grants finance 90% of the costs of additional services needed in each community to complement its existing array of public and private programs for the poor.

Program development grants are frequently the first step in the development of a community program and usually lead to a later grant for the conduct of a full-scale community action program. Planning grants vary considerably in size depending upon how communities choose to carry out the developmental work and on the relative scope and complexity of their poverty problems. Through 1965 and 1966, these grants have ranged from $8 thousand to more than $100 thousand, with an average of $36 thousand. In 1965, 315 program development grants were made. In 1966, 300 communities will receive grants; an additional 300 grants will be made in 1967.

Action grants enable communities to carry out a variety of planned activities aimed at eliminating poverty. The development of a network of programs and a coordinated attack on poverty in a given community is encouraged. Components of education, training, health care, and sub-professional jobs can be included. The program of action grants is as follows:

Communities with action grants.....	220	700	900
Average number of components.....	2.5	5.5	6.5

Action grants are also used to support the "Head Start" program under which local communities help poor children prepare for formal schooling. Virtually all community action agencies will receive Head Start funds and additional grants will be made in areas that have no community action agencies.

Children participating—summer.....	560,000	500,000	500,000
Children participating—academic year.....	20,000	100,000	210,000

In addition to the planning and action grants, funds are included to support research, training, and demonstration programs. The appropriation finances research into the causes of poverty and the regional and local variations in the patterns of poverty. Training programs involve internships with local, State, and Federal agencies, skill and leadership training for poor persons working with local agencies, and professional training for personnel at local, State, and Federal levels.

Technical assistance is provided to local communities by State agencies, universities, and other organizations and experts. Such assistance is particularly helpful in rural communities and smaller cities which may not have resources to develop their own proposals.

3. Migrant agricultural workers program.—This activity provides a special program to meet the housing, sanitation, education, and day care needs of migratory agricultural workers and their families. Grants or contracts will be made to expedite the activities of public and nonprofit agencies now conducting programs of assistance to improve health and living conditions of migratory workers in the three major national streams of domestic migrants: (1) Texas, Arizona, and the west coast, (2) Gulf of Mexico to the Northern Plain States, and (3) Florida northward along the east coast.

4. Rural areas program.—This activity finances the administrative expenses incurred by the Farmers' Home Administration of the Department of Agriculture in operating the rural loan program. Program expenses are included in the schedules for the Economic opportunity loan fund.

5. Small business development centers.—The Small Business Administration conducts a small business loan program for the disadvantaged. It is anticipated that $50 million from SBA's revolving fund will be used for this purpose in 1967. In 1966 the Office of Economic Opportunity and the Economic Development Administration have provided funds to establish small business development centers in 50 communities. These centers screen potential borrowers and provide managerial assistance. In 1967 funds will be allocated exclusively from this appropriation to finance a total of 70 SBDC's.

6. Work experience program.—This activity provides demonstration work and training programs for unemployed parents of dependent children and for other needy persons in order to prepare them for regular employment and hence to enable them to become self-supporting. One of the important criteria to be used in approving these grants is the potential for incorporating projects into ongoing State and local welfare programs at the end of the experimental period. Funds for 1965 provided assistance for 88,700 persons; it is estimated that 109,000 persons will be assisted with the 1966 funds, and 105,000 will be enrolled on projects funded in 1967.

7. Adult basic education program.—This activity provides programs of instruction for adults whose inability to read and write the English language constitutes a substantial impairment of their ability to secure gainful employment.

Matching grants are made to assist in: (1) meeting the cost of local educational agency programs of instruction; (2) financing pilot projects to improve materials or methods; and (3) improving services provided by State educational agencies. The Office of Education in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare administers the program.

Funds are allocated among the States by a formula established in the law. 14 States participated in 1965; all are expected to take part in 1966. In 1965, some 38,000 persons received instruction—75,000 will participate in 1966, and 75,000 in 1967.

8. Volunteers in Service to America.—VISTA offers an opportunity on the domestic scene for volunteers with a spirit of service to work directly on the problems of poverty. Volunteers are participating in programs administered and supported by the Economic Opportunity Act, in other Federal programs related to poverty problems, and in related State and local activities. The normal period of service will be 1 year, including about 6 weeks of preassignment training. As of June 30, 1965, 1,100 volunteers were in training or on field assignments. During 1966, it is planned to recruit, train, and support approximately 3,500 volunteers; 4,500 volunteers will be in service at the end of 1967.

9. General direction and administration.—The Office of Economic Opportunity directly administers the Community Action, Migrants, and Volunteers in Service to America programs, and exercises primary responsibility for the Job Corps program, which is operated under contract by other public and private agencies. The Office also coordinates and reviews all programs delegated to other agencies and assists in coordinating the programs of all Federal agencies in an integrated attack on poverty.

10. Draft rejectee program.—Funds are provided in this appropriation for the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare to enable the Public Health Service and the Vocational Rehabilitation Administration to make grants to States so that State and local health agencies may counsel and refer for care those young men rejected from military service for medical reasons.

Rural areas program.—Loans are made by the Farmers Home Administration of the Department of Agriculture (through their regular county office organizational structure) to low-income farm families for the purposes of acquiring or improving real estate or reducing encumbrances thereon; purchasing operating supplies and equipment; and participating in cooperative associations. Loans also are made to low-income farm and rural families to finance small nonagricultural enterprises to supplement their income. The maximum loan is $2,500. Approximately 11,000 loans were made in 1965 and about 15,500 rural families will be assisted in 1966. The balance of funds carried forward from 1966, together with the new obligational authority requested for 1967, will provide for approximately the same number of loans in 1967.

Loans also are made to help establish new cooperatives and finance existing cooperatives furnishing essential processing, purchasing or marketing services, supplies or facilities predominantly to low-income rural families. In 1965, 82 such loans were made. In 1966, approximately 350 loans will be made to cooperatives that will assist 8,400 low-income rural families, and about 400 loans will be made in 1967 to assist approximately 10,000 such families.

The purposes of the Peace Corps are to provide trained Americans to countries in need of middle-level manpower and to promote understanding between the people of the United States and the peoples served.

Volunteers engage in a variety of activities at the request of host countries. Approximately half of the volunteers are teaching in classrooms at all levels and another large group is working in urban and rural community development programs.

Prior to overseas assignment, each volunteer is given intensive training designed to develop required skills, to provide background knowledge of the country to which he will be sent, to develop language abilities and to assure physical fitness for service overseas. During training all prospective volunteers are carefully evaluated through continuous observation.

Planning and budgeting are based on a program year which runs from the beginning of September through the end of August.

1. Volunteer and project costs.—This activity includes all costs directly associated with volunteers. The 1967 budget permits volunteers in training and overseas to increase from 14,500 to 16,000. The planned assignment of the volunteers is as follows:

	Aug. 31, 1965 (actual)	Aug. 31, 1966 (planned)	Aug. 31, 1967 (planned)
Africa.....	3,838	4,490	5,130
Far East.....	1,836	1,960	2,100
Latin America.....	4,621	5,080	5,500
North Africa, Near East, and south Asia.....	2,597	2,970	3,270
Total.....	12,892	14,500	16,000

Requests from countries for Peace Corps volunteers continue to exceed the supply. The proposed 1967 increase of 1,500 in volunteer and trainee strength to a total of 16,000 will improve U.S. response to this demand. Programming criteria limit projects to those which are consistent with the purposes of the Peace Corps Act, and which can be manned by anticipated available volunteers of the highest caliber.

Volunteers for African countries will increase by 640 during 1967. The majority of programs will continue to be in the fields of primary and secondary education, but community development and agriculture programs will also receive emphasis.

Most of the volunteers in the Far East will be engaged in teacher training and classroom teaching, but it is also planned to expand community development programs in this region.

In Latin America community development has long been the largest Peace Corps activity, and most of the 420 additional volunteers for the region will work in this type of program.

The north Africa, Near East, and south Asia region has a wide variety of programs. Volunteers are engaged in English teaching and in community development, agriculture, and health work. The total number of volunteers for this region will increase by 300.

2. Administrative expenses (limitation).—This includes all expenses related to programing, recruitment, selection, direction of training, and the management of the Peace Corps, both in Washington and overseas.

Under an amendment (Public Law 88-94) to the Philippine war damage legislation of 1963, a special fund for education has been established to be used as jointly determined by the two Presidents for the purpose of furthering educational programs to the mutual advantage of both countries. Negotiation of the program will be carried out by the Department of State. Though funds are now available, no activities are shown since the program plan is subject to future negotiations between the two countries.

These funds enabled the President to relieve unemployment and spur economic expansion in eligible areas of high unemployment or low income. This was accomplished by accelerating both Federal assistance to local public works and Federal public works projects. The program was carried out by the Federal agencies responsible for the several portions of the program and was coordinated by the Secretary of Commerce with the assistance of the Area Redevelopment Administration.

1. State and local projects.—Grants were made to eligible State and local governments for public works, primarily water and sewage systems, waste treatment works, hospital additions, and related health facilities. Grants were made for 50% of the project costs, although areas of most severe unemployment were eligible for grants up to 75%. The local recipients were required to increase local expenditures for public works by at least the amount of the local contribution.

2. Direct Federal projects.—Public works projects which were the direct responsibility of Federal agencies were accelerated in eligible areas. Such projects covered a wide variety of activity including improvement of facilities, small flood control and erosion projects, forest and other conservation work, and recreation facilities, etc.

3. Administration.—Funds were provided for those administrative expenses which could not be absorbed by the agencies responsible for the larger programs and by the coordinating agency.

Under authorization of the Southeast Hurricane Disaster Relief Act of 1965 $35 million has been appropriated to provide assistance in the reconstruction of property and restoration of crops that were damaged by Hurricane Betsy and for which compensation by insurance or other sources was not available. The $35 million will be allocated to the Small Business Administration and the Farmers Home Administration to reimburse the two agencies for partial cancellations they make of such disaster loans. The Small Business Administration estimates that cancellations averaging $1,250 per loan will be made on about 20,000 home and business disaster loans. The Farmers Home Administration estimates that it will make 6,000 emergency loans with cancellations averaging $1,625 apiece.

The service conducts basic and applied research relating to the production, utilization, and marketing of agricultural products, research on nutrition and consumer use, and carries out those control and regulatory programs of the Department which involve enforcement of plant and animal quarantines, the control of diseases and pests of animals and plants, and related work.

1. Research.—(a) Farm research.—Improved breeding, feeding, and management practices are developed for farm livestock, poultry, and domestic fur animals. Practical methods are sought for control of diseases and parasites affecting them.

Investigations are conducted to improve varieties of food, feed, fiber and other plants and to develop new crops; to improve crop-production practices, including methods to control plant diseases and nematodes; and to develop safe chemical, biological, and other methods for control of harmful pests affecting farm production.

Research is conducted to improve fertilizers, soil management, irrigation, and conservation practices; to study hydrologic problems of agricultural watersheds; to determine the relation of soils to plants, animals, and human nutrition; and to apply engineering principles to improve efficiency and reduce costs of agricultural production.

Continuous review is maintained to emphasize work which will meet the problems of agricultural surpluses. The research is aimed at the profitable production of an adequate supply of food, feed, fiber, and other agricultural products of desired quality at minimum costs. Increased attention has been given to the production of agricultural products having industrial uses. The proportion of farm research funds going into basic research has steadily increased, and is currently estimated at 43 percent of the total funds for research. This basic research undergirds the other research efforts.

The 1967 estimates include increases for staffing new and expanded laboratories and watershed research centers and decreases due to elimination or reduction of research at a number of field locations.

(b) Utilization research and development.—Chemical, physical, and biological research is conducted to develop increased industrial uses of farm products, and new and improved foods, feeds, and fabrics; and to develop improved methods for processing agricultural commodities.

The 1967 estimates include amounts for staffing and organizing new laboratories authorized in fiscal year 1964, which will be completed in fiscal year 1967 or by mid-1968. The increase will provide for major expansion in this field of research, and is offset by a minor decrease.

(c) Nutrition and consumer use research.—Studies are made of nutrition, consumer use and food economics, and clothing. The 1967 reduction is for a nonrecurring cost under the food consumption survey.

(d) Marketing research.—Practical answers to problems encountered in moving products from farm to consumer are sought through research. For farm products as they pass through marketing channels, efforts are made to develop safe methods to protect against insect attack, find objective methods to determine quality, reduce losses from waste and spoilage, and improve efficiency in physical handling. The 1967 estimates eliminate funds for research on wholesaling and retailing and other minor research.

(e) Coordination of departmental and interdepartmental activities related to pests and their control.—The 1965 appropriation provided $250,000 for use of the Secretary of Agriculture in collaborating with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Department of the Interior, and other agencies of the Federal Government on problems related to use of pesticides. The project provides for coordination in development of measures to protect the public health, producers, and resources.

(f) Construction of facilities.—The 1967 estimates provide $1,637 thousand for construction of a portion of new facilities for meat animal research at Clay Center, Nebr., and for construction of facilities for the U.S. Livestock Range Experiment Station, Miles City, Mont. The increase is offset by nonrecurring amounts of $11,418 thousand for construction and planning funds provided in 1966.

(g) Contingencies.—Beginning in 1962, $1 million is available to meet urgent research needs that develop unexpectedly during the year, when such needs cannot be met by redirection of resources from other projects.

2. Plant and animal disease and pest control.—(a) Plant disease and pest control.—Provision is made (1) through port-of-entry inspection to exclude from this country destructive insects, plant diseases, nematodes, and other pests that cause great damage to agricultural crops in other parts of the world; (2) to cooperate with States in eradicating or preventing spread of crop pests that become established in this country; and (3) to assist States in suppressing incipient and emergency outbreaks of crop pests when and where they occur. The 1967 estimates propose increases for burrowing nematode and plant quarantine protection at ports-of-entry because of increased travel and shipping, offset by decreases for imported fire ant, soybean cyst nematode, phony peach and peach mosaic, sweetpotato weevil, golden nematode, barberry, gypsy moth, and witchweed.

The volume of workload is indicated in the following table (in thousands):

Interceptions of unauthorized plant material.....	395	401	446

(b) Animal disease and pest control.—Programs are conducted to exclude communicable diseases of foreign origin from this country; to prevent the spread of diseases through interstate shipments of livestock or distribution of impure or impotent veterinary biologics; to control and eradicate livestock diseases; and to maintain, through a marketing agreement with manufacturers and handlers, adequate supplies of hog cholera virus and serum for protection of swine. The estimates for 1967 propose increases for equine piroplasmiasis and salmonella; and more adequate animal inspection and quarantine at ports to reduce hazard of introduction of foreign diseases, offset by decreases for brucellosis and sheep scabies eradication, and nonrecurring costs of screwworm survey in the Republic of Mexico.

The volume of protective activities is indicated by selected examples in the following table (in thousands):

(c) Pesticides regulation.—This activity is concerned with administration of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act, as amended, and related provisions of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act. The 1967 estimates propose an increase for strengthening registration and enforcement activities under the Act.

(d) Construction of facilities.—Public Law 88-592, 88th Congress, approved September 12, 1964, authorizes the sale of the U.S. Animal Quarantine Station at Clifton, N.J., to the city of Clifton for public purposes and for the establishment of a new quarantine station in the New York-New Jersey port and airport area. The 1967 estimates propose an increase for preparation of plans for relocation of the present animal quarantine station.

Under existing legislation, 1966.—A supplemental appropriation is anticipated for wage board increases.

Under proposed legislation, 1967.—A reduction of $1,478 thousand is anticipated for 1967 under legislation being proposed to place certain plant and animal disease and pest control activities on a self-supporting basis. The proposed legislation would provide proper credit to the appropriation for the services rendered in pesticides registration activities; inspection of certain products imported under restrictions for processing at designated establishments; and the identification and certification of pure-bred animals.

[SALARIES AND EXPENSES (SPECIAL FOREIGN CURRENCY PROGRAM)]

For payments, in foreign currencies owed to or owned by the United States for market development research authorized by section 104(a) and for agricultural and forestry research and other functions related thereto authorized by section 104(k) of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1704(a)(k)), to remain available until expended, $3,000,000: Provided, That this appropriation shall be available in addition to other appropriations for these purposes, for payments in the foregoing currencies: Provided further, That funds appropriated herein shall be used for payments in such foreign currencies as the Department determines are needed and can be used most effectively to carry out the purposes of this paragraph: Provided further, That not to exceed $25,000 of this appropriation shall be available for payments in foreign currencies for expenses of employment pursuant to the second sentence of section 706(a) of the Organic Act of 1944 (5 U.S.C. 574), as amended by section 15 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U.S.C. 55a).] (Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1966.)

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1964, $16,641 thousand; 1965, $18,583 thousand; 1966, $21,159 thousand; 1967, $12,959 thousand.

Foreign currencies, generated by the sale of surplus agricultural commodities under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, are used by the Department for market development research under section 104(a) and for agricultural and forestry research under section 104(k) of the act. Work is carried on through agreements, in both basic and applied fields, by research institutions and organizations in foreign countries. This research serves to develop new foreign markets and to expand existing markets for agricultural commodities, including cotton, dairy products, fats and oils, grain, feed, livestock and meat, poultry, and fruits and vegetables. It also provides for supplementary research on farm, forest, marketing, utilization, agricultural economics, and human nutrition problems, and for translations of foreign language scientific publications. No appropriation is proposed for 1967. However, there would be sufficient carryover of 1966 funds to continue certain costs of supervision of research under agreements through foreign offices in Rome and New Delhi. Total estimated cost in U.S. dollars (charged to regular appropriations) for this supervision in 1967 is $370 thousand, which would also cover activities under the proposed Foreign currency authorization program.

In previous years, $16.5 million had been provided for establishment of animal disease research and control laboratory facilities. Construction of the facilities at Ames, Iowa, was started in August 1958. The principal laboratory buildings were completed in fiscal year 1961. Obligations for minor construction in fiscal year 1965 completed the installation under this appropriation.

FOREIGN CURRENCY AUTHORIZATION PROGRAM

For expenses of carrying out programs of the Agricultural Research Service, as authorized by law, foreign currencies owned by the United States are authorized to be used, pursuant to section 1415 of the Act of July 15, 1952 (31 U.S.C. 724), without fiscal year limitation, in the following amounts: 49,800,000 Guinean francs; 38,970,120 Indian rupees; 17,775,000 Israeli pounds; 7,218,000 Pakistan rupees; 97,824,000 Polish zlotys; 86,600 Egyptian pounds; 104,200 Tunisian dinars; and 4,375,000,000 Yugoslav dinars: Provided, That such currencies shall be in addition to funds otherwise available for such programs: Provided further, That any of the above amounts may be increased by not more than 15 percent by transfer of the equivalent value from the amounts specified for any other currency or currencies, but the amount for any currency may not be decreased by more than 15 percent: Provided further, That such currencies may be used for contracts and grants for laboratories and facilities for conducting research relating to agriculture and forestry under such terms and conditions as the Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe, for transfer to the Department of State for use pursuant to 7 U.S.C. 1704(1), and for expenses of employment pursuant to the second sentence of section 706(a) of the Organic Act of 1944 (5 U.S.C. 574), as amended by section 15 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U.S.C. 55a).

The 1967 estimates propose the establishment of a separate foreign currency authorization program for the Agricultural Research Service to replace the appropriation item in the 1966 Agricultural Appropriation Act (Public Law 89-316) under "Agricultural Research Service, Salaries and expenses (special foreign currency program)."

Foreign currencies, generated by the sale of surplus agricultural commodities under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, are used by the Department for market development research under section 104(a) and for agricultural and forestry research under section 104(k) of the act. Work is carried on through agreements, in both basic and applied fields, by research institutions and organizations in foreign countries. This research serves to develop new foreign markets and to expand existing markets for agricultural commodities, including cotton, dairy products, fats and oils, grain, feed, livestock and meat, poultry, and fruits and vegetables. It also provides for supplementary research on farm, forest, marketing, utilization, agricultural economics, and human nutrition problems, and for translations and dissemination of foreign language scientific publications. The 1967 estimates propose the undertaking of special projects, involving the acquiring of research facilities, to make maximum use of excess foreign currencies and to increase the effectiveness of the foreign agricultural research program. Total estimated cost in U.S. dollars (charged to regular appropriations) for the initiation and supervision of projects in 1967 is $370,000, which would also cover activities carried over under the appropriation "Salaries and expenses (special foreign currency program)."

Activities to be carried on will be distributed by country as follows (in thousands of local currency units):

This fund finances, on a reimbursable basis, central facilities and services furnished to agencies at the Agricultural Research Center (64 Stat. 658). The capital consists of $300 thousand appropriated in 1951 and donated assets of $302 thousand as of June 30, 1965. Earnings are retained to furnish adequate working capital.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders 1964, $19 thousand (1965 adjustments, $1,242 thousand); 1965, $1,077 thousand; 1966, $1,077 thousand; 1967, $1,077 thousand.

The Service administers funds for payments and grants to State agricultural experiment stations and other eligible institutions for the support of research in agriculture, the rural home, rural life, and forestry. This administration involves supervision of the funds, close advisory relations with the State agricultural experiment stations, and participation in the planning and coordination of research programs between the States and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

1. Payments to agricultural experiment stations under the Hatch Act.—Grants under the Hatch Act are allocated to agricultural experiment stations of the land-grant colleges in the 50 States and Puerto Rico for agricultural research, including investigations and experiments to promote a permanent and efficient agricultural industry and improvements in the rural home and rural life. A program of $39,613 thousand, which represents a decrease of $8,500 thousand, from 1966, is proposed for 1967.

2. Grants for cooperative forestry research.—These forestry grants are allocated to land-grant colleges or agricultural experiment stations in the 50 States and Puerto Rico and other State-supported colleges and universities offering graduate training in the sciences basic to forestry and having a forestry school. The act requires that the Federal funds paid to each institution be matched by funds from non-Federal sources for forestry research. No increase is proposed for 1967.

3. Contracts and grants for scientific research.—An increase of $2,910 thousand is proposed for the program of contracts and grants for support of scientific research to nonprofit institutions of higher education, or nonprofit organizations whose primary purpose is the conduct of such research.

4. Grants for facilities.—These grants to provide additional facilities for research are allocated to State agricultural experiment stations in the 50 States and Puerto Rico. Assistance is available to the States for construction, acquisition, and remodeling of buildings, laboratories, and other capital facilities which are necessary to more effectively conduct research in agriculture and sciences related thereto. The Federal funds are provided on a matching basis. A decrease of $2 million is proposed for 1967.

5. Penalty mail.—Funds to cover the cost of penalty mailings for State agricultural experiment station directors are provided under this appropriation.

6. Federal administration.—A coordinating and review staff is maintained to examine research projects and assist State institutions and Federal agencies. An increase of $90 thousand is proposed to partially defray the additional personnel costs in administering the program of contracts and grants for scientific research.

The planned distribution in 1967 of these payments and grants to the State agricultural experiment stations and other eligible institutions under the above-mentioned programs is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

The primary function of the nationwide system of cooperative extension work is out-of-school applied education in agriculture, home economics, and related subjects. This educational work takes research results, technological advancements, and situation and program facts of the Department of Agriculture, the State agricultural colleges and experiment stations, and incorporates them into a national educational program for action. Its objective is to provide farm people and others with information and assistance upon which they may make social and economic adjustments necessary for an efficient agricultural industry and improved rural homes and rural life.

1. Payments to States and Puerto Rico.—Funds appropriated under the Smith-Lever Act for payments to States and Puerto Rico are distributed primarily on the basis of farm and rural population and to a limited degree on the basis of special problems and needs. Funds appropriated under the Agricultural Marketing Act for educational work in marketing are distributed to the States and Puerto Rico on a matching basis under approved projects and on the basis of contracts. Funds are used primarily for the employment of State and county extension workers who work with rural families, marketing concerns, and others by providing advice and assistance in the application of improved methods involved in production, marketing, and family living. They assist local leadership to determine extension programs of work. Work with youth is accomplished largely through 4-H clubs. Funds also provide for Federal program support. Extension agents are paid from Federal, State, and county sources. The increase of $317,500 in this item is composed of (1) an increase of $717,500 to permit the continuation of the work in the Appalachian region offset by (2) shifting $400 thousand from the 3(c)1 provisions of the Smith-Lever Act to the 3(d) provisions to be reflected under the subappropriation item "Federal Extension Service." Included also in this item is a proposed transfer of $10 million from the 3(c) (formula) provisions of the act to the 3(d) (non-formula) provisions for the purpose of allocating to programs of rural resource development and for expansion of work with low-income families.

2. Retirement and employees' compensation costs for extension agents.—The increase proposed is required to meet these costs for cooperative extension agents. The mandatory retirement contribution is authorized under Public Law 854, approved July 31, 1956. The employer's contribution to the Federal retirement fund, to match contribution of these agents, is provided by this Federal appropriation. There are an estimated 13,500 non-Federal employees who will participate in the retirement system in 1967. An increase of $2,284 added to the present amount of $51,574 provides an amount equal to the benefits received by the cooperative agents to be paid to the employees' compensation fund, as required by Public Law 86-767. An increase of $280,216 is required to meet the mandatory retirement contribution authorized by Public Law 854.

3. Penalty mail.—Funds to cover the cost of penalty mailings for State extension directors and cooperative extension agents in the States are provided under this appropriation.

4. Federal Extension Service.—The Federal Extension Service provides leadership, counsel, and assistance to the States and Puerto Rico in developing extension programs, improved teaching methods, efficient use of available resources, evaluation of programs, inservice training for extension personnel, and administrative services. The Federal Extension Service also coordinates the educational activities of other U.S. Department of Agriculture agencies. The transfer of $400 thousand from section 3(c)1 provisions to section 3(d) provisions of the Smith-Lever Act does not result in an increase in funds for administrative and technical support.

The Farmer Cooperative Service provides research, advisory, and educational assistance to farmers' marketing, purchasing, and service cooperatives. Attention is directed to problems of organization, membership, financing, efficiency, processing, distribution, pricing, selling, and transportation of farm products by farmer cooperatives. Much of this work is carried on in cooperation with land-grant colleges, the Extension Service, and other Federal and State agencies.

SOIL CONSERVATION SERVICE

The Soil Conservation Service is responsible for various soil and water conservation activities of the Department of Agriculture, including six action programs for which separate appropriations are made, reimbursements from other agencies for technical services performed, trust funds, and miscellaneous accounts involving cooperative agreements with local organizations. The primary purpose of these program operations is to help farmers, ranchers, and other landowners in making needed land use adjustments; to conserve soil, water, and plant resources; to reduce the hazards of floods, sedimentation and related damages; and to assist in establishing a permanent and economically sound agriculture. These activities are conducted in cooperation with Federal and State agencies, locally managed conservation districts, and other sponsoring organizations.

The Service provides professional leadership in soil, water, and plant conservation and works directly with locally managed conservation districts and sponsors of watershed projects on local programs and cooperative work plans which are of benefit to rural and urban people in their areas.

The Service also furnishes technical services for the Agricultural Conservation program; the soil and water conservation loans made by the Farmers Home Administration; the State and county rural areas development committees; and other agencies or local groups having soil and water conservation problems. These interrelated program activities are primarily for the conservation, protection, and improvement of land and water resources for the beneficial uses of all the people.

(d) technical assistance with community-type water facilities and control problems that can best be solved through coordinated local action; (e) the granting of special equipment to soil conservation districts for use in applying planned conservation practices; (f) water supply forecasts developed from snow surveys in Western States which are useful in making efficient seasonal use of water; (g) the selection and testing of plant materials to determine their suitability for erosion control and conservation purposes; (h) technical assistance to participants in the Agricultural Conservation program in establishing specified practices; (i) technical services to participants in other programs involving land use adjustments along with resource improvements; (j) technical assistance in planning and applying the soil and water conservation practices for which loans are made by the Farmers Home Administration; (k) consultation and assistance to local rural areas development committees; and (l) program planning with consultation services in rural areas.

Combinations of needed soil and water conservation practices are planned together and in relation to each other so as to have a well balanced conservation program in each district and for each farm or ranch. Both vegetative and structural measures are used in accordance with the needs of the land for conservation treatment and improvement. Each plan reflects the decisions of the cooperating farmer or rancher as to how he will use and treat his land.

Technicians of the Soil Conservation Service explain the various soil conditions, develop alternative uses and treatments with each cooperator, help to evaluate the costs and returns of conservation farming, and furnish assistance in applying the needed treatments. Cooperating landowners and operators are providing more than half the cost of practices and measures installed in district programs. Local agencies and private individuals also furnish about one-third of the total installation services used to apply soil and water conservation practices in districts throughout the country.

The Department cooperates with the States and other agencies in installing works of improvement in small watersheds to reduce damage from floodwater, sediment, and erosion and for the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water. It provides loans to local organizations to help them finance their share of the costs of certain works of improvement. The Department also cooperates with other agencies in making surveys and investigations of watersheds of rivers and other waterways as the basis for the development of coordinated programs.

1. Watershed works of improvement.—The Department provides technical and financial assistance to local organizations to install the watershed works of improvement for watershed protection, flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife development features specified in the work plans.

(a) Pilot demonstration watersheds.—Sixty-two pilot watersheds were started in 1954 in cooperation with local sponsors under authority of the act of April 27, 1935 (16 U.S.C. 590 a-f) to demonstrate and evaluate the effectiveness of works of improvement installed in small watersheds for watershed protection and flood prevention. As of June 30, 1965, work had been discontinued in 8 projects and completed as planned in 49 except for project evaluation studies which will be underway until 1970 in some of these. The following table shows the current status of the pilot watershed projects. Obligations for project evaluation studies are not reflected in the table subsequent to 1959 as these costs were determined not properly chargeable to projects. Obligations for such studies amounted to $103 thousand in 1965 and are estimated at $102 thousand each year in 1966 and 1967.

(b) Public Law 566 watersheds.—After local sponsoring organizations have developed watershed work plans with the Department's assistance, or with State or local resources, and the projects have been approved as suitable for Federal participation (projects involving an estimated Federal contribution in excess of $250 thousand for construction or any single structure having a capacity in excess of 2,500 acre-feet require congressional approval), technical services and financial assistance are provided for specified works of improvement. On non-Federal lands local sponsoring organizations must contract for construction work, operate and maintain the projects, and in the case of multiple-purpose structures, bear a share of construction costs. In addition, local organizations must acquire water rights and furnish land, easements, and rights-of-way for all structural measures except that the Federal Government may pay up to one-half the cost of land, easements, and rights-of-way allocated to public fish and wildlife and recreational developments. Federal agencies do this work on Federal lands which they administer with appropriate contributions being made by the local people who receive benefits.

Preconstruction land treatment and engineering services are furnished to all approved projects before they are advanced to the construction stage. During the preconstruction stage, surveys and investigations are made and detailed designs, specifications, and engineering cost estimates are prepared for construction of structural works; areas are delineated where easements are required, and technical services are furnished for accelerating planning and application of land treatment measures if provided for in the watershed work plan.

The project construction stage begins with the execution of the first project agreement for construction of works of improvement. Under a project agreement the local sponsoring organization agrees to construct a segment of the project which may consist of an individual or an inter-related group of structures. The agreement obligates the Department to furnish its share of the construction cost. Payments are made to the local contracting organization in accordance with the project agreement as the work progresses. Engineering and other services are provided for the preparation of contracts and inspection of construction. Technical assistance in planning and installing land treatment measures is continued as called for in the watershed work plan.

The following tabulation shows the status of Public Law 566 projects and amounts obligated or estimated to be obligated. The table does not reflect minor obligations for project evaluation studies ($147 thousand cumulatively as of June 30, 1965), or for balances remaining in the undistributed equipment account ($413 thousand cumulatively as of June 30, 1965).

The 1966 program contemplates initiation of construction in 80 watershed projects, involving 1966 estimated obligations of $18.6 million and total Federal cost of $74.3 million. The 1967 estimate provides for starting about 35 projects with 1967 obligations of $8.1 million and total Federal cost of $35 million.

2. Loans and related expense.—Loans are made to local organizations to finance the local share of the cost of installing planned works of improvement in approved watershed projects. Repayment with interest is required within 50 years after the principal benefits of improvements first become available. Of the 1967 estimate for watershed protection not to exceed $5 million is to be available for such purpose together with the unobligated balance of loan funds carried over from prior years, if any. The estimate does not forecast any unobligated balance in loan funds at the end of the fiscal year 1966 or 1967.

The following tabulation shows the status of the watershed protection loan program and amounts obligated or estimated to be obligated for loans to local sponsoring organizations of watershed projects.

3. River basin program development and coordination.—Section 6 of Public Law 566, 83d Congress, as amended, authorizes the Department to cooperate with other Federal, State, and local agencies in making surveys and investigations of the watersheds of rivers and other waterways as a basis for the development of coordinated water and related land resource programs. The Department currently is participating in cooperative surveys and investigations in river basins with the Corps of Engineers and other interested Federal and State agencies. The Department is represented on the Interagency Committee on Water Resources which was established to coordinate water and related land resource activities of Federal departments and agencies. The Department also maintains representation on various river basin interagency committees. These serve as points of contact and coordination between representatives of this Department and of other Federal departments and agencies and the States in these basin areas. They keep all concerned mutually informed of the activities of the member agencies and facilitate matters of interagency coordination. During fiscal year 1966 the Department maintained such representation on committees in the Arkansas-White-Red, Columbia, Missouri, Northeast, Pacific Southwest, and Southeast areas.

The Department also is represented on the Water Resources Council which recently was formed in accordance with section 101, Public Law 89-80, the Water Resources Planning Act. It is represented on the Inter-Departmental Staff Committee which provides staff services to the Water Resources Council on an interim basis.

This Department and the Departments of the Army, the Interior, and Health, Education, and Welfare have jointly considered river basin surveys and investigations currently needed to attain the goal for surveying the river basins of the Nation which was proposed by the Senate Select Committee on National Resources and recommended by the President. Based on this joint consideration, this estimate includes $4,097 thousand to continue these interagency comprehensive surveys during fiscal year 1967 and to start three new ones; $2,791 thousand to continue other cooperative river basin surveys begun in prior years and to start additional surveys in cooperation with States; and $1,026 thousand for interregional economic analyses and interagency coordination activities.

The following tabulation shows the number of surveys and estimated obligations by type of survey in fiscal years 1965, 1966, and 1967.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1964, $10,536 thousand; 1965, $14,240 thousand; 1966, $12,542 thousand; 1967, $12,353 thousand.

1. Works of improvement.—The Department cooperates with soil conservation districts and other local organizations in planning and installing works of improvement for flood prevention and for furthering the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water in the 11 watersheds authorized by the Flood Control Act of 1944. The Federal Government shares in the cost of works of improvement for flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife development facilities.

The Department furnishes additional technical and in certain instances financial assistance to landowners to accelerate planning and installation of land treatment measures for runoff retardation, sediment control, and water management. Local sponsoring organizations must furnish all land, easements and rights-of-way, water rights, and the entire cost of works of improvement for nonagricultural water management measures, except those for fish and wildlife development and recreation, and operate and maintain all completed works of improvement.

2. Loans and related expense.—Loans are made to local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of planned works of improvement. Repayment with interest is required within 50 years after the principal benefits of improvements first become available. Of the 1967 estimate for flood prevention, not to exceed $200 thousand is to be available for such purpose, together with any unobligated balances of loan funds carried over from prior years. About $2.4 million is available for this purpose during 1966, a significant portion of which will not be required during that year.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1964, $21,380 thousand; 1965, $23,512 thousand; 1966, $25 million; 1967, $26 million.

