THE BUDGET OF THE
UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

FISCAL YEAR 1969

FOREWORD

This is one of a group of five documents which relate to the budget for 1969. The Budget of the United States Government, 1969, is a compact volume containing the Budget Message of the President, summary tables and statistical information, and six special analyses.

The Budget of the United States Government, 1969—Appendix contains the text of appropriation estimates proposed for the consideration of the Congress together with specific supporting information on the various appropriations and funds. The contents of this volume are further explained at the beginning of each of its three parts.

The Budget of the United States Government, 1969—The District of Columbia is a volume which relates specifically to the estimates for the municipal government of the District of Columbia.

In addition, a pamphlet type of publication, The Budget in Brief, 1969, is available for those who wish a more concise and less technical presentation than any of the foregoing three official volumes.

A second pamphlet type of publication, Special Analyses, Budget of the United States, 1969, contains thirteen special analyses of significant aspects of the Federal budget, including those printed in the compact volume.

NOTE.—Unless otherwise indicated, all references to years in this volume are to fiscal years ending June 30. Financial tables are nearly always stated in thousands of dollars; details may not add to the totals because of rounding.

EXPLANATION OF ESTIMATES

Part I contains various types of tables and schedules in support of the budget, explanatory statements of the work to be performed and the money needed, and the text of the language proposed for enactment by Congress on each item of authorization. It also contains the text of general provisions proposed for enactment by the Congress which often apply to entire agencies or groups of agencies.

ARRANGEMENT

The chapters of this part reflect the branches of Government, and the major departments and agencies of the executive branch. For the latter, smaller agencies are grouped in one chapter—"Other independent agencies."

Within each chapter there are four main sections, as follows: Federal funds, covering the funds owned by the Government; trust funds, covering funds which are held in a fiduciary capacity by the Government; the legislative program, which includes the costs of new legislation, other than the extension or renewal of existing legislation (these proposals are applicable to Federal funds unless otherwise specified); and general provisions of appropriation language, which are in addition to the specific paragraphs of language pertaining to individual appropriation items. In the chapter on "Other independent agencies," the trust funds appear immediately after the Federal funds for each agency, rather than in a section after the Federal funds for all agencies. The types of funds are explained in the compact volume—The Budget of the United States Government, 1969 (part 5).

FORM OF DETAILED MATERIAL

APPROPRIATION LANGUAGE

The language proposed for inclusion in the 1969 appropriation acts is printed at the head of each item requiring action by Congress, except for those items which are not formally recommended at this time but will be proposed for separate transmittal. The language of the 1968 appropriation acts, printed in roman type, is used as a base. Italic type indicates proposed new language. Brackets enclose material which it is proposed to omit, as in this example:

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses to carry into effect the provisions of the Commodity-Exchange Act, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1-17a), [~~$1,491,000~~] $1,684,000. (Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1968.)

Following the language, and printed in italics within parentheses, are citations to relevant authorizing legislation and to the appropriation act from which the text is taken.

BASIS FOR SCHEDULES

The basic schedules for Federal and trust funds usually exclude supplemental estimates, which will be transmitted to Congress separately for 1968 and 1969; these are covered separately by brief schedules of program and financing, without appropriation language. However, in the 1968 column, the basic schedules include (and identify) supplementals required to meet costs of military and civilian pay increases effective during 1968 under recently enacted legislation, and those resulting from wage-board decisions.

The 1969 column includes, within the regular schedules, appropriations for recommended extension or renewal of expiring laws; however, money for new legislation is shown separately, under the legislative program. Appropriation language is included for the former, but not for the latter. Amounts required to meet the costs of military and civilian pay increases to become effective during 1969 under recently enacted legislation have been excluded from the 1969 column, and are presented as a contingency item.

Where the required data are available in the accounting system, budgets are presented in terms of cost. Detailed operating cost figures for each activity or object are the value of goods and services consumed in carrying out the program. In the case of capital outlay programs, they are the value of assets acquired.

Total obligations are always shown; activities and objects are reflected on an obligation basis where cost data are not available. Obligations refer to orders placed, contracts awarded, loan agreements made, and recurring services (such as rent, utilities, and personal services) received during the year, regardless of the time of payment.

In a few cases, the detail and the totals of limitations are on the basis of accrued expenditures.

SCHEDULE OF PROGRAM AND FINANCING

This schedule consists of three parts. In the program by activities section, costs or obligations are classified by purpose, program, type of activity, or project for 1967, 1968, and 1969. This classification is individually developed for each appropriation or fund, and is not uniform on a Government-wide basis.

Where budgets are presented in terms of cost, the relation of costs to obligations is summarized in an entry "Change in selected resources." For appropriation accounts, and for revolving funds for which no business-type financial statements are presented, this entry is supported by a footnote identifying the amounts of the resources involved. For the remaining revolving funds, the items are identified on the statement of financial condition and the appended tabulation.

In certain cases, this schedule is expanded to include additional columns that provide a more informative presentation. This is done, for example, in some construction or procurement programs to show related cost data; for certain Defense items to identify the total obligations programmed; and for programs financed at a "preobligation" stage (such as "commitments" in some loan programs).

The financing section shows the fund sources, new obligational authority, appropriation, and other means of financing the program, and the disposition of amounts not used during the year.

The third section of the schedule (illustrated below) shows receipts and other offsets (if any) to total obligations shown in the program section, obligated balances at the start and end of the year, and other items which affect the relation of obligations to expenditures. In addition, expenditures are distributed between current and prior authorizations.

For public enterprise revolving funds, there are two additional lines showing gross expenditures and applicable receipts of the fund.

NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The work planned and services proposed to be carried out are described briefly in a narrative statement for each appropriation or fund. Where practicable the narrative statement indicates the expected accomplishment in relation to the financial estimates, and gives some measure of program and performance.

SCHEDULE OF OBJECT CLASSIFICATION AND PERSONNEL SUMMARY

There is shown for each account a classification of obligations, costs, or accrued expenditures according to the following uniform list of object classifications:

10 PERSONAL SERVICES AND BENEFITS	30 ACQUISITION OF CAPITAL ASSETS
11 Personnel compensation	31 Equipment
12 Personnel benefits	32 Lands and structures
13 Benefits for former personnel	33 Investments and loans
20 CONTRACTUAL SERVICES AND SUPPLIES	40 GRANTS AND FIXED CHARGES
21 Travel and transportation of persons	41 Grants, subsidies, and contributions
22 Transportation of things	42 Insurance claims and indemnities
23 Rent, communications, and utilities	43 Interest and dividends
24 Printing and reproduction	44 Refunds
25 Other services
26 Supplies and materials

These object classes reflect the nature of the things or services purchased, regardless of the purpose of the program for which they are used. Data according to this classification are reflected in the following schedule:

Object Classification (in thousands of dollars)
Identification code 05-40-1900-0-1-355	1967 actual	1968 est.	1969 est.
Personnel compensation:
11.1 Permanent positions.....	1,108	1,254	1,299
11.3 Positions other than permanent.....	1	5	5
11.5 Other personnel compensation.....	1	1	1

12.0 Personnel benefits.....	86	95	99
21.0 Travel and transportation of persons.....	23	18	23
22.0 Transportation of things.....	2	1	1
23.0 Rent, communications, and utilities.....	41	40	40
24.0 Printing and reproduction.....	13	13	13

25.2 Services of other agencies.....	13	66	66
26.0 Supplies and materials.....	15	16	16
31.0 Equipment.....	12	4	4
99.0 Total obligations.....	1,366	1,530	1,584

Several of the object classes are broken down into subclasses—personnel compensation, for example, is shown separately for permanent positions, for positions other than permanent, and for certain other payments. A third digit is therefore used in the object schedules to identify the subclasses; a zero is used for the third digit when there are no subclasses. Additional entries are shown for unvouchered obligations—those for which accountability is waived (coded 91.0); for amounts which cannot be distributed by object class (coded 92.0); and for certain other adjusting entries that are needed to reach a total which agrees with the total obligations shown in the program and financing schedule.

A personnel summary is appended to the object classification schedule, as illustrated:

Personnel Summary
Total number of permanent positions.....	140	148	153
Average number of all employees.....	129	140	144
Average GS grade.....	7.8	7.8	7.8
Average GS salary.....	$8,668	$9,123	$9,130

Permanent positions are those of a full-time nature and indefinite duration. Some are filled by persons with temporary appointments. Other positions include those of a temporary nature (a year or less), part-time jobs (less than a full workweek), and intermittent employment (occasional employees).

Average grades and salaries are computed arithmetically. Thus the average salary sometimes falls outside the salary range of the average grade.

STATEMENT OF REVENUE, EXPENSE, AND RETAINED EARNINGS

For many revolving funds there is a statement of revenue and expense that shows the resulting net income or loss for the year. This statement is usually on a full accrual basis, including provision for depreciation, for losses on receivables, etc. Where a fund consists of several programs, or revenue is derived from nonoperating sources, revenue and expense are identified for each, as follows:

Revenue, Expense, and Retained Earnings (in thousands of dollars)
	1967 actual	1968 est.	1969 est.

Revenue.....	57,989	61,036	63,441

Transfer to general fund.....	-106
Retained earnings, end of year.....	10,305	10,700	11,201

The statement includes an analysis of the retained earnings or the cumulative deficit. This analysis shows any additions to earnings, other than net income for the year, any adjustments of retained earnings, and the balance of profits kept in the enterprise as of the end of the year (whether as cash, inventories, or other assets).

STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL CONDITION

For each fund showing a revenue and expense statement, there is also presented a balance sheet of assets,

BUDGETS NOT SUBJECT TO REVIEW

The presentations herein for the Legislative Branch, the Judiciary, the mixed-ownership corporations of the Farm Credit Administration, the Comptroller of the Currency and the Exchange Stabilization Fund in the Treasury Department, the Board of Governors of the Federal liabilities, and equity of the Government at the close of the year.

The balance sheet excludes balances of appropriations and borrowing authorizations which have not yet been paid into the revolving fund. The section on equity of the Government is divided into three subsections as appropriate: (a) interest-bearing capital, (b) non-interest-bearing capital, and (c) retained earnings.

Total Government equity.....	10,534	10,673	11,068	11,569

Because the balance sheet is on an accrual basis, it does not reflect the obligations incurred which have not yet matured into liabilities, nor does it reflect unfilled customer orders received and available as a basis for obligation in the case of intragovernmental revolving funds. Therefore, there is normally appended to the balance sheet an "Analysis of Government Equity" which shows obligations other than liabilities, the unobligated balance, unfilled customers' orders on hand from other Government accounts (where relevant), and invested capital and earnings.

Reserve System, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the Milk Market Orders Assessment Fund of the Department of Agriculture have been included, without review, in the amounts submitted by the agencies.

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN BUDGET TABLES AND APPENDIX TABLES

EXPENDITURES AND LOANS

In accordance with recent recommendations of the President's Commission on Budget Concepts, the compact budget volume this year separates out from expenditures the amount of net lending for most loan programs. Similarly, it segregates loan authority from general new obligational authority. The preparation of this more detailed Appendix was already too far advanced to permit such changes in this document.

INTERFUND AND INTRAGOVERNMENTAL TRANSACTIONS

The consolidation of Government-administered funds in the compact budget volume requires the deduction of interfund and intragovernmental transactions from the combined aggregates, to avoid duplication in the totals. Schedules in the Appendix show the various funds and accounts separately, and therefore do not make such deductions.

PROPRIETARY RECEIPTS FROM THE PUBLIC

The compact budget volume this year, for the first time, offsets against expenditures for each agency and function the receipts from the public which are market-oriented or are mainly payments for goods and services, regardless of the fund structure. The Appendix continues the conventional practice of offsetting only those receipts that are earmarked by law for use in revolving funds, or as reimbursements to appropriations or other funds.

The program and performance under each of the activities described are predicated on an estimated 318,500 copyright registrations during 1969, an estimated 306,000 during 1968, and an actual 294,406 during 1967.

1. Receiving and accounting for applications, fees, and correspondence.—Materials received by the Copyright Office are assembled and routed; accounts are maintained for all moneys received; records relating to the registration of copyrights are filed; and materials are deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act. Performance data for 1967 and estimated for 1968 and 1969 are as follows:

Registrations.....	294,406	306,000	318,500
Mail received and dispatched.....	678,714	705,000	734,000

2. Examining copyright applications.—All applications and deposits are examined before issuance of registration certificates or recordings of documents to determine whether the provisions of the Copyright Act have been satisfied. Performance data are as follows:

Letters written.....	52,037	54,000	56,000

3. Indexing and cataloging materials received.—The Register of Copyrights is required to print complete and indexed catalogs of all items registered. The catalog entries prepared by the Copyright Office are made available in part to the Library for its general operations. There were 294,406 registrations cataloged in 1967 and estimates for 1968 and 1969 are 306,000 and 318,500, respectively.

4. Reference services.—The Copyright Office makes available to the public, information concerning the provisions of the Copyright Act, including procedures, policies, and rulings; information concerning registrations is furnished on a fee basis. Obtaining compliance with registration requirements is also part of this activity. Performance data are as follows:

Titles searched.....	148,045	154,000	160,000
Letters and search reports written.....	26,004	27,000	28,000

5. Printing the catalog of copyright entries and bulletins of decisions.—Catalogs for each class of copyright entries and bulletins of copyright decisions are printed and made available to the public.

6. General supervision and legal services.—The work of the Copyright Office includes legal supervision and research into the present copyright law and international copyright relations. It also involves a study of improvement of the domestic law and our international copyright relations.

For more than 12 years the Office has been engaged in work on a bill that would completely revise the 1909 copyright law. In the House Judiciary Committee, a subcommittee held extensive hearings on the revision bill in 1965 and devoted 51 executive sessions to reviewing and amending it in 1966. The full committee reported the amended bill in 1966 and again in 1967, and after 2 full days of debate the House of Representatives passed it with further amendments on April 11, 1967. In 1967, a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee also conducted a full series of hearings and is now considering further amendments with the goal of final passage in 1968. When enacted, the bill will require either entirely new or extensively changed procedures, regulations, and organizational arrangements, and all of these must be devised and completed before the effective date of the measure.

1. Research and analysis.—The Legislative Reference Service assists Members and committees of Congress by preparing research reports, digests, translations, charts, and consultative services, and by supplying reference information and materials. The bulk of these services are furnished through seven subject-matter divisions and a reference division: American law, economics, education and public welfare, foreign affairs, government and general research, natural resources, science policy research, and the congressional reference division. Under specific authorization of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, senior specialists are also available for high-level research and consultative services in the following fields: International economics, international relations, American government and public administration, conservation, American public law, labor, engineering and public works, agriculture, price economics, national defense, social welfare, taxation and fiscal policy, and science and technology. In 1967, 121,013 congressional inquiries were answered. The number of inquiries in 1968 is estimated at 125,000, and in 1969, 130,000.

2. Preparation of indexes and digests.—The Digest of Public General Bills covers all public bills and resolutions. It is expected that the number of bills to be digested during the second session of the 90th Congress will be somewhat higher than the numbers digested for the second session of the 89th Congress.

3. Reference files, bibliographic, and congressional reader services.—Reference files, containing clippings, pamphlets, and documents, are maintained as the basis for reply to a high percentage of inquiries; researchers are supplied with bibliographic and reference tools; selective and comprehensive bibliographies are prepared for Members and committees of Congress; and reader services are provided by the Congressional Reading Room. During 1967, 127,661 reference file items were processed, 34,629 bibliographic citations prepared, 424,893 published items acquired and processed, and 6,955 readers served.

The Card Division sells copies of the Library's printed catalog cards and publications. It maintains a stock of over 150 million catalog cards representing approximately 4,500,000 titles, and fills orders from over 20,000 regular subscribers—mostly libraries—in the United States and abroad. In 1967, 124 percent of this appropriation was recovered in the form of receipts from card and publication sales. Receipts of $5,741,755 were deposited in miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury in 1967. The objectives for 1969 are: Meeting the increased demand for catalog cards and maintaining a reasonable level of service and economy; the continued development of the "National Union Catalog" as the country's major bibliographic and locational tool; the development of other technical publications; and the use of new technology to increase efficiency and reduce costs.

1. Supplying cards for the Library of Congress.—The number of cards supplied to the Library of Congress in 1967 was 22,608,467; estimated for 1968, 30 million; and estimated for 1969, 35 million.

2. Supplying cards for other libraries.—The number of cards sold in 1967 was 74,503,175; estimated for 1968, 82 million; and for 1969, 90 million.

3. Preparation, printing, and distribution of publications related to cataloging.—These publications are an integral part of the cataloging activities of the Library of Congress and include the "Classification Schedules," lists of "Subject Headings," "Cataloging Service Bulletins," and similar publications.

4. Preparation, printing, and distribution of the "National Union Catalog."—This catalog (a cumulative author list) is issued monthly and cumulated quarterly and annually. Subscribers also receive issues of "Motion Pictures and Filmstrips" (quarterlies with annual cumulation), "Music and Phonorecords" (issued on a 6-month basis and annual cumulation), as well as the "Register of Additional Locations," and the "National Register of Microform Masters." There were 1,865 paid subscriptions for all issues in calendar year 1966 and it is estimated that there will be 2,000 subscriptions for 1967 and 2,200 for 1968.

5. Preparation, printing, and distribution of the "Subject Catalog."—This catalog is issued in three quarterly volumes with an annual cumulation. There were 780 paid subscriptions for calendar year 1966. It is estimated that there will be 850 paid subscriptions in 1967 and about 950 in 1968.

This appropriation is used to acquire domestic and foreign trade publications, both current and noncurrent. The publications acquired by purchase constitute a very important part of the Library's acquisitions although they represent only a small portion of the material received annually. The objectives for 1969 are: to continue the program for procurement of important research materials to strengthen the Library's collections; to continue the acquisition of selected important foreign newspapers and periodicals; to continue the program for procurement of important materials from critical areas, particularly from eastern Europe, Africa, Asia, and Latin America; to continue to strengthen the Library's acquisitions in the fields of science and technology; to continue the purchase of selected current titles on microfilm as an economy measure in lieu of binding; to acquire a few important special collections long needed by the Library to fill gaps in the collections; and to preserve important materials now on nitrate negative stills by converting them to a safety base film.

This appropriation constitutes the only means of acquiring law books published in the regular domestic trade (except for copyright deposits) and many foreign law books published in countries all over the world. The legal publications acquired by purchase constitute a most important part of the Law Library's acquisitions, although a substantial part of the annual receipts is received by means other than purchase. The special objectives for 1969 are: to continue the procurement of current foreign legal materials by placing purchase orders for certain necessary publications now received only irregularly through exchange or gift; to improve the procurement of important Hispanic, African, and Far Eastern materials; to continue the procurement of both current and noncurrent materials needed to strengthen the Law Library's already comprehensive coverage of critical areas in eastern Europe, Asia, and Africa; and to continue the acquisition of photoduplicates of important research items, especially those from critical areas, which are no longer obtainable in the original.

The Division for the Blind and Physically Handicapped is responsible for administering a national program to provide reading material for the blind and physically handicapped (Public Law 89-522) of the United States, U.S. territories and insular possessions. It has two closely related operations.

1. Procurement and distribution.—It provides books in embossed characters, and talking books with their associated reproducers. The books are distributed through 36 regional libraries which assume responsibility for their custody and circulation. The reproducers are distributed through 54 State agencies and libraries. The maintenance and procurement of these books are shown in the following table:

Objectives for 1969 are: (1) a moderate increase in procurement of braille magazines, (2) procurement of more titles and copies of talking books, including magazines and books on magnetic tape, (3) procurement of a sufficient number of machines to equip newly registered blind and physically handicapped readers and to replace some of the obsolete machines, and (4) to continue procurement of tape-cassette machines with books to play on them.

2. Cataloging, reference, circulating, and training services.—Catalogs of talking and braille books are prepared and maintained, including a "Union Catalog of Hand Copied Books in Braille" which brings together a record of holdings of all libraries for the blind. The division also maintains a unique collection (more than 30,000 volumes) of books in braille not available elsewhere for loan in the United States. During the past 5-year period, 1963-67, the number of blind readers throughout the country requiring catalogs from which to select reading matter has grown from 85,863 to 121,303 and circulation from 2,909,193 units (volumes, containers, and reels) to 4,841,203. As a result of the expanded program, the number of readers and circulation are expected to increase rapidly in 1968 and 1969. Inquiries are received concerning library and related services available to the blind and to other physically handicapped persons. Individuals throughout the Nation who are interested in transcribing or proofreading braille are trained and those qualified are certified. During 1967, 717 individuals were certified, and it is anticipated that this level will continue during 1968 and 1969. In addition tape books are recorded by volunteers throughout the country.

Under authority originally granted in section 104(n) of Public Law 85-931 (now section 104(b)(5) of the Food for Peace Act of 1966) the Librarian of Congress may use foreign currencies accruing under this act to provide information of technical, scientific, cultural, or educational significance to the United States through the collection of foreign library materials and the distribution of copies thereof to libraries and research centers in the United States. The program is being continued on a full year basis in seven countries in 1968: Ceylon, India, Israel, Nepal, Pakistan, the United Arab Republic, and Yugoslavia. Continuation of the program in Indonesia has been authorized for 9 months, and, if circumstances permit, a program will be initiated in Poland. The initiation of similar programs in the Congo and Tunisia is proposed for 1969. Of the total amount requested, $2,439,500 will be used to purchase foreign currencies, while $246,500 will provide U.S. dollar support.

1. Acquisition of books and other library materials.—Based upon the information received during the exploratory stage concerning materials available in the two additional countries and the requirements of other Federal agencies and certain research libraries in the United States, publications and other library materials will be purchased in multiple copies from 10 countries and distributed to selected libraries and research centers in the United States, including the Library of Congress.

2. Program support (U.S. dollars).—U.S. dollars are required to pay certain expenses which cannot be paid by foreign currencies, such as salaries and personnel benefits of U.S. personnel abroad, salaries of the coordinating staff at the Library of Congress, travel in some instances, and equipment and supplies which cannot be procured abroad.

Appropriations in this Act available to the Library of Congress for salaries shall be available for expenses of investigating the loyalty of Library employees; special and temporary services (including employees engaged by the day or hour or in piecework); and services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109.

Not to exceed ten positions in the Library of Congress may be exempt from the provisions of appropriation Acts concerning the employment of aliens during the current fiscal year, but the Librarian shall not make any appointment to any such position until he has ascertained that he cannot secure for such appointments a person in any of the categories specified in such provisions who possesses the special qualifications for the particular position and also otherwise meets the general requirements for employment in the Library of Congress.

Funds available to the Library of Congress may be expended to reimburse the Department of State for medical services rendered to employees of the Library of Congress stationed abroad; for purchase or hire of passenger motor vehicles; and for payment of travel, storage and transportation of household goods, and transportation and per diem expenses for families en route (not to exceed twenty-four), subject to such rules and regulations as may be issued by the Librarian of Congress.

Payments in advance for subscriptions or other charges for bibliographical data, publications, materials in any other form, and services may be made by the Librarian of Congress whenever he determines it to be more prompt, efficient, or economical to do so in the interest of carrying out required Library programs. ¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1966, $100 thousand; 1967, $99 thousand; 1968, $215 thousand; 1969, $100 thousand.

The work programs of the Office of the Superintendent of Documents are of a service nature, and hence there is no control over the volume of work which is required by law.

1. Sales distribution.—Government publications are purchased from the Public Printer to be placed on sale. Acquisition costs are paid from sales receipts; hence no appropriation is required for printing sales copies. By law, the sales price is set at cost of manufacture plus 50%. At the end of each year, excess receipts from sales not required for purchasing additional publications are turned in to the Treasury Department as miscellaneous receipts. For 1967, earnings from the sale of publications amounted to $7,079 thousand. It is estimated that earnings for 1968 will be $7,500 thousand and $8,000 thousand for 1969. These earnings more than cover the appropriation required to finance the sales program.

The sale of Government publications has been steadily increasing, and in the last 10 years the sales volume has more than doubled. The current public interest in the Government's publishing program points to a continuing increase in the volume of sales.

2. Distribution for other agencies and Members of Congress.—The Superintendent of Documents maintains mailing lists, including the list for the Congressional Record, and performs mailing operations upon request of any Government agency. Mailing services for Farmers' Bulletins, Soil Surveys, and other publications which are allocated to Members of Congress on a quota basis are also provided.

3. Depository library distribution.—Upon request, one copy of every Government publication is supplied to libraries which are designated depositories for Government publications.

4. Cataloging and indexing.—This activity covers the preparation and distribution of catalogs and indexes of all publications issued by the Federal Government, the principal series being the Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications and the Numerical List and Schedule of Volumes.

This schedule covers (1) funds received as gifts for immediate expenditure and receipts from the sale of recordings and photoduplication materials financed from capital originally received as gifts, (2) income from investments held by the Library of Congress Trust Fund Board, and (3) interest at the rate of 4% per annum paid by the Treasury on the principal funds deposited therewith as described under "Library of Congress trust fund, principal accounts." (2 U.S.C. 156-160; 31 U.S.C. 725s; 37 Stat. 319.)

1. Acquisition of library materials.—During 1967, this included the procurement of manuscripts, Hispanic materials, fine prints, books and other library materials from certain foreign areas for the Library of Congress, and the acquisition and distribution of Government documents for the Library of Congress and cooperating libraries.

2. Reader and reference services.—These services during 1967 included the preparation of bibliographies, indexes, digests, and check lists; lectures; surveys of bibliographic services; poetry readings; musical concerts; furtherance of musical research, composition, performance and appreciation; and providing photostats, photographs, microfilm, and other forms of photoduplication, and sound recordings of folksongs and poetry to other Government agencies, libraries, and other institutions, and to the general public.

3. Organization and control of the collections.—In February 1967, the Library of Congress began the largest single bibliographical project in its 167-year history, the publication of the pre-1956 National Union Catalog. It is expected that the project will be completed in 10 years, and that the published Catalog will comprise 610 volumes. Work was also begun on the publication of the 1963-67 quinquennial cumulation of the National Union Catalog. The preparation of the 18th full edition and the 10th abridged edition of the Dewey Decimal Classification, begun during 1966, was continued in 1967. The largest cumulation of New Serial Titles, the 1961-65 quinquennial, was published in March 1967 and includes a total of about 100,000 entries. Editorial work on the 1966 issue of the National Union Catalog of Manuscript Collections, scheduled for publication in November 1967, was substantially completed during 1967. The preparation of the index and subject headings for Dissertation Abstracts was continued and the first cumulation of the National Register of Microform Masters, was published in December 1966, superseding previous issues.

The U.S. Court of Claims has jurisdiction over all cases involving claims against the United States (except in pension suits) instituted upon constitutional grounds or under Federal law or regulations, all claims arising out of any contract with the Federal Government and its agencies, and claims for the refund of taxes. It also has general jurisdiction to hear and determine claims for damages other than tort actions, provided the claimants would have the right to sue in law or equity if the United States were not immune to such suits. It has jurisdiction in suits against the United States by contractors dissatisfied with the findings and decisions of contracting agencies under terminated war contracts and jurisdiction concurrent with that of the courts of appeals to review district court decisions in cases involving tort actions. It has exclusive jurisdiction to review the decisions of the Indian Claims Commission on appeal from the Commission. It also has jurisdiction in special act cases referred to the court by the Congress, and the commissioners of the court have jurisdiction to render reports to the Congress on claims set forth in bills referred to the chief commissioner by either House of Congress.

It is estimated that funds will be required to pay an average of 530 judges in 1969, an increase of 15 over the number expected to be paid during 1968. It is anticipated that there will be fewer judgeship vacancies and that the number of senior judges on the rolls will increase.

The primary and appellate jurisdictions of the courts of the United States are vested in the 93 district courts and 11 courts of appeals. Provision for the salaries of the administrative and legal aides required to assist the judges in the conduct of hearings, trials, and other judicial functions, and to man the component offices of the courts, including the Federal Probation System, is under this heading.

The estimate for 1969 contemplates an increase of 183 permanent employees: 12 deputy clerks, 55 law clerks, and 33 stenographers for the courts of appeals; and 83 deputy clerks for the district courts. Provisions also have been made for the difference between the full- and part-year cost of new positions authorized in 1968, within-grade salary advancements, and the cost of an extra compensable day in 1969.

This appropriation provides for the statutory fees and allowances of jurors, fees of jury commissioners, and the fees and related benefits of U.S. commissioners who serve primarily as committing magistrates.

The earnings of commissioners are directly related to the volume of cases presented by law enforcement officials. The amount of service and the compensation of jurors depends largely on the number of jury trials requested by the parties to civil and criminal cases in the U.S. courts.

The estimate for 1969 takes into account an anticipated increase in petit jury trials by reason of the activities of new district judges appointed pursuant to the Act of March 18, 1966, Public Law 89-372.

The district courts of the United States are constituted courts of bankruptcy, vested with original jurisdiction at law and in equity in proceedings brought under the bankruptcy statutes. This jurisdiction primarily is exercised through referees appointed by the several district courts. Their compensation and benefits are paid from this appropriation, which is derived from a special fund in the Treasury to which are deposited payments of fees and charges by parties to the proceedings. No appropriation from the general fund of the Treasury is required.

The increase requested for 1969 will provide for two additional full-time referees (one in lieu of three part-time referees), the conversion of two part-time referees to a full-time status, and salary increases for one full-time and eight part-time referees. The new positions and changes in arrangements have been authorized by the Judicial Conference of the United States.

The number of judges participating in the system increased in 1967 from 442 to 480. There were 530 judges on the roll at the end of the year as compared with 486 at the beginning of the year. As of June 30, 1967, there were 50 nonparticipants as compared with 44 a year ago.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1966, $440 thousand (1967 adjustments, $110 thousand); 1967, $302 thousand; 1968, $302 thousand; 1969, $302 thousand.

The Office of Emergency Planning serves as a staff office to advise and assist the President with respect to the non-military defense programs of the United States. This includes the coordination of emergency preparedness activities of Federal agencies, the development of emergency preparedness programs not covered by the responsibilities of the regular departments and agencies, and the performance of other duties in the areas of stockpiling, Federal disaster relief, Federal-State relations, and imports affecting the national security.

1. Resource evaluation and readiness.—Maintain a complete capability for evaluating, predicting, and monitoring the status of the Nation's resources and economy under all degrees of emergency, which includes identifying resource deficiencies, feasible production programs, strategic materials, stockpile, and import policies. Provide resource evaluations at national and subordinate levels to support mobilization planning, continuity of Government, resource management, and economic recovery. Determine the impact of various current or proposed domestic and national security programs of the United States and major allies on the mobilization base. Provide economic and statistical analytical support to these programs.

2. Government readiness.—Plans and programs are developed to reduce the vulnerability of all levels of Government to enemy attack and control in an emergency. These include achieving a standby capability for emergency operations on the part of existing Government agencies; relocating essential governmental function in an emergency; maintaining the capability to administer a program of direct controls for economic stabilization; administering OEP program activities stemming from U.S. membership in international organizations concerned with civil emergency planning; guiding the development of emergency communication systems, and the recruitment and training of qualified executive reservists who would be called to duty in an emergency.

3. Federal-State relations.—Eight regional offices and a small national office staff of the Office of Emergency Planning work with the State and local governments on emergency preparedness planning. They also coordinate Federal disaster relief and assistance, assist the Federal offices in the field to develop a capability to perform their functions in an emergency, and maintain a liaison with Governors of the States on matters of mutual Federal-State concern. In addition to liaison at all levels of Government, this activity maintains contact with national, business, labor, veterans, and farm organizations.

4. Executive direction, programing, staff and administrative support.—Total staff support is provided to the Director of the Office of Emergency Planning and other OEP offices under this activity. Services include general administration, public information, health advisor, legal assistance and program planning. Funds are also included to finance the housekeeping expenses of the Office of Emergency Planning, in Washington, and the salaries of the presidential appointees and their immediate staffs. The Director is a principal adviser to the President on nonmilitary defense. He serves as a member of the National Security Council and participates in meetings of the Cabinet by invitation of the President. He also assists the President in overall relationships with the Governors and key State officials.

Executive Order 11365, establishing a National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders, authorized each department or agency, to the extent permitted by law and within the limits of available funds, to furnish information and assistance to the Commission. Those departments and agencies which are closely concerned with the areas of the Commission's activities, and which are most likely to benefit from the Commission's findings, formed an Interagency Committee on Civil Disorders to support the work of the Commission through investigations and studies into civil disorders.

The work of the Committee is financed from contributions from the Departments of Justice, Commerce, Labor, Health, Education, and Welfare, and Housing and Urban Development, and from the Office of Economic Opportunity. In addition, the Department of Defense has provided support for contractual studies undertaken for the Commission pursuant to the Executive order.

The expenses of the Commission itself are funded from an allocation from the Emergency fund for the President, as shown on page 72 of this document.

The Inter-Agency Committee on Mexican-American Affairs was established by the President on June 9, 1967, to "hear solutions to Mexican-American problems; assure that Federal programs are reaching the Mexican-Americans and providing the assistance they need; and seek out new programs that may be necessary to handle problems that are unique to the Mexican-American community." Hearings were held in El Paso, October 26-28, 1967. The Committee is seeking to assure that the recommendations are carried out.

The Committee will also work to bring to other Spanish-speaking peoples throughout the United States the same assistance specifically outlined for the Mexican-American communities. Preliminary work leading to the establishment of the Committee was begun in September 1966.

The President's Committee on Urban Housing was established on June 2, 1967. The primary assignment of the Committee is to prepare a report by June 1968 to the President covering ways of creating a climate that will stimulate the rebuilding of the depressed areas of the Nation's cities. The Committee will consider the use of new institutions, corporate structures, technological innovations, and financial incentives that could promote the participation of private investment in management skills in building activity. In addition, the Committee will study methods of enlarging the size and skills of the labor force available for rehabilitation work.

The Committee will identify the impact on rehabilitation of the numerous social, political, and economic forces affecting the rebuilding of our cities and will fashion proposals that will take full account of these forces and make adequate housing equally available to all. The Committee expects to terminate on or before August 1968.

The purposes of the Appalachian Regional Development Act of 1965, as amended, are to assist the Appalachian region meet its special problems, promote its economic development, and to establish a framework of joint Federal and State efforts to provide the basic facilities essential to economic growth in Appalachia.

Program investments made in the Appalachian region are concentrated in areas where there is significant potential for future growth and where the expected return on public dollars invested will be the greatest.

The States, acting through the Appalachian Regional Commission, are responsible for recommending local and State projects within their borders for assistance under this program.

1. Appalachian Development Highway system.—Section 201 of the Appalachian Regional Development Act amendments of 1967 authorizes construction of an Appalachian Development Highway system including local access roads. This system is designed to improve the accessibility of Appalachia; to reduce highway transportation costs to and within Appalachia; to provide the highway transportation facilities necessary to accelerate the overall development of Appalachia. In addition, access roads to specific development facilities are authorized. Funds in the amount of $645 million are currently authorized to be appropriated for the remaining 3 fiscal years of this program.

2. Demonstration health projects.—Grants are made for the construction, equipping, and operation of multicounty demonstration health facilities, including hospitals, regional health diagnostic or treatment centers, and other facilities. Under the 1967 amendments to the act, emphasis will be given to operational assistance for health activities in nine districts within the Appalachian region.

3. Land stabilization, conservation, and erosion control.—Section 203 of the act authorizes contracts of up to 10 years for assistance to landowners, operators or occupiers of land in the Appalachian region. Such contracts provide for land stabilization, erosion and sediment control, and reclamation through changes in land use, and the establishment of measures for the conservation and development of the region's soil, water, woodland, wildlife, and recreation resources. The Federal share may not exceed 80% of the total cost on not more than 50 acres of land for any person. The program is administered through the Department of Agriculture.

4. Mine area restoration.—Section 205 of the act authorizes a program for the sealing and filling of voids in abandoned coal mines, the planning and execution of projects for the extinguishment and control of underground and outcrop mine fires, and the reclamation and rehabilitation of strip and surface mine areas, including waste banks, on public land in those areas where the greatest potential for economic growth exists in Appalachia. The States must bear 25% of projects costs.

5. Appalachian Housing fund.—This program authorizes the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development to make loans for up to 80% of the preliminary cost of planning a project and obtaining an insured mortgage under section 221 of the National Housing Act, including such costs as preliminary surveys and analyses of market needs, preliminary site engineering and architectural fees, site options, FHA and FNMA fees, and construction loan fees and discounts.

This also authorizes the Secretary to make technical assistance grants for up to 80% of the administrative expenses not recoverable under a section 221 insured mortgage, when these expenses are incurred incident to planning a project and obtaining an insured mortgage such as the preparation of an application to FHA and FNMA.

6. Vocational education facilities.—Grants are made to States in the Appalachian region for the construction and equipment of vocational education facilities in Appalachia. Vocational education facilities are key elements for the training and upgrading of potential and existing labor force entrants in skills required in modern industry. There were 42 projects supported in 1967. It is estimated 53 projects will be supported in 1968, and 62 projects in 1969. This program is administered through the Office of Education.

7. Sewage treatment facilities.—Grants are made to the States in the Appalachian region for construction of sewage treatment facilities. Funds under this program are in addition to those allocated to the States under the authority of Public Law 660 administered by Interior and are subject to the same requirements.

