The Ryukyu Islands were returned to Japan on May 15, 1972, under the Agreement Between Japan and the United States of America Concerning the Ryukyu Islands and the Daito Islands, which was approved by the U.S. Senate on November 10, 1971, and by the Japanese Diet on December 22, 1971.

In addition to funds appropriated for such purposes, the General fund of the U.S. Civil Administration also was available to assist in the economic and social development of the islands. Its income was received from three wholly owned corporations, from the purchase and resale of petroleum products, and from investment in the Bank of the Ryukyus. The balances remaining in the fund at reversion were transferred from the U.S. Civil Administration to the custody of the U.S. Army Base Command, Okinawa, to meet obligations outstanding against the fund.

Article VI of the Reversion Agreement provided for the transfer of the corporations and certain other U.S. assets to the Government of Japan. The Ryukyu Development Loan Corporation, the Ryukyu Electric Power Corporation, and the Ryukyu Domestic Water Corporation made up a major part of the properties transferred. Under article VII of the agreement, payment of $320 million for these assets will be made by the Government of Japan in agreed installments over a period of 5 years. In March 1972, the U.S. Civil Administration sold its stock in the Bank of the Ryukyus to Okinawan subscribers. The proceeds which amounted to $3 million were remitted to the U.S. Treasury.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) is charged with the administration and enforcement of consumer protection laws concerning dangerous, misbranded, and adulterated foods, drugs, human biologics, medical devices, cosmetics, and man-made sources of radiation.

1. Foods.—FDA is responsible for insuring the safety, quality, and nutritional adequacy of the Nation's food supply. To accomplish this responsibility the Agency reviews industry petitions and publishes tolerances for the safe use of food additives; conducts intramural and extramural research to evaluate the nutritional and safety factors of food and substances in or on food; develops improved analytical methodology to detect and prevent food adulteration; sets standards for classes of food, and defines industry good manufacturing and sanitary practices. To insure cooperation and compliance with the foregoing, the FDA inspects food processing plants, marketing establishments and interstate carriers; analyzes collected samples to verify that foods are safe, wholesome, and properly labeled; and when necessary, takes regulatory action to obtain compliance with the law.

The 1974 request includes funds to enable FDA to continue the planned development of the National Center for Toxicological Research.

2. Drugs and devices.—FDA is charged with insuring that human and animal drugs, human biologics, and medical devices are safe, effective and properly labeled for their intended use. To accomplish this FDA reviews research and manufacturing data to support the safety and efficacy of these products prior to marketing, evaluates literature and experience reports submitted by industry and the medical profession for potential or real safety and efficacy problems, and conducts intramural and extramural research to identify new or confirm suspected problems. FDA also inspects manufacturing firms, reviews labeling, analyzes samples and when necessary takes regulatory action to enforce the legal requirements.

3. Product safety.—FDA utilizes research, surveillance, regulatory actions and voluntary compliance by industry to lessen hazards to the consumer from cosmetics and man-made sources of radiation.

4. Program direction and management services.—This activity provides support for the FDA's executive and administrative functions.

NOTES

Includes $27 thousand in 1974 for activities financed from: Health services delivery, 1972, $27 thousand; 1973, $27 thousand.

Excludes $1,246 thousand in 1974 for activities transferred to (in thousands of dollars):

Office of the Administrator.....	1974	75
National Health Statistics.....		850
Departmental management, O.S.....		321

Comparable amounts for 1972 ($1,325 thousand) and 1973 ($1,341 thousand) are included above.

This appropriation includes activities which focus on planning and demonstrations aimed at improving the Nation's health care delivery system and moderating the cost of care. These are accomplished through the following programs:

1. Health services research and development.—The purpose of The National Center for Health Services Research and Development is to improve the organization, delivery, quality, and financing of health services by stimulating and supporting research, development, demonstrations, and evaluation.

(a) Grants and contracts.—Research and development.—Grants and contracts are awarded to conduct analyses of economic, social, and technological factors which affect the organization, financing, and utilization of health services. In 1974, the emergency medical services (EMS) systems demonstration effort will be supported at an annual level of $15,000 thousand under the general authorities in the Public Health Service Act for research and demonstration.

(b) Direct operations.—This activity provides the staff to perform research and evaluation, monitor grants and contracts, review results, inform the professional community and the general public of significant progress, and identify the next steps in research and development.

2. Comprehensive health planning.—(a) Planning grants.—The Administration will submit legislation to extend and strengthen this program. The basic authorization expires June 30, 1973.

(b) Direct operations.—This activity provides the staff required to direct and administer this program.

3. Regional medical programs.—No extension beyond June 30, 1973, of the regional medical program authorities is being requested.

Over a period of 8 years, the Federal Government, by means of grant awards and direct staff activities, promoted and developed 56 RMP's, regional cooperative arrangements among the Nation's health care providers and institutions. Originally established to upgrade the health care of persons threatened by heart disease, cancer, stroke, kidney disease and related diseases, the RMP's in recent years sought more to improve access to and generally strengthen the health care delivery system.

Despite Federal expenditures in excess of $500 million for these activities, however, there is little evidence that on a nationwide basis the RMP's have materially affected the health care delivery system. Further expenditure of scarce Federal health resources on this program, therefore, cannot be justified on the basis of available evidence.

4. Medical facilities construction.—Over the past 25 years the Federal Government has provided more than $3.7 billion in construction assistance funds to public and nonprofit private entities for the construction of hospitals, public health clinics, and other such institutions. Through the provision of about $1 of Federal matching money for each $3 of State and local money, this program has been a major force in carrying out better than 10,000 medical facility construction projects. In total, the Nation generally is experiencing an overabundance of hospital beds. This excess capacity is a notable factor in driving up the cost of hospital care, and the Administration is committed to bringing such cost increases under control.

For these reasons, the Federal impetus for further medical facility construction is being eliminated. No extension of these authorities, which expire on June 30, 1973, is being requested.

5. Program direction and management services.—This activity provides for overall executive direction, planning, evaluation and administrative management of the health planning and development programs.

Comparable amounts for 1972 ($538 thousand), 1973 ($630 thousand), are included above.

This appropriation includes activities which support the provision of personal health care services directly to Federal beneficiaries or indirectly through project grants. This is accomplished through the following activities:

1. Comprehensive health services.—Bloc grants are made to State health authorities to assist the States in attacking those health problems they consider of most immediate importance. State plans for carrying out these programs must be in accord with the overall plans developed by the State comprehensive health planning agency.

Project grants are awarded to public and nonprofit agencies to provide health services. The projects are directed at two prime underserved areas: (1) urban poverty neighborhoods, and (2) remote rural areas.

Migrant health grants provide primary health care services to migrant agricultural laborers and seasonal farmworkers and their families in order to improve and maintain the level of their health.

Through the direct operations activity professional and technical assistance are provided to States, communities, providers of health services, and medical and health organizations. In addition, staff assistance in the development, strengthening, application, and revision of Medicare standards is provided.