This program provides cost-sharing assistance and technical services to participating farmers and ranchers in the development and installation of long-term conservation plans for their land. It is a voluntary program which supplements other conservation programs of the Department in designated counties of 10 Great Plains States. Cost-sharing contracts with individual landowners extend over periods of 3 to 10 years and include a plan of conservation operations for each farm or ranch. A time schedule for installing the cost-share practices is included as a part of each contract. The primary purpose of this program is to achieve needed land use adjustments, conservation treatments, and economic stability for each farm or ranch unit where the work is installed.

The needs for technical help increase over a period of years as more participants enter the program. This increasing workload is in two parts, namely: (a) assistance to new participants in preparing long-term contracts; and (b) installation services in accordance with the terms and period of time specified in each contract. As of June 30, 1965, a total of 15,207 farmers and ranchers were cooperating in this cost-share program. Cooperating landowners finance the entire cost of installing recurring management type practices on their land and pay a specified part of the cost-shared practices.

Program regulations provide that the cost-share rate offered in any contract shall not exceed 80 percent of the average cost of installing each eligible practice within the designated county. The rate of cost-share obligations varies among practices and between States due to differences in average costs for installation. Federal cost-sharing is further limited to $2,500 for the construction, enlarging, or deepening of any dam, pit, or pond for irrigation water; and to not more than $2,500 for irrigation practices in any one contract, or one-fourth of the total Federal obligation, whichever is larger. There is also a cost-sharing limitation of $25 thousand for any one contract. Under present legislation the final date for entering into such contracts with private landowners will expire December 31, 1971.

Each participant who signs a Great Plains program contract is responsible for installing his plan of operations as scheduled; and the Department is committed to furnish the necessary technical help needed for design, layout, and other services with practices included in each plan. Cooperating farmers and ranchers are encouraged to make use of other available assistance under local, State, and Federal programs as a means of further improving their land and water resources.

The Department cooperates with other Federal agencies, States, and local units of government in developing and carrying out programs and plans for resource development projects on private lands, and shares in the cost of installing planned works of improvement, when justified as a public need. Loans are provided to local sponsoring organizations, and to individuals when needed, to help them finance their share of the cost on certain improvements that are in the public interest.

Technical assistance is provided in each approved project area to help cooperating individuals to plan and install land treatments, for which no cost-shares are paid from this appropriation; to assist local organizations and groups with design, construction, and installation of new facilities; and for the preparation of overall work plans as a basis for resource development and economic improvement within each project area.

Work plans have been developed for ten project areas. These projects began operations in the 1965 fiscal year and will continue in 1966 and 1967. Another ten projects will be undertaken in 1966 making a total of 20 projects, of which at least 15 will be in operation by the end of the year. The budget for 1967 includes funds for 5 additional projects for which work plans would be developed during the year with local sponsors.

The main workload factors in 1967 include the following: (a) Assistance to local sponsors in developing suitable work plans for 5 additional areas; and (b) operations in 20 projects for which work plans were prepared in prior years, and installation of works of improvement for which additional State and local funds are provided.

The field work under this program consists of planning, designing, and installing practices and measures, the primary purpose of which is to promote the economic growth of rural areas through the economic use of natural resources. This includes recreational facilities and income-producing enterprises where needed. Investigations, surveys and planning are prerequisites to the operating phases of this program. Financial contributions and other Federal assistance will be used to help install planned measures, including loans to aid local public agencies and the project sponsors in financing works of improvement as specified in approved work plans.

Local sponsoring organizations are expected to provide about $7 million of non-Federal funds for project operations in 1966, and will exceed $15 million, or about $1 million per operating project in 1967. In the first 10 projects, technical services to be provided by the Soil Conservation Service will be about 10% of the non-Federal funds and 6.3% of the program costs in 1967.

The Service has been developing irrigation farming units for sale on the Eden Valley project in Wyoming where the Bureau of Reclamation has constructed the water storage facility and the principal canals. Land development for irrigation and settlement has been completed in accordance with the project plan prepared cooperatively with the Bureau of Reclamation. The farms developed in the project have been sold with the exception of four. One of these was transferred to the State of Wyoming as a demonstration farm. The other three tracts were transferred to the Department of the Interior during the 1964 fiscal year. The Eden Valley project office has been closed. A soil conservation district has been organized and staffed to furnish technical assistance in soil and water conservation to the project settlers. Sufficient funds are available from prior-year appropriations to protect the interests of the Government and to provide a reserve in case of need for adjustments in remaining unpaid obligations. No new appropriations will be required.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1964, $350 thousand (1965 adjustments, -$77 thousand); 1965, $613 thousand; 1966, $613 thousand; 1967, $613 thousand.

Agricultural economics research in the Department is administered by the Economic Research Service. The results of the research program are relied upon by (a) producers, dealers, importers and exporters as aids in planning the most profitable adjustments in their operations, (b) Government agencies in formulating and administering agricultural programs, and (c) Congress in considering agricultural legislation.

1. Farm economics.—Research is conducted to measure, appraise, and analyze, on a continuing basis, economic changes that occur in farming and in the use of human and natural rural resources and to indicate needed adjustments.

Research on the economics of farm production includes the economics of organization and management of farms; adjustments in production to prospective demands, and changing technologies; appraisals of costs and returns on farms representative of important types, sizes, and locations, and the appraisal of costs of producing important commodities; development of measures of farm output and productivity; problems of farm size and capital requirements; financing of farm enterprises; and appraisal of alternative agricultural production policies and programs.

Natural resources economics is concerned with the economics of use, conservation, development, management and control of natural resources and their relationship to economic activity. It includes economic analysis of land and water resources, resource institutions, and the economic and social conditions affecting use of resources.

Economic development is focused upon the well-being and opportunities of rural people. It includes a broad research program on economic development of rural areas, opportunities and employment of rural people and factors affecting them, including local governments and other organizations. Special attention is given to the poor who are found in heavy concentrations among rural people.

The increase requested for 1967 would permit intensified research on rural economic development, and an extension of analyses on water management and use.

2. Marketing economics.—This activity covers economic aspects of marketing farm products, including the nature of farmers' bargaining power; potentials for new products and new uses; market structure, costs and margins; the economic effects of school lunch, special milk, food stamp, and direct food distribution programs.

The 1967 budget reflects a decrease in this activity as a result of the completion in 1966 of a nonrecurring study of the away-from-home market for food.

3. Domestic and foreign economic analysis.—Domestic economic analysis is concerned with identifying, measuring, and analyzing: (1) the factors affecting demand, supply, and price of agricultural commodities; (2) relationships between agriculture and the national economy; (3) farm income and the income of the farm population; (4) demand and consumption of farm products; (5) long-term projections of economic growth and demand for farm products; and (6) historical developments in the policies, programs, and organization of the Department.

Foreign economic analysis includes trade studies and investigation of supply-demand relationships. The trade and market studies focus on the problems of developing foreign markets and the effect of these developments on U.S. agricultural production. Research is carried on for more than 100 countries around the world, focusing on the forces affecting supply, demand, and trade in farm products, and their impact on U.S. agricultural exports.

The increase requested for 1967 would provide for analyses of basic statistics and related research on farm income parity.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1964, $313 thousand (1965 adjustments, -$6 thousand); 1965, $497 thousand; 1966, $497 thousand; 1967, $497 thousand.

The Service administers programs relating to crop and livestock estimates and statistical research and service. The statistical and economic data developed on food and agriculture are essential to farmers, processors, and handlers in making production and marketing decisions, and to legislators, administrators and others concerned with developing and administering agricultural programs. The basic facts provided by this service are also essential to economic analyses and other agricultural research programs.

1. Crop and livestock estimates.—This service provides the official estimates on this Nation's agriculture, including acreage, yield, and production of crops, stocks, and value of farm commodities, numbers and inventory value of livestock items. Data collected and published on prices paid and received by farmers are basic to computation of parity prices. Data on approximately 150 crop and livestock products are covered in some 700 reports issued each year. The activity is conducted through 43 State offices serving 50 States, most of which are operated as joint State and Federal services. Cooperative arrangements with State agencies provide a considerable volume of additional data which would not be collected or made available from Federal funds. During 1965 co-operating States expended an estimated $1.9 million of their own funds on these associated State programs. A comparison of activity data for 1964 and 1965, including work performed under cooperative arrangements is as follows:

	1964 actual	1965 preliminary
Separate mailings of inquiry forms, average per field office.....	383	396
Total questionnaires handled:
Number distributed.....	9,810,000	9,940,000
Number of returns tabulated.....	2,910,000	2,980,000
Number of objective survey contacts (measurements and interviews).....	129,000	156,000
Number of official reports issued, all offices.....	10,000	10,300
Copies of reports distributed.....	14,700,000	15,000,000
Publications distributed.....	3,480,000	3,490,000
Special requests for information answered by field offices.....	66,400	73,900

Increases for 1967 would be used to expand the long-range program to a full-operating basis in all 48 conterminous States and to establish an improved and more reliable data collection system for farm employment and farm wage rates.

2. Statistical research and service.—This work includes review of all statistical forms, survey plans, and reporting and recordkeeping requirements originating in the Department and requiring Bureau of the Budget approval; liaison for coordination of statistics within the Department and with other statistical agencies; development of new and improved methods and techniques, and providing technical consulting services to other agencies of the Department; research on and development of sampling, forecasting, and other basic statistical techniques and methods to improve the crop and livestock estimates of the Department; use of and consultation on automatic data processing to develop and adopt this medium for improving the accuracy and timeliness of crop and livestock estimates; and conduct of special surveys relating to the marketing of agricultural products. A comparison of activity data for 1964 and 1965 is as follows:

The 1966 program provides for the purchase of a large-scale computer for $993 thousand, and for related programming and conversion costs of $740 thousand. The 1967 program provides $536 thousand for completing re-programming and conversion.

These activities provide consumer protection through inspection for wholesomeness of meat and poultry products and assist producers and handlers of agricultural commodities through various marketing and regulatory services. These activities are continuing to increase and become more complex as the volume of agricultural production increases and as the market structure undergoes dramatic changes. The marketing changes include such practices as concentration in food retailing, direct buying, decentralization of processing, growth of interregional competition, vertical integration, and contract farming. The individual activities include:

1. Market news service.—This service provides current information on supply, movement, and prices at specific markets for practically all agricultural commodities. This day-to-day market information enables American farmers to determine where and when to sell and at what price. The information is collected and disseminated at year-round and seasonal offices maintained in more than 130 cities and towns, often with local and other support and cooperation generally from State departments of agriculture. Dissemination by radio and television continues as in the past while more costly dissemination by mimeographed reports has been decreasing. The volume of work performed is indicated by examples given in the following table:

2. Inspection, grading, classing, and standardization.—
(a) Meat inspection.—Federal meat inspection is required for all meat and meat products moving in interstate and foreign commerce to assure a clean and wholesome meat supply for human consumption, free from adulteration, and truthfully labeled. The work includes inspection of animals, carcasses and meat, and meat-food products at various stages of handling and processing. Measures are enforced to insure informative labeling, and meats imported or exported are inspected. Legislation has been introduced to strengthen and extend jurisdiction of the meat inspection program, including coverage of meat and meat products in intrastate commerce.

The estimates for 1967 include an increase, under existing legislation, to provide for inspection of additional plants and expanded facilities in presently inspected plants and to place on a full-year basis the supplemental appropriation received for part of 1966. Legislation is also being proposed to place meat inspection on a self-supporting basis resulting in a reduction of $41,940 thousand for 1967.

The volume of inspections and examinations is indicated by examples given in the following table:

(b) Poultry inspection.—Inspection of poultry meat and poultry meat products for wholesomeness is provided pursuant to the Poultry Products Inspection Act of 1957. All poultry processed in plants shipping in interstate or foreign commerce is required to be inspected both before and after slaughter. Birds found to be unfit for human consumption are condemned and removed from channels of trade.

CONSUMER AND MARKETING SERVICE—Con.General and special funds—Continued*CONSUMER PROTECTIVE, MARKETING AND REGULATORY PROGRAMS—Continued

The increase for 1967 provides for inspection of an anticipated increased volume of poultry and poultry products. Legislation is being proposed to place the service on a self-supporting basis resulting in a reduction of $19,331 thousand for 1967. The volume of work performed is indicated in examples given below:

POULTRY INSPECTION

Plants under inspection June 30.....	994	999	1,004
Operating lines under inspection June 30..	1,326	1,394	1,428

(c) Other inspection, grading, classing, and standardization.—Nationally uniform standards of quality for agricultural products are established and applied to specific lots of produce to promote confidence between buyers and sellers; reduce hazards in marketing due to misunderstandings and disputes arising from the use of nonstandard descriptions; encourage better preparation of uniform quality products for market; and furnish consumers with more definite information on the quality of products they buy. The standards are applied by or under the supervision of Federal employees at the request of any interested party, and generally for a fee. Approximately 76% of the total cost of this work was offset by fees and other revenue in 1965 which are shown principally under Consumer and Marketing Service trust funds in part II of the Budget appendix.

The increase for 1967 provides for micronaire readings on cotton classed under the Smith-Doxey Act and for development of international food standards. Legislation is being proposed to (1) amend the U.S. Grain Standards Act by establishing fees to recover the direct cost of supervising licensed inspectors; (2) amend the Tobacco Inspection Act and the Cotton Statistics and Estimates Act to recover in fees the full cost of the special benefit portion of the service; and (3) to repeal the Naval Stores and Wool Standards Acts resulting in a reduction of $8,417 thousand in appropriated funds. The volume of work performed is indicated by examples given in the following tables:

3. Regulatory activities.—These include the administration of regulatory laws such as Packers and Stockyards, Standard Container, U.S. Warehouse, and Federal Seed Acts to assure fairplay in the marketplace to protect producers and handlers of agricultural commodities from financial loss due to careless or fraudulent marketing practices and to preserve free and open competition in the marketing of farm products. Assistance is also provided to farmers and others in obtaining and maintaining equitable and reasonable transportation rates and services on farm products and supplies.

The increase for 1967 would be used to provide for more effective administration of the Packers and Stockyards and U.S. Warehouse Acts.

Legislation is being proposed to (1) amend the U.S. Warehouse Act to place the service on a self-supporting basis, (2) amend the Federal Seed Act to recover a portion of the cost of the service, and (3) repeal the Naval Stores Act, the Tobacco Seed and Plant Exportation Act, and the two Standard Container Acts resulting in a total reduction of $1,610 thousand for 1967.

The volume of work performed is indicated by examples given in the following table:

4. Administration and coordination of State payments.—This project covers the Federal activity required in administering and coordinating the marketing service work performed by the States and financed jointly by State funds and Federal funds provided by the appropriation Payments to States and possessions. In 1965 this work was carried on in 44 States with 145 work projects.

Payments are made on a matching fund basis to State marketing agencies for carrying out specifically approved marketing service programs designed to bring about improved marketing. Under this activity, marketing specialists work with farmers, marketing firms, and agencies in solving marketing problems and in putting to use marketing research results.

This program covers such projects as methods of maintaining and improving the quality of products; ways of reducing marketing costs; expanding outlets for surplus products; the collection and dissemination of special State and local market information and statistics; and improving the organizational structure of the marketing system. Through this cooperative approach, the Federal Government's leadership and money are coupled with State resources and experience to aid in the solution of the most urgent local and area marketing problems.

In 1966, 44 States are conducting about 145 projects under this program.

1. Cash payments to States.—Funds are provided under letters of credit to State agencies to reimburse eligible participants for a part of the cost of the fluid milk consumed. Based on available funds, and estimated participation, initial reserves will be established for each State for reimbursement payments.

For 1967, reimbursements will be made for milk served to needy children and to children in needy schools which do not now have a food service program.

1. Food assistance, in the form of both funds and food, is provided to the States, as defined in the act, in serving lunches to schoolchildren. Each State's portion of the funds available is determined by a statutory formula. The formula takes into account the participation rate in the State, and the relationship between the per capita income of the State and the average United States per capita income. In 1962, a new provision was authorized in the amendment to the act for providing special cash assistance to needy schools in serving free or reduced price lunches.

The funds proposed for 1967 will provide for expansion of the program of special assistance to needy schools and for normal growth in the program at a reduced rate of Federal reimbursement per lunch.

The program is operated under an agreement entered into by the State educational agency and the Department of Agriculture. Funds are advanced under letters of credit to State agencies for use in reimbursing participating schools. Schools make application to the State agency and if accepted are reimbursed for a part of the food cost of each lunch served. In 1965, the States contributed to this program $1,090 million, most of which came from payments by children. This was far in excess of the statutory matching requirement of $3 for each Federal dollar of cash payment.

Funds are also used to purchase food for distribution to the schools to help meet the nutritional requirements of the lunches. Transfers are made to this appropriation from the fund for Removal of Surplus Agricultural Commodities and are used to purchase and distribute agricultural commodities and other foods. Further, commodities acquired under price support and surplus removal programs are available to the schools. The volume of surplus commodities distributed to schools, however, depends upon market conditions.

The program during the peak month in 1965 provided lunches to over 35% of the approximately 48.2 million schoolchildren in the country. The number of lunches served increased approximately 7.26% over 1964. Participation in the program in December 1964 reached 17 million children in 70,132 schools and an appreciable increase is expected in 1966 and 1967.

During 1965 over $979 million worth of agricultural commodities and other foods were used in the program. Over 28% of this amount represented commodities contributed under section 6 of the School Lunch Act and the Federal surplus removal and price support program.

About 72% of the food used in the program was purchased by the schools through local suppliers.

Participation in the program from 1964 through 1967 is as follows:

	1964 actual	1965 actual	1966 estimate	1967 estimate
Number of schools (month of peak participation—March).....	69,616	70,292	71,300	72,000

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: 1964, $0; 1965, $381 thousand; 1966, $381 thousand; 1967, $381 thousand.

This program aims at making more effective use of our food abundance and at providing additional nutrition to those in need. It is inaugurated at the request of State welfare agencies and these agencies are responsible for household certification and coupon issuance functions.

The Department determines—based on income, food needs, and other factors—the allotment of coupons for each household unit, including the portion to be purchased. The participant's normal food expenditure is maintained by requiring that, based on family size and income, recipients purchase a specific value of coupons. The supplemental or bonus coupons, provided free-of-charge, permit the family to upgrade its diet.

Coupons are issued by a non-Federal issuing office. Cash paid for the coupons by participants is deposited periodically in a designated Federal Depository. Food stores receive cash or credit for the coupons from any commercial bank which must accept them at face value. The coupons then flow through regular banking channels to the Federal Reserve banks where they are redeemed and subsequently destroyed.

The $100 million available in 1966 will finance the program in areas in operation on July 1, 1965, and permit progressive expansion to reach a total of about 1.3 million persons by June 30, 1966. The increase for 1967 would provide for financing, on a full-year basis, the program level expected by June 30, 1966, and for further expansion in 1967. Total participation by the end of fiscal year 1967 will be dependent upon the time at which new areas are brought into the program and the number of participants in each of the new areas. However, if new areas are opened on a progressive basis throughout the year, it is possible that total participation by the end of the year could reach 1,870,000. This would be an increase of 570,000 above the total expected at the end of fiscal year 1966.

The following table reflects coverage, participation, and costs for fiscal year 1962 (the first full year of operation of the pilot program) 1965, and estimates for 1966 and 1967.

License fees are deposited in this special fund and are used to meet costs of administering the Perishable Agricultural Commodities and the Produce Agency Acts (7 U.S.C. 491-497, 499a-499s). The law provides that license fees may be set at a maximum of $50. Effective January 1, 1965, the fee was increased from $36 to $42.

These acts are intended to assure equitable treatment to farmers and others in the marketing of fresh and frozen fruits and vegetables. Commission merchants, dealers, and brokers handling these products in interstate and foreign commerce are licensed. Complaints of violations are investigated and violations dealt with by (a) informal agreements between the two parties, (b) formal decisions involving payment of reparation awards, and (c) suspension or revocation of license and/or publication of the facts. Approximately 21,700 licenses were in effect on June 30, 1965, and a decrease of 300 is expected in 1966 due to the trend in the industry to fewer but larger dealers. The number of complaints received is expected to average around 2,300.

Under section 32 of the act of August 24, 1935, as amended (7 U.S.C. 612c), an amount equal to 30% of customs receipts collected during each calendar year (except for an amount equal to 30% of such receipts collected on fishery products transferred to the Department of the Interior to encourage the distribution of fishery products), plus unused balances up to $300 million are available for expanding domestic and foreign market outlets for farm commodities. As provided in recent appropriation acts, transfers have been made from this fund primarily to the school lunch program for the purchase and distribution of agricultural commodities and other foods pursuant to section 6 of the National School Lunch Act. Section 32 funds are also authorized for the administration of marketing agreements and orders. The basic legislation provides that funds devoted to any one commodity or product thereof must not exceed 25% of funds available. It also provides that the funds must be devoted principally to perishable agricultural commodities other than those receiving price support under title II of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended. It has been determined that this provision can be legally satisfied by setting aside or reserving the principal portion of section 32 funds for the use of perishable nonbasic agricultural commodities.

1. Commodity program payments, are of four types: (a) Direct purchases are donated to the school lunch program, charitable institutions serving needy persons, and persons certified by welfare agencies as eligible for relief; (b) Diversion payments enable processors to purchase surplus commodities on the domestic market, divert them to byproducts and new uses, and sell them at prices comparable to competing products, thus creating new markets for surplus commodities; (c) Export payments enable exporters to purchase surplus commodities on the domestic market and sell them on the world market at competitive world prices; (d) Production payments, none of which were made in 1965, help to reestablish farmers' purchasing power. During the past 2 years assistance under these programs was given to the following commodity groups (in millions of dollars):

Dairy products	85.0	25.0
Eggs and poultry	27.0	5.2
Fruits	3.1	5.7
Grains	4.8	2.2
Livestock products	123.0	176.0
Peanut butter	12.3	12.5
Tobacco	2.0	.4
Vegetables	1.3
Miscellaneous	1.0	.1
Total	259.5	227.1

The use of section 32 program funds is contingent upon marketing conditions. The estimates for both 1966 and 1967 reflect full use of available funds except for the $300 million carryover. Within the total each year provision will be made for the foreseeable needs for perishables and other activities regularly financed with section 32 funds. It is planned that any remaining amount may be used to buy from CCC commodities which would otherwise be donated under section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended.

Since it is not possible to determine what commodities will be surplus in the future, it is not feasible to estimate the distribution of the commodity program purchases for 1967.

2. Surplus removal operating expenses occur mainly in connection with purchasing, exporting, and diverting surplus commodities and in distributing section 32 and Commodity Credit Corporation commodities to eligible outlets. Distribution in 1965, including those under section 6 of the National School Lunch Act, is summarized below (in millions):

Distribution	Number of recipients (peak month)	Value of commodities distributed	Pounds of commodities distributed
By recipients:
Schoolchildren	20.8	$272.4	972.7
Needy persons	5.8	226.9	1,140.5
Persons in charitable institutions	1.3	29.8	172.3
Total		529.1	2,285.5
By program:
Section 32		$353.9	862.9
Donation by Commodity Credit Corporation, section 416		115.7	1,111.4
Section 6, National School Lunch Act		59.5	311.2
Total		529.1	2,285.5

In cooperation with the food trade, press and radio, greater consumption of abundant foods is encouraged. In 1965 the monthly plentiful foods list contained an average of 6 foods, and 8 national and 21 area, State, and local drives were conducted.

3. Marketing agreements and orders are put into effect upon request of producers or handlers after hearings and investigations, and approval by producers (and handlers in case of marketing agreements). They help to stabilize prices and benefit producers and consumers by establishing and maintaining orderly marketing conditions. Administration at the local level is financed by assessments upon handlers. On June 30, 1965, there were 75 orders in effect for milk, 43 covering tree fruits, tree nuts, and vegetables and 1 order for shade-grown tobacco. The expenses of advisory committees established to advise the Secretary, public hearings, referendums to determine producer sentiment, and other developmental work as authorized by the Agricultural Act of 1961 is also financed under this project.

Legislation will be requested to provide for payment of approximately $1.5 million of the Federal administrative costs of this program by producers and handlers.

The primary function of the Foreign Agricultural Service is to help American agriculture maintain and expand foreign markets for its products.

The agency performs two principal kinds of service functions: (a) It helps to develop foreign markets for U.S. farm products through aggressive market promotion under special export programs and through helping to secure international trade conditions that are favorable toward our products; and (b) it maintains a worldwide agricultural intelligence and reporting service to assist U.S. agricultural industry in its export operations. This is done through a continuous program of analyzing and reporting foreign agricultural production, markets, and policies.

1. International trade.—The Service directs and coordinates Department responsibilities in international trade agreement programs and negotiations, utilizing authority of the Trade Expansion Act. It identifies and seeks to reduce foreign barriers to U.S. agricultural exports. It continuously examines and reports on developments in foreign trade policies which affect U.S. trade policies and operations and recommends courses of action. (A current example is the European Economic Community whose common agricultural policy threatens to reduce sales of certain U.S. agricultural products to the area.)

The Service recommends Department positions on trade agreements and international commodity agreements. It continuously reviews and reports trade regulations of countries signatory to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade as such regulations affect the movement of U.S. farm products in world trade.

It administers a program of import controls in accordance with section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act as amended, and is responsible for administering any import controls established under the beef import control legislation of 1964.

2. Agricultural attachés.—The Service maintains agricultural attachés at 59 foreign posts who assist in the development of markets abroad for U.S. agricultural commodities, working closely with numerous U.S. agricultural trade groups. They maintain continuous contacts with foreign governments in the interest of obtaining more favorable import treatment for American farm products. They carry out a comprehensive schedule of reporting foreign agricultural production, marketing, and trade policy developments as a means of keeping the U.S. agricultural industry currently informed.

3. Export programs.—The Service carries out export programs (a) to expand commercial sales of all U.S. farm products in world markets and (b) under the Public Law 480 program, to sell and ship U.S. surplus farm products to less developed countries under long-term dollar credit sales agreements authorized by title IV of Public Law 480 and under foreign currency sales agreements authorized by title I of Public Law 480. About three-fourths of U.S. agricultural exports are commercial sales for dollars. The Service works with 45 U.S. agricultural producer and trade groups in 71 countries in carrying out commercial sales promotion programs under cooperative agreements. Such programs are jointly financed. Contributions from the Service come from foreign currencies received in payment for surplus commodities sold under title I of Public Law 480.

About one-fourth of U.S. agricultural exports move under Public Law 480 programs, largely the title I sales of surplus commodities for foreign currencies and to a lesser but increasing extent the long-term dollar credit sales under title IV. The Service develops title I and title IV sales agreements with governments of friendly foreign countries and develops and negotiates title IV sales agreements with the U.S. or foreign private trade entities. The Service is responsible for export shipment of the commodities and for assurance that such commodities actually are received and utilized in the importing countries. Also the Service, under title III of Public Law 480, is responsible for initiating and programming contracts involving the donation of surplus food commodities made available to voluntary and intergovernmental agencies that operate in over 100 countries of the world.

4. Commodity programs.—Information essential to foreign marketing of specific U.S. farm commodities is obtained, analyzed, and made available to U.S. farm and trade groups. Foreign agricultural competition similarly is analyzed and reported. Marketing programs, in which producers, exporters, and Government officials participate, are developed to maintain and expand the foreign market for U.S. farm products. Assistance is given to U.S. trade representatives in negotiations with foreign officials. Assistance is given to American exporters and foreign importers to bring them together under conditions favorable to trade.

5. Barter and stockpiling.—The Service, in cooperation with other Government agencies, conducts a barter program designed to utilize surplus agriculture commodities, in lieu of dollars, in acquiring from other countries, goods, materials, and equipment required by other Government agencies and for the national and supplemental stockpiles. This work is financed from other funds transferred from "Administrative expenses, Commodity Credit Corporation."

6. General sales management.—The Service administers a general sales management program to develop export sales and related pricing policies and programs, including dollar sales on short and long-term credit. The program also includes price and quality review. Foreign data such as prices, stocks, and rail, truck, barge, and ocean freight rates and other market information is collected for use in program development. Information concerning prices and other sales terms, sales programs, and commodity availabilities is furnished to U.S. exporters, foreign importers, and foreign government officials. This work is financed with funds transferred from "Administrative expenses, Commodity Credit Corporation."

Market development projects.—Foreign currencies generated by the sale of surplus agricultural commodities under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, as well as foreign currencies acquired by the United States from other sources, are used by the Foreign Agricultural Service to develop new foreign markets and expand existing markets for U.S. agricultural commodities, including cotton, dairy products, fats and oils, grain, feed, livestock and meat, poultry, fruits and vegetables, and tobacco.

The type of market development projects being carried out include sales promotion campaigns, trade fairs and exhibits, nutrition demonstrations, and market analyses. In 1967 it is planned that the unobligated balance brought forward in this appropriation will be used to purchase those currencies necessary to carry on the program. Dollar funds for use in other countries are included in the appropriation Salaries and expenses.

INTERNATIONAL AGRICULTURAL DEVELOPMENT SERVICE

The Service administers the Department's responsibilities in the agricultural phases of the foreign economic assistance programs. This includes direction of the Department's activities under agreement with AID, particularly in agricultural assistance and training programs for foreign areas. It maintains relationships with international and U.S. organizations, including the land-grant institutions, farm organizations, foundations, and other agricultural groups to utilize the scientific and institutional competence of American agriculture in carrying out such programs. The Service is financed entirely with funds allocated from the Agency for International Development.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1964, $7 thousand (1965 adjustments, -$4 thousand); 1965, $8 thousand; 1966, $8 thousand; 1967, $8 thousand.

The major objectives of the Commodity Exchange Authority are to maintain fair and competitive pricing in the commodity futures markets by preventing manipulation and other abusive trading practices. Enforcement of the Commodity Exchange Act requires supervision over 17 regulated commodities on 17 exchanges currently designated as contract markets. Futures trading for all regulated commodities combined has shown marked increases for 3 successive years. Trading volume of 14 million transactions in fiscal year 1965 exceeded the record level of 12.8 million transactions in fiscal year 1964 in a sharp upward movement which brought trading to 40% over the fiscal year 1962 level. Similarly, the estimated dollar value of commodity trading for all regulated commodities has increased almost steadily from $36.7 billion in fiscal year 1962 to $73.5 billion in fiscal year 1965, an increase of over 100% in that period. This increase places commodity trading at a level nearly equal to that of stock market trading.

1. Licensing and auditing of brokerage houses.—This consists of (a) prevention of the misuse of customers' funds by the analysis of financial statements of futures commission merchants and the periodic audits of their books and records; and (b) annual registration of futures commission merchants and floor brokers.

This account includes funds to cover expenses of programs administered by, and functions assigned to, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. The funds consist of direct appropriation, transfers from the Commodity Credit Corporation, and miscellaneous advances from other sources. This is a consolidated account for administrative expenses of national, commodity, State, and county offices.

The commodity offices and the data processing center in Kansas City play an important role in administering price support programs and the field operations stemming from producer loan and purchase agreements, inventory management, and merchandising activities.

The State committees are in general administrative charge of all programs carried out in their respective States. Within the framework of national policy, they determine the policies to be followed and direct the adaptation of national programs to the State.

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation county committees are responsible for the local administration of programs. They carry out all functions dealing directly with farmers. The elected county committee is in charge of the county office.

The programs and activities carried out by this Service include: Agricultural conservation program, acreage allotment and marketing quota programs, Sugar Act program, conservation reserve program, cropland conversion program, wheat diversion program, feed grain program, Wool Act program, granary storage program, and price support and related programs.

The activities carried out by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service fall within three major categories:

1. Program formulation and appraisal.—The supply adjustment, conservation, and the price support programs and the management and merchandising of commodities acquired under the price support program have a tremendous impact on the national and, to a lesser extent, the international economy. This activity provides for constant review of the effectiveness of these programs. It also provides for the analysis of data to formulate even more effective programs.

2. Operation of supply adjustment, conservation, and price support programs.—This activity includes all functions dealing with the administration of programs carried out through the farmer committee system, including: (a) developing program regulations and procedures, (b) holding meetings with employees and producers to discuss new programs or changes in existing programs, (c) collecting and compiling basic data for individual farms, (d) establishing individual farm allotments, (e) establishing proportionate shares for sugar farms, when necessary, (f) notifying producers of allotments, proportionate shares, productivity indexes, and payment rates, (g) determining farm marketing allocations, (h) handling appeals, (i) determining county normal yields, (j) conducting referendums and certifying results, (k) checking compliance with acreage allotments and use of diverted acres, (l) developing pooling agreements under which several farmers work jointly to solve a common conservation problem which cannot be solved by individual action, (m) issuing marketing cards so that production from the allotted acreage can be marketed without penalty, (n) processing producer requests for conservation cost-sharing, and (o) processing commodity loan documents and issuing sight drafts.

3. Inventory management and merchandising.—This activity includes (a) overall management of CCC-owned commodities, (b) selling commodities, (c) donating commodities, and (d) accounting for loans and commodities. The value of the commodities owned by CCC on June 30, 1965, was about $3.9 billion.

The volume of work in 1965 under some of the major programs financed from this account is set forth below:

Total U.S. requirements and quotas are determined. The objectives are to provide consumers with adequate supplies of sugar at reasonable prices, to protect the domestic sugar industry, and to promote the export trade of the United States. The quota for each domestic area is allotted to individual sellers when necessary to achieve orderly marketing. Restrictive farm acreage allotments are established for producers when necessary to avoid surpluses.

Payments are made which supplement the income of domestic producers of cane and beets. Payments require compliance with specified conditions of employment, production, and price. Payments are also made for abandonment of planted acreage and crop deficiencies on harvested acreage due to natural calamities.

The decrease of $15 million proposed for 1967 is due to two factors. One is the establishment of restrictive proportionate shares on both the 1966 sugarbeet crop and the 1966 sugarcane crop in the Mainland cane area. The other factor is an assumption that actual production from the 1965 and 1966 crops will be less than indicated by current estimates.

Tax collections from imports of sugar exceed total obligations by nearly $545 million for fiscal years 1938 through 1965.

This program is designed to encourage conservation by sharing with farmers, ranchers, and woodland owners the cost of carrying out approved soil-building and soil- and water-conserving practices, including related wildlife-conserving practices. These are practices which farmers generally would not perform to the needed extent with their own resources. The rate of cost-sharing averages about 50% of the cost. Cost-sharing may be in the form of conservation materials and services or a payment after completion of the practice.

Conservation measures offered include those primarily designed to establish permanent protective cover, improve and protect established vegetative cover, conserve and dispose of water, establish temporary vegetative cover, temporarily protect soil from wind and water erosion, and benefit wildlife.

Beginning with the 1966 program, several changes in practices have been made which are designed to help achieve shifts from row crops and small grain crops to less intensive use.

Under the 1964 program, new or additional practices were established on 1,080,015 farms and ranches. These contained 159 million acres of cropland and 387 million acres of farmland. The following practices, along with others, were installed under the 1964 program:

Funds are distributed among the States on the basis of conservation needs. They are, in turn, distributed by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation State committees to counties. The county committees approve conservation practice cost-sharing for eligible persons.

Loans from Commodity Credit Corporation are used to make advance payments to vendors. These payments are for conservation materials and services furnished to farmers and ranchers prior to the time funds are appropriated each year. Repayment is made from balances of prior appropriations or from new funds appropriated.

The status of the loan account is:

This long-term program provides cost-sharing assistance to landowners, operators, or occupiers of land in the Appalachian region. Contracts with such people provide for land stabilization, erosion and sediment control, reclamation through changes in land use, and the establishment of measures for the conservation and development of soil, water, woodland, wildlife, and recreation resources. This program supplements other conservation programs of the Department in the designated counties of those States in the Appalachian region. Cost-sharing agreements are limited to periods of not less than 3 years nor more than 10 years. The Federal share may not exceed 80% of the treatment cost on not more than 50 acres of land for any person.