8. Supplements to Federal grant-in-aid programs.—This program provides supplemental grants to enable areas to take advantage of other Federal programs. Direct grants plus supplemental grants cannot exceed 80% of the project cost. The amount of supplemental grant depends upon relative need of the area and nature of the project. Recent data clearly demonstrate that these grants have successfully been used to bring a more equitable share of Federal grants to the region.

For example, in 1965, when no section 214 funds were available, six major Federal grant-in-aid programs made grants for $65 million in the region. In 1967, with an expenditure of approximately $34 million of section 214 funds, these same six major programs made grants for $135 million in the region. For every dollar of section 214 funds invested in the region, three additional dollars of other Federal funds are also invested through grant-in-aid projects.

9. Research and local development district program.—Appalachian planning assistance is provided through grants to local development districts and for research and demonstration projects. Grants are made for the administrative expenses of local development districts but do not exceed 75% of eligible, budgeted administrative expenses in any one year. Local development districts are States, multicounty units, or single counties in the Appalachian region. Other planning and technical assistance is provided for (a) programs which improve the base for economic growth, (b) programs which will attract industrial development within the region, (c) programs which improve the health, education, and skills of people, and (d) projects which conserve, maintain, or improve natural resources.

1. Administration.—Funds are provided to administer and coordinate disaster relief assistance for the States. Simultaneously with the President's authorization of an allocation of funds to the Office of Emergency Planning for required disaster assistance, he authorizes an additional allocation to OEP for administrative purposes.

2. Aid to disaster areas.—Under Public Law 81-875 and Public Law 89-769, the Federal Government provides supplementary assistance to State and local governments in the event of a declared major disaster by the President. Federal financial assistance is provided from the Disaster relief appropriation, under which allocations may be made directly to a State or to Federal agencies as reimbursement for expenditures in disaster relief work performed under this authority. Responsibility for administration of this program is delegated to OEP by Executive Order 10427.

Under the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, designated agencies are authorized with Presidential approval to incur obligations and make expenditures to expand production of critical materials for programs certified as essential to the national defense by the Office of Emergency Planning. The program is conducted primarily through a revolving fund financed by borrowing from the Treasury. The amount borrowed may not exceed $2.1 billion outstanding at any one time.

Allocations of borrowing authority by the Office of Emergency Planning and net borrowing from the U.S. Treasury as of June 30, 1967, were as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Authorized agency	Borrowing authority allocated	Borrowings outstanding	Net available for borrowing
General Services Administration ¹	1,959,000	1,736,700	222,300
Department of Agriculture.....	93,265	78,606	14,659
Department of Interior.....	35,800	35,000	800
Office of Emergency Planning (reserve)....	11,935		11,935

¹ In addition, an appropriation of $108 million was applied to General Services Administration activities, thus providing financing of $2,067 million to that agency.

General Services Administration.—The program for expansion of production capacity has included the purchase and resale of metals, minerals and machine tools, and research and pilot plant operations to develop new materials and new techniques for utilizing low-grade domestic ores. Only one new contract has been entered into under the expansion program in recent years, and no materials contracts remain outstanding at this time. Otherwise, the major problems now are custody, maintenance, and disposition of the materials and facilities.

On March 29, 1966, the President made a finding that new expansions of copper production are essential to the national security. On November 28, 1967, the General Services Administration entered into a domestic copper production expansion contract providing for delivery of approximately 109,000 tons of wirebar copper through the period ending June 30, 1975. The Office of Emergency Planning announced in January 1967 an expansion goal for domestic production of rutile. No detailed proposals have been received under this program to date.

As one of the inducements for expanding production, most of the contracts provided a guaranteed market for the production from expanded facilities. The option rights of contractors were examined with a view to reducing deliveries to the Government as far as possible within the terms of the contracts whenever basic stockpiling objectives have been attained. Between July 1, 1957, and June 30, 1967, a reduction of $449.1 million in gross commitments was attained through renegotiation of contracts. However, significant amounts of materials have been delivered to the Defense Production Act inventory under these contracts. Progress has been made in disposing of these materials primarily by sales to other Government agencies and industry and steps are being taken to increase and accelerate the disposal program for these materials wherever this can be accomplished without disruptive effects on the market. Investment in inventory of $1,500 million on June 30, 1963, has been reduced to $1,030 million on June 30, 1967, and is expected to be further reduced to $835 million by June 30, 1969.

A summary of sales transactions involving the strategic minerals and metals under this fund follows (in millions of dollars):

Department of Agriculture.—The purchase, management, and resale of agricultural commodities, except forest products, was carried out by the Commodity Credit Corporation, which was reimbursed from an allocation to the Secretary of Agriculture from this DPA fund. The program was completed by 1961, but interest expense still accumulates on the loss incurred.

Department of the Interior.—Department of the Interior operations to expand defense production under section 303 of the Defense Production Act of 1950 prior to 1968 were limited to the encouragement of exploration for strategic and critical mineral commodities. The operations are administered by the Office of Minerals Exploration, a unit of the Geological Survey. This Office uses appropriated funds to administer the Defense Minerals Exploration Administration contracts under which royalty obligations remain.

Obligations for repayment of loans (on a royalty basis—no interest) remain on 98 contracts amounting to $4,978 thousand. Royalties on production from any of these projects within specified periods will be applied toward the Government funds spent. Royalties received totaled $6,245 thousand on a cumulative basis at the end of 1967 and are estimated at $200 thousand for 1968 and $135 thousand for 1969.

For 1968, this program will include the rutilite and titaniferous materials development program for which $525 thousand has been provided. This program will also be administered by the Office of Minerals Exploration, but will be carried out in cooperation with GSA and the Bureau of Mines.

Treasury Department.—The function of making and administering loans to private business enterprises under the authority of section 302 of the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, was assigned to the Secretary of the Treasury by Executive Order 10489, dated September 26, 1953. Applications for loans are considered only upon certification of essentiality by the Office of Emergency Planning.

No new loans were authorized during 1967. It is anticipated that there will be no additional loans authorized during 1968.

Loans outstanding are estimated for 1968 and 1969 as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Outstanding, beginning of year.....	14,916	11,744	9,103
Repayments during year.....	3,172	2,641	2,975
Outstanding, end of year.....	11,744	9,103	6,128

Financial condition.—Outstanding borrowings from the U.S. Treasury are approximately $1.85 billion whereas assets under the DPA revolving fund are made up almost entirely of minerals and metals inventory which, on June 30, 1967, had a book value of about $1 billion and a market value of about $0.6 billion. Interest on borrowings, accruing at an annual rate of about $75 million, will be nearly offset by inventory sales in 1968 and 1969. However, this sole remaining significant source of income will be insufficient even for interest payments within a few years.

The Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) is an intergovernmental institution, corporate in form, whose capital stock is owned by its member governments. The Bank promotes economic development in member countries through loans, technical assistance, and guarantees of private investment in development projects. Twenty-one Western Hemisphere republics, including the United States, are members of the Bank.

Ordinary capital.—The Bank's authorized ordinary capital is now the equivalent of $2,150 million of which $1,778.8 million had been subscribed as of September 30, 1967. Of the total subscribed, the equivalent of $383.6 million is in the form of paid-in capital, and the remaining $1,395.2 million is subject to call by the Bank if required to meet its obligations arising out of borrowings or guarantees. The U.S. subscription to ordinary capital as of September 30, 1967, totaled $761.8 million.

By September 30, 1967, Bank commitments from ordinary capital had reached $873 million equivalent on 151 loans.

Fund for Special Operations.—In addition to its ordinary capital operations, the Bank lends from its Fund for Special Operations in circumstances where ordinary capital financing is not appropriate. As of September 30, 1967, the total resources of the Fund for Special Operations were $1,121.4 million.

The Board of Governors of the Bank recommended an increase in Fund resources of $400 million per year to support operations during the 3-year period from early calendar 1968 through early calendar 1971. The U.S. share of this increase is $300 million per year or a total of $900 million. The latter amount has been authorized by the Congress (Public Law 90-88 of September 22, 1967). An appropriation for the first $300 million installment of the U.S. contribution was obtained in 1968. Subsequent installments are due in 1969 and 1970.

As of September 30, 1967, commitments from the Fund for Special Operations amounted to $810.8 million equivalent on 151 loans.

joined the Association in August 1960, and the institution began operations in November 1960.

As of September 30, 1967, the Association had made credit commitments for high priority economic development projects totaling $1,702.4 million in 38 countries and territories. As of the same date, membership in the Association, which is open to all members of the World Bank, totaled 97 countries. The Asian Development Bank (ADB) is a regional development financing institution established by Asian member governments, with participation by countries outside the region, for the purpose of financing economic development projects and programs in Asian countries.

The authorized capital stock of the Bank is $1.1 billion. Of this, $965 million has been subscribed by the membership: $615 million by the regional members, including $200 million by Japan, and $350 million by nonregional members.

On March 16, 1966, the President signed the Asian Development Bank Act, authorizing U.S. membership in the ADB and the appropriation of amounts necessary to meet U.S. subscription obligations. The U.S. subscription to the ADB is $200 million, of which $100 million is to be paid in five annual installments and $100 million is callable.

In addition to its ordinary operations, the ADB's articles also permit the establishment of special funds through (1) the allocation of up to 10% of its paid-in capital, and (2) the acceptance for administration by the Bank of special funds. Such special funds would be used to finance high priority development projects on repayment terms which would be easier than those which would apply to ordinary ADB loans.

On September 26, 1967, the President proposed that the Congress authorize the appropriation of up to $200 million to be provided over a 4-year period for a U.S. contribution to multilateral special funds of the ADB. The U.S. contribution would comprise less than one-half of the total ADB special funds, and would be used for the purchase of U.S. goods and services.

The military assistance program strengthens the security of the free world by contributing to the development, maintenance, and training of modern military forces through the grant of defense articles. The military forces of countries receiving military equipment on a grant basis provide free world defensive capability, depth in reserves, and flexibility. Many of these countries have joined regional defense pacts such as NATO, and some have entered into bilateral defense arrangements with the United States.

Military assistance is now substantially reduced from the program level of earlier years. Most Western European countries no longer receive defense articles as grant military assistance. Moreover, other countries throughout the world are assuming an increasing share of the costs of their military forces as their economic capacities increase. Responsibility for the programing, budgeting, and funding of the Logistics Center in Japan was transferred to the U.S. Army in 1967. The costs of military assistance to Laos and Thailand and of the U.S. share of NATO infrastructure (military facilities constructed for the use of, and jointly financed by, the participating nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization) were transferred to the regular Department of Defense appropriations in 1968. Unexpended balances of the above programs were also transferred to the military departments during 1968.

The major portion of the military equipment and supplies which the United States furnishes under the military assistance program is produced in the United States and is obtained by placing orders with the U.S. military services. Military assistance funds are reserved when the orders are placed and the military services accounts are reimbursed when the items are delivered. The materiel supplied by the United States vary with our objectives and the requirements and capabilities of individual countries. The current emphasis is on the maintenance of existing forces and materiel, although modernization is included as funds permit. Materiel already on hand, but excess to the needs of U.S. forces, is supplied, whenever possible, at no charge to the military assistance appropriation except for the costs of rehabilitation and transportation.

In 1967 and 1968, funds were included in the new obligational authority for military assistance to finance credit sales to various countries of military equipment and supplies produced in the United States and to guaranty exporters, financing institutions, or others doing business in the United States against political and credit risks of loss arising from sales of defense articles and services to eligible foreign countries and international organizations.

The Foreign Assistance Act of 1967 terminates the credit sales revolving fund (Foreign Military Sales Fund, Executive) as of June 30, 1968, and provides that beginning in 1969, military credit sales and guaranties will be financed with appropriated funds. In 1969, funds for financing credit sales and guaranties are shown in a new Foreign Military Credit Sales account.

Administrative expenses include the administrative costs related to the Foreign Military Credit Sales account and Advances, Foreign Military Sales.

Public enterprise funds:

FOREIGN MILITARY SALES FUND, EXECUTIVE

This revolving fund was established under the authority of section 201(e)(3) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1965. It terminates on June 30, 1968, in accordance with section 201(h)(3) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1967. Upon termination of this fund, all of its assets will be transferred to a special account in the Treasury which will be available solely for the purpose of discharging outstanding liabilities and obligations arising from credit agreements and guaranties issued prior to June 30, 1968. Any funds in the special Treasury account in excess of the aggregate amount of such liabilities and obligations will from time to time be transferred to the general fund of the Treasury. Section 201(h)(3) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1967 provides that after June 30, 1968, the President may finance new credit sales (and guaranties) only from appropriations.

This revolving fund was employed to finance directly the sales of defense articles and defense services to foreign countries and international organizations on cash or credit terms, to guaranty Export-Import Bank and private credit for sales of defense articles and defense services, and to absorb gains and losses, if any, resulting from sales of defense articles and defense services at fixed prices.

The capital of the fund was provided by transfer of loans outstanding and appropriations from the military assistance appropriation, as authorized by the Foreign Assistance Act. Cash for operations was provided by principal repayments and interest income on credit sales financed by the fund, proceeds from sales to the Export-Import Bank of evidences of indebtedness, and fees and premiums earned on the guaranty of private credit. Expenditures were for payments to suppliers under directly financed credits and overhead expenses relating to military sales activity. A reserve fund was set aside to guaranty publicly and privately financed military credit sales. The reserve requirement was, by law, 25% of "the contractual liability related to any guaranty . . ."

The Foreign Assistance Act of 1967 limited the amount of publicly and privately financed credit which the revolving fund could guaranty in 1968 to $190,000 thousand.

Credit sales financed in 1967 totaled $354,459 thousand and are estimated at $262,000 thousand for 1968. The outstanding balance, including commitments, was $844,539 thousand as of the end of 1967 and is estimated at $967,360 thousand as of the end of 1968.

The administrative expenses related to the Foreign military credit sales program were funded from military assistance appropriations.

1. Technical cooperation.—Grants are used in developing countries to (1) provide the advisers, teachers, and equipment required for the improvement of educational, administrative, technical, and professional skills; (2) assist in the control and eradication of major diseases and other menaces to health; (3) establish and improve institutions which further economic and social development; (4) assist in planning development programs and projects; (5) assist family planning programs; and (6) finance research and the development of American institutions concerned with problems of economic development.

2. American schools and hospitals abroad.—Grants are provided to American-sponsored institutions abroad to help train qualified leadership in developing countries.

3. Surveys of investment opportunities.—This program encourages private enterprise to undertake surveys of investment opportunities in developing countries. Up to 50% of the cost of such surveys is paid by AID if the concern sponsoring the survey does not proceed with an investment, in which case the survey becomes AID property for use in attracting other investors.

4 and 5. International organizations and programs.—Voluntary contributions are provided to programs affiliated with the United Nations and its specialized agencies, and to the Indus Basin Development Fund associated with the World Bank. These programs promote the economic and social development of developing countries and help maintain peace in threatened areas.

6. Supporting assistance.—Commodities and services are provided countries which need help in maintaining defensive forces or in attaining economic and political stability. To the extent feasible, this assistance is also used to contribute to development. When country situations have stabilized sufficiently, reductions in supporting assistance are made and efforts are concentrated on development. The largest portion finances economic programs to help Vietnam preserve its national independence.

7 and 8. Contingency funds.—These funds are used for urgent requirements which cannot be foreseen at the time the budget is prepared. They are available for emergency assistance in disasters and to meet important international situations which need an immediate response in the U.S. national interest.

9 and 10. Alliance for Progress, technical cooperation and development grants.—Grants for technical services and equipment are made to Latin American countries as part of the joint Alliance for Progress program. Organizations and individuals in the United States are helping in working on a people-to-people approach toward economic and social betterment in Latin America.

11. Administrative expenses (Agency for International Development).—These funds are used in Washington and in overseas missions to administer economic aid programs.

12. Administrative expenses (State).—Expenses for Department of State personnel involved in the administration of the foreign assistance program and of the Battle Act are provided.

Loans.—Most U.S. resources provided through foreign economic assistance programs are in the form of loans. Data on loans made under the development loan activity, under the Alliance for Progress, and under the authority of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act are shown on separate schedules. A small portion of economic assistance funds available for grants are loaned rather than granted. These loans may be repayable either in dollars or foreign currency.

The following table summarizes the loans made from obligational authority current each year, repayable in dollars and foreign currencies (in millions of dollars and dollar equivalents):

Through 1961, a portion of mutual security appropriations were used to purchase surplus agricultural commodities which were then sold to friendly countries for their currencies. The currencies are used for economic and military activities in furtherance of objectives of the U.S. foreign assistance program. Starting in 1967, certain supporting assistance section 401 funds generate local currency for support of U.S. projects including the local costs of projects and procurement of supplies and equipment for third countries.

The Alliance for Progress was established in 1961 as a cooperative effort of the United States and Latin American countries to promote the economic and social development of Latin America. The United States is helping in these efforts by providing economic and technical aid. The Latin American countries, in addition to providing a steadily increasing share of their own resources to development, are carrying out substantial self-help and reform programs. This self-help effort was reconfirmed in the four critical areas of agriculture, education, health, and economic integration by the Presidents of the Latin American Republics at a meeting at Punta del Este, Uruguay in April 1967. Through 1968 the Congress had appropriated $2,659 million for development loans. Total Alliance for Progress appropriations of $625 million are requested for 1969. Of this amount $515 million is proposed for development loans, largely in support of programs which encourage increased agricultural production, education, regional integration, and the development of private enterprise; and $110 million is proposed for technical cooperation activities in such vital areas as agriculture, education, and health.

This program replaced the Development Loan Fund corporation, which was abolished November 3, 1961. A total of $500 million was appropriated for development loans in 1967, $435 million in 1968, and $765 million is proposed for 1969.

Development loans are repayable in U.S. dollars. Interest charged on all loans, with the exception of those covered by special provisions relative to the use of the facilities of the International Development Association and those funds already committed to be loaned, will be at an interest rate of not less than 2½% per annum. Loan repayments must begin not later than 10 years following the date on which the funds are lent. During the initial 10-year period the rate of interest shall not be lower than 2% per annum.

Development loans are made to promote the economic development of less-developed countries and areas, usually to assist in financing long-range development plans and programs. Before a loan is made, the Agency for International Development must take into account (1) whether financing could be obtained from other free world sources on reasonable terms, including private sources within the United States, (2) the economic and technical soundness of the activity to be financed, including the capacity of the recipient country to repay the loan at a reasonable rate of interest, (3) whether the activity gives reasonable promise of contributing to the development of economic resources or to the increase of productive capacities, (4) the consistency of the activity with other development activities being undertaken or planned, and its contribution to realistic long-range objectives, (5) the extent to which the recipient country is demonstrating its determination to take effective self-help measures, and (6) possible effects upon the economy of the United States. Additional loan criteria and standards are established by an inter-agency Development Loan Committee chaired by the

The Development Loan Fund was established as a corporation by the Mutual Security Act of 1958 to extend loans, credits, and guarantees to American or foreign individuals, businesses, financial institutions, or foreign governments in order to provide capital for projects and programs contributing to the economic growth of friendly less-developed countries.

Under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, the Development Loan Fund Corporation was abolished and its functions were transferred, effective November 3, 1961, to the Agency for International Development. Subsequent to that date, the Fund has remained open for the purpose of liquidating outstanding obligations. As of June 30, 1967, the undisbursed loan agreements amounted to $108 million. It is estimated that this balance will decrease to $56.3 million in 1968 and to $8.5 million in 1969.

Loan repayments and interest earned totaled $158.8 million in 1967 and are scheduled to total $149.6 million in 1968 and $151.5 million in 1969.

² Effective 1967, accounting for this fund was changed from cash to cost accrual. Adjustment is necessary to reflect that $3,674 thousand in fees received in 1966 are applicable to the 1967 period. The remaining balance of $1,040 thousand is a regular adjustment to fee income overstated in the prior year.

Guarantee programs encourage and facilitate private U.S. investments abroad which further the economic progress of developing countries. Guarantees are available only for new investments.

Three investment guarantee programs are authorized:

1. Specific political risk guarantees against (a) inconvertibility of foreign currency, (b) loss by expropriation or confiscation, and (c) loss due to war, revolution, or insurrection;

2. Extended risk guarantees which cover up to 75% of both political and business risks; and

3. Extended risk guarantees covering up to 100% of losses on certain housing projects and investments in credit unions.

Except for Latin America housing guarantees, guarantees are available only for investment in countries whose governments have agreed with the United States to institute the investment guarantee program, and where there are suitable arrangements to protect the interests of the U.S. Government in connection with assets or claims acquired as a result of having provided relief under a guarantee. Agreements have been signed with 80 developing countries.

As of June 30, 1967, this program had total unused reserves of $297,043,569. Included in this total was $199,071,521 in borrowing authority to expend from public debt receipts. The borrowing authority provision was rescinded by action of the 90th Congress. As a result, the reserves to be continued available from 1967 have been reduced to $97,972,048. Since all guarantees are backed by the full faith and credit of the United States, this revised amount is expected to suffice to handle any claims that might reasonably be anticipated to mature before a supplemental appropriation could be obtained from the Congress to restore the liquidity of the program.

Specific risk.—As of June 30, 1967, the ceiling on guarantee issuing authority was $7 billion; an increase to $8 billion was authorized in the Foreign Assistance Act of 1967 for 1968; a further increase to $9 billion is requested for 1969.

Extended risk.—As of June 30, 1967, the ceiling was $375 million; this was increased to $475 million in the Foreign Assistance Act of 1967; a further increase of $235 million to $710 million is requested for 1969.

Latin American housing.—As of June 30, 1967, the ceiling was $450 million; in the Foreign Assistance Act of 1967 this was increased to $500 million which is considered adequate to meet any demands through 1969.

The value of gross contracts issued under the three programs is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

	1967 actual	1968 estimate	1969 estimate

As of June 30, 1967, claims totaling $984,193 thousand have been paid from that portion of the reserves representing accumulated fee income. The costs of claims investigation and adjustment are paid out of fee income. Prior to 1968 other administrative and operating costs have been paid from funds appropriated for the agency's general administrative expenses. The Foreign Assistance Act of 1967 authorized the agency to pay these expenses from fees collected.

Effective 1968, these costs will be funded from the foreign investment guarantee fund. The administrative cost estimate for 1969 includes $1,679 thousand for contract services associated with the administration of the guarantee program. In 1968 and prior years these expenses were financed from other appropriations in the agency.

² The revolving fund is prepaying the Department of the Army for Ocean Freight Services performed in connection with the shipment of domestic Section 608 property. Since these services are directly chargeable to the receiving missions, they are a direct reimbursement to the revolving fund.

Section 608 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 created a revolving fund to provide for more effective use of U.S. Government-owned excess personal property in foreign assistance programs by authorizing such property to be acquired and rehabilitated in advance of specifically known requirements for country programs.

Many types of excess property such as tractors, construction and roadbuilding equipment, machinery, and machine tools, the general needs for which can be anticipated with a reasonable degree of certainty, are included.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 101. None of the funds herein appropriated (other than funds appropriated under the authorization for "International organizations and programs") shall be used to finance the construction of any new flood control, reclamation, or other water or related land resource project or program which has not met the standards and criteria used in determining the feasibility of flood control, reclamation, and other water and related land resource programs and projects proposed for construction within the United States of America as per memorandum of the President dated May 15, 1962.

SEC. 102. Obligations made from funds herein appropriated for engineering and architectural fees and services to any individual or group of engineering and architectural firms on any one project in excess of $25,000 shall be reported to the Senate and House of Representatives at least twice annually.

SEC. 103. Except for the appropriations entitled "International organizations and programs, loans", "Contingency Fund", "Alliance for Progress, development loans", and "Development loans", not more than 20 per centum of any appropriation item made available by this title shall be obligated and/or reserved during the last month of availability.

SEC. 104. None of the funds herein appropriated nor any of the counterpart funds generated as a result of assistance hereunder or any prior Act shall be used to pay pensions, annuities, retirement pay, or adjusted service compensation for any persons heretofore or hereafter serving in the armed forces of any recipient country.

SEC. 105. The Congress hereby reiterates its opposition to the seating in the United Nations of the Communist China regime as the representative of China, and it is hereby declared to be the continuing sense of Congress that the Communist regime in China has not demonstrated its willingness to fulfill the obligations contained in the Charter of the United Nations and should not be recognized to represent China in the United Nations. In the event of the seating of representatives of the Chinese Communist regime in the Security Council or General Assembly of the United Nations, the President is requested to inform the Congress, insofar as is compatible with the requirements of national security, of the implications of this action upon the foreign policy of the United States and our foreign relationships, including that created by membership in the United Nations, together with any recommendations which he may have with respect to the matter.

SEC. 106. It is the sense of Congress that any attempt by foreign nations to create distinctions because of their race or religion among American citizens in the granting of personal or commercial access or any other rights otherwise available to United States citizens generally is repugnant to our principles; and in all negotiations between the United States and any foreign state arising as a result of funds appropriated under this title these principles shall be applied as the President may determine.

SEC. 107. (a) No assistance shall be furnished under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, to any country which sells, furnishes, or permits any ships under its registry to carry to Cuba, so long as it is governed by the Castro regime, in addition to those items contained on the list maintained by the Administrator pursuant to title I of the Mutual Defense Assistance Control Act of 1951, as amended, any arms, ammunition, implements of war, atomic energy materials, or any other articles, materials, or supplies of primary strategic significance used in the production of arms, ammunition, and implements of war or of strategic significance to the conduct of war, including petroleum products.

(b) No economic assistance shall be furnished under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, to any country which sells, furnishes, or permits any ships under its registry to carry items of economic assistance to Cuba, so long as it is governed by the Castro regime, or to North Vietnam.

SEC. 108. Any expenditure made from funds provided in this title for procurement outside the United States of any commodity in bulk and in excess of $100,000 shall be reported to the Senate and the House of Representatives at least twice annually: Provided, That each such report shall state the reasons for which the President determined, pursuant to criteria set forth in section 604(a) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, that foreign procurement will not result in adverse effects upon the economy of the United States or the industrial mobilization base which outweigh the economic or other advantages to the United States of less costly procurement outside the United States.

SEC. 109. (a) No assistance shall be furnished to any nation, whose government is based upon that theory of government known as communism under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, for any arms, ammunition, implements of war, atomic energy materials, or any articles, materials, or supplies, such as petroleum, transportation materials of strategic value, and items of primary strategic significance used in the production of arms, ammunition, and implements of war, contained on the list maintained by the Administrator pursuant to title I of the Mutual Defense Assistance Control Act of 1951, as amended.

(b) No economic assistance shall be furnished to any nation whose government is based upon that theory of government known as communism under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended (except section 214(b)), unless the President determines that the withholding of such assistance would be contrary to the national interest and reports such determination to the House of Representatives and the Senate. Reports made pursuant to this subsection shall be published in the Federal Register within seven days of submission to the committees and shall contain a statement by the President of the reasons for such determination.

SEC. 110. None of the funds appropriated or made available pursuant to this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used for making payments on any contract for procurement to which the United States is a party entered into after the date of enactment of this Act which does not contain a provision authorizing the termination of such contract for the convenience of the United States.

SEC. 111. None of the funds appropriated or made available by this or any predecessor Act for the years subsequent to fiscal year 1962 for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used to make payments with respect to any contract for the performance of services outside the United States by United States citizens unless the President shall have promulgated regulations that provide for the investigation of such citizens for loyalty and security to the extent necessary to protect the security and other interests of the United States: Provided, That such regulations shall require that any such United States citizen who will have access, in connection with the performance of such services, to information or material classified for security reasons shall be subject to such investigation as may otherwise be provided by law and executive order.

SEC. 112. None of the funds appropriated or made available under this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used to make payments with respect to any capital project financed by loans or grants from the United States where the United States has not directly approved the terms of the contracts and the firms to provide engineering, procurement, and construction services on such projects.

SEC. 113. Of the funds appropriated or made available pursuant to this Act not more than $8,000,000 $10,000,000 may be used during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1968 1969, in carrying out section 241 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended.

SEC. 114. None of the funds appropriated or made available pursuant to this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used to pay in whole or in part any assessments, arrearages, or dues of any member of the United Nations.

SEC. 115. None of the funds made available by this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be obligated for financing, in whole or in part, the direct costs of any contract for the construction of facilities and installations in any underdeveloped country, unless the President shall have promulgated regulations designed to assure, to the maximum extent consistent with the national interest and the avoidance of excessive costs to the United States, that none of the funds made available by this Act and thereafter obligated shall be used to finance the direct costs under such contracts for construction work performed by persons other than qualified nationals of the recipient country or qualified citizens of the United States: Provided, however, That the President may waive the application of this amendment if it is important to the national interest.

SEC. 116. No assistance shall be furnished under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, to any country that sells, furnishes, or permits any ships under its registry to carry to North Vietnam any of the items mentioned in subsection 107(a) of this Act.

SEC. 117. None of the funds appropriated or made available in this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, shall be available for assistance to the United Arab Republic, unless the President determines that such availability is essential to the national interest of the United States.

SEC. 118. None of the funds appropriated or made available pursuant to this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used to finance the procurement of iron and steel products for use in Vietnam containing any component acquired by the producer of the commodity, in the form in which imported into the country of production, from sources other than the United States or a country designated as a limited free world country by code number 901 in the September 1964 Geographic Code Book compiled by the Agency for International Development, and at a total cost (delivered to the point of production) that amounts to more than 10 per centum of the lowest price (excluding the cost of ocean transportation and marine insurance) at which the supplier makes the commodity available for export sale (whether or not financed by the Agency for International Development).

SEC. 119. The President is directed to withhold economic assistance in an amount equivalent to the amount spent by any underdeveloped country other than Greece, Turkey, Iran, Israel, the Republic of China, the Philippines, and Korea for the purchase of sophisticated weapons systems, such as missile systems and jet aircraft for military purposes from any country, unless the President determines that such purchase or acquisition of weapons systems are vital to the national security of the United States and reports within thirty days each such determination to the Congress.

SEC. 120. Hereafter, none of the funds obtained or authorized to be obtained from the sale of notes under authority of paragraph 111(c)(2) of the Economic Cooperation Act of 1948 or paragraph 413(b)(4)(F) of the Mutual Security Act of 1954 may be used for the purposes of discharging liabilities under any guaranties (exclusive of informational media guaranties) issued under sections 221(b) and 224 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, sections 202(b) and 413(b)(4) of the Mutual Security Act of 1954, and section 111(b)(3) of the Economic Cooperation Act of 1948. Any portion of the funds in the reserve established pursuant to section 222(e) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 which are attributable to the funds realized from the sale of notes specified in the preceding sentence shall be transferred to the general fund of the Treasury. The Secretary of the Treasury shall cancel all such notes and sums owing and unpaid thereon, including interest to date of cancellation.

1. Work and training programs.—(a) Job Corps.—The Job Corps provides work and training in residential centers away from home for young people aged 14 through 21 who are out of school and out of work.

Conservation centers, located in rural areas and managed by the Interior and Agriculture Departments and by State governments, range in enrollee capacity from 100 to 224. Their objective is to raise the enrollee's level of basic education, while improving pre-vocational and basic work skills.

Urban centers range from 300 to 3,000 in enrollee capacity, and are operated under contract by private businesses, universities, and nonprofit organizations. Young men and women urban center enrollees receive highly specialized vocational training as well as general education, counseling, and help in improving work attitudes and habits.

In 1968 and 1969 Job Corps will redirect resources to start five residential inner-city demonstration centers. These centers will allow young men to be trained away from home while remaining in an urban environment, and will be coordinated with the Concentrated Employment Program. In 1968 and 1969 Job Corps is also taking steps to increase the average length of stay of enrollees.

Job Corps program levels are estimated at:

Man-years of training.....	18,146	30,800	38,100	37,500
Number of terminations during year.....	28,467	57,051	60,800	59,400
Number of enrollees at end of year.....	28,533	42,032	36,800	38,300
Total enrollees served during year.....	57,000	99,083	97,600	97,700
Number of centers at end of year.....	106	123	117	121

(b) School and summer work programs.—This program assists disadvantaged students of high school age to remain in school by providing part-time and summer work experience. In 1969 over 400,000 training spaces will be provided.

(c) Comprehensive employment programs.—These programs offer a wide range of manpower services which include work experience, counseling, remedial education, on-the-job training, and jobs leading to career opportunities. Individuals served, in both urban and rural areas, are unemployed, underemployed, or low-income people needing special assistance to develop their occupational potential. In 1969 it is estimated that about 170,000 work and training opportunities will be provided. Many of these opportunities will be in the recently initiated Concentrated Employment Program which brings together manpower programs and necessary supportive services such as day care and medical examinations in cities and rural areas with unusually heavy concentrations of poverty. Another major activity will involve the private sector by reimbursing employers for providing the complete range of training and other manpower services required by the hard-core unemployed.

(d) Special impact program.—This is a program to provide incentives to private employers to hire and train the disadvantaged in projects which contribute to the economic development of communities and neighborhoods having large concentrations of low-income persons.

(e) Work experience program.—This program provides work training for unemployed parents of dependent children and other needy persons. The program's objective is to prepare these persons for regular employment and to reduce the need for public assistance. These basic objectives are being met by a variety of services, including basic and high school education, employment counseling, services to enrollee families, occupational training and work experience. Funds for 1969 will provide about 7,400 work and training spaces which will assist approximately 12,000 individuals. In 1968 and 1969 the program is phasing out and will be replaced by the new Work Incentive Program to be administered by the Department of Labor for adults and out-of-school teenagers on relief. In addition, comprehensive employment funds will replace part of the program devoted to needy persons not receiving public assistance.

2. Community action programs.—More than 1,000 community action agencies (CAA's) have now been established in American communities to plan, coordinate, and mobilize the attack on poverty. Grants under this allocation support these local agencies which administer the numerous educational, legal, health, and other service and self-help programs for the poor.

In 1969, OEO will: (1) add to the capacity of local CAA's to analyze local poverty conditions and to coordinate Federal, State, and local programs in a unified attack on community and neighborhood poverty; (2) provide funds to help the 40% of the Nation's poor who reside in rural America as well as sufficient funds to enable urban areas to continue their forward movement; (3) provide assistance under special summer programs and the newly authorized emergency food and medical program; and (4) emphasize programs in which there is great national interest.

Local communities plan and carry out other activities aimed at eliminating poverty, including programs which provide remedial education and training, special summer activities, health care, and subprofessional jobs.

Almost all community action agencies will receive Head Start funds to provide child development for preschool children. Head Start grants are also made to areas that have no community action agencies. In 1969 a significant portion of the grants will be used to try differing models of preschool instruction, especially those strongly emphasizing formal instruction, motivational techniques, and parent involvement. The following table summarizes participation in this program:

Children participating—summer.....	465,000	450,000	450,000
Children participating—academic year.....	215,000	202,000	202,000

Follow Through programs providing supplementary services in the primary grades to sustain gains made in Head Start and other preschool projects will be expanded to cover 79,000 children in 1969, an increase of 70,000 over 1968.

In addition to the planning and action grants described above, the 1969 OEO budget request includes funds for research and demonstration which will be used to evaluate existing programs, to study the causes of poverty, and to provide for new approaches and experimental programs to combat poverty. Training and technical assistance programs will be used in 1969 to improve the management and coordination capabilities of community action agency staff, certain local, State, and Federal agency personnel assisting in poverty programs, and poor persons working in local agencies. This technical assistance, particularly important to rural communities and smaller cities which do not have resources to develop their own proposals, is provided to local communities through State agencies, universities, and other organizations.

3. Migrant workers program.—This activity provides special programs to help meet the housing, educational, day care and other needs of migratory agricultural workers and their families. OEO will make grants or contracts to aid public and nonprofit agencies to improve the health and living conditions of these workers in the three major national streams of domestic migrants. In 1969, the program will provide an additional 1,600 self-help housing units, adult basic education benefiting 35,000 enrollees, and day care centers serving 7,000 children of adult basic education enrollees.

4. Rural areas program.—This activity finances the administrative expenses incurred by the Farmers Home Administration of the Department of Agriculture in operating the rural loan program under a delegation of authority from OEO. Program expenses are included in the schedules for the Economic Opportunity loan fund.

5. Volunteers in Service to America.—VISTA offers an opportunity for volunteers with a spirit of service to work directly on the problems of poverty. Volunteers are participating in the programs supported by the Economic Opportunity Act, in other Federal programs attacking poverty problems, and in related State and local activities. The normal period of service, including training, is 13½ months. As of June 30, 1967, 4,257 volunteers were in training or on field assignments. During 1969, VISTA will provide about 4,500 man-years of service to the poor. In addition, 1,500 summer associates will serve for 90-day periods during 1968 and 1969.

6. General direction and administration.—The Office of Economic Opportunity directly administers the Community Action, Migrants, and VISTA programs, and exercises primary responsibility for the Job Corps program which is operated under contract by other public and private agencies. The Office also coordinates and reviews all OEO programs delegated to other agencies and assists in coordinating the programs of all Federal agencies in an integrated attack on poverty.