In 1974, nursing home improvement activities will continue to support short-term training with the aim of reaching nursing home professionals and paraprofessionals. Surveyor training efforts will emphasize continuing concern for maintaining and updating the skill level and capacity of surveyors on duty as well as those newly employed. In addition, there will be a more intensive effort to provide technical assistance to States and localities in developing nursing home investigative ombudsman units and in identifying sources of funds for this purpose.

2. Maternal and child health.—This program has as its major goal the provision of health services to mothers and children. Through assistance to States, localities, and nonprofit groups it directs primary attention to: (1) reducing infant mortality and otherwise promoting the health of mothers and children; and (2) locating, diagnosing, and treating children who are suffering from crippling or handicapping illnesses.

Formula grants are made to States for maternal and child health services and crippled children's services. In 1974, funds previously allocated for project grants will be folded into the State formula grants, as specified by the authorizing legislation.

Grants are also made to public or nonprofit institutions of higher learning for training personnel and for research.

3. Family planning.—This activity supports Federal efforts for financing family planning information and services. Family planning services are primarily directed toward low-income women who would otherwise be unable to afford them.

Grants administered will be awarded to State and local health agencies and other public or private nonprofit organizations in all States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam.

4. National health service corps.—This program provides for the assignment of commissioned officers and civil service personnel of the U.S. Public Health Service to medically underserved communities. In 1974, the Corps will provide health services to approximately 177 communities with a total population of approximately 1,770,000 people.

5. National health service scholarship program.—This program authorizes scholarships to students in the health professions in exchange for specified periods of service in the National Health Service Corps or the commissioned corps of the Public Health Service. In 1947, the Administration will submit legislation to increase the authorization level and expand the authorities of the program to permit the scholarship recipients to meet their obligations through a broad range of Federal services.

6. Patient care and special health services.—This program provides direct and contract medical care to the legal beneficiaries of the Public Health Service. Major beneficiary groups are American seamen, coastguardsmen and their dependents, Federal employees' compensation cases, and persons afflicted with leprosy. The largest single category of beneficiary is American seamen.

In 1973, American seamen will comprise about 47% of the inpatient workload in PHS general hospitals. On a reimbursable basis, medical care is also provided to foreign seamen and beneficiaries of other Federal agencies in PHS hospitals, and to Federal employees in PHS health units. In addition, Coast Guard personnel are provided medical and dental services at various Coast Guard locations. The policy of transferring the PHS hospitals to local control will continue to be implemented in 1974. This remains the long-range goal for the PHS hospital system. In addition, partially because of difficulties of recruiting health professionals into the Commissioned Corps, the provision of inpatient services in PHS facilities will be terminated as soon as alternative contractual arrangements can be negotiated and notification given to Congress.

7. Regional office central staff.—This activity supports the regional health directors and their central staffs which are concerned with the coordination and interrelation of the various program activities of HSMHA and the implementation of those programs in the regional offices.

8. Program direction and management services.—This activity provides for overall executive direction, planning, evaluation, and administrative management of the health services delivery programs.

¹ Includes capital outlays as follows: 1972, $4,162 thousand; 1973, $3,446 thousand; 1974, $2,089 thousand.

² Selected resources as of June 30, are as follows: Undelivered orders, 1971, $10,058 thousand (1972 adjustments, $11,876 thousand); 1972, $34,328 thousand; 1973, $34,328 thousand; 1974, $34,328 thousand.

Note.—Excludes $120 thousand in 1974 for activities transferred to: Office of the Administrator, 1974, $79 thousand; Departmental management, Office of the Secretary, 1974, $41 thousand. Comparable amounts for 1972 ($120 thousand); 1973 ($120 thousand); are included above.

1. Disease control.—This program provides facilities and services for the investigation, prevention, and suppression of diseases and occupational injuries by direct development, advancement, and demonstration of knowledge, and techniques, through research and project grants, and through prevention of the introduction of communicable diseases from foreign countries.

(a) Infectious diseases. A number of activities are conducted under this general heading, including research grants for epidemiology, laboratory diagnosis, prevention, and treatment of infectious diseases at the community level. In addition project grants are awarded to States which meet established eligibility criteria. Grants are concentrated in two areas; venereal diseases and immunization against other infectious diseases.

Activities are funded under direct operations that focus on the improvement of the health care system through emphasis on prevention rather than treatment through investigations, surveillance, and control operations. One facet of these activities is the training of State and local health workers in specific control techniques or methodologies. An estimated 10,000 trainees will participate in 435 courses in 1973. In 1974 the training will be provided to State and local health departments and other nonprofit organizations on a reimbursable basis.

(b) Nutritional and chronic diseases. This limited activity will be phased out in 1974 as duplicatory of existing activities in other programs.

(c) Laboratory improvement. The laboratory improvement program is designed to improve and standardize laboratory methodology and through evaluation of techniques, materials, and reagents used in public health laboratories. States are provided consultation and informational services in laboratory techniques.

2. Community environmental management—Grants are made to communities to provide support for demonstration projects for rat control and the control of lead-based paint poisoning in children.

3. Occupational safety and health. Grants are made to public agencies and institutions to provide for standards development research for the protection of the work force. In addition, technical service and assistance to other agencies and to industry to emphasize the preventive aspects of occupational safety and health and the improvement of the productivity and employability of workers are provided. This is accomplished through the development of criteria for standards necessary for the successful implementation of a safe and healthy workplace and training public and private personnel to enforce these standards. In 1974, training programs will be offered on a reimbursable basis.

The Medical facilities guarantee and loan fund was established to enable the Secretary to discharge his responsibilities in issuing guarantees; for payment of interest subsidies on the loans to nonprofit sponsors which are guaranteed; for direct loans to public agencies which are sold and guaranteed; for payment of interest subsidies on direct loans which are sold and guaranteed; and for repurchase of direct loans which have been sold and guaranteed.

In 1974, the Medical facilities guarantee and loan fund is capitalized at $80,000 thousand of which $30,000 thousand, transferred from the Medical facilities construction appropriation in 1972, serves as a revolving fund from which direct loans to public agencies are made. The balance of $50,000 thousand from a direct appropriation in 1972 is for payment of principal and interest on defaulted loans.

Funds for the payment of interest subsidies on direct and guaranteed loans will be transferred from the Medical facilities construction appropriation to the Medical facilities guarantee and loan fund as needed.

1. Grants.—(a) Research.—Funds are provided for regular research grants, cancer research centers, and task forces (including large bowel, bladder, prostate, and pancreas).

(b) Fellowships.—Support will be provided in 1973 and 1974 for those fellowships awarded before January 1973 that have continuing commitments.

(c) Training.—Graduate and clinical cancer training grants provide support in the various fields related to cancer research. Support will be provided in 1973 and 1974 for those grants awarded prior to January 1973 that have continuing commitments.

2. Direct operations.—(a) Laboratory and clinical research.—Research is conducted in cancer biology, immunology, and clinical research through research contracts and in-house activities. Studies are made concerning the transformation of normal cells into malignant cells, including the immune aspects of cancer growth, and studies to improve the early diagnosis of cancer in patients.