It is anticipated that about 7,300 agreements will be made covering about 255,000 acres during the period ending June 30, 1966.

Long-range agreements are approved with farmers and ranchers to make changes in their cropping systems and land uses. These agreements are for two purposes. They change permanently to better use cropland which is not well suited for crop use. They also temporarily shift to better use land which is suitable for crop use but not needed for crops at present.

The agreements provide for payments, the furnishing of materials and services, and other assistance to farmers. In return, farmers change the land use and install and maintain conservation practices. Agreements are for 5 or 10 years. Adjustment payments are made either upon approval of the contracts or in installments within a period of not more than 5 years. Land treatment practice payments are made after the practice is installed.

The law places a limit of $10 million on payments which are required to be made in a calendar year under signed agreements.

CROPLAND ADJUSTMENT PROGRAM

For necessary expenses to carry into effect a Cropland Adjustment Program as authorized by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965, including reimbursement to Commodity Credit Corporation, $200,000,000: Provided, That agreements entered into during the fiscal year 1967 shall not require payments during the calendar year 1967 exceeding $215,000,000, plus any amount by which agreements entered into in prior fiscal years require payments in amounts less than authorized for such prior fiscal years. The Cropland Adjustment Program is authorized by title VI of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965. Its purpose is to assist farmers, through long-term agreements, to divert land from the production of unneeded crops to uses that will promote the development and conservation of our soil, water, forest, wildlife, and recreational resources. The program will also establish, protect and conserve open spaces and natural beauty and prevent air and water pollution.

In return for diverting the cropland to approved uses, producers will receive adjustment payments. They also will be eligible to receive cost-sharing assistance for establishing approved conservation uses. The period of a contract cannot be less than 5 years nor more than 10 years.

The Secretary is authorized to transfer funds, appropriated for carrying out the program, to any other Federal agency or to States or local governmental agencies for use in acquiring cropland to be permanently retired from crops to the preservation of open spaces and natural beauty, the development of wildlife, and recreational facilities and the prevention of air and water pollution. The funds will also assist them to apply conserving practices on the land at costs not greater than those under agreements entered into with producers.

Agreements signed in any fiscal year may not cause additional annual payments in excess of $225 million in any calendar year plus any amount by which agreements entered into in prior fiscal years require payments in amounts less than authorized for such prior fiscal years.

Adjustment payments can be made in annual payments, a lump sum or in other installments. Payments made in advance of performance will be discounted at a rate of 5% per year.

The facilities, services, authorities and funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation may be used for financing of this program through December 31, 1966, pursuant to section 602(1) of the Act. After this date funds must be transferred to the Corporation in advance. Appropriations are authorized to carry out the program including payments to the Corporation for its actual costs incurred or to be incurred.

This program, initiated in 1956, has two objectives. One is to bring total crop acreage more nearly in line with demand by withdrawing cropland from production. The other is to establish and maintain sound conservation practices on the land withdrawn. The Secretary was authorized, through calendar year 1960, to enter into 3- to 15-year contracts with producers. For removing designated cropland from production and for establishing necessary conservation practices, the producer receives an annual rental payment each year of the contract period. He also receives cost-sharing assistance for the establishment of required practices. Total annual rental payments to a producer are limited to $5 thousand.

This appropriation provides special funds for sharing the cost of emergency conservation measures to deal with cases of severe damage to farm and rangelands resulting from natural disasters. The criteria under which assistance may be made available are set forth in the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590(h)).

Funds are allocated for use only in those counties designated by the Secretary of Agriculture as disaster counties. Assistance is made available to treat new conservation problems which (1) if not treated will impair or endanger the land, (2) materially affect the productive capacity of the land, (3) represent damage which is unusual in character and, except for wind erosion, is not the type which would recur frequently in the same area, and (4) will be so costly to rehabilitate that Federal assistance is or will be required to return the land to productive agricultural use.

Under the 1965 program cost-sharing assistance is being provided to treat farmlands damaged by drought, earthquake, flood, wind erosion, fire, and tornado. There are 542 counties in 35 States where assistance is being provided.

¹ Statutory obligations against borrowing authority include only borrowings from Treasury and obligations to purchase notes, certificates, or other obligations evidencing loans held by banks and accrued interest on such obligations. Other obligations, contingent liabilities, and commitments do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in either borrowings from Treasury or in notes, certificates, or other obligations evidencing loans held by banks and accrued interest on such obligations.

The Commodity Credit Corporation was created to stabilize, support, and protect farm income and prices, help maintain balanced and adequate supplies of agricultural commodities, their products, foods, feeds, and fibers, and help in their orderly distribution (15 U.S.C. 714-714p). It may also make available materials and facilities required in connection with the production and marketing of agricultural commodities. In addition to its basic functions, it is used to administer and, in some cases, temporarily finance numerous special activities.

The Corporation's capital stock of $100 million is held by the United States. Up to $14.5 billion may be borrowed to finance operations.

Budget assumptions.—The following general assumptions form the basis for the Corporation's 1966 and 1967 budget estimates: (a) the general level of prices will be the same as the present level; (b) generally, exports of agricultural commodities in 1967 will increase slightly over 1966 levels; (c) yields for the 1966 crops are based on recent averages adjusted for trend; (d) acreage allotments and marketing quotas will be in effect for the 1966 crops of peanuts, rice, cotton, and certain kinds of tobacco (flue-cured tobacco will be on an acreage-poundage program); the 1966 wheat allotment will be one that provides for the production of 1 billion bushels of wheat as stated in the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965; and (e) special programs for cotton, feed grains, and wheat will be continued.

It is difficult to forecast with accuracy requirements for the year ending June 30, 1967. Complex and unpredictable factors are involved, such as weather, other factors which affect the volume of production of crops not yet planted, feed and food needs here and overseas, and available dollar exchange.

PROGRAMS OF THE CORPORATION

Price support.—The Corporation through loans, purchases, payments, and other means supports the prices of agricultural commodities to producers. This is done mainly under the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act (15 U.S.C. 714) and the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1421).

The 1949 act makes price support mandatory for the basic commodities—corn, cotton, wheat, rice, peanuts, and tobacco. It also requires support of the following nonbasic commodities: tung nuts, honey, milk, butterfat and the products of milk and butterfat, barley, oats, rye, and grain sorghums. The National Wool Act of 1954, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1781-1787) requires price support for wool and mohair. Price support for other nonbasic commodities is discretionary. However, whenever the price of either cottonseed or soybeans is supported, the price of the other must be set at such level as the Secretary determines will cause them to compete on equal terms on the market. The price-support program may also include operations to remove and dispose of surplus agricultural commodities in order to stabilize prices at levels not in excess of those permissible by law.

The principal methods of providing price support are loans to and purchases from producers. With limited exceptions, price-support loans are nonrecourse. The commodities serve as collateral for the loan and, upon maturity thereof, the producer may deliver such collateral to satisfy his obligation without further payment, unless there is a deficiency in quantity or quality, or the producer is guilty of fraudulent representation.

Direct purchases are also made from processors as well as producers, depending on the commodity involved. Also, special purchases for the removal of surpluses are made under certain laws, for example: Section 308 of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1697), the act of August 19, 1958, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431 note), and section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431). In the case of feed grains, a portion of the price support is made through issuance of negotiable payment-in-kind certificates which are handled in the same manner as payment-in-kind certificates issued under the feed grain acreage diversion programs. In the case of cotton, in addition to loans, producers receive price-support payments in cash or in payment-in-kind certificates. In the case of wheat, in addition to loans and purchases, producers receive marketing certificates as hereinafter described.

In all the price-support operations, normal trade facilities are used to the maximum extent practicable. Local banks, cooperatives, and other financial institutions are used in lending activities. Commercial facilities are used to a great extent for storage.

Besides the Charter Act and laws mentioned above, many other laws are applicable to the disposition of commodities acquired under the price support program through sales, donations, and barter.

For accounting purposes, the Corporation credits to the price-support program sales proceeds of commodities in its price-support stocks which are disposed of through redemption of domestic and export payment-in-kind certificates and through special activities.

Commodity export.—The Corporation promotes the export of agricultural commodities and products through sales, barter, payments, and other operations. Other than in barter for stockpiling purposes, such commodities and products may be those held in private trade channels as well as those acquired by the Corporation in its price-support operations. This program is carried out under the authority contained in the Corporation's charter, particularly sections 5 (d) and (f), and in accordance with specific statutes where applicable. Export sales for foreign currencies are made under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, although such sales of commodities owned by the Corporation may also be made under its charter authority.

The activities described below are illustrative of those conducted under this program during 1966. With respect to barter, the emphasis has been shifted to exports in connection with various types of offshore procurement of materials and services needed by the Department of Defense, the Agency for International Development, and other agencies, for which they repay the Corporation. Barter is also made for strategic and other materials for the supplemental stockpile but on a more limited scale. Commodities available for barter vary.

To encourage export movement from free-market supplies, as well as from its own stocks, the Corporation makes payments on wheat, wheat flour, cotton, corn, grain sorghum, barley, oats, rye, rice, flaxseed, linseed oil, butter, nonfat dry milk, milkfat, and cheese. The rate of payment generally is the difference between the prevailing world export sales price and the domestic market price. Payment is generally in the form of payment-in-kind certificates (PIK) which are redeemable by the Corporation in commodities from inventories owned by it or held as price support collateral. Persons acquire such commodities from the Corporation subject to an obligation to export the commodity. Payment-in-kind certificates may be issued in payments for some processed food grains purchased by the Corporation for use in domestic and foreign donation programs. In certain cases, costs of processing commodities owned by the Corporation for such use are also paid with payment-in-kind certificates. If commodities obtained with payment-in-kind certificates are shipped under titles I and IV of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, or the International Wheat Agreement, the value of the certificate is charged to the applicable operation.

To help develop or expand foreign markets the Corporation also furnishes farm commodities and products for samples or exhibits at international trade fairs and for use abroad in testing consumer acceptance and commercial market potentials.

To maximize exports, sales of commodities or the Corporation's interest therein are made for dollars to U.S. exporters, with payment being deferred for periods of not to exceed 36 months when covered by acceptable financial guarantees furnished to the Corporation. These deferred payment sales are commercial transactions made under the Corporation's charter authority and are to be distinguished from the long-term credit and supply contracts involving foreign assistance authorized by title IV of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended.

Storage facilities.—The Corporation conducts a program to provide storage adequate to fulfill its program needs. This program is conducted pursuant to sections 4 (h) and (m), and 5 (a) and (b) of the charter.

The Corporation buys and maintains (in storage-short areas) bins and equipment for care and storage of grain owned by Commodity Credit Corporation or under its control. It makes loans for the purchase, building, or expanding of storage facilities on the farm and sells to producers and others bins needed for the storage of grain. Bins sold by the Corporation may be those acquired for resale for this purpose or those which are no longer required by the Corporation for the storage of its own grain. The Corporation may also provide storage use guarantees, to encourage building of commercial storage and undertake other operations necessary to provide storage adequate to carry out the Corporation's programs.

Supply and foreign purchase.—The Corporation procures from domestic and foreign sources food, agricultural commodities, and products and related materials to supply the needs of Federal agencies, foreign governments, and private and international relief agencies. It similarly procures or aids in the procurement of such foods, commodities, products, and material for sale to meet domestic requirements during periods of short supply or during such other times as will stabilize prices or facilitate distribution. Through purchases, loans, sales, or other means, the Corporation may also make available materials and facilities needed for the production and marketing of agricultural commodities. This program is conducted under section 5 (b) and (c) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act.

Purchases for other Federal agencies of commodities not in the Corporation's price-support stocks has been the main activity. Purchases of limited quantities of breeder, foundation, and registered seeds of improved varieties of grasses and legumes are made through production contracts in order to assure supplies thereof for farmers. Section 4 of the act of July 16, 1943 (15 U.S.C. 713a-9), requires that the Corporation be fully repaid from funds of such agencies for services performed, losses sustained, operating costs incurred, or commodities bought or delivered to or on behalf of any other Federal agency. Operations not subject to section 4 may involve losses if such are necessary to the accomplishment of the objectives of the particular operation. No foreign purchases have been made in recent past years.

Feed grain acreage diversion program.—An acreage diversion program is conducted on 1965 and 1966 crops of feed grains by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service utilizing the facilities and stocks of the Corporation. Under this program, payments are made to farmers who divert acreage from the production of feed grains (generally corn, grain sorghum, and barley) to an approved conservation use. This program is carried out under the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended by the Feed Grain Act of 1963 (Public Law 88-26, approved May 20, 1963), and the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965 (Public Law 89-321, approved November 3, 1965).

Payments are made by the issuance of negotiable payment-in-kind certificates. The farmer may elect either to have the certificate redeemed in feed grains from the Corporation's stocks or if he requests the Corporation's assistance in the marketing of the certificate he may obtain cash by issuance by the Corporation of a negotiable sight draft. The Corporation markets rights, represented by certificates on which it has made cash advances, to buyers for redemption in feed grains from its stocks.

Wheat acreage diversion and certificate programs.—A wheat acreage diversion program and a wheat certificate program for 1965 and 1966 crops are conducted by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service utilizing the funds and facilities of the Corporation. These programs are authorized by the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962 and the Agricultural Act of 1964, and the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965.

Acreage diversion payments in the form of negotiable sight drafts are made to farmers who divert certain acres from wheat production to an approved conservation use.

Under the voluntary wheat certificate program, both domestic and export marketing certificates are issued to participating farmers which may be sold at face value to Commodity Credit Corporation. Processors of wheat are required to buy domestic certificates equivalent to the number of bushels of wheat used in the manufacture of the food product. During the 1965 marketing year processors will purchase domestic certificates at face value and during the 1966 marketing year they will purchase domestic certificates at face value less the amount by which price support for wheat accompanied by domestic certificates exceeds $2.00 a bushel. This results in the Corporation paying the difference.

Exporters may not ship abroad any wheat without buying export marketing certificates equivalent to the number of bushels exported. In the 1965 marketing year export certificates will be purchased at a fixed value with the Corporation making a refund to the exporter to the extent necessary to make U.S. wheat and flour competitive in the world market, avoid disruption of world market prices and fulfill the international obligations of the United States. In the 1966 marketing year, this will be accomplished by having export certificates of variable value.

Cotton equalization payment program.—The Corporation makes payments to cotton handlers (other than producers) to equalize the cost of raw cotton between domestic and foreign users for the period ending July 31, 1966. Inventory payments will be made on eligible cotton remaining in handlers' inventories on August 1, 1966. This program is carried out by the Corporation pursuant to the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended by the Agricultural Act of 1964 and the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965.

Payments are in the form of negotiable certificates issued by the Corporation. The handler or user may elect either to have them redeemed for upland cotton from the Corporation's stocks, to repay cotton loans, or get cash by having the Corporation assist in marketing the certificates. In the latter case, the Corporation markets the rights represented by the certificates in the same manner as it does feed grain certificates.

Cotton acreage diversion program.—Diversion payments will be made at varying payment rates to producers, depending on participation with acreage reduction provisions. Payments will be made in cash or payment-in-kind by the issuance of certificates which CCC shall redeem for cotton. CCC may assist the producers in the marketing of certificates.

Administrative expenses.—Administrative expenses are for the operating staff and the services of employees of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service engaged in the Corporation's activities, services performed by the Foreign Agricultural Service and other agencies of the Department, costs of audit, and payments to the General Services Administration for space. Estimates for 1967 include a limitation of $34.3 million for costs of administration including a reserve of not less than 7% for contingencies.

The requested authorization excludes administrative expenses in connection with the supply program, which has a markup in the sales price to cover administrative expenses, and excludes the wool and mohair program under the National Wool Act of 1954, the International Wheat Agreement, and the sale of long-staple cotton transferred from the national stockpile, which are included with the costs of those programs under "Special activities."

Nonadministrative expense.—Expenses of acquisition, operations, maintenance, improvement, or disposition of property which the Corporation owns or in which it has an interest have been treated as program rather than administrative expenses. Such expenses include inspection, classing, and grading work performed on a fee basis by Federal employees or Federal or State licensed inspectors; work performed on a contract or fee basis by Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation county committees; and special services performed by other Federal agencies outside of this Department.

Most of these general nonadministrative expenses, including storage and handling, transportation, inspection, classing and grading, and resale payments are included in program costs, in the entry entitled "Storage, transportation, and other costs not included above" in the program and financing schedule. The item "Nonadministrative expense" which appears in the schedule covers county offices, other ASCS expenses offset by revenue, custodian and agency expense of the Federal Reserve banks and lending agencies, and miscellaneous costs.

SPECIAL ACTIVITIES

These activities are carried out under authority of section 5(g) of the Corporation's charter and specific statutory authorizations or directives with respect thereto which are currently in effect or which may subsequently be enacted.

The Corporation receives appropriations or reimbursement for costs of these activities as described under each.

To the extent sufficient appropriations are not provided in advance, expenditures under titles I, II, and IV of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, and the International Wheat Agreement, and investments in materials transferred to the supplemental stockpile, are made by the Corporation subject to repayment from subsequent appropriations authorized for such purpose.

Activities currently being carried out are as follows (see Foreign assistance programs and special export programs for details of items (1)–(5)):

(1) Sale of surplus agricultural commodities for foreign currencies.

(2) Commodities disposed of for emergency famine relief to friendly peoples.

(3) Long-term credit and supply contracts.

(4) International Wheat Agreement.

(5) Bartered materials for supplemental stockpile.

(6) Military housing (barter and exchange).—During 1957, a contract was completed for the disposition of Corporation-owned commodities valued at $50 million for the construction of military housing in France with foreign currencies obtained from this transaction. Section 2681(b) of title 10, United States Code, as amended, provides for annual payment to the Corporation by the Department of Defense until liquidation of the amounts due for foreign currencies obtained under Public Law 480 for military housing. It is estimated that $2 million will be applied against the amounts due under the French housing transaction in each of 1966 and 1967.

(7) National Wool Act.—Under the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended, incentive payments are being used to encourage the annual domestic production of about 300 million pounds of shorn wool. Support of prices of wool and mohair is mandatory. Incentive payments are made to eligible producers in order to bring the national average price received by all producers up to the announced incentive level which is determined in accordance with a formula specified in the Act.

In a referendum conducted in September 1962, wool and lamb producers voted to continue the deduction from their incentive payment of an amount not to exceed 1 cent per pound of wool and 5 cents per hundredweight of unshorn lambs marketed. These funds finance promotional advertising, and related market-development activities by the American Sheep Producers' Council, Inc., under an agreement with the Secretary of Agriculture. In order to simplify program and financing operations, the marketing year under this program was placed on a calendar year basis on January 1, 1964.

Total payments made under the National Wool Act cannot at any time exceed an amount equal to 70% of the accumulated totals, as of the same date, of the gross receipts from import duties collected on and after January 1, 1953, on wool and wool manufactures. Actual and estimated payments compared with this limitation are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation are used to carry on this program. For the purpose of reimbursing the Corporation, section 705 of the act appropriates each fiscal year an amount equal to amounts expended by the Corporation during the preceding year and to amounts expended in prior fiscal years not previously reimbursed but not to exceed 70% of the gross receipts of duties on wool and certain wool products imported during the preceding calendar year.

(8) Grain for migratory waterfowl feed.—To prevent damage of crops by migratory waterfowl, the Corporation is directed to furnish to the Secretary of the Interior (7 U.S.C. 442-445) such grain acquired through price-support operations and certified by Commodity Credit Corporation as available for such purposes or in such condition as to be undesirable for human consumption, as the Secretary of the Interior shall requisition. This appropriation item is included under that Department.

(9) Surplus grain for migratory birds.—Under Public Law 87-152, approved August 17, 1961 (7 U.S.C. 448), the Secretary of the Interior may requisition grain of the Corporation to feed starving migratory birds. This appropriation item is included under that Department.

(10) Surplus grain for resident game birds.—Any State, under Public Law 87-152, upon the finding of the Secretary of the Interior that resident game birds and other resident wildlife are threatened with starvation, may requisition grain from Corporation stocks (7 U.S.C. 447). Recovery of costs of grain furnished to the States is included in the appropriation "Reimbursement for net realized losses" under Price Support and Related Programs.

(11) Grading and classing activities.—The Corporation may make advances to the Consumer and Marketing Service for classing and grading of agricultural commodities without charge to producers (7 U.S.C. 414a, 440). Such advances used for classing cotton and grading tobacco not placed under price-support loan are repaid from an appropriation of the Consumer and Marketing Service.

(12) Research to increase domestic consumption of farm commodities.—The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act of 1964 authorized the transfer of not more than $16 million from the appropriation "Removal of surplus agricultural commodities" (sec. 32) to the Corporation to be used to increase domestic consumption of surplus farm commodities, and provided for the transfer for such purposes of such sums not in excess of $25 million in any one year, as may be approved by Congress. The 1965 appropriation act authorized the transfer of $12,175 thousand of section 32 funds for this purpose. The Corporation transfers such funds to the Agricultural Research Service and Cooperative State Research Service to conduct the required research. For comparability, all transactions under this item are shown in the budget schedules for these two agencies.

(13) Research to reduce surplus commodities.—The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act of 1964 authorized Commodity Credit Corporation to transfer not to exceed $15 million to the Agricultural Research Service for utilization research and development, cost of production research, and other related research designed to reduce surplus commodities held or to be held by the Corporation. The recovery of costs of this research is included in the appropriation "Reimbursement for net realized losses."

(14) Soil bank program.—Under section 120 of the Soil Bank Act of 1956 (7 U.S.C. 1808) the Secretary of Agriculture uses the facilities of the Corporation to make payments to farmers pursuant to contracts entered into prior to repeal of that act.

(15) Cropland conversion, agricultural conservation and emergency conservation measures programs.—Under section 101 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962, Public Law 87-703, approved September 27, 1962 (16 U.S.C. 590(f)), the Secretary uses the services, facilities, and authorities of the Corporation to make payments to producers under programs formulated pursuant to sections 8 and 16(e) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended.

(16) Transfer of long-staple cotton from national stockpile for sale by Commodity Credit Corporation.—The act of July 10, 1957 (71 Stat. 290), authorized the transfer of 50,000 bales of domestically grown cotton from the national stockpile to the Corporation for sale. Also, about 219,000 bales of cotton, both American-Egyptian and foreign grown, in the stockpile were made available to the Corporation for disposition under Public Law 87-548, approved July 25, 1962. The cotton is not recorded as a Corporation asset. Proceeds less costs incurred, including administrative expenses, are covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts from time to time. No interest is paid by CCC for the use of the money prior to covering.

(17) Loans for agricultural conservation.—Under section 391(c) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1391), the Corporation advances funds to the Secretary in amounts not to exceed $50 million annually to purchase conservation materials and services. Repayments of the loans plus interest are made in the succeeding fiscal year from funds appropriated for the agricultural conservation program.

(18) Loans for Federal Crop Insurance.—The 1966 appropriation act permits the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation to borrow on a temporary basis not to exceed $250,000 from the Corporation to meet indemnity payments under special or unusual circumstances.

(19) Cropland adjustment program.—Under section 602 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965, Public Law 89-321, approved November 3, 1965, the Secretary uses the facilities and funds of the Corporation for this program. After December 31, 1966, expenditures may not be made unless CCC has received funds in advance to cover such expenditures.

(20) Sugar payments.—Under section 12 of the Sugar Act Amendments of 1965, Public Law 89-331, approved November 8, 1965, the Secretary is authorized to use the services, facilities, and authorities of the Corporation for the purpose of making disbursements. No such disbursements shall be made unless funds have been received in advance.

FINANCING

Borrowing authority.—The Corporation has an authorized capital stock of $100 million held by the United States and authority to borrow up to $14.5 billion.

Funds are borrowed from Treasury and may also be borrowed from private lending agencies. In connection with loan guarantees, the Corporation reserves a sufficient amount of its borrowing authority to purchase at any time all notes and other obligations evidencing loans made or held by lending agencies or other financial institutions or certificates of interest issued in connection with the financing of price-support operations. All bonds, notes, debentures, and similar obligations issued by the Corporation are subject to approval by the Secretary of the Treasury as required by the act of March 8, 1938 (15 U.S.C. 713a-4).

Interest on borrowings from the Treasury (and on capital stock) is paid at a rate based upon the average interest rate on all outstanding marketable obligations (of comparable maturity date) of the United States as of the preceding month. Interest is also paid on certificates of interest and lending agency obligations for the period the agencies have their funds invested.

The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1966, made provision for terminating interest after June 30, 1964, on the portion of the Corporation's borrowings from the Treasury equal to the unreimbursed realized losses recorded on the books of the Corporation after June 30 of the fiscal year in which such losses are realized.

The computation of the transfer from interest-bearing to non-interest-bearing capital is (in millions):

Realized deficit not previously reimbursed.....	$7,039	$7,413	$7,383
Less appropriations for year.....	2,674	2,800	3,556
Total.....	4,365	4,613	3,827

On the basis of the budgetary assumptions, the estimated requirements indicate no need for an increase in borrowing authority. Since there are so many uncontrollable factors involving crops which have not even been planted, it must be recognized that estimates are highly tentative.

Total statutory borrowing authority in use.....	13,540	13,594	12,483
Net statutory borrowing authority available.....	960	906	2,017

Note.—A sufficient amount of the borrowing authority is required to be reserved to cover obligations to purchase notes and certificates of interest held by financial institutions and accrued interest thereon. Such obligations, however, as well as accounts payable, accrued liabilities, and other outstanding obligations not reflected on this table, do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowings from the Treasury.

Contract authorization.—Price support and other programs required by statute may result in the Corporation incurring obligations in excess of available funds and borrowing authority. Such obligations are liquidated from subsequent appropriations. Any increase in obligations in excess of available fund resources is reported as a contract authorization in the year involved; a decrease is reported as the application of appropriations to liquidate the authorization. The budget reflects a decrease of $842 million of unfunded obligations in 1965, an increase of $745 million in 1966, and a decrease of $1,066 million in 1967.

Appropriations.—Under Public Law 87-155 (15 U.S.C. 713a-11, 12), annual appropriations are authorized for each fiscal year to reimburse the Commodity Credit Corporation for net realized losses incurred as of the close of each year.

The realized losses for the price support and related programs for 1965 were $3,045 million, and the cumulative losses not yet appropriated for were $7,410 million. However, it is estimated that an appropriation of $3,556 million would provide sufficient funds for the operations described for 1967. It would also leave a desirable operating margin to assure flexibility of operations in view of the volume of transactions handled.

The special activities are financed as indicated in the program descriptions above. In addition to certain reimbursements from other agencies, appropriations are made for the National Wool Act (see above) and for foreign assistance and special export programs (see that heading on page 162).

Deficit.—The net realized losses of the Corporation have previously been reimbursed as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Capital and deficits, special activities.—Advances to the Corporation in excess of costs incurred, and costs incurred in excess of advances received are shown in the following table (in thousands of dollars). In addition to the deficit shown on the first line here for 1964, the Corporation at that time reported an interest of $179,336 thousand in foreign currencies, dollar equivalents of which were collected in 1965, thereby reducing the requirements for 1965 appropriations.

Other obligations, contingent liabilities, and commitments do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in either borrowings from Treasury or in notes, certificates or other obligations evidencing loans held by banks and accrued interest on such obligations.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS AND SPECIAL EXPORT PROGRAMS

A number of laws provide for the facilities of the Commodity Credit Corporation to be used in carrying out programs for exporting agricultural commodities. These laws also authorize appropriations to be made to cover costs of such programs. When funds become available, advances are made to the Corporation for estimated costs. If the amounts appropriated are not adequate, the Corporation finances authorized costs, in excess of the appropriations, pending repayment from later appropriations. On the other hand, any amounts paid to the Corporation which are not used in a particular year will reduce appropriations needed for these programs in a later year.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Included in this category are the following activities currently being carried out under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, Public Law 480, 83d Congress, as amended: Sale of surplus agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I) (7 U.S.C. 1701-1709); disposition of commodities for famine relief and other foreign assistance (title II) (7 U.S.C. 1721-1724); long-term credit and supply contracts (title IV) (7 U.S.C. 1731-1736).

1. Sale of surplus agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I).—Under this title, the United States accepts foreign currency in payment for surplus agricultural commodities and their products. Sales are made to countries unable to expand commercial purchases because of a lack of dollar exchange. As the economies of countries improve, a gradual shift from title I purchases to dollar purchases occurs.

Sales are made only to “friendly nations”—as defined in section 107 of Public Law 480, 83d Congress.

Foreign currencies received are deposited to the account of the U.S. Treasury and can be used only as stated in section 104. The dollar value of such deposits through June 30, 1965, amounted to $9.3 billion.

Public Law 88-638 established an advisory committee to review the status and use of foreign currencies and recommend to the President as to how to assure maximum benefits to the United States from the use of foreign currencies and returns from sales made under title I. The committee consists of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, the Administrator of the Agency for International Development, the chairman and ranking minority member of the House Committee on Agriculture and of the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. Certain proposals for use of currencies or use of principal or interest repayments (except pursuant to appropriations) are to be submitted to those two congressional committees.

Uses fall into two groups—those of benefit to the foreign country, mainly loans and grants to promote economic development and to support common defense, and those of benefit to the United States. The latter includes among others: Expenses of the U.S. Government abroad; agricultural market development; educational exchange; construction of military family housing; sales of foreign currency to U.S. citizens and American tourists.

Foreign currencies for U.S. uses are subject to the appropriation process. Sales agreements specify particular uses, and in those entered into after December 31, 1964, at least 20% of the foreign currencies are required to be subject to the appropriation process, with certain possible exceptions. Such uses reduce dollar outflow and the deficit in the balance of payments of the United States. The Corporation is reimbursed for the dollar value of currencies so used. Beginning in 1964 such receipts were applied to reduce prior years' unrecovered costs due the Commodity Credit Corporation. Dollar repayments of foreign currency loans were also applied to repay the Corporation. Prior years' costs were fully paid during 1965. These proceeds are now applied against current costs to reflect a reduction in appropriation requests.

Section 509 of Public Law 86-500, approved June 8, 1960 (7 U.S.C. 1704b note) provides that at least 75% of the total cost of foreign military housing projects (unless otherwise specified) shall be paid from foreign currencies acquired under title I. The Department of Defense reimburses the Corporation for the foreign currencies used. Pursuant to section 2681(b) of title 10 U.S.C. as amended, the estimates reflect payment to the Corporation of $6 million each year for amounts due under Public Law 480 and the French housing barter transaction discussed under Commodity Credit Corporation. It is estimated that $4 million will be applied against Public Law 480 amounts due with a balance of $50.4 million remaining unpaid as of June 30, 1967.

Sales agreements have been signed with 49 countries. They cover sales of commodities at an export market value of over $9.4 billion. Major items are wheat, cotton, and fats and oils.

Agreements signed under title I prior to January 1, 1965, provide that the United States will finance in dollars the total U.S.-flag ocean transportation costs, and that the United States will receive foreign currencies in an amount equivalent to the foreign-flag rates. For shipments required to be made in U.S.-flag vessels under agreements signed after December 31, 1964, the foreign countries must finance in dollars the freight costs equivalent to the foreign-flag rate.

Agreements may be entered into under title I through December 31, 1966, which will call for appropriations to reimburse Commodity Credit Corporation in a total amount not in excess of $2.7 billion plus the unused portion of prior years' authorizations for title I and dollar reimbursements from foreign currency sales. Agreements may not be made during either calendar years 1965 or 1966 which call for an appropriation in excess of $2.5 billion. The estimates reflect proposed legislation to extend this program beyond December 31, 1966, the current expiration date.

2. Commodities disposed of for emergency famine relief to friendly peoples (title II).—Under this title, surplus stocks of the Commodity Credit Corporation are transferred, on a grant basis, to friendly nations or friendly peoples to meet famine or other urgent or emergency relief needs. Grants are also made under authority of this title to promote economic and community development in underdeveloped countries. The Agency for International Development is responsible for administering the title II programs.

Public Law 88-638 amended section 203 to provide that $7.5 million each year may be spent under this title to buy foreign currencies accruing under title I to meet costs (other than personnel and administrative) of co-operating sponsors, distributing agencies, and recipient agencies, such as those for essential tools and equipment. This is to assure that commodities furnished under titles II and III are used to carry out more effectively the purposes for which these commodities are furnished and to promote community and other self-help activities which would alleviate the causes of the need for such aid.

Since inception through June 30, 1965, transfer authorizations have been issued for $1,602 million worth of food, including ocean freight costs. Under section 201 of this title, $810 million (51%) was for disaster relief of victims of floods, earthquakes, droughts, and plagues; $163 million (10%) for refugee relief, and $26 million (2%) for other emergency assistance. Under section 202, $179 million (11%) was for child feeding, $401 million (25%) for economic development, and $23 million (1%) for voluntary agency programs. Also about $332 million was authorized for ocean freight costs on commodities donated under section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, making total authorizations of $1,934 million for the 11 years this program has been in effect.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS AND SPECIAL EXPORT PROGRAMS—Con.

Section 203 provides for appropriations to cover costs of this program. These include commodity costs, ocean freight on shipments under this title and ocean freight on shipments under section 416. Also authorized for payment from such appropriations are charges for general average contributions arising out of ocean transport of commodities furnished under the above two laws, as well as section 308 of Public Law 480 and section 9 of the act of September 6, 1958.

Through December 31, 1964, a total of $2,300 million of appropriations were authorized. Since 1958, these were at the rate of $300 million per calendar year. Title II, as amended by Public Law 88-638, provides that programs of assistance shall not be undertaken under title II during any calendar year beginning January 1, 1965, and ending December 31, 1966, which call for appropriations for costs incurred of more than $400 million, plus any unused prior authorization. These estimates also reflect proposed legislation to extend this program beyond the current expiration date.

3. Long-term supply contracts (title IV).—This title, which was added in 1959 and amended in 1962, provides for sales of U.S. surplus agricultural commodities under long-term credit and supply contracts. The major objective is to stimulate and increase sales for dollars through credit, thereby developing foreign markets for U.S. agricultural products and assisting the economies of friendly nations.

Generally, agreements providing for the delivery of surplus agricultural commodities over periods of up to 10 years may be entered into with the governments of friendly nations, including financial institutions acting on behalf of such nations, or with United States and foreign private trade entities. Payments in U.S. dollars for commodities delivered in each calendar year, with interest, are made over periods of up to 20 years, except in certain cases in which payment must be made within 5 years. Interest is charged from the date of last delivery of commodities under the agreement in each calendar year. Rates of interest may not be set at less than the minimum rate required by the Foreign Assistance Act for dollar repayable development loans.

Total agreements made since the inception to June 30, 1965, amounted to $625 million cost value, including ocean freight. Major commodities were wheat, cotton, rice, oils and oilseeds. Repayments for the period amounted to $15.6 million of which $10.9 million was applied to principal and the rest to interest.

Appropriations are authorized to cover costs of this program but no definite limitation is stated. Prior to 1965, appropriations were requested to cover generally the difference between total Commodity Credit Corporation costs and the agreement or export value to be paid by the foreign governments. Amounts owed by foreign governments were financed by Commodity Credit Corporation borrowing authority until collection. As the program increased, the financing of amounts due from foreign governments became a burden to the Corporation. Funds were appropriated by Public Law 89-2, joint resolution making supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1965 (79 Stat. 4), approved February 11, 1965, and by the Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1966, Public Law 89-316, to cover total estimated CCC costs less repayments anticipated to be received during the year. The same basis was used for the appropriation request for fiscal year 1967. This relieves the borrowing authority for use in its mandatory price support and related operations. The foreign governments or private entities continue to make repayments as stated in the agreements. As repayments are received each year, they are applied against current costs.