Rural areas program.—The Farmers Home Administration of the Department of Agriculture makes loans to low-income farm families to acquire or improve real estate; purchase operating supplies and equipment; and/or participate in cooperative associations. Loans are also made to low-income rural families to finance small nonagricultural enterprises. The maximum individual indebtedness outstanding at any one time is $3,500. In 1967, 16,453 loans were made, and about 12,000 rural families will be assisted in 1968. The funds requested for 1969 are $11 million less than 1968, but collections on outstanding loans will be utilized to make approximately 7,500 loans in 1969.

Loans are also made to help establish new cooperatives and finance existing cooperatives furnishing essential services, supplies, or facilities predominantly to low-income rural families. In 1967, 387 such loans were made. In 1968, approximately 425 loans will be made to cooperatives that will assist 6,500 low-income rural families, and approximately 250 loans will aid about 4,000 such families in 1969 with the funds available.

Revenue for 1969 consisting principally of interest on loans is estimated at $3.8 million compared to expenses of $5.5 million, resulting in an estimated loss of $1.7 million. A net loss of $3.3 million is estimated for 1968, and a net loss of $3.1 million resulted in 1967.

Loans receivable after allowances for losses are expected to amount to $77.8 million on June 30, 1969, as compared to $76.4 million on June 30, 1968 and $62.3 million on June 30, 1967.

The Government investment at June 30, 1969, is expected to be $83.4 million, consisting of $96.4 million appropriated less a deficit of $13 million.

The purposes of the Peace Corps are to provide trained Americans to interested countries in need of middle-level manpower and to promote understanding between the people of the United States and the peoples served.

As of December 31, 1967, 12,228 Peace Corps volunteers were working in 55 countries in four principal kinds of assignments. Approximately 43% are engaged in classroom teaching at all levels. About 24% serve in rural and urban community development programs, 21% are working in agricultural development and 12% in health programs. Increasing emphasis has been placed on agricultural development and health programs, particularly in the areas of food production and disease control.

Prior to overseas assignment, each volunteer is given intensive training designed to develop required skills, to provide a knowledge of the country to which he will be sent, to develop language ability, and to assure physical fitness for service overseas. During training, all prospective volunteers are carefully evaluated. To provide a most realistic training environment and experience, about 25% of all volunteers will be trained overseas in the countries where they will serve.

Planning is based on a program year which runs from the beginning of September through the end of August.

1. Volunteer and project costs.—This activity includes all costs directly associated with volunteers. The 1969 budget permits prospective volunteers in training and volunteers overseas to increase from 14,570 to 15,200. The planned assignment of these volunteers is as follows:

	Aug. 31, 1967 (actual)	Aug. 31, 1968 (planned)	Aug. 31, 1969 (planned)
Africa.....	3,607	3,650	3,800
East Asia and Pacific.....	3,047	3,050	3,200
Latin America.....	5,067	5,100	5,300
North Africa, Near East, and South Asia.....	2,734	2,770	2,900
Total.....	14,455	14,570	15,200

Requests from countries for Peace Corps volunteers continue to increase. The proposed 1969 increase of 630 in volunteer and trainee strength to a total of 15,200 will improve U.S. response to these requests. Programing criteria limit projects to those which are consistent with the purposes of the Peace Corps Act and which can be manned by anticipated available volunteers of the highest caliber. The use of the Planning, Programing, Budgeting System (PPBS) has assisted in focusing programs more sharply on key problems in the developing countries.

In African nations, while the majority of programs will continue to be in primary and secondary education, there will be an increased emphasis on new agriculture and health programs.

Most of the volunteers in the East Asia and Pacific region will be engaged in teacher training, classroom teaching, and health programs.

In Latin America, community development has long been the largest Peace Corps activity. In addition, there will be continued emphasis on education programs, particularly teacher training.

The North Africa, Near East, and South Asia region has a wide variety of programs. The majority of volunteers are working in agricultural development and educational activities.

2. Administrative expenses, limitation.—This activity includes expenses related to recruitment, selection, direction of training, and the management of the Peace Corps, both in Washington and overseas.

As authorized by sections 522 and 523 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, this trust fund is used for sales of defense articles and services. Defense articles sold consist largely of aircraft, ships, combat and other vehicles, missiles, electronic equipment, spare parts, and related supporting equipment. In dollar volume, the major portion of this program consists of sales to European and other developed countries of the free world.

Defense articles from Department of Defense stocks and defense services are sold to eligible countries and international organizations if they agree to pay in dollars not less than the value thereof in advance or, as authorized by the President, within 3 years after delivery. Payment within 120 days of delivery is normally required and the 3-year credit provision is rarely used.

Defense articles and defense services are also procured for sale if the purchasers provide the Government with a dependable undertaking (1) to pay the full amount of the procurement contract, which assures the Government against any loss on the contract; and (2) to make funds available in such amounts and at such times as may be required to meet the payments or other costs under the contract. Where it is found to be in the national interest, the Department of Defense may accept a dependable undertaking under which the eligible purchaser agrees to pay 120 days after delivery. In such cases, Department of Defense appropriations are used to meet payments required by such contracts, and these appropriations are reimbursed by amounts subsequently received from the purchasers.

The administrative expenses related to the execution of contracts under this authority are funded in the military assistance appropriation.

An appropriation of $205.9 million will be requested in 1969 to increase the U.S. subscription to the callable capital of the Inter-American Development Bank. A second appropriation of the same amount for the same purpose will be requested in 1970 or 1971. A resolution adopted at the annual meeting of the Bank in April 1967 authorized an overall increase of $1 billion by the full membership of the Bank. Both appropriations would be pursuant to new authorizing legislation of $411.8 million to be sought in the spring of 1968. Since these appropriations will be for callable capital, they are not expected to result in expenditures.

A proposed 1969 supplemental appropriation of $240 million is anticipated for the U.S. contribution to the second replenishment of the resources of the International Development Association. This reflects the U.S. proposal to increase the Association's resources by $2.4 billion, of which the total U.S. share would be $960 million. These amounts are subject to agreement among the donor countries and are still under negotiation. The amounts to be contributed by the United States will not be expended until the International Development Association needs the funds for loan disbursements.

This is a new account to be used to finance the sale of defense articles and services to foreign countries and international organizations. Legislation will be proposed in calendar year 1968 for its establishment. The funds for this account will be provided by appropriations and will be used to (1) finance directly credit sales, and (2) guarantee publicly (primarily, Export-Import Bank) and privately financed credit sales.

An appropriation $120 million is requested for 1969, to cover a credit sales program of $296 million. The $120 million consists of $61 million for directly financed credit sales and $59 million which, on a 25% reserve basis, will constitute a guaranty reserve to support publicly and privately financed credit sales of $235 million.

The administrative expenses related to this program will be funded from the military assistance appropriation.

New obligational authority

Public Law 87-490, approved June 19, 1962, authorized an appropriation, to remain available until expended, of $2 billion for U.S. participation in a 10-nation, $6 billion arrangement providing, under specified conditions, for loans by the participants to the International Monetary Fund when needed to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary system. The necessary appropriation was obtained on October 24, 1962.

The arrangements have been drawn on by the Fund on two occasions in the total amount of $930 million.

The United States did not participate in the loans made under the arrangements because the Fund's holdings of dollars have been fully adequate.

Under a 4-year renewal decided by the Executive Directors on October 15, 1965, the arrangements remain in effect until October 15, 1969.

The service conducts basic and applied research relating to the production, utilization, and marketing of agricultural products, research on nutrition and consumer use, and carries out those control and regulatory programs of the Department which involve enforcement of plant and animal quarantine, the control of diseases and pests of animals and plants, and related work.

1. Research.—(a) Farm research.—Improved breeding, feeding, and management practices, including management of animal wastes, are developed for farm livestock, poultry, and domestic fur animals. Practical methods are sought for control of diseases, parasites, and insect pests affecting them and to protect them from toxic chemical poisons and other hazards.

Investigations are conducted to improve varieties of food, feed, fiber, and other plants, and to develop new crops; to improve crop-production practices, including methods to control plant diseases and nematodes, and reduce cost of production; and to develop safe chemical, biological, and other methods for control of harmful pests affecting farm production.

Investigations are conducted to improve the management of natural resources, including investigations to improve soil and water management (including salinity and saline soils), irrigation, and conservation practices; to study hydrologic problems of agricultural watersheds; to determine the relation of soil and water to plants, animals, and human nutrition; and to apply engineering principles to improve efficiency and reduce costs of agricultural production.

The research is aimed at the profitable production of an adequate supply of food, feed, fiber, and other agricultural products of desired quality at minimum costs. Attention continues to be given to the production of agricultural products having industrial uses. Increased attention has been given to studies to protect plants, animals, and natural resources from harmful effects of soil, water, and air pollution. Research conducted is also concerned with the application of remote sensing techniques in meeting agricultural problems. The proportion of farm research funds going into basic research is currently estimated at 45% of the total funds for research. This basic research is fundamental to and strengthens the other research efforts.

A net increase is proposed for 1969 which would provide for (1) partial elimination of 1968 program cutbacks under Public Law 90-218, and (2) increases for staffing, equipping, and operating new and expanded research laboratories and watershed research centers. The staffing increases would cover the following areas of research: reducing the cost of producing cotton, engineering research on poultry production and equipment, development of cereal rust resistant varieties, water pollution control on agricultural lands, and technology of watershed conservation and management.

(b) Utilization research and development.—Chemical, physical, and biological research is conducted to develop increased industrial uses of farm products, and new and improved foods, feeds, and fabrics; and to develop improved methods for processing agricultural commodities.

The research aim is to expand the demand for farm products by developing new and improved products and economical processes tailored to the requirements of the domestic and foreign markets. The research conducted includes studies to protect food and feed products from harmful micro-organisms and naturally occurring toxins and studies of health-related problems of tobacco. Increased effort is being given to the processing of agricultural commodities to minimize waste formation and to utilize waste products to avoid pollution. A net increase is proposed for 1969 which would provide for (1) partial elimination of 1968 program cutbacks under Public Law 90-218, and (2) increases for research on short staple cotton and for additional staffing, equipping, and operating of the new Southeastern Regional Laboratory at Athens, Ga. The staffing increase would cover the following areas of research: developing detection and processing methods to protect food and feed products from harmful contamination; minimizing poultry, meat, and fruit and vegetable plant processing wastes; improving processed feed products from forages; developing improved poultry, egg, and animal food products; and developing improved fruit and vegetable products.

(c) Nutrition and consumer use research.—Studies are made of human nutritional requirements, composition and nutritive value of foods, consumer and food economics, including problems in household use of textiles and clothing. The research aim is to determine nutrient requirements and how foods can supply these to best assure nutritional well-being of people throughout their lifespan, to provide up-to-date information about food consumption and nutrition of the population, and to develop improved procedures for household preparation, care and preservation of foods which will preserve their nutritional, sanitary, and wholesome quality. The increase proposed for 1969 would be used for initial staffing and equipping the North Central Human Nutrition Research Laboratory at Grand Forks, N. Dak., to expand research on food and nutrition problems.

(d) Marketing research.—Practical answers to problems encountered in moving products from farm to consumer are sought through research. For farm products as they pass through marketing channels, efforts are made to develop safe methods to protect against insect attack, find objective methods to determine quality, reduce losses from waste and spoilage, and improve efficiency in physical handling. The work includes research at each stage of marketing, such as assembly points and storage facilities, and of transportation, at terminal or central markets, and at wholesale and retail markets. Research is also concerned with mycotoxins in agricultural products in relation to off-farm handling, conditioning, and storage. A net increase is proposed for 1969 which would provide for (1) partial elimination of 1968 program cutbacks under Public Law 90-218, and (2) increases for research on mechanical classing methods for cotton and for partial staffing, equipping, and operating the new Tree-Fruit and Nut Research Laboratory at Byron, Ga., the Peanut Marketing Laboratory at Dawson, Ga., and the Stored Products Insect Laboratory at Savannah, Ga. The staffing increases would cover the following areas of research: improving marketing efficiency, investigations on mycotoxins (peanuts), and maintaining quality of agricultural commodities in marketing channels.

(e) Coordination of departmental and interdepartmental activities related to pests and their control.—The 1969 estimate continues the availability of $225 thousand for use of the Secretary of Agriculture in collaborating with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Department of Interior, and other agencies of the Federal Government on problems related to use of pesticides. The project provides for coordination in development of measures to protect the public health, producers, and resources.

(f) Construction of facilities.—The 1969 estimates include $1 million for planning, construction, and improvements of facilities. Funds totaling $710 thousand are for planning (1) a facility for bluetongue research to be located in one of the Western States, (2) a fruitfly laboratory in the Hawaiian Islands, and (3) additional facilities at the Plum Island Animal Disease Laboratory, N.Y. Construction and improvement funds totaling $290 thousand are included to provide for the control and abatement of air pollution in existing facilities, in accordance with Executive Order 11282. These funds would be used for the conversion of the Agricultural Research Center central heating plant from coal-fired to a gas-fired automatic operation, Beltsville, Md., and construction of a central incinerator at the Animal Husbandry Meat Laboratory, Beltsville, Md. The proposed increase is offset by nonrecurring amounts totaling $4,350 thousand which were provided for planning and construction of facilities in 1968.

(g) Contingencies.—Beginning in 1962, $1 million is made available each year to meet urgent research needs that develop unexpectedly during the year, when such needs cannot be met by redirection of resources from other projects.

2. Plant and animal disease and pest control.—(a) Plant disease and pest control.—Provision is made (1) through port-of-entry inspection to exclude from this country destructive insects, plant diseases, nematodes, and other pests that cause great damage to agricultural crops in other parts of the world; (2) to cooperate with States in eradicating or preventing spread of crop pests that become established in this country; and (3) to assist States in suppressing incipient and emergency outbreaks of crop pests when and where they occur. The 1969 estimates propose an increase for plant quarantine inspection at ports of entry because of increased travel and shipping, including funds to maintain Federal inspection activities in the State of California which were initiated during fiscal year 1968. This proposed increase is more than offset by a proposed decrease of $2.5 million in the imported fire ant program.

The level of activities for plant pest control is represented by the following selected examples (in thousands):

(b) Animal disease and pest control.—Programs are conducted to exclude communicable diseases of foreign origin from this country, to prevent the spread of diseases through interstate shipments of livestock or distribution of impure or impotent veterinary biologics, to control and eradicate livestock diseases, and the humane care and handling of certain laboratory animals. The 1969 estimates propose increases for enforcing a new regulation on interstate transmission of salmonella, strengthening activities under the Virus-Serum-Toxin Act, and more adequate animal inspection and quarantine at ports of entry to reduce the hazard of introduction of foreign diseases. These proposed increases are offset by a proposed decrease of $403 thousand in the hog cholera program.

The level of protective activities for animal diseases and pest control is indicated by the selected examples in the following table. Numbers are in thousands except for examples given under Veterinary Biologics which are in actual lots tested or found unsatisfactory.

Foreign currencies, generated by the sale of surplus agricultural commodities under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, are used by the Department for market development research under subsection 104(b)(1) and for agricultural and forestry research under subsection 104(b)(3) of the act. Work is carried on through agreements, in both basic and applied fields, by research institutions and organizations in foreign countries. In addition to developing scientific information of great importance to American agriculture, the research under this program is making a contribution to the solution of agricultural production and related problems of the countries in which it operates. Accordingly, it represents an important component in achievement of U.S. foreign policy and technical assistance in the food and agricultural area. It serves to preserve and expand existing markets and develop new ones for agricultural commodities including cotton, dairy products, fats and oils, grain, feed, livestock and meat, poultry, and fruit and vegetables. It also provides for research supplementary to domestic programs on farm, forest, marketing, utilization, agricultural economics, and human nutrition problems. Specialized projects provide for the translation and dissemination of foreign language scientific publications and for the acquisition of scientific publications abroad for use in the National Agricultural Library. The appropriation proposed for 1969 will be used to purchase those currencies determined to be excess to the normal requirements of the United States. Total estimated cost in U.S. dollars (charged to regular appropriations) for program direction and supervision of projects in 1969 is $341 thousand.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1966, $3,895 thousand (1967 adjustments, -$39 thousand); 1967, $6,542 thousand; 1968, $7,418 thousand; 1969, $5,016 thousand.

The Service administers funds for payments and grants to State agricultural experiment stations and other eligible institutions for the support of research in agriculture, the rural home, the rural community and forestry. This administration involves supervision of the funds, and close advisory relations with the State agricultural experiment stations, schools of forestry and other institutions eligible to receive funds. This agency participates in planning and coordination of research programs among the States and between the States and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

1. Payments to agricultural experiment stations under the Hatch Act.—Grants under the Hatch Act are allocated to agricultural experiment stations of the land-grant colleges in the 50 States and Puerto Rico for agricultural research including investigations and experiments to promote a permanent and efficient agricultural industry and improvements in the rural home and rural community.

2. Grants for cooperative forestry research.—These grants are allocated to land-grant colleges or agricultural experiment stations in the 50 States and Puerto Rico and other State-supported colleges and universities offering graduate training in the sciences basic to forestry and having a forestry school. The act requires that the Federal funds paid to each institution be matched by funds from non-Federal sources for forestry research.

3. Contracts and grants for scientific research.—These funds are for the support of grants on specific research problems at nonprofit institutions of higher education or nonprofit organizations whose primary purpose is the conduct of such research. Funding is on a competitive basis. Every research proposal selected for funding must be evaluated and classified as outstanding and appropriate to the needs of the designated problem area.

4. Grants for facilities.—These grants to provide additional facilities for research are allocated to State agricultural experiment stations in the 50 States and Puerto Rico. Assistance is available to the States for construction, acquisition, and remodeling of buildings, laboratories, and other capital facilities which are necessary to more effectively conduct research in agriculture and sciences related thereto. The Federal funds are provided on a matching basis.

5. Penalty mail.—Funds to cover the cost of penalty mailings for State agricultural experiment station directors are provided under this appropriation.

6. Federal administration.—A coordinating and review staff is maintained to examine research projects and assist State institutions and Federal agencies.

Federal Funds—ContinuedEXTENSION SERVICE—Continued*General and special funds—Continued*COOPERATIVE EXTENSION WORK, PAYMENTS AND EXPENSES—Con.

The primary function of the nationwide system of cooperative extension work is out-of-school applied education in agriculture, home economics, and related subjects. This educational work takes research results, technological advancements, and situation and program facts of the Department of Agriculture, the State agricultural colleges and experiment stations, and incorporates them into a national educational program for action. Its objective is to provide farm people and others with information and assistance upon which they may make social and economic adjustments necessary for an efficient agricultural industry and improved rural homes and rural life.

1. Payments to States and Puerto Rico.—Funds appropriated under the Smith-Lever Act for payments to States and Puerto Rico are distributed primarily on the basis of farm and rural population and to a limited degree on the basis of special problems and needs. Funds appropriated under the Agricultural Marketing Act for educational work in marketing are distributed to the States and Puerto Rico on a matching basis under approved projects and on the basis of contracts. Funds are used primarily for the employment of State and County extension workers who work with rural families, marketing concerns, and others by providing advice and assistance in the application of improved methods involved in production, marketing, and family living. They assist local leadership to determine extension programs of work. Work with youth is accomplished largely through 4-H clubs. Funds also provide for Federal program support. Extension agents are paid from Federal, State, and county sources.

The increase of $3,385 thousand in this item would enable the Extension Service to work intensively with 70,000 additional low income families through the use of Extension program aides. The increase will be distributed on the basis of section 8 of the Smith-Lever Act which allocates on the basis of need rather than formula.

2. Retirement and employees' compensation costs for extension agents.—The increase of $515 thousand proposed is required to meet these costs for cooperative extension agents. The mandatory retirement contribution is authorized under Public Law 854, approved July 31, 1956. The employer's contribution to the Federal retirement fund, to match contribution of these agents, is provided by this Federal appropriation.

3. Penalty mail.—Additional funds to cover the cost of penalty mailings for State extension directors and cooperative extension agents in the States in the amount of $201 thousand are required pursuant to Public Law 90-206.

4. Federal Extension Service.—The Federal Extension Service provides leadership, counsel, and assistance to the States and Puerto Rico in developing extension programs, improved teaching methods, efficient use of available resources, evaluation of programs, inservice training for extension personnel, and administrative services. The Federal Extension Service also coordinates the educational activities of other U.S. Department of Agriculture agencies. An increase of $36 thousand is required to provide for annualization of the pay increase pursuant to Public Law 90-206. An increase of $4 thousand is required for increased mailing costs pursuant to Public Law 90-206.

SOIL CONSERVATION SERVICE

The Soil Conservation Service is responsible for various soil and water conservation activities of the Department of Agriculture, including six action programs for which separate appropriations are made, reimbursements from other agencies for technical services performed, trust funds, and miscellaneous accounts involving cooperative agreements with local organizations.

The main purposes of these program operations are to help farmers, ranchers, and other landowners in making needed land use adjustments; to conserve soil, water, and plant resources; to reduce the hazards of floods, sedimentation, and related damages; and to assist in establishing a permanent and economically sound agriculture. Such soil and water conservation treatments also provide for recreational uses of rural lands and the beautification of rural communities. These activities are conducted in cooperation with Federal and State agencies, conservation districts, and other sponsoring organizations.

The Service provides professional leadership in soil, water, and plant conservation and works directly with locally managed conservation districts and sponsors of watershed projects. Cooperative programs and work plans are designed for the benefit of local people to help them solve problems within their areas.

The Service also furnishes technical services for the agricultural conservation program; the soil and water conservation loans made by the Farmers Home Administration; the State and county rural areas development committees; and other agencies or local groups having soil and water conservation problems. These interrelated program activities are primarily for the conservation, protection, and improvement of land and water resources for the beneficial uses of all people.

(d) Technical assistance with community-type group jobs and control measures, including mine-spoil restoration, that can best be solved through coordinated local action; (e) the granting of special equipment to soil conservation districts for use in applying conservation practices; (f) water supply forecasts developed from snow surveys in Western States which are useful in making efficient seasonal use of water; (g) the selection and testing of plant materials to determine their suitability for erosion control and conservation purposes; (h) technical assistance to participants in the agricultural conservation program in establishing specified practices; (i) technical services to participants in other programs involving land-use adjustments; (j) technical assistance in planning and applying the soil and water conservation practices for which loans are made by the Farmers Home Administration; (k) and consultative assistance to rural areas development committees.

Combinations of needed soil and water conservation practices are planned together and in relation to each other so as to have a well balanced conservation program in each district and for each farm or ranch. Both vegetative and structural measures are used in accordance with the needs of the land for conservation treatment and resource improvement. Each plan reflects the decisions of the cooperating farmer or rancher as to how he will use and treat his land.

Technicians of the Soil Conservation Service explain the various soil conditions, develop alternative uses and treatments with each cooperator, help to evaluate the costs and returns of conservation farming, and furnish assistance in applying the needed treatments. Cooperating land owners and operators are providing more than half the cost of practices and measures installed in district programs. Local agencies and private individuals also furnish about one-third of the total installation services used to help cooperators apply soil and water conservation practices in districts throughout the country.

Small watershed project investigations and planning.—Surveys are made by the Department of proposed small watershed projects, and work plans are prepared in cooperation with the local sponsors. These plans outline the soil and water management problems in the watershed, the steps that have been or are authorized to be taken to alleviate these problems, the proposed works of improvement to be installed, the estimated benefits and costs, cost-sharing and operation and maintenance arrangements, and other facts necessary to justify Federal participation in project development.

The Department cooperates with the States and other agencies in installing works of improvement in small watersheds to reduce damage from floodwater, sediment, and erosion, and for the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water. It makes loans to local organizations to help them finance their share of the costs of certain works of improvement. The Department also cooperates with other agencies in making surveys and investigations of watersheds of rivers and other waterways as the basis for the development of coordinated programs.

1. Watershed works of improvement.—The Department provides technical and financial assistance to local organizations to install the watershed works of improvement for watershed protection, flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife development features specified in the work plans.

(a) Pilot demonstration watersheds.—Sixty-two pilot watersheds were started in 1954 in cooperation with local sponsors under authority of the act of April 27, 1935 (16 U.S.C. 590 a-f) to demonstrate and evaluate the effectiveness of works of improvement installed in small watersheds for watershed protection and flood prevention. As of June 30, 1967, work had been discontinued in eight projects and completed as planned in 52 except for project evaluation studies which will be underway until 1970 in some of these. The following table shows the current status of the pilot watershed projects. Obligations for project evaluation studies are not reflected in the table subsequent to 1959 as these costs were determined not properly chargeable to projects. Obligations for such studies amount to $72 thousand in 1967 and are estimated at $100 thousand each year in 1968 and 1969.

(b) Public Law 566 watersheds.—After local sponsoring organizations have developed watershed work plans with the Department's assistance or with State and local resources, and the projects have been approved as suitable for Federal participation technical services and financial assistance can be provided for specified works of improvement. Projects involving an estimated Federal contribution in excess of $250 thousand or construction of any single structure having a capacity in excess of 2,500 acre-feet now require congressional committee approval; however, the President objects to this provision and legislative changes have been proposed to provide for approval by the Congress. On non-Federal lands local sponsoring organizations must contract for construction work, operate and maintain the projects, and, in the case of multiple-purpose structures, bear a share of construction costs. In addition, local organizations must acquire water rights and furnish land, easements, and rights-of-way for all structural measures except that the Federal Government may pay up to one-half the cost of land, easements, and rights-of-way allocated to public fish and wildlife and recreational developments. Federal agencies do this work on Federal lands which they administer with appropriate contributions being made by the local people who receive benefits.

Preconstruction land treatment and engineering services are furnished to all approved projects before they are advanced to the construction stage. During the preconstruction stage, surveys and investigations are made and detailed designs, specifications, and engineering cost estimates are prepared for construction of structural works; areas are delineated where easements are required, and technical services are furnished for accelerating planning and application of land-treatment measures if provided for in the watershed work plan.

The project construction stage begins with the execution of the first project agreement for construction of works of improvement. Under a project agreement the local sponsoring organization agrees to construct a segment of the project which may consist of an individual or an inter-related group of structures. The agreement obligates the Department to furnish its share of the construction cost. Payments are made to the local contracting organization in accordance with the project agreement as the work progresses. Engineering and other services are provided for the preparation of contracts and inspection of construction. Technical assistance in planning and installing land-treatment measures is continued as called for in the watershed work plan.

The following tabulation shows the status of Public Law 566 projects and amounts obligated or estimated to be obligated. The table does not reflect minor obligations for project evaluation studies ($198 thousand cumulatively as of June 30, 1967) for balances remaining in the undistributed equipment account ($548 thousand cumulatively as of June 30, 1967) or for advances for future water supplies ($45 thousand cumulatively as of June 30, 1967).

The 1968 program contemplates initiation of construction in 30 watershed projects, involving $6.0 million and a total Federal cost of $30 million. The 1969 estimate provides for starting about 55 projects with 1969 obligations of $9.6 million and total Federal cost of $55 million.

2. Loans and related expense.—Loans are made to local sponsoring organizations to finance the local cost of installing works of improvement in approved watershed projects. Repayment with interest is required within 50 years after the principal benefits of improvements become available. Loans will be made from prior year unobligated balances of $488 thousand and an additional $5 million will be available in 1968 and $3 million in 1969 from the Direct Loan Account of the Farmers Home Administration. Loan services related to processing and making loans will be financed from new obligational authority available in this appropriation.

3. River basin program development and coordination.—Section 6 of Public Law 566, 83d Congress, as amended, authorizes the Department to cooperate with other Federal, State, and local agencies in making surveys and investigations of the watersheds of rivers and other waterways as a basis for the development of coordinated water and related land resource programs. The Department currently is participating in cooperative surveys and investigations in river basins with the Corps of Engineers and other interested Federal and State agencies. The Department is represented on the Interagency Committee on Water Resources which was established to coordinate water and related land resource activities of Federal departments and agencies. The Department also maintains representation on various river basin interagency committees. These serve as points of contact and coordination between representatives of this Department and of other Federal departments and agencies and the States in these basin areas. They keep all concerned mutually informed of the activities of the member agencies and facilitate matters of interagency coordination. During fiscal year 1968 the Department maintained such representation on committees in the Arkansas-White-Red, Missouri, Pacific Southwest, and Southeast areas.

The Department also is represented on the Water Resources Council which recently was formed in accordance with section 101, Public Law 89-80, the Water Resources Planning Act. It is represented on the Council of Representatives which provides staff services to the Water Resources Council on an interim basis.

This Department and the Departments of the Army, the Interior, and Health, Education, and Welfare have jointly considered river basin surveys and investigations currently needed to attain the goal for surveying the river basins of the Nation which was proposed by the Senate Select Committee on National Resources and recommended by the President. Based on this joint consideration, this estimate includes $3,444 thousand to continue these interagency comprehensive surveys during fiscal year 1969 and to start one new one; $4,109 thousand to continue other cooperative river basin surveys begun in prior years and to start 6 additional surveys in cooperation with States; and $1,175 thousand for interregional economic analyses and interagency coordination activities. The estimate also includes $52 thousand for flood hazard analysis.

The following tabulation shows the number of surveys and actual or estimated obligations by type of survey in fiscal years 1967, 1968, and 1969.

1. Works of improvement.—The Department cooperates with soil conservation districts and other local organizations in planning and installing works of improvement for flood prevention and for furthering the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water in the 11 watersheds authorized by the Flood Control Act of 1944. The Federal Government shares in the cost of works of improvement for flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife development facilities.

The Department furnishes additional technical and in certain instances financial assistance to landowners to accelerate planning and installation of land treatment measures for runoff retardation, sediment control, and water management. Local sponsoring organizations must furnish all land, easements, and rights-of-way, water rights, and the entire cost of works of improvement for nonagricultural water management measures, except those for fish and wildlife development and recreation, and operate and maintain all completed works of improvement.

2. Loan services.—Loans are made to local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of planned works of improvement. Repayment with interest is required within 50 years after the principal benefits of improvements first become available. Loans from this appropriation in 1968 and 1969 will be financed from $1.9 million in unobligated balances carried over from prior years. Additional loans if needed may be made from the Direct Loan Account of the Farmers Home Administration.

This program provides cost-sharing assistance and technical services to participating farmers and ranchers in the development and installation of long-term conservation plans for their land. It is a voluntary program which supplements other conservation programs of the Department in 414 designated counties of 10 Great Plains States. Cost-sharing contracts with individual landowners extend over periods of 3 to 10 years and include a plan of conservation operations for each farm or ranch. The primary purpose of this program is to achieve needed land use adjustments, conservation treatments and economic stability for each farm or ranch unit where the contracted work is installed within specific time schedules.

Active contracts end of year (net of terminations).....	18,400	19,000	19,500

The needs for technical help increase over a period of years as more participants enter the program. This increasing workload is in two parts; namely, (a) assistance to new participants in preparing long-term contracts; and (b) installation services in accordance with the terms and period of time specified in each contract.

As of June 30, 1967, there was a backlog of 4,649 unserved applications pending, and a total of 18,400 farmers and ranchers were cooperating in this cost-share program. Cooperating landowners finance the entire cost of installing recurring management type practices and pay a specified part of the cost-shared practices installed on their land.

Program regulations provide that the cost-share rate offered in any contract shall not exceed 80 percent of the average cost of installing each eligible practice within the designated county. The rate of cost-share obligations varies among practices and between States due to differences in average costs for installation. Federal cost-sharing is further limited to $2,500 for the construction, enlarging, or deepening of any dam, pit, or pond for irrigation water; and to not more than $2,500 for irrigation practices in any one contract, or one-fourth of the total Federal obligation, whichever is larger. There is also a cost-sharing limitation of $25 thousand for any contract.

Each participant who signs a Great Plains program contract is responsible for installing his plan of operations as scheduled; and the Department is committed to furnish the necessary technical help needed for design, layout, and other services with all practices included in each plan. Cooperating farmers and ranchers are encouraged to make use of other available assistance under local, State, and Federal programs as a means of further improving their land and water resources.

The Department cooperates with other Federal agencies, States, local units of government, groups and individuals in developing and carrying out programs and plans for resource conservation and development on private lands and shares in the cost of installing planned project measures, when justified as a public need. Loans are provided to local sponsoring organizations and to individuals, when needed to help them finance their share of the cost of certain measures which are in the public interest.

Technical assistance is provided in each project area approved for planning to help sponsoring organizations prepare overall plans for resource conservation and development. Project measures planned will contribute to improvement in the economy of the area and to needed land use adjustments.

Thirty-four project plans are expected to be completed and in operation by June 30, 1968. Completion of the seven project plans initiated in 1968 and three plans of the 10 to be initiated in 1969 will bring the number of plans in operation in 1969 to 44.

Each project authorized for operations is provided technical assistance to help cooperating groups and individuals plan and install land treatment measures for which no cost-shares are paid from this appropriation; to design and supervise installation of project measures; and, to assist the preparation of plans for resource development and economic improvement within project areas.

The main workload factors in 1969 include:

(a) Assistance to local sponsors in developing suitable plans in 10 new project areas.

(b) Operations in 44 project areas for which plans will have been completed.

(c) Acceleration of project measure installation expected to be made possible by additional State and local funds.

Field work under this program consists, primarily, of planning, designing and supervision of installation of project measures and conservation practices, the purpose of which is to develop or improve the economic use of natural resources. This includes recreation facilities and income-producing enterprises where needed and based on proper land use. Investigations, surveys and planning are prerequisite to the operating phase of this program. Financial contributions, loans, and other Federal assistance are used to help plan and install project measures as specified in work plans.

Local sponsoring organizations are expected to provide about $17 million of non-Federal funds for project operations during 1969. This is an average of $400 thousand per operating project. Technical services to be provided by the Soil Conservation Service will be about 10% of the non-Federal funds and about 6% of the total program cost expected in 1969.

Loans are made to local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of installing project measures. The unobligated balance of loan funds carried forward to 1968 will finance $465 thousand for loan services and $1,038,874 for loans. In addition $1,500 thousand will be available for loans in 1968 and 1969 from the direct loan account of the Farmers Home Administration.

Agricultural economics research in the Department is administered by the Economic Research Service. The results of the research program are relied upon by (a) producers, dealers, importers and exporters as aids in planning the most profitable adjustments in their operations, (b) Government agencies in formulating and administering agricultural programs, and (c) Congress in considering agricultural legislation.

1. Farm economics.—Research is conducted to measure, appraise, and analyze on a continuing basis, economic changes that occur in farming and in the use of human and natural rural resources and to indicate needed adjustments.

Research on the economics of farm production includes the economics of organization and management of farms; adjustments in production to prospective demands, and changing technologies; appraisals of costs and returns on farms representative of important types, sizes and locations, and the appraisal of costs of producing important commodities; development of measures of farm output and productivity; problems of farm size and capital requirements; financing of farm enterprises; and appraisal of alternative agricultural production policies and programs.

Natural resources economics is concerned with the economics of use, conservation, development, management and control of natural resources and their relationship to economic activity. It includes economic analysis of land and water resources, resource institutions, and the economic and social conditions affecting use of resources.

Economic development is focused upon the well-being and opportunities of rural people. It includes a broad research program on economic development of rural areas, opportunities and employment of rural people and factors affecting them, including local governments and other organizations. Special attention is given to the poor who are found in heavy concentrations among rural people.

The increase requested for 1969 would permit: (1) studies of labor and capital problems in farming; (2) analysis of relationships between the land resource base and economic development; (3) economic studies of water quality management and use in agriculture; and (4) development of economic indicators of changes in the rural economy.

2. Marketing economics.—This activity covers economic aspects of marketing farm products, including the nature of farmers' bargaining power; potentials for new products and new uses; market structure, costs and margins; the economic effects of school lunch, special milk, food stamp, and direct food distribution programs.

3. Domestic and foreign economic analysis.—Domestic economic analysis is concerned with identifying, measuring, and analyzing: (1) the factors affecting demand, supply, and price of agricultural commodities; (2) relationships between agriculture and the national economy; (3) farm income and the income of the farm population; (4) demand and consumption of farm products; (5) long-term projections of economic growth and demand for farm products; and (6) historical developments in the policies, programs, and organization of the Department.

Foreign economic analysis includes trade studies and investigation of supply-demand relationships. The trade and market studies focus on the problems of developing foreign markets and the effect of these developments on U.S. agricultural production. Research is carried on for more than 100 countries around the world, focusing on the forces affecting supply, demand, and trade in farm products, and their impact on U.S. agricultural exports.

The increase requested for 1969 would provide more intensive work in research on foreign agricultural development.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1966, $321 thousand (1967 adjustments, -$52 thousand); 1967, $242 thousand; 1968, $242 thousand; 1969, $242 thousand.

The Service administers programs relating to crop and livestock estimates and statistical research and service. The statistical and economic data developed on food and agriculture are essential to farmers, processors, and handlers in making production and marketing decisions, and to legislators, administrators and others concerned with developing and administering agricultural programs. The basic data provided by this service are also essential to economic analysis and other agricultural research programs.