(b) Collaborative research and development.—Research is conducted in the area of cause and prevention as well as in the treatment of cancer. Also included is research under several task forces including breast and lung. The research in this activity is conducted through targeted programs utilizing research contracts, as well as investigations carried on directly in Government laboratories and clinical facilities. The programs are focused on the causes of cancers and their occurrence patterns and prevention, as well as the best methods of treating cancer through chemotherapy and the problems of combining drugs with the other therapy modalities of surgery, immunotherapy, and radiotherapy.

3. Construction.—The construction program is supported through both grants and contracts. The intent of this program is to provide funds for additional physical resources for the expanding cancer research program. This will be accomplished primarily through the establishment and upgrading of cancer research centers.

4. Cancer control.—The purpose of this activity is to bridge the gap between the discovery of effective research findings and their application in the practice of medicine and public health. This will be accomplished by supporting specialized demonstration activities, including education and training programs.

1. Grants.—(a) Research.—Research grants support fundamental clinical and applied research studies in such areas as dental caries, periodontal disease, oral-facial growth, and development and dental restorative materials. Support is furnished for studies designed to advance scientific frontiers and exploit emerging research opportunities including: (1) investigation of the interplay of host, dietary, and microbiotic factors in dental caries; (2) development of more effective therapeutic and preventive measures in periodontal disease; (3) development of treatment procedures and determination of preventive measures for oral-facial anomalies; and (4) work on the immediate problems of dental treatment through development of new and improved restorative materials and clinical methods.

(b) Fellowships.—Funds for fellowships are used for support of clinical and basic research training. Support will be provided in 1973 and 1974 for those fellowships awarded before January 1973 that have continuing commitments.

(c) Training.—Training funds will be used to provide continuing support for grants awarded before January 1973 that have continuing commitments.

2. Direct operations.—(a) Laboratory and clinical research.—Laboratory and clinical research studies conducted in Institute facilities are concerned with the causes, treatment, control, and prevention of such dental diseases and disorders as caries, periodontal disease, oral-facial anomalies, and oral cancer. Three primary approaches are used: (1) basic research directed at the acquisition of new knowledge as a means of solving dental health problems; (2) field studies and clinical trials of new therapeutic and prevention concepts coming out of basic research; and (3) further studies on the definition and distribution of oral-facial diseases and disorders on an epidemiologic or geographic basis.

NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF CHILD HEALTH AND HUMAN DEVELOPMENT—Continued

2. Direct operations.—(a) Laboratory and clinical research.—The laboratories of this institute conduct research in five major program areas of child health and human development: Reproduction and population research includes research in reproductive biology, endocrinology, and ecology; perinatal biology and infant mortality includes research relating to maternal-child interactions, maturation of motor and behavioral systems, nutrition and development; growth and development includes research in the areas of neurophysiology, neurochemistry, and nutrition; aging research includes research in cellular biology, biochemistry, physiology and psychological development; mental retardation includes biochemical, neurophysiological, and behavioral research.

(b) Research and development contracts.—The research contract activity supplements and complements the research grant and intramural research programs in the major areas of interest—population and reproduction, perinatal biology and infant mortality, growth and development, mental retardation, and aging research. The research supported is usually institute-initiated and is directed toward the gap areas in existing research programs, or to the expansion of current studies of either the intramural program or the research grant program.

(c) Biometry, epidemiology and field studies.—This activity supports scientific staff in planning and conducting studies dealing with the incidence, distribution and control of health problems in certain populations. It collects and analyzes program statistics and executes statistical studies for use in program planning, development, and evaluation. Additionally, this activity supports the development of more effective and reliable means for measuring health problems and evaluating scientific programs.

1. Grants.—(a) Research.—Research grant programs supported by the National Eye Institute are focused on the development of new knowledge for the prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of visual disorders. Projects range from basic studies of the visual process to the clinical application of new knowledge acquired in the laboratory. Glaucoma, retinal diseases, diabetic retinopathy, disorders of the cornea, cataract, and infectious diseases of the eye are among the disease categories undergoing intensive investigation. Funds are also provided for vision clinical research centers and cooperative studies involving numerous investigators and many different disciplines.

(b) Fellowships.—National Eye Institute fellowship awards provide advanced research training to individual investigators working on problems of visual health. Support will be provided in 1973 and 1974 for those fellowships awarded before January 1973 that have continuing commitments.

(c) Training.—Training grant programs provide advanced research training opportunities for laboratory and clinical investigators, ophthalmologists, and optometrists who plan to pursue research and academic careers in the field of vision. Support will be provided in 1973 and 1974 for those grants awarded prior to January 1973 that have continuing commitments.

2. Direct operations.—(a) Laboratory and clinical research.—This activity supports laboratory and clinical investigations performed by staff of the National Eye Institute. Investigators representing a wide variety of scientific disciplines are working to increase our knowledge and understanding of glaucoma, retinal disorders, inflammatory diseases of the eye, embryology of the retina and cornea, cataract, and the coding of visual information from the eye to the brain. A close association between the laboratory and clinic facilitates the rapid translation of research findings to the care of eye patients.

(b) Research and development contracts.—This activity supports research contracts with universities, other Federal agencies, and industrial research organizations for projects that offer high probability of rapid payoff and require close direction by Institute staff. The goals of this research are to improve the diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of glaucoma, retinal diseases, and corneal disorders.

(c) Biometry, epidemiology, and field studies.—This activity constitutes a program for the collection and analysis of data on the incidence and prevalence of vision disorders in selected population groups, and for the study of environmental and hereditary factors in the etiology of eye disease. The program also provides biometric and epidemiologic support to intramural and collaborative programs, including the planning and monitoring of clinical trials to evaluate the efficacy of various regimens in the treatment of eye diseases.

The programs administered by the Division of Research Resources provide for the development of specialized research settings for use by grantees and contractors of the NIH categorical programs in the generation of new knowledge to aid the general progress of biomedical science in the treatment of human disease and disability.

The research resources programs include: (a) general clinical research centers which are located in most of the Nation's leading teaching hospitals and make extensive, controlled studies of human patients possible; (b) the biotechnology resources which bring powerful instrumentation and physical sciences expertise within reach of the biomedical scientist; (c) the animal resources which give investigators access to expertly maintained animal colonies, including rare and often unique animals, for those studies which cannot realistically be undertaken in humans, and provide support for studies directed to enhancing the usefulness of animal models for research, general improvement of management and care for animals used in biomedical research; and (d) the general research support program.

The general research support program, included in this appropriation in 1974 but funded in prior years by transfers from the National Institutes of Health categorical institutes and the National Institute of Mental Health,

³ The 1973 decline in student assistance obligations is due in part to technical adjustments in advance obligational authority.