SPECIAL EXPORT PROGRAMS

In addition to the Foreign assistance programs described, the Commodity Credit Corporation conducts other special export programs under specific legislative authority. These are: International Wheat Agreement (7 U.S.C. 1641-1642); and Bartered materials for supplemental stockpile (7 U.S.C. 1856).

INTERNATIONAL WHEAT AGREEMENT

For expenses during fiscal year [1966] 1967 and unrecovered prior years' costs, including interest thereon, under the International Wheat Agreement Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1641-1642), [$27,544,000] $60,000,000, to remain available until expended. The International Wheat Agreement Act authorizes this program. Wheat and flour are made available within price ranges named in the agreement. The maximum and minimum prices are $2.02½ and $1.62½ per bushel, respectively, for the basic grade of wheat, No. 1, Manitoba Northern, at Fort William/Port Arthur, Canada.

Wheat and flour are made available through payments-in-kind to exporters of wheat and cash payments to exporters of flour. These cover the difference between the export price and the cost of wheat to exporters. If the domestic market price of wheat falls below the agreement price, exporters will make refunds of payments previously received.

Appropriations are authorized to cover costs of this program. The following shows the composition of the appropriations (in thousands of dollars):

Purpose and financial organization.—The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, a wholly-owned Government Corporation, was created on February 16, 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1501-1519), to carry out the provisions of the Federal Crop Insurance Act. The purpose of this act is to promote the national welfare by improving the economic stability of agriculture through a sound system of crop insurance and providing the means for the research and experience helpful in devising and establishing such insurance. The Corporation provides all-risk insurance protection to farmers against loss from unavoidable causes. Since 1948, the crop insurance program has been conducted on a limited basis in selected counties and on selected crops to obtain adequate actuarial data for the expansion of the program to a national basis.

Capital stock of $100 million is authorized to be subscribed by the United States. As of June 30, 1965, the Secretary of the Treasury held receipts for $40 million of the authorized stock, leaving $60 million unissued.

Funds from the issuance of capital stock provide working capital for the Corporation. Receipts which are for deposit to this fund come mainly from premiums for crop insurance. The principal payments from this fund are for indemnities to insured farmers who suffer crop losses arising from causes against which crop insurance provides protection; the direct cost of adjusting losses; and part of the administrative and operating expenses. The annual appropriation for the major portion of the administrative and operating expenses of the Corporation is presented earlier in the budget.

Budget program.—For the 1966 crop year (fiscal year 1967) it is planned that the crop insurance program will be extended to 90 new counties. The following table indicates the scope of the insurance program planned for 1965, 1966, and 1967. Amounts in the 1965 column are actual and pertain to the 1964 crop year. The 1966 column pertains to the 1965 crop year. Indemnities shown in the 1967 column are estimated at 90% of the estimated premium.

Financing.—It is estimated that the Corporation's income of $42,125,000 in fiscal year 1967, together with authorization to borrow up to $10 million from Commodity Credit Corporation will provide adequate operating funds, unless heavy unforeseen 1966 crop year losses occur early in the fiscal year prior to the collection of premiums. Therefore, no additional capital funds are being requested for program operations.

Operating results and financial condition.—Current estimates for crop year 1965, fiscal year 1966, indicate a favorable loss ratio for the eighth year, out of the past 9 years. Premiums of $36.3 million are estimated to exceed indemnities by $1.6 million. For the crop years 1948 through 1964, premium income of $348.6 million exceeded indemnity costs of $324.6 million by $24 million. Premium income exceeded indemnity costs in 10 years of the 17-year period. As of June 30, 1965, the Corporation's surplus was $1.9 million.

The Administration conducts two capital investment programs: (a) the rural electrification program to provide electric service to farms and other rural establishments; and (b) the rural telephone program to furnish and improve telephone service in rural areas. Funds for making repayable loans are borrowed from the Secretary of the Treasury.

1. Rural electrification.—This capital investment program is financed through loans which bear 2% interest and must be repaid within a period not to exceed 35 years. Loans are also made for shorter periods at 2% interest to electrification borrowers to be reloaned to their consumers for the purpose of financing the wiring of premises and the acquisition and installation of electrical and plumbing appliances and equipment, including machinery.

2. Rural telephone.—This capital investment program is financed through loans which are made for the purpose of financing the improvement, expansion, construction, acquisition, and operation of the telephone lines and facilities or systems to furnish and improve telephone service in rural areas. The loans bear 2% interest and must be repaid within a period not to exceed 35 years.

In 1950, when the telephone program started, the Census of Agriculture showed 38.2% of all farms with telephone service, fewer in both number and percentage than in 1920. Approximately 80% of the farms now have telephone service. Cumulative Rural Electrification Administration loans through June 30, 1965, will eventually provide initial or improved service to an estimated 2,044 thousand rural subscribers.

This program, authorized by Public Law 89-240, approved October 7, 1965, provides for planning grants to be made to public and private bodies with authority to prepare comprehensive plans for the development of water or sewer systems in rural areas which do not have funds available for such planning. In addition, development grants are made to associations, including nonprofit corporations and public and quasi-public agencies to finance specific projects for the development, storage, treatment, purification, or distribution of water or the collection, treatment, or disposal of waste in rural areas. The amount of the grant may not exceed 50% of the development cost of the project.

This program was authorized by section 102 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962. Loans are made to local public agencies or groups for rural renewal development projects which are specifically related to conservation and land utilization. Each project will be an important component of the overall rural renewal plan previously developed to rebuild the economy of the designated area. To be eligible for designation as a rural renewal area, the locality must be one of chronic underemployment on farms and unemployment in the surrounding communities. The area must also be one in which agriculture or forestry contribute substantially to the economy. The 1967 request is to provide for continuation of program operations in five pilot project areas.

Program operations include selection and designation of rural renewal areas technical assistance to local public bodies or officials, or organizations in the preparation of an economic development plan, and counsel to local agencies and groups for meeting legal requirements necessary for borrowing funds. The borrowing agency is designated by the State legislature or Governor to receive rural renewal loan funds and is vested with authority under State and local laws to borrow funds, buy and sell property, raise revenue, meet financial obligations and transact other necessary business functions.

Rural renewal loans are repayable in not more than 30 years with repayment of principal and interest deferred up to 5 years, if necessary. Loans bear interest at the average rate paid by the U.S. Treasury on obligations of similar maturity. The rate for 1966 is 3.222%.

Program administration.—The Farmers Home Administration has been assigned responsibility for the coordination, direction, and supervision of the rural renewal program. The principal administrative expenses are related to technical assistance, coordination of project plans and loan programs by the Farmers Home Administration. These expenses are estimated at $223 thousand in 1966 and 1967. Administrative expenses allotted to the Economic Research Service will be $27 thousand for 1966 and 1967.

Rural housing grants.—Rural housing grants are authorized by title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, to be made to farmowners, to nonfarmowners of real estate in rural areas, and to long-term farm leaseholders. Repair and improvement grants are made for minor building repair such as repairing roofs, providing sanitary facilities, providing an adequate sanitary water supply, and supplying screens. In some cases, a combination building loan and grant is made. A repair and improvement grant or a combination direct loan and grant may not exceed $1 thousand. Direct rural housing loans made in conjunction with repair and improvement grants are reflected in the rural housing direct loan account schedules.

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

Farmers Home Administration, Direct loan account.—This account was established on October 16, 1961, pursuant to section 338(c) of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961. Real estate and operating loans are made under the authorities of subtitles A and B of the act to farmers and ranchers and to associations unable to obtain credit from other sources at reasonable rates. Loans made under these and similar prior authorities are reported and accounted for in this account. In 1966, the total for loans reflected in the following schedules is $297.1 million. In 1967, it is proposed to carry out the estimated loan program of $397.1 million through utilization of receipts to the Direct loan account representing collections on loans outstanding. No new borrowing authorization is estimated for 1967.

In addition to the direct loans, farm ownership and soil and water loans advanced by private lenders will be insured within the annual statutory insurance authority of $450 million for these purposes. Contingent liabilities for these insured loans are reflected in the Agricultural credit insurance fund schedules.

1. Real estate loans.—(a) Farm ownership loans.—Direct and insured loans are made to farmers and ranchers for acquiring, enlarging, or improving farms, including farm buildings; for financing land and water development, use and conservation including recreational uses and facilities; for forestry development; for refinancing existing indebtedness; and for loan closing costs. Loans are confined to farms which are not-larger-than-family farms. A loan cannot exceed $60 thousand in any case. In addition, the indebtedness against a farm or other security, including the amount of the loan, cannot exceed $60 thousand or the normal value of the farm and any additional security.

Insured loans.....	8,804	137,591	13,400	225,000	14,000	230,000

(b) Soil and water loans.—Direct and insured loans are made to farmers and ranchers and to public and non-profit associations for the effective development and utilization of water supplies and waste disposal systems and for the improvement of farmland by soil and water conserving facilities and practices. Loans to associations also are made for shifts in land use and the development of recreational facilities. Direct land conservation and development loans to individuals are made in the Appalachian region to establish and carry out land stabilization, conservation, and erosion control practices. There is no limitation on the size of farms that may be improved with loans to individual farmers. For loans to individuals, the indebtedness against a farm or other security, including the amount of the loan, cannot exceed $60 thousand or the normal value of the farm and any additional security. For loans to associations, the unpaid principal indebtedness, together with the amount of any grant assistance is limited to $4 million.

Farm ownership, soil and water, and land conservation and development loans are repayable in not more than 40 years and bear interest not in excess of 5%. Insured loans are made through the Agricultural credit insurance fund with funds advanced by private lenders. Annual payments of principal and interest to lenders are fully guaranteed. The law provides that lenders can receive up to 5% interest. The Administration services these insured loans, makes collections, and pays the lender.

2. Operating loans.—Direct loans are made to farmers and ranchers for paying costs incident to reorganizing a farming system for more profitable operations; for a variety of essential farm operating expenses such as the purchase of livestock, farm equipment, feed, seed, fertilizer, and farm supplies; for financing land and water development, use and conservation including recreational uses and facilities; for refinancing indebtedness; for other farm and home needs; and for loan closing costs. Loans are confined to operators of not-larger-than-family farms. The outstanding principal loan balance for operating loans to any individual is limited to $35 thousand. Loans bear interest at 5% and may be made for periods up to 7 years, but may be renewed for not more than 5 additional years. Loans are secured by crop and chattel liens and, when necessary, by real estate mortgages.

Rural housing direct loan account.—This account was established in 1965 pursuant to section 518 of title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended. Public Law 89-117, approved August 10, 1965, created the Rural housing direct loan account. The law provided for transfer to the account of (a) all funds, claims, notes, mortgages, contracts, and property, and all collections and proceeds therefrom, held by the Farmers Home Administration under the direct rural housing program, including those securing notes issued by the Secretary of Agriculture to the Secretary of the Treasury for carrying out this program and any unexpended balance of amounts borrowed upon such notes, and (b) all unexpended balances of appropriations for direct rural housing loans, including the Rural housing for the elderly revolving fund. Transactions after July 1, 1964, are shown in the schedules, even though they did not actually pass through the revolving fund.

Rural housing direct loans are made on farms, in the open country, and in towns of not more than 5,500 population that are rural in character. Rural housing direct loans are also made to private nonprofit corporations and consumer cooperatives to provide modest cost rental housing and related facilities for elderly persons of low or moderate income in rural areas. Loans are made only to applicants unable to obtain housing credit from other sources upon terms and conditions which they reasonably could be expected to repay. Direct loans to individuals are repayable in not more than 33 years and bear interest at a rate not to exceed 5%. Direct loans for senior citizens rental housing are repayable in not more than 50 years and bear interest comparable to housing loans for the elderly in urban areas (currently 3%).

1. Building loans.—Direct building loans are made to farmowners, to owners of other real estate in rural areas, to long-term farm leaseholders and to other rural residents to construct, repair or replace dwellings and essential farm-service buildings. Loans may include funds to buy an older, previously occupied house, building site, and to buy farm service buildings.

2. Natural disaster loans.—Direct loans are made at 3% interest to the same persons eligible for building loans to provide for repair or replacement of farm or rural dwellings, farm service buildings and related facilities damaged by a natural disaster.

3. Loans to the elderly.—Direct building loans are made to senior citizens (62 years of age or over) to build or repair their homes or to buy a previously occupied home and building site. In the case of elderly applicants who are deficient in repayment ability, cosigners on promissory notes are permitted.

4. Elderly rental housing loans.—Direct loans are made to private nonprofit corporations and consumer cooperatives to provide modest cost rental housing and related facilities for elderly persons in rural areas with low or moderate income.

5. Enlargement and development loans.—Direct farm enlargement and development loans, along with building loans, are made to farmowners on potentially adequate farms who need to develop their farms so as to increase their income sufficiently to repay the loan.

This fund is authorized by subtitle C of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961, to finance emergency loans in areas where agricultural credit is not readily available because of natural disasters. Loans are generally confined to areas designated as emergency areas. Loans may be made outside of such areas to eligible applicants who have suffered severe production losses not general to the area. Loans also may be made to previously indebted borrowers to permit orderly repayment of such indebtedness. Public Law 89-339, approved November 8, 1965, authorized loans in the Hurricane Betsy area for a limited time with special provisions for cancellation of principal or waiver of interest up to $1,800.

Loans.—(a) Emergency loans.—Emergency loans are made at 3% interest to eligible farmers, ranchers, or oyster planters and to domestic corporations or partnerships engaged primarily in farming, ranching, or oyster planting. Loans are made for any authorized purposes for which operating, farm ownership, or soil and water loans may be made by the Farmers Home Administration.

(b) Other loans.—Where necessary to protect the Government's investment, obligations are incurred in connection with outstanding loans to provide for payment of such costs as taxes and insurance. Such advances are charged to the borrowers' accounts.

Administrative expenses.—The principal administrative expenses are related to the loan programs of the Farmers Home Administration. These expenses are estimated at $4.4 million in 1966 and $4.5 million in 1967. Administrative expenses for the Office of the General Counsel are estimated at $22 thousand in fiscal year 1966 and $23 thousand in fiscal year 1967.

Financing the program.—No new budgetary authorization is required for 1967. A net loss of $5.2 million is estimated on an accrual basis. Expenditures are estimated to exceed receipts by $3.1 million on a cash basis. During 1967, the program will be wholly financed by receipts from operations of the revolving fund.

Operating results and financial conditions.—Revenue for 1967, consisting principally of interest on loans, is estimated at $2.7 million, compared to expenses of $7.8 million, resulting in an estimated loss of $5.2 million. A net loss of $5.1 million is estimated for 1966, and a net loss of $5 million resulted in 1965.

Loans receivable, after allowance for losses, are expected to amount to $82.8 million on June 30, 1967, as compared to $85 million on June 30, 1966, and $87.3 million on June 30, 1965.

The Government investment at June 30, 1967, is expected to be $96.8 million consisting of $205.8 million appropriated and donated, less a deficit of $109 million.

This fund is used to insure farm ownership loans and soil and water loans as authorized by subtitle A of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961. The insurance endorsement on each insured loan may include an agreement by the Government to purchase the loan after a specified initial period. The initial fund of $1 million may be supplemented by amounts retained by the Government out of interest collected from insured loan borrowers and by borrowing from the Secretary of the Treasury. From any amounts so retained, not to exceed one-half of 1% of the outstanding principal obligations must be deposited to the fund to cover losses. Any remainder of such charges may be used for administrative expenses. Loans may be made directly from the fund from available receipts or borrowings from the Treasury for the purpose of acquiring blocks of loans if there is reasonable assurance that the loans can be sold to investors without undue delay. With respect to loans made from this fund, not more than $50 million for farm ownership and soil and water loans may be held in the fund at any one time. Interest paid the Secretary of the Treasury on borrowings is based on the current average market yield of outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having maturities comparable to the notes issued for borrowings from the Treasury for operation of the fund.

Budget program.—Capital outlay is estimated at $339.1 million in 1967, an increase of $13.9 million over 1966 and an increase of $101.5 million over 1965. Included in capital outlay is $196.2 million in 1966 and $209.1 million in 1967 for making loans from the fund which will later be sold on an insured basis. The increase in 1966 and 1967 in sale of loans from the fund is expected to result from the relatively favorable market for insured loans. Insured loans outstanding which are contingent liabilities against the insurance fund are expected to increase from $726.8 million on June 30, 1965, to approximately $1,007 million at June 30, 1966, and to $1,385 million by June 30, 1967.

Financing.—To finance operations, it is estimated that it will be necessary to utilize the statutory authorization to borrow from the Treasury in the net amount of $1.9 million in 1966. Net repayments to the Treasury in 1967 are estimated at $88.4 million.

Operating results and retained earnings.—Total revenue, consisting principally of loan insurance charges, is estimated at $10.1 million in 1967, an increase of about $0.6 million from 1966.

Net outstanding loans receivable of $15.9 million are estimated at June 30, 1967. Retained earnings, available to cover future losses are estimated to be $26.2 million at the end of 1967. These earnings when added to the $1 million appropriation represent a $27.2 million Government investment.

The Service provides general staff coordination of the rural areas development activities of the Department. In addition, it facilitates the effective extension into rural areas of assistance programs of other Federal agencies which do not now effectively reach rural areas. It works with local organizations and leaders in helping them to locate and use the facilities of private, State, and other Federal agencies in developing the economy of rural areas, particularly those of low income.

The Office serves as the audit and investigative arm of the Secretary of Agriculture and performs all audit and investigative activities of the Department. The Office of the Inspector General assures the Secretary of completely independent and objective selection of departmental activities to be audited; critical reviews and examination of the Department's programs and activities; and factual, unbiased reporting of the results of these audits and investigations. In so doing the Office assures that existing laws, policies, and programs are effectively complied with; and insures corrective action where necessary. It also coordinates internal audit and investigative activities of the Department with the various investigative agencies of the executive and legislative branches of the Government.

The Office serves as legal counsel for the Secretary of Agriculture and performs all legal work for the Department. It represents the Department in administrative proceedings for the promulgation of rules and regulations having the force and effect of law and in quasi-judicial hearings held in connection with the administration of Department programs. The Office also represents the Secretary in proceedings before the Interstate Commerce Commission dealing with rates and practices relating to the transportation of agricultural commodities and in appeals to the courts from the decisions of the Commission. It examines titles to lands to be acquired by the Department or accepted as security for loans, and disposes of claims arising out of the Department activities.

The Office has responsibility for the information work of the entire Department. Its major objective is to report to farmers, agricultural, and closely related groups, and to the public the Department's research, action, regulatory, and other programs, using all information media. This work is carried on in close cooperation with the land-grant institutions and with private industries which serve agriculture. Workload depends upon Department program demands, direct requests, and legislative requirements.

1. Publications review and distribution.—The Department's printed publications are reviewed, published, and distributed. Processed publications are reviewed. Publications include farmers' bulletins, leaflets, periodicals, scientific, research, and marketing publications, and agricultural statistics.

2. Review and distribution of current agricultural information.—The Department's widespread activities require extensive preparation of information material for press, radio, and television use, as well as for specific agricultural outlets and the general public. Periodic crop, price, and market reports and press releases are issued. Digests, newsletters, special articles, and other editorial services are made available to press associations, farm and general publications, trade publications, daily newspapers, and encyclopedic annuals. Radio is used to reach farmers locally through single stations, and to broadcast nationally through the major networks. Films, television packages, and other services are prepared for the use of land-grant institutions, television farm broadcasters, and TV networks. Information campaigns involving activities of cross-agency interest are developed using all media. The Yearbook of Agriculture is published by the Office and distributed by the Members of Congress.

3. Review, preparation, and distribution of visual agricultural information.—Motion pictures for the Department and nonprofit organizations associated with agriculture, produced on a reimbursable basis under the Department's working capital fund, are distributed through cooperating State film libraries. Still photographs, illustrations, graphics, and exhibits are similarly produced for use in explaining and reporting on Department programs. News and general-type photographs of Department programs and activities are available to news media from a centralized library.

The National Agricultural Library, cooperating jointly with the two other national libraries—the Library of Congress and the National Library of Medicine—provides coverage and servicing of worldwide publications in the agricultural, chemical, and biological sciences. It serves the research, extension, regulatory, and other programs of the Department and State agricultural agencies. It contains approximately 1,248,000 volumes, probably the most extensive agricultural collection in existence. Since the Library's primary purpose is to provide for research needs, substantive publications in the animal sciences, plant sciences, agricultural chemistry, agricultural engineering, soils, forestry, agricultural products, home economics, world sociology, agricultural economics and agricultural statistics are acquired and preserved. Publications are regularly acquired from more than fifty countries on subjects ranging from apiculture to zootomy. In addition, printed information of agricultural societies, organizations, co-operatives, and general material in the field of agriculture are collected and made available for use.

Information contained in the agricultural literature is disseminated through bibliographies, loans, photocopies and reference services to agricultural colleges and universities, research institutions, Government agencies, agricultural associations, industry, individual scientists, farmers, and the general public in every part of the world.

During 1965, 241,193 separate issues of periodicals were added to the collection by purchase, gift, and exchange. During the same period 240,866 loans of books and periodicals were made and 114,702 reference questions answered.

The increase proposed for 1967 would be used to: provide urgently needed services to scientists and to acquire, catalog, maintain and service publications; automate those functions which will permit the Library to provide broader services and/or a cost savings per unit of work; coordinate scientific and technical information activities of the Department of Agriculture.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1964, $0; 1965, $8 thousand; 1966, $8 thousand; 1967, $8 thousand.

The Office of Management Services provides consolidated and centralized management support services to several agencies and offices of the Department. It was established by Secretary's Memorandum No. 1529, dated January 29, 1963, to provide greater economy and effectiveness in the rendering of management service and advice through: Improved utilization of manpower and management techniques, increased specialization of professional skills, and more extensive use of timesaving equipment.

The consolidated management support functions include budget and finance, personnel and related programs, administrative services, and public information work. These functions are financed by direct appropriation to OMS, except for any agency activity performed for others on a reimbursable or advance payment basis. OMS is reimbursed for management support of these activities.

The organization structure of OMS is based upon these functions with operating divisions providing the services for the following agencies and offices: Office of the Secretary, Office of Budget and Finance, Office of Hearing Examiners, Judicial Officer, Office of Management Appraisal and Systems Development, Office of Personnel, Office of Plant and Operations, Rural Community Development Service, Office of Information, National Agricultural Library, Office of the General Counsel, Office of the Inspector General, Farmer Cooperative Service, Commodity Exchange Authority, Cooperative State Research Service, Economic Research Service, and Statistical Reporting Service.

General administration covers the overall planning, coordination and administration of the Department's programs. Also included are certain services on a Department-wide basis.

2. Budgetary and financial administration.—This covers departmental budgetary and financial management; policies and procedures are promulgated, and programs and legislative proposals are evaluated for budgetary, financial, and related implications.

3. General operations.—These embrace departmental policies and procedures for real and personal property, and supply and records management activities. Department-wide central services of post office, telephone, telegraph, reproduction and supply are furnished.

4. Management appraisal and systems development.—This covers the coordination and direction of the development of new and improved management techniques, acquisition and utilization of data processing equipment, development of methods of measuring the effectiveness of program operations, and the application of operations research techniques to the administrative, program and scientific activities of the Department.

5. Personnel administration.—This covers general direction, leadership, and coordination of the personnel management program of the Department. Departmental policies and procedures are issued and the office coordinates a review program to evaluate the effectiveness of agency personnel programs. The cost reduction and management improvement programs for the Department are also administered by this office.

6. Regulatory hearings and decisions.—The hearing examiners hold hearings in connection with the prescribing of new regulations and orders and on disciplinary complaints filed by the Department or on petitions filed by private parties asking relief from some action of the Department. Final administrative decisions in regulatory proceedings are rendered by the judicial officer. "Agriculture Decisions" is published monthly.

This appropriation is to finance the National Advisory Commission on Food and Fiber established by Executive Order 11256, dated November 4, 1965. This Commission was set up to assist the President's Committee on Food and Fiber which was established by the same executive order.

FOREST SERVICE

The Service carries on three primary functions: (a) protection, development, and use of about 186 million acres of land in national forests and national grasslands in the United States and Puerto Rico; (b) forestry research for all public and private forest lands and related ranges to improve protection from fire, insects, and diseases; to increase production of timber, forage, water, and other products; to improve methods for developing and managing recreation resources; to develop better utilization and marketing of forest products; and to maintain a current inventory of forest resources through a nationwide forest survey; and (c) cooperation with States and private forest land owners to obtain better fire protection on approximately 450 million acres of forest land and nonforest watersheds, and better forest practices on about 358 million acres of privately owned commercial timberlands, to encourage reforestation and stimulate development and management of State, county, and community forests. These primary functions include construction and maintenance of roads and trails, control of forest pests, protection against floods, land acquisition and exchange, and a number of cooperative projects.

FOREST PROTECTION AND UTILIZATION

For expenses necessary for forest protection and utilization, as follows:

Forest land management: For necessary expenses of the Forest Service, not otherwise provided for, including the administration, improvement, development, and management of lands under Forest Service administration, fighting and preventing forest fires on or threatening such lands and for liquidation of obligations incurred in the preceding fiscal year for such purposes, control of white pine blister rust and other forest diseases and insects on Federal and non-Federal lands; [$162,318,000] $172,856,000, of which $5,000,000 for fighting and preventing forest fires and $1,910,000 for insect and disease control shall be apportioned for use, pursuant to section 3679 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, to the extent necessary under the then existing conditions: Provided, That not more than [$680,000] $2,480,000 of this appropriation may be used for acquisition of land under the Act of March 1, 1911, as amended (16 U.S.C. 513-519): Provided further, That funds appropriated for "Cooperative range improvements", pursuant to section 12 of the Act of April 24, 1950 (16 U.S.C. 580h), may be advanced to this appropriation.

Forest research: For forest research at forest and range experiment stations, the Forest Products Laboratory, or elsewhere, as authorized by law; [$36,689,000] $34,435,000.

State and private forestry cooperation: For cooperation with States in forest-fire prevention and suppression, in forest tree planting on non-Federal public and private lands, and in forest management and processing, and for advising timberland owners, associations, wood-using industries, and others in the application of forest management principles and processing of forest products, as authorized by law; [$17,513,000] $17,897,000.

[For an additional amount for forest research, $75,000.] (5 U.S.C. 511-512, 524, 565a; 7 U.S.C. 428a, 1010-1012, 1621-1627; 16 U.S.C. 207c, 471-583i, 594-1-594-5, 594a, 1004-1005; 30 U.S.C. 601-604, 611-615; 31 U.S.C. 534; 42 U.S.C. 1891-1893; 43 U.S.C. 1181h-1181j; 36 Stat. 557-579; 79 Stat. 13; Department of the Interior and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1966; Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1966.)

1. Forest land management—(a) National forest protection and management.—The 154 national forests and 19 units of national grasslands are managed under multiple use and sustained yield principles. The natural resources of outdoor recreation, range, timber, watershed, and wildlife are utilized in a planned combination that will best meet the needs of the Nation without impairing productivity of the land. These management and utilization principles were recognized in the Multiple Use-Sustained Yield Act of June 12, 1960 (74 Stat. 215). Work programs and budget estimates are related to the development program for the national forests, a plan to meet the increasing demands for specific national forest resource needs through 1972 and for long-term objectives to the year 2000. Increases are provided in the budget to further attainment of these program objectives. Construction funds of $22.9 million in 1966 and $22.5 million in 1967 are budgeted, compared with $21.4 million used in 1965, for construction or rehabilitation of campground and picnic facilities and other recreation improvements, the construction of dwellings or barracks for employee housing, fire lookouts, service and storage buildings, communication facilities, and other improvements. Funds appropriated under Cooperative range improvements are merged with this appropriation for obligational purposes.

(b) Water resource development related activities.—This activity provides for the development of recreational facilities and for other activities required by water resource projects of other agencies located within or adjacent to the national forests.

(c) Fighting forest fires.—This provides for employment of additional manpower and other facilities for forest fire emergencies which cannot be met by the fire control organization provided under national forest protection and management. Costs above the amounts estimated for the current and budget years are authorized to be met from advances from other Forest Service appropriations. In addition, a supplemental appropriation for fighting forest fires is anticipated for 1966 under Proposed for later transmission.

Forest fires controlled (number)	9,749	9,500	11,000
Area burned (acres)	183,154	70,000	150,000

(d) Insect and disease control.—Activities to suppress and control destructive insects and diseases that threaten timber areas include two types of work carried on jointly by Federal, State, and private agencies: (1) Surveys on forest lands to detect and evaluate infestations of forest insects and infections of tree diseases and determination of protective measures to be taken, and (2) control operations to suppress or eradicate forest insects and diseases, including white pine blister rust.

(e) Acquisition of lands.—Lands are purchased to protect the watersheds of navigable streams and to increase the production of timber with the approval of the National Forest Reservation Commission.

2. Forest research.—Research is conducted at 9 regional forest experiment stations, the Forest Products Laboratory, and elsewhere.

(a) Forest and range management.—This research provides private and public land managers and owners with a sound basis for management of timber, forage, and watershed lands. Studies are conducted to maintain a sustained yield of products at the lowest possible costs; increase forage for domestic livestock and improve habitat for wildlife without damage to soil, watershed, or other values; assure maximum regular flow of usable water, and reduce floods and sedimentation; and improve methods for developing and managing recreation resources.

(b) Forest protection.—Research is conducted to develop sound measures for the protection of forests from damage by fire, insects, and diseases. Forest fire research provides improved methods of predicting fire danger, and preparing for and combating fire by combinations of ground and aerial methods. Insect and disease research develops direct controls, silvicultural measures, and biological agents to combat forest pests.

(c) Forest products and engineering.—Studies are conducted to develop new and improved forest products, reduction and utilization of waste, and use of low-quality wood and less-desirable species. They include studies to reduce costs of logging and wood utilization, and to develop basic knowledge of wood and disseminate this to forest owners, manufacturers, fabricators, and consumers. Research is also conducted to advance the mechanization and efficiency of forestry operations, and to develop and evaluate machines and similar equipment for such operations as logging, planting, timber-stand improvement, and protection of forests.

(d) Forest resource economics.—These investigations are conducted to inventory and appraise the condition of forest lands, volume and quality of standing timber, ownership of timber resources, annual growth and depletion, and the potential need for timber products. Studies of the economics of forest crop production and of marketing of forest products are also included.

3. State and private forestry cooperation.—This program, carried on in cooperation with the States, encourages private timber management. Privately owned forest lands comprise three-fourths of the Nation's commercial forest area and produce about 75% of all timber cut.

(a) Forest fire control.—Assistance is furnished 49 States in preventing and suppressing forest fires on private and State owned lands by financial aid, training, procurement of equipment, and a nationwide fire prevention campaign. About 87% of the 519 million acres of non-Federal ownership planned for protection is now covered. During 1964 the acreage burned on protected areas was 0.4% as against an estimated 7.3% on unprotected lands. Of the total expenditures under this program, 82.5% is contributed by States and counties, 1.5% by private owners, and 16% by the Federal Government.

(b) Forest tree planting.—To encourage woodland owners to reforest unproductive portions of their holdings, and farmers to plant wind barriers around their fields and farmsteads—a total of more than 70 million acres altogether—the States provide planting stock at reasonable prices. The Federal Government shares the cost of producing the stock with the State and private land owners.

(c) Forest management and processing.—In cooperation with 49 States and Puerto Rico, technical assistance is given to woodland owners in applying good multiple use management to their forest holdings. Also, assistance is provided operators of small primary forest products manufacturing plants to improve their production and marketing. In 1965, 99,074 owners and 9,248 processors were assisted.

(d) General forestry assistance.—Technical forest management assistance is provided to State, community, private, and other Federal agencies, forest industries, colleges, and landowners.

Roads and trails are essential to protection and management of national forests and utilization of their resources. The system consists of approximately 188,133 miles of earth- or gravel-surfaced roads and 102,947 miles of supplemental trails.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1964 provides authorization of $85 million for 1966 and $85 million for 1967. These authorizations are available for obligation a year in advance of the year for which authorized. The Pacific Northwest Disaster Relief Act of 1965 provided an additional $38 million authorization for rehabilitation and restoration of flood damaged roads. The 1967 program will involve the construction and reconstruction of about 811 miles of general purpose and recreation roads, and about 794 miles of timber access roads to harvest national forest timber, a total of approximately 1,605 miles. This compares with 1,613 miles built in 1965 and 1,386 miles being built in 1966. In addition, an estimated 12,000 miles of flood damaged roads have been, or will be, repaired during the period 1965-67.

Of the amounts received annually from National Forest activities, 10% is available under the permanent appropriation Roads and Trails for States, for construction and maintenance within the State from which such proceeds are derived. Such amounts are merged with this appropriation for obligational purposes.

Public Law 89-226, approved October 1, 1965, authorized the acquisition of approximately 10,000 acres of nonfederally owned land within the Uinta National Forest in Utah to promote the control of floods and the reduction of soil erosion through restoration of adequate vegetative cover. The Act provides $300 thousand for purchase of these lands which are in a single ownership. The land is located on the South Fork of the Provo River and constitutes the watershed from which the city of Provo draws its municipal water supply.

Public Law 87-661, approved September 14, 1962, added some 24,000 acres to the Wasatch National Forest in Utah, of which only approximately 5,000 acres in scattered tracts are now in Federal ownership. The act authorizes the appropriation of $400 thousand for purchase of privately owned lands within the area to aid in the control of floods and reduction of soil erosion as the primary value of these lands is for watershed purposes. The 1965 appropriation completed the authorization. As of June 30, 1965, approximately 10,000 acres of land have been acquired.

This fund finances on a reimbursable basis various services such as repairing and replacing equipment, including aircraft, stocking and issuing supplies, operation of subsistence camps, operation of sign shops, photographic and reproduction facilities, and tree nurseries in support of programs of the Forest Service (16 U.S.C. 579b, as amended). These service operations serve programs of fire protection, timber utilization, construction and maintenance of roads and other improvements, reforestation, grazing, watershed, forest and forest products research, and kindred conservation activities of the Forest Service, including cooperative assistance with other Federal agencies, States, counties, and individuals engaged in the same objectives.

Operating results and financial condition.—Government investment in the fund as of June 30, 1965, including donated assets and retained earnings for fiscal year 1965, is $34,730 thousand. By the end of 1967, the investment is anticipated to be $41,247 thousand, an increase of $6,517 thousand which represents estimated earnings and donations during 1966 and 1967.

Retained earnings as of June 30, 1967, will total an estimated $9,900 thousand of which $7,146 thousand will have been invested in additional equipment and increased cost of equipment replaced; $1,458 thousand will be reserved for increased cost of equipment to be replaced and $1,296 thousand will provide adequate working capital for operation of the fund.