1. Crop and livestock estimates.—This service provides the official estimates on this Nation's agriculture, including acreage, yield, and production of crops, stocks, and value of farm commodities, numbers and inventory value of livestock items. Data collected and published on prices paid and received by farmers are basic to computation of parity prices. Data on approximately 150 crop and livestock products are covered in some 700 reports issued each year. The activity is conducted through 44 State offices serving 50 States, most of which are operated as joint State and Federal services. Cooperative arrangements with State agencies provide a considerable volume of additional data which would not be collected or made available from Federal funds. During 1967 cooperating States expended an estimated $2.5 million of their own funds on these associated State programs. A comparison of activity data for 1966 and 1967, including work performed under cooperative arrangements is as follows:

2. Statistical research and service.—This work includes review of all statistical forms, survey plans, and reporting and recordkeeping requirements originating in the Department and requiring Bureau of the Budget approval; liaison for coordination of statistics within the Department and with other statistical agencies; development of new and improved methods and techniques, and providing technical consulting services to other agencies of the Department; research on and development of sampling, forecasting, and other basic statistical techniques and methods to improve the crop and livestock estimates of the Department; use of and consultation on automatic data processing to develop and adopt this medium for improving the accuracy and timeliness of crop and livestock estimates; and conduct of special surveys relating to the marketing of agricultural products. A comparison of activity data for 1966 and 1967 is as follows:

In 1969, a group of non-government technical experts, with the assistance of a small staff, will be asked to make a comprehensive review and appraisal of the crop and livestock estimates program of the Service and the relation between this program and others pertaining to the production and marketing of crop and livestock products.

These activities provide consumer protection through inspection for wholesomeness of meat and poultry products. They assist producers and handlers of agricultural commodities through various marketing and regulatory services. These activities are continuing to increase and become more complex as the volume of agricultural commodities increases, as a greater number of new processed commodities are developed, and as the market structure undergoes dramatic changes. The marketing changes include such practices as concentration in food retailing, direct buying, decentralization of processing, growth of interregional competition, vertical integration, and contract farming. The individual activities include:

1. Market news service.—This service provides current information on supply, movement, and prices at specific markets for practically all agricultural commodities. This day-to-day market information enables American farmers to determine where and when to sell and at what price. The information is collected and disseminated at year-round and seasonal offices maintained in more than 130 cities and towns, often with local and other support and cooperation, generally from State departments of agriculture. Dissemination is made primarily by radio, television, and mimeographed reports. The increase will provide for mandatory increases in leased wire rates. The volume of work performed is indicated by examples given in the following table:

2. Inspection, grading, classing, and standardization.—(a) Meat inspection.—Federal meat inspection is required for all meat and meat products moving in interstate and foreign commerce to assure a clean and wholesome meat supply for human consumption, free from adulteration, and truthfully labeled. The work includes inspection of animals, carcasses, meat, and meat-food products at various stages of handling and processing. Measures are enforced to assure informative labeling, and that meats imported or exported are inspected. The Federal program also provides financial and technical assistance to States for improving the quality of their inspection programs.

The estimates for 1969 include increases to provide for inspection of additional plants and expanded facilities in presently inspected plants, and for implementation of the Wholesome Meat Act of 1967, including financial and technical assistance to States.

The volume of inspections and examinations is indicated by examples given in the following table:

(b) Poultry inspection.—Inspection of poultry meat and poultry meat products for wholesomeness is provided pursuant to the Poultry Products Inspection Act of 1957. All poultry processed in plants shipping in interstate or foreign commerce is required to be inspected both before and after slaughter. Birds found to be unfit for human consumption are condemned and removed from channels of trade. Legislation is being proposed to strengthen the poultry inspection program along the lines of the Wholesome Meat Act of 1967.

The increase for 1969 provides for inspection of an anticipated increased volume of poultry and poultry products. The volume of work performed is indicated in examples given below:

(c) All other (inspection, grading, classing, and standardization).—Nationally uniform standards of quality for agricultural products are established and applied to specific lots of produce to promote confidence between buyers and sellers; reduce hazards in marketing due to misunderstandings and disputes arising from the use of nonstandard descriptions; encourage better preparation of uniform quality products for market; and furnish consumers with more definite information on the quality of products they buy. The standards are applied by or under the supervision of Federal employees at the request of any interested party, and generally for a fee. Approximately 79% of the total cost of this work was offset by fees and other revenue in 1967.

Legislation is being proposed to amend the U.S. Grain Standards Act in order to meet the requirements of the modern grain merchandising system. Legislation is also being proposed to (1) amend the Tobacco Inspection Act, U.S. Grain Standards Act, and the Cotton Statistics and Estimates Act to recover in fees the full cost of the special benefit portion of the service; and (2) repeal the Naval Stores and Wool Standards Acts resulting in a reduction of $10,130 thousand in appropriated funds for 1969. 3. Regulatory activities.—These include the administration of regulatory laws such as Standard Container, U.S. Warehouse, and Federal Seed Acts to assure fair play in the marketplace to protect producers and handlers of agricultural commodities from financial loss due to careless or fraudulent marketing practices and to preserve free and open competition in the marketing of farm products. Assistance is also provided to farmers and others in obtaining and maintaining equitable and reasonable transportation rates and services on farm products and supplies. The Cotton Research and Promotion Act, approved July 13, 1966, is being administered under this item. This law is designed to improve the competitive position and expand markets for cotton through a program of self-assessment by cotton producers.

Legislation is being proposed to amend the U.S. Warehouse Act to recover the full cost of administering this act, and to repeal the Naval Stores Act, the Tobacco Seed and Plant Exportation Act, and the two Standard Container Acts resulting in a total reduction of $1,525 thousand for 1969.

The volume of work performed is indicated by examples given in the following table:

In 1967 this work was carried on in 44 States and 171 work projects.

Payments are made on a matching fund basis to State marketing agencies for carrying out specifically approved marketing service programs designed to bring about improved marketing. Under this activity, marketing specialists work with farmers, marketing firms, and agencies in solving marketing problems and in putting to use marketing research results.

This program covers such projects as methods of maintaining and improving the quality of products, ways of reducing marketing costs, expanding outlets for surplus products, the collection and dissemination of special State and local market information and statistics, and improving the organizational structure of the marketing system. Through this cooperative approach, the Federal Government's leadership and money are coupled with State resources and experience to aid in the solution of the most urgent local and area marketing problems.

the cost of the fluid milk consumed. Based upon available funds, and prior year participation, initial reserves were established for each State for reimbursement payments through fiscal year 1967. Beginning in fiscal year 1968, available funds are apportioned among the States on the basis of payments made to schools and child-care institutions for program reimbursement during the preceding fiscal year.

In especially needy schools, reimbursement payments may be made for the full cost of this milk for children who are unable to pay.

In 1967 over 3 billion half pints of fluid milk were consumed by children—over six times the quantity in 1955, the first year of operation of the program. This represents more than 2½% of the total nonfarm consumption of fluid milk in the United States.

The program is administered directly in some 8,000 outlets where no State agency has assumed the responsibility for its administration or is prohibited by law from disbursing funds to such participants.

1. Food assistance, in the form of both funds and food, is provided to the States, as defined in the act, in serving lunches to schoolchildren. Each State's portion of the funds available is determined by a statutory formula. The formula takes into account the participation rate in the State, and the relationship between the per capita income of the State and the average U.S. per capita income. In addition, there is provision for special cash assistance to needy schools serving free or reduced-price lunches.

The increase for 1969 would provide for some growth in both cash and commodities for the regular program, and for expanding the special assistance program to reach more needy schools.

The program is operated under an agreement entered into by the State educational agency and the Department of Agriculture. Funds are advanced under letters of credit to State agencies for use in reimbursing participating schools. Schools make application to the State agency and, if accepted, are reimbursed for a part of the food cost of each lunch served. In 1967, the States contributed $1,272 million to this program, most of which came from payments by children. This was far in excess of the statutory matching requirement of $3 for each Federal dollar of cash payment.

This appropriation is also used to purchase food for distribution to the schools to help meet the nutritional requirements of the lunches. Transfers are made to this appropriation from the fund, Removal of Surplus Agricultural Commodities, for the purchase and distribution of agricultural commodities and other foods. Further, commodities acquired under price support and surplus removal programs are available to the schools. The volume of surplus commodities distributed to schools, however, depends upon market conditions.

The program during the peak month in 1967 provided lunches to over 36.5% of the approximately 50.5 million schoolchildren in the country. The number of lunches served increased approximately 1.7% over 1966. Participation in the program in November 1966 reached 18.5 million children in 72,944 schools and an appreciable increase is expected in 1968 and 1969.

During 1967 over $1,088 million worth of agricultural commodities and other foods were used in the program. About 18% of this amount represented commodities contributed under section 6 of the School Lunch Act and the Federal surplus removal and price support program. Over 82% of the food used in the program was purchased by the schools through local suppliers.

2. Pilot school breakfast program.—The Child Nutrition Act of 1966 authorized a school breakfast program for 2 years on a pilot basis to assist States through grants-in-aid and other means to initiate, maintain, or expand nonprofit breakfast programs in schools.

Funds are apportioned to States by a statutory formula. While the basic payments are limited to food assistance, in circumstances of severe need financial assistance may be authorized up to 80% of the operating costs. Applicant schools must provide justification of the need for additional assistance.

The program is operated in schools drawing attendance from areas in which poor economic conditions exist and where a substantial portion of the children enrolled travel long distances. During fiscal year 1967, programs operated in 752 schools in 47 States, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, and American Samoa.

More than 75% of the breakfasts were served free or at token charges to children.

Number of breakfasts served (millions)...	4.1	28.0	52.0

The present authorization will expire at the end of fiscal year 1968. Legislation is proposed to extend the program.

3. Nonfood assistance program.—The Child Nutrition Act of 1966 authorized a permanent program to assist the States through grants-in-aid and other means to supply schools in low-income areas with food service equipment, other than land or buildings.

Applicant schools are required to justify their need for assistance on a project basis and to submit a detailed description of the equipment to be acquired and their proposals for its use in meeting the nutritional needs of children. In addition, State and local sources must bear 25% of the cost of equipment or facilities financed under this authority.

In fiscal year 1967 over 490 schools in all States, the District of Columbia, Guam, and American Samoa, serving meals to some 200,000 children, received equipment assistance of over $711 thousand. In 71 of these schools, no food service had been available prior to receiving equipment funds.

4. State administrative expenses.—The Child Nutrition Act of 1966 provides for advances to each State educational agency for administrative expenses. These funds are to be used for supervising and giving technical assistance to the local school districts for the administration of additional activities undertaken by them to extend the school lunch special assistance, school breakfast, and non-food assistance programs to reach more needy children.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1966, $783 thousand; 1967, $1,069 thousand; 1968, $1,069 thousand; 1969, $1,069 thousand.

This program aims at providing increased nutrition to households with limited resources and, thus, at making more effective use of our food abundance. Food coupons which may be used in retail stores for the purchase of commercial brand foods are issued to needy households that qualify to participate. The program is inaugurated at the request of State welfare agencies, and these agencies are responsible for certification and coupons issuance functions.

The Department determines the allotment of coupons for each household unit, including the portion to be purchased, based on income, food needs, and other factors. The participant's normal food expenditure is maintained by the purchase requirement. The supplemental or bonus coupons, provided free of charge, permit the family to upgrade its diet.

Coupons are issued by a non-Federal issuing office. Cash paid for the coupons by participants is deposited periodically in a designated Federal depository. Food stores receive cash or credit for the coupons from any commercial bank, which must accept them at face value. The coupons then flow through regular banking channels to the Federal Reserve banks where they are redeemed.

The Food Stamp Act of 1964 was amended on September 27, 1967, to provide appropriation authority of $200 million for fiscal year 1968, and $225 million for fiscal year 1969. Legislation will be proposed to increase the 1969 limitation to $245 million.

In 1968, $184.9 million will finance the program in areas in operation on July 1, 1967, and permit expansion to reach a total of about 2.7 million persons by June 30, 1968. The increase¹ for 1969 would provide for financing, on a full-year basis, the program level expected by June 30, 1968, and for further expansion. Total participation by the end of fiscal year 1969 will depend upon the time at which new areas are brought into the program, the number of participants in each of these areas, and continuing efforts to bring eligible nonparticipants into the program in areas already in operation. It is estimated that total participation by the end of the year could reach 2,964 thousand. This would be an increase of 219 thousand above the total expected at the end of fiscal year 1968.

The following table reflects coverage, participation, and costs for fiscal years 1962 (the first full year of operation of the pilot program) and 1967, and estimates for 1968 and 1969 (dollars in millions):

Commission merchants, dealers, and brokers handling these products in interstate and foreign commerce are licensed. Complaints of violations are investigated and violations dealt with by (a) informal agreements between the two parties, (b) formal decisions involving payment of reparation awards, and (c) suspension or revocation of license and/or publication of the facts.

Under section 32 of the act of August 24, 1935, as amended (7 U.S.C. 612c), an amount equal to 30% of customs receipts collected during each calendar year (except for an amount equal to 30% of such receipts collected on fishery products transferred to the Department of Interior to encourage the distribution of fishery products), plus unused balances up to $300 million are available for expanding domestic and foreign market outlets for farm commodities. As provided in recent appropriation acts, transfers have been made from this fund primarily to the school lunch program for the purchase and distribution of agricultural commodities and the special milk program to cover the full or partial cost of milk served to schoolchildren. Section 32 funds are also authorized for the administration of marketing agreements and orders. The basic legislation provides that funds devoted to any one commodity or product thereof must not exceed 25% of funds available. It also provides that the funds must be devoted principally to perishable agricultural commodities other than those receiving price support under title II of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended. It has been determined that this provision can be legally satisfied by setting aside or reserving the principal portion of section 32 funds for the use of perishable nonbasic agricultural commodities.

1. Commodity program payments are of four types: (a) Direct purchases are donated to schools, summer camps, child-care centers, nonprofit institutions serving needy persons, persons certified by welfare as eligible for relief, and disaster victims; (b) Diversion payments, none of which were made in 1967, enable processors to purchase surplus commodities on the domestic market, divert them to byproducts and new uses, and sell them at prices comparable to competing products, thus creating new markets for surplus commodities; (c) Export payments enable exporters to purchase surplus commodities on the domestic market and sell them on the world market at competitive world prices; (d) Production payments, none of which were made in 1967, help to reestablish farmers' purchasing power. During the past 2 years, assistance under these programs was given to the following commodity groups (in millions of dollars).

The use of section 32 program funds is contingent upon marketing conditions. The estimates for both 1968 and 1969 reflect the foreseeable needs for perishables and other activities regularly financed with section 32 funds. If troublesome surpluses not now foreseen should develop, steps will be taken to use additional available funds for their removal or diversion as conditions might warrant. Funds are being used to arrange for certification and distribution of food to low-income families located in counties where there are no recipient agencies that are financially able to distribute food.

2. Surplus removal operating expenses occur mainly in connection with purchasing and exporting surplus commodities, and in distributing Section 32 and Commodity Credit Corporation commodities to eligible outlets. Distribution in 1967, including that under section 6 of the National School Lunch Act, is summarized below (in millions):

Distribution	Number of recipients (peak month)	Value of commodities distributed	Pounds of commodities distributed
By recipients:
Schoolchildren.....	21.4	$188.4	833.4

Total.....		304.6	1,682.0

In cooperation with the food trade, press, and radio, greater consumption of abundant foods is encouraged through publication of a monthly plentiful foods list and conducting various food drives. In 1967 the monthly plentiful foods list contained an average of seven foods. Eleven national and 13 area, State, and local drives were conducted.

3. Marketing agreements and orders are put into effect upon request of producers or handlers after hearings and investigations, and approval of producers (and handlers in case of marketing agreements). They help to stabilize prices, and benefit producers and consumers by establishing and maintaining orderly marketing conditions. Administration at the local level is financed by assessment upon handlers. On June 30, 1967, there were 73 orders in effect for milk, 47 agreements and orders covering tree fruits, nuts, and vegetables, and one order for shade grown tobacco. The expenses of advisory committees established to advise the Secretary, public hearings, referenda to determine producer sentiment and other developmental work as authorized by the Agricultural Act of 1961 is also financed under this project.

The Foreign Agricultural Service helps American agriculture to maintain and expand foreign markets for its products and reports foreign developments as a guide to American agricultural production, policies, and programs.

(a) The agency helps to develop foreign markets for U.S. farm products through aggressive market promotion under special export programs and through active work to remove international trade barriers that inhibit export sales.

(b) The agency maintains a worldwide agricultural intelligence and reporting service that enables American agriculture to carry out its production, policies, and programs in the context of world developments. This is done through a continuous program of analyzing and reporting foreign agricultural production, markets, and policies.

1. International trade.—The Service directs and coordinates Department responsibilities in international trade agreement programs and negotiations, utilizing authority of the Trade Expansion Act. It identifies and seeks to reduce foreign barriers to U.S. agricultural exports. It continuously examines and reports on developments in foreign trade policies which affect U.S. agricultural trade and operations and recommends courses of action.

The Service recommends Department positions and participates in negotiations on trade agreements and international commodity agreements. It continuously reviews and reports trade regulations of countries signatory to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade as such regulations affect the movement of U.S. farm products in world trade.

It administers a program of import controls in accordance with section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act as amended, and is responsible for administering any import controls established under the new beef import control legislation of 1964.

2. Agricultural attachés.—The Service maintains agricultural attachés at 63 foreign posts who assist in the development of markets abroad for U.S. agricultural commodities, working closely with numerous U.S. agricultural trade groups. They maintain continuous contacts with foreign governments in the interest of obtaining more favorable import treatment for American farm products. They carry out a comprehensive schedule of reporting foreign agricultural production, marketing, and trade policy developments as a means of keeping U.S. agriculture, industry, and Government currently informed.

3. Export programs.—The Service carries out export programs (a) to expand commercial sales of all U.S. farm products in world markets and (b) under the Public Law 480 program, to sell and ship U.S. farm products to less developed countries under long-term dollar credit sales and foreign currency sales. About three-fourths of U.S. agricultural exports are commercial sales for dollars. The Service works with 64 U.S. agricultural producer and trade groups in over 70 countries in carrying out commercial sales promotion programs under cooperative agreements. Such programs are jointly-financed. Contributions from the Service come from foreign currencies received in payment for commodities sold under title I of Public Law 480.

About one-fourth of U.S. agricultural exports move under Public Law 480 programs, largely sales for foreign currencies and credit sales for dollars. The Service develops these sales agreements with governments of friendly foreign countries and with private trade entities. The Service is responsible for export shipment of the commodities and for assurance that such commodities actually are received and utilized in the importing countries. Also the Service is responsible for initiating and programing contracts involving the donation of surplus food commodities made available to voluntary and intergovernmental agencies that operate in over 100 countries of the world.

4. Commodity programs.—Information essential to domestic planning and to foreign marketing of specific U.S. farm commodities is obtained, analyzed, and made available to U.S. farm and trade groups and to Government. Foreign agricultural competition similarly is analyzed and reported. Marketing programs, in which producers, exporters, and Government officials participate, are developed to maintain and expand the foreign market for U.S. farm products. Assistance is given to U.S. trade representatives in negotiations with foreign officials. Assistance is given to American exporters and foreign importers to bring them together under conditions favorable to trade.

5. Barter and stockpiling.—The Service, in cooperation with other Government agencies, conducts a barter program designed to utilize agricultural commodities, in lieu of dollars, in acquiring from other countries, goods, materials, equipment and services required by other Government agencies and for the national and supplemental stockpiles.

6. General sales management.—The Service administers a general sales program to develop export sales and related pricing policies and programs. The program includes price and quality review. Foreign data such as prices, stocks, and rail, truck, barge, and ocean freight rates and other market information is collected for use in program development. Information concerning prices and other sales terms, sales programs, and commodity availabilities is furnished to U.S. exporters, foreign importers, and foreign government officials.

Market development projects.—Foreign currencies generated by the sale of surplus agricultural commodities under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, as well as foreign currencies acquired by the United States from other sources, are used by the Foreign Agricultural Service to develop new foreign markets and expand existing markets for U.S. agricultural commodities, including cotton; dairy products, fats and oils, grain, feed, livestock and meat, poultry, fruits and vegetables, and tobacco.

Market development projects being carried out include sales promotion campaigns, trade fairs and exhibits, nutrition demonstrations, and market analyses. In 1969 it is planned that the unobligated balance brought forward in this appropriation will be used to purchase those currencies necessary to carry on the program. Dollar funds for use in other countries are included in the appropriation "Salaries and expenses."

The major objectives of the Commodity Exchange Authority, in the enforcement of the Commodity Exchange Act, are to protect the pricing and hedging services of the commodity futures markets. These services are widely used by farmers, merchandisers, and processors. To carry out its enforcement objectives, the Commodity Exchange Authority works to maintain fair trading practices and competitive pricing on commodity exchanges, and to prevent price manipulation, cheating, fraud, and abusive acts and practices in commodity transactions. Enforcement of the act includes supervision over 17 commodity exchanges designated as contract markets, approximately 400 brokerage firms registered as futures commission merchants, and about 865 registered floor brokers operating on the exchanges. Trading in agricultural commodities on regulated futures markets reached an alltime record volume in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1967. Open contracts climbed to their highest average levels for all commodities combined. Fifteen new futures market records were established in 1967. Outstanding among these was the unprecedented volume of trading in corn on the Chicago Board of Trade. Other commodities with large increases in trading volume were wheat, soybean meal, and potatoes. Continuing large market activity in wheat and soybeans brought the volume of trading in all grains combined to their highest levels on record. While the current volume of futures trading has not reached last years' level, the total volume of trading is still at relatively high levels.

1. Licensing and auditing of brokerage houses.—This consists of (a) prevention of the misuse of customers' funds by the analysis of financial statements of futures commission merchants and the periodic audits of their books and records; and (b) annual registration of futures commission merchants and floor brokers.

This account includes funds to cover expenses of programs administered by, and functions assigned to, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. The funds consist of direct appropriation, transfers from the Commodity Credit Corporation, and miscellaneous advances from other sources. This is a consolidated account for administrative expenses of national, commodity, State, and county offices.

The commodity offices and the data processing centers in Kansas City and New Orleans play an important role in administering price support programs and the field operations stemming from producer loan and purchase agreements, inventory management, and merchandising activities.

The State committees are in general administrative charge of all programs carried out in their respective States. Within the framework of national policy, they determine the policies to be followed and direct the adaptation of national programs to the State.

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation county committees are responsible for the local administration of programs. They carry out all functions dealing directly with farmers. The elected county committee is in charge of the county office.

The programs and activities carried out by this Service include: agricultural conservation program, Appalachian Region conservation program, acreage allotment and marketing quota programs, Sugar Act program, conservation reserve program, wheat, feed grain, and cotton diversion programs, cropland conversion program, cropland adjustment program, dairy indemnity payment program, Wool Act program, bin storage program, and price support and related programs.

The activities carried out by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service fall within three major categories:

1. Program formulation and appraisal.—The supply adjustment, conservation, and the price support programs and the management and merchandising of commodities acquired under the price support program have a tremendous impact on the national and, to a lesser extent, the international economy. This activity provides for constant review of the effectiveness of these programs. It also provides for the analysis of data to formulate even more effective programs.

2. Operation of supply adjustment, conservation, and price support programs.—This activity includes all functions dealing with the administration of programs carried out through the farmer committee system, including: (a) developing program regulations and procedures, (b) holding meetings with employees and producers to discuss new programs or changes in existing programs, (c) collecting and compiling basic data for individual farms, (d) establishing individual farm allotments, (e) establishing proportionate shares for sugar farms, when necessary, (f) notifying producers of allotments, proportionate shares, productivity indexes, and payment rates, (g) determining farm marketing allocations, (h) handling appeals, (i) determining county normal yields, (j) conducting referendums and certifying results, (k) checking compliance with acreage allotments and use of diverted acres, (l) developing pooling agreements under which several farmers work jointly to solve a common conservation problem which cannot be solved by individual action, (m) issuing marketing cards so that production from the allotted acreage can be marketed without penalty, (n) processing producer requests for conservation cost-sharing, and (o) processing commodity loan documents and issuing sight drafts.

3. Inventory management and merchandising.—This activity includes (a) overall management of CCC-owned commodities, (b) selling commodities, (c) donating commodities, and (d) accounting for loans and commodities. The value of the commodities owned by CCC on June 30, 1967 was about $1.9 billion.

The objectives are to provide consumers with adequate supplies of sugar at reasonable prices, to protect the welfare of the domestic sugar industry, and to promote the export trade of the United States. Total U.S. requirements and quotas are determined each year. The quota for each domestic area is allotted to individual sellers when necessary to achieve orderly marketing. Restrictive farm acreage allotments are established for producers when necessary to avoid surpluses.

Payments are made which supplement the income of domestic producers of cane and beets. Payments require compliance with specified conditions of employment, production, and price. Payments are also made for abandonment of planted acreage and crop deficiencies on harvested acreage due to natural calamities.

The increase of $2.3 million proposed for 1969 is required to provide necessary funds to make payments to all eligible producers in the fiscal year 1969.

Tax collections from imports of sugar exceed total obligations by $574 million for fiscal years 1938 through 1967.

This program is designed to encourage conservation by sharing with farmers, ranchers, and woodland owners the cost of carrying out approved soil-building and soil- and water-conserving practices, including related wildlife-conserving practices. These are practices which farmers generally would not perform to the needed extent with their own resources. The rate of cost-sharing averages about 50% of the cost. Cost-sharing may be in the form of conservation materials and services or a payment after completion of the practice.

Conservation measures offered include those primarily designed to establish permanent protective cover, improve and protect established vegetative cover, conserve and dispose of water, establish temporary vegetative cover, temporarily protect soil from wind and water erosion, and provide wildlife and beautification benefits.

The following and other practices were installed under the 1966 program on a total of 1,017,440 farms:

Funds are distributed among the States on the basis of conservation needs. They are, in turn, distributed by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation State committees to counties. The county committees approve conservation practice cost-sharing for eligible persons.

Loans from Commodity Credit Corporation are used to make advance payments to vendors. These payments are for conservation materials and services furnished to farmers and ranchers prior to the time funds are appropriated each year. Repayment is made from balances of prior appropriations or from new funds appropriated.

The cropland adjustment program, authorized by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965, assists farmers, through long-term agreements, to divert cropland from the production of certain crops to more needed uses that will promote the development and conservation of our soil, water, forest, wildlife, and recreational resources. The program also helps farmers establish, protect and conserve open spaces and natural beauty, and prevent air and water pollution.

In return for diverting the cropland to approved public benefit uses, producers will receive adjustment payments. They also will be eligible to receive cost-sharing assistance for establishing approved land treatment measures. Additional incentive payments may be made to producers who enter into agreements to permit free public access to land designated under the cropland adjustment program agreement, for hunting, trapping, fishing, and hiking. The period of an agreement cannot be less than 5 years nor more than 10 years.

Funds may be made available to Federal, State, or local governmental agencies for use in acquiring cropland to be permanently converted to specified public uses, and cost-shares may be paid to State or local governmental agencies for designated uses, consistent with the conditions and costs under agreements entered into with producers.

In fiscal year 1967, producers in 47 States entered into agreements to divert an additional 2 million acres from production of crops to other uses. Also, free public access agreements were entered into on a half million acres of this land. During this period 125 additional grants for Greenspan were made in 25 States to assist local and State government agencies in purchasing 7,340 acres of cropland for diversion from crops in plentiful supply to needed public recreation, open space, wildlife habitat, natural beauty, and water pollution abatement.

A cropland adjustment program was not approved for 1968. A program of 2 million acres is proposed for 1969.

CONSERVATION RESERVE PROGRAM

For necessary expenses to carry out a conservation reserve program as authorized by subtitles B and C of the Soil Bank Act (7 U.S.C. 1831-1837, 1802-1814, and 1816), and to carry out liquidation activities for the acreage reserve program, to remain available until expended, [$123,000,000] $109,500,000, with which may be merged the unexpended balances of funds heretofore appropriated for soil bank programs: Provided, That no part of these funds shall be paid on any contract which is illegal under the law due to the division of lands for the purpose of evading limits on annual payments to participants. (Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1968.)

This program, initiated in 1956, has two objectives. One is to bring total crop acreage more nearly in line with demand by withdrawing cropland from production. The other is to establish and maintain sound conservation practices on the land withdrawn. The Secretary was authorized, through calendar year 1960, to enter into 3- to 15-year contracts with producers. For removing designated cropland from production and for establishing necessary conservation practices, the producer receives an annual rental payment each year of the contract period. He also receives cost-sharing assistance for the establishment of required practices. Total annual rental payments to a producer are limited to $5 thousand.

Participation in the program is summarized below:

EMERGENCY CONSERVATION MEASURES

For emergency conservation measures, to be used for the same purposes and subject to the same conditions as funds appropriated under this head in the Third Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1957, to remain available until expended, $5,000,000, with which shall be merged the unexpended balances of funds heretofore appropriated for emergency conservation measures. (71 Stat. 176; Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1968.)

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Advances 1966, $15,662 thousand (1967 adjustments, $6,860 thousand); 1967, $18,631 thousand; 1968, $10,631 thousand; 1969, $10,631 thousand.

This appropriation provides special funds for sharing the cost of emergency conservation measures to deal with cases of severe damage to farm and rangelands resulting from natural disasters. The criteria under which assistance may be made available are set forth in the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590(h)).

Funds are allocated for use only in those counties designated by the Secretary of Agriculture as disaster counties. Assistance is made available to treat new conservation problems which (1) if not treated will impair or endanger the land, (2) materially affect the productive capacity of the land, (3) represent damage which is unusual in character and, except for wind erosion, is not the type which would recur frequently in the same area, and (4) will be so costly to rehabilitate that Federal assistance is or will be required to return the land to productive agricultural use.

Under the 1967 program cost-sharing assistance is being provided to treat farmlands damaged by drought, flood, and tornado. As of November 20, 1967, there were 193 counties in 24 States where assistance is being provided.

Long-range agreements are approved with farmers and ranchers to make changes from their past cropping systems and land uses to other income-producing, public benefit uses.

The agreements, not to exceed 10 years, provide for payments, the furnishing of materials and services, and other assistance to farmers. In return, farmers change the land use and install and maintain conservation practices. Adjustment payments may be authorized to be made either upon approval of the agreement or on an annual installment basis. Land treatment practice payments are made after the practice is installed.

The law places a limit of $10 million on payments which are required to be made in a calendar year under signed agreements.

This program is being discontinued and emphasis placed on obtaining adjustments through the cropland adjustment program.

This is a long-term program to provide cost-sharing assistance to landowners, operators, or occupiers of land in the Appalachian Region Contracts with such people provide for land stabilization, erosion and sediment control, reclamation through changes in land use, and the establishment of measures for the conservation and development of the Region's soil, water, woodland, wildlife and recreation resources. This program supplements other conservation programs of the Department in the designated counties of those States in the Appalachian Region. Cost-sharing agreements are limited to periods of not less than 3 years nor more than 10 years. The cost-share may not exceed 80% of the treatment cost on not more than 50 acres of land for any person.

Under this program the Department makes payments to dairy farmers who have been directed to remove their milk from commercial markets because it contained residues of chemicals registered and approved for use by the Federal Government.

This program began in 1964 and was funded from the Office of Economic Opportunity appropriations since the authorization was in the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 (sec. 331).

For 1968, the program will be funded by transfer from Office of Economic Opportunity from funds provided in the Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1968. This program was extended through June 30, 1968 by Public Law 90-95.

Payments made from the beginning of the program through June 30, 1967 amounted to $641,864.

It is estimated that additional claims amounting to $500 thousand will occur during fiscal year 1968.

² Statutory obligations against borrowing authority include only borrowings from Treasury and obligations to purchase notes, certificates, or other obligations evidencing loans held by banks and accrued interest on such obligations. Other obligations, contingent liabilities and commitments do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in either borrowings from Treasury or in notes, certificates, or other obligations evidencing loans held by banks and accrued interest on such obligations.

The Commodity Credit Corporation was created to stabilize, support, and protect farm income and prices, help maintain balanced and adequate supplies of agricultural commodities, their products, foods, feeds, and fibers, and help in their orderly distribution (15 U.S.C. 714-714p). It may also make available materials and facilities required in connection with the production and marketing of agricultural commodities. In addition to its basic functions, it is used to administer and, in some cases, temporarily finance numerous special activities.

The Corporation's capital stock of $100 million is held by the United States. Up to $14.5 billion may be borrowed to finance operations.

Budget assumptions.—The following general assumptions form the basis for the Corporation's 1968 and 1969 budget estimates: (a) Employment, production, and national income will rise both in 1968 and 1969 from the present level; (b) generally, exports of agricultural commodities in 1969 will increase over 1968 levels; (c) yields for the 1968 crops are based on recent averages adjusted for trend; (d) acreage allotments and marketing quotas will be in effect for the 1968 crops of peanuts, rice, cotton, and certain kinds of tobacco (Flue-cured tobacco will be on an acreage-poundage program); and (e) special programs for cotton, feed grains, and wheat will be continued. Legislation will be proposed to extend the latter programs beyond the 1969 crop, which is their present termination.

It is difficult to forecast with accuracy requirements for the year ending June 30, 1969. Complex and unpredictable factors are involved, such as weather, other factors which affect the volume of production of crops not yet planted, feed and food needs here and overseas, and available dollar exchange.

PROGRAMS OF THE CORPORATION

The basic functions of the Corporation include the following programs for which appropriations are made for net realized losses sustained (in thousands of dollars):

Supply	261	-69	-9
Feed grain diversion (31 million acres)	790,000	852,000	790,000
Cotton diversion (3 million acres)	115,000	155,000	115,000
Other items not distributed by program	393,005	244,249	340,823
Total	6,395,873	2,825,372	3,440,696

Price support.—The Corporation, through loans, purchases, payments, and other means, supports the prices of agricultural commodities to producers. This is done mainly under the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act (15 U.S.C. 714) and the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1421).

The 1949 act makes price support mandatory for the basic commodities—corn, cotton, wheat, rice, peanuts, and tobacco. It also requires support of the following nonbasic commodities: Tung nuts, honey, milk, butterfat and the products of milk and butterfat, barley, oats, rye, and grain sorghums. The National Wool Act of 1954, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1781-1787) requires price support for wool and mohair. Price support for other nonbasic commodities is discretionary. However, whenever the price of either cottonseed or soybeans is supported, the support price of the other must be set at such level as the Secretary determines will cause them to compete on equal terms on the market. The price-support program may also include operations to remove and dispose of surplus agricultural commodities in order to stabilize prices at levels not in excess of those permissible by law.

The principal methods of providing price support are loans to and purchases from producers. With limited exceptions, price-support loans are nonrecourse. The commodities serve as collateral for the loan and upon maturity thereof, the producer may deliver such collateral to satisfy his obligation without further payment, unless there is a deficiency in quantity or quality, or the producer is guilty of fraudulent representation.

Direct purchases are also made from processors as well as producers, depending on the commodity involved. Also, special purchases for the removal of surpluses are made under certain laws, for example: The act of August 19, 1958, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431 note), and section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431). In the case of feed grains, a portion of the price support is made through issuance of negotiable payment-in-kind certificates which are handled in the same manner as payment-in-kind certificates issued under the feed grain acreage diversion programs. In the case of cotton, in addition to loans, producers receive price-support payments in cash or in payment-in-kind certificates. In the case of wheat, in addition to loans and purchases, producers receive marketing certificates as hereinafter described.

In all the price-support operations, normal trade facilities are used to the maximum extent practicable. Local banks, cooperatives, and other financial institutions are used in lending activities. Commercial facilities are used to a great extent for storage.

Besides the Charter Act and laws mentioned above, many other laws are applicable to the disposition of commodities acquired under the price-support program through sales, donations, and barter.

For accounting purposes, the Corporation credits to the price-supporting program sales proceeds of commodities sold from its price-support stocks, including those disposed of through redemption of domestic and export payment-in-kind certificates and through special activities.

Commodity export.—The Corporation promotes the export of agricultural commodities and products through sales, barter, payments, and other operations. Other than in barter for stockpiling purposes, such commodities and products may be those held in private trade channels as well as those acquired by the Corporation in its price-support operations. This program is carried out under the authority contained in the Corporation's charter, particularly sections 5 (d) and (f), and in accordance with specific statutes where applicable. Export sales for foreign currencies are made under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, although such sales of commodities owned by the Corporation may also be made under its charter authority.

The activities described below are illustrative of those conducted under this program during 1968. With respect to barter, the emphasis is on exports in connection with various types of offshore procurement of materials and services needed by the Department of Defense, the Agency for International Development, and other agencies, for which they pay the Corporation. Barter may also be made for strategic and other materials for the supplemental stockpile but such barter is on a limited scale. Commodities available for barter vary from time to time.

When necessary to encourage export movement from free-market supplies, as well as from its own stocks, the Corporation makes payments on wheat, wheat flour, cotton, corn, grain sorghum, barley, oats, rye, rice, flaxseed, linseed oil, tobacco, butter, nonfat dry milk, milkfat, and cheese. The rate of payment generally is the difference between the prevailing world export sales price and the domestic market price.

To help develop or expand foreign markets, the Corporation also furnishes farm commodities and products for samples or exhibits at international trade fairs and for use abroad in testing consumer acceptance and commercial market potentials.