1. Health professions.—The objective of increasing the supply of professional health manpower is pursued by providing financial assistance to health professions institutions and their students. This assistance is provided through five mechanisms:

(a) Institutional assistance.—This support is provided through several programs. Capitation grants are awarded on a formula basis to health professions schools in order to strengthen their base of financial support. Special project grants supply broad-range assistance to schools with potential to increase enrollments as well as enabling schools to experiment with programs designed to increase the quality of trained personnel. The numbers of schools receiving such support are:

Financial distress grants help alleviate the difficulties of schools in serious financial straits. Conversion grants are awarded to 2-year schools that desire to become degree-granting institutions.

(b) Student assistance.—Health professions loans enable deserving but financially needy students to pursue their education. Loans are awarded to students who, in the judgment of the schools, have exceptional financial need. The numbers of recipients are:

Total	20,365	16,750	10,886	27,000	29,250	29,000

In 1974 scholarships will be available to those health professions students who previously had been recipients of such scholarships. A new program of scholarships will be available to students in return for a commitment to Federal health service. Funds for this program are included under the appropriation Health services delivery.

(c) Construction assistance.—In 1974, construction assistance will be in the form of interest subsidy payments on guaranteed loans, a program begun in 1972.

(d) Educational assistance.—This subactivity includes grants to medical residency programs oriented towards the practice of family medicine. In 1972 and 1973, 52 family medicine programs were supported.

(e) Dental health.—These programs are directed toward increasing and improving the dental manpower supply, expediting the prevention and control of dental diseases and provision of high quality dental services through the improvement of delivery systems.

(f) Direct operations.—This activity provides for staff operations for the preceding activities other than Dental health.

2. Nursing.—Financial assistance is provided to nursing institutions and students through several activities.

(a) Special projects for the improvement of nurse training provide the impetus for schools to initiate new methods in nursing education designed to improve the quality and increase the number of nurses available in the Nation.

(b) Nurse loans and scholarships encourage and assist qualified young people with serious financial need to undertake education for nursing. In 1974 scholarships will be available to those nursing students who were prior recipients of such scholarships.

(c) In 1974, construction assistance will be in the form of interest subsidy payments on guaranteed loans, a program begun in 1972.

3. Public health.—For several years the Federal Government has funded a limited program of institutional support and student assistance for the Nation's 18 schools of public health. During the 1970-71 academic year, these institutional support awards amounted, on the average, to less than one-fifth of those institutions' total expenditures. In 1974 the program of categorical institutional and student support will be phased out. The schools will continue to receive special project grant assistance under the educational initiative awards authorities of the Comprehensive Health Manpower Training Act, as well as Federal funds from other programs. The majority of the public health schools are public institutions that are in a position to turn to State and local governments for such additional public support as may be essential.

4. Allied health.—Since 1967 Federal funds have been provided on a very selective basis to upgrade and expand the curricula and support teacher training and development in the allied health professions. Federal support has been small relative to State, local and private spending in allied health. Also, less than one-third of the more than 3,200 allied health training programs in more than 1,200 junior and senior colleges were supported. The substantial growth in the allied health field in recent years has occurred largely without the impetus of Federal funding support. For these reasons, the categorical program of allied health support will not be funded in 1974. Certain of the schools will continue to receive limited special project grant assistance under the flexible educational initiative awards authorities of the Comprehensive Health Manpower Training Act.

5. Special educational programs.—This activity assists the disadvantaged and minority groups to obtain better access to health education. Awards are also targeted toward achievement of special national health manpower goals, such as linking training efforts with service in the establishment of area health education centers (AHEC), training of physician's assistants, and aid to minority health education. Emphasis in these programs will be on primary care.

6. Program direction and manpower analysis.—These funds are for the administration at the Bureau of Health Manpower Education which guides, supports, plans, and evaluates health manpower programs; designs proposals for new or revised programs; coordinates improved manpower data gathering, statistical and reporting activities; and maintains an inventory of health manpower educational programs.

The National Library of Medicine (NLM) is a resource for biomedical literature. It supplies biomedical information to health professionals for the treatment and prevention of disease. The NLM also explores ways in which technological advances can be applied to organizing and making available biomedical information.

The following is a description of individual activities of the NLM:

1. Medical library assistance.—The NLM provides grant and contract support under the Medical Library Assistance Act. Funds are used to train personnel for medical libraries; to provide analysis and documentation of major advances in the health sciences; to produce more effective means of storage, retrieval, and transmission of the constantly growing mass of biomedical information; to establish, improve, or expand the basic resources and services of local health science libraries; to sustain the operations of 10 major regional medical libraries; to assist in the preparation and publication of secondary tools such as abstracts and bibliographies, as well as monographs and translations, that repackage biomedical information to make it more accessible by health scientists and practitioners.

2. Direct operations.—This includes the following activities:

(a) Lister Hill National Center for Biomedical Communications.—The center applies communications and computer technology to the improvement of health care delivery, medical education, and biomedical research. It first determines areas of high priority need, then selects appropriate technologies with which to develop experimental or pilot services. Those services that appear to satisfy the criteria of utility, cost-effectiveness, and acceptance of costs by the consumer may be incorporated into an operational biomedical communications network.

(b) National Medical Audiovisual Center.—The audiovisual center administers programs aimed at improving the quality and increasing the use of biomedical audiovisuals.

(c) Library operations.—This activity provides for acquiring and maintaining the archival and reference collection of world biomedical literature. Bibliographic, reference, and loan services are made available through a national network of regional and local medical libraries.

(d) Toxicology information.—This activity provides funds for developing and operating a computer-based information storage and retrieval system concerning the health effects of chemical compounds on man and his environment. It also issues publications and other information services for other Federal agencies, universities, and industrial organizations.

(e) Review and approval of grants and program direction.—These activities provide the overall scientific and administrative management of programs.

The scientific activities overseas/special foreign currency program is supported by foreign currencies owned by the United States which have been determined by the Treasury to be in excess of normal U.S. needs. Authorization for these activities is given by the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 and the International Health Research Act of 1960.

The general objective of this program is to support health research and research related activities overseas that are within the program interests of the Department's health agencies and of mutual interest to the host country, its institutions, and its scientists. Areas of research include: the improvement of the organization and delivery of health services; environmental health; nutrition; manpower development; population and family planning; disease prevention and control; food and drug consumer protection; biomedical research and health science communications.

For 1974 emphasis will continue on matching high priority U.S. health needs with salient areas of concern in the host countries in order to achieve domestic goals and also promote U.S. foreign policy.

Title VII, part C of Public Health Service Act established a revolving fund from which health professions schools could borrow in order to provide loans to their students. Public Law 89-751, the Allied Health Professions Personnel Training Act of 1966, amended the Public Health Service Act to authorize the Federal Government to pay the difference between the interest paid by students to the schools and the interest payable by the schools to the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) and the Treasury.

In 1974, provisions are made for the following Federal payments: $129 thousand to GNMA, which represents the difference between the 5.25% interest rate earned by the student loan paper (promissory notes) and the 6.38% rate paid by GNMA on the $11,459 thousand worth of paper (participation certificates) held by the public; $602 thousand to GNMA which represents the 5.25% interest due on $11,459 thousand worth of paper held by the public; $1,169 thousand to the U.S. Treasury on the difference between the U.S. Treasury interest rate and that paid by the schools on $18,710 thousand loaned to the schools.