Grants for local development districts and for research and demonstration projects.—Organizational and educational leadership is provided for the stimulation of local initiative, directly or through the Appalachian Regional Commission. In collaboration with the Appalachian Regional Commission guidance is provided for the preparation of budgets for local development districts, comprised of States, multicounty units, or single counties in the Appalachian region. Budgets prepared by these local development districts and the recommendations of the Appalachian Regional Commission thereon, as well as other required documentation are reviewed, evaluated, and approved, and funds are made available for their execution. Approved administrative expense grants are monitored through the review of periodic reports submitted by the grantees. As necessary, advice is provided on changes or modifications in these budgets. Also, aid is provided to local communities, States, or to the region as a whole through appropriate investigation, studies, research, or demonstration projects.

prepared project proposals for supplemental grants, together with accompanying recommendations by the Appalachian Regional Commission and other required documentation, are reviewed. Evaluation is accomplished in close collaboration and after consultation with other Federal departments and agencies and the Appalachian Regional Commission. It involves, on the part of these other agencies or the Appalachian Regional Commission determinations of economic and engineering feasibility as well as the consideration of such factors as revenues to be derived from the proposed facilities on completion. On approval, the funds are made available for the implementation of individual projects. Approved projects are monitored through those Federal departments or agencies which administer the basic grant-in-aid program.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1965, $0; 1966, $196,200 thousand; 1967, $303,840 thousand.

Direct and supplementary grants are made to States and their political subdivisions, Indian tribes, and private or public nonprofit associations representing a redevelopment area to assist in the construction or improvement of development facilities which will (1) tend to improve opportunities for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial facilities; (2) otherwise assist in the creation of additional long-term employment opportunities in the area; or (3) primarily benefit the long-term unemployed and members of low-income families or otherwise substantially further the objectives of the Economic Opportunity Act.

1. Grants supplementary to other Federal programs of grant assistance are made so as to enable the applicant to meet his share of the required local contribution for programs for which he is eligible but where, because of his economic situation, he cannot supply the required matching share.

2. Direct grants of up to 50% and supplementary grants can be made for development facilities where there are no existing grant programs or where existing programs lack financial resources to make a basic grant.

In all cases grants may be made up to a total Federal contribution of 80%. Basic grants are limited to 50%; the amount of supplementary grant will be determined on the basis of the relative needs of the area and the nature of the project, less the amount of fair user charges or other project revenues which could be used to repay a loan.

1. Technical assistance and research.—Communities are aided in their planning for economic development by the provision of technical assistance useful in alleviating or preventing conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment including project planning and feasibility studies, management and operational assistance, and studies evaluating the needs of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of eligible redevelopment areas. Grants-in-aid are provided for economic planning staff and up to 75% of administrative expenses for public or private nonprofit State, area, district, or local organizations. A program of research into the causes and possible cures of unemployment and underemployment is undertaken.

2. Community assistance.—Leadership is provided for the stimulation of local initiative toward redevelopment activities at all levels. Locally prepared economic development programs are reviewed and assistance provided in the development of proposals to carry out these programs. Redevelopment guidance is provided in the form of surveys and consultation on special community problems and advice on training and retraining problems. Special analyses are prepared to establish policies and guidelines in establishing project priorities, resolving industry capacity and competition, evaluating proposals for the utilization of new products and processes, technical assistance and research proposals are evaluated and guided, and determinations made as to the areas eligible for assistance under the program.

Multicounty economic development districts are designated to broaden economic redevelopment efforts beyond individual redevelopment areas. Districts must include at least two redevelopment areas, be of sufficient size and potential to foster economic growth on a scale involving more than a single area, and contain one or more economic development centers. Financial assistance in the form of grants and loans for development facilities, industrial and commercial loans and working capital loan guarantees are provided designated economic development centers outside redevelopment areas. To encourage redevelopment areas to participate in multicounty development activities, grants for development facilities projects in such redevelopment areas may be increased by 10% of the total project cost, providing the local area contributes at least 20% of the total cost. Under the terms of the Act, financial assistance can first be provided August 26, 1966.

The Public Works and Economic Development Act provides for long-term loans at low interest rates to aid in the construction or expansion of development facilities and of commercial or industrial facilities for the purpose of alleviating unemployment and underemployment within designated areas. Working capital loans made by private lenders in connection with Economic Development Administration commercial and industrial loans may be guaranteed for up to 90% of the outstanding balance. Interest rates are set by law and are at 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ % for 1966 for development facilities loans. Interest rates on commercial and industrial loans are at 4 $\frac{1}{4}$ % in 1966. Development facilities loans may run for 40 years and commercial and industrial loans up to 25 years. Loans may be made to States, localities, and public or private nonprofit organizations representing redevelopment areas when (a) the area is designated as a redevelopment area; (b) the project is consistent with an approved overall economic development program; (c) the project will provide more than temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment; or assist in the creation of additional long term employment opportunities; (d) assistance will not be given to establishments that in relocating would cause unemployment in the originating area; (e) financial assistance is not otherwise available from private lenders or Federal agencies on terms that would permit accomplishment of the project; and (f) applicants have been approved by a State and local agency directly concerned with problems of economic development in the area.

Budget program.—Reservations for development facilities loans for 1967 are estimated at $31 million, and for commercial and industrial loans at $66.5 million. Fund reservations are made on approval of the Administrator and are converted into obligations upon acceptance of the offer by the borrower. Reservations for working capital loan guarantees for 1967 are estimated at $12 million, with $3 million being set aside to cover the contingency of losses. An estimated two-thirds of EDA's commercial and industrial loans will have companion working capital loan guarantees. Workload for these guarantees is included with the workload for commercial and industrial loans. Workload for development facilities loans, which are processed simultaneously with their companion grants, is included with the workload for the Development Facilities Grants appropriation. The principal workload stages for commercial and industrial loans are as follows:

Denied during initial screening.....	100
Cleared for detailed processing.....	200
Completed detailed processing.....	200
Denied after detailed processing.....	70
Approved.....	130
Obligated.....	130

The relationship between reservations and obligations is set forth in the following table (in millions of dollars):

	Development facilities loans	Commercial and industrial loans
Reservations.....	31.0	66.5
Reservations brought forward.....	---	5.0
Reservations carried forward.....	---	-5.0
Loans (obligations).....	31.0	66.5

Financing.—The program was financed by a direct appropriation of $105 million in 1966. An $85 million appropriation to the revolving fund established by law is requested for 1967.

Operating results.—During the early stages of the program, revenues are expected to lag behind expenses. The deficit results primarily from the allowance for losses, which is established at the rate of 3% for development facilities loans and 6% for commercial and industrial loans.

This appropriation funded the operations and technical assistance activities of the Area Redevelopment Administration. The work program was divided as follows:

1. Operations.—Leadership was provided for the stimulation of local initiative toward redevelopment activities. Locally prepared economic development programs were reviewed, and project proposals for assistance to carry out such programs were evaluated and approved. Redevelopment guidance was provided in the form of surveys, technical data, procurement information, and consultation on special community problems.

2. Technical assistance.—Communities were aided in preparing economic development plans by providing basic information on natural resources, manpower, and the uses to which these can be put to establish stable and diversified local economies. Investigations were also made of State and regional economic development opportunities and of new or improved uses of resources in specific areas.

The Area Redevelopment Administration expired on August 31, 1965.

Grants were made to States and their political subdivisions, Indian tribes, and private or public nonprofit associations representing a development area, to assist in the construction or improvement of public facilities, in cases where the public facility project would improve opportunities for the location or expansion of industrial plants and facilities providing more than temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment. Grants were awarded only when the area had an approved overall economic development program, when the grant was necessary in order for the project to be undertaken, and the entity which requested the grant was contributing in proportion to its ability. Statutory authorization expired August 31, 1965.

The Census Bureau is the largest general-purpose statistical agency of the Federal Government. The principal programs carried out under the appropriation Salaries and expenses are:

1. Retail, wholesale, and service.—Estimates of retail sales are prepared weekly and monthly. Weekly estimates are on a national basis showing summary kind-of-business detail. Monthly estimates show individual kind-of-business detail on the national level, and summary kind-of-business detail for other geographic areas, including some standard metropolitan statistical areas. A county business patterns report, providing data on employment and payrolls by detailed kinds of business and by individual county, is prepared annually; this report covers most nonfarm paid employment included in the social security program.

In 1967, information will be provided regarding retail sales by merchandise lines.

2. Manufacturing and industrial.—Periodic surveys are made of production, shipments, orders, and materials consumed for important industries and products. Data are provided monthly on manufacturers' sales, orders, and inventories for total manufacturing and for about 35 industry breakdowns. An annual survey of manufactures produces data on the number, size, industrial classification, and location of manufacturing establishments and on measures of factory operations such as employment, value added by manufactures, shipments, inventories, and investment. Data are also developed to provide measures of the forces changing the location, structure, and growth of industry.

3. Transportation.—Methods are developed and tested for undertaking periodic surveys in transportation areas as directed by statutory requirements, and a catalog of available transportation data is prepared.

4. Foreign trade and shipping.—Monthly, quarterly, and annual reports are published on the kind, quantity, shipping weight, dollar value of imports and exports, and mode of shipping. The appropriation for 1965 and 1966 includes funds to provide more detailed information regarding the production and importation of footwear.

5. State and local governments.—Reports are published annually regarding the revenue, expenditures, indebtedness and debt transactions, financial assets, employment, and payrolls of State and local governments. Quarterly information on the national level is furnished regarding State and local tax revenue by type of tax and governmental level. Consultation is provided to State and local government officials concerning the availability and use of statistical information.

6. Construction and housing.—Monthly reports are published for housing starts, residential construction authorized by building permits, and the value of new construction put in place. Annual reports are provided on expenditures for residential alterations and repairs. National and regional quarterly estimates are provided for housing vacancy rates, and technical assistance is available to local areas wishing to conduct vacancy surveys.

7. Agriculture.—Information on cotton ginnings and production, as required by statute, is compiled and published. Statistical services are provided regarding the information from the census of agriculture.

8. Population.—This activity includes current estimates of the number of households, the farm population, school enrollment, personal income, population mobility, and other characteristics of the population, as well as data concerning consumer buying intentions. It also provides annual estimates of the population of the United States, of each of the States, and for a limited number of standard metropolitan statistical areas. The developmental program is underway to prepare local area estimates of population and income through the use of administrative records. This program will be expanded in 1967, and developmental work will be undertaken to provide more comprehensive income figures.

9. Statistical abstract and special reports.—The "Statistical Abstract," issued annually, summarizes government and private statistics on the industrial, social, political, and economic activities of the United States. Seasonally adjusted business cycle indicators are published monthly in the "Business Cycle Developments" report.

In 1966 an annual report on "Long-Term Economic Trends" will be published. Other general reports are published periodically.

10. Research and development.—Research is conducted on statistical survey methods and techniques, including sample survey methods and theory, questionnaire design, response errors, equipment design and utilization, and administrative operations for the purpose of increasing accuracy, output, and usefulness of statistical data per unit of cost.

Work will be continued to establish the basis for collecting data by mail for the Nineteenth Decennial Census. A major part of the work will consist of developing and testing operating procedures and establishing a computer-based geographic coding system to assign individual addresses to the geographic areas which must be identified in the Census publications. Work will continue on the exploration of problems in connection with census taking in hard-to-enumerate areas, questionnaire design under self-enumeration conditions, statistical measures relating to condition of housing, and related problems.

In order to meet the workload requirements of the upcoming major censuses, this program will replace two obsolete computers with one modern, more efficient computer, and provide peripheral equipment to increase the capacity and efficiency of the Bureau's electronic computing facility. During 1967, the site will be prepared, operations and maintenance personnel will be trained, the obsolete computers will be removed, and peripheral equipment will be purchased to increase the capacity and efficiency of the remaining computers. The replacement computer will be purchased in 1968.

² Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are derived at cost from State and local governments for special statistical work (13 U.S.C. 8(d)).

The Bureau of the Census undertakes work for governmental and other bodies to the extent that such work meets desirable public needs, can be performed without adversely affecting activities financed from appropriated funds, and can be more appropriately or efficiently performed by Census than by the sponsor agency. Within this framework, Census makes available skills, resources, equipment, and other specialized services on either an operating or consulting basis to carry out or advance the statistical programs of the Federal Government.

The Business and Defense Services Administration assists the Secretary of Commerce in meeting his responsibilities for promoting the Nation's economic growth by providing advisory and analytical services to both the business community and Government. Industrial and commercial data are analyzed and appraised and basic, special, and periodic reports are published for use by business and industry in planning and conducting its own affairs, and for the use of Government agencies that have legislative or regulatory responsibilities that affect business. Industrial capabilities to meet the requirements for industrial production in a national emergency are measured and assistance is provided to industry in military procurement programs.

To stimulate and expand the foreign commerce of the United States, thereby increasing the Nation's economic growth, profits for industry, and reducing the deficit in our balance of payments. Specialists on foreign countries and on foreign commerce provide information and service to U.S. firms now engaged in international trade and encourage and assist other U.S. firms to enter the export market. These specialists analyze and provide information to U.S. business on economic and market conditions of foreign countries, and on commercial laws and regulations affecting business and related fields vital to foreign trade expansion. Special techniques used overseas to further the promotion of U.S. exports include trade centers, commercial trade fairs, trade missions, business information centers, sample display services, mobile trade fairs, and America Week promotions.

Export controls are necessary to protect the domestic economy from excessive drain of scarce commodities, to safeguard the national security by regulating exports of strategic commodities, and to implement U.S. foreign policy. Since some countries continue to constitute a threat to the security and welfare of the United States, these controls must be continued and, as necessary, extended to other areas to guard against transshipment to unauthorized destinations. The Bureau of Customs is responsible for the policing of shipments at points of export.

The Office of Field Services serves as the local point of contact with the American business community for the Department of Commerce to carry out its statutory responsibilities to develop, foster, and promote foreign and domestic commerce in the continuing program to increase U.S. economic growth.

Program operations are conducted through 42 field offices which are located in important commercial and industrial centers throughout the United States and its possessions. The close liaison that the field offices provide between the Department and the business public assures a continuing direct contact point for disseminating information regarding the Department's accelerated programs to promote trade, to expand U.S. exports, to develop investment opportunities, to correlate and publish essential business and economic statistics, to administer the Export Control Act, to explain loan and credit facilities, and to publicize the results of Government-generated research and development.

The field offices are manned by personnel skilled in both domestic and international trade. Continuing contact is maintained within and without the office to assure knowledge and utilization of the valuable services and facilities that the Department offers to American business.

Established by title X of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 the Service provides conciliation services, information, and technical assistance in communities where disputes over compliance with civil rights laws disrupt, or threaten to disrupt, peaceful relations among citizens, and also where efforts are being made to develop programs and procedures designed to further compliance and reduce and prevent racial tensions and disorders.

By law, the Service may assist communities upon request of local citizens or officials, or upon its own motion; Federal courts may also refer cases arising under title II public accommodations cases to the Service.

To create a climate of compliance and racial peace, the Service seeks, encourages, and utilizes the cooperation of appropriate Federal, State, and local agencies, private and public groups or institutions, and individuals working to develop methods and programs for the peaceful resolution of racial disputes. Vital to this effort, is the Community Relations Service National Citizens Committee, appointed by the President, whose membership is pledged to equal opportunities and who work in close cooperation with the Service.

In carrying out the mandate of Congress, the Service must conduct its activities in confidence and without publicity, and the staff must hold confidential any information so acquired.

The United States Travel Service develops, plans, and carries out a program to stimulate and encourage travel to the United States by residents of foreign countries. The principal program activities are carried out by a travel promotion division which supervises (1) the creation and placement of trade and consumer travel advertising, (2) production and distribution of sales promotion materials to the public and the travel industry abroad, (3) solicitation and writing of timely travel articles for placement in the foreign press, (4) production of travel films for use overseas, and (5) the operation of overseas offices for answering travel inquiries and for carrying out promotional activities at the local level; by a visitor services division which works with the domestic travel industry and with U.S. communities for improving the reception, service, and hospitality given to foreign visitors; and by a facilitation and planning division which conducts research programs in the support of promotional activities and works with other foreign and U.S. Government agencies to reduce official barriers to travel. In 1966 11 overseas travel information offices will serve as centers for answering public and trade inquiries on U.S. travel and as headquarters for sales calls and other promotional activities. For 1967, funds are requested to intensify and further develop these existing programs.

An average annual gain of 8.8% in the flow of overseas business and pleasure visitors to the United States was made in the 9-year period prior to the establishment of the United States Travel Service in 1961. Since establishment, the corresponding gains have been 17% in 1962, 22% in 1963, and 31% in 1964. As a result of these increases, the overseas portion of the travel deficit in the U.S. balance of payments has remained stable at approximately $764 million a year since 1960.

1. Geophysical service.—This activity covers four areas, i.e., geodesy, geomagnetism, seismology, and aeronautical charting.

Within these areas, programs are directed toward precise measurement of physical parameters of the earth; operation of seismograph stations throughout the world to determine location of earthquakes; improved information on the distribution of the earth's magnetic field, as to both its strength and direction; and production and maintenance of aeronautical charts and related publications needed for navigation in the airspace of the United States and its possessions.

The 1967 estimate provides for operating the geomagnetic data center; operating new seismological observatories; continuing earthquake engineering studies; and maintenance of aeronautical charts.

2. Telecommunications and space environment service.—This activity provides for the collection, analysis, archiving, and dissemination of information on the propagation of electromagnetic waves, on the related electromagnetic properties of the atmosphere, on the nature of electromagnetic noise and interference, and on the methods for the more efficient use of the electromagnetic spectrum for telecommunication purposes. The 1967 increase is for strengthening the space disturbance forecasting and data center programs.

3. Oceanographic and hydrographic service.—Programs in this activity are directed toward such end products as tide tables and current charts; sea level information; the results of exploration and survey of the Continental Shelf and the deep sea presented as published papers, reports, and maps; and requirements for adequate nautical charts and related publications.

The 1967 estimate provides for expansion of oceanic and hydrographic surveying, including the operation of two new ocean survey ships and four hydrographic replacements, strengthening the Marine Science Centers, and additional support for the National Oceanographic Data Center.

4. Weather and river service.—This activity is concerned with weather conditions, both past and current. Weather and river conditions are measured, described, analyzed and warnings of weather, storms and floods are prepared and disseminated to provide maximum benefit to the Nation. Other functions include the processing, analysis, and archiving of past weather records and the operation of climatological observation networks, the archiving and retrieval of meteorological (including satellite) data, and the analysis, publication, and dissemination of climatological information to serve the national economy.

² The basis for collecting domestic pilot briefings was redefined between 1964 and 1965.

The 1967 increase provides for the operation of new instrumental equipment, improvement in the areas of hazards warnings, including national river forecasting and flood warning and air pollution services.

5. Retired pay, commissioned officers.—Provides for retirement pay in 1967 for an average of 123 commissioned officers, as authorized by 33 U.S.C. 853(o), and payments to survivors of retired officers under the retired serviceman's family protection plan. Appropriation requirements are reduced by the difference between amounts to be deducted from retired pay under the Contingency Option Act and amounts paid to survivor annuitants.

1. Geophysical.—Research and development directed toward new or improved systems, equipment and techniques; and preparation of technical papers describing achievements and results of scientific investigations undertaken in connection with the geodesy, geomagnetism, seismology, and cartographic programs.

The 1967 request will support several projects directed toward improvement of warnings against such hazards as seismic sea waves and earthquakes.

2. Telecommunications and space environment.—Research is conducted on the propagation of electromagnetic waves, on the related electromagnetic properties of the atmosphere, on the nature of electromagnetic noise and interference, on the methods for the more efficient use of the electromagnetic spectrum for telecommunication purposes, and on the methods of collecting, analyzing, archiving, and disseminating information on the aforementioned subjects.

The 1967 increases are for additional research in tropospheric telecommunications, ionospheric telecommunications, space disturbances, and aeronomy.

3. Oceanographic and hydrographic.—Research and development directed toward new or improved systems, equipment, techniques, and ship design; and preparation of technical papers describing achievements and results of scientific investigations undertaken in connection with the oceanographic and hydrographic programs, including cartographic techniques related to water navigation. The program in 1967 will provide increased emphasis on land and sea interaction, and Continental Shelf studies.

4. Weather and river.—Research, development, and system design studies conducted for purposes of improving the basic weather system; the public, agriculture, aviation, marine, fire weather, and hurricane and tornado warning services; also research and development in the field of hydrology and hydrometeorology for purposes of improving the river and flood forecasting and related water resources service; studies of both the specialized meteorological techniques and knowledge of the physical and chemical contents of the atmosphere required to predict air pollution conditions and render useful advisory services; studies of drought and other abnormal climatological conditions and of ways in which climatological data might be better used in agriculture, business, commerce, industry, and the general public.

The 1967 estimate provides additional support for system studies to improve the hurricane and tornado, air pollution, and marine weather services, and to pursue the development of a rocketsonde system. Increased support will also be given to research on weather modification, sea-air interaction, river and flood forecast and warnings, hurricane, and tornado warnings, and climatic aids to forecasting droughts.

5. Satellite.—Studies of ways whereby more useful data may be collected from satellites and better used to understand atmospheric and other environmental phenomena and used more beneficially in operating programs.

The special foreign currency program utilizes foreign currencies, which are excess to the normal requirements of the United States, to supplement research and development activities and to encourage greater cooperation in international environmental research and allied sciences. The surplus currencies requested in 1967 will be used for studies of electromagnetic wave propagation, for further development of meteorological and hydrologic networks to provide additional measurements from sparse data areas, and for specialized analyses of data directed toward improved weather, flood, and tide forecasting.

This account provides for the construction of surveying ships; magnetic, seismological, oceanographic, and meteorological facilities; related expenses including initial equipment and outfitting of new facilities; and the alteration, modernization, and relocation of existing operational facilities. It further provides for the acquisition, establishment, and relocation of research laboratories and buildings and related equipment and the acquisition of land.

1. Geophysical.—This activity provides for construction and instrumentation pertaining to the geophysical activities of Environmental Science Services Administration. The 1966 appropriation provided for construction of office, shop, seismograph vaults, observatory buildings, housing units, and instrumentation in Alaska and for construction of housing and laboratory replacements at Guam. This work is underway and is expected to be completed in 1966. The 1967 increase provides for equipment for seismological engineering studies.

2. Telecommunications and space environment.—This activity provides for construction and initial program equipment for this service. The 1967 increase provides for construction of buildings to house environmental research equipment.

3. Oceanographic and hydrographic.—This activity provides for construction of oceanographic and hydrographic ships, purchase of equipment and construction and replacement of facilities for this service. In 1967, two class II and two class III hydrographic survey ships will be completed. Two smaller wire drag vessels will also be delivered. The 1967 increase provides for the construction and outfitting of one circulatory survey vessel to replace the Marmar; instrumentation for telemetering the digital current measurement system; and automation of tide data acquisition and processing equipment, and shipboard satellite navigation equipment.

4. Weather and river.—This activity provides for new and replacement construction, instrumentation networks, and for the purchase of major equipment for weather and river forecasting facilities. The following table shows status of authorized instrumental networks and systems.

[METEOROLOGICAL] SATELLITE OPERATIONS

For expenses necessary to establish and operate a system for the continuous observation of worldwide meteorological environmental conditions from space satellites, and for the reporting and processing of the data obtained for use in weather environmental forecasting, $25,000,000 $33,585,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That this appropriation shall be available for payment to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for procurement, in accordance with the authority available to that Administration, of such equipment or facilities as may be necessary to establish and operate the aforesaid system, for the purposes of this appropriation; Provided further, That appropriations heretofore made to the Weather Bureau for "Meteorological satellite operations" shall be merged with this appropriation. ¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid, undelivered orders, 1964, $40,777 thousand; (1965 adjustments, $-654 thousand); 1965, $55,660 thousand; 1966, $57,015 thousand; 1967, $63,804 thousand.

The Environmental Science Services Administration is responsible for the establishment and operation of a satellite system for continuous observation of worldwide meteorological conditions. This appropriation also provides for the processing and analysis of satellite-acquired data and its preparation for archiving for use in weather services and research.

The first element of the ESSA satellite system, the TIROS Operational Satellite (TOS) system, will become operational in 1966. The 1967 estimate provides principally for continuation of this system. Small amounts are included to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of satellite and data-handling systems. Steps also are planned to increase the usefulness of the TOS system by adding instrumentation to observe nonmeteorological environmental phenomena.

1. Spacecraft and launching.—This activity covers the design, construction, and launching of operational satellites. Flight units to inaugurate the operational system were funded in prior years. Three additional units must be funded in 1967 to maintain system continuity.

2. Command and data acquisition.—This activity covers the establishment and operation of ground facilities for command of the spacecraft, acquisition of observational data, and transmission of data to the central processing and analysis center. Command and Data Acquisition (CDA) stations have been established at Fairbanks, Alaska and Wallops Station, Va., and a TOS Operations Center (TOC) at Suitland, Md. Special communication systems link these facilities. The 1967 estimate provides for around-the-clock operation and maintenance of these facilities.

3. Data processing, analysis, and archiving.—ADP facilities are used to convert satellite observational data into forms suitable for immediate operational use in forecasting and service programs, and subsequent use for research and climatological purposes. The 1967 estimate provides for the 24-hour operation of central analysis and processing functions; systems engineering efforts leading toward improvement of the satellite system; increased automation of data-handling systems; and continuation of the Washington-Moscow communications link.

4. Technical management.—Technical management and support for the satellite program is provided by the National Environmental Satellite Center, and by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration on a reimbursable basis.

The Office administers laws governing the granting of patents for invention and the registration of trademarks.

The streamlined examination program, which was installed on July 1, 1964, includes substantial revisions of patent examining procedure designed to improve services to applicants and the public. Operations in the first year of the program resulted in 102,165 patent application disposals in 1965. This achievement represents an increase of about 35%, as compared with the level of patent application disposals in 1963 and 1964, with no increase in the size of the examining staff. The program anticipates a continuance of approximately the same level of increased productivity in 1966 and 1967. The 1967 estimate provides for a modest increase in patent examiners and supporting personnel to deal with increased volume and complexity of work, and for continuation and expansion of modernization and mechanization measures.

Receipts from fees were $9.2 million in 1965. New legislation enacted by the 89th Congress (Public Law 89-83) provides for increased statutory patent and trademark fees effective October 25, 1965. With the new legislation in effect for part of the year in 1966, and for the full year in 1967, receipts from fees are estimated to be $18.2 million and $25.2 million, respectively.

1. Examination and adjudication of patent applications.—Applications are examined to determine the patentability of claimed inventions; and quasi-judicial functions are performed in appeal and interference proceedings within the Office. Specifications and drawings of successful applications are printed and the issuance of patents is regularly published.

2. Examination and adjudication of trademark applications.—Applications are examined to determine the registrability of trademarks, and quasi-judicial functions are performed in appeal or adversary proceedings within the Office. Specifications and drawings of successful applications are printed and the issuance of registrations is regularly published.

3. Administration and program services.—In addition to program direction and internal management services, this activity includes conduct of litigation to which the Commissioner is a party, preparation and issuance of patent grants, furnishing copies of records, maintenance of public search room and scientific library facilities, recording instruments conveying ownership of patent and trademark rights, conduct of public information services, and other nonexamining functions relating to the prosecution of applications.

The proposed increase will strengthen the Bureau's program principally in connection with the National Standard Reference Data System. Increases are also proposed for engineering measurements and standards, standard reference materials, data processing, and internal technical services. The Bureau's programs of basic and applied research, development of instruments and methods of measurement, general technical services and the Federal clearinghouse are classified under four major activities with nine subactivities.

1. Standards missions—(a) Basic measurements and standards.—This includes research, development, analysis, or specifications relating to existing or new standards for physical measurement; precise standard methods of measurement of physical quantities; and precise values of fundamental physical constants suitable for tying measurement systems together.

(b) Standard reference data.—This includes programs arising as a result of the Bureau's responsibility for developing the National Standard Reference Data System and other programs concerned with standard reference data. Work is directed toward obtaining systematically evaluated numerical data in the physical sciences needed by scientists and engineers. These data are the numbers that describe the properties of nature, the strengths of high temperature materials, the masses of atoms, the rates of chemical reactions, the wavelengths of light in emission spectra, and many others. Programs involve analysis of needs, acquisition of data, conduct of research, processing, and compilation for dissemination of the data. The major expansion in this area will be for contracts for the compilation of data under the National Standard Reference Data System.

(c) Engineering measurements and standards.—This includes research leading to technical information or measurement methodologies which will provide the basis for collaboration with recognized standardizing bodies in the development of codes, specifications, standards of practice and methods of testing technological devices, industrial products, and services. In 1967 an increase is budgeted for development and evaluation of performance criteria in building technology.

(d) Standard reference materials.—This includes analysis, research, and development of methodology leading to the production of special materials for the calibration of measuring systems, or for coordinated research on properties of materials. Expansion will be directed toward developing research materials of high purity and reproducibility.

2. Special central missions—(a) Federal clearinghouse.—The clearinghouse collects, organizes, publicizes and provides reference, referral, and sales services for the technical reports and translations received from domestic and foreign sources, and makes them available to industry and the general public.

(b) Data processing.—Data processing covers all pertinent technical activities in support of automatic data processing and the effective utilization by Government of computer-based data processing and information handling systems. This includes, but is not limited to, the investigation, design, and evaluation of complete systems; the rendering of advice, consultation, and technical assistance to agencies of the Federal Government in connection with the design, selection, acquisition and utilization of such systems and their associated components, equipments, programing languages and practices; and the provision of computing and related programing services and supporting mathematical services. Closely connected with these technical activities are the following technical services; to provide technical leadership for and monitor the Federal Government's participation in the development, measurement and testing of voluntary commercial automatic data processing standards in a manner consonant with Government requirements for a compatible complex of equipments, languages and practices; to determine the need for and recommend establishment of uniform Federal standards where necessary to supplement voluntary commercial standards; and to maintain a specialized information service in support of all of the foregoing activities. With funds provided in 1966 emphasis has been placed upon strengthening the standards aspects of this program. The expansion planned for 1967 will be directed toward providing more adequate technical assistance to other Government agencies and to supporting research in computer sciences.

(c) Advisory services.—This includes services connected with the various technical programs in the other sub-activities and covers dissemination of information to the general public, provision of consultative and advisory services and furnishing of specific technical information.

3. General support missions—(a) General research.—This includes research conducted in order to keep up with developments in various technical fields and to maintain general scientific competence needed for effective accomplishment of the overall mission.

(b) Internal technical services.—This includes programs of two general types: project-related capital equipment; and internal technical services such as analytical instrumentation, and mathematical services and operation of the linear accelerator (LINAC) and nuclear reactor. Expansion will be for operation of the nuclear research reactor.

4. Additional capital for working capital fund.—This activity covers transfers of funds to the working capital fund for the purchase of scientific equipment and the manufacture of standard reference materials. No funds are requested for 1967.

National Bureau of Standards responsibilities for basic and applied research, improvement of standards, and dissemination of information on properties of materials, and measurement techniques are of sufficient breadth to permit ready utilization of research capabilities in other countries. The foreign currency program supplements the Bureau's existing program, allows an acceleration of research effort in selected areas, and permits economies to the Bureau's regular appropriations over the long term.

The 1967 program, authorized by section 104(k) of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, represents no increase in the size of the program. Foreign currencies determined by the Treasury Department to be excess to normal requirements of the United States will be used in non-Soviet bloc countries where scientific talent is available. A cost of $20 thousand, U.S. dollars, charged to the appropriation for Research and Technical Services, will be required for the administration and technical supervision of the program.

PLANT AND FACILITIES

For expenses incurred, as authorized by section 1 of the Act of September 2, 1958 (15 U.S.C. 278e-278c), in the acquisition, construction, improvement, alteration, or emergency repair of buildings, grounds, and other facilities, including procurement and installation of special research equipment and facilities, therefor; and provisions of standards of weight and measure to the States; [$880,000] $560,000, to remain available until expended. (15 U.S.C. 271-278e; 40 U.S.C. 14a; 5 U.S.C. 596a; Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1966.)

Note.—Excludes $45,000 for activities transferred in the estimates to Facilities, Equipment, and Construction, Environmental Science Services Administration. The amounts obligated in 1965 and 1966 are shown in the schedule as comparative transfers.

This will provide for construction and improvements to the plant and facilities of the National Bureau of Standards and procurement of major special facilities. The Bureau's laboratories and administrative offices occupy 86 buildings on a 68-acre tract in Washington, D.C. The Bureau also has a large laboratory on a 217-acre site at Boulder, Colo., and several small radio field stations, some of which are outside the continental limits. In addition, the Bureau has a new site near Gaithersburg, Md., on which facilities are being built to replace those in Washington, D.C.

Capital outlay.—1. Improvements and modifications.—The budget includes $150 thousand for minor capital improvements of a general nature required for the Bureau's laboratories and field stations. Other minor improvements, when of a special, project-related character, are charged to the appropriation for Research and Technical Services. Noncapital alterations are charged to the operating costs of this appropriation.

2. General construction.—This activity includes improvements and construction items costing more than $40 thousand except for construction associated with the Bureau's relocation at Gaithersburg, Md. Anticipated costs in 1967 include $1,122 thousand for an addition to the radiation physics laboratory, financed in 1965.

3. Special facilities.—(a) National Bureau of Standards facilities.—This subactivity includes the acquisition of large equipment items and any building construction and land acquisition associated with them. The budget includes $245 thousand for the purchase of a 3-million-volt surge generator. Anticipated costs in 1967 include $499 thousand for items financed in prior years. (b) Weights and Measures Standards for the States.—This will finance the acquisition of basic reference standards of weight and measure for distribution to the States. Such action will help to insure uniformity of weights and measures standards throughout the United States and provide the physical tools necessary for precision of measurement in business, industry, science, and education. The budget of $400 thousand provides for the second segment of the total estimated costs for the 50 States. Anticipated costs in 1967 are $50 thousand from the prior year appropriation, and $350 thousand from the budget year appropriation.

Operating costs.—1. Improvements and modifications.— Noncapitalized maintenance and repair projects are charged to operating costs.

This appropriation finances the construction, equipping, and occupancy of new laboratory, administrative, and service buildings now being constructed on a site near Gaithersburg, Md., to house the activities of the National Bureau of Standards now conducted in Washington, D.C. The new facilities are replacements for present facilities and do not provide for new programs, although they will house certain equipment for radiation physics research and large force measurements not heretofore available.

The first increment of the construction program was provided in the 1961 budget. In the ensuing 4 years additional major increments of the program provided for the construction of seven general-purpose laboratory buildings, several special purpose laboratories, administration, shops, and warehousing buildings, completion of site development, utilities, and equipment. The 1967 budget provides for the final increment of the program, which will include the balance of financing for completion of moving and occupancy.

1. Design and engineering.—Detailed planning and preparation of architectural designs and engineering drawings are completed. Estimated costs in 1967 are for review of drawings and continuing construction supervision.

2. Site acquisition.—Court action in the condemnation proceedings for the Gaithersburg site has been completed. No further costs are estimated under this activity.

3. Construction.—This activity includes the construction of laboratories and other buildings, including mechanical and electrical equipment, special laboratory services, site development, and utilities. Estimated costs in 1967 are for completion of the special-purpose laboratory buildings.

4. Equipment.—Anticipated costs for 1967 cover equipment for several laboratory facilities. The smaller items will be purchased through investment of the working capital and the cost will be recovered by depreciation charges made during the expected useful life of the respective items. Payment of $9,250 thousand from the Construction of facilities appropriation to the working capital fund to provide the necessary capital has been authorized.

5. Moving and occupancy.—This activity includes the costs of moving and installing scientific apparatus as well as certain furnishings for offices, library, cafeteria, and other areas. Estimated costs for 1967 are for occupancy items associated with the general-purpose and the special-purpose laboratories.

This program assists the textile and apparel industries in developing and making more deliberate and extensive use of scientific and technological resources for economic growth. Expanded market opportunities that are made possible by increasing the rate of adoption of technological innovations in processes, products, and services, broaden the base of our civilian economy as well as make it more competitive with foreign producers.