To maximize exports of agricultural commodities, including products thereof, the Corporation conducts an Export Credit Sales program under which it sells to exporters on credit, commodities from its inventories and finances credit sales by exporters of agricultural commodities from private stocks. Credit terms of these transactions provide for payment, with interest, in U.S. dollars within periods of not to exceed 3 years, and the credit is covered by acceptable bank guarantees furnished to the Corporation. The repayments received are applied against current costs. These commercial transactions are made under the Corporation's charter authority and section 4 of the Food for Peace Act (7 U.S.C. 1707a) and are to be distinguished from the long-term credit contracts involving foreign assistance authorized by the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended. Section 4 of the Food for Peace Act of 1966 authorizes appropriations to reimburse the Corporation annually for its actual costs incurred or to be incurred under this program. Estimates for this activity are included under special activities.

Storage facilities.—The Corporation conducts a program to provide storage adequate to fulfill its program needs. This program is conducted pursuant to sections 4 (h) and (m), and 5 (a) and (b) of the charter.

The Corporation has authority to buy bins (in storage-short areas) and equipment for the care and storage of grain owned by Commodity Credit Corporation or under its control. This authority to purchase bins has not been exercised since 1956. The Corporation has now reduced its storage capacity by more than 50%. The Corporation makes loans for the purchase, building, or expanding of facilities for storage and care of commodities on the farm and sells to producers and others bins needed for the storage of grain. Bins sold by the Corporation may be those acquired for resale for this purpose or those which are no longer required by the Corporation for the storage of its own grain. Public Law 89-758 permits the sale of grain storage facilities no longer needed for such program use to public and private nonprofit agencies and organizations. The Corporation may also provide storage use guarantees, to encourage building of commercial storage and undertake other operations necessary to provide storage adequate to carry out the Corporation's programs.

Supply and foreign purchase.—The Corporation procures from domestic and foreign sources food, agricultural commodities, and products and related materials to supply the needs of Federal agencies, foreign governments, and private and international relief agencies. It similarly procures or aids in the procurement of such foods, commodities, products, and material for sale to meet domestic requirements during periods of short supply or during such other times as will stabilize prices or facilitate distribution. Through purchases, loans, sales, or other means, the Corporation may also make available materials and facilities needed for the production and marketing of agricultural commodities. The Corporation, on behalf of the Secretary, also purchases at market prices dairy products which are donated to meet the requirements for schools, domestic relief distribution, community action programs, and other programs as are authorized by law when there are insufficient stocks of such products in the hands of the Corporation available for such purposes.

Purchases for other Federal agencies of commodities not in the Corporation's price-support stocks has been the main activity. Purchases of limited quantities of breeder, foundation, and registered seeds of improved varieties of grasses and legumes are made through production contracts in order to assure supplies thereof for farmers. No foreign purchases have been made in recent past years.

This program is conducted under section 5 (b) and (c) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act and with respect to dairy products under section 5(g) of that act and section 709 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965. Section 4 of the act of July 16, 1943 (15 U.S.C. 713a-9), requires that the Corporation be fully repaid from funds of such agencies for services performed, losses sustained, operating costs incurred, or commodities bought or delivered to or on behalf of any other Federal agency. Operations not subject to section 4 may involve losses if such are necessary to the accomplishment of the objectives of the particular operation.

Feed grain acreage diversion program.—An acreage diversion program is conducted on 1967 and 1968 crops of feed grains by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service utilizing the facilities and stocks of the Corporation. Under this program, payments are made to farmers who divert acreage from the production of feed grains (generally corn and grain sorghum) to an approved conservation use. This program is carried out under the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965 (Public Law 89-321, approved November 3, 1965).

Payments are made by the issuance of negotiable payment-in-kind certificates. The farmer may elect either to have the certificate redeemed in feed grains from the Corporation's stocks or if he requests the Corporation's assistance in the marketing of the certificate he may obtain cash by issuance by the Corporation of a negotiable sight draft. The Corporation markets rights, represented by certificates on which it has made cash advances to buyers for redemption in feed grains from its stocks.

Wheat certificate program.—A wheat certificate program for 1967 and 1968 crops is conducted by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service utilizing the funds and facilities of the Corporation. This program is authorized by the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962, and Agricultural Act of 1964, and the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965.

Under the voluntary wheat certificate program, domestic marketing certificates are issued to participating farmers which may be sold at face value to Commodity Credit Corporation. Processors of wheat are required to buy domestic certificates equivalent to the number of bushels of wheat used in the manufacture of the food product.

Exporters may not ship abroad any wheat without buying export marketing certificates equivalent to the number of bushels exported. To make U.S. wheat and flour competitive in the world market, avoid disruption of world market prices, and fulfill the international obligations of the United States, export certificates of variable value will be sold to exporters. The net proceeds, if any, from the sale of export marketing certificates, after deducting export subsidies paid exporters, will be distributed to producers on a pro rata basis.

Cotton acreage diversion program.—Payments will be made by CCC under section 103(d) of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965, to cotton producers who reduce cotton acreages by diverting a portion of their cotton acreage allotments to conservation uses. Payments will be made in cash or by the issuance of payment-in-kind certificates which CCC will redeem for cotton. CCC may assist the producers in the marketing of certificates in the same manner as it assists feed grain producers in the marketing of their payment-in-kind certificates.

Administrative expenses.—Administrative expenses are for the operating staff and the services of employees of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service engaged in the Corporation's activities, services performed by the Foreign Agricultural Service and other agencies of the department, costs of audit, and payments to the General Services Administration for space. Estimates for 1969 include a limitation of $31.5 million for costs of administration including a reserve of not less than 7% for contingencies.

The requested authorization excludes administrative expenses in connection with the supply program, which has a markup in the sales price to cover administrative expenses, and excludes the wool and mohair program, under the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended, and the sale of long-staple cotton transferred from the national stockpile, which are included with the costs of those programs under "Special activities."

Nonadministrative expenses.—Expenses of acquisition, operation, maintenance, improvement, or disposition of property which the Corporation owns or in which it has an interest have been treated as program rather than administrative expenses. Such expenses include inspection, classing, and grading work performed on a fee basis by Federal employees or Federal or State licensed inspectors; work performed on a contract or fee basis by Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation county committees; and special services performed by other Federal agencies outside of this department.

Most of these general nonadministrative expenses, including storage and handling, transportation, inspection, classing and grading, and resale payments are included in program costs, in the entry entitled "Storage, transportation, and other costs not included above" in the program and financing schedule. The item "Non-administrative expense" which appears in the schedule covers county offices, other ASCS expenses offset by revenue, custodian, and agency expense of the Federal Reserve banks and lending agencies, and miscellaneous costs.

The Corporation receives reimbursement for grain requisitioned pursuant to Public Law 87-152 by the States from Corporation stocks to feed resident wildlife threatened with starvation through the appropriation "Reimbursement for net realized losses." The Corporation also obtains recovery through this appropriation for the funds transferred to the Agricultural Research Service pursuant to the Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act of 1964 for cost of production research and other related research designed to reduce surplus commodities held by the Corporation.

SPECIAL ACTIVITIES

These activities are carried out under authority of section 5(g) of the Corporation's charter and specific statutory authorizations or directives with respect thereto which are currently in effect or which may subsequently be enacted.

A summary of such current activities not included under other designated activities is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

The Corporation receives appropriations or reimbursement for cost of these activities as described under each.

To the extent sufficient appropriations are not provided in advance, expenditures under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, and investments in materials transferred to the supplemental stockpile, are made by the Corporation subject to repayment from subsequent appropriations authorized for such purpose.

Activities currently being carried out are as follows (see foreign assistance programs and special export programs for details of items (1)-(4)):

(1) Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies.
 (2) Sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms.

(3) Commodities disposed of and other costs incurred in connection with donations abroad.

(4) Bartered materials for supplemental stockpile.

(5) Military housing (barter and exchange).—During 1957, a contract was completed for the disposition of Corporation-owned commodities valued at $50 million for the construction of military housing in France with foreign currencies obtained from this transaction. 10 U.S.C. 2681(b) as amended, provides for annual payment to the Corporation by the Department of Defense until liquidation of the amounts due for foreign currencies obtained under Public Law 480 for military housing. It is estimated that $2 million will be applied against the amounts due under the French housing transaction in each of 1968 and 1969. The agreement between the Commodity Credit Corporation and the Department of Defense provides that upon sale of any of the housing, the Corporation will receive the proceeds.

(6) National Wool Act.—Under the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended, incentive payments are being used to encourage the annual domestic production of about 300 million pounds of shorn wool. Support of prices of wool and mohair is mandatory. Incentive payments are made to eligible producers in order to bring the national average price received by all producers up to the announced incentive level which is determined in accordance with a formula specified in the act.

Funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation are used to carry on this program. For the purpose of reimbursing the Corporation, section 705 of the act appropriates each fiscal year an amount equal to amounts expended by the Corporation during the preceding year and to amounts expended in prior fiscal years not previously reimbursed, but not to exceed an amount equal to 70% of the gross receipts from duties collected on wool and wool manufactures during the calendar year preceding the fiscal year.

Estimated costs and appropriations to Commodity Credit Corporation during 1967, 1968, and 1969 are indicated in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

(7) Grain for migratory waterfowl feed.—To prevent damage of crops by migratory waterfowl, the Corporation is directed to furnish to the Secretary of the Interior (7 U.S.C. 442-445) such grain acquired through price-support operations and certified by Commodity Credit Corporation as available for such purposes or in such condition as to be undesirable for human consumption, as the Secretary of the Interior shall requisition. This appropriation item is included under that department.

(8) Surplus grain for migratory birds.—Under Public Law 87-152, approved August 17, 1961 (7 U.S.C. 448), the Secretary of the Interior may requisition grain of the Corporation to feed starving migratory birds. This appropriation item is included under that department.

(9) Grading and classing activities.—The Corporation may make advances to the Consumer and Marketing Service for classing and grading of agricultural commodities without charge to producers (7 U.S.C. 414a, 440). Such advances used for classing cotton and grading tobacco not placed under price-support loan are repaid from an appropriation of the Consumer and Marketing Service.

(10) Research to increase domestic consumption of farm commodities.—The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act of 1964 authorized the transfer of not more than $16 million from the appropriation "Removal of surplus agricultural commodities" (sec. 32) to the Corporation to be used to increase domestic consumption of surplus farm commodities, and provided for the transfer for such purposes of such sums not in excess of $25 million in any one year, as may be approved by Congress. The 1965 appropriation act authorized the transfer of $12,175 thousand of section 32 funds for this purpose. The Corporation transfers such funds to the Agricultural Research Service and Cooperative State Research Service to conduct the required research. For comparability, all transactions under this item are shown in the budget schedules for these two agencies (except expenditures).

(11) Defense activities.—Upon the declaration of a national emergency, the facilities, services, authorities and funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation may be used, as directed by the Secretary of Agriculture and in accordance with applicable provisions of law, to carry out responsibilities and functions assigned to the Secretary of Agriculture under the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, the Civil Defense Act, as amended, and such other defense legislation as may be enacted.

(12) Transfer of long-staple cotton from national stockpile for sale by Commodity Credit Corporation.—The act of July 10, 1957 (71 Stat. 290), authorized the transfer of 50,000 bales of domestically grown cotton from the national stockpile to the Corporation for sale. Also, about 219,000 bales of cotton, both American-Egyptian and foreign grown, in the stockpile were made available to the Corporation for disposition under Public Law 87-548, approved July 25, 1962. The cotton is not recorded as a Corporation asset. Proceeds less costs incurred, including administrative expenses, are covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts from time to time. No interest is paid by CCC for the use of the money prior to covering.

(13) Loans for agricultural conservation.—Under section 391(c) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1391), the Corporation advances funds to the Secretary in amounts not to exceed $50 million annually to purchase conservation materials and services. Repayments of the loans plus interest are made in the succeeding fiscal year from funds appropriated for the agricultural conservation program.

(14) Use of CCC facilities for Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service programs.—Under the respective enabling legislation, the services, facilities, and authorities of the Corporation are used to make payments to producers under various programs administered by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

No disbursements are made unless funds have been received in advance from the applicable appropriation. Among these programs are: Soil bank, cropland conversion, agricultural conservation, cropland adjustment, Appalachia regional conservation, emergency conservation measures, and the Sugar Act program.

CCC sight drafts are issued by ASCS county offices for county operating expenses paid through local county committee bank accounts. The Corporation receives advances from the appropriation "Expenses, ASCS" to cover the sight drafts drawn.

(15) Export Credit Sales (short-term).—This program is described under Commodity Credit Corporation—Commodity Export Program on p. 156.

FINANCING

Borrowing authority.—The Corporation has an authorized capital stock of $100 million held by the United States and authority to borrow up to $14.5 billion.

Funds are borrowed from Treasury and may also be borrowed from private lending agencies. In connection with loan guarantees, the Corporation reserves a sufficient amount of its borrowing authority to purchase at any time all notes and other obligations evidencing loans made or held by lending agencies or other financial institutions or certificates of interest issued in connection with the financing of price-support operations. All bonds, notes, debentures, and similar obligations issued by the Corporation are subject to approval by the Secretary of the Treasury as required by the act of March 8, 1938 (15 U.S.C. 713a-4).

Interest on borrowings from the Treasury (and on capital stock) is paid at a rate based upon the average interest rate of all outstanding marketable obligations (of comparable maturity date) of the United States as of the preceding month. Interest is also paid on certificates of interest and lending agency obligations for the period the agencies have their funds invested.

The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1966, made provision for terminating interest after June 30, 1964, on the portion of the Corporation's borrowings from the Treasury equal to the unreimbursed realized losses recorded on the books of the Corporation after June 30 of the fiscal year in which such losses are realized.

The computation of the transfer from interest-bearing to non-interest-bearing capital is (in millions of dollars):

Item	1967	1968	1969
Realized deficit not previously reimbursed, start of year.	7,598	7,856	9,921
Less appropriations for year.	3,556	1,400	3,649
Total non-interest-bearing, end of year.	4,042	6,456	6,272

On the basis of the budgetary assumptions, the estimated requirements indicate no need for an increase in borrowing authority. Since there are so many uncontrollable factors involving crops which have not even been planted, it must be recognized that estimates are highly tentative.

POSITION WITH RESPECT TO BORROWING AUTHORITY AS OF JUNE 30

Item	[In millions of dollars]

Total statutory borrowing authority in use	11,139	12,954	12,537
Net statutory borrowing authority available	3,361	1,546	1,963

Note.—A sufficient amount of the borrowing authority is required to be reserved to cover obligations to purchase notes and certificates of interest held by financial institutions and accrued interest thereon. Such obligations, however, as well as accounts payable, accrued liabilities, and other outstanding obligations not reflected on this table, do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowings from the Treasury.

Contract authorization.—Price support and other programs required by statute may result in the Corporation incurring obligations in excess of available funds and borrowing authority. Such obligations are liquidated from subsequent appropriations. Any increase in obligations in excess of available fund resources is reported as a contract authorization in the year involved; a decrease is reported as the application of appropriations to liquidate the authorization. The budget reflects a decrease of $810 million in 1967, an increase of $989 million in 1968, and a decrease of $350 million in 1969.

Appropriations.—Under Public Law 87-155 (15 U.S.C. 713a-11, 12), annual appropriations are authorized for each fiscal year to reimburse the Commodity Credit Corporation for net realized losses incurred as of the close of each year.

The realized losses for the price support and related programs for 1967 were $3,814 million, and the cumulative losses not yet appropriated for were $7,856 million. It is estimated that an appropriation of $3,648.5 million would provide sufficient funds for the operations described for 1969. It would also leave a desirable operating margin to assure flexibility of operations in view of the volume of transactions handled.

The special activities are financed as indicated in the program description above. In addition to certain reimbursements for other agencies, appropriations are made for the National Wool Act (see above) and for foreign assistance and special export programs (see that heading on page 164).

Note.—In addition to obligations other than liabilities, the Corporation does not reflect in its accounts claims by the Corporation on which adequate proof has not been established. Also not included is an amount for possible losses under the export credit sales program although some accounts are in default. The Corporation does not presently have adequate basis for estimating an amount of possible losses on these accounts.

¹ The changes in these items are reflected on the program and financing schedule.

² Statutory obligations against borrowing authority include only borrowings from Treasury and obligations to purchase notes, certificates, or other obligations evidencing loans held by banks and accrued interest on such obligations. Other obligations, contingent liabilities, and commitments do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in either borrowings from Treasury or in notes, certificates or other obligations evidencing loans held by banks and accrued interest on such obligations.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS AND SPECIAL EXPORT PROGRAMS

Facilities and funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation may by law be used in carrying out programs for exporting agricultural commodities. The laws also authorize appropriations to be made to cover costs of such programs. When funds become available, advances are made to the Corporation for estimated costs. If the amounts appropriated are greater than actual needs, the excess is used to reduce future appropriation requests. If the appropriations are less than actual needs, other Corporation funds may be used temporarily to finance the balance of authorized costs.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Included in this category are the following activities carried out under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, Public Law 480, 83d Congress, as amended by the Food for Peace Act of 1966 (Public Law 89-808, approved Nov. 11, 1966): Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I); sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms (title I); and commodities disposed of and other costs incurred in connection with donations abroad (title II). The estimates for fiscal year 1969 assume extension of the Food for Peace Act of 1966 beyond December 31, 1968.

Sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies or for dollars on credit terms are made under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (Public Law 480), as amended by the Food for Peace Act of 1966.

The Commodity Credit Corporation finances all sales made pursuant to agreements concluded under title I. Sales are made to friendly countries—as defined in section 103(d) of the act—and must not displace expected commercial sales for cash dollars (103(n)).

No agreements may be entered into after December 31, 1968. Agreements may not be made under title I in calendar year 1968 which call for an appropriation to reimburse Commodity Credit Corporation in excess of $1.9 billion, plus unused prior years' authorizations.

Whenever practicable, terms of agreements must require payment at time of delivery of not less than 5% of the purchase price in dollars or in currencies convertible to dollars. These receipts will apply against costs to reflect a reduction in appropriation requests.

Factors determining availability of commodities for disposition under Public Law 480 are productive capacity, domestic requirements, farm and consumer price levels, anticipated commercial exports, and adequate carryover. No commodity is available for disposition if the disposition thereof would reduce the domestic supply below that needed to meet domestic requirements, adequate carryover, and anticipated exports for dollars.

The Commodity Credit Corporation may finance the total ocean freight charges on U.S.-flag vessels in the case of dollar credit sales and "Sec. 103(b) convertible foreign currency" sales. Only the differential between U.S.-flag rates and world rates may be financed in the case of regular foreign currency sales.

1. Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies and for dollars on credit terms (title I).—Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I).—Sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies are made to countries unable to expand commercial purchases because of a lack of dollar exchange. Foreign currencies received in payment are deposited to the account of the U.S. Treasury and can be used only as stated in section 104. The dollar value of such deposits through June 30, 1967, amounted to $11 billion.

Uses fall into two groups—those of benefit to the foreign country, mainly loans and grants to promote economic development and to support common defense, and those of benefit to the United States. The latter includes, among others, expenses of the U.S. Government abroad, agricultural market development, educational exchange, construction of military family housing, and sales of foreign currency to U.S. citizens and American tourists.

Foreign currencies for U.S. uses, certain foreign currency grants, and uses of foreign currency loan repayments are subject to the appropriation process. Sales agreements specify particular uses, and in those entered into after December 31, 1964, at least 20% of the foreign currencies are required to be subject to the appropriation process, with certain possible exceptions. Such uses reduce dollar outflow and the deficit in the balance of payments of the United States. The Corporation is reimbursed for the dollar value of currencies so used. Proceeds from sales of foreign currencies and from dollar repayments of foreign currency loans are applied against costs to reflect a reduction in appropriation requests.

Section 509 of Public Law 86-500, approved June 8, 1960 (7 U.S.C. 1704b note) provides that at least 75% of the total cost of foreign military housing projects (unless otherwise specified) shall be paid from foreign currencies acquired under title I. The Department of Defense reimburses the Corporation for the foreign currencies used. Pursuant to section 2681 (b) of title 10, U.S.C., as amended, the estimates reflect payment to the Corporation of $6 million each year for amounts due under Public Law 480 and the French housing barter transaction discussed under Commodity Credit Corporation. It is estimated that $4 million will be applied against Public Law 480 amounts due with a balance of $46 million remaining unpaid as of June 30, 1969.

From inception through June 30, 1967, sales agreements have been signed with 53 countries. They cover sales of commodities at an export market value of over $11 billion. Major items are wheat, cotton, and fats and oils.

Sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms (title I).—Sales of U.S. agricultural commodities under long-term dollar credit terms are also authorized. The act provides for a progressive shift from foreign currency sales to dollar credit sales, to be completed by December 31, 1971.

Agreements are made with friendly countries or with United States and foreign private trade. They may provide for delivery in annual installments for not more than 10 years from the date of the agreement subject to the availability of the commodity.

Payments are in dollars with interest at rates not less than the minimum required by section 201 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, for loans made under that section. Payments are made in reasonable annual amounts over periods of not to exceed 20 years from the date of last delivery in each calendar year under the agreement, except that the first annual payment may be deferred for a period not later than 2 years after such date of last delivery. Interest is computed from the date of such last delivery. As payments are received each year, they are applied against current costs to reflect a reduction in the appropriation request. Private trade agreements must provide for projects to establish improved storage or marketing facilities or otherwise encourage private economic enterprise in friendly countries.

To the extent that transition from foreign currency sales to dollar credit sales is not possible, transition to convertible foreign currency credit sales is authorized on terms which permit conversion to dollars at the exchange rate applicable to the sales agreement. Credit terms are to be no less favorable to the United States than those for development loans made under section 201 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended. This authorizes convertible foreign currency credit sales to be made on the basis of payment in 40 years with a 10-year grace period. Dollar payments, when received, will also be applied against current costs and reduce appropriation requests.

Total agreements made since inception to June 30, 1967, amount to $868.5 million cost value, including ocean freight for shipments on U.S. ships. Major commodities were wheat, cotton, and oils and oilseeds. Payments for the period amount to $101.5 million, of which $79.5 million was applied to principal and the rest to interest.

2. Commodities disposed of and other costs incurred in connection with donations abroad (title II).—Available agricultural commodities are furnished to meet famine or other urgent or emergency relief needs. Also, commodities are furnished to promote economic and community development in friendly developing countries, to combat malnutrition, and for needy people, nonprofit school lunch, and preschool feeding programs. They are furnished through friendly governments and private or public agencies, including intergovernmental organizations such as the world food program. The Food for Peace Act, in amending title II, expressed the sense of Congress that other advanced nations should be encouraged to make increased contributions for the purpose of combating world hunger and malnutrition, and that to achieve this objective the United States should work to expand the United Nations' World food program.

The Agency for International Development is responsible for administering title II programs. However, Commodity Credit Corporation makes available the commodities or products requested for disposition under title II. Such commodities or products are made available from the Corporation's stocks of commodities or products acquired under its price support program or are purchased at market prices when it is determined to be in the best interest of the Government.

The Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized to pay with respect to commodities made available the costs of acquisition, packaging, processing, enrichment, preservation, fortification, transportation, handling, and other incidental costs incurred up to the time of delivery to U.S. ports and ocean freight charges and general average contributions arising out of ocean transport.

Seven and one-half million dollars each year may be used to buy foreign currencies accruing under title I of this act to meet costs (other than personnel and administrative costs of cooperating sponsors, distributing agencies, and recipient agencies) directed to community and other self-help activities designed to alleviate the causes for the need for such aid.

Through December 31, 1967, appropriations totaling $3,700 million were authorized. No programs of assistance may be entered into after December 31, 1968, and none shall be undertaken under this title during calendar year 1968 which call for an appropriation of more than $600 million to reimburse the Corporation for costs incurred, including its investment, plus any amount by which programs of assistance undertaken under this title in the preceding calendar year have called or will call for appropriations in amounts less than authorized during the preceding year. Proceeds from loss, damage, and other claims are applied against Commodity Credit Corporation costs to reflect a reduction in appropriation requests.

Since inception through June 30, 1967, transfer authorizations under title II have been issued for $1,980 million worth of food, including ocean freight costs. Of this amount $910 million (46%) was for disaster relief of victims of floods, earthquakes, droughts, and plagues; $181 million (9%) for refugee relief; $17 million (1%) for other emergency assistance; $240 million (12%) for child feeding; $610 million (31%) for economic development; and $22 million (1%) for voluntary agency programs. Also, $434 million was authorized for ocean freight costs on commodities shipped through nonprofit voluntary organizations and $3 million for purchase of title I foreign currencies for self-help activities, making total authorizations of $2,417 million for the 13 years this program has been in effect.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, a wholly-owned Government Corporation, was created on February 16, 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1501-1519), to carry out the provisions of the Federal Crop Insurance Act. The purpose of this act is to promote the national welfare by improving the economic stability of agriculture through a sound system of crop insurance, and providing the means for the research and experience helpful in devising and establishing such insurance.

Crop insurance offered to agricultural producers by the Corporation provides protection from losses caused by natural hazards, such as insect and wildlife damage, plant diseases, fire, drought, flood, wind, and other weather conditions. It does not indemnify producers for losses resulting from negligence or failure to observe good farming practices.

The crop insurance programs are developed and analyzed in the Washington headquarters office and are administered in the field by four area offices and 24 State offices. Sales and servicing of contracts at the county level is performed by private agents under contractual agreements with the Corporation and by Corporation employees hired on a permanent, part-time or WAE (when actually employed) basis. Detailed insurance and accounting records are maintained by the National Service Office in Kansas City, Mo.

Budget program.—The program for fiscal year 1969 will provide crop insurance protection to more farmers amounting to approximately $854 million on the following commodities: apples, barley, beans, citrus, combined crops, corn, cotton, flax, grain sorghum, grapes, oats, peaches, peanuts, peas, potatoes, raisins, rice, soybeans, sugarbeets, sugarcane, tobacco, tomatoes, tung nuts, and wheat.

The following table indicates the scope of the insurance operations planned for 1968 and 1969, as compared with 1967. Amounts in the 1967 column are actual and pertain to the 1966 crop year. The 1968 column pertains to the 1967 crop year, and the 1969 column pertains to the 1968 crop year.

Financing.—Capital stock of $100 million is authorized to be subscribed by the United States. As of June 30, 1967, the Secretary of the Treasury held receipts for $40 million of the authorized stock leaving $60 million unissued.

Funds from the issuance of capital stock provide working capital for the Corporation. Receipts which are for deposit to this fund come mainly from premiums paid by farmers for crop insurance. The principal payments from this fund are for indemnities to insured farmers who suffer crop losses arising from causes against which crop insurance provides protection; the direct cost of adjusting losses; and part of the administrative and operating expenses.

The annual appropriation for the major portion of the administrative and operating expenses of the Corporation is presented earlier in the budget.

No additional capital funds are being requested since it is estimated that the Corporation's income of $47.3 million in fiscal year 1969 will provide adequate operating funds. However, if heavy unforeseen losses occur early in the fiscal year, prior to the collection of premiums, and additional funds are necessary, the Corporation will submit a request for additional capital funds.

Operating results and financial condition.—As of June 30, 1967, the Corporation reflected a deficit of $2.3 million, which is $6.2 million lower than the $8.5 million reflected as of June 30, 1966. This reduction was the result of the favorable loss experience for the 1966 crop year. The 1966 crop year loss ratio is 0.69, as compared with 1.13 for crop year 1965.

However, it is estimated that the deficit will increase in crop year 1967, since latest estimates indicate that losses will be heavier than in crop year 1966. Current indemnity estimates of $51.5 million are expected to exceed premium income by about $7.7 million. This estimate represents a loss ratio for crop year 1967 of 1.18 as compared with .69 for crop year 1966. During crop year 1967, the heaviest crop losses occurred on wheat, oranges, and cotton.

For the crop years 1948 through 1966, premium income of $421.6 million exceeded indemnity costs of $390.7 million by $30.9 million. Premium income exceeded indemnity costs in eleven years of the nineteen year period.

Proposed legislation would create a Rural Electrification Administration loan account for the rural electric systems, and a loan account to be supplemented by a Federal bank under the supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture for the rural telephone systems. The basic 2% loan program needs would be met from the proposed REA loan accounts. The Federal bank for the telephone program would provide a non-Federal source of financing to supplement funds appropriated for the basic 2% program. Telephone bank loans are estimated at $50 million for 1969. Principal and interest collected on REA loans would be deposited into the new loan accounts. The loan accounts would provide funds for the regular loan programs, Federal investment in the telephone bank, and payments due Treasury on loans to the REA Administrator. Net receipts are estimated to be $173 million in 1968 and $172 million in 1969 for the electric program. For the telephone program net receipts are estimated to be $32 million in 1968 and $31 million in 1969.

This program was authorized by Public Law 89-240, approved October 7, 1965, which amended subtitle A of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961. It provides for planning grants to be made to public and private bodies with authority to prepare comprehensive plans for the development of water or sewer systems in rural areas which do not have funds available for such planning. In addition, development grants are made to associations, including nonprofit corporations and public and quasi-public agencies, to finance specific projects for the development, storage, treatment, purification, or distribution of water or the collection, treatment, or disposal of waste in rural areas. The amount of the grant may not exceed 50% of the development cost of the project.

Development grants to associations may be made in connection with direct or insured loans for water and sewer systems described under the Farmers Home Administration direct loan account.

Rural renewal.—This program was authorized by section 102 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962. Loans are made to local public agencies and private nonprofit organizations for rural renewal development projects which are specifically related to conservation and land utilization. Each project will be an important component of the overall rural renewal plan previously developed to rebuild the economy of the designated area. To be eligible for designation as a rural renewal area, the locality must be one of chronic underemployment on farms and unemployment in the surrounding communities. The area must also be one in which agriculture or forestry contribute substantially to the economy. The 1969 request is to provide for continuation of program operations in designated project areas.

Program operations include selection and designation of rural renewal areas, technical assistance to local public bodies or officials, or private nonprofit organizations in the preparation of an economic development plan, and counsel to local agencies and organizations for meeting legal requirements necessary for borrowing funds. The borrowing agency is designated by the State legislature or Governor to receive rural renewal loan funds and is vested with authority under State and local laws to borrow funds, buy and sell property, raise revenue, meet financial obligations and transact other necessary business functions.

Rural renewal loans are repayable in not more than 30 years with repayment of principal and interest deferred up to 5 years, if necessary. Loans bear interest at the average rate paid by the U.S. Treasury on obligations of similar maturity. The rate for 1968 is 3.253%.

Program administration.—The Farmers Home Administration has been assigned responsibility for the coordination, direction, and supervision of the rural renewal program. The principal administrative expenses are related to technical assistance, coordination of project plans, and loan programs by the Farmers Home Administration. These expenses are estimated at $272 thousand in 1968 and 1969. Administrative expenses allotted to the Economic Research Service will be $28 thousand for 1968 and 1969.

Farmers Home Administration direct loan account.—This account was established on October 16, 1961, pursuant to section 338(c) of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961. Real estate and operating loans are made under the authorities of subtitles A and B of the Act to farmers and ranchers and to associations unable to obtain credit from other sources at reasonable rates. The appropriation act for 1968 provided for making watershed protection loans, flood prevention loans, and resource conservation and development loans from funds available in the Direct loan account. Loans made under these and similar prior authorities are reported and accounted for in this account. In 1968, the total for loans reflected in the following schedules is $374.4 million. In 1969, the total for these loans is $337.9 million. It is proposed to carry out the estimated loan program through utilization of receipts to the Direct loan account representing collections on loans outstanding and through the sale of assets under the Participation Sales Act of 1966. No new borrowing authorization is estimated for 1969.

In addition to the direct loans, farm ownership loans, soil and water loans to individuals and association loans advanced by private lenders will be insured within the annual statutory insurance authority of $450 million for these purposes. Contingent liabilities for these insured loans are reflected in the Agricultural credit insurance fund schedules.

1. Real estate loans.—(a) Farm ownership loans.—Direct and insured loans are made to farmers and ranchers for acquiring, enlarging or improving farms, including farm buildings; for financing land and water development, use and conservation including recreational uses and facilities; for forestry development; for refinancing existing indebtedness; and for loan closing costs. Loans are confined to farms which are not-larger-than-family farms. A loan cannot exceed $60 thousand in any case. In addition, the indebtedness against a farm or other security, including the amount of the loan, cannot exceed $60 thousand or the normal value of the farm and any additional security.

(b) Soil and water loans to individuals and association loans.—Direct and insured loans are made to farmers, ranchers and nonoperator owners for land and water development, use and conservation. Direct and insured loans are made to public and nonprofit associations for the effective development and utilization of water supplies and waste disposal systems and for the improvement of farmland by soil and water conserving facilities and practices. Loans to associations also are made for shifts in land use, the development of recreational facilities, and for irrigation and grazing development. Direct land conservation and development loans to individuals are made in the Appalachian region to establish and carry out land stabilization, conservation, and erosion control practices. There is no limitation on the size of farms that may be improved with loans to individual farmers. For loans to individuals, the indebtedness against a farm or other security, including the amount of the loan, cannot exceed $60 thousand or the normal value of the farm and any additional security. For loans to associations, the unpaid principal indebtedness, together with the amount of any grant assistance, is limited to $4 million. Loans to associations are limited to rural areas which include Rural housing direct loan account.—This account was established in 1965 pursuant to section 518 of title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended. Rural housing direct loans are made on farms, in the open country, and in towns of not more than 5,500 population that are rural in character. In the case of applicants who are deficient in repayment ability, cosigners on promissory notes are permitted. Rural housing direct loans are also made to private nonprofit corporations and consumer cooperatives to provide modest cost rental or cooperative housing and related facilities for elderly persons of low or moderate income or other persons of low income in rural areas. Loans are made only to applicants unable to obtain housing credit from other sources upon terms and conditions which they reasonably could be expected to repay. Direct loans to individuals are repayable in not more than 33 years and bear interest at a rate not to exceed 5%. Direct loans for rural rental housing are repayable in not more than 50 years and bear interest comparable to housing loans for the elderly in urban areas (currently 3%). In connection with direct loans to individuals, refinancing of prior indebtedness is permitted under certain circumstances.

In addition to direct loans, building loans to individuals, farm labor housing loans, and rural rental housing loans advanced by private lenders will be insured. Contingent liabilities for these insured loans are reflected in the rural housing insurance fund schedules.

1. Loans to the elderly.—Direct building loans, when a cosigner on the promissory note is required, are made to senior citizens (62 years of age or over) to build or repair their homes or to buy a home and building site.

2. Rural rental housing loans.—Direct loans are made to private nonprofit corporations and consumer cooperatives to provide modest cost rental or cooperative housing and related facilities for elderly persons in rural areas with low or moderate income or other persons with low income in rural areas.

3. Self-help housing projects.—Direct building loans are made to individual low-income families, when a cosigner on the promissory note is required, to enable them to participate in a mutual self-help housing project. These loans are especially designed to help families who do not have enough income to build modest homes by customary methods to work together to build modest homes of their own. These low-income families cut construction costs by supplying most of the labor needed in the construction of their homes.

4. Building loans.—Direct building loans which are too small to be made on an insured basis are made to farm owners, to owners of other real estate in rural areas, to long-term farm leaseholders and to other rural residents to construct, repair, or replace dwellings and essential farm-service buildings. Loans may include funds to buy a house, building site, and to buy farm service buildings.

5. Natural disaster loans.—Direct loans are made at 3% interest to the same persons eligible for building loans to provide for repair or replacement of farm or rural dwellings, farm-service buildings and related facilities damaged by a natural disaster.

6. Low-income housing loans.—Direct repair and improvement loans not in excess of $1,500 are made to owners of farms or nonfarm rural property to repair or improve their dwellings in order to make them safe and sanitary and to remove health hazards to the families and the community.

This fund is authorized by subtitle C of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961 to finance emergency loans in areas where agricultural credit is not readily available because of natural disasters. Loans are generally confined to areas designated as emergency areas. Loans may be made outside of such areas to eligible applicants who have suffered severe production losses not general to the area. Loans also may be made to previously indebted borrowers to permit orderly repayment of such indebtedness.

Loans.—(a) Emergency loans.—Emergency loans are made at 3% interest to eligible farmers, ranchers, or oyster planters and to domestic corporations or partnerships engaged primarily in farming, ranching or oyster planting. Loans are made for any authorized purposes for which operating, farm ownership, or soil and water loans may be made by the Farmers Home Administration.

(b) Other loans.—Where necessary to protect the Government's investment, obligations are incurred in connection with outstanding loans to provide for payment of such costs as taxes and insurance. Such advances are charged to the borrowers' accounts.

Administrative expenses.—The principal administrative expenses are related to the loan programs of the Farmers Home Administration. These expenses are estimated at $5.9 million in 1968 and $6 million in 1969. Administrative expenses for the Office of the General Counsel are estimated at $34 thousand in fiscal years 1968 and 1969.

Financing the program.—No new budgetary authorization is required for 1969. A net loss of $6.2 million is estimated on an accrual basis. Receipts are estimated to exceed expenditures by $2.1 million on a cash basis. During 1969, the program will be wholly financed by receipts from operations of the revolving fund.