In addition $350 thousand will be paid to health professions schools for loan cancellations under the Public Health Service Act, section 744(b). These loans are canceled by either the death or permanent and total disability of the borrower or the borrower's willingness to serve in an area designated by the Secretary. ² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Undelivered orders, 1971, $4,752 thousand; 1972, $4,874 thousand; 1973, $4,874 thousand; 1974, $4,874 thousand.

The NIH Management Fund was established to facilitate the conduct of NIH operations financed by two or more appropriations. Fund activities are financed primarily from advances and reimbursements from the several institutes. Formulas for determining each institute's contribution reflect usage of services provided by the fund. Taken into consideration are such factors as the number of activated beds in the Clinical Center, number of laboratory workers, total personnel, and dollar level of grants and direct research funds obligated by the institute. A small portion of the funds comes from reimbursements from outside sources, and from other Government agencies.

The centralized organizations of the National Institutes of Health provide supporting services to all programs as follows:

1. Computer services provides a central scientific research and computational resource in support of the NIH programs. The Division plans and conducts an interdisciplinary research and development program in which the concepts and methods of computer science, engineering and mathematics are applied to biomedical problems.

2. Research supporting services provides the central administration and operation of services for the conduct of research activities such as providing laboratory animals, culture media, and glassware; design and fabrication of laboratory instrumentation; operating the NIH medical reference library including the translation of medical literature; scientific photography and medical arts; and environmental engineering services.

3. Engineering services provides engineering, architectural, craft, and labor services required for the: (1) operation and maintenance of the NIH facilities; (2) planning of facilities and improvements; (3) administration and inspection of construction performed under direct contract; and (4) liaison and inspection of direct construction projects administered by either the Facilities Engineering and Construction Agency, DHEW, or the Public Buildings Service, GSA.

4. Clinical services provides facilities and services, other than physician care, for integrated operation of the 516-bed clinical research facility that services nine institutes conducting clinical investigations. In 1972, clinical services were provided for 114,943 inpatient days and for 64,655 outpatient visits in support of the clinical research projects of the nine institutes.

5. Grant review and approval provides staff support services in formulating NIH grant and award policies and procedures; assigns applications to the appropriate bureau of the Public Health Service; assigns applications within NIH to institutes and divisions and to initial review groups; and provides for the scientific review of research grant applications by study sections and review committees; conducts negotiations with grantee institutions; and collects, analyzes, and evaluates management and program data needed in the management of the extramural programs.

6. Administrative services include plant and office services, such as cleaning of space; mail, messenger, telephone and other communication services; operation and maintenance of motor vehicles; guards, firefighting, and other plant protection and safety services; and procurement and supply management.

The NIH Service and supply fund provides a single means for consolidated financing and accounting of business-type operations involving the sale of services and commodities to customers. Public Law 170, 83d Congress (67 Stat. 254) increased the capitalization of the fund as follows: Service and supply fund: For additional working capital for the Service and supply fund, created by title II of the act of July 3, 1945 (42 U.S.C. 231), not to exceed $200 thousand to be derived by transfer from such other funds appropriated in this act to the NIH as the Surgeon General may determine to remain available until expended: Provided that any stocks of supplies and equipment of the PHS related to services financed under this fund may also be used to capitalize said fund.

There are four categorical program classifications: administrative services, data processing services, instrumentation, and research animals. Combined, these activities rendered services or sold commodities to the institutes/divisions of NIH at a $25,185 thousand level in 1972. It is expected that the level will be $31,546 thousand in 1973 and increase to $35.1 million in 1974. Accounting and other administrative costs applicable to the institutes were added to the Service and supply fund on a reimbursable basis during 1972. This activity increased administrative services by approximately $3.4 million in 1972. Studies of all activities for this purpose will continue in 1973.

The following activities are carried out under the fund:

Administrative services.—These services include the sale of commodities from inventory totaling $8,212 thousand, printing and reproduction services amounting to $1,610 thousand and approximately $7,213 thousand of other services. The National Institutes of Health maintains a supply of scientific and general use materials and supplies, alteration and construction material, linens and special equipment. The printing and reproduction branch provides printing, distribution, and related services. Its printing plant is equipped to produce brochures as well as ordinary administrative materials.

Data processing services.—This central facility is expected to provide data systems design and consultation, key punching, EAM processing, computer programming and computer processing services to institutes/divisions of NIH at an estimated $13,781 thousand level in 1974.

Instrumentation.—The biomedical instrumentation and engineering branch maintains, repairs, and fabricates scientific laboratory apparatus and equipment for use in the research laboratories at NIH: There is also a specialized inventory of materials used in the development of the scientific equipment which is part of the services provided by the shops.

Research animals.—The NIH animal facilities provide small and large research animals to the research laboratories. The facilities include breeding, holding and conditioning facilities for mice, rats, guinea pigs, rabbits, hamsters, dogs, cats, primates, and ungulate animals. Bleeding services are also provided.

Operating results.—The activities financed under the fund operated at an income-expense ratio of .99 to 1 in 1972. The cash position of the fund remains in a favorable position with the collection of receivables, in most instances, on a monthly basis. Inventories maintained a stable position in relation to increased sales. Rate changes were established for 1973 providing more equitable charges to the institutes/divisions.

Beginning in 1974, most of the programs previously funded under the Elementary and secondary education appropriation will be absorbed by the new special education revenue sharing proposal to be transmitted to the Congress. Under special education revenue sharing, States and localities will have greater flexibility in the use of education appropriations and will be able to continue projects and programs such as those previously budgeted for separately under this appropriation.

1. Educationally deprived children.—Grants are made to local educational agencies to provide supplemental services for children from low-income families. Grants are also made to State agencies for handicapped children, dependent and neglected children, and juvenile delinquents in State institutions. In 1974, this program will be absorbed by special education revenue sharing.

2. Supplementary services.—Grants were made to State and local educational agencies for developing programs which serve as models for improving and supplementing the regular school curriculum and programs designed to improve testing and guidance and counseling services in public and private elementary and secondary schools. In 1974, this program will be absorbed by special education revenue sharing.

3. Strengthening State departments of education.—Grants were made to stimulate and assist States in strengthening the leadership resources of their education agencies by assisting them in the establishment and improvement of programs to identify and meet their educational needs. This program is being terminated in 1974.

4. Bilingual education.—Grants are made under title VII, ESEA to achieve comprehensive curriculum reform in areas of high concentrations of non-English speaking children. In 1973, this program is shown under the Educational development appropriation.

5. Follow Through.—This is an experimental, compensatory education program designed to develop and test new ways to educate disadvantaged children in the early primary grades. The parents, the community and the resources at the school are brought together in programs to meet the child's instructional, physical and psychosocial needs. In 1973, funds for this program will be requested as part of a budget amendment shown under the appropriation for Educational development and included in Part III of this volume.