The fund finances from advances and reimbursements all operations of the National Bureau of Standards except major construction projects. The principal of the fund, as of June 30, 1965, consisted of $5 million in appropriations, $6.9 million in capital provided by appropriations of the Bureau, and $133.1 million in net donated assets. The Government investment is estimated to grow through donation of cash and other assets financed by National Bureau of Standards' appropriations to $167.4 million by June 30, 1967.

Operating costs—1. Technical program.—Research and technical services are conducted by the National Bureau of Standards on the request of other Government agencies and the public, as well as in support of the Bureau's own research program. The program conducted on contract with other agencies constitutes about one-third of the technical work of the Bureau and it is expected to continue at this level. Receipts from testing services are expected to decrease because of the cutback in the cement testing program.

2. Plant improvement and special equipment.—This activity includes the costs of the Working capital fund which are reimbursed from the Bureau's capital outlay appropriations. The plant improvements and special equipment procured are donated to the fund upon completion and carried as assets of the fund at cost.

Capital outlay.—Working capital of the fund is invested in equipment which is subject to depreciation charges. Some of the equipment for the new laboratories of the Bureau will be purchased as investments of the fund, the additional capital being provided by payments from the appropriation for Construction of facilities. All other equipment and facilities financed by Bureau appropriations are shown as donated assets of the fund.

Operating results.—Retained earnings at the end of each year are transferred to Treasury the year following.

This appropriation provides for the payments of subsidy to ship operators in order to maintain a U.S. merchant fleet in support of U.S. foreign commerce and capable as serving as a naval auxiliary in event of a national emergency. The program is designed to pay the difference between the fair and reasonable cost of certain expenses (wages and subsistence of crew; insurance; vessel maintenance and repair) and the estimated cost of the same items if the ships were operated under foreign registry. To be eligible for subsidy, an operator must provide regular berth services on an essential trade route, show that Government aid is necessary to place the operation on a parity with its foreign competition, and employ vessels constructed in the United States and manned by U.S. citizens.

During calendar year 1964, 15 operators had operating-differential subsidy contracts with the Maritime Administration and provided service on 34 essential foreign trade routes. These operators carried 11.3 million deadweight tons of cargo, an increase of 6% over calendar year 1963.

The total of vessel operating expenses was $768 million of which $335 million or 43% represented subsidizable items of expense. The operations for which subsidy support is projected are detailed in the following table.

The budget estimate for 1967 reflects authority for conduct of 1,611 voyages involving an average of 261 vessels. It assumes that the Department of Defense will continue to charter U.S. merchant ships for supply of overseas bases at the same level as 1966.

Passenger and Freight Services.—Fifteen operators using an average of 317 ships conducted 1,821 sailings from U.S. ports on the Atlantic, Gulf, Pacific, and Great Lakes areas to foreign ports in all the major coastal areas in the world during calendar year 1964.

Recapture of excess profits.—All contracts for operating subsidy provide that 50% of the net profits earned from the contractors' subsidized operations and services which over a 10-year period exceed 10% of capital necessarily employed shall be withheld from payments made by the Government. This recapture is calculated annually based upon cumulative profits earned since the beginning of the recapture period. The estimate for the current and budget years, shown in the program and financing schedule, assumes that the first quarter of calendar year 1964 profit experience of each operator will be continued. Status of unfunded contract authorization.—The computation and approval of final subsidy rates and audit of annual accountings will make it possible to make most payments of 100% of subsidy payable on account of operations prior to December 31, 1962. The $129 million unpaid subsidy, as of June 30, 1967, represents a backlog consisting largely of amounts withheld pending final rate and audit determinations for operations subsequent to calendar year 1961, plus estimated amounts earned in the final quarter of 1967 when bills will not be presented or paid during the year.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

For expenses necessary for research, development, fabrication, and test operation of experimental facilities and equipment; collection and dissemination of maritime technical and engineering information; studies to improve water transportation systems; and supporting services related to nuclear ship operation; [$6,500,000] $7,500,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That transfers may be made to the appropriation for the current fiscal year for "Salaries and expenses" for administrative expenses (not to exceed [$800,000] $1,000,000) and any such transfers shall be without regard to the limitation under that appropriation on the amount available for such expenses: Provided further, That transfers may be made from this appropriation to the "Vessel operations revolving funds" for losses resulting from expenses of experimental ship operations. Public Law 415, 84th Congress (46 U.S.C. 1126) established the Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N.Y., to provide a program for the training of officers for service in the merchant marine. A 4-year training course is provided, including 1 year of sea duty, designed to qualify graduates for licenses as merchant marine officers. The Academy provides subsistence, quarters, tuition, uniform and textbooks allowance, and medical care for the cadets. A cadet training liaison staff in Washington, D.C., provides staff assistance to the Maritime Administrator on training matters and assists in the selection and appointment of cadets.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1964, $2,180 thousand (1965 adjustments, -$3 thousand); 1965, $2,537 thousand; 1966, $2,329 thousand; 1967, $2,324 thousand.

The States of Maine, Massachusetts, New York, Texas, and California maintain schools for the training of merchant marine officers, with Federal assistance given in the form of (a) direct grants of $75 thousand, if matched by State appropriations and if out-of-State students are enrolled; (b) allowance to cadets for uniforms, textbooks, and subsistence; and (c) repairs to Federal training vessels loaned to the schools.

The Maritime Academy Act (72 Stat. 622) provides contract authority for the Secretary of Commerce to enter into agreements with States to provide these grants and allowances over a 4-year period. This act provides contract authority without limit as to amount or fiscal year. The new obligational authority includes the estimated obligations to be incurred under this authority. Maintenance and repair of training vessels are accomplished through annual appropriations. These schools are expected to graduate a total of 325 cadets in 1967.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—MARITIME ADMINISTRATION

No additional vessel shall be allocated under charter, nor shall any vessel be continued under charter by reason of any extension of chartering authority beyond June 30, 1949, unless the charterer shall agree that the Maritime Administration shall have no obligation upon redelivery to accept or pay for consumable stores, bunkers, and slop-chest items, except with respect to such minimum amounts of bunkers as the Maritime Administration considers advisable to be retained on the vessel and that prior to such redelivery all consumable stores, slop-chest items, and bunkers over and above such minimums shall be removed from the vessel by the charterer at his own expense.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Maritime Administration is authorized to furnish utilities and services and make necessary repairs in connection with any lease, contract, or occupancy involving Government property under control of the Maritime Administration, and payments received by the Maritime Administration for utilities, services, and repairs so furnished or made shall be credited to the appropriation charged with the cost thereof: Provided, That rental payments under any such lease, contract, or occupancy on account of items other than such utilities, services, or repairs shall be covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

No obligations shall be incurred during the current fiscal year from the construction fund established by the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, or otherwise, in excess of the appropriations and limitations contained in this Act, or in any prior appropriation Act, and all receipts which otherwise would be deposited to the credit of said fund shall be covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts. ¹ Balances of selected resources are identified on the statement of financial condition.

Under the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, the Maritime Administration received authority to insure construction loans and mortgages with aggregate outstanding balances of up to $1 billion, on certain types of cargo- and passenger-carrying vessels.

Budget program.—The fund reflects the complete payment of Treasury borrowings by June 30, 1967. The fund reflects the advance of $552 thousand in 1966 for the SS Atlas to cure defaults in the payment of principal and interest. There are no other anticipated mortgage defaults and advances in 1966 or 1967.

Financing.—The redemption of defaulted loans or mortgages is financed from insurance premiums and fees, together with such amounts as may be made available by borrowings from the Treasury Department, pursuant to Public Law 85-520 (46 U.S.C. 1275(b)).

Operating results and financial condition.—As of June 1965, balances outstanding plus commitments for additional ship mortgages total $421.6 million. The outstanding balances for loans and mortgages at the end of 1966 and 1967 are projected at $454 million and $488 million, respectively. The fund reflects the sale in 1965 of the SS Titan for $8.3 million, involving a $7.3 million, 15-year mortgage. Earnings resulting from premium and interest receipts, are retained to meet possible additional requirements for advances to mortgagors. The fund in 1966 and 1967 reflects Treasury borrowing repayments of $3.3 million and $2.0 million, respectively and the purchase of $2,150 thousand of Treasury securities. During 1965 repayments of $4.6 million was made for Treasury borrowings.

This fund finances direct operation and charter of cargo vessels for transport of military and Government impelled cargo. It is also used for the operation of Government-owned experimental vessels (46 U.S.C. 1205).

Budget program.—1. Vessel operations expense.—Cargo vessels are operated by private operators as agents of the Maritime Administration to carry shipments for the Military Sea Transportation Service.

2. Charter operations.—As of June 30, 1965, there were three Government-owned vessels under charter to a private operator operating in the Alaskan trade.

3. Experimental ship operations.—Effective August 20, 1965, the NS Savannah went on experimental commercial operation under bareboat charter agreement for a 3-year period.

In 1967 the ship will make voyages to Europe and the Mediterranean.

Financing.—Expenses are financed from revenue and reimbursements from Military Sea Transportation Service and other appropriations, in accordance with 65 Stat. 59.

Operating results and financial condition.—1. Vessel operations.—Rates charged the Military Sea Transportation Service cover full costs arising under general agency agreement for ship operations.

2. Charter operations.—A net income of $71 thousand will result from operation of charters to private operators in 1967. The $297 thousand net income for 1965 is due largely to charter hire adjustment of prior year contracts.

3. Experimental ship operation.—NS "Savannah."—The $2 million represents the cost to the Government of operating the NS Savannah during 1967. The amount is reimbursable in full from the research and development appropriation.

The Maritime Administration is authorized by 46 U.S.C. 1281-1294, as amended, to insure against loss or damage by marine war risks when it is found commercial insurance cannot be obtained on reasonable terms and conditions. Authority to underwrite insurance has been authorized to September 1970 having been extended at 5-year intervals since 1950.

Budget program.—As of June 30, 1965, the number of outstanding binders issued for the types of insurance covered by this fund were: 1,406 for hulls, 1,261 for protection and indemnity, and 1,060 for insurance of crew life and personal effects. These binders which become effective as a result of the outbreak of war cover approximately $13 billion of insurance exposure. Second seamen's war risk insurance has been provided at the request of the Navy—without premium but on a reimbursable basis as required by 46 U.S.C. 1285 on 31 vessels for the Military Sea Transportation Services as of June 30, 1965. It is estimated that this service has provided a savings of $76 thousand.

Financing.—46 U.S.C. 1288(a) provides authority for the Secretary of Commerce to transfer up to $10 million from the Vessel operations revolving fund, to the War risk insurance revolving fund. No transfers have been made and none are anticipated in 1966 and 1967. Revenue in the fund is received from fees paid for the issuance of interim binders, premiums paid for builder's risk insurance, interest from investments, and reimbursable charges from the Navy.

Main highways within or adjacent to the national forests are constructed and improved. Projects are jointly selected by the States, the Forest Service, and the Bureau of Public Roads on the basis of their contribution to meeting traffic requirements within the national forests. Authorizations are apportioned by States on the basis of a formula which uses as factors the national forest area and value in each State. Contract authorizations of $33 million are available for each of the years 1966 and 1967. Funds can be obligated in the year prior to the year for which authorized.

The 1967 estimate of $33 million finances the balance of the 1965 authorization and $27,050 thousand of the 1966 authorization provided by the Federal-Aid Highway Acts of 1962 and 1964, respectively.

Legislation will be proposed to finance this program from the Highway trust fund.

Actual and estimated progress of the program is summarized in the following table (dollars in thousands):

Fiscal year	Annual authorization ¹	Miles completed	Unobligated balance, end of year	Obligations for projects	Expenditures

Highways are constructed and improved through public lands in those States with large areas of such lands. Funds for this program are available a year in advance of the year for which authorized. Contract authorizations totaling $14 million were made available for the years 1966 and 1967 by the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1964.

The 1967 appropriation estimate finances the balance of the 1965 authorization and $2.7 million of the 1966 authorization.

Section 201 of the Appalachian Regional Development Act of 1965 authorizes the construction of an Appalachian development highway system including local access roads. This system, which is not to exceed a total of 2,350 miles in length, is designed to improve the accessibility of Appalachia, to reduce highway transportation costs to and within Appalachia, to provide the highway transportation facilities necessary to accelerate the overall development of Appalachia, and to provide not more than 1,000 miles of local access roads to specific development facilities. Funds in the amount of $840 million are authorized to be appropriated over the life of this program.

The 1,555-mile Central American section of the Inter-American Highway is being constructed in cooperation with the Republics of Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, and Panama. These Republics pay one-third of the cost of highways through their territories and are responsible for future maintenance.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1962 (76 Stat. 1145) authorized an additional appropriation of $32 million, of which $25 million has been appropriated, to complete the highway to acceptable standards. The remainder of $7 million will be required in 1968 to complete the commitments of the United States to the Central American Republics.

REPAYABLE ADVANCES TO THE HIGHWAY TRUST FUND

For repayable advances to the "Highway trust fund" during the current fiscal year, as authorized by section 209(d) of the Highway Revenue Act of 1956 (70 Stat. 399), $200,000,000. (Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1966.)

A temporary advance to the Highway trust fund will be required during 1967 because expenditures during the first half of the year will exceed available revenues. The deficiency is expected to reach a maximum of $200 million by December 31, 1966. Thereafter receipts will begin to exceed expenditures and will be adequate to repay the advances with interest prior to June 30, 1967.

The Highway Revenue Act of 1956, as amended, provides for the transfer from the general fund to the highway trust fund of revenue from the gasoline tax and certain other taxes paid by highway users. The Secretary of the Treasury estimates the amounts to be so transferred. In turn, annual appropriations are authorized from this trust fund to meet expenditures for Federal-aid highways. Legislation is being proposed to finance the forest and public lands highway programs, the highway beautification program, and highway safety from the trust fund. Amounts in the fund not currently required are invested in U.S. securities, and interest thereon is added to the fund.

The status of the fund is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

LIMITATION ON GENERAL ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES

(Trust fund)

Necessary expenses of administration and research (not to exceed $51,000,000) $57,600,000, including not to exceed $1,000 for entertainment of officials of other countries when specifically authorized by the Federal Highway Administrator, maintenance of a National Register of Revoked Motor Vehicle Operators' Licenses, as authorized by law (74 Stat. 526), and purchase of [two] one passenger motor [vehicles] vehicle for replacement only, shall be paid, in accordance with law, from appropriations made available by this Act to the Bureau of Public Roads and from advances and reimbursements received by the Bureau of Public Roads.

Of the total amount available from appropriations of the Bureau of Public Roads for general administrative and research expenses pursuant to the provisions of title 23, United States Code, section 104(a), $100,000 shall be available for carrying out the provisions of title 23, United States Code, section 309. (23 U.S.C. 303, 307, 313; Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1966.)

Expenses for administration of the Federal-aid highway program and for highway research by the Bureau of Public Roads are financed by deductions from Federal-aid authorizations. Administrative services for other programs of the Bureau and for road construction programs of other Federal agencies are initially financed from this activity, and reimbursements are collected from these programs. This limitation does not cover administrative expenses of highway beautification, which are handled by a separate appropriation. The requested increase is mainly for contract research bearing on highway safety.

1. Administration.—The limitation covers work directly relating to highway construction projects plus administrative support for all Bureau programs. The work includes route location and right-of-way operations; the development of policies and procedures for highway engineering and design; engineering surveillance of construction and maintenance activities; administration of cooperative projects with foreign countries; the audit of State claims; reviews of highway department programs; and investigation of alleged fraud, land speculation, construction irregularities, and other violations of laws and regulations. About 8,100 projects will be started in 1967, compared to 8,000 in 1966 and 7,839 in 1965.

2. Highway safety.—Activities designed to assist in reducing highway accidents, including operation of the National Driver Register Service and support of the Interdepartmental Highway Safety Board but excluding safety research, are financed under this activity. Over 10 million applicants for driver's licenses will be checked in 1967 for evidence of previous revocations.

3. Research and planning.—Direct and contract research and development relating mainly to highway safety is carried on, current and long-range planning and programing is undertaken, and State research and planning efforts financed with Federal grant-in-aid money are supervised.

Grants are made to States for construction and improvement of Federal-aid highways. Authorizations are provided in the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1956 and subsequent highway legislation to cover 90% of the costs of completing the 41,000-mile National System of Interstate and Defense Highways and to match State funds on a 50-50 basis for the primary, secondary, and urban programs. All authorizations are available for use in the year prior to the year for which authorized. The Federal share of the cost is increased in those States with large areas of public domain. Payments to the States are made out of the Highway trust fund, into which are deposited the receipts of taxes on gasoline, diesel fuel, and highway lubricating oil; tires, tubes, and tread rubber; trucks, buses, trailers, and their parts and accessories; and heavy vehicle use.

A revised estimate of the cost of completing the Interstate System was submitted to the first session of the 89th Congress. It is now estimated that the Federal share of the cost will be $42 billion, which is $5 billion more than previously estimated. Congress has approved a $3 billion authorization for 1967, which is $100 million above the previous authorization for that year. Additional increases in authorization will be necessary for subsequent years. Although revenues accruing to the trust fund under present tax rates are sufficient to cover costs under the previous estimate, additional revenue will be necessary to meet the cost increase with a minimum of slippage in the scheduled completion date. It is proposed to provide this revenue by increasing taxes on highway users and extending the October 1, 1972, tax cutoff date.

As of October 1, 1965, nearly 20,000 miles of the 41,000-mile Interstate System were open to traffic. Approximately 79% (15,804 miles) was built or improved under the Federal-aid Interstate program, most of it under the 90% Federal, 10% State matching program launched in 1956. Toll roads, bridges, and tunnels incorporated in the system totaled 2,325 miles. In addition to the sections open to traffic, 6,202 miles were under construction with Interstate funds, and engineering and right-of-way acquisition was in progress on another 11,536 miles. Thus, some form of work was underway or completed on 37,724 miles of the 41,000-mile system—about 92% of the total system mileage.

Construction projects involving 190,947 miles in the regular Federal-aid program (primary, secondary, and urban) have been completed since July 1, 1956, at a total cost of $14.38 billion, and contracts involving 19,559 miles at a cost of $3.01 billion were authorized or underway on October 1, 1965. In addition, $1.01 billion of engineering and right-of-way acquisition work had been completed and $820 million in such projects was underway.

Actual and estimated progress of Federal-aid programs are summarized in the following table:

FOREST AND PUBLIC LANDS HIGHWAY (TRUST FUND)

Under proposed legislation, 1967.—Legislation will be proposed to transfer financing of the forest and public lands highway programs from the general fund to the Highway trust fund. These highways are similar in character and use to Federal-aid highways and should logically be financed in the same manner as the regular Federal-aid program.

Public Law 89-220, enacted on September 30, 1965, authorizes the Secretary of Commerce to conduct a program of research and development in high-speed ground transportation, demonstrations in rail passenger transportation, and the improvement of national transportation data. The program includes research on materials, aerodynamics, vehicle power and control, and guideways. Travel needs and preferences are being analyzed and performance and costs compared.

1. Engineering research and development.—This provides for research testing on new systems, components and techniques.

2. Demonstration program.—Demonstrations of improved rail service will be conducted in the Northeast Corridor to measure and evaluate public reaction and acceptance of such service.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

SEC. 302. During the current fiscal year applicable appropriations and funds available to the Department of Commerce shall be available for the activities specified in the Act of October 26, 1949 (5 U.S.C. 596a), to the extent and in the manner prescribed by said Act.

SEC. 303. During the current fiscal year appropriations to the Department of Commerce which are available for salaries and expenses shall be available for hire of passenger motor vehicles; services as authorized by section 15 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U.S.C. 55a); and uniforms, or allowances therefor, as authorized by the Act of September 1, 1954, as amended (5 U.S.C. 2131) (Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1966.)

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE—MILITARY

ACTIVE FORCES

The following narrative statement covers the basic active duty appropriations for the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force.

1. Pay and allowances of officers.—This provides for the pay and allowances of officers of the military service on active duty.

2. Pay and allowances of enlisted.—This provides for the pay and allowances of enlisted persons of the military service on active duty, and payments for initial issues and replacement clothing under the monetary clothing allowance system.

3. Pay and allowances of cadets and midshipmen.—This provides for the pay and allowances of cadets and midshipmen at the three service academies, and aviation cadets.

The numbers of active duty military personnel provided for are shown in the following table:

Supplemental appropriations for 1966 are anticipated for separate transmittal to provide funds for the additional costs resulting from enactment of legislation effective September 1, 1965, increasing the pay and allowances of military personnel including hostile fire pay and authority to permit the payment of a variable reenlistment bonus to certain enlisted personnel having a critical military skill. Other legislation enacted during the 1st session of the 89th Congress provides for the purchase of milk for enlisted personnel in excess of the 8 ounces in the ration heretofore made available by the Commodity Credit Corporation, special pay for personnel assigned to the flight decks of Navy carriers, and an increase in the Federal Insurance Contributions Act tax paid by Defense to the Internal Revenue Service, as well as the Defense share of the cost of life insurance policies for military personnel. Additional supplementals are being requested to finance the cost of our efforts in South Vietnam.

4. Subsistence of enlisted personnel.—This provides for the purchase of food supplies for issue as rations to enlisted personnel, including emergency and operational rations. In addition, it provides for a cash allowance paid to enlisted personnel who are given permission to mess separately or who are stationed at places where rations in kind are not available.

5. Permanent change of station travel.—This provides for permanent change of station travel of individuals and groups of military personnel and their dependents, including dislocation and separation travel allowances, storage of household goods in commercial facilities, and transportation of personal property. Payment for services furnished by the Military Sea Transportation Service and Military Airlift Command for transportation to and from overseas of military personnel, their dependents, household goods, and automobiles is also included.

6. Other military personnel costs.—This provides for expenses of apprehension of deserters and escaped military prisoners, payment of interest on money deposited by enlisted personnel, and payment of death gratuities to beneficiaries of military personnel.

Under existing legislation, 1966.—Additional funds are required to provide for the increased cost of the U.S. operations in Southeast Asia.

RESERVE FORCES

The following narrative statement covers the appropriations for the National Guard and Reserve components of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force.

National Guard and Reserve personnel.—This program provides funds for training members of the Ready Reserve required for early mobilization needs of the Active Forces. Most of the paid National Guard and Reserve components personnel perform 48 or 24 drills and attend 2 weeks of active duty for training each year. Other personnel not requiring as intensive training receive only a period of active duty for training (usually 2 weeks) during the year. Active duty for basic training is provided for personnel enlisting in a National Guard or Reserve component who have not previously received military training. Service schools and special tours of active duty training provide additional training for limited numbers of the Ready Reserve.

Increased personnel and additional training are being provided for selected units of the reserve components to meet Southeast Asia requirements. The additional personnel strength is included in the total numbers. Funds to support these additional requirements are included in the proposed 1966 supplementals for Southeast Asia support.

The numbers of National Guard and Reserve component personnel estimated to participate in the paid training programs are summarized in the following table:

Reserve officer candidates.—The Reserve Officers' Training Corps program provides training for reserve officer candidates who have enrolled in the course while attending a collegiate institution at which an ROTC unit has been established. The curriculum includes instruction in military and academic subjects together with one or more summer active duty training periods with the Active Forces. College graduates who satisfactorily complete the advanced course of the program are commissioned and are ordinarily ordered to active duty for a minimum period of 2 years.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps Vitalization Act of 1964 authorizes a limited number of scholarships for 4-year ROTC students on a competitive basis. Successful candidates for the scholarships are required to serve a minimum period of 4 years on active duty upon graduation and appointment as a commissioned officer. The Army and Air Force awarded 1,000 scholarships in 1966. An additional 1,000 will be awarded by each of these services in 1967. About 5,400 members of the Navy program will receive scholarships in 1967. The act also authorized a 2-year ROTC program as well as the traditional 4-year program.

The Navy and Marine Corps also provide for an officer candidate program wherein students attending any accredited college or university may enroll, attend prescribed summer military training programs, and receive a commission after graduation. They are then required to serve at least 3 years on active duty.

In addition, the Army and Air Force provide 2 years of basic military training for college students who elect, or are required by the college, to enroll in the course for the first 2 years but who are not required to be candidates for officer commissions.

The Army, Navy, and Air Force provide training for students who elect to enroll in ROTC training at the secondary level of education. The Army's high school level ROTC program is expected to increase to over 400 schools by the end of the year. The Navy and Air Force will initiate the Junior ROTC program this year with about 30 schools offering the program of each service.

Enrollments at the beginning of the school year in these programs are summarized below:

This estimate includes funds for the pay of all military personnel on the retired lists of the Department of Defense. The estimate represents the consolidated requirements of the military departments for (a) payments to retired officers and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force; (b) the retainer pay of regular enlisted personnel of the Fleet Reserve of the Navy and Fleet Marine Corps Reserve; and (c) survivors' benefits. The substantial gains to the retired rolls can be directly attributed to the greater number of individuals attaining eligibility for retirement after 20 or more years of active military service. The following tabulation shows the average number of personnel on the rolls during 1965 compared with the estimated numbers for 1966 and 1967.

A supplemental appropriation for 1966 is anticipated for separate transmittal to provide funds for an increase in retired pay effective September 1, 1965.

Under the provisions of the retired serviceman's family protection plan, retired service personnel who elect to receive reduced amounts of retired pay are able to provide for monthly payments to be continued to their survivors. The reductions are determined on a basis designed to establish an actuarially sound system. Current appropriations provide only for the net payments to be made each year, and the liability for future payments of survivor benefits is unfunded. Administrative expenses of this family protection plan are provided as operation and maintenance costs of the military services. The accumulated difference between reductions in retired pay and actual payments of survivor benefits is indicated in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

The Operation and Maintenance appropriations of the Department of Defense provide funds for the day-to-day cost of operating and maintaining the Armed Forces, including the Reserve Forces, and related support activities of the Department of Defense. Included are the combat forces under the control of the various unified and specified commands, as well as the logistical, training, and administrative activities provided by each military department and the defense agencies.

Financial requirements for these appropriations are influenced by a variety of factors, the principal of which are military and civilian strength, force levels, rates of operational activity, numbers of installations, and quantity and complexity of major equipment (missiles, aircraft, ships, tanks, etc.) in operation.

A substantial part of these appropriations pays for the cost of operating and maintaining our military installations throughout the world. The Department of Defense is continuing its program of eliminating bases that are no longer required. The number of active major installations financed by these appropriations decreases from 632 in 1965 to 630 in 1966 and 609 in 1967, despite the activation of 18 installations for support of Southeast Asia operations in 1966.

Support programs common to each military department, such as supply, materiel maintenance, training, communications, and medical are financed by these appropriations. Supply activities of the various services and of the Defense Supply Agency procure, store, distribute, and compute requirements for military materiel. These various functions are conducted at supply depots

Two functions which were previously performed by the individual military departments have been consolidated under various defense agencies in 1966. Contract audit activities will be under the Defense Contract Audit Agency. Contract administration and inspection have been centralized under the Defense Supply Agency.

Training activities provide for the individual training of officers and enlisted men including recruit training, career training, and specialized training in many skills, such as pilot training. The majority of individual training is conducted through resident courses of instruction at the various training bases, service schools, and colleges, although some educational facilities of civilian institutions are used. The operation of the three service academies is also included.

Communications support relates primarily to leased circuits, equipments, and facilities. Two defensewide automatic switching systems for voice and record traffic are being expanded to provide worldwide capability and will permit the elimination of smaller networks.

The military departments operate hospitals and clinics to provide medical care for active and retired military personnel and their dependents. Funds are also included in these appropriations for medical care provided by civilian medical facilities and other Federal agencies.

Support of our combat activities in Southeast Asia has increased the financial requirements of the Operation and maintenance accounts. In 1966, a portion of these funds will be provided by a supplemental appropriation. The 1967 appropriation estimates include these support costs. The estimates for both years reflect the increased tempo of ground, ship, and aircraft operations which have resulted in abnormally heavy usage of fuel and other consumables. The larger number of troops in Southeast Asia requires additional personnel and logistic support. Large base complexes must be operated and maintained, and additional communication circuits are required.

In addition to direct costs incurred in Southeast Asia, support costs provide for logistic backup in the United States and the Pacific area. These include heavier workloads at depot level maintenance and repair facilities resulting from intensified use of aircraft, ships, and other equipment, and at supply activities in filling requisitions. Funds are included for the airlift and sealift of materiel to combat areas. Additional training activity in both the Active and Reserve forces will result from the increase in total military strength.

The primary objective of this appropriation is to maintain the current combat readiness of naval forces, which include carrier striking forces, submarine forces, anti-submarine forces, amphibious forces, and anti-air warfare forces.

The composition of the active fleet in 1966 and 1967 will include more guided missile and nuclear-powered ships, such as Polaris submarines. Navy and Marine Corps tactical air capability will be enhanced by replacement of older aircraft with F-4 "Phantom" fighter, A-6A "Intruder" all weather attack, and A-7A "Corsair II" light attack aircraft. Complexity of ships and aircraft and their weapons continues to increase, and expanded and improved training programs are required in order to provide the additional trained personnel necessary to operate and maintain the more sophisticated weapons systems. Oceanography, communications, and intelligence are other areas essential to the most effective use of naval weapons.

As executive agent for the Defense Department, the Navy will provide logistic support to the U.S. program for Antarctica. This support includes operation and maintenance of ships, aircraft, and facilities at a cost of $20.5 million.¹

1. General expenses, Navy personnel.—This activity finances the costs of individual training of officers and enlisted men, including Navy reservists. Funds for welfare, morale, and recreation activities are also provided in this activity, as well as the costs of military personnel management functions.

2. Weapons and facilities.—This activity finances naval and Marine Corps flight operations of carrier air groups, Marine air wings, land-based patrol squadrons, and supporting units. The increasing number of missile-firing ships in the fleet results in increased costs for missile system support, while the average cost of operating and maintaining aircraft continues to rise as higher performance aircraft are added each year.

3. Ships and facilities.—This activity provides for operating and maintaining the ships in the Navy's attack, amphibious assault, antisubmarine, anti-air warfare, and Polaris submarine forces. Additional communications equipment, weapons system updating and support of increasing numbers of complex ships and equipment are important cost increase factors.

4. Medical care.—This activity finances medical care for Navy and Marine Corps personnel and their dependents.

5. Civil engineering.—This activity finances civil engineering support of the shore establishment, including maintenance, utilities, and transportation. Twelve construction battalions (Seabees) plus two headquarters staffs are maintained in readiness to support the military missions of the Fleet Marine Forces in oversea locations; they also operate and maintain the Antarctica logistics support stations.

6. Service-wide supply.—This activity finances major supply depots and centers and supply system transportation costs.

7. Service-wide operations.—Facilities and programs under the management of the Chief of Naval Operations including his headquarters staff are the principal activities financed under this heading. Also under this activity are the operations of the Office of the Secretary, the Department of the Navy Staff Offices (including the Judge Advocate General of the Navy and the Chief of Naval Research) and their field activities, and the Chief of Naval Material.

8. Naval petroleum reserves.—This activity provides for operation, conservation, maintenance, testing, and protection of naval petroleum and oil shale reserves. Gross income from sale of Navy's share of production deposited in the general fund of the Treasury in 1965 was $13.2 million, in 1966 it is estimated to be $11.2 million, and in 1967, $10.9 million.

The Marine Corps trains and maintains the Fleet Marine Forces in a high state of combat readiness for service with the fleet in amphibious operations and other duties. The Fleet Marine Forces, composed of Marine division-air wing teams and related support units, are assigned to the Atlantic and Pacific Naval Fleets.

This appropriation principally supports the ground elements of the Fleet Marine Forces. Other units supported by this appropriation include Marine detachments aboard naval vessels, landing force training units, Marine Reserve ground forces, and the security forces that guard naval bases, U.S. embassies, and certain classified facilities.

1. Training and operations.—Fleet Marine Force training objectives stress the vertical envelopment doctrine in amphibious operations through major exercises by combined air and ground units. Training of individuals is accomplished at four major combat-unit support bases, two recruit training depots and one base devoted to professional schools training.

2. Depot supply system.—This activity includes the overhaul and preservation of major equipment and materiel and the receipt, issue, and storage of materiel.

4. Marine Corps Reserve training.—The objective of this program is to provide a strong Reserve organization capable of rapid assimilation into the operating forces when needed.

6. Departmental administration.—The staff agencies of the headquarters, Marine Corps, which provide for the administration of the missions, functions, and worldwide operations of the Marine Corps are funded in this activity.

Financial requirements for this appropriation have been influenced by increased activity rates in Southeast Asia and significant force structure adjustments. The principal changes in the strategic forces in 1967 include the increased numbers of Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missile squadrons which will become operational. The estimates also reflect the initial phase-out of the older model B-52 heavy bombers and final phase-out of the B-47 medium bombers.

Despite some numerical reductions in the active air defense fighter-interceptor forces in the United States, overall requirements are satisfied by closer integration of Air National Guard squadrons. Improvements in air defense ground environment are continuing, including further upgrading of the Backup Interceptor Control System (BUIC) which started in 1965.

The capability of the tactical forces will continue to improve in 1967, principally as a result of the increased number of squadrons equipped with the all-purpose F-4 fighter aircraft. Increased emphasis has been placed on the use of newly developed electronics equipment in such areas as command and control techniques and capabilities, communications, warning, weather, and intelligence. These and other similar activities require contracting for many specialized services beyond the capability of Air Force personnel.

1. Aircraft fuel and oil.—This program provides for aviation fuel and oil to support the operation of all Air Force and Air Force Reserve aircraft except those assigned to research and development activities, the Air National Guard, and that portion of the airlift service of the Military Airlift Command which is financed by the Air Force industrial fund.

2. Logistical support.—This activity finances the depot-level maintenance of materiel and operation of the Air Force supply system. The 1967 estimate reflects the continuing phase-out activities at three depots scheduled for closing in subsequent years.

3. Training support.—This provides for basic, technical, professional, and flying training of individuals. Operating costs of the Air Force Reserve program are also included.

4. Operational support.—Facilities are operated and maintained to support the strategic, air defense, tactical, and transport-troop carrier missions of the Air Force.

Costs cover on-the-line maintenance of aircraft and weapons, maintenance and operation of installations, missile sites, airfields and allied facilities, as well as other expenses necessary to assure and maintain operational readiness of the combat forces.

This activity also finances the air defense surveillance, warning, and control systems. In addition, there are included separately identifiable funds for the Alaska Communications System which provides telegraph and long-distance telephone service in Alaska to civilians as well as to the Department of Defense and other Government activities.

5. Medical support.—This activity finances the Air Force cost of medical care for military personnel and their families.

6. Servicewide support.—This program provides for the operation of Air Force and major command headquarters, intelligence and security activities, and the leasing of commercial communication systems and networks.

7. Contingencies.—These are extraordinary expenses approved and certified by the Secretary of the Air Force.

This appropriation finances the immediate Office of the Secretary of Defense, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and agencies of the Department of Defense which operate directly under the control of the Secretary of Defense.

1. Supply operations.—This activity covers the Defense Supply Agency, which provides contract administration services for the military departments and common supply and service support to military activities in the continental United States. The Agency manages inventories of $2 billion for eight material categories: fuel, food, clothing, medical, general, industrial, construction and electronics supplies. It also manages the Department of Defense owned idle industrial plant equipment inventory, valued at nearly $1 billion, to secure greater utilization of this equipment. The volume of procurement actions totaled $3 billion in 1965, and is expected to exceed $4 billion in 1966, and to fall between $3.5 and $4 billion in 1967. The Agency operates eight supply depots and the Defense Logistics Services Center, including the surplus sales offices.

The Agency is also responsible for the administration and supervision of the Department of Defense coordinated procurement programs, the Federal catalog program, the Defense materiel utilization program and the Defense surplus property disposal program.