Operating results and financial conditions.—Revenue for 1969, consisting principally of interest on loans, is estimated at $2.4 million, compared to expenses of $8.6 million, resulting in an estimated loss of $6.2 million. A net gain of $1 million is estimated for 1968, and a net loss of $5.5 million resulted in 1967.

Loans receivable, after allowance for losses, are expected to amount to $74 million on June 30, 1969, as compared to $82.1 million on June 30, 1968, and $103.7 million on June 30, 1967.

The Government investment at June 30, 1969, is expected to be $121.3 million consisting of $235.8 million appropriated and donated, less a deficit of $114.5 million.

This fund is used to insure farm ownership loans and soil and water loans to individuals and association loans as authorized by subtitle A of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961. The insurance endorsement on each insured loan may include an agreement by the Government to purchase the loan after a specified initial period. The initial fund of $1 million may be supplemented by amounts retained by the Government out of interest collected from insured loan borrowers and by borrowing from the Secretary of the Treasury. From any amounts so retained, not to exceed one-half of 1% of the outstanding principal obligations must be deposited to the fund to cover losses. Any remainder of such charges may be used for administrative expenses. Loans may be made directly from the fund from available receipts or borrowings from the Treasury for the purpose of acquiring blocks of loans if there is reasonable assurance that the loans can be sold to investors without undue delay. With respect to loans made from this fund, not more than $50 million for farm ownership loans, soil and water loans to individuals and association loans may be held in the fund at any one time. Interest paid the Secretary of the Treasury on borrowings is based on the current average market yield of outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having maturities comparable to the notes issued for borrowings from the Treasury for operation of the fund.

Budget program.—Capital outlay is estimated at $630.1 million in 1969, an increase of $60.4 million over 1968 and an increase of $169.3 million over 1967. Included in capital outlay is $373.3 million in 1968 and $402.9 million in 1969 for making loans from the fund which will later be sold on an insured basis. The increase in 1968 and 1969 in sale of loans from the fund is based on all insured loans being made by the fund for later sale in order to permit a premium yield to investors. Insured loans outstanding which are contingent liabilities against the insurance fund are expected to increase from $1,175 million on June 30, 1967 to approximately $1,553 million at June 30, 1968 and to $1,878 million by June 30, 1969.

Financing.—To finance operations, it is estimated that it will be necessary to utilize the statutory authorization to borrow from the Treasury in the net amount of $15 million in 1969. Net repayments to the Treasury in 1968 are estimated at $55 million.

Operating results and retained earnings.—Total revenue, consisting principally of loan insurance charges, is estimated at $11.5 million in 1969, a decrease of about $0.3 million from 1968.

Net outstanding loans receivable of $85.8 million are estimated at June 30, 1969. Retained earnings, available to cover future losses are estimated to be $15.4 million at the end of 1969. These earnings when added to the $1 million appropriation and estimated borrowings of $113.5 million from the Treasury represent a $129.9 million Government investment.

The Office serves as the audit and investigative arm of the Secretary of Agriculture and performs all audit and investigative activities of the Department. The Office of the Inspector General assures the Secretary of completely independent and objective selection of departmental activities to be audited; critical reviews and examination of the Department's programs and activities; and factual, unbiased reporting of the results of these audits and investigations. In so doing, the Office assures that existing laws, policies, and programs are effectively complied with; and insures corrective action where necessary. It also coordinates internal audit and investigative activities of the Department with the various investigative agencies of the executive and legislative branches of the Government. The recommended increase is provided to strengthen the audit and investigative services due to increased activities under the Food Stamp and Meat Inspection Programs and for Farmers Home Administration county office audits.

This program is aimed at assuring fair play in the marketing of livestock, meat, and poultry. Its principal purpose is to maintain effective competition for livestock, meats, and poultry, so as to bring to farmers and ranchers the true market value of their livestock and poultry. Members of the livestock, poultry, and meat industries are also protected against unfair business practices of competitors. Consumers are also protected from unfair practices in the marketing of meats and poultry, and from restrictions on competition which could unduly increase meat and poultry prices.

The increase for 1969 would be used to expand the Department's activities in the areas of (1) packer merchandising and procurement practices; (2) maintenance of effective competition; (3) poultry marketing practices; and (4) livestock carcass and poultry scale testing program.

The volume of work performed is indicated by the following examples:

The Office has responsibility for the information work of the entire Department. Its major objective is to report to farmers, agricultural, and closely related groups, and to the public the Department's research, action, regulatory, and other programs, using all information media. This work is carried on in close cooperation with the land-grant institutions and with private industries which serve agriculture. Workload depends upon Department program demands, direct requests, and legislative requirements.

1. Publications review and distribution.—The department's printed publications are reviewed, published, and distributed. Processed publications are reviewed. Publications include farmers' bulletins, leaflets, periodicals, scientific, research, and marketing publications, and agricultural statistics.

2. Review and distribution of current agricultural information.—The Department's widespread activities require extensive preparation of information material for press, radio, and television use, as well as for specific agricultural outlets and the general public. Periodic crop, price, and market reports and press releases are issued. Digests, newsletters, special articles, and other editorial services are made available to press associations, farm and general publications, trade publications, daily newspapers, and encyclopedic annuals. Radio is used to reach farmers locally through single stations, and to broadcast nationally through the major networks. Films, television packages, and other services are prepared for the use of land-grant institutions, television farm broadcasters, and TV networks. Information campaigns involving activities of cross-agency interest are developed using all media. The Yearbook of Agriculture is published by the Office and distributed by the Members of Congress.

3. Review, preparation, and distribution of visual agricultural information.—Motion pictures for the Department and nonprofit organizations associated with agriculture, produced on a reimbursable basis under the Department's working capital fund, are distributed through cooperating State film libraries. Still photographs, illustrations, graphics, and exhibits are similarly produced for use in explaining and reporting on Department programs. News and general-type photographs of Department programs and activities are available to news media from a centralized library.

The National Agricultural Library, cooperating jointly with the two other national libraries—the Library of Congress and the National Library of Medicine—provides coverage and servicing of worldwide publications in the agricultural, chemical, and biological sciences. It serves the research, extension, regulatory, and other programs of the Department and State agricultural agencies. It contains approximately 1,285,000 volumes, probably the most extensive agricultural collection in existence. Since the Library's primary purpose is to provide for research needs, substantive publications in the animal sciences, plant sciences, agricultural chemistry, agricultural engineering, soils, forestry, agricultural products, home economics, world sociology, agricultural economics and agricultural statistics are acquired and preserved. Publications are currently acquired from over 155 governments and jurisdictional entities in 50 languages on subjects ranging from apiculture to zootomy. In addition, printed information of agricultural societies, organizations, cooperatives, and general material in the field of agriculture are collected and made available for use.

Information contained in the agricultural literature is disseminated through bibliographies, loans, photocopies and reference services to agricultural colleges and universities, research institutions, Government agencies, agricultural associations, industry, individual scientists, farmers, and the general public in every part of the world.

During 1967, 258,888 separate issues of periodicals were added to the collection by purchase, gift, and exchange. During the same period 228,314 loans of books and periodicals were made and 104,915 reference questions answered.

The increase proposed for 1969 would be used to occupy and partially equip the new Library at Beltsville, Md.

The Office of Management Services (OMS) provides consolidated and centralized management support services to several agencies and offices of the Department. It was established by Secretary's Memorandum No. 1529, dated January 29, 1963, to provide greater economy and effectiveness in the rendering of management service and advice through improved utilization of manpower and management techniques, increased specialization of professional skills, and more extensive use of timesaving equipment.

The consolidated management support functions include budget and finance, personnel and related programs, administrative services, and public information work. These functions are financed by direct appropriation to OMS, except for any agency activity performed for others on a reimbursable or advance payment basis. OMS is reimbursed for management support of these activities.

The organization structure of OMS is based upon these functions with operating divisions providing the services for the following agencies and offices: Office of the Secretary, Office of Budget and Finance, Office of Hearing Examiners, Judicial Officer, Office of Management Improvement, Office of Personnel, Office of Plant and Operations, Rural Community Development Service, Office of Information, National Agricultural Library, Office of the General Counsel, Office of the Inspector General, Farmer Cooperative Service, Commodity Exchange Authority, Cooperative State Research Service, Economic Research Service, Statistical Reporting Service, and the Packers and Stockyards Administration.

FOREST SERVICE

The Service carries on three primary functions: (a) protection, development, and use of about 187 million acres of land in national forests and national grasslands in the United States and Puerto Rico; (b) forestry research for all public and private forest lands and related ranges to improve protection from fire, insects, and diseases; to increase production of timber, forage, water, and other products; to improve methods for developing and managing recreation resources; to develop better utilization and marketing of forest products; and to maintain a current inventory of forest resources through a nationwide forest survey; and (c) cooperation with States and private landowners to obtain better fire protection on approximately 516 million acres of forest land and nonforest watersheds; to provide technical advice and financial assistance to promote development, improvement, and expansion of forest pest detection and suppression programs; to improve forest practices on about 367 million acres of privately owned commercial timberlands; and to encourage reforestation and stimulate development and management of State, county, and community forests.

These primary functions include construction and maintenance of roads and trails, control of forest pests, protection against floods, land acquisition and exchange, and a number of cooperative projects.

1. Forest land management.—(a) National forest protection and management.—The 154 national forests and 19 units of national grasslands are managed under multiple use and sustained yield principles. The natural resources of outdoor recreation, range, timber, watershed, and wildlife are utilized in a planned combination that will best meet the needs of the Nation without impairing productivity of the land. These management and utilization principles were recognized in the Multiple Use-Sustained Yield Act of June 12, 1960 (74 Stat. 215). Work programs and budget estimates are related to the development program for the national forests, a plan to meet the increasing demands for specific national forest resource needs through 1972 and for long-term objectives to the year 2000. Increases are provided in the budget to further attainment of these program objectives. Construction funds of $17.5 million are budgeted for construction or rehabilitation of campground and picnic facilities and other recreation improvements, the construction of dwellings or barracks for employee housing, fire lookouts, service- and storage buildings, communication facilities, and other improvements. Funds appropriated under cooperative range improvements are merged with this appropriation for obligational purposes.

(b) Water resource development related activities.—This activity provides for the development of recreational facilities and for other activities required by water resource projects of other agencies located within or adjacent to the national forests.

(c) Fighting forest fires.—This provides for employment of additional manpower and other facilities for forest fire emergencies which cannot be met by the fire control organization provided under national forest protection and management. Costs above the amounts estimated for the current and budget years are authorized to be met from advances from other Forest Service appropriations. In addition, a supplemental appropriation for fighting forest fires is anticipated for 1968 under Proposed for later transmission.

Forest fires controlled (number).....	11,245	11,800	10,920
Area burned (acres).....	332,921	209,000	168,000

(d) Insect and disease control.—Activities to suppress and control destructive insects and diseases that threaten timber areas include two types of work carried on jointly by Federal, State, and private agencies: (1) Surveys on forest lands to detect and evaluate infestations of forest insects and infections of tree diseases and determination of protective measures to be taken, and (2) control operations to suppress or eradicate forest insects and diseases, including white pine blister rust.

(e) Acquisition of lands.—Lands are purchased to protect the watersheds of navigable streams and to increase the production of timber with the approval of the National Forest Reservation Commission.

2. Forest research.—Research is conducted at eight regional forest experiment stations, the Forest Products Laboratory, and the Institute of Tropical Forestry.

(a) Forest and range management.—This research provides private and public land managers and owners with a sound basis for management of timber, forage, and watershed lands. Studies are conducted to maintain a sustained yield of products at the lowest possible costs; increase forage for domestic livestock and improve habitat for wildlife without damage to soil, watershed, or other values; assure maximum regular flow of usable water, and reduce floods and sedimentation; and improve methods for developing and managing recreation resources.

(b) Forest protection.—Research is conducted to develop sound measures for the protection of forests from damage by fire, insects, and diseases. Forest fire research provides improved methods of predicting fire danger, and preparing for and combating fire by combinations of ground and aerial methods. Insect and disease research develops direct controls, silvicultural measures, and biological agents to combat forest pests.

(c) Forest products and engineering.—Studies are conducted to develop new and improved forest products, reduction and utilization of waste, and use of low-quality wood and less-desirable species. They include studies to reduce costs of logging and wood utilization, and to develop basic knowledge of wood and disseminate this to forest owners, manufacturers, fabricators, and consumers. Research is also conducted to advance the mechanization and efficiency of forestry operations, and to develop and evaluate machines and similar equipment for such operations as logging, planting, timber-stand improvement, and protection of forests.

(d) Forest resource economics.—These investigations are conducted to inventory and appraise the condition of forest lands, volume and quality of standing timber, ownership of timber resources, annual growth and depletion, and the potential need for timber products. Studies of the economics of forest crop production and of marketing of forest products are also included.

3. State and private forestry cooperation.—These programs are carried on with the States, with other public agencies, and with private agencies and individuals. Their purposes are to improve forest management on private and non-Federal public lands, and improve the production of forest products and services. By so doing, the welfare of rural people will improve and an adequate supply of forest resources for the future will be assured. The privately owned forest lands that are involved comprise three-fourths of the Nation's commercial forest area and produce about 75% of all timber cut.

(a) Forest fire control.—Assistance is furnished 50 States in preventing and suppressing forest fires on private and State-owned lands by financial aid, training, procurement of equipment, and a nationwide fire prevention campaign. About 91% of the 516 million acres of non-Federal ownership planned for protection is now covered. During 1966 the acreage burned on protected areas was 0.28% as against an estimated 2.99% on unprotected lands. Of the total expenditures under this program, 83.6% is contributed by States and counties, 1.5% by private owners, and 14.9% by the Federal Government.

(b) Forest tree planting.—To encourage woodland owners to reforest unproductive portions of their holdings, and farmers to plant wind barriers around their fields and farmsteads—a total of more than 70 million acres altogether—the States provide planting stock at reasonable prices. The Federal Government shares the cost of producing the stock with the State and private landowners.

(c) Forest management and processing.—In cooperation with 49 States, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, technical assistance is given to woodland owners in applying good multiple-use management to their forest holdings. Also, assistance is provided operators of small primary forest products manufacturing plants to improve their production and marketing. In 1967, 119,000 owners and 11,500 processors were assisted.

(d) General forestry assistance.—Technical forest management assistance is provided to State, community, private, and other Federal agencies, forest industries, colleges, and landowners.

Roads and trails are essential to protection and management of national forests and utilization of their resources. The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1966 provided authorization of $170 million each for 1968 and 1969. This budget provides utilization of $93.4 million of the authorization. The 1969 program will involve the construction and reconstruction of about 910 miles of general purpose and recreation roads and timber access roads to harvest national forest timber. This compares with 1,482 miles built in 1967 and 1,504 miles being built in 1968.

Of the revenues received annually from national forest activities, 10% is available under the permanent appropriation Roads and trails for States, for construction and maintenance within the State from which such proceeds are derived. Such amounts are merged with this appropriation for obligational purposes.

The full amount of this authorization was appropriated in fiscal year 1967. As of June 30, 1967, 8,850 acres have been approved for purchase.

2. Acquisition of lands for Wasatch National Forest, Utah.—Public Law 87-661, approved September 14, 1962, added some 24,000 acres to the Wasatch National Forest and authorized the appropriation of $400 thousand for purchase of privately owned lands within the area to aid in the control of floods and reduction of soil erosion. 3. Acquisition of lands for Superior National Forest, Minnesota.—As of June 30, 1967, there remain approximately two cases involving land to be acquired to preserve the wilderness conditions of part of the Superior National Forest. The authorization for the purchase of land within this forest was increased to $4.5 million by Public Law 87-351, approved October 4, 1961. The 1963 appropriation completed the authorization for acquisition of the remaining tracts.

4. Acquisition of lands for Cache National Forest, Utah.—Lands are acquired to enable control and minimization of soil erosion and flood damage.

5. Access roads.—Full or partial interest in existing roads or rights-of-way is purchased (or obtained by condemnation if purchase negotiations fail) to provide access to national forest areas where road access is a serious problem.

The working capital fund was established by the act of August 3, 1956 (16 U.S.C. 579b), as amended by the act of October 23, 1962, 76 Stat. 1157. It is a self-sustaining revolving fund which provides services to national forests, experiment stations, and, when necessary, to other Federal agencies, and as provided by law to State and private agencies and persons who cooperate with the Forest Service in fire control and other authorized programs.

The working capital fund requires no cash appropriation. Initially, its assets were purchased by regular Forest Service appropriations and donated to the fund. Where expansion of working capital fund operations is required it generally is financed pro rata by benefiting Forest Service appropriations and the resulting assets are donated to the fund. In some instances assets have been obtained without cost to Forest Service appropriations or the working capital fund. In other instances, the expansion was financed by the working capital fund.

The following services were provided by the working capital fund in fiscal year 1967:

1. Equipment service.—This service owns, operates, maintains, and replaces approximately 13,000 pieces of common use, motor driven, and similar equipment. This equipment is rented to a total of 166 proclaimed national forests, experiment stations, and other units, and, in some cases, to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of operation, repair and maintenance, management, and depreciation. The rates also include an increment which provides additional cash which when added to depreciation earnings and the residual value of equipment provides sufficient funds to replace the equipment. This service operates 97 repair shops.

2. Aircraft service.—This service operates and maintains 57 Forest Service-owned aircraft used in fire surveillance and suppression and in other Forest Service programs. The aircraft are based at 11 locations and are rented to national forests, experiment stations, and, in some cases, to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of operation, maintenance, repair, and improvements in the airworthiness of the aircraft. Replacement costs and the costs of additional aircraft are financed pro rata by benefiting Forest Service appropriations. This service operates three aircraft maintenance shops.

3. Supply service.—This service operates the following common services:

Central supply.—This service is centralized at four locations for procurement, warehousing, and supply of common-use items such as work project tools, provisions, and supplies, which are issued and sold to national forests, experiment stations, and others at prices which recover cost.

Photoreproduction.—Five photoreproduction laboratories store, reproduce, and supply aerial photographs, aerial maps, and other photographs of national forest lands. The photographic reproductions are sold to national forests, experiment stations, and others at cost.

Sign shop.—These include 12 small shops which manufacture and supply special signs for the national forests for use in regulating traffic and as information to the public and other users of the national forests. The signs are sold to national forests and experiment stations at cost.

Subsistence.—These are 47 facilities which prepare and serve meals at cost to Forest Service work crews working in remote areas where adequate public restaurant facilities are not available.

Cribbing.—This facility is located on the Angeles National Forest, California, to manufacture special concrete structural material used in embankments for erosion control purposes along access roads in the national forests. This material is sold to national forests at prices which recover costs.

4. Nursery service.—This service operates 14 forest tree nurseries and cold storage facilities for storage of tree and seed stock and one seed extractory. Tree seed is procured, cleaned, bagged, and stored in refrigerated facilities. Tree and seed stock are sold to national forests, States, and other Federal agencies at cost.

The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, as amended—under certain conditions—to issue Federal milk marketing orders establishing minimum prices which handlers are required to pay for milk purchased from producers.

Market administrators are responsible for carrying out locally the terms of specific marketing orders. Their operating expenses, partly financed by assessments on regulated handlers and partly by deductions from producers, are reported in these schedules. These funds are collected locally, deposited in local banks, and disbursed directly by the market administrator.

Each milk order is administered locally by a market administrator who is appointed by the Secretary. His staff is employed directly by the market administrator.

The activities conducted in the local office are concerned primarily with monthly computations and public announcement of class and uniform blend prices, associated butterfat differentials, examination of handlers records and facilities to verify their reports and payments to producers, and in checking weights and tests of producer milk.

The expenses of each local office are met from an administrative fund and a marketing service fund which are prescribed in each order. The administrative fund is derived from prorated handler assessments. The marketing service fund of the individual order provides for the expense of disseminating market information to producers who are not members of a qualified cooperative. It also provides for the verification of the weights, sampling and testing of milk from these producers. The cost of these services is borne by such producers.

The maximum rates for administrative assessment and for marketing services are set forth in each order and adjustments below these rates are made from time to time upon recommendations by the market administrator and approval of the Consumer and Marketing Service to provide reserves at about a 6-month operating level. Upon termination of any order the statute provides for distributing the proceeds from net assets pro rata to contributing handlers or producers as the case may be.

These funds are administered by the Farmers Home Administration, under agreements with 36 individual States, for use in carrying out subtitles A and B of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961. In these States, real estate-type loans are made from or purchased with these funds and insured under the regular Farmers Home Administration insured loan program. In some States, operating-type loans are made at 5% interest. The entire assets of the 36 State corporations are being administered by the Farmers Home Administration, with the exception of $15.5 million representing the partial return of cash and other assets, at face value, to 18 of these States for rural rehabilitation purposes agreed upon between each corporation and the Federal Government. The entire assets of six other State rural rehabilitation corporations have been returned to those States.

The Office of Business Economics contributes to the advancement of the economy through the preparation of facts and analyses essential to the formulation and execution of policies relating to the major economic problems that confront the Nation. The principal programs are:

1. Preparation of national income and product data.—Calculations are made of the gross national product, national income, personal income, and their components, providing an overall view of the state of the economy. Input-output accounts supplement the national income and product accounts by providing a closeup of the manner in which the various industries interact in the production of the national output. Regional accounts provide a profile of our economy by States and smaller subdivisions.

At present this is established mainly through the measurement of the personal income received in each area, classified by type and by industrial origin. During 1969, the estimates of gross national product produced in each industry would be developed on a quarterly basis.

2. Analysis of business trends.—The business situation is assessed monthly, and the results of continuing analyses of the major factors underlying cyclical developments and long-range business trends are published regularly. Included are surveys that collect information on business investment plans, and the work on an econometric model which forecasts the future movement of the gross national product, its components, and other key elements in the national accounts. During 1969, the existing plant and equipment survey would be expanded to: (1) include industries not now covered; and (2) to provide separate information on expenditures for plant and expenditures for equipment. Also, the econometric model would be further developed to improve its ability to forecast economic activity as well as to test the economic impact of alternative policies.

3. Computation of the balance of payments.—Balance of payments accounts provide yet another elaboration of the national income and product accounts by depicting in detail all economic transactions with foreign nations.

The Census Bureau is the largest general-purpose statistical agency of the Federal Government. The principal programs carried out under the appropriation "Salaries and expenses" are:

1. Distribution and service.—Periodic sample surveys are conducted which provide estimates of retail sales (1) weekly for major kinds of business, and monthly for individual kinds of business for the total United States and (2) monthly for summary and selected kinds of business for regions, census geographic divisions, and selected large States and individual standard metropolitan statistical areas (SMSA's). Also provided are end-of-month national estimates of retail inventories and accounts receivable balances by kind of business, annual national estimates of sales-inventory ratios by kind of business, and annual national measures on the merchandise line composition of retail sales. Surveys also provide (1) monthly national estimates of the receipts of selected service trades and (2) sales and inventories of merchant wholesalers for individual kinds of business on the national level, and for summary and selected kinds of business for major geographic regions. In addition, during the marketing season, estimates are made of canned food stocks held by distributors, and quarterly reports are prepared regarding green coffee roastings and inventories.

A county business patterns report, providing data on employment and payrolls by detailed kinds of business and by individual county, is prepared annually; this report covers most nonfarm paid employment included in the social security program. In 1968, a program designed to provide physical and dollar volume indexes of the total of large consumer durables inventories was initiated.

In 1969, the present service trade program will be expanded to provide more kind-of-business detail for the major groups presently covered, and to initiate coverage to provide data for substantially all of the service areas.

2. Construction.—Monthly reports are published for housing starts, residential construction authorized by building permits, and the value of new construction put in place. Annual reports are provided on expenditures for residential alterations and repairs.

In 1969, measurement of construction put in place will be expanded for both residential and nonresidential construction. The nonresidential sample will be doubled so that separate data can be provided for stores and offices and for nonhousekeeping residential structures. The enlarged sample will also provide more accurate data. A program will be initiated to provide for replacing the present method of measurement of residential construction by use of construction patterns with progress reporting.

3. Manufacturing.—Periodic surveys are made of production, shipments, orders, and materials consumed for important industries and products. Data are provided monthly on manufacturers' sales, orders, and inventories for total manufacturing and for about 35 industry breakdowns. An annual survey of manufacturers produces data on the number, size, industrial classification, and location of manufacturing establishments and on measures of factory operations such as employment, value added by manufactures, shipments, inventories, and investment. Data are also developed to provide measures of the forces changing the location, structure, and growth of industry.

In 1969, the series on manufacturers' inventories will be expanded to include inventories held by manufacturers at nonmanufacturing plant locations (e.g., sales branches and warehouses). Separate data will be provided for defense and nondefense sales orders and inventories.

4. Foreign trade.—Monthly (including cumulative-to-date), quarterly, and annual reports are published on

The Nineteenth Decennial Census includes the censuses of population and housing and the census of agriculture, irrigation, and drainage.

Census of population and housing.—This census will provide complete counts of the population and housing units. The basic enumeration method will be mail-out/mail-back although the traditional enumerator canvass will be used for about 40 percent of the population.

The work in 1969 includes (1) completion of the dress rehearsal program; (2) updating the national residential mailing list; (3) development of tabulation and processing specifications; (4) further research in field methodology for hard-to-enumerate areas; (5) completion of a major portion of the geographic preparatory work; (6) preparation of primary computer programs; (7) preparation of data collection materials; and (8) development of selected address coding guides for the place-of-work inquiry.

Census of agriculture.—This census will provide a complete count of the number of farms, the characteristics of farms and farm operations, use of agricultural land, production and sales of farm products, farm credit and debt, and principal cash expenditures.

Work for 1969 includes (1) developing specifications and basic operating plans for the collection, processing, and publication of the resulting agricultural statistics; (2) reviewing the content of report forms with responsible representatives of industry, government, and other organizations in the light of reporting problems encountered in the previous censuses, the availability of information to be collected, and the continuing need of the resulting statistics; (3) preparing the mailing list; and (4) writing and testing the electronic computer programs.

The Bureau of the Census undertakes work for governmental and other bodies to the extent that such work meets desirable public needs, can be performed without adversely affecting activities financed from funds appropriated to the Bureau, and can be more appropriately or efficiently performed by the Bureau of the Census than by the sponsoring agency.

Significant work includes the collection of labor force data for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the Health Interview Survey for the National Center for Health Statistics, The Home Fallout Protection Survey for the Office of Civil Defense, statistical training of foreign nationals and providing statistical assistance to underdeveloped countries. The latter two programs are financed by the Agency for International Development.

Grants and loans for development facilities are made to improve the environmental essentials for the growth and expansion of private enterprise, so as to increase employment and raise income in areas where economic growth is lagging behind the rest of the Nation.

1. Redevelopment area assistance.—Development facilities funds are concentrated on projects in redevelopment areas which promise the greatest contribution to the development process of combining the investments of public agencies and private groups to achieve economic growth.

Basic grants of up to 50% of project cost are made which will directly or indirectly assist in the creation of additional long-term employment opportunities and benefit the long-term unemployed and members of low income families. Basic grants can be supplemented up to 80% of project cost depending upon the relative need of the area and nature of the project.

Construction grants by other agencies may also be supplemented up to 80% of project cost so that the areas can take advantage of other Federal programs which will make a significant contribution toward stimulating economic growth. The amount of revenue which a project should earn from fair user charges is taken into account when establishing the amount of the supplemental grant.

Long term, low interest loans may also be a part of development facilities project financing when financial assistance is not otherwise available from private lenders or Federal agencies on terms which would permit accomplishment of the project. The interest rate on 1968 loans is 4¼%.

2. Economic development districts and centers assistance.—Additional financial incentives are provided to encourage redevelopment areas to form into larger economic planning units called economic development districts. Each district must include at least two redevelopment areas and have one or more designated economic development centers. A center may be outside a redevelopment area if it is so economically related that its economic growth can be expected to alleviate economic distress in the district. Title I grant projects in districts may under certain conditions be increased by 10% of project cost. Grants and, where necessary, loans may also be made for projects in development centers.

Long-term, low interest loans and working capital loan guarantees are made to encourage industrial development. The objective is to increase employment opportunities and family income in areas which lag behind the rest of the Nation economically. This program also covers the estimated costs for care and preservation of collateral acquired by EDA in connection with loans made under both the Area Redevelopment Act and the Public Works and Economic Development Act.

1. Redevelopment area assistance.—Commercial and industrial loans are made in qualified areas for a maximum of 65% of project cost with repayment periods up to 25 years. The interest rate for 1968 loans is 4¼%. Financial assistance must be otherwise unavailable from private lenders or Federal agencies on terms which would permit accomplishment of the project. Working capital loans made by private lenders in connection with Economic Development Administration projects are guaranteed for up to 90% of the outstanding balance.

2. Economic development districts and centers assistance.—Loans and working capital guarantees are made in economic development centers. This is an incentive to encourage the formation of larger, economically viable planning units called districts. Each district must include at least two redevelopment areas, and one or more cities designated as economic development centers related to the district.

3. Collateral protection.—The employment potential and Government investment of projects in temporary difficulty are frequently protected by the purchase of senior liens. This prevents the premature liquidation of projects by other secured creditors.

1. Redevelopment and other area assistance aids communities in their economic development through technical assistance contracts, planning grants, and research.

Technical assistance.—Technical assistance contracts provide knowledge, information, and advice on local problems and projects.

Planning grants to States and areas.—Grants to State governments are made to assist and develop State comprehensive economic planning efforts. Other planning assistance grants, not to exceed 75% of total costs, are made to local redevelopment areas to assist them in developing overall economic development plans.

Program volume is estimated as follows (dollars are obligations in thousands):

Research.—A continuing program of research, training, and education is performed through contracts and grants.

This permits the use of the best talent available in universities, other governmental agencies, and private institutions to help determine the causes and cures of unemployment, underemployment, and low incomes. This information is then made available for use of government and community leaders.

The 1969 planned program is estimated as follows (dollars are obligations in thousands):

2. Economic development districts and centers assistance is provided by administrative expense grants for multi-county economic development districts. These planning grants fund 75% of the total district cost of salaries and associated expenses required to hire full-time professional staffs for planning and implementing district development programs.

Program volume is estimated as follows (dollars are obligations in thousands):

3. Regional planning and technical assistance is provided to regional action planning commissions. Aid is extended by direct grants for planning and technical assistance, and through research to enable the commissions to continue preparation of long-range overall economic development programs.

Expenses of regional action planning commissions.—The commissions are assisted by a staff in evaluating the potential and identifying means of fully using the region's human and natural resources. The estimated cost of program is as follows (dollars are obligations in thousands):

Expenses of the Federal cochairmen.—The Federal Government is represented on each regional action planning commission by a Federal cochairman. This subactivity finances the salaries of the cochairmen, and supporting staff.

Other planning and technical assistance is provided through grants and contracts to aid the work of the regional action planning commissions and for research on regional problems.

The Business and Defense Services Administration advances the Nation's economic growth by providing information, advisory, and analytical service to both business and government.

1. Industry and market information services.—Business and industry are provided with market, distribution, and production data essential to development and growth of American business. BDSA produces seven recurring industry reports, an annual U.S. Industrial Outlook, approximately 100 one-time reports each year addressed primarily to and about domestic commerce on a topical and timely basis, and a series of domestic and overseas market reports and world-trade commodity reports.

BDSA's affirmative action program promotes equal opportunity hiring in business, increased participation of minority businessmen in the business community, and the upgrading of existing minority business establishments. Increases in 1969 will enable BDSA to double its efforts to encourage minority business participation and provide additional impetus to the youth opportunity and equal employment programs.

2. Commodity and industry analyses.—Commodity industry advice is provided in support of Government policies and programs dealing with inflationary pressures, technological advancement, short supply areas, environmental conservation improvements, urbanization, business problems, and regional business growth. Government agencies are kept informed of the probable impact on business and industry of proposed legislative and regulatory measures. Advice and assistance on problems relating to commodities, industries, and services are furnished.

Increases in 1969 are (a) to undertake economic impact studies on pollution abatement as they affect industry, (b) to analyze the effect on the economy of increased demands for petroleum and coal and to ensure their adequate supply, and (c) to administer the Education, Scientific, and Cultural Material Importation Act of 1966, whereby certain nonprofit organizations may apply for duty-free importation of scientific equipment and apparatus.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1966, $1,320 thousand (1967 adjustments, -$63 thousand); 1967, $1,251 thousand; 1968, $1,824 thousand; 1969, $2,200 thousand.

International activities of the Department are designed to stimulate the expansion of U.S. foreign commerce. This assists in the growth of the national economy by creating new jobs, increasing industry profits, reducing the balance-of-payments deficit, and maintaining U.S. leadership among world trading nations. Free market forces are encouraged to play the maximum possible role in the conduct of international business, and assistance is available to U.S. firms to more effectively conduct their international business.

1. International trade promotions.—The sale of American-made goods overseas is promoted by providing facilities for the exhibition of American products in international trade fairs, trade centers, sample display services, and through mobile trade fairs, America-week promotions, and joint Government-industry export programs.

The effectiveness of this activity can be measured by the dollar volume of immediate and projected first-year sales by exhibitors, and overseas agency relationships established as a result of these promotions.

Actual and projected results of major ongoing trade promotion programs are as follows:

Trade and industrial exhibitions.—In 1967, at 19 commercial exhibitions, immediate and projected 12-month sales totaled $47.8 million and 196 new agencies were established. Based on operating experience, expected results from 29 commercial exhibitions planned for 1969 are projected at about $85 million in sales and the establishment of over 300 new agencies.

Trade centers.—Immediate and projected 12-month sales made at 43 shows held at six trade centers in 1967 totaled $36.3 million and 421 new agencies were established. Expected results from 52 shows planned for 1969 are projected at $44 million in sales and the establishment of about 510 new agencies. Use of trade center facilities by individual firms between regularly scheduled shows in 1967 resulted in additional sales of $4.4 million. Similar results are expected to be achieved for 1969.

America weeks.—Nine America-week promotions were held in 1967 with initial sales of $2.7 million. Initial sales in 1969 are projected at $4 million.

The trade development and service center is a new export promotion technique designed to provide an overseas export promotion facility which is specially adapted to trade promotion needs in developing markets. The new joint Government-industry export program is aimed particularly at increasing the U.S. share of developed markets and gaining a foothold for U.S. products in developing markets. This activity may involve contractual relations with private U.S. trade organizations in developing export markets.

In 1969, provision is made for increases in both number and scope of trade and industrial exhibitions held abroad; the establishment of two new trade centers; increases in America-week promotions and joint Government-industry export programs; and the establishment of a first trade development and service center.

2. Promotion of international investment.—U.S. policy and business interests are advanced by stimulating investment and licensing by foreign firms in the United States and by facilitating investment in developing countries by U.S. firms.

3. Commercial information.—Business and Government agencies are provided information on economic and commercial developments abroad. Assistance is rendered to American exporters in targeting overseas sales opportunities and in selecting and establishing profitable relationships with overseas representatives and manufacturers through such media as Trade Lists, World Trade Directory Reports and Trade Contact Surveys, and the American International Traders Index.

4. International trade and investment policy development.—Efforts are made to remove barriers to, improve the climate for, and otherwise advance and protect the interests of American business operating abroad. Such efforts include (1) the development of policies and programs in connection with international trade, finance and export credit, resources, and business practices; (2) the conduct of international commercial and financial negotiations in major international forums (such as GATT, OECD, UN); and (3) the representation of American interests in obtaining equitable treatment in foreign countries.

5. Commercial/economic officers program support.—The Commerce Department participates in the recruitment, assignment, career management, and promotion of commercial/economic officers in the Foreign Service who represent U.S. commercial interests overseas.

6. Export strategy planning.—The purpose of this new activity is to develop an overall strategy in the formation of new programs to assist U.S. exporters in their trade expansion efforts in opening up new markets overseas. This planning staff has the responsibility for the continuing identification and analysis of major issues affecting U.S. international trade as related to the Bureau's basic objectives, the development of new informational data on U.S. overseas trade; and the forward long-range development, programing and measurement of the Bureau's export promotion activities.

A supplemental request for 1968 will be used to (1) increase the number of overseas trade promotions and establish 2 new trade centers, (2) begin the joint Government-industry export program, (3) expand the commercial information activity by establishing a new program to identify potential overseas markets for U.S. products, and (4) establish the new export strategy planning staff.

The use of excess foreign currencies to support commercial trade exhibitions in developing countries helps to improve our balance-of-payments position and assists in strengthening the U.S. economy by stimulating and expanding our foreign commerce. At commercial trade exhibitions in developing countries where the United States holds an excess of foreign currency, the use of such currencies assists in providing displays to bring American products to the attention of foreign buyers, and promotes U.S. foreign policy objectives by presenting a favorable image of the United States in the developing countries.

Export controls are necessary to safeguard the national security by regulating exports of strategic commodities, to protect the domestic economy from excessive drain of scarce commodities, and to implement U.S. foreign policy and aid in the fulfillment of international responsibilities. The continuing threat to the security and welfare of the United States from some countries makes necessary the continuation and, as necessary, the extension of controls in order to prevent transshipment to unauthorized destinations. The Bureau of Customs has the responsibility of policing shipments at points of export. The 1969 program anticipates a licensing application workload of about 600 per day.