1. Maintenance and operations.—Payments are made to assist in the operation of schools in areas where enrollments are affected by Federal activities. In 1973 payments were based on over 940,000 federally connected children. In addition, the full cost of education is provided for children residing on Federal property where no State or local educational agency is able, because of State law or for other reasons, to provide suitable free public education to such children. For 1974, appropriation language is included which provides for the support of students whose parents both live and work on Federal property and whose education is furnished by a Federal agency. Category "A" students will be provided for as a part of special education revenue sharing. Federal assistance for category "B" students—whose parents usually do not live on Federal property and therefore contribute to the support of local schools—will be terminated in 1974.

2. Construction.—Payments are made to assist in the construction of schools in areas where enrollments are affected by Federal activities. From 1951 through 1973, $1,435 million has been appropriated for this program aiding in the construction of over 69,000 classrooms to house about 2 million pupils in the 50 States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and Wake Island. In 1973 and 1974, appropriation language is proposed to fund local agencies that have been unfunded in recent years, that have the most pressing construction needs largely as a result of increased military activity and housing, and that provide assistance for children residing on Indian lands.

The Education Amendments of 1972 authorized an emergency school aid act for the purpose of providing financial assistance (1) to meet the special needs incident to the elimination of minority group segregation and discrimination among students and faculty in elementary and secondary schools; (2) to encourage the voluntary elimination, reduction, or prevention of minority group isolation in elementary and secondary schools with substantial proportions of minority group students; and (3) to aid school children in overcoming the educational disadvantages of minority group isolation.

Funds made available in the 1973 supplemental appropriation bill to implement the new law will be used to support a limited number of projects for the rest of 1973. The remaining appropriated amounts will be obligated in 1973 for projects covering the 1973-74 school year. In the interim, the Administration plans to resubmit the proposed Equal Educational Opportunities Act, which provides for the more effective use of these desegregation funds.

The new activities authorized under the Emergency School Aid Act are as described below.

1. Special projects.—(a) Metropolitan area projects.—Five percent of the amounts appropriated for the Emergency School Aid Act are reserved for assisting local education agencies.

(b) Bilingual education projects.—From the amount appropriated for the Emergency School Aid Act, at least 4% is reserved to make grants to develop and implement curricula designed to meet the special education needs of minority group children.

(c) Educational television.—Projects are supported to develop and produce children's television programs consistent with the purposes of the Emergency School Aid Act.

(d) Special programs and projects.—Local education agencies and public organizations are assisted in conducting activities which (1) are otherwise authorized by the Emergency School Aid Act, and (2) promise to make substantial progress toward achieving the purposes of the Emergency School Aid Act.

(e) Evaluation.—Not more than 1% appropriated for the Emergency School Aid Act is reserved to make grants to evaluate programs assisted under this authority.

2. State apportionment.—After reserving funds to carry out the activities (a) through (e) above, 82% of the amount appropriated for the Emergency School Aid Act remains available to be apportioned among the States by allotting to each State $75 thousand plus an amount based upon its relative number of minority group children, each State being guaranteed a minimum of $100 thousand.

(a) Pilot programs.—From the amount apportioned among the States, an amount equal to not more than 15% of the amount appropriated is reserved for this activity.

(b) Special programs and projects.—From the amount apportioned among the States, an amount equal to not more than 8% of the amount appropriated is reserved for this purpose.

(c) General grants to local educational agencies.—The remaining funds of those apportioned among the States are available for grants directly to eligible local education agencies to meet special problems incident to desegregation.

3. Training and advisory services (Civil Rights Act).—The Office of Education makes grants and contracts to render technical assistance in the preparation, adoption, and implementation of plans for the desegregation of public schools, to provide services and training for people to deal effectively with special educational problems occasioned by desegregation.

4. Temporary emergency school assistance program.—This program will be discontinued on January 31, 1973.

Support in 1974 for adult education special projects and teacher training activities, vocational education curriculum development, career education, and the Commissioner's discretionary portion of the vocational innovation and research programs will remain under this appropriation.

Note.—Excludes $15,038,000 in 1974 for activities transferred to: Salaries and expenses, $38 thousand; Postsecondary innovation, $15,000 thousand; comparable amounts for 1972 ($38 thousand) and 1973 ($10,038 thousand) are included above.

The Education Amendments of 1972 authorized substantial reforms in Federal assistance to higher education.

The principal changes reflected in this budget are in the area of student assistance where substantial progress has been made toward assuring every person the opportunity of pursuing some form of postsecondary education regardless of his financial need. Part III of this Appendix includes a budget amendment to provide 1973 funds for certain higher education programs not included in the 1973 supplemental appropriation bill.

1. Student assistance.—The major element of the new federal student assistance program is the basic educational opportunity grant. This new form of assistance authorized by the Education Amendments of 1972 makes any student eligible for a grant of $1,400 less whatever amount he and his family may reasonably be expected to contribute. The amount of the family and student contribution is determined annually through a needs analysis system which will be published in the Federal Register and submitted to the Congress for their review and approval. The system must be submitted to Congress by February 1 of each year and final version—upon which students can determine their basic grant—must be published by May 1 of each year. Under the law no student may receive in the form of a grant more than one-half of the cost of his education.

Estimates of students are preliminary and are contingent upon the specific needs analysis test to be approved by Congress. Individual student grants will range from $200 to $1,400.

To supplement basic educational opportunity grants, funds have been requested in the budget to continue the college work-study program at the 1972 level and to expand the guaranteed student loan program. No funds are requested for supplemental opportunity grants or for Federal capital contributions to national direct student loan funds. The national direct student loan program will continue to make new loans each year as repayments, estimated at $150,000,000 in 1974 and $160,000,000 in 1975, on previous loans are used to finance new loans. It is expected that with full funding of the basic grant program as requested in the 1974 budget, availability of work-study jobs and direct student loans, and the increased availability of federally insured loans—augmented by a newly authorized secondary market mechanism—sufficient funds will be available to meet student needs.

Number of students receiving assistance:	1971-72	1972-73	1973-74	1974-75
Basic opportunity grants	-----	-----	¹ 1,577,000	1,577,000

Work-study jobs	545,000	560,000	¹ 545,000	545,000
Direct loans	614,000	624,500	² 301,500	² 259,000
Subsidized insured loans	1,256,000	1,256,000	1,533,000	³ 1,673,000

² Assumes no new appropriation for capital contribution, but $23,600 thousand appropriated in 1973, would be used during academic year 1973-74.
³ Reflects anticipated 1975 appropriation.

2. Special programs for the disadvantaged.—These programs identify youths with exceptional potential for postsecondary education, publicize available forms of financial aid, motivate high school students whose academic potential may not be obvious, and provide remedial and other services for postsecondary students to help them complete and benefit from their education.

As authorized by the Education Amendments of 1972, the administration of the talent search, upward bound, and special services programs is being consolidated. At the same time the scope of these programs is being broadened to encompass other forms of postsecondary education. In the past they were oriented primarily toward college.