2. Field operations.—This program activity includes the funds required for the support of the Armed Forces information and education activities of the Department of Defense; the Defense Communications Agency; the Defense Atomic Support Agency; the Defense Intelligence Agency; the Defense Contract Audit Agency and classified activities.

3. Interdepartmental activities.—Provision is made for the Department of Defense participation in and support of various interdepartmental activities, including the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing; the Missile Sites Labor Commission; the computer program for Office of the Special Representative for Trade Negotiations and others.

4. Management.—This covers the civilian salaries and other expenses of the Office of the Secretary of Defense and the Organization of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, in conjunction with the Office of Director of Civilian Marksmanship, promotes civilian interest in small arms marksmanship. Assistance is provided to approximately 5,900 clubs and schools with a total membership of approximately 417,500 by the loan of rifles and the issue of targets, trophies, medals, and badges for marksmanship.

The program is augmented by the issue of ammunition, from existing stocks or purchased with funds provided under other appropriations, to members of rifle clubs and to competitors at national, regional, and State competitions, as follows (in thousands of dollars):

The U.S. Court of Military Appeals serves as the court of last resort for all of the more serious court-martial convictions of military personnel. The number of cases docketed in 1965 totaled 935. As more men are entering our Armed Forces, an increase to over 1,000 cases is anticipated in 1966 and 1967. The court released 104 opinions in 1965 and expects to publish at least a similar number during 1966 and 1967.

In compliance with the uniform code of military justice, the court is maintaining a current docket. Review has been completed in 19,292 out of 19,407 cases since the court's establishment in 1951, leaving a balance of 115 under review.

Atomic Energy Commission: "Plant and capital equipment."

Federal Aviation Agency: "Operations."

United States Information Agency: "Salaries and expenses."

PROCUREMENT

The procurement appropriations of the Department of Defense finance the acquisition of capital equipment, such as aircraft, missiles, ships, combat vehicles, weapons, munitions, and communications; major items for support of the capital equipment when it is in use; the industrial facilities necessary to produce that equipment; and major modification of equipment in inventory where modernization can be achieved without buying new equipment. The capital equipment financed by these appropriations is principally procured from private contractors or produced in Government arsenals, shipyards, and plants.

The 1967 program continues the production of modern equipment and weapons in support of United States and allied forces operations in Southeast Asia. The equipment inventories necessary to support conventional as well as strategic warfare missions of armed services will continue to be augmented and modernized. The improving military capability to cope with war threats of any kind anywhere is supported by continuing programs to increase the mobility and firepower of ground forces, strengthen and support capabilities of the tactical air forces, modernize airlift forces, and augment the capabilities of antisubmarine warfare forces.

The appropriations for procurement of aircraft, missiles, ships, and tracked combat vehicles are dependent upon the enactment of authorizing legislation.

General and special funds:

PROCUREMENT OF EQUIPMENT AND MISSILES, ARMY

For expenses necessary for the procurement, manufacture, and modification of missiles, armament, ammunition, equipment, vehicles, vessels, and aircraft for the Army and the Reserve Officers' Training Corps; purchase of not to exceed two thousand [seven

This appropriation provides major items of combat and support equipment for approved Army forces in performing their assigned mission to meet successfully both atomic and conventional war requirements. It also provides for the procurement of spares and spare parts not covered in the Army stock fund as well as production engineering, tooling, and facilities in support of current procurement.

In 1967 the Army's direct budget plan totals $3,561 million, as compared to $2,580 million and $1,974 million for 1966 and 1965, respectively. This plan will be financed from new appropriations, recoupments from previous appropriations and budget plans, and anticipated reimbursements.

The 1967 program is specifically directed toward providing major items of combat and support equipment and ammunition for Army forces in Southeast Asia, replacing training consumption, filling combat essential equipment allowances for the ROAD active and high priority reserve Army force, and providing inventories of conventional munitions and equipment adequate for sustained combat operations. Modernization of older inventories is continued, thereby providing increased capabilities attainable through the introduction of improved weapons, equipment, and munitions.

1. Aircraft.—The 1967 program contains aircraft which are essential to the combat operation of field forces. To meet the Army's need for battlefield observation, troop movement, medical evacuation, and rapid logistical and tactical support for combat engaged forces, the 1967 program includes additional quantities of helicopters.

3. Missiles.—This activity includes both surface-to-air and surface-to-surface missiles. In the former category, continued procurement of Redeye missiles in 1967 will provide frontline combat units with an effective defense against low altitude enemy aircraft. Chaparral missile procurement is being increased to provide a forward area air defense system against high performance aircraft. Modification improvements to the Nike-Hercules and Hawk air-defense systems planned for 1967 will provide for a more effective air defense within CONUS and oversea theaters of operations.

The surface-to-surface missile program for 1967 continues procurement of Shillelagh missiles to further improve the armor defeating capability of Army combat elements. The initial procurement of Lance missiles is programmed for 1967 to provide for the introduction of improved mission support capabilities. Continued improvement modification of Pershing missiles is planned.

5. Tracked combat vehicles.—This activity covers the procurement of tracked combat vehicles, including related repair parts and support materiel and production base support. In 1967 the Army's tank inventory continues to be improved with the procurement of the General Sheridan armored reconnaissance vehicle, the M60 medium tank equipped with the Shillelagh turret, and retrofitting of M48 series tanks.

6. Weapons and other combat vehicles.—This activity covers all weapons fired by crews and individuals, and other combat vehicles. The 1967 program will provide materiel to replace training consumption, wearout, and obsolescence. Forward defense against high-performance aircraft will continue to be improved through the additional 1967 procurement of a mobile air defense system.

7. Tactical and support vehicles.—These are the unarmored wheeled vehicles which provide surface mobility to the field forces and the worldwide logistical system.

8. Communications and electronics equipment.—This activity provides reliable, rugged, and mobile communication equipment to achieve command control over dispersed forces and weapons systems.

9. Other support equipment.—This covers the logistical equipment essential to the mobility and maintenance of Army combat forces in the field including, in 1967, the continued modification of ships to augment the forward floating depot fleet.

10. Ammunition.—This activity finances the procurement of ammunition for all Army weapons except missiles.

11. Production-base support.—This activity provides industrial facilities needed for production of end items and components and for production engineering in advance of procurement. It also provides for the layaway of Government-owned plants and equipment at the time production is completed and where it has been established that the facilities will be required in the event of mobilization.

¹ Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are derived principally from cash sales to foreign governments of aircraft components, and spares and repair parts (22 U.S.C. 2315).

This appropriation finances the procurement of new aircraft, missiles, and supporting equipment for Navy and Marine forces. It also provides for necessary modifications to in-service aircraft and missiles, to eliminate safety hazards and enhance operational effectiveness. Drones and major flight and maintenance simulators are also procured under this appropriation. In addition, aircraft and missile spares and repair parts are procured.

1. Combat aircraft.—The 1967 program provides for procurement of additional carrier-based attack aircraft, land-based antisubmarine aircraft, antisubmarine helicopters, and helicopters to support the Marine vertical assault mission.

4. Other aircraft.—Procurement of an aircraft for delivery of aeronautical material between shore bases and carriers at sea is included.

5. Modification of aircraft.—This activity finances the costs of modifying in-service aircraft for increased capability or necessary flight-safety changes.

7. Aircraft support equipment and facilities.—This activity provides for aircraft industrial facilities, component improvement, and miscellaneous production costs.

8. Ballistic missiles.—This activity provides for procurement of the Polaris fleet ballistic missile and related support equipment.

9. Other missiles.—The family of ship-launched, surface-to-air missiles in 1967 includes the first full production of the new Standard missile as well as continued procurement of Talos and support items for Tartar and Terrier.

10. Modification of missiles.—This activity provides for the modification of missiles in inventory.

12. Other support equipment and facilities.—This activity includes funds for missile industrial facilities, primarily the replacement of machine tools used for production, and for the navigational satellite program.

This appropriation provides for the construction of ships and the conversion of existing ships, including all hull, mechanical and electrical equipment, electronics, guns, torpedo and missile launching systems, and communications systems. It also provides for the procurement of long-lead time items for ships for which authorization will be requested in the 1968 program.

The 1967 program continues the Navy's long-range modernization and replacement program, designed to provide the fleet with modern balanced forces which can effectively respond to a wide variety of challenges in supporting our national policies.

Attack aircraft carrier.—A nuclear-powered attack aircraft carrier will be constructed. This will be the second nuclear-powered carrier to be built and will provide a significant increase in the Navy's tactical air capability.

Antisubmarine warfare ships.—Twenty anti-submarine warfare ships will be constructed or converted to increase the long-range detection and weapon capability of the ASW fleet and to replace older ships. New construction consists of 5 nuclear-powered attack submarines and 10 destroyer escorts, and five destroyers will be converted.

Anti-air warfare ships.—Two new guided-missile destroyers with the new and highly capable Tartar D missile system will be built, and five frigates and one cruiser will be modernized to further increase fleet anti-air warfare capabilities.

Amphibious ships.—The program to improve our amphibious assault capabilities, which adds to our flexible limited war posture, will be continued with the construction of 12 ships of this type. Eleven of these ships are tank landing ships, while the twelfth is a dock landing ship.

Mine warfare.—Construction of five ocean mine-sweepers will continue the program to improve mine warfare capabilities and to replace smaller, slower, and less effective coastal minesweepers.

Logistics ships and craft.—Five ships will be constructed to provide larger, faster, and more efficient ships for supplying food, fuel, and ammunition to the Navy's ships at sea. These ships include a combat store ship, two ammunition ships, and two replenishment tankers. In addition, the program includes the modernization of two oilers for use with the Military Sea Transportation Service.

Research ships, auxiliaries and craft.—This portion of the 1967 program provides for the construction of one oceanographic research ship, two surveying ships, one fleet ocean tug, one submarine rescue vessel, two salvage tugs, and various craft.

¹ Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are principally the dollar value of Mutual Security Military Sales to friendly foreign nations (10 U.S.C. 2210).

All major equipment and weapons procurement for the Navy, except aircraft, missiles, and ships, is provided from this appropriation. Such procurement includes equipment to maintain and update naval forces afloat and the shore establishment, and includes items ranging from highly sophisticated electronics and weapons systems to the relatively common pumps and forklift trucks used by ships and supply depots. Substantial quantities of the weapons and ammunition funded in this appropriation are being used in Southeast Asia.

1. Ships support equipment.—Funded under this activity are replacement nuclear cores and other shipboard components necessary for maintenance replacement and alteration of active fleet ships.

2. Communications and electronics equipment.—This activity includes funds to increase the effectiveness of our antisubmarine warfare forces with modern, improved electronic equipment for detection and tracking of enemy submarines. Afloat communications to meet expanded command and control requirements are being emphasized, especially for carrier air defense and strike operations. Procurement of improved long-range radars and electronic warfare equipment will also add to fleet air defense capability.

3. Weapons and support equipment.—This activity finances the procurement of air launched ordnance, ship gun ammunition, ASW ordnance, ground electronics, and related support equipment for naval forces. These items include low drag and cluster bombs, television-guided bombs, rockets, torpedoes, and mines. Related equipment includes such items as fire control systems and launchers, handling and maintenance equipment, and catapults and arresting gear.

4. Civil engineering support equipment.—This activity finances the procurement of construction, weight handling, and transportation equipment primarily in support of Navy general purpose forces.

5. Supply support equipment.—Procurement of self-propelled materials handling equipment and automated materials handling systems, required in support of the Navy supply system, are financed within this activity.

6. Personnel and command support equipment.—This activity finances procurement of equipment, devices and aids for Regular Navy and Naval Reserve training, and procurement of industrial shop, photographic, printing, and oceanographic equipment for activities supported by the Chief of Naval Operations.

This appropriation provides the Marine Corps with weapons, ammunition, and related equipments, which are programmed for use by Marine general purpose forces such as Marine divisions, Marine aircraft wings, and tank and amphibious tractor battalions. These equipments provide the military hardware for support of seizure and defense of advanced bases, limited war landing operations, and general land warfare using a variety of tactics such as amphibious and vertical envelopment movements.

The 1967 program provides major items of combat and support equipment and ammunition for Marine forces in Southeast Asia. Also the program continues to improve the firepower, mobility, and communications of the approved forces. Tank and artillery ammunition and Redeye missiles will provide increased fire and staying power against ground and low-level aircraft targets. The capability for rapid dispersal of forces and weapons is met in the 1967 program by procurement of a

This appropriation provides for the procurement of aircraft, spares, components, industrial production facilities, supporting aerospace ground equipment, and modification of inservice aircraft.

1. Combat aircraft.—This activity provides for the procurement of aircraft to continue modernization of the combat forces through improved capability and flexibility. The procurement program for the F-111, two-place, variable swept-wing tactical fighter is continued in 1967. Initial procurement of the FB-111 strategic bomber is also included.

2. Airlift aircraft.—The procurement program for the new C-5A all-jet heavy transport is initiated and the final buy of the C-141 is included in this activity in 1967 with resulting improvement in military mobility and capability because of increased range, larger payload, and faster reaction time.

4. Other aircraft.—For 1967 this activity includes a procurement quantity of search and rescue helicopters and a small number of mission support type aircraft.

5. Modification of inservice aircraft.—This activity provides for modifications of inservice aircraft necessary for safety-of-flight and changes incorporating technical improvements keeping the force abreast of the latest state-of-the-art.

7. Aircraft support equipment and facilities.—This activity provides for industrial facilities, component improvements, common aerospace ground support equipment, war consumable items, and other charges.

This appropriation provides for procurement, modification, installation, and checkout of missiles, payloads, drones, guided rockets and the associated ground support and checkout equipment. It also procures technical data, spares support, missile propellants, transportation, expansion and nonrecurring maintenance of industrial facilities, and machine tool modernization.

1. Ballistic missiles.—This activity provides funds for intercontinental ballistic missile systems required for operational squadrons and crew training. The 1967 estimate continues the procurement, installation, and checkout of complete missiles, aerospace ground equipment, specialized training equipment, and the required technical data for the Minuteman II intercontinental ballistic missile program. Funds are also provided for the procurement of Titan II missiles to support the followon operational test program.

2. Other missiles.—The 1967 program covers procurement of the Shrike antiradiation missile, the Bullpup B air-to-ground missile, the Sparrow air-to-air missile, the Falcon air-to-air trainer, and the Firebee target drone.

3. Modification of inservice missiles.—This activity provides for the continued Minuteman updating and modernization program. Funds are also included for the conversion and modification of other missiles and support equipment for the purpose of correcting deficiencies, improving safety, and increasing mission capability.

5. Other support.—The 1967 estimate provides for the satellites, associated equipment, and services for the replenishment launch of the Initial Defense Communication Satellite program, for propellants, for modernization and maintenance of industrial facilities, and for classified projects.

1. Munitions and associated equipment.—The 1967 program substantially increases the Air Force capability to meet the tactical and air defense requirements of both conventional and nuclear war. The program also provides a variety of munitions to support operations in Southeast Asia.

2. Vehicular equipment.—The 1967 estimate provides for orderly replacements and minor augmentations in passenger-carrying vehicle programs and continued procurements of various other vehicles.

3. Electronics and telecommunications equipment.—The 1967 estimate provides continued procurements of communications hardware and ancillary support items for: (1) the command and control systems, including a mobile Tactical Air Control System, (2) an improved semiautomated backup system for the Continental U.S. Aircraft Control and Warning System, (3) improved ballistic missile early warning capabilities provided by an austere sea-launched ballistic missile detection system, and the first operational installations of an over-the-horizon radar system, (4) the worldwide Defense Communications System, including communications satisfying strictly Air Force requirements, and (5) cryptographic equipment to extend the secure voice and data capability within the Air Force. The 1967 estimate also provides for continued support of other electronic systems, subsystems, and programs.

4. Other base maintenance and support equipment.—The 1967 estimate provides for procurement at levels required to support the operational units and bases, worldwide.

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

The purpose of the programs funded in this title is to provide the Department of Defense with scientific and technological capabilities for the development, test, and improvement of advanced weapon systems and related equipment and techniques. In pursuit of this objective a spectrum of investigative and engineering activities is performed, including scientific research of military interest, exploratory and applied technology, design and fabrication of weapons and equipment for the future, and testing of these items to determine their military utility. This work is performed in Government laboratories, in universities, by industrial contractors, and by nonprofit organizations.

Appropriations in this title support the research, development, test, and evaluation activities of Army, Navy, Air Force, and Defense agencies. Research and development related to civil defense responsibilities of the Department of Defense is carried in the separate title, Civil Defense, in this chapter. The total 1967 request for Defense research and development appropriations is approximately level with the 1966 program, providing for continued emphasis on conventional and limited war systems as well as for necessary improvements to strategic and defensive systems. The conventional and limited war category, which will receive the largest portion of research and development funding, includes such major development efforts as the versatile F-111 aircraft, the C-5A cargo transport, and a host of smaller systems to maintain superiority in air and surface mobility, communications, firepower, undersea warfare, and advanced surveillance and detection systems. A new Minuteman III, the submarine launched Poseidon missile, penetration aids for Minuteman and Polaris, and the Nike-X antimissile system require extensive development in order to maintain viable strategic systems in the future. Funding for the total military space program will be reduced from the 1966 level as certain programs such as the Titan III space booster near completion of development. Funding for research related to military interests will increase, while general supporting programs remain relatively level in 1967.

Amounts for Defense agencies formerly classified exclusively under military sciences have been distributed to appropriate budget activities. The budget plans and estimated obligations under the appropriations in this title for Army, Navy, Air Force, Defense agencies, and emergency fund are summarized below (in thousands of dollars):

* Includes $151.6 million of proposed 1966 supplemental appropriations for Southeast Asia support.

1. Military sciences.—This activity includes basic research in the physical, mathematical, environmental, and other sciences, adding to the store of fundamental scientific knowledge and applications of importance for military purposes which lead to the development of new materials, components, and techniques. Among the many and widely varied scientific fields to be investigated under this activity in 1967 are physical properties of materials, performance of rocket fuels, microminiaturization of electronic components, meteorology, radio astronomy, and oceanography.

The principal support for such organizations as the Naval Research Laboratory, the Cambridge Research Laboratory, and the Rand Corp. is also provided here.

2. Aircraft and related equipment.—This activity funds research, development, test, and evaluation related to air frames, engines, and other installed equipment. The 1967 program furthers development of the interceptor, bomber, tactical fighter, and reconnaissance versions of the F-111 high-performance aircraft, light attack aircraft for the Navy and Air Force, and an Army advanced aerial fire-support helicopter. The flight testing program will continue on the YF-12A long-range interceptor and the Mach 3 research aircraft.

In addition, the program includes work to improve ground force mobility, logistics, firepower, and reconnaissance capabilities of other aircraft in support of tactical and limited war operations. Development of the C-5A cargo transport and of advanced engines and avionics will be continued in 1967. Research and test centers, such as the activities located at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, are funded here.

3. Missiles and related equipment.—This activity provides for research, development, test, and evaluation of missiles of all types. The development of the advanced design Nike-X system continues as a major and high priority effort in the field of defense against ballistic missiles. Development on the Minuteman III and the Poseidon ballistic missiles will be accelerated in 1967, as well as improvement of the operational Minuteman and Polaris systems, increasing their accuracy and ability to penetrate target defenses. Development of several tactical missiles will be pursued, including an advanced version of the Navy's Sparrow air-to-air missile and an improved Army surface-to-air missile.

In addition to funding participation by industry in the missile research and development program, this activity is a major source of funds for the operation of Government facilities, such as the Eastern and Western Test Ranges, the White Sands Missile Range, the Naval Ordnance Test Station, and the research and development programs at the Army's Redstone Arsenal.

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION—Continued

4. Military astronautics and related equipment.—This activity provides for programs directed toward the improvement of space technology for military purposes, and the investigation and development of specific military applications of space vehicles. Work will proceed on the manned orbiting laboratory (MOL), the Titan III, military communication satellites and improvements in satellite tracking capabilities. Supporting research and development in such areas as bioastronautics, secondary power sources, and guidance, reentry, and propulsion systems will continue. The Air Force Arnold Engineering Development Center is also supported under this activity.

5. Ships, small craft, and related equipment.—This activity provides for design of new type ships and development of shipboard equipment. Funds in this activity will provide in 1967 for the development of advanced propulsion plants, long-range detection sonar, command and control systems, and aircraft catapults and arresting gear. Antisubmarine warfare equipment designed to detect and identify modern nuclear submarines will continue to be financed at a high level. A significant part of the research and development effort of the Naval Electronics Laboratory and the David Taylor Model Basin is funded under this activity.

6. Ordnance, combat vehicles, and related equipment.—The Army's 1967 program includes improved artillery, combat vehicles, mortars, antitank weapons, tank armament, and small arms. The program continues development and evaluation of vehicles and weapons with emphasis on requirements for limited or unconventional warfare in remote areas. Development of improved landing and amphibious vehicles for the Marine Corps is financed in this activity. The 1967 Navy program continues to emphasize antisubmarine weapons including torpedoes, mines, and depth charges. The principal support for the Naval Ordnance Laboratory at White Oak, Md., and for research and development activities at several Army arsenals is also funded here.

7. Other equipment.—This activity provides for research, development, test, and evaluation of equipment not separately provided under other activities. Examples of the types of equipment developed for the three services are as follows: A deep submergence vehicle development program and other systems for personnel rescue and underwater research; chemical and biological agent detection and protection; combat surveillance; tactical and strategic communications; mapping and geodetic systems; amphibious warfare support equipment; aircraft control and warning; missile detection; and other electronic systems. Much of the support for the research and development effort at the Army Electronic Research and Development Laboratory, the Mitre Corp., and the Lincoln Laboratories is provided under this activity.

8. Programwide management and support.—For the Army and the Navy this activity provides for those costs of operation, management and maintenance of research, development, and test facilities which are not distributed directly to other budget activities. For the Air Force it provides for certain costs of central administration such as the Air Force systems command headquarters and divisions as well as several large research, development, test, and evaluation installations.

9. Emergency fund.—The emergency fund enables the Secretary of Defense to support the exploitation of new scientific developments and technological breakthroughs and to provide for other unforeseen contingencies in the research, development, test, and evaluation programs.

General and special funds:

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION, ARMY

For expenses necessary for basic and applied scientific research, development, test, and evaluation, including maintenance, rehabilitation, lease, and operation of facilities and equipment, as authorized by law; [$1,406,400,000] $1,518,900,000, to remain available until expended. MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

The direct military construction programs for the Armed Forces, both Regular and Reserve, shown in the individual schedules of this title are summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

	1965 actual	1966 estimate	1967 estimate
Regular Forces-----	937,867	2,259,203	575,749
Reserve Forces-----	30,700	42,500	28,400
Interservice activities-----	19,551	226,720	7,547
Total-----	988,118	2,528,423	611,696

Most of the appropriations required for the military construction accounts are dependent upon the enactment of authorizing legislation. The details of this legislation have been completed and are being submitted to the Congress for early consideration.

1. Major construction.—This category provides for acquisition of land for and construction of military projects in the United States and overseas as authorized in currently effective military construction acts and the new authorization referred to above. These authorizations include construction projects as defined in Department of Defense Directive 7040.2 where the estimated cost of such construction generally exceeds $25 thousand per project. Under this category the major program elements proposed for 1967 are as follows:

Strategic retaliatory forces.—Provision has been made for upgrading and completion of the previously approved Minuteman sites and for increasing the reliability and survivability of ballistic missile facilities. Funds are also included for facilities to permit realignment and to insure safe and continued operation of strategic aircraft.

Continental air and missile defense forces.—Structures to provide for site relocation and consolidation of forces and necessary control and warning systems are proposed. Funds are provided for the construction of operational, training, maintenance, personnel, and other facilities to maintain the capability of interceptor aircraft.

General purpose forces.—For the Army elements of these forces the program provides for troop housing, operational and storage projects at overseas sites, and utilities improvements. For the Navy elements provision is made for improved support of the strike, antisubmarine warfare, and Marine forces by an increase in capabilities at shore stations in the United States and overseas for training of personnel and for efficient, economical, and safe operation and maintenance of ships and aircraft. The Air Force portion of this program provides for construction of operational, training, maintenance, supply, and personnel facilities at bases in the United States and overseas for the tactical forces. A portion of the program provides facilities which will reduce the vulnerability of aircraft at various oversea locations.

Sealift and airlift forces.—Additional operational and maintenance facilities will be provided for increased effectiveness of the transport aircraft assigned to the Tactical Air Command and the Military Air Transport Command.

Reserve forces.—The facilities required for the training of the Reserve Forces include: armories, training centers and summer camps, nonarmory facilities such as maintenance shops and warehouses; and aviation facilities such as airfield pavements, maintenance shops, and training buildings. Under the realignment plan of the Army Guard and Reserve, all facilities required to support these forces will be financed in the Military Construction, Army National Guard appropriation beginning 1967.

Research and development.—A major portion of the Army's research construction effort is for facilities supporting development of the Nike-X missile system. The significant Navy projects include construction of Naval missile development facilities at Patrick Air Force Base, Fla., and facilities at various research installations to enable an increase in knowledge and capabilities in the various fields including underwater weapons and sound detection. Air Force construction includes facilities for continued improvement of the Atlantic and Pacific missile ranges, test facility for the C-5A airplane at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., a toxic hazards laboratory at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio, and manned orbital laboratory facilities at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif.

General support.—This grouping includes those operational and training, communication, maintenance and production, supply, medical, administrative, and troop housing and community facilities, and utilities and ground improvement which are not identifiable with nor directly relatable to any one particular force or weapons system. This grouping also covers the construction needs of the following Defense agencies: Defense Atomic Support Agency, Defense Communications Agency, Defense Intelligence Agency, Defense Supply Agency, National Security Agency, and the Advanced Research Projects Agency.

2. Minor construction.—Provision is made for construction of permanent and temporary projects that are not otherwise authorized by law but which are determined to be urgently required and do not exceed $200 thousand per project for the Regular Forces, and $50 thousand per project for the Reserve Forces. Provision is made in the applicable operation and maintenance appropriations for construction projects as defined in Department of Defense Directive 7040.2 where the estimated cost of such construction is $25 thousand or less per project.

3. Planning.—This provides for necessary planning of military construction projects, including design, standards, criteria, studies, appraisals, and other related activities.

4. Supporting activities.—Provision is made for activities such as the defense access road program and minor land acquisitions.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, ARMY

For acquisition, construction, installation, and equipment of temporary or permanent public works, military installations, and facilities for the Army as currently authorized in military public works or military construction Acts, and in sections 2673 and 2675 of title 10, United States Code, [$323,443,000] $190,600,000, to remain available until expended. (Military Construction Appropriation Act, 1966; additional authorizing legislation to be proposed for $170,100,000.)

FAMILY HOUSING

The Department of Defense Family Housing Management Account (76 Stat. 237) finances all expenses of the military family housing program. Funds provided in annual Military Construction Appropriation Acts under the title "Family Housing, Defense" are transferred to this account for obligation and expenditure. This appropriation is dependent on the enactment of authorizing legislation, the details of which have been completed and are being submitted to the Congress for early consideration. An appropriation of $521.9 million is requested for 1967 for the operation and maintenance of family housing and related facilities, for leasing of family housing, for payments required on the indebtedness assumed to acquire Capehart and Wherry housing and to build surplus commodity housing in foreign countries, and for authorized payments of servicemen's mortgage insurance premiums.

Provision is made in the following schedules to proceed after 1966 with the construction of the 8,500 family housing units authorized and funded in 1966 but deferred in December 1965 following a review of Defense Department expenditures focused on meeting higher priority requirements in direct support of combat forces in Vietnam and elsewhere. On this basis, no additional funds are required in 1967 for new family housing construction. A temporary increase in leasing authority is proposed to alleviate the shortage of public quarters at installations where family housing needs are critical.

FAMILY HOUSING, DEFENSE

For expenses of family housing for the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, and Defense agencies, [for construction, including acquisition, replacement, addition, expansion, extension and alteration, and] for operation, maintenance, and debt payment, including leasing, minor construction, principal and interest charges and insurance premiums, as authorized by law, 【$665,846,000】 $521,900,000, to be obligated and expended in the Family Housing Management Account established pursuant to section 501(a) of Public Law 87-554, in not to exceed the following amounts:

1. Construction—(a) Construction of new housing.—No funds are required for this activity in 1967 since it is planned to proceed in 1967 with the construction of the 8,500 units authorized and funded in 1966 but deferred in mid-1966. Expenditures for this housing were deferred in view of the increase in expenditures for higher priority items required in direct support of the combat forces in Southeast Asia.

(b) Acquisition of Wherry housing.—The program to acquire Wherry housing has been essentially completed; accordingly, no funds for acquisition are required in 1967.

(c) Construction improvements.—In order to meet higher priority requirements in direct support of combat forces in Vietnam and elsewhere, no construction improvement program is planned for 1967.

(d) Planning.—No additional funds are required for planning in 1967 in view of the plan to proceed in 1967 with the construction deferred in 1966.

(e) Rental guarantee payments.—The last of the rental guarantee agreements entered into under the original authority (66 Stat. 622) expired in 1965 and no agreements have been entered into under the existing authority (77 Stat. 326); accordingly, no funds are required in 1967.

2. Operation, maintenance, and debt payment—(a) Operation.—$178.4 million is required in 1967 for the operation of an estimated 387,675 family housing units (including leased units); and $32.6 million is required in 1967 to lease 15,811 units in both the United States and in foreign countries as part of the program to provide adequate family housing for eligible personnel. The increase in leased units is intended to temporarily offset the deferral of new construction.

(b) Maintenance of real property.—The cost of maintenance and repair of the 1967 family housing inventory is estimated at $147.7 million. Minor alterations, not to exceed an average of $50 per unit, are funded in this subactivity.

(c) Debt payment.—A total of $159.7 million is required in 1967 to reduce the indebtedness assumed to acquire Capehart, Wherry, and surplus commodity housing and for related expenses as follows (in millions of dollars):

	Principal	Interest	Total
Capehart housing.....	54.2	64.5	118.7
Wherry housing.....	16.4	18.6	35.0
Surplus commodity housing.....	6.0	---	6.0
Total.....	76.6	83.1	159.7

(d) Mortgage insurance premiums.—Premium payments are required on mortgage insurance provided by the Federal Housing Administration: (1) through the General insurance fund on mortgages assumed by Defense to acquire Capehart and Wherry housing; and (2) on mortgages assumed by active military personnel for housing purchased under the provisions of section 124, Public Law 83-560. The premiums on Capehart housing in 1967 are estimated at $2.5 million; on Wherry housing at $0.8 million; and on servicemen-owned housing at $5.1 million, for a total of $8.3 million.

Since the bulk of the personal services funded from the Family Housing, Defense, appropriation is on a reimbursable part-time basis, it is not reflected in the foregoing personnel summary. The following supplementary schedule is provided to indicate the man-year equivalent of all the personal services supported by this appropriation and the compensation paid therefor. The full-time positions paid directly from this appropriation are listed in the schedule of personnel compensation provided for this appropriation. The positions partially supported by reimbursement from this appropriation are listed in the schedules of personnel compensation provided for each of the sponsoring Defense appropriations.

SURPLUS COMMODITY FAMILY HOUSING PROGRAM

The following informational schedule shows the use of foreign currencies, accrued from the sale of surplus agricultural commodities to foreign countries (68 Stat. 545), allocated to Defense to build family housing and related facilities for use by Defense personnel serving abroad. The last allocation of foreign currencies for this purpose was made in 1961.

RENTAL GUARANTEE FAMILY HOUSING PROGRAM

The original authority (66 Stat. 622) under which Defense entered into rental guarantee agreements with private sponsors of family housing built in foreign countries for rental to Defense personnel expired on June 30, 1963, and the last of the agreements entered into under that authority was terminated on September 1, 1964. Against the $31 million in guaranteed rentals still in effect at the beginning of 1964, rentals paid by the occupants through the end of 1964 aggregated $24.5 million and guarantee payments made by Defense amounted to $5.8 million. The $728 thousand balance of the guaranteed rentals outstanding at the beginning of 1965 was liquidated during that year with rentals of $368 thousand paid by the occupants and $360 thousand of guarantee payments by Defense.

The Military Construction Authorization Act, 1964, authorized (77 Stat. 326, as amended by 79 Stat. 814) Defense to enter into new rental guarantee agreements through 1967 for not more than 5,000 units. No such agreement may guarantee payment of more than 97% of the anticipated rentals, nor may any guarantee extend for a period exceeding 10 years, nor may the average rental in any project exceed $150 per unit per month including the cost of operation and maintenance. Since it is not expected that any housing built pursuant to this new authority will be available for occupancy until 1968, and all of the earlier agreements have now expired or have been terminated, no funds are expected to be required for guarantee payments in either 1966 or 1967. Agreements planned to be entered into in 1967 for the rental of 2,300 units are expected to result in a contingent liability estimated at $39.1 million for guaranteed rental payments over the period covered by the planned agreements.

1. Warning and detection.—Provides for the operation, maintenance and continuing development of the nationwide emergency warning system and for the procurement and distribution of radiological equipment to develop and maintain an effective detection and monitoring system. The $1.6 million increase is required primarily for testing of a radio system being developed for warning communications and for procurement of aerial radiological equipment.

2. Emergency operations.—Provides for the support of those activities which are required to develop and maintain an optimum capability to perform essential actions in emergency periods to enhance survival probabilities. The $3.2 million increase requested is needed principally for expansion of education and training activities vital to achieving this level of emergency operations readiness.

3. Financial assistance to States.—Provides grants to State and local governments to assist them in meeting their responsibilities under the Federal Civil Defense Act of 1950, as amended. The $7.5 million increase in this assistance is necessary primarily to meet requests of new participants for such assistance to enable these governments to develop and maintain their emergency operations capability in support of the national civil defense program.

4. Management.—Provides for the administrative expenses of the Office of Civil Defense staff; i.e., salaries, travel, and supporting costs for management and administration of the national civil defense program.

1. Shelters.—Provides for the development of a nationwide inventory of fallout shelters and plans for their use in emergency periods to enhance survival probabilities. The $14.6 million increase requested for 1967 is primarily for testing of a program designed to obtain additional public fallout shelter in shelter deficit areas by providing limited financial assistance to incorporate low-cost dual-use shelter space in selected new non-Federal construction projects.

2. Research and development.—Provides for studies necessary to develop and maintain an effective and efficient national civil defense system. Major emphasis in 1967 will be directed toward investigations in fallout radiation shielding, development of fire defense systems, and analyses of the consequences of various nuclear attack situations on selected localities.

This fund finances the central procurement of civil defense materials toward which contributions to the States are authorized on a matching fund basis. The fund is reimbursed for purchases from Office of Civil Defense appropriations and from funds provided by the States (65 Stat. 61).

No significant change is anticipated in requests for central procurement from States and local governments. A transfer of $1 million to Operation and maintenance, Civil Defense, is recommended for 1967 to reduce the working capital of the fund to a level more consistent with requirements.

Intragovernmental funds:

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE STOCK FUNDS

The Department of Defense Stock Funds finance the acquisition of inventories of material and supplies for resale and mobilization (10 U.S.C. 2208). These inventories are stocked and sold at designated defense activities worldwide.