The United States Travel Service develops, plans, and carries out a program to stimulate and encourage travel to the United States by residents of foreign countries. The principal program activities are carried out by a travel promotion division which supervises (1) the creation and placement of trade and consumer travel advertising, (2) production and distribution of sales promotion materials to the public and the travel industry abroad, (3) collection or writing of timely articles for placement in the foreign press, (4) production of travel films for use overseas, (5) a State promotion activity which provides coordination of USTS programs with those of the States and cities, and (6) the operations of oversea offices for personal contact with area markets and for carrying out promotional activities at the local level; by a visitor services division which works with the domestic travel industry to improve the travel product and with U.S. communities for improving the reception and services given to foreign visitors; and by a facilitation and planning division which conducts research programs in support of promotional activities and which also works with both foreign and U.S. Government agencies to reduce barriers to travel.

In 1969, 12 oversea travel information offices will serve as centers for answering public and trade inquiries on U.S. travel and as headquarters for sales calls and other promotional activities. The estimate for 1969 includes funds for increased emphasis on the production of a wider range and quantity of supporting promotional materials. The request will also permit a strengthening of USTS headquarters support, an increase in oversea office staffs, and more intensive market research in present and prospective country markets.

An average annual gain of 8.8% in the flow of oversea business and pleasure visitors to the United States was made in the 9-year period prior to the establishment of the U.S. Travel Service in 1961. Since establishment through 1966, the average gain has been 20%. As a result of these increases, the oversea portion of the travel deficit in the U.S. balance of payments has been held to a worsening of only $90 million out of a total deterioration of $414 million in the travel gap from 1960 to 1966.

The special foreign currency program utilizes foreign currencies, which are excess to the normal requirements of the United States, to supplement domestic research and development activities and to encourage greater international cooperation in environmental research and allied sciences. The program consists essentially of a succession of individual projects which fluctuate from year to year. These are conducted under contract by foreign government agencies, universities, and other research organizations, to support current Environmental Science Services Administration requirements. The program proposed for 1969 includes:

1. Weather forecasts and warnings.—Developmental work on the relay of weather observations by means of satellites and studies to determine the extent and variability of climatic influences on food production.

2. River and flood forecasts and warnings.—A study of the meteorological characteristics of small watersheds is scheduled to be completed in 1968. No funds are requested for this activity in 1969.

3. Earth description, mapping, and charting.—Studies of focal depth and focal mechanisms of earthquakes and studies of magnetic field behavior in the vicinity of the earth's magnetic equator.

4. Marine description, mapping, and charting.—Studies leading to a better understanding of the large-scale motions of the ocean system and its interaction with the atmosphere; studies of storm surges on the coasts of India and Pakistan which will have application to similar problems along the U.S. coast.

5. Telecommunications and space services.—Studies of radio wave propagation over irregular terrain, and of fading characteristics of microwave communication links.

6. Environmental satellite.—Utilization of satellite data in studies of the influence on large-scale atmospheric circulation of storms that affect northern India and Pakistan during the winter season.

This account provides for capital outlay items, such as construction related to magnetic, seismological, meteorological, and oceanographic facilities, including ships, and purchase and installation of equipment and instrumentation required in support of the Environmental Science Services Administration's operational and research programs and services.

1. Weather forecasts and warnings.—Operational programs under this activity are concerned with observing, gathering, processing, and transmitting meteorological data to the general public in the form of timely forecasts, warnings, and advisories. In 1969, $2,066 thousand is required for extension and upgrading of the radar and upper-air networks; rehabilitation of facilities in Alaska, and the overhauling of an aircraft used in hurricane and tornado research.

2. River and flood forecasts and warnings.—This activity provides for the equipment needed to operate the river and flood forecasts and warnings network and for effective water resources management. Both the automation of the reporting network and the establishment of additional flash flood warning services are included in the recommendations of H. Doc. 465. The program in 1969 provides for automation of the Alaskan hydrologic network for which $177 thousand is requested.

3. Earth description, mapping, and charting.—The requirement of $100 thousand in this activity covers seismic and tide equipment needed to strengthen the Pacific reporting network.

4. Marine description, mapping, and charting.—In 1969, $607 thousand is requested under this activity to provide for automated marine charting hardware, tide and current data acquisition equipment, a shipboard gravity meter, and engineering and technical support.

5. Telecommunications and space services.—In 1969, $250 thousand is requested for the purchase of a computer to be installed at the Jicamarca, Peru, scatter radar site.

It is estimated that an unobligated balance of $3,896 thousand under this no-year appropriation will be brought forward from 1968 and $1,574 thousand will be carried forward to 1970. These balances are required to complete the long leadtime construction, procurement, and installation actions inherent in the activities financed under the Facilities, equipment, and construction appropriation.

The Environmental Science Services Administration is responsible for the establishment and operation of a national satellite system to meet operational requirements for geophysical environmental data. The system is based on the National Operational Meteorological Satellite System (NOMSS), established to observe continuously worldwide weather conditions and to process, analyze, and archive the data for use in environmental services and research. The satellite system is administered by the National Environmental Satellite Center (NESC) at Suitland, Md.

The first element of NOMSS, the Tiros Operational Satellite (TOS) System, became operational in 1966. An improved TOS (ITOS) spacecraft, which adds a nighttime observational capability to the system, was funded in 1967 and 1968. The 1969 estimate provides principally for operation of the TOS system and implementation of the ITOS system.

1. Spacecraft and launching.—This activity covers the design, construction, and launching of operational satellites. Two ITOS flight units (F and G) must be funded in 1969 to maintain system continuity. A launch vehicle for ITOS C and launch support services for TOS G, H, and P1 must also be funded.

2. Command and data acquisition.—This activity covers the establishment and operation of ground facilities for command of the spacecraft, acquisition of observational data, and transmission of data to the central processing and analysis center. Command and data acquisition (CDA) stations have been established at Fairbanks, Alaska, and Wallops Island, Va., and a TOS Operations Center (TOC) at Suitland, Md. Special communication systems link these facilities. The 1969 estimate provides for around-the-clock operation and maintenance of these facilities.

3. Data processing, analysis, and archiving.—EDP facilities are used to convert satellite observational data into forms suitable for immediate operational use in forecasting and service programs, and subsequent use for research and climatological purposes. The 1969 estimate provides for the 24-hour operation of central analysis and processing functions; systems engineering efforts leading toward improvement of the satellite system; establishment of ITOS data-handling systems; and continuation of the Washington-Moscow communications link.

4. Technical management.—Technical management and support for the satellite program is provided by the National Environmental Satellite Center and by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration on a reimbursable basis.

The Office administers laws governing the granting of patents for invention and the registration of trademarks.

For the first 3 years under the Streamlined Examination Program, the Office has averaged 97% of its basic goal of disposing of 100,000 patent applications per year. In 1965, the first year under the program, disposals were 102,165; the transitional period from old to new cases resulted in disposals of 91,059 for 1966; 1967 being a more normal year under the program resulted in disposals of 96,811. Disposals for 1968 and 1969 are estimated at 100,000 and 104,000, respectively. The estimate provides for: a reduction of the pendency period of both patent and trademark applications; improved services to the public; and increasing international cooperation for lessening the expense in obtaining international patents and trademarks.

Receipts from fees were $23.7 million in 1967 and are estimated to be $24 million and $25 million, for 1968 and 1969 respectively. The substantial increase in receipts is attributable to Public Law 89-83 effective October 25, 1965. The 1965 receipts under old legislation were $9.2 million and doubled to $18.2 million in 1966 with the new legislation in effect for three-fourths of the year. The 1967 actual compared with the 1965 actual represents a revenue gain of 158%.

1. Examination and issuance of patents.—Applications are examined to determine the patentability of claimed inventions; and quasi-judicial functions are performed in appeal and interference proceedings within the Office. Specifications and drawings of successful applications are printed and the issuance of patents is regularly published. In addition, this activity includes preparation and issuance of patent grants, furnishing copies of records, maintenance of public search room and scientific library facilities, and recording instruments conveying ownership of patent and trademark rights.

2. Examination and registration of trademarks.—Applications are examined to determine the registrability of trademarks, and quasi-judicial functions are performed in appeal or adversary proceedings within the Office. Specifications and drawings of successful applications are printed and the issuance of registrations is regularly published.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1966, $2,235 thousand (1967 adjustments, -$38 thousand); 1967, $1,087 thousand; 1968, $1,087 thousand; 1969, $1,387 thousand.

The proposed increase will strengthen the Bureau's program principally with regard to the National Standard Reference Data System, automatic data processing, the central core of the physical measurement system, building technology, research on the physical properties of materials, and research on the flammability of fabrics.

1. (a) Basic measurements and standards.—This includes research, development, analysis or specifications relating to standards for physical measurement; method of precise measurement of physical quantities; and precise values of fundamental physical constants suitable for tying measurement systems together. Most of the work in this sub-activity deals with a basic core of 50 physical quantities such as length, electric current, temperature, sound pressure, etc., which are fundamental to all physical measurements and for which a standard representing unit magnitude is maintained. Each quantity must be measured over a very wide range from very large to very small magnitudes, and at each magnitude it must be measurable as accurately as the current state of technology requires.

The increase budgeted will be applied to help meet the increasing demands of our technologically oriented society to extend the range and improve the accuracy of the measurement of many of these basic quantities. The greatest emphasis is planned for radiation measurements and electrical and magnetic quantities in the higher frequency ranges.

(b) Reference materials.—This includes (1) description and development of methods of description of the essential features of composition and structure of selected materials which govern their behavior in technologically important environments, (2) preparation and development of methods to prepare materials of precisely known composition and structure, (3) preparation of reproducible, stable sample materials for use as measurement standards and as specimens in the measurement of behavioral characteristics under given conditions.

The increase in 1969 will be used to develop (1) materials which will withstand exposure to detrimental environments such as very high or very low temperatures, and (2) measurement techniques that will be used to determine very small quantities of impurities in materials.

(c) Standard reference data.—This includes programs arising as a result of the Bureau's responsibility for developing a Standard Reference Data System and other programs concerned with standard reference data. Work is directed toward systematically obtaining from the scientific and technical literature and evaluating critically numerical data in the physical sciences needed by scientists and engineers. These data are the numbers that describe the properties of nature, the strengths of high temperature reactions, the masses of atoms, the rates of chemical reactions, the wavelengths of light in emission spectra and many others. Programs involve analysis of needs, acquisition of data from all available sources, critical evaluation, and compilation of data for dissemination.

The increase will be applied principally to producing data compilations on the effects and transmission of heat energy in substances and on the behavior of atoms and molecules as individual particles in substances.

(d) Data on properties of matter and materials.—Data concerning the behavioral characteristics of matter and materials is generated in areas of technology where urgently needed and not readily attainable elsewhere. This program is a major resource for research scientists and design engineers in areas such as electronics, polymers, metallurgy, ceramics, communications, defense, and nuclear energy. The program supports and contributes to the Basic Measurement System, the Standard Reference Data System, and Standard Reference Materials Program.

The increase will be applied principally to acquisition of data in fields where the need is most critical by (1) determining data on the mechanical behavior (strength, brittleness); optical behavior (light reflecting, light filtering); and electrical insulating behavior of materials, (2) developing engineering data and devices needed for the handling of extremely cold liquids such as rocket fuels, (3) measurements of heat energy as related to the behavior of materials under given conditions, (4) development of data on the reactions of selected atoms and molecules which determine the behavior of substances, and (5) generation of nuclear data on the chain reaction phenomena of uranium and plutonium.

(e) Technological standards.—This includes research and development of test methods and standards of performance which serve as a basis for specifications, standards and codes pertaining to materials, products, and systems used in industry and commerce; participation in technical committees for standardizing bodies such as the United States of American Standards Institute; administration of procedures for voluntary industrial standardization; participation in international standardization activities; and provision of information services pertaining to standardizing activities.

Most of the increase will be used to implement the provisions of the 1967 Amendments to the Flammable Fabrics Act of 1953. A supplemental appropriation is being requested to support the fiscal year 1968 anticipated costs under this program. The remaining portion will be applied (1) to research in building technology aimed at the development of better building codes and standards based upon more adequate scientific knowledge of durability, performance, strength, and safety of structures; and, (2) to implement the provisions of the Fair Packaging and Labeling Act of 1966 which provides for standardizing activity related to quantities in packages of consumer commodities.

2. (a) Computer science and technology.—This includes technical activities of the National Bureau of Standards aimed at improving the effective utilization by Government of automatic data processing equipment and computer-based data processing and information handling systems. This includes, but is not limited to, investigation, design, and evaluation of complete systems, and the rendering of advice, consultation, and technical assistance to agencies of the Federal Government in connection with the design, selection, acquisition, and utilization of such systems. Closely connected with these technical activities are the following technical services: To provide technical leadership for and monitor the Federal Government's participation in the development, measurement, and testing of voluntary commercial automatic data processing standards in a manner consonant with Government requirements for a compatible complex of equipments, languages, and practices; to determine the need for and recommend establishment of uniform Federal standards where necessary to supplement voluntary commercial standards; and to maintain a specialized information service in support of all of the foregoing activities.

The increase will be applied to development of standards and to assistance to other Federal agencies aimed at optimizing the effectiveness of their data processing installations.

(b) Federal clearinghouse.—The Clearinghouse for Federal Scientific and Technical Information provides the following services: Collection of all technical reports generated by the Federal Government except those withheld for reasons of military security; indexing, reproducing, abstracting, announcing, and distributing these reports; analyzing, evaluating, and digesting contents of these reports and providing for special dissemination to regional centers and industries; and maintaining a clearinghouse for foreign technical translations. Costs of acquiring and storage are borne by this appropriation; costs of reproduction and distribution are paid by the customers. No increase is budgeted for this activity.

(c) Invention and innovation.—This includes programs related to the Bureau's broad mission which serve either to encourage invention and innovation or to encourage the greater use of technology by Government and industry. No increase is budgeted for this activity.

The research program financed by this appropriation provides a capability and competence for many services performed by the National Bureau of Standards for the Government, science, industry and commerce including, for example, publication of scientific information; calibration of measuring instruments; tests of materials, products or systems; production and sale of standard reference materials; consultation and advice on scientific or technical problems; and specialized research on specific technical problems of other Federal agencies. Generally when a customer from outside the Bureau receives a unique benefit from any of these services he pays the cost of the service furnished. Selected workload data roughly indicative of the magnitude of these services are as follows:

This will provide for construction and improvements to the plant and facilities of the National Bureau of Standards and procurement of major special facilities.

Capital outlay.—1. Improvements and modifications.—The budget includes $200 thousand for minor capital improvements of a general nature required by the Bureau's laboratories and field stations. Other minor improvements, when of a special project-related character, are charged to the appropriation for Research and Technical Services. Noncapital alterations are charged to the operating costs of this appropriation.

2. General construction.—This activity includes improvements and construction items costing more than $40 thousand except for construction associated with the Bureau's relocation at Gaithersburg. Anticipated costs in 1969 are $48 thousand for the neutron physics addition to the radiation physics laboratory financed in a prior year.

3. Special facilities.—(a) NBS facilities.—This subactivity includes the acquisition of large equipment and any building construction and land acquisition associated with them. This budget includes $700 thousand for design, acquisition of land, and for procurement of long lead-time equipment for relocation of the radio station WWVH located in Maui, Hawaii. Anticipated costs in 1969 include $200 thousand for the budget year project and $409 thousand for projects financed in prior years.

(b) Weights and measures standards for the States.—This subactivity finances the acquisition of basic reference standards of weight and measure for distribution to the States. Such action will help to insure uniformity of weights and measures standards throughout the Nation and to provide the physical tools necessary for precise measurement in business, industry, science, and education. The budget of $400 thousand provides for the fourth segment of the total estimated cost of $2,000 thousand for the 50 States. Anticipated costs in 1969 are $312 thousand of previously appropriated money and $188 thousand of budget year funds.

The Working capital fund finances all operations of the National Bureau of Standards, except major construction projects, from advances and reimbursements. The principal of the fund, as of June 30, 1967, consisted of $5 million in appropriations, $8 million in capital provided by appropriations of the Bureau, and $154.9 million in net donated assets. The Government investment is estimated to grow through donation of cash and other assets financed by National Bureau of Standards' appropriations to $173.8 million by June 30, 1969.

Operating costs.—1. Technical program.—Research and technical services are conducted by the National Bureau of Standards on the request of other Government agencies and the public, as well as in support of the Bureau's own research program. The program conducted on contract with other agencies constitutes about one-third of the technical work of the Bureau and it is expected to continue at this level.

2. Plant improvement and special equipment.—This activity includes the costs of the working capital fund which are reimbursed from the Bureau's capital outlay appropriations. The plant improvements and special equipment

This appropriation provides for payments of subsidy to ship operators in order to maintain a U.S. merchant fleet in support of U.S. foreign commerce and capable of serving as a naval auxiliary in event of a national emergency. The program is designed to pay the difference between the fair and reasonable cost of certain expenses (wages and subsistence of crew, insurance, vessel maintenance and repair) and the estimated cost of the same items if the ships were operated under foreign registry. To be eligible for subsidy, an operator must provide regular berth services on an essential trade route, show that Government aid is necessary to place the operation on a parity with its foreign competition, and employ vessels constructed in the United States and manned by U.S. citizens.

During calendar year 1966, 14 operators had operating-subsidy contracts with the Maritime Administration and provided service on 30 essential foreign trade routes. These operators carried approximately 11.4 million deadweight tons of cargo, an increase of 7.5% over calendar year 1965. This increase was due mostly to the fact that no time was lost for labor strikes in 1966, as there was in 1965.

The total of vessel operating expenses for subsidized operators in calendar year 1966 was $819 million, of which $332 million represented subsidizable items of expense.

The operations for which subsidy support is projected are detailed in the following table.

Passenger and freight services.—Fourteen operators using an average of 289 ships conducted and terminated 1,620 voyages from U.S. ports on the Atlantic, Gulf, Pacific, and Great Lakes areas to foreign ports in all of the major coastal areas in the world during calendar year 1966.

Recapture of excess profits.—All contracts for operating subsidy provide that 50% of the net profits earned from the contractors' subsidized operations and services which over a 10-year period exceed 10% of capital necessarily employed shall be withheld from payments made by the Government. This recapture is calculated annually based upon cumulative profits earned since the beginning of the recapture period. The estimate for the current and budget years shown in the program and financing schedule assumes that the first quarter of calendar year 1967 profit experience of each operator will continue.

Status of unfunded contract authorization.—The computation and approval of final subsidy rates and audit of annual accountings will make it possible to make payments of 100% of subsidy payable on account of operations prior to December 31, 1958. The $145.6 million unpaid subsidy as of June 30, 1969, represents a backlog consisting of prior year payments withheld pending final rate and audit determinations for operations subsequent to calendar year 1958; plus estimated amounts earned in the final quarter of 1969 for which vouchers will not be presented or paid during that year.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

For expenses necessary for research, development, fabrication, and test operation of experimental facilities and equipment; collection and dissemination of maritime technical and engineering information; studies to improve water transportation systems; [$9,575,000] $6,700,000, to remain available until expended, of which [$3,300,000] $3,400,000 shall be for operation of the NS Savannah: Provided, [That none of the funds appropriated herein are to be used for a layup of the NS Savannah: Provided further,] That transfers may be made to the appropriation for the current fiscal year for "Salaries and expenses" for administrative expenses (not to exceed [$900,000] $931,000) and any such transfers shall be without regard to the limitation under that appropriation on the amount available for such expenses: Provided further, That transfers may be made from this appropriation to the "Vessel operations revolving fund" for losses resulting from expenses of experimental ship operations. Public Law 415, 84th Congress (46 U.S.C. 1126), established the Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N.Y., to provide a program for the training of cadets for service as officers in the U.S. Merchant Marine. A 4-year training course is provided, including 1 year of sea duty, designed to qualify graduates for licenses as merchant marine deck or engine officers.

The Academy provides subsistence, quarters, tuition, uniform and textbook allowances, and medical and dental care for the cadets. A small cadet training liaison group in Washington, D.C., provides staff assistance to the Maritime Administrator on training matters, and assists in the selection and appointment of cadets.

The States of Maine, Massachusetts, New York, Texas, and California maintain schools for the training of merchant marine officers with Federal assistance given in the form of (a) direct grants of $75 thousand, if matched by State appropriations and if out-of-State students are enrolled; (b) allowance to cadets for uniforms, textbooks, and subsistence; and (c) repairs to Federal training vessels lent to the schools.

The Maritime Academy Act (72 Stat. 622) provides contract authority for the Secretary of Commerce to enter into agreements with States to provide the grants and allowances over a 4-year period. This act provides contract authority without limit as to the amount or fiscal year. The new obligational authority includes the estimated obligations to be incurred under this authority. Maintenance and repair of training vessels are accomplished through annual appropriations. The schools are expected to graduate approximately 400 cadets in 1969.

Under the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, the Maritime Administration received authority to insure construction loans and mortgages with aggregate outstanding balances of up to $1 billion, on vessels engaged in the foreign and domestic commerce of the United States. $20 million of authority has been transferred to the Department of the Interior to insure construction loans and mortgages of fishing vessels.

Budget program.—The fund reflects the complete payment of Treasury and "Vessel operations revolving fund" borrowings by June 30, 1968. There are no anticipated mortgage defaults and advances in 1968 and 1969.

Financing.—The redemption of defaulted loans or mortgages is financed from insurance premiums and fees, interest earned on U.S. Government securities and mortgages held, together with such amounts as may be necessary by borrowings from the Treasury Department, pursuant to Public Law 85-520 (46 U.S.C. 1275(b)).

Operating results and financial condition.—As of June 30, 1967, balances outstanding plus commitments for additional ship mortgages total $562.1 million. The outstanding balances for loans and mortgages at the end of 1968 and 1969 are projected at $668.8 million and $795.8 million, respectively. Premium and interest receipts are retained to meet contingencies, including payment of insurance claims. The fund in 1967 and 1968 reflects repayments to the Treasury of $5.1 million and $1.6 million, respectively, and the repayment in 1968 of $3.5 million to "Vessel operations revolving fund." It is anticipated that the fund will purchase Treasury securities in the amount of $0.4 million in 1968 and $6.4 million in 1969.

This fund finances operation, reactivation, deactivation, and charter of Government owned or controlled cargo type vessels. It is also used for financing the operation of Government-owned experimental vessels (46 U.S.C. 1205).

Budget program—1. Vessel operations expenses.—Cargo vessels are operated by private operators as agents of the Maritime Administration to carry shipments for the Military Sea Transportation Service and other agencies. In addition, agents operate ships under Government control as a consequence of defaults under Title XI, guaranteed loans and mortgages.

2. Charter operations.—As of June 30, 1967, there were three Government-owned vessels under charter to a private operator operating in the Alaskan trade. Early in 1968, these ships will be returned to the Reserve Fleet.

3. Experimental ship operations.—In August 1968, the NS Savannah will have completed 3 years of experimental commercial operation under a bareboat charter. The NS Savannah will be operated in 1969 at basically the same operating level as 1968.

Financing.—Expenses are financed by revenue from private operators and reimbursements from Military Sea Transportation Service, other agencies and appropriations, in accordance with 69 Stat. 59.

Operating results and financial condition—1. Vessel operations.—Charges are made to the Military Sea Transportation Service and other agencies for full costs arising under general agency agreements for ship operations.

2. Charter operations.—No provision has been made for charter hire income or loss in 1969 since it is anticipated that no vessels will be on charter; and any such income or loss would be attributable to adjustment of prior year charter hire contracts, which is not predictable. The $95 thousand net income for 1967 is due largely to charter hire adjustment of prior year contracts.

3. Experimental ship operations—NS Savannah.—The $1.8 million represents the costs to the Government of operating the NS Savannah during 1969, which costs are reimbursable in full from the Research and development appropriation.

The Maritime Administration is authorized by 46 U.S.C. 1281-1294, as amended, to insure against loss or damage by marine war risks when it is found commercial insurance cannot be obtained on reasonable terms and conditions. Authority to underwrite insurance has been authorized to September 1970, having been extended at 5-year intervals since 1950.

Budget program.—As of June 30, 1967, the number of outstanding binders issued for the types of insurance covered by this fund were: 1,438 for hulls, 1,314 for protection and indemnity, and 1,113 for insurance of crew life and personal effects. These binders, which become effective as a result of the outbreak of war, cover approximately $13 billion of insurance exposure. Second seamen's war risk insurance has been provided at the request of the Navy—without premium but on a reimbursable basis as required by 46 U.S.C. 1285 on 30 vessels for the Military Sea Transportation Service as of June 30, 1967. It is estimated that this service has provided a savings of $528 thousand.

Financing.—46 U.S.C. 1288(a) provides authority for the Secretary of Commerce to transfer up to $10 million from the vessel operations revolving fund to the war risk insurance revolving fund. Revenue in the fund is received from fees paid for the issuance of interim binders, premiums paid for builder's risk insurance, interest from investments, and reimbursable charges from the Navy.

RESERVE FORCES

The following narrative statement covers the appropriations for the National Guard and Reserve components of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force.

National Guard and Reserve personnel.—This program provides funds for training members of the Ready Reserve required for early mobilization needs of the Active Forces. Most of the paid National Guard and Reserve components personnel perform 48 or 24 drills and attend 2 weeks of active duty for training each year. Other personnel not requiring as intensive training receive only a period of active duty for training (usually 2 weeks) during the year. Active duty for basic training is provided for personnel enlisting in a National Guard or Reserve component who have not previously received military training. Service schools and special tours of active duty training provide additional training for limited numbers of the Ready Reserve.

The numbers of National Guard and Reserve component personnel estimated to participate in the paid training programs are summarized in the following table.

Reserve officer candidates.—The Reserve Officers' Training Corps program provides training for reserve and regular officer candidates who have enrolled in the course while attending a collegiate institution at which an ROTC unit has been established. The curriculum includes instruction in military and academic subjects together with one or more summer active duty training periods with the Active Forces. College graduates who satisfactorily complete the advanced course of the program are commissioned and are ordinarily ordered to active duty for a minimum period of 2 years.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps Vitalization Act of 1964 authorizes a limited number of scholarships for 4-year ROTC students on a competitive basis. Successful candidates for the scholarships are required to serve a minimum period of 4 years on active duty upon graduation and appointment as a commissioned officer. The Army and Air Force each awarded about 3,000 scholarships in 1968 and about 4,000 will be awarded by each of these services in 1969. Approximately 5,600 members of the Navy program will receive scholarships in 1969.

The ROTC Vitalization Act also authorized a 2-year ROTC program as well as the traditional 4-year program. A student may qualify for the 2-year program by attending a 6-week summer camp in lieu of completing the first 2 years of the traditional 4-year program.

The Navy and Marine Corps also provide for an officer candidate program wherein students attending any accredited college or university may enroll, attend prescribed summer military training programs, and receive a commission after graduation.

The Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force provide training for students who elect to enroll in ROTC training at the secondary level of education. The Army's high school level ROTC program is expected to increase to 600 schools by the end of 1969. The Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force initiated Junior ROTC programs in 1967 and are programed to have 71, 15, and 120 schools, respectively, in operation in 1969.

The numbers of candidates commissioned from these programs are summarized below:

This estimate includes funds for the pay of all military personnel on the retired lists of the Department of Defense. The estimate represents the consolidated requirements of the military departments for (a) payments to retired officers and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force; (b) the retainer pay of regular enlisted personnel of the Fleet Reserve of the Navy and Fleet Marine Corps Reserve; and (c) survivors' benefits. The substantial gains to the retired rolls can be directly attributed to the greater number of individuals attaining eligibility for retirement after 20 or more years of active military service. The following tabulation shows the average number of personnel on the rolls during 1967 compared with the estimated numbers for 1968 and 1969.

A supplemental appropriation for 1968 is anticipated for separate transmittal to cover the increased retirement costs authorized by Public Law 90-207.

The supplemental will provide for a 3.7% increase retroactive to the date of entitlement to retired pay for members retiring after November 30, 1966, and before October 1, 1967, as well as a 5.6% increase in the retired pay of those individuals retiring on or after October 1, 1967.

Under the provisions of the retired serviceman's family protection plan, retired service personnel who elect to receive reduced amounts of retired pay are able to provide for monthly payments to be continued to their survivors. The reductions are determined on a basis designed to establish an actuarially sound system. Current appropriations provide only for the net payments to be made each year and the liability for future payments of survivor benefits is unfunded. Administrative expenses of this family protection plan are provided as operation and maintenance costs of the military services. The accumulated difference between reductions in retired pay and actual payments of survivor benefits is indicated in the following table (in thousand of dollars):

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

The operation and maintenance appropriations of the Department of Defense provide funds for the day-to-day cost of operating and maintaining the Armed Forces, including the Reserve Forces, and related support activities of the Department of Defense. Financial requirements for these appropriations are influenced by a variety of factors, the principal of which are force levels, military strength, rates of operational activity, numbers of installations, and quantity and complexity of major equipment (aircraft, ships, missiles, tanks, etc.) in operation. In 1969, these appropriations will also include approximately $1 billion of consumable items, such as repair parts, and others which were previously financed in various procurement appropriations.

With the introduction of more sophisticated and complex equipment into the various weapons systems, greater costs of materiel operation and maintenance are resulting. Funds are included in the 1969 estimates to provide for continuing military operations in Southeast Asia.

Operating forces.—These are the strategic offensive and defensive aircraft and missile forces, based in the United States and at sea, and the general purpose forces of the several military services operating under the control of the various unified and specified commands. The latter includes forces deployed in all parts of the world, such as the troops engaged in Vietnam combat operations; the forces deployed to Europe in keeping with our NATO commitments; the fleets operating in the Pacific, the Atlantic and the Mediterranean; and the back-up contingency forces in the United States. The principal costs involved are the operation of the installations at which these units are based and the operation and maintenance of the equipment they use.

Logistics support.—This includes the supply activities of the various services and of the Defense Supply Agency which procure, store, distribute, and compute requirements for military materiel. These functions are conducted at supply depots and centers, shipyards, inventory control points, procurement offices, and other logistical installations throughout the world. This also covers the depot level maintenance and repair of combat equipment accomplished at service-operated repair facilities, such as shipyards, aircraft repair facilities and depots, and through commercial contractors.

Training support.—The military services provide individual training of officers and enlisted men including recruit training, career training, and specialized training in many skills, such as pilot training. The 1969 estimates include funds to increase the annual production of new pilots. This increase reflects both the need to replace skilled pilots and of manning additional aircraft. The majority of individual training is conducted through resident courses of instruction at the various training bases, service schools, and colleges, although some educational facilities of civilian institutions are used. The operation of the three service academies is also included.

The Department of Defense is testing in 1968 a program to provide vocational counseling and training for potential discharges who do not possess occupational skills for which there is a demand in the civilian labor market. This program will be expanded in 1969, and an estimated 157,000 are planned to receive such training.

There will be continued in 1969 the practice of accepting into the armed services men who would have been previously rejected because of their failure to meet mental or physical standards. Special training, when necessary, will be provided this group to qualify them for military service. This action will broaden the manpower pool and provide more productive members of society, both while on active duty and upon their return to civilian life. Approximately 100,000 men will be accepted under this program in 1969.

Medical support.—Medical care for active and retired military personnel and their dependents is provided by hospitals and clinics operated by the military departments, by other Federal agencies, and by civilian medical facilities.

Servicewide support.—This relates to administrative, communications, and intelligence activities. Administrative activities include headquarters operations, personnel, fiscal, and records management functions conducted on a servicewide basis. Communications support relates primarily to leased circuits, equipments, and facilities. Two defensewide automatic switching systems for voice (AUTOVON) and record (AUTODIN) traffic are being expanded to permit the elimination of smaller networks.

Reserve Forces.—Each of the military services trains reserve units and operates and maintains facilities, such as training centers, air bases, and active duty field training sites for the use of such forces. They also conduct reserve officer training programs.

This appropriation provides the resources to maintain the current combat readiness of Naval forces, which include attack carriers, submarines, amphibious forces, plus anti-submarine and anti-air warfare forces. The composition of the active fleet in 1968 and 1969 will include additional nuclear-powered attack submarines and the full complement of POLARIS submarines. Navy and Marine Corps tactical air capability will be enhanced by continued replacement of older aircraft with F-4 "Phantom" fighters, A-6A "Intruder" all-weather attack aircraft, and A-7 B/E CORSAIR II light attack aircraft.

Complexity of ships and aircraft and their weapons continues to increase, and expanded and improved training programs are required in order to provide the additional trained personnel necessary to operate and maintain the more sophisticated weapons systems. Oceanography, communications, and intelligence programs are also expanding.

Financial requirements for this appropriation continue to be influenced by increased activity rates in Southeast Asia and force structure adjustments. Principal changes in the strategic forces in 1969 include the modernization of the Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missile squadrons. The estimates also reflect the continued phase-out of the older model B-52 heavy bombers.

Additional Back-Up Interceptor Control (BUIC) III sites will become operational as older ground radars are phased out. Tactical forces will be enhanced as the first F-111 aircraft enter the operational inventory during 1969.

Effective in 1969 this appropriation will finance, for the first time, selected materials with a unit cost of less than $1 thousand previously financed from several major procurement appropriations. Concurrently, equipment with a unit cost of $1 thousand or more, previously financed from this appropriation, will become the responsibility of the major procurement appropriations. The net effect of these actions results in an increase of approximately $0.7 billion in the Operation and maintenance appropriation.

¹ Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are principally from sales of surplus U.S. Government property to finance expenses in connection therewith (annual appropriation act); sale of goods and services to individuals, including laundry services and surcharges on commissary sales (10 U.S.C. 2203, 2210, and annual appropriation act); charges for unofficial telephone service (10 U.S.C. 2481) and revenues from private carriers for use of Department of Defense-owned rail cars (10 U.S.C. 2667).

This appropriation finances the immediate Office of the Secretary of Defense, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and agencies of the Department of Defense which operate directly under the control of the Secretary of Defense.

1. Supply operations.—The Defense Supply Agency provides contract administration services for the military departments and common supply and service support to military activities in the continental United States. The agency manages inventories of $2.4 billion for eight material categories: fuel, food, clothing, medical, general, industrial, construction, and electronics supplies. It also manages the Department of Defense-owned idle industrial plant equipment inventory, valued at nearly $1 billion, to secure greater utilization of this equipment. The volume of procurement actions totaled $6.2 billion in 1967, and is expected to exceed $5.4 billion in 1968 and $5.4 billion in 1969. The agency operates eight supply depots and the Defense Logistics Services Center, including the surplus sales office.

The agency is also responsible for the administration and supervision of the Department of Defense-coordinated procurement programs, the Federal catalog program, the Defense materiel utilization program, and the Defense surplus property disposal program.

2. Field operations.—This program activity includes the funds required for the support of the Armed Forces information and education activities of the Department of Defense, and Defense Communications Agency, the Defense Atomic Support Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency, the Defense Contract Audit Agency, and classified activities.

3. Interdepartmental activities.—In 1969, funds are included for the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity in Housing and the Office of the Special Representative for Trade Negotiations.

4. Management.—This covers the civilian salaries and other expenses of the Office of the Secretary of Defense and the Organization of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The U.S. Court of Military Appeals reviews all of the more serious court-martial convictions of military personnel. In 1967 the court docketed 794 cases and released 123 opinions. A gradual increase in the number of cases is anticipated in 1968 and 1969 due to the greater number of men serving in the Armed Forces. The court expects to publish a similar number of opinions in 1968 and 1969 as were released in 1967.

PROCUREMENT

The procurement appropriations of the Department of Defense finance the acquisition of capital equipment, such as aircraft, missiles, ships, combat vehicles, weapons, munitions, and communications; major items for support of the capital equipment when it is in use; the industrial facilities necessary to produce that equipment; and major modification of equipment in inventory where modernization can be achieved without buying new equipment. The capital equipment financed by these appropriations is principally procured from private contractors or produced in Government arsenals, shipyards, and plants. The 1969 program continues the production of modern equipment and weapons in support of United States and allied forces operations in Southeast Asia. The equipment inventories necessary to support conventional as well as strategic warfare missions of armed services will continue to be augmented and modernized. The improving military capability to cope with war threats of any kind anywhere is supported by continuing programs to increase the mobility and firepower of ground forces, strengthen the support capabilities of the tactical air forces, modernize airlift forces, and augment the capabilities of antisubmarine warfare forces.

This appropriation provides major items of combat and support equipment for approved Army forces in performing their assigned mission to meet successfully both nuclear and conventional war requirements. It also provides for the procurement of spares and repair parts not covered in the Army stock fund as well as production engineering, tooling, and facilities in support of current procurement.

In 1969 the Army's direct budget plan totals $6,376 million, as compared to $5,534.9 million and $5,518.3 million for 1967 and 1968, respectively. This plan will be financed from new appropriations, recoupments from previous appropriations, transfers from other accounts, and anticipated reimbursements.

The 1969 program is specifically directed toward providing combat and support equipment and ammunition for U.S. Army and Free World Military Assistance Forces in Southeast Asia, replacing training consumption, and adding to combat essential equipment allowances for Active and Reserve Army Forces. The program also provides inventories of conventional munitions and equipment for sustained combat operations. Increased capabilities will be attainable through the introduction of improved weapons, equipment, and munitions.