Number of disadvantaged students served	Academic year
	1971-72	1972-73	1973-74	1974-75
-----	212,200	239,900	¹ 264,000	278,000

3. Institutional assistance.—For developing institutions, the 1973 level is almost double that of the previous year. This amount is included in a budget amendment in Part III of this Appendix. This increase will be used to fund grants to selected developing institutions to accelerate their progress toward fully developed status. All institutions participating in this new thrust will be expected to have developed an operational management information and planning system in order to strengthen institutional administration by the end of the 3 to 5 year grant period. The 1974 request continues the 1973 level.

4. College personnel development.—In 1974, the requested funds under this activity include $5,806 thousand to permit veterans to resume college teacher fellowships interrupted by their service, $750 thousand for fellowships for the disadvantaged, an effort previously funded by the Office of Economic Opportunity, and $500 thousand for Allen J. Ellender fellowships.

1. Education professions development.—(a) Teacher Corps.—This activity is directed toward improving educational opportunities for children of low-income families by improving the quality of programs of teacher education for both certified teachers and inexperienced teacher interns. In 1974, about 3,200 continuing participants and 1,700 new participants will be supported. A portion of the request will be directed toward improving bilingual and Indian education.

(b) State grants.—This program was discontinued in 1973 because the teacher shortage has been overcome.

(c) Elementary and secondary development.—These activities include teacher training programs concentrating on specific populations and/or subjects in which teacher deficiencies have been recognized, and also include personnel development activities to strengthen specific skills of existing personnel through training and to introduce new research and development products to local and

State education agencies. Low-income students are targeted groups. Both the urban-rural and the career opportunities programs encourage meaningful participation of parents and the community in the educational process. The urban-rural program involves 36 sites training approximately 6,500 educational personnel in 1973 and 1974. The career opportunities program will train about 8,000 participants in 1973 and 1974.

(d) Vocational education.—This activity supports State and local education agencies and institutions of higher education in strengthening their efforts to recruit and train individuals for career and vocational education. In 1973, the State systems grant program, which is used to institute statewide programs in vocational education, provides a minimum of $50 thousand to each State; the fellowship program will train 56 individuals to increase leadership capabilities in elementary and secondary education. This program will be terminated in 1974.

(e) New careers in education.—The purpose of this activity is to attract qualified and diverse persons to the field of education, either on a full or part-time basis, who would not ordinarily consider this field. Workshops for qualified high school students and dissemination of recruitment materials on careers and volunteers in education are some of the methods used. This program will be terminated in 1974.

(f) Higher education.—College teachers, administrators, and educational specialists are trained at less than the doctoral level by this activity, funded through title V, part E of the Higher Education Act of 1965. Funds are used for institutes, short-term training, and fellowships for full-time graduate study not eligible under title IV of the National Defense Education Act. In 1974, the program will fund only continuing fellowships and institutes. No new fellowships or institutes will be provided.

2. National priority programs.—(a) Educational technology demonstrations.—This activity supports the establishment, expansion, and improvement of noncommercial broadcasting facilities; it also supports special demonstration projects concerned with application of new technology-based systems to improve efficiency and productivity of educational agencies, provide individualized instruction, and to extend the educational opportunities and access to learning resources for groups presently outside and within formal educational systems. The educational television programs, "Sesame Street" and "The Electric Company," are also supported. The special technology demonstration projects will be transferred to the National Institute of Education in 1974.

(b) Drug abuse education.—This program operates through project grants aimed at developing drug education leadership teams at the State and local level through a variety of training programs, and providing technical assistance to such teams to aid them in assessing local drug problems, developing programs and skilled leadership to combat their causes, and to evaluate drug programs already existing. Local support for demonstration projects is expected, so that Federal support can be phased out. This program will be terminated in 1974 and replaced with a more selective program of special demonstrations funded under a newer authority.

(c) Right-to-read.—The goal of this program is that by 1980 all reading programs in the Nation's school system will be improved and that illiteracy will be almost eradicated. Eligible grantees include local and State education agencies, institutions of higher education, and other public and private agencies. Packaging of validated reading programs and installation of the same, planning for the retraining of all teachers in reading, funding of an adult "Sesame Street," development of models for the effective use of technology in reading instruction, and increased technical assistance to statewide reading programs are some of the 1974 plans.

(d) Environmental education.—Funds are available to any nonprofit agency, institution or organization for the support of environmental education pilot and demonstration projects, which are directed to develop an informed public that will understand the mutual dependencies between man and his environment. Curriculum development, personnel training, community education programs, and development and dissemination of effective activities and materials are supported. This program will be terminated in 1974.

(e) Nutrition and health.—This program demonstrates ways to organize local systems of child development services through more effective coordination of existing health and nutrition resources. This program will be terminated in 1974.

(f) Dropout prevention.—This grant program provides funds to local school districts to develop demonstration model programs to reduce the number of students who leave school before high school graduation. In 1974, 14 of the 19 projects operating in 1973 will be continued. It is estimated that 100,000 students will be affected in 1974, making a total of 275,000 students reached in the 5 years of this program.

3. Data systems improvement.—(a) Educational statistics.—This item includes certain surveys and special statistical studies meant for use in planning new programs in education, projecting manpower needs, and closing the data gap in certain areas of education. In 1974, it also includes planning for a major new program, common core of data for the seventies, which is to replace the current uneven and inadequate provision for educational statistics in the 50 States, 6 outlying areas and the District of Columbia with an integrated system of statistics to meet Federal, State, local, and institutional needs for planning and management.

(b) National achievement study.—This activity is meant to collect national data on the changes in educational attainment over a period of 5 years. This data helps measure the impact on educational achievement that the Nation's investment in education is bringing about. In 1974, results will be reported on the second science assessment and the first assessment in mathematics.

U.S. owned foreign currency which the Treasury Department determines to be in excess of normal requirements is used to strengthen American education through research and training abroad sponsored by American institutions. Projects focus on foreign languages, area studies, world affairs, and intercultural understanding and are designed to update the professional competencies of American educators, to further research, and to develop improved curricula and effective instructional materials.

Political developments in certain foreign countries at the close of 1972 necessitated cancellation or postponement of some projects pending issuance of new guidelines on educational programs by these governments. Estimates for 1973 and 1974 are based on the assumption that these issues will be resolved.

Under the Higher Education Act of 1965 and the National Vocational Student Loan Insurance Act of 1965, the Office of Education received authority to insure loans to students in eligible institutions who do not have reasonable access to State or private nonprofit programs of student loan insurance.

The Higher Education Amendments of 1968 merged the National Vocational Student Loan Insurance Act into the Higher Education Act insured loan program, and in addition to extending the Federal insurance program, authorizes the Office of Education to reinsure loans guaranteed by State and nonprofit private agencies at 80% of default by student borrowers.

Upon default by the student borrowers, the Office of Education will pay to the beneficiary the amount of the loss sustained by the insured upon federally insured loans and 80% of the loss sustained on reinsured loans guaranteed by State and nonprofit private agencies. Data on federally insured loans and guaranteed loans follows:

The fund takes over loans on which it pays insurance claims and seeks to collect on them. Claims which are deemed uncollectable are written off as "loss on insured loans." Loans deemed collectable, after allowing for loss, are as follows: 1972, $20,704 thousand; 1973, $43,253 thousand; and 1974, $70,451 thousand.