Budget program.—The increase in obligations in 1966 and 1967 results from increased sales in support of Southeast Asia and a buildup of additional on hand and on order levels to support these sales. Total inventory is estimated to be reduced by $539 million during the 3-year period from the beginning of 1965 to the end of 1967, due to sale of stock without replacement, decapitalization and transfers for donation or sale as surplus. Yearend inventories are estimated as follows (in millions of dollars):

Financing the budget program.—Funds for financing the budget program are derived from sales to authorized customers. Sales are forecast to increase by $1,055 million from 1966 to 1967, while gross expenditures increase by $707 million as indicated below:

GROSS EXPENDITURES (in thousands of dollars)

Army stock fund.....	2,113,232	3,304,600	3,622,000

Total.....	6,470,184	9,051,700	9,758,900

DOD stock funds are authorized to incur obligations in anticipation of future year business (10 U.S.C. 2210(b)). This is necessary because the leadtime on material to be procured is greater than the time required to fill and collect for customer orders. Pursuant to this authority, contract authorization of $105 million was available in 1965, reducing to $79 million by the end of 1967.

Operating results and financial condition.—Net losses of $191, $305, and $107 million are reflected in 1965, 1966, and 1967, respectively. These losses result largely from disposal or donations of stocks in long supply and are expected to be reduced as the amount of surplus material in the supply system decreases.

Investment (equity) of the U.S. Government at the end of 1967 is estimated at $5,899 million including $16,042 million in inventory and other assets capitalized less $3,733 million in working capital transferred out and a cumulative operating deficit of $6,410 million.

INDUSTRIAL FUNDS

Department of Defense Industrial funds finance industrial and commercial type activities on a reimbursable basis (10 U.S.C. 2208). The programs are supported by orders citing the customers' appropriations. Costs are initially financed by the industrial funds' working capital and subsequently billed to customers' appropriations. Government investment as of June 30, 1967, is estimated at $330.1 million.

The Army Industrial fund is currently used at the Munitions Command, Missile Command, Weapons Command, transportation and traffic management activity, depot maintenance activities, two proving grounds, one research laboratory, and the Army Pictorial Center. New orders in 1966 and 1967 will increase from the 1965 figure due to increased activity in almost all programs. The balance of unbilled customer orders is expected to be reduced from $390.9 million at the end of 1965 to $337.6 million by the end of 1967.

The Navy Industrial fund finances 9 shipyards, 32 printing plants, 6 ordnance plants, 7 aircraft overhaul and repair facilities, 7 Public Works Centers, 3 research activities, and the Military Sea Transportation Service. The cost of goods and services produced by activities operated under the Navy Industrial fund is expected to increase in 1966 as compared to 1965 by $198 million or 9.5%. The increase reflects increased activity in all programs. The increase in 1967 of $79 million is primarily in MSTs.

The Air Force Industrial fund finances 10 printing plants, 40 laundries and the Military Airlift Command. Revenue is expected to increase over the 1965 level in 1966 and increase in 1967 over 1966, due to anticipated increases in requirements for airlift service.

The Defense Industrial fund currently finances the Defense Clothing and Textile Supply Center and the communications services activity. Costs increase for 1966 because the communications services activity is added in that year. Costs increase in 1967 reflecting further expansion of service provided by the communications activity.

This fund represents advances received for goods or services furnished foreign governments and private parties (31 U.S.C. 643). Authorized individuals and organizations requesting goods or services are required to advance amounts to cover the estimated value to this fund. These advances are then used to reimburse the Operation and maintenance, Navy, appropriation for the value of goods provided or services rendered. Advances received from foreign governments are principally for sales of material and miscellaneous services.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 601. During the current fiscal year, the Secretary of Defense and the Secretaries of the Army, Navy, and Air Force, respectively, if they should deem it advantageous to the national defense, and if in their opinions the existing facilities of the Department of Defense are inadequate, are authorized to procure services in accordance with section 15 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U.S.C. 55a), under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, and to pay in connection therewith travel expenses of individuals, including actual transportation and per diem in lieu of subsistence while traveling from their homes or places of business to official duty station and return as may be authorized by law: Provided, That such contracts may be renewed annually.

SEC. 602. During the current fiscal year, provisions of law prohibiting the payment of compensation to, or employment of, any person not a citizen of the United States shall not apply to personnel of the Department of Defense.

SEC. 603. Appropriations contained in this Act shall be available for insurance of official motor vehicles in foreign countries, when required by laws of such countries; payments in advance of expenses determined by the investigating officer to be necessary and in accord with local custom for conducting investigations in foreign countries incident to matters relating to the activities of the department concerned; reimbursement of General Services Administration for security guard services for protection of confidential files; reimbursement of the Federal Bureau of Investigation for expenses in connection with investigation of defense contractor personnel; and all necessary expenses, at the seat of government of the United States of America or elsewhere, in connection with communication and other services and supplies as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act: Provided, That no appropriation contained in this Act, and no funds available from prior appropriations to component departments and agencies of the Department of Defense, shall be used to pay tuition or to make other payments to educational institutions in connection with the instruction or training of file clerks, stenographers, and typists receiving, or prospective file clerks, stenographers, and typists who will receive compensation at a rate below the minimum rate of pay for positions allocated to grade GS-5 under the Classification Act of 1949, as amended.

SEC. 604. Any appropriation available to the Army, Navy, or the Air Force may, under such regulations as the Secretary concerned may prescribe, be used for expenses incident to the maintenance, pay, and allowances of prisoners of war, other persons in Army, Navy, or Air Force custody whose status is determined by the Secretary concerned to be similar to prisoners of war, and persons detained in such custody pursuant to Presidential proclamation.

SEC. 605. Appropriations available to the Department of Defense for the current fiscal year for maintenance or construction shall be available for acquisition of land as authorized by section 2672 of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 606. Appropriations for the Department of Defense for the current fiscal year shall be available, (a) except as authorized by the Act of September 30, 1950 (20 U.S.C. 236-244), for primary and secondary schooling for minor dependents of military and civilian personnel of the Department of Defense residing on military or naval installations or stationed in foreign countries, as authorized for the Navy by section 7204 of title 10, United States Code, [in amounts not exceeding an average of $455 per student,] when the Secretary of the Department concerned finds that schools, if any, available in the locality, are unable to provide adequately for the education of such dependents; Provided, That the foregoing amount may be exceeded to the extent necessary to provide for any increase in tuition payments required by law to be made to the Canal Zone Government during the current fiscal year; (b) for expenses in connection with administration of occupied areas; (c) for payment of rewards as authorized for the Navy by section 7209(a) of title 10, United States Code, for information leading to the discovery of missing naval property or the recovery thereof; (d) for payment of deficiency judgments and interests thereon arising out of condemnation proceedings; (e) for leasing of buildings and facilities including payment of rentals for special purpose space at the seat of government and, in the conduct of field exercises and maneuvers or, in administering the provisions of 43 U.S.C. 315q, rentals may be paid in advance; (f) payments under contracts for maintenance of tools and facilities for twelve months beginning at any time during the fiscal year; (g) maintenance of Defense access roads certified as important to national defense in accordance with section 210 of title 23, United States Code; (h) for the purchase of milk for enlisted personnel of the Department of Defense heretofore made available pursuant to section 1446a, title 7, United States Code, and the cost of milk so purchased, as determined by the Secretary of Defense, shall be included in the value of the commuted ration.

SEC. 607. Appropriations for the Department of Defense for the current fiscal year shall be available for: (a) donations of not to exceed $25 to each prisoner upon each release from confinement in military or contract prison and to each person discharged for fraudulent enlistment; (b) authorized issues of articles to prisoners, applicants for enlistment and persons in military custody; (c) subsistence of selective service registrants called for induction, applicants for enlistment, prisoners, civilian employees as authorized by law, and supernumeraries when necessitated by emergent military circumstances; (d) reimbursement for subsistence of enlisted personnel while sick in hospitals; (e) expenses of prisoners confined in nonmilitary facilities; (f) military courts, boards, and commissions; (g) utility services for buildings erected at private cost, as authorized by law, and buildings on military reservations authorized by regulations to be used for welfare and recreational purposes; (h) exchange fees, and losses in the accounts of disbursing officers or agents in accordance with law; (i) expenses of Latin-American cooperation as authorized for the Navy by law (10 U.S.C. 7208); and, (j) expenses of apprehension and delivery of deserters, prisoners, and members absent without leave, including payment of rewards of not to exceed $25 in any one case.

SEC. 608. Insofar as practicable, the Secretary of Defense shall assist American small business to participate equitably in the furnishing of commodities and services financed with funds appropriated under this Act by making available or causing to be made available to suppliers in the United States, and particularly to small independent enterprises, information, as far in advance as possible, with respect to purchases proposed to be financed with funds appropriated under this Act, and by making available or causing to be made available to purchasing and contracting agencies of the Department of Defense information as to commodities and services produced and furnished by small independent enterprises in the United States, and by otherwise helping to give small business an opportunity to participate in the furnishing of commodities and services financed with funds appropriated by this Act.

SEC. 609. No appropriation contained in this Act shall be available for expenses of operation of messes (other than organized messes the operating expenses of which are financed principally from nonappropriated funds) at which meals are sold to officers or civilians except under regulations approved by the Secretary of Defense, which shall (except under unusual or extraordinary circumstances) establish rates for such meals sufficient to provide reimbursement of operating expenses and food costs to the appropriations concerned: Provided, That officers and civilians in a travel status receiving a per diem allowance in lieu of subsistence shall be charged at the rate of not less than $2.50 per day: Provided further, That for the purposes of this section payments for meals at the rates established hereunder may be made in cash or by deduction from the pay of civilian employees: Provided further, That members of organized nonprofit youth groups sponsored at either the national or local level, when extended the privilege of visiting a military installation and permitted to eat in the general mess by the commanding officer of the installation, shall pay the commuted ration cost of such meal or meals.

SEC. 610. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be available until expended unless expressly so provided elsewhere in this or some other appropriation Act.

SEC. 611. Appropriations of the Department of Defense available for operation and maintenance, may be reimbursed during the current fiscal year for all expenses involved in the preparation for disposal and for the disposal of military supplies, equipment, and materiel, and for all expenses of production of lumber or timber products pursuant to section 2665 of title 10, United States Code, from amounts received as proceeds from the sale of any such property: Provided, That a report of receipts and disbursements under this limitation shall be made quarterly to the Committees on Appropriations of the Congress: Provided further, That no funds available to agencies of the Department of Defense shall be used for the operation, acquisition, or construction of new facilities or equipment for new facilities in the continental limits of the United States for metal scrap baling or shearing or for melting or sweating aluminum scrap unless the Secretary of Defense or an Assistant Secretary of Defense designated by him determines, with respect to each facility involved, that the operation of such facility is in the national interest.

SEC. 612. (a) During the current fiscal year, the President may exempt appropriations, funds, and contract authorizations, available for military functions under the Department of Defense, from the provisions of subsection (c) of section 3679 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, whenever he deems such action to be necessary in the interests of national defense.

(b) Upon determination by the President that such action is necessary, the Secretary of Defense is authorized to provide for the cost of an airborne alert as an excepted expense in accordance with the provisions of Revised Statutes 3732 (41 U.S.C. 11).

(c) Upon determination by the President that it is necessary to increase the number of military personnel on active duty beyond the number for which funds are provided in this Act, the Secretary of Defense is authorized to provide for the cost of such increased military personnel, as an excepted expense in accordance with the provisions of Revised Statutes 3732 (41 U.S.C. 11).

(d) The Secretary of Defense shall immediately advise the Committees on Appropriations of the Congress of the exercise of any authority granted in this section, and shall report monthly on the estimated obligations incurred pursuant to subsections (b) and (c).

SEC. 613. No appropriation contained in this Act shall be available in connection with the operation of commissary stores of the agencies of the Department of Defense for the cost of purchase (including commercial transportation in the United States to the place of sale but excluding all transportation outside the United States) and maintenance of operating equipment and supplies, and for the actual or estimated cost of utilities as may be furnished by the Government and of shrinkage, spoilage, and pilferage of merchandise under the control of such commissary stores, except as authorized under regulations promulgated by the Secretaries of the military departments concerned, with the approval of the Secretary of Defense, which regulations shall provide for reimbursement therefor to the appropriations concerned and, notwithstanding any other provision of law, shall provide for the adjustment of the sales prices in such commissary stores to the extent necessary to furnish sufficient gross revenue from sales of commissary stores to make such reimbursement: Provided, That under such regulations as may be issued pursuant to this section all utilities may be furnished without cost to the commissary stores outside the continental United States and in Alaska: Provided further, That no appropriation contained in this Act shall be available in connection with the operation of commissary stores within the continental United States unless the Secretary of Defense has certified that items normally procured from commissary stores are not otherwise available at a reasonable distance and a reasonable price in satisfactory quality and quantity to the military and civilian employees of the Department of Defense.

SEC. 614. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, Executive order, or regulation, no part of the appropriations in this Act shall be available for any expenses of operating aircraft under the jurisdiction of the Armed Forces for the purpose of proficiency flying except in accordance with the regulations issued by the Secretaries of the Departments concerned and approved by the Secretary of Defense which shall establish proficiency standards and maximum and minimum flying hours for this purpose: Provided, That without regard to any provision of law or Executive order prescribing minimum flight requirements, such regulations may provide for the payment of flight pay at the rates prescribed in section 301 of title 37, United States Code, to certain members of the Armed Forces otherwise entitled to receive flight pay during the current fiscal year (1) who have held aeronautical ratings or designations for not less than fifteen years, or (2) whose particular assignment outside the United States or in Alaska makes it impractical to participate in regular aerial flights.

SEC. 615. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be available for expense of transportation, packing, crating, temporary storage, drayage, and unpacking of household goods and personal effects in [excess of eleven thousand pounds net in any one shipment] any one shipment having a net weight in excess of thirteen thousand five hundred pounds for officers in pay grades O-7 through O-10; of twelve thousand pounds for officers in pay grade O-6; and eleven thousand pounds for all others.

SEC. 616. Vessels under the jurisdiction of the Department of Commerce, the Department of the Army, Department of the Air Force, or the Department of the Navy may be transferred or otherwise made available without reimbursement to any such agencies upon the request of the head of one agency and the approval of the agency having jurisdiction of the vessels concerned.

SEC. 617. None of the funds provided in this Act shall be available for training in any legal profession nor for the payment of tuition for training in such profession: Provided, That this limitation shall not apply to the off-duty training of military personnel as prescribed by section 621 of this Act.

SEC. 618. Not more than 20 per centum of the appropriations in this Act which are limited for obligation during the current fiscal year shall be obligated during the last two months of the fiscal year: Provided, That this section shall not apply to obligations for support of active duty training of civilian components or summer camp training of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

SEC. 619. During the current fiscal year the agencies of the Department of Defense may accept the use of real property from foreign countries for the United States in accordance with mutual defense agreements or occupational arrangements and may accept services furnished by foreign countries as reciprocal international courtesies or as services customarily made available without charge; and such agencies may use the same for the support of the United States forces in such areas without specific appropriation therefor.

In addition to the foregoing, agencies of the Department of Defense may accept real property, services, and commodities from foreign countries for the use of the United States in accordance with mutual defense agreements or occupational arrangements and such agencies may use the same for the support of the United States forces in such areas, without specific appropriations therefor: Provided, That within thirty days after the end of each quarter the Secretary of Defense shall render to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and the House of Representatives and to the Bureau of the Budget a full report of such property, supplies, and commodities received during such quarter.

SEC. 620. During the current fiscal year, appropriations available to the Department of Defense for research and development may be used for the purposes of section 2353 of title 10, United States Code, and for purposes related to research and development for which expenditures are specifically authorized in other appropriations of the service concerned.

SEC. 621. No appropriation contained in this Act shall be available for the payment of more than 75 per centum of charges of educational institutions for tuition or expenses for off-duty training of military personnel, nor for the payment of any part of tuition or expenses for such training for commissioned personnel who do not agree to remain on active duty for two years after completion of such training.

SEC. 622. No part of the funds appropriated herein shall be expended for the support of any formally enrolled student in basic courses of the senior division, Reserve Officers' Training Corps, who has not executed a certificate of loyalty or loyalty oath in such form as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of Defense.

SEC. 623. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be available for the procurement of any article of food, clothing, cotton, woven silk or woven silk blends, spun silk yarn for cartridge cloth, or wool (whether in the form of fiber or yarn or contained in fabrics, materials, or manufactured articles) not grown, reprocessed, reused, or produced in the United States or its possessions, except to the extent that the Secretary of the Department concerned shall determine that a satisfactory quality and sufficient quantity of any articles of food or clothing or any form of cotton, woven silk and woven silk blends, spun silk yarn for cartridge cloth, or wool grown, reprocessed, reused, or produced in the United States or its possessions cannot be procured as and when needed at United States market prices and except procurements outside the United States in support of combat operations, procurements by vessels in foreign waters and emergency procurements or procurements of perishable foods by establishments located outside the United States for the personnel attached thereto: Provided, That nothing herein shall preclude the procurement of foods manufactured or processed in the United States or its possessions: Provided further, That no funds herein appropriated shall be used for the payment of a price differential on contracts hereafter made for the purpose of relieving economic dislocations: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated in this Act shall be used except that, so far as practicable, all contracts shall be awarded on a formally advertised competitive bid basis to the lowest responsible bidder.

SEC. 624. None of the funds appropriated in this Act shall be used for the construction, replacement, or reactivation of any bakery, laundry, or dry-cleaning facility in the United States, its Territories or possessions, as to which the Secretary of Defense does not certify in writing, giving his reasons therefor, that the services to be furnished by such facilities are not obtainable from commercial sources at reasonable rates.

SEC. 625. During the current fiscal year, appropriations of the Department of Defense shall be available for reimbursement to the Post Office Department for payment of costs of commercial air transportation of military mail between the United States and foreign countries.

SEC. 626. Appropriations contained in this Act shall be available for the purchase of household furnishings and automobiles from military and civilian personnel on duty outside the continental United States, for the purpose of resale at cost to incoming personnel, and for providing furnishings, without charge, in other than public quarters occupied by military or civilian personnel of the Department of Defense on duty outside the continental United States or in Alaska, upon a determination, under regulations approved by the Secretary of Defense, that such action is advantageous to the Government.

SEC. 627. During the current fiscal year appropriations available to the Department of Defense for pay of civilian employees shall be available for uniforms, or allowances therefor, as authorized by the Act of September 1, 1954, as amended (5 U.S.C. 2131).

SEC. 628. During the current fiscal year, the Secretary of Defense shall, upon requisition of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, and without reimbursement, transfer from agencies of the Department of Defense to the Board ammunition from stock or which has been procured for the purpose in such amounts as he may determine.

Such appropriations of the Department of Defense available for obligation during the current fiscal year as may be designated by the Secretary of Defense shall be available for the travel expenses of military and naval personnel, including the reserve components, and members of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps attending regional, national, or international rifle matches.

SEC. 629. Funds provided in this Act for congressional liaison activities of the Department of the Army, the Department of the Navy, the Department of the Air Force, and the Office of the Secretary of Defense shall not exceed $950,000: Provided, That this amount shall be available for apportionment to the Department of the Army, the Department of the Navy, the Department of the Air Force, and the Office of the Secretary of Defense as determined by the Secretary of Defense.

SEC. 630. Of the funds made available by this Act for the services of the Military [Air Transport Service] Airlift Command, $100,000,000 shall be available only for procurement of commercial transportation service from carriers participating in the civil reserve air fleet program; and the Secretary of Defense shall utilize the services of such carriers which qualify as small businesses to the fullest extent found practicable: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense shall specify in such procurement, performance characteristics for aircraft to be used based upon modern aircraft operated by the civil air fleet.

SEC. 631. Not to exceed [$11,746,000] $12,647,300 of the funds made available in this Act for the purpose shall be available for the hire of motor vehicles: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense, under circumstances where the immediate movement of persons is imperative, may, if he deems it to be in the national interest, hire motor vehicles for such purposes without regard to this limitation.

SEC. 632. Not less than $7,500,000 of the funds made available in this Act for travel expenses in connection with temporary duty and permanent change of station of civilian and military personnel of the Department of Defense shall be available only for the procurement of commercial passenger sea transportation service on American-flag vessels.

SEC. 633. During the current fiscal year, appropriations available to the Department of Defense for operation may be used for civilian clothing, not to exceed $40 in cost for enlisted personnel: (1) discharged for misconduct, unfitness, unsuitability, or otherwise than honorably; (2) sentenced by a civil court to confinement in a civil prison or interned or discharged as an alien enemy; (3) discharged prior to completion of recruit training under honorable conditions for dependency, hardship, minority, disability, or for the convenience of the Government.

SEC. 634. No part of the funds appropriated herein shall be available for paying the costs of advertising by any defense contractor, except advertising for which payment is made from profits, and such advertising shall not be considered a part of any defense contract cost. The prohibition contained in this section shall not apply with respect to advertising conducted by any such contractor, in compliance with regulations which shall be promulgated by the Secretary of Defense, solely for (1) the recruitment by that contractor of personnel required for the performance by the contractor of obligations arising under a defense contract, (2) the procurement of scarce items required by the contractor for the performance of a defense contract, or (3) the disposal of scrap or surplus materials acquired by the contractor in the performance of a defense contract.

SEC. 635. Funds appropriated in this Act for maintenance and repair of facilities and installations shall not be available for acquisition of new facilities, or alteration, expansion, extension, or addition of existing facilities, as defined in Department of Defense Directive 7040.2, dated January 18, 1961, in excess of $25,000: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense may amend or change the said directive during the current fiscal year, consistent with the purpose of this section.

SEC. 636. During the current fiscal year, the Secretary of Defense may, if he deems it vital to the security of the United States and in the national interest to further improve the readiness of the Armed Forces, including the reserve components, transfer under the authority and terms of the Emergency Fund an additional $200,000,000: Provided, That the transfer authority made available under the terms of the Emergency Fund appropriation contained in this Act is hereby broadened to meet the requirements of this section: Provided further, That the Secretary of Defense shall notify the Appropriations Committees of the Congress promptly of all transfers made pursuant to this authority.

SEC. 637. None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used to make payments under contracts for any program, project, or activity in a foreign country unless the Secretary of Defense or his designee, after consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury or his designee, certifies to the Congress that the use, by purchase from the Treasury, of currencies of such country acquired pursuant to law is not feasible for the purpose, stating the reason therefor.

SEC. 638. None of the funds provided herein shall be used to pay any recipient of a grant for the conduct of a research project an amount equal to as much as the entire cost of such project.

SEC. 639. Only upon the approval by the Congress, through the enactment of law hereafter, of a realignment or reorganization of the Army Reserve Components, the Secretary may transfer the balances of appropriations made in this Act for the support of the Army Reserve Components to the extent necessary to implement such a realignment or reorganization; and the provisions in this Act establishing strengths for the Army Reserve and the Army National Guard shall cease to be effective.

SEC. 640. None of the funds provided in this Act shall be available for the expenses of the Special Training Enlistment Program (STEP).

SEC. 639. Appropriations available to the Department of Defense during the fiscal year 1967 shall be available to support Vietnamese and other Free World Forces in Vietnam and for related costs on such terms and conditions as the Secretary of Defense may determine: Provided, That unexpended balances, as determined by the Secretary of Defense, of funds heretofore allocated or transferred by the President to the Secretary of Defense for military assistance to support Vietnamese and other Free World Forces in Vietnam shall be transferred to any appropriation available to the Department of Defense for military functions (including construction), to be merged with and to be available for the same purposes and for the same time period as the appropriation to which transferred.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

SEC. 101. Funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for construction in prior years are hereby made available for construction authorized for each such department by the authorizations enacted into law during the [first] second session of the Eighty-ninth Congress.

SEC. 102. None of the funds appropriated in this Act shall be expended for payments under a cost-plus-a-fixed-fee contract for work, where cost estimates exceed $25,000, to be performed within the United States, except Alaska, without the specific approval in writing of the Secretary of Defense setting forth the reasons therefor.

SEC. 103. None of the funds appropriated in this Act shall be expended for additional costs involved in expediting construction unless the Secretary of Defense certifies such costs to be necessary to protect the national interest and establishes a reasonable completion date for each project, taking into consideration the urgency of the requirement, the type and location of the project, the climatic and seasonal conditions affecting the construction and the application of economical construction practices.

SEC. 104. None of the funds appropriated in this Act shall be used for the construction, replacement, or reactivation of any bakery, laundry, or drycleaning facility in the United States, its territories, or possessions, as to which the Secretary of Defense does not certify, in writing, giving his reasons therefor, that the services to be furnished by such facilities are not obtainable from commercial sources at reasonable rates.

SEC. 105. Funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for construction are hereby made available for hire of passenger motor vehicles.

SEC. 106. Funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for construction may be used for advances to the Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Commerce, for the construction of access roads as authorized by section 210 of title 23, United States Code, when projects authorized therein are certified as important to the national defense by the Secretary of Defense.

Sec. 107. None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used to begin construction of new bases inside the Continental United States for which specific appropriations have not been made.

Sec. 108. No part of the funds contained in this Act shall be used for the construction of hospitals or composite medical facilities which do not provide facilities for obstetrical services.

Sec. 109. No part of the funds provided in this Act shall be used for purchase of land or land easements in excess of 100 per centum of the value as determined by the Corps of Engineers or the Bureau of Yards and Docks, except: (a) where there is a determination of value by a Federal court, (b) purchases negotiated by the Attorney General or his designee, and (c) where the estimated value is less than $25,000.

Sec. 110. None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used to make payments under contracts for any project in a foreign country unless the Secretary of Defense or his designee, after consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury or his designee, certifies to the Congress that the use, by purchase from the Treasury, of currencies of such country acquired pursuant to law is not feasible for the purpose, stating the reason therefor.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—CIVIL DEFENSE

Appropriations contained in this Act for carrying out civil defense activities shall not be available in excess of the limitations on appropriations contained in section 408 of the Federal Civil Defense Act, as amended (50 U.S.C. App. 2260).

No part of any appropriation in this Act shall be available for the construction of warehouses or for the lease of warehouse space in any building which is to be constructed specifically for civil defense activities.

No part of any appropriation contained in this Act, or of the funds available for expenditure by any corporation or agency included in this Act, shall be used for construction of fallout shelters except in construction of new buildings under the heading, "Construction, Public Buildings Projects", for the fiscal year 1966.

Appropriations contained in this Act for the Department of Defense to carry out civil defense activities shall not be available for expenses of travel in excess of $595,000 or for printing and reproduction costs in excess of $2,450,000.

This appropriation provides funds for the operation and maintenance of the National Cemetery System and for the procurement and supply of headstones and markers for graves of eligible persons buried in national and private cemeteries.

1. Operation and maintenance.—The National Cemetery System consists of 118 activities located in 33 States, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia. Included are 85 national cemeteries and 33 miscellaneous burial plots and monument sites. A total of 46,005 interments were made in 1965; 49,698 are estimated for 1966 and 49,129 projected for 1967. There will be 2,556 developed acres to be maintained in 1967. Funds are required for 860 man-years of cemetery labor, for contractual services for maintenance of cemetery installations and for necessary operating supplies and equipment.

2. Construction.—Provision is made for 14 projects, including 3 gravesite development projects necessary to preclude closing of cemeteries to interments. An amount is also included for engineering investigations and preparation of plans for future requirements.

3. Headstone procurement.—The basis of the 1967 program is a 5.7% increase in normal applications.

CORPS OF ENGINEERS—CIVIL

The civil works program of the Corps of Engineers consists of a number of related activities for the control and development for beneficial use of water resources in the United States, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

The total appropriation requested is $1,290 million, which is $24 million less than the 1966 estimate and $36 million more than that for 1965.

General and special funds:

The following appropriations shall be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Army and the supervision of the Chief of Engineers for authorized civil functions of the Department of the Army pertaining to rivers and harbors, flood control, beach erosion, and related purposes:

GENERAL INVESTIGATIONS

For expenses necessary for the collection and study of basic information pertaining to river and harbor, flood control, shore protection, and related projects, and when authorized by law, surveys and studies of projects prior to authorization for construction, [$25,435,000] $32,078,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That [$310,000] $441,000 of this appropriation shall be transferred to the [United States Fish] Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife [Service] for studies, investigations, and reports thereon as required by the Fish and Wildlife Coordination Act of 1958 (72 Stat. 563-565) to provide that wildlife conservation shall receive equal consideration and be coordinated with other features of water-resource development programs of the Department of the Army.

[For an additional amount for "General investigations", $30,000.] (33 U.S.C. 426-426c, 540, 541, 701; Public Works Appropriation Act, 1966; Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1966.)

1. Surveys.—Navigation and flood control studies are made to determine the need and economic justification for proposed water and related land resource developments. Beach erosion control studies are undertaken to determine the need for shore protection and remedial measures at specific localities. Funds are provided in 1967 to continue 73 navigation, 142 flood control, and 13 beach erosion surveys. Sixteen navigation, fifteen flood control, and two beach erosion surveys will be initiated.

Comprehensive river basin studies provide for broad consideration of water and related land resources needs of river basins. They are coordinated with the related river basin planning efforts of the Departments of the Interior, Agriculture, and Health, Education, and Welfare. Twenty studies will be carried forward in the following basins:

- | | |
|---|---|
| 1. Big Black River, Miss. | 11. Pascagoula River basin, Miss. |
| 2. Big Muddy River, Ill. | 12. Pearl River basin, Miss. |
| 3. Columbia-North Pacific region | 13. Puget Sound area, Wash. |
| 4. Connecticut River basin, Conn., Mass., Vt., and N.H. | 14. Red River below Denison Dam, La., Ark., Okla., and Tex. |
| 5. Genesee River basin, N.Y. and Pa. | 15. Sabine River, Tex. |
| 6. Grand River basin, Mich. | 16. Susquehanna River basin, N.Y., Pa., and Md. |
| 7. Kanawha River, W. Va., Va., and N.C. | 17. Upper Mississippi River basin |
| 8. Missouri River basin | 18. Wabash River, Ind. and Ill. |
| 9. North Atlantic region | 19. White River basin, Ark. and Mo. |
| 10. Ohio River basin review | 20. Willamette River basin, Ore. |

Funds are requested to initiate three additional comprehensive studies—California region, Lower Colorado region, and Upper Colorado region.

Special studies are made to resolve unique or especially complex water resources problems. Seven studies will be continued and studies of the Chesapeake Bay and of Northeast water supply needs will be started.

Surveys are made in coordination with Federal, State, and local agencies and interests. They give appropriate consideration to present and future requirements for all beneficial uses of water and related land resources, including navigation, flood control, water supply, irrigation, water quality control, power, recreation, and fish and wildlife conservation.

2. Collection and study of basic data.—Funds are transferred to the Geological Survey for installation, operation, and maintenance of stream gaging stations; to the Weather Bureau for hydrometeorological studies and precipitation stations; to the Fish and Wildlife Service for preauthorization studies of the effects of proposed projects upon fish and wildlife; and to the U.S. Department of Commerce to enable transportation specialists of that department to assist the Corps of Engineers in the study of potential navigation projects. The Corps of Engineers participates on a number of engineering and control boards that study and control international streams mutually affecting the United States and Canada. Information for guidance in the use of flood plain areas is made available to States and local governmental agencies upon their request.

3. Research and development.—Coastal engineering research and development studies deal with physical phenomena, techniques, basic principles, and remedial or control measures related to shore protection and improvement. The results of these studies are disseminated to interested Federal, State, and local agencies and individuals.

Hydrologic studies include investigations of storms, rainfall, streamflow, sedimentation, and other phenomena to provide basic data used in the design, construction, and operation of water control structures.

Civil works investigations are made to improve procedures for analysis of hydrologic and engineering data, refine design methods, develop better materials and practices for the construction and maintenance of hydraulic structures, and improve procedures used in formulating plans for water resources development.

Studies are being carried out on the Mississippi River basin model to improve operation of the reservoir system in the basin and to study potential flood levels on the lower river. Maintenance of the model will be continued.

Nuclear explosives studies for civil construction are carried out as part of a joint research program with the Atomic Energy Commission. The ultimate objective is to develop an engineering capability to use nuclear explosives in construction of public works projects. The Corps of Engineers has primary responsibility for chemical explosive experiments and development of engineering, construction, and cost data.

The requested appropriation of $971 million represents a decrease of $23 million compared with the amount appropriated for 1966 and an increase of $14 million compared with 1965. About 77% of the requested appropriation will be applied to 59 major projects in amounts of $5 million or more each.

1. Advance engineering and design.—Design studies establish project features and cost estimates required for preparation of contract plans. The funds requested will bring designs and plans for a number of high priority projects to the stage where they will be ready for construction, and will permit continuation or initiation of planning on other needed projects. Funds are also requested to initiate and complete restudies of two projects.

2. Navigation projects.—This activity includes construction of locks, dams, and canals, and improvement of channels and harbors by dredging and by construction of breakwaters, jetties, and dikes. Provision is made also for the construction of small navigation projects not specifically authorized by Congress.

With the funds requested work will be continued in 1967 on 46 channel and harbor projects, of which 9 will be completed; and on 17 lock, dam, and canal projects, of which 2 will be completed. Construction will be initiated on 4 channel and harbor projects or project modifications, of which 2 will be completed:

CHANNEL AND HARBOR PROJECTS

| 2. Rouge River, Mich. ¹ | |
| 3. Lake Montauk Harbor, N.Y. | |

¹ To be initiated and completed.

3. Alteration of bridges over navigable waters.—Obstructive bridges over navigable waterways are altered under arrangements that provide for apportionment of the costs of alteration between the United States and the bridge owners. The funds requested will finance the Federal share of the cost of two continuing projects.

4. Beach erosion control projects.—The Federal Government assists in the construction of works for the restoration and protection against erosion by waves and currents of the shores of the United States and possessions. Existing law provides for Federal payment of 50% of the cost of beach erosion control works for the protection of non-Federal publicly owned or publicly used shores, and up to 70% of the cost of protection of State and other publicly owned shore parks and conservation areas that meet certain criteria. Provision is also made for small beach erosion control projects not requiring specific congressional authorization.

Funds are requested to continue six projects, initiate and complete the Haleiwa Beach, Hawaii, project, and initiate the Virginia Key and Key Biscayne, Fla., project. Reimbursements will be made to compensate local interests on the six continuing and one of the new projects.

5. Flood control projects.—This activity includes local protection projects and reservoirs for flood control and other purposes such as water supply, but without power installations. Local protection projects consist of channel improvements, levees, and floodwalls. Provision is made for snagging and clearing work on navigable streams and tributaries when such work is necessary in the interest of flood control; for emergency bank protection; and for the construction of small flood control projects not specifically authorized by Congress.

With the funds requested, work will be continued on 81 local protection projects, of which 9 will be completed and on 54 reservoir projects, of which 11 will be completed in 1967. Eleven new local protection projects and seven new reservoir projects will be initiated as follows:

| | 7. R. D. Bailey Reservoir, W. Va. |

6. Multiple-purpose projects, including power.—With the funds requested, work will be continued on 30 multiple-purpose projects with power installations, 1 of which—Barkley Dam, Kentucky and Tennessee—will be completed with 1967 funds. Construction will be initiated on additional power facilities on one project (The Dalles Dam, Oregon and Washington).

7. Recreation on completed projects.—Additional public use facilities will be provided at completed projects to accommodate a rapidly increasing number of visitors.

8. Small authorized projects.—Activities in 1967 will be financed from funds appropriated in prior years.

9. Coordination act studies (Fish and Wildlife Service).—This program provides for detailed studies and reports by the Fish and Wildlife Service to determine the effects on fish and wildlife resources of water-control projects of the Corps of Engineers.

10. Rehabilitation.—Rehabilitation work is undertaken on existing projects or parts of projects that have deteriorated to the extent that their usefulness has been impaired. Repair of breakwaters, revetments, and piers will be carried out on 12 navigation projects in 1967 under major rehabilitation.