1. Aircraft.—The 1969 program contains aircraft which are essential to the combat operation of field forces. To meet the Army's need for battlefield observation, troop movement, medical evacuation, and rapid logistical and tactical support for combat engaged forces, the 1969 program continues production to provide additional quantities of helicopters and fixed-wing aircraft. A new fire support capability will be provided by the initial procurement of the Cheyenne armed helicopter in 1969.

3. Missiles.—This program includes surface-to-air and surface-to-surface missiles. In the former category, continued procurement of Redeye and Chaparral missiles in 1969 will provide frontline combat units with an effective defense against low altitude enemy aircraft. Procurement of improved Hawk missiles and modifications to improve the Nike-Hercules systems are planned for 1969 to provide more effective air defense of CONUS and oversea theaters. The 1969 program contains funds for the continued procurement of Shillelagh missiles to further improve the armor-defeating capability of Army combat elements. TOW, an antitank missile, will be initially procured in 1969. For the Pershing missile system, the Army plans to buy out the improved ground equipment (wheeled) and continue a modification program to permit improved performance in its combat role.

5. Tracked combat vehicles.—This program covers the procurement of tracked combat vehicles, including related repair parts, support materiel, and production base support. The 1969 program replaces forecast SEA losses and continues the improvement of the Army's inventory by procurement of the General Sheridan armored reconnaissance vehicle, the M60 medium tank equipped with the Shillelagh turret, and armored personnel carrier family of vehicles.

6. Weapons and other combat vehicles.—This activity covers all weapons and combat vehicles except tracked combat vehicles. The 1969 program will provide materiel to replace losses in SEA, training consumption, wearout, and obsolescence. Forward defense against aircraft will continue to be improved through the additional 1969 procurement of the Vulcan air defense system.

7. Tactical and support vehicles.—Included in this activity are the unarmored wheeled vehicles which provide surface mobility to the field forces and the worldwide logistical system. Included in the 1969 program, are funds for the continued procurement of tactical and commercial vehicles from ¼ ton through 10 ton capacity.

8. Communications and electronics equipment.—This program provides reliable, rugged and mobile tactical communication equipment to achieve command control over dispersed forces and weapons systems. Also included are funds for strategic communications equipment required for the worldwide Defense Communication system.

9. Other support equipment.—This program includes combat support, construction, generators, and materials handling equipment for Army combat forces in the field.

10. Ammunition.—This activity finances the procurement of ammunition for all Army weapons except missiles.

11. Production-base support.—This activity provides industrial facilities needed for production of end items and components and for production engineering in advance of procurement. It also provides for the layaway of Government-owned plants and equipment at the time production is completed and where it has been established that the facilities will be required in the event of mobilization.

¹ Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are derived principally from cash sales to foreign governments of other aircraft components, and spares and repair parts (22 U.S.C. 2315).

This appropriation finances the procurement of aircraft, missiles and associated support equipment for Navy forces and Marine Air Wings. It also provides funds for modifications to in-service aircraft and missiles, necessary to eliminate safety hazards and enhance operational effectiveness. Drones and major flight and maintenance simulators are also included, as well as spare and repair parts for all end items procured under this appropriation. In addition, funds are included to finance items in support of the planned subsequent year program, which due to production leadtime considerations, must be procured in advance.

1. Combat aircraft.—The 1969 program finances the procurement of carrier-based attack, fighter, and reconnaissance aircraft; land-based antisubmarine patrol aircraft; and helicopters for the Marines' vertical assault mission.

2. Airlift aircraft.—The 1969 program under this activity provides light aircraft for rapidly transporting technical personnel and critical spare parts, and helicopters for search and rescue missions.

3. Trainer aircraft.—The 1969 program provides for the procurement of basic and advance jet trainer aircraft to fulfill training requirements for future Navy pilots.

5. Modification of aircraft.—This activity finances the cost of modifying in-service aircraft to extend their useful life, to increase their capability or improve flight safety.

6. Aircraft spares and repair parts.—This activity finances the procurement of aircraft spares and repair parts required for initial outfitting and the replenishment of reparable items. Consumable items for replenishment requirements, previously financed under this appropriation, are funded by the Navy Stock Fund commencing in 1969.

7. Aircraft support equipment and facilities.—This activity provides for general aircraft industrial facilities, component improvement, and miscellaneous support and production costs.

8. Ballistic missiles.—This activity funds the procurement of fleet ballistic missiles and related support equipment.

9. Other missiles.—The 1969 program provides for the continued procurement of missiles required for air-to-air, air-to-ground and surface-to-air missions, as well as a submarine launched missile for antisubmarine warfare. Aerial targets, including drones, for training and the testing of weapon systems are also financed under this activity.

10. Modification of missiles.—This activity finances the modification of missiles in inventory to assure their maximum effectiveness consistent with current technology.

11. Missiles spares and repair parts.—This activity finances the procurement of spares and repair parts for defective or damaged missiles and aerial targets and for reusable aerial targets.

12. Missile support equipment and facilities.—This activity includes funds for general missile industrial facilities and for the procurement and support of a navigational satellite.

This appropriation finances the construction of new ships and the conversion of existing ships, including all hull, mechanical and electrical equipment, electronics, guns, torpedo and missile launching systems, and communications systems. It also finances procurement of long leadtime items for ships for which authorization will be requested in the 1970 program.

The 1969 program continues the Navy's long-range modernization and replacement program designed to provide the fleet with modern balanced forces which can effectively respond to a wide variety of challenges in supporting our national policies.

1. Fleet ballistic missile ships.—Six ballistic missile submarines will be modernized by conversion to a POSEIDON missile capability to improve our sea-based fleet ballistic missile weapons system. Long leadtime items will also be procured for additional submarine conversions. One submarine tender and one cargo ship will be converted to provide the support and mobile base facilities required by the converted submarines. In addition, conversion of an existing merchant type hull to an especially configured range instrumentation ship will provide a test capability required to support both the POLARIS and POSEIDON missile systems.

2. Other warships.—Seven new antisubmarine warfare ships will be constructed to increase the long range detection and weapon capability of the ASW fleet and to replace older ships. Two nuclear-powered attack submarines will be constructed and advance funding is provided for an additional two submarines. Five DX-type destroyers will be constructed of a new design stressing modern military capabilities, standardization, automated systems, and improved reliability and maintainability.

One guided missile frigate will be modernized to increase fleet anti-air warfare capabilities, and long leadtime items will be procured for three more ships. In addition, long leadtime items will be procured for two additional new design nuclear-powered guided missile ships.

Continued financing is provided to procure long leadtime items for the second of a new design nuclear-powered aircraft carrier.

3. Amphibious ships.—The first of a new design, general-purpose assault ship will be constructed to improve our amphibious assault capabilities. Long leadtime items will also be procured for an additional three ships.

4. Mine warfare and patrol ships.—Ten ocean minesweepers will be converted to continue the program to improve mine warfare capabilities and to replace smaller, slower, and less effective coastal minesweepers. Two motor gunboats and one all-weather patrol boat will be constructed to increase the Navy's capability for patrol, blockade, and surveillance missions.

5. Auxiliaries and craft.—Four fast deployment logistics ships, the first of a new design, will be constructed to provide modern, flexible military sealift forces capable of rapid oversea deployment of tactical ground force unit equipment and supplies.

One destroyer tender and one submarine tender will be constructed. These two ships will furnish mobile facilities for the repair and support of destroyer-type ships and submarines.

This appropriation finances the procurement of major weapons and equipment other than aircraft, missiles, and ships. Such equipments range from the latest electronic sensors and weapons, to update our naval forces, to trucks, training equipment and spare parts. Also included is the cost associated with the installation of ship and shore equipment. Substantial quantities of expendable items, such as air and ship launched ordnance, are programed under this appropriation in support of Southeast Asia operations.

1. Ships support equipment.—This activity finances the procurement and installation of necessary shipboard components, plus the replacement of nuclear cores to support active fleet ship maintenance replacement and modernization, including the ship alteration and improvement program.

2. Communications and electronics equipment.—This activity funds communications and electronics equipment for ships and shore based activities.

3. Aviation support equipment.—This activity funds the procurement of air-dropped ordnance, air electronic control and aircraft ground support equipment. Air-launched ordnance represents 60% of the total program.

4. Ordnance support equipment.—This activity funds the procurement of ship-launched ordnance, antisubmarine warfare ordnance, and Polaris ground support and training equipment. Approximately 40% of this program is for ship gun ammunition requirements.

5. Civil engineering support equipment.—This activity finances the procurement of construction, weight handling, and transportation equipment primarily in support of Navy general purpose forces.

6. Supply support equipment.—Procurement of self-propelled materials handling equipment and automated materials handling systems, required in support of the Navy supply system, are financed within this activity.

7. Personnel and command support equipment.—This activity finances procurement of training equipment, devices and aids, and procurement of industrial shop, photographic, printing, and oceanographic equipment for activities supported by the Chief of Naval Operations, as well as equipment for the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery and fleet headquarters commands.

This appropriation provides the Marine Corps with weapons, ammunition, and related equipments, most of which are programed for use by Marine general purpose forces such as Marine divisions, and tank and amphibious tractor battalions. These equipments provide the military hardware for support of seizure and defense of advanced naval bases, limited war landing operations, and general land warfare using a variety of tactics such as amphibious and vertical envelopment movements. The chief aim in the past few years has been to fund for conduct of the Marine Corps mission in the Vietnam conflict without deteriorating overall readiness. The 1969 program will continue this position. Readiness is maintained at approximately the 1968 level. Seventy-three percent of the 1969 request is for ammunition, primarily for Southeast Asia consumption.

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

The purpose of the programs funded in this title is to provide the Department of Defense with scientific and technological capabilities for the development, test, and improvement of advanced weapon systems and related equipment and techniques. In pursuit of this objective a wide spectrum of investigative and engineering activities is performed, including scientific research of military interest, exploratory and applied technology, design and fabrication of weapons and equipment for the future, and testing of these items to evaluate their military utility. This work is performed in Government laboratories, at universities, by industrial contractors, and by nonprofit organizations.

Appropriations in this title support the research, development, test, and evaluation activities of the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Defense agencies. Research and development related to civil defense responsibilities of the Department of Defense is carried in the separate title, Civil Defense, in this chapter.

The total 1969 budget plan for Defense research, development, test, and evaluation appropriations includes a $616 million increase over the current 1968 plan. Strategic offensive and defensive weapon systems, such as Minuteman, Poseidon, and the Sentinel antiballistic missile program, continue to require a major share of development resources in 1969. Military space systems show growth in 1969, primarily due to the Manned Orbiting Laboratory program increasing to a higher level of activity. Many new developments are among the tactical warfare systems programmed for 1969, including advances in air defense weaponry, new fighter aircraft concepts and subsystems, search and rescue systems, air-to-surface missiles and ordnance, and ground combat mobility and firepower. Included are efforts to increase combat effectiveness of interdiction, counterinfiltration, search and destroy, and pacification missions in Vietnam. Sea warfare capabilities will be enhanced in the future by contract definition of several fleet escort ships and engineering development of a new antisubmarine aircraft in 1969. Logistics and communications continue to receive major attention, with the development of C-5A transport aircraft nearing completion, a light intratheater transport aircraft entering contract definition, development of additional communications satellite terminals, and improvement of tactical communications systems. The Themis program, aimed at establishing new centers of research excellence at the Nation's universities, continues to grow. General supporting programs increase slightly in 1969, reflecting additional refinements accomplished by the transfer of certain support costs previously funded by procurement and operation and maintenance to research, development, test, and evaluation appropriations.

The budget plans and estimated obligations under appropriations in this title for the Army, Navy, Air Force, Defense agencies, and the emergency fund are summarized below (in thousands of dollars):

1. Military sciences.—This activity supports research in the physical, mathematical, environmental, engineering, biomedical, behavioral and social sciences, adding to the store of fundamental scientific knowledge and leading to applications of potential military significance. Examples of phenomena of special interest include crystal growth, plasma dynamics, energy conversion, superconductivity, polymer chemistry, information theory, and sensory physiology. Support for the establishment of new centers of scientific excellence contributing to national security is included in this activity.

The principal support for such organizations as the Naval Research Laboratory, the Air Force Cambridge Research Laboratory, and the Rand Corporation is also provided here. In addition to the amounts directly provided for in this activity, basic and applied research is also performed by industrial contractors supported by certain allowable indirect costs which may be allowed under contracts funded by both the research, development, test, and evaluation and procurement appropriations.

2. Aircraft and related equipment.—This activity funds research, development, test, and evaluation related to airframes, engines, and other installed equipment. New programs in 1969 include concept formulation, and engine, avionics, and weapon subsystem design for a new generation of fighter aircraft, entry into full-scale development of the VSX carrier-based antisubmarine warfare aircraft, and contract definition of a new intratheater transport. The interceptor, bomber, tactical fighter, and reconnaissance versions of the F-111 high-performance aircraft, the C-5A transport, and the Cheyenne armed helicopter near completion of development in 1969.

In addition, the program included improvement of existing aircraft, demonstrator engines leading toward new aircraft, V/STOL technology, early warning and electronic warfare systems, airborne antisubmarine detection systems, and better avionics equipment. Research and development centers, such as the laboratories located at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, are funded here.

3. Missiles and related equipment.—This activity provides for research, development, test, and evaluation of missile systems of all types. Development and improvement of the strategic ballistic missile systems, Poseidon and Minuteman, remain high-priority programs. Accelerated development of the Sentinel antiballistic missile system will be pursued to assure maximum effectiveness of the deployed system. Tactical air defense missile systems, both air-to-air and surface-to-air, will receive increased effort to assure air superiority in all combat situations. The quest for greater accuracy in air-to-surface and surface-to-surface missiles will continue.

In addition to funding contracts with industry in the missile research and development program, this activity is a major source of financial support for the operation of certain test and evaluation facilities, such as the Eastern and Western Test Ranges, the White Sands Missile Range, the Naval Weapons Center at China Lake, and the research and development programs at the Army's Redstone Arsenal.

4. Military astronautics and related equipment.—This activity provides for programs directed toward the improvement of space technology for military purposes and the investigation and development of specific military applications of space vehicles. Work will proceed on the Manned Orbiting Laboratory (MOL), the Titan III launch vehicle, military communication satellites, and improvements in satellite tracking capabilities. Supporting research and development in such areas as bioastronautics, secondary power sources, navigation, guidance, reentry, and propulsion systems will continue. The Air Force Arnold Engineering Development Center is supported under this activity.

5. Ships, small craft, and related equipment.—This activity provides for design of new types of ships and development of shipboard equipment. Funds requested in this activity in 1969 will provide for contract definition of several new fleet escort ships, improvement of surface ship and submarine sonars, exploration of advanced surface craft concepts, and development of navigation systems, command and control equipment, nuclear and nonnuclear propulsion plants, and aircraft catapults and arresting gear. Antisubmarine warfare and river patrol systems continue to receive high priority. A significant portion of the effort at the Naval Ships Research and Development Center is funded under this activity.

6. Ordnance, combat vehicles, and related equipment.—This activity provides for the development, and test evaluation of improved artillery, guns, rocket launchers, mortars, small arms, mines, grenades, torpedoes, depth charges, combat vehicles, and landing craft, as well as exploration and evaluation of new fuzes, propellants, explosives, detonators, dispensers, armor, and propulsion. Systems contributing to increased mobility, improved firepower, and counterinfiltration in limited and unconventional warfare in remote areas continue to receive major attention. The principal support for research and development activities at several Army arsenals and for the Naval Ordnance Laboratory at White Oak, Md., is funded here.

7. Other equipment.—This activity provides for research, development, test and evaluation of equipment not separately provided for under other activities. Examples of the types of equipment developed for the three services are as follows: deep submergence systems for personnel rescue and underwater research, chemical and biological agent detection and protection devices, a new aircraft warning and control system (AWACS), combat clothing, night vision and imaging devices, tactical data processing systems, communication and electronic warfare equipment, improved logistics and materiel handling, mapping and geodetic systems, and oceanographic instrumentation. Much of the support for the research and development effort at the Army Electronic Research and Development Laboratory, the Mitre Corporation, and the Lincoln Laboratories is provided under this activity.

8. Programwide management and support.—For the Army and the Navy, this activity provides for those costs of operation, management and maintenance of research, development, and test facilities which are not distributed directly to other budget activities. For the Air Force it provides for certain costs of central administration such as the Air Force Systems Command headquarters and divisions as well as several large research, development, test, and evaluation installations. Continuing refinement effort similar to that conducted for many years, additional support of research and development previously funded in the procurement and operation and maintenance appropriations is included in the estimates for research, development, test, and evaluation appropriations in 1969.

9. Emergency fund.—The emergency fund enables the Secretary of Defense to support the exploitation of new scientific developments and technological breakthroughs and to provide for other unforeseen contingencies in the research, development, test, and evaluation programs.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

schedules of this title are summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

	1967 actual	1968 estimate	1969 estimate
Regular Forces.....	1,120,472	1,348,735	1,321,300
Reserve Forces.....	30,418	36,149	33,100
Interservice activities.....	9,176	120,140	85,400
Total.....	1,160,066	1,505,024	1,439,800

Most of the appropriations required for the military construction accounts are dependent upon the enactment of authorizing legislation. The details of this legislation have been completed and are being submitted to the Congress for early consideration.

1. Major construction.—This category provides for acquisition of land for and construction of military projects in the United States and overseas as authorized in currently effective military construction acts and the new authorization referred to above. These authorizations include construction projects as defined in Department of Defense Directive 7040.2 where the estimated cost of such construction generally exceeds $25 thousand per project. Under this category the major program elements proposed for 1969 are as follows:

Strategic forces.—Provision has been made for the initial deployment of an antiballistic missile system and for facilities to insure safe and continued operation of strategic warfare systems. In addition, provision has been made for facilities in support of the Poseidon program.

General purpose forces.—Projects in this category support general combat forces including their command organizations, the logistics organizations organic to these forces, and the related logistics and support units which are deployed or deployable as constituent parts of military or naval forces and field organizations. A portion of the program provides facilities which will reduce the vulnerability of aircraft at various oversea locations. Increased pilot training programs require additional facilities for Army, Navy, and Air Force.

Specialized activities.—Funds are provided to support specialized activities primarily relating to the intelligence and security areas. Funds are also included for the U.S. share in support of the joint defense effort by the members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Airlift and sealift.—Additional operational and maintenance facilities are provided for increased effectiveness of the transport aircraft assigned to the tactical forces and the Military Air Transport Command.

Reserve Forces.—The facilities required for the training of the Reserve Forces include: armories, training centers and summer camps, nonarmory facilities such as maintenance shops and warehouses, and aviation facilities such as airfield pavements, maintenance shops and training buildings.

Research and development.—A major portion of the Navy's research construction effort provides for support of the deep oceanographic program. Air Force construction includes items necessary for continued support of the missile and space program. The Army research facility program provides for further refinement of optical tracking techniques and continuation of the research for the NIKE-X program.

Logistics.—Funds are included to provide for the maintenance, overhaul, and repair facility requirements generated by the newer weapon systems and the initial phase of the shipyard modernization program.

Personnel support.—This grouping includes those projects which are not associated with force-related programs and major medical activities. Funds are provided for troop housing and quarters for military personnel, the second increment of cadet barracks at the Military Academy, and additional facilities for recruit training centers.

2. Minor construction.—Provision is made for construction of permanent and temporary projects that are not otherwise authorized by law but which are determined to be urgently required and do not exceed $200 thousand per project for the Regular Forces, and $50 thousand per project for the Reserve Forces. Provision is made in the applicable operation and maintenance appropriations for construction projects as defined in Department of Defense Directive 7040.2 where the estimated cost of such construction is $25 thousand or less per project.

3. Planning.—This provides for necessary planning of military construction projects, including design, standards, criteria, studies, appraisals, and other related activities.

4. Supporting activities.—Provision is made for activities such as the defense access road program and minor land acquisitions.

General and special funds:

FAMILY HOUSING

The Department of Defense Family Housing Management Account (76 Stat. 237) finances all expenses of the military family housing program. ¹ Advances and reimbursements from non-Federal sources are derived principally from collection of rentals from occupants of certain military housing units (69 Stat. 652 and 70 Stat. 1195).

1. Construction.—(a) Construction of new housing.—The construction of 2,000 public quarters at an estimated cost of $42.8 million is proposed in furtherance of the continuing effort to provide adequate family housing for eligible personnel. These units are distributed by service as follows: Army—500, Navy and Marine Corps—750, and Air Force—750. This program, combined with those projects which were funded in prior years but have not been placed under contract as of January 1, 1968, total 13,508 new units to be constructed in the 1968-69 period.

(b) Construction improvements.—Execution of the $16 million 1968 improvement program will be phased over 1968 and 1969. $1.2 million provides for the unforeseen and urgently required projects to be accomplished under the authority of 10 U.S.C. 2674 in 1969.

(c) Planning.—Funds are included in the construction of new housing budget activity to design the 2,000 housing units in the 1969 program. Costs to be incurred for planning future year housing projects and for projects which will not go forward to completion are estimated at $4.7 million.

(d) Rental guarantee payments.—The last of the rental guarantee agreements entered into under the original authority (66 Stat. 622) expired in 1965 and no agreements have been entered into under the existing authority (77 Stat. 326); accordingly, no funds are required in 1969.

2. Operation, maintenance, and debt payment.—(a) Operation.—$188.6 million is required in 1969 for the operation of an estimated 363,792 family housing units (excluding leased units); and $25 million is required in 1969 to lease 10,018 units in both the United States and in foreign countries as part of the program to provide adequate family housing for eligible personnel.

(b) Maintenance of real property.—The cost of maintenance and repair of the 1969 family housing inventory is estimated at $164.1 million. Minor alterations, not to exceed an average of $50 per unit, are funded in this subactivity.

(c) Interest payment.—A total of $77 million is required in 1969 to defray interest charges on the indebtedness assumed to acquire Capehart, Wherry, and surplus commodity housing and for related expenses. New obligational authority of $82.7 million is required in 1969 for reduction of agency indebtedness that was assumed with the acquisition of the Capehart, Wherry, and surplus commodity housing indebtedness.

(d) Mortgage insurance premiums.—Premium payments are required on mortgage insurance provided by the Federal Housing Administration: (1) through the General insurance fund on mortgages assumed by Defense to acquire Capehart and Wherry housing; and (2) on mortgages assumed by active military personnel for housing purchased under the provisions of section 124, Public Law 83-560.

SUPPLEMENTARY PERSONAL SERVICES DATA

Since the bulk of the personal services funded from the Family Housing, Defense, appropriation is on a reimbursable part-time basis, it is not reflected in the foregoing personnel summary. The following supplementary schedule is provided to indicate the man-year equivalent of all the personal services supported by this appropriation and the compensation paid therefor. The full-time positions paid directly from this appropriation are listed in the schedule of personnel compensation provided for this appropriation. The positions partially supported by reimbursement from this appropriation are listed in the schedules of personnel compensation provided for each of the sponsoring Defense appropriations.

MILITARY FAMILY HOUSING INDEBTEDNESS

The following informational schedule shows the status of the indebtedness assumed by Defense to acquire family housing for assignment as public quarters under the authority provided by title VIII of the National Housing Act (Capehart and Wherry housing) and title IV of Public Law 83-765, as amended (surplus commodity housing). Section 606 of the Military Construction Authorization Act, 1968 (Public Law 90-110), provides that the net proceeds from the disposition of excess Department of Defense family housing property, including land and related improvements, shall be transferred to the Defense Family Housing Management Account for the purpose of debt service. If any proceeds from the sale of family housing are realized, they will be used to reduce the agency indebtedness.

This fund finances programs for reducing the losses of military personnel and civilian employees incident to disposition of their one- or two-family dwellings when military installations are closed (80 Stat. 1291). Eligible personnel may be reimbursed for certain losses as a result of sale of their dwellings located at or near military installations which the Department of Defense has, subsequent to November 1, 1964, ordered to be closed in whole or in part, or the Department of Defense may acquire such property. Proceeds from sale or rental of such property are deposited in this fund. The following business-type statements reflect 1968 operations as well as 1969 operations.

1. Warning and detection.—Provides for the operation, maintenance, and continuing development of the nationwide emergency warning system and for the distribution of radiological equipment to develop and maintain an effective detection and monitoring system. The reduction of $1 million is primarily related to the warehousing and maintenance of the radiological equipment.

2. Emergency operations.—Provides for the support of those activities which are required to develop and maintain an optimum capability to perform essential actions in emergency periods to enhance survival probabilities. The decrease of $7.8 million is in the main attributable to a reduction in the training and education and the emergency information programs.

3. Financial assistance to States.—Provides grants to State and local governments to assist them in meeting their responsibilities under the Federal Civil Defense Act of 1950, as amended. The decrease of $1.5 million is related to the survival supplies, equipment and training segment of this program.

4. Management.—Provides for the administrative expenses of the Office of Civil Defense staff; i.e., salaries, travel, and supporting costs for management and administration of the national civil defense program.

1. Shelters.—Provides for the development of a nationwide inventory of fallout shelters and plans for their use in emergency periods to enhance survival probabilities. The increase of $2.2 million is to provide for the continuation of preparation of local community shelter use plans and the professional advisory services on shelter development at the 1968 obligation level.

2. Research and development.—Provides for studies necessary to develop and maintain an effective and efficient national civil defense system. In 1969, emphasis will be continued toward investigations in fallout radiation shielding and low levels of direct effects, development of fire defense systems and improved bases for emergency operations, and analyses of the consequences of various nuclear attack situations and of the effectiveness of alternative civil defense countermeasures in selected localities.

DEFENSE PRODUCTION GUARANTEES

Guarantees are given on loans made by public and private financing institutions by the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Defense Supply Agency to facilitate performance of defense production contracts. When necessary, loans may be purchased by the Government. Administrative expenses are financed from guarantee fees and interest on loans receivable. Funds in excess of guaranteed loan program requirements may be transferred to miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury. Net earnings are retained to purchase loans when required under guarantee commitments and to cover possible future losses (50 U.S.C. app. 2091).

This fund was established in 1961 to finance the central procurement of civil defense materials toward which contributions to the States are authorized on a matching fund basis. The fund is reimbursed for purchases from Office of Civil Defense appropriations and from funds provided by the States (65 Stat. 61).

A transfer of $1 million to Operation and maintenance, Civil Defense, was accomplished in 1967 to reduce the working capital of the fund to a level more consistent with the declining usage of the fund and the remaining unobligated balance is proposed for transfer to Operation and maintenance, Civil Defense in 1969.

Intragovernmental funds:

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE STOCK FUNDS

The Department of Defense stock funds finance the acquisition of inventories of material and supplies for resale and mobilization (10 U.S.C. 2208). These inventories are stocked and sold at designated defense activities worldwide.

Budget program.—Beginning in 1969, as part of a continuing program to improve management of inventories, the stock funds will capitalize inventories of expense-type items formerly financed by appropriated funds and will transfer inventories of investment-type items to procurement appropriations. As a result, inventories are estimated to increase by $2,114 million in 1969 over 1968 as indicated below (in millions of dollars):

Financing the budget program.—Funds for financing the budget program are usually derived from sales to customers. Sales are projected to increase by $2,498 million in 1969 over 1968, while expenditures to replenish stocks increase by $657 million as indicated below (in millions of dollars):

	Gross expenditures
	1967 actual	1968 estimate	1969 estimate
Army stock fund	4,569	4,264	4,103
Navy stock fund	1,606	1,880	2,093

Defense stock fund	4,502	3,620	3,205
Total	12,621	11,794	12,451

Sale of inventory capitalized without cost and reductions to inventory levels will generate an excess working capital balance of $1,500 million which is proposed for transfer to other appropriation accounts.

DOD stock funds are authorized to incur obligations in anticipation of future year business (10 U.S.C. 2210(b)). This is necessary because procurement leadtime on material is greater than the time required to fill and collect for customer orders. Pursuant to this authority, contract authorization of $1,940 million was available at the end of 1967 which decreases to $1,013 million in 1969.

Operating results and financial condition.—Net losses of $202 million and $214 million are forecast for 1968 and 1969 respectively. These losses result largely from disposal and donation of excess and surplus inventory.

Investment (equity) of the U.S. Government at the end of 1969 is estimated at $10,081 million including $19,627 million in inventory and other assets capitalized less $4,365 million in working capital transferred out and a cumulative operating deficit of $5,181 million.

INDUSTRIAL FUNDS

Department of Defense industrial funds finance industrial and commercial type activities on a reimbursable basis (10 U.S.C. 2208). These programs are supported by orders citing the customers' appropriations. Costs are initially financed by the industrial funds' working capital and subsequently billed to customers' appropriations. As of June 30, 1968, industrial fund activities will be reimbursed on a progress payment basis for production costs incurred pursuant to specific orders and for the cost of material inventories which are allocated to specific orders and held in reserve for those orders. Government investment as of June 30, 1969 is estimated at $375 million.

The Army industrial fund is currently used to finance 20 activities engaged in research, development, test, engineering, transportation and traffic management and limited quantity production and major overhaul of weapons, munitions, missiles and other military equipment.

The Navy industrial fund finances 9 shipyards, 34 printing plants, 6 ordnance plants, 7 aircraft overhaul and repair facilities, 7 public works centers, 3 research activities, and the Military Sea Transportation Service. In addition, 10 naval weapons facilities and ammunition depots, 2 Polaris missile facilities and 2 public works activities were added to the industrial fund on July 1, 1967. The cost of goods and services produced in 1968 is expected to increase by $504 million or 16% over 1967. This increase reflects the expanded scope of the industrial fund. An increase of $383 million is expected in 1969 as items previously paid for by the procurement accounts have to be purchased by the industrial fund.

The Air Force industrial fund currently finances 9 printing plants, 34 laundries, the Alaska Communication Service and the Military Airlift Command. The Alaska Communication System has been financed under the industrial fund since October 1, 1967, and will continue to be so financed until it is disposed of. Six Air Force depot activities are scheduled to be placed under industrial fund operations on July 1, 1968. Full-year funding of the Alaska Communication Service and the addition of the maintenance activities is reflected in the forecast increases of $1,620 million from 1968 to 1969 in the cost of goods and services produced.

The Defense industrial fund finances the Defense Clothing and Textile Supply Center and the Defense Commercial Communications Office. Cost increases in 1968 and 1969 are due to further expansion of the two defense-wide automatic switching systems for voice (AUTOVON) and record (AUTODIN) traffic.

In addition to the activities reflected herein, consideration is being given to placing additional Army and Marine Corps material overhaul and repair activities, and certain research and development activities under industrial funds. Since a decision has not been made, these activities are shown in the same manner as in previous budgets.

1. Surveys.—Navigation and flood control studies are made to determine the need and economic justification for proposed water and related land resource developments. Beach erosion control studies are undertaken to determine the need for shore protection and remedial measures at specific localities. Funds are provided in 1969 to continue 99 navigation, 160 flood control, and 10 beach erosion surveys. Seven navigation, 25 flood control, and 2 beach erosion surveys will be initiated.

Comprehensive river basin studies provide for broad consideration of water and related land resource needs of river basins. They are coordinated with the related river basin planning efforts of the Departments of the Interior, and Agriculture and other concerned agencies. Sixteen studies will be carried forward in the following basins:

- | | |
|---|---|
| 1. California region. | 9. North Atlantic region. |
| 2. Columbia-North Pacific region. | 10. Puget Sound area, Wash. |

| 7. Lower Colorado region. | 15. Wabash River, Ind., and Ill. |
| 8. Missouri River Basin. | 16. Willamette River Basin, Oreg. |

Funds are requested to initiate one additional comprehensive study—Great Basin region.

Special studies are made to resolve unique or especially complex water resources problems. Funds are requested to continue nine special studies.

Surveys are made in coordination with Federal, State, and local agencies and interests. They give appropriate consideration to present and future requirements for all beneficial uses of water and related land resources, including navigation, flood control, water supply, irrigation, water quality control, power, recreation, and fish and wildlife conservation.

2. Collection and study of basic data.—Funds are transferred to the Geological Survey for installation, operation, and maintenance of stream gaging stations; to the Weather Bureau for hydrometeorological studies and precipitation stations; and to the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife for preauthorization studies of the effects of proposed projects upon fish and wildlife. The Corps of Engineers participates on a number of engineering and control boards that study and control international streams mutually affecting the United States and Canada. Information about the flood hazard, advice, and assistance are furnished to the States and local governmental agencies, upon their request, and to other Federal agencies for guidance in the management of flood plain areas to assure the best and safest use of such areas.

3. Research and development.—Coastal engineering research and development studies deal with physical phenomena, techniques, basic principles, and remedial or control measures related to shore protection and improvement. The results of these studies are disseminated to interested Federal, State, and local agencies and individuals.

Hydrologic studies include investigations of storms, rainfall, streamflow, sedimentation, and other phenomena to provide basic data used in the design, construction, and operation of water control structures.

Civil works investigations are made to improve procedures for analysis of hydrologic and engineering data, refine design methods, develop better materials and practices for the construction and maintenance of hydraulic structures, and improve procedures used in formulating plans for water resources development. Scientific and technical information centers will acquire published and unpublished literature, prepare and distribute abstracts, technical reviews, and evaluations and answer inquiries for information from scientists and engineers to maintain their knowledge of new developments in their fields.

The Mississippi River Basin model is being utilized to improve operation of the reservoir system in the basin and to study potential flood levels on the lower river. Maintenance of the model will be continued with the funds requested.

Nuclear explosives studies for civil construction are carried out as part of a joint research program with the Atomic Energy Commission. The objective is to develop an engineering capability to use nuclear explosives in construction of public works projects. The Corps of Engineers has primary responsibility for chemical explosive experiments and development of engineering, construction, and cost data.

The International Hydrological Decade (1965–74) is a joint effort by some 100 countries to advance scientific knowledge of water to meet the growing demands for this resource more effectively. The Corps of Engineers component of the U.S. effort will be largely devoted to preparing for and conducting studies relative to the International Field Year on the Great Lakes in cooperation with Canada.

The requested appropriation of $904 million represents a decrease of $64 million compared with the amount appropriated for 1968 and a decrease of $63 million compared with 1967. About 64% of the program will be applied to 47 major projects in amounts of $5 million or more each.

1. Advance engineering and design.—Design studies establish project features and cost estimates required for preparation of contract plans. The funds requested will bring designs and plans for a number of high-priority projects to the stage where they will be ready for construction, and will permit continuation or initiation of planning on other needed projects.

2. Navigation projects.—This activity includes construction of locks, dams, and canals, and improvement of channels and harbors by dredging and by construction of breakwaters, jetties, and dikes. Provision also is made for the construction of small navigation projects not requiring specific congressional authority.

With the funds requested, work will be continued in 1969 on 50 channel and harbor projects, of which 16 will be completed, and on 15 lock, dam, and canal projects, of which two will be completed.

3. Beach erosion control projects.—The Federal Government assists in the construction of works for the restoration and protection against erosion by waves and currents of the shores of the United States and its possessions. Existing law provides for Federal payment of 50% of the cost of beach erosion control works for the protection of non-Federal publicly owned or publicly used shores, and up to 70% of the cost of protection of State and other publicly owned shore parks and conservation areas that meet certain criteria. Small beach erosion control projects not requiring specific congressional authority will be financed from funds appropriated in prior years.

Funds are requested for five continuing beach erosion control projects in 1969. Reimbursements will be made to compensate local interests on four of these continuing projects.

4. Flood control projects.—This activity includes local protection projects and reservoirs for flood control and other purposes, such as water supply, but without power installations. Local protection projects consist of channel improvements, levees, and floodwalls. Provision is made for snagging and clearing work on navigable streams and tributaries when such work is necessary, for emergency bank protection, and for construction of small flood control projects not requiring specific congressional authority.

With the funds requested, work will be continued on 74 local protection projects, of which 15 will be completed, and on 74 reservoir projects, of which seven will be completed in 1969. Six new local protection projects and four new reservoir projects will be initiated as follows:

5. Multiple-purpose projects, including power.—Work will be continued on 31 multiple-purpose projects with power installations, one of which will be completed with 1969 funds.

6. Recreation on completed projects.—Additional public use facilities will be provided at completed projects to accommodate a rapidly increasing number of visitors.

7. Small authorized projects.—Activities in 1969 will be financed from funds appropriated in prior years.

8. Coordination Act studies (Fish and Wildlife Service).—This program provides for detailed studies and reports by the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife to determine the effects on fish and wildlife resources of water-control projects of the Corps of Engineers.

9. Rehabilitation.—Rehabilitation work will be undertaken on existing projects that have deteriorated to the extent that their usefulness has been impaired. Repair of breakwaters, revetments, and piers will be carried out on eight navigation projects and one multiple-purpose project including power.

10. Aquatic plant control.—This program is for the control and progressive eradication of water hyacinths, alligatorweed, Eurasian watermilfoil, and other obnoxious aquatic plant growths from navigable waters, tributaries, connecting channels, and other allied waters of the United States, in the interest of navigation, flood control, drainage, agriculture, fish and wildlife conservation, public health, and related purposes. The authority includes research to develop the most effective and economic control measures.