Deposits to the fund are derived from insurance premiums earned from direct Federal insurance, which is not to exceed one-fourth of 1% per annum of the unpaid principal amount (excluding interest added to principal), repayment of collectable loans, and interest payments on collectable loans. Deposits are estimated as follows: 1972, $3,924 thousand; 1973, $8,067 thousand; and 1974, $14,018 thousand.

In 1972, $30,707 thousand was paid out for defaults. It is anticipated that default payments will amount to $54,862 thousand in 1973 and $71,898 thousand in 1974. These amounts will be funded as follows: Deposits into the fund of $8,067 thousand in 1973 and $14,018 thousand in 1974; appropriations of $46,640 thousand, including a budget amendment of $17,593 thousand in 1973; and a requested appropriation of $57,883 thousand in 1974.

The Higher Education Facilities Act, as amended, authorizes the Commissioner to make loans to institutions of higher education and to higher education building agencies for the construction of academic facilities and to insure loans. Such loans may be made for up to 80% of a project's total development cost and must be repaid within 50 years.

The Participation Sales Act of 1966, as amended, established a revolving fund for these loans and loan insurance. Further, the act authorizes the sales of such loans to the private credit market, the proceeds of which are deposited into the fund to be used for new loans to colleges and universities. The Government National Mortgage Association is authorized to serve as trustee for these sales.

Loans under this program have been displaced by the new annual interest grant program under the higher education appropriation. However, new loans may be made from the fund to the extent that such amounts are made available from withdrawals of earlier commitments. These amounts will be used to fund those small institutions of higher education which are unable to obtain private loans necessary to participate in the annual interest grant program.

In 1972, 19 new projects totaling $11,074 thousand were supported by commitments withdrawn prior to June 30, 1972. Additional funds, available from commitments withdrawn prior to June 30, 1973, totaling $10,000 thousand, will support approximately 17 new projects in 1973. It is estimated that in 1974, four new projects totaling $1,945 thousand will be funded from commitments withdrawn prior to July 1, 1974.

Interest is payable to the Treasury on the cumulative amount of appropriations paid out for loans under this title or available as capital to the fund less the average undisbursed cash balance in the fund during the year. The rate certified by the Secretary of the Treasury as of June 30, 1972, is 6 1/8%.

Appropriations for insufficiencies are used to fund the deficit resulting from the interest rate required to sell the participation and the interest rate paid by higher education institutions on facilities loans. The budget authority required for insufficiencies is computed as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Grants to States for public assistance are made for the Federal share of State expenditures for maintenance assistance, medical assistance, social services, State and local training, and child welfare services. Estimates for this appropriation are based primarily on estimates received from the States in November 1972, adjusted to take into consideration Federal management initiatives to improve the effectiveness of the management of the public assistance programs. The estimates also reflect the impact of Public Law 92-603 transferring the adult categories of maintenance assistance to direct Federal administration. Costs for this activity appears under the heading "Supplemental security income" in the Social Security Administration part of this chapter. Cost estimates have been adjusted for the $2.5 billion limitation on grants for social services enacted in Public Law 92-512.

New initiatives are proposed in 1973 and 1974 to strengthen the management of the public assistance programs. These initiatives are an outgrowth of activities started in 1972. Savings of $930 million are expected in 1974 from these initiatives.

1. Maintenance assistance.—Maintenance payments provide needy persons with income to supplement their own resources for the essential costs of food, shelter, clothing, and other necessary items of daily living.

The estimates for maintenance assistance reflect transfer of the adult categories of maintenance assistance to Federal administration effective January 1, 1974. This reduces the 1974 costs under the appropriation by about $1.1 billion.

The estimates for maintenance assistance for 1972 and 1973 have been adjusted to show the costs of the intermediate care facilities program in the medical assistance totals.

New Federal initiatives are proposed in 1973 and 1974 to strengthen the Federal role in the management of this program, focusing on aid to families with dependent children. This effort will save $128 million in 1973 and a total of $750 million in 1974. The 1974 savings include $158 million to result from legislation which will be proposed.

2. Medical assistance.—States participating in the Medicaid program provide medical assistance to all persons receiving or eligible to receive assistance payments. States may elect to provide medical assistance to certain medically needy persons who need help with their medical bills. The Federal share of Medicaid expenditures for 1974 is $5,272 million, or 55% of the total Federal, State, and local expenditures.

The increase in the number of persons receiving medical assistance during 1974 results largely from the anticipated increase in the number of recipients of maintenance payments.

The Social Security Amendments of 1972 will have a significant impact on the costs of the medical assistance program. Direct savings of $714 million are estimated in 1974. These will be partially offset by cost increases of $326 million to provide for expanded medical assistance to the adult categories and the establishment of Professional Standards Review Organizations at the State level.

The medical assistance totals have been adjusted to reflect increased costs resulting from the shift of intermediate care facilities, savings from preadmission certification and improved program management. Legislation will be proposed to eliminate Federal matching payments for dental care for adult recipients (States may continue to offer the service) and to require reimbursement for Medicaid services provided in free-standing clinics.

3. Social services.—Matching grants are made to States for a portion of the costs of operating social services programs approved by the Secretary. The purpose of these grants is to enable each State to provide social services with the objective of overcoming the conditions which cause the family or individual to need public assistance.

To halt escalating costs, a limitation on grants for social services under public assistance programs was included in the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act of 1972. The act provides for a $2.5 billion limitation on Federal matching grants for social services and for a formula allocation of that limitation to the States based on population.

Federal costs for social services grew from $690 million in 1971 to $1.6 billion in 1972 and were estimated to increase to $4.7 billion in 1973 and $5.2 billion in 1974.

The 1973 costs of $2.7 billion reflect a number of adjustments from an uncontrolled program to the $2.5 billion limitation.

4. State and local training.—Federal financial participation at the 75% rate is available to States for costs of training public assistance staff or persons preparing for employment in public assistance agencies. States are required to provide for the training and effective use of subprofessionals as community service aides and of volunteers.

5. Child welfare services.—Grants are made to States to help in establishing, extending, and strengthening services for the protection and care of homeless, dependent and neglected children. Child welfare services are not limited to the poor but are available to all children who need them.

The basic statute establishes a formula which prescribes between 33⅓ to 66⅔% Federal participation. States are encouraged to coordinate child welfare services with the social services program of AFDC and to use child welfare services to fill the gaps that cannot be reached through the AFDC social services program.

Note.—Excludes $4,450 thousand in 1974 for activities transferred to Social and Rehabilitation Service salaries and expenses (HEW). Comparable amount for: 1972, $0; 1973, $4,450 thousand is included above; 1973 amount is reduced to $2,000 thousand by following amendment.

The work incentive (WIN) program is designed to encourage and assist individuals receiving support from the aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) program to achieve self-sufficiency through a program of employment, work experience, and training. The 1971 amendments to the Social Security Act require that registration for the program be a condition of eligibility for receiving or continuing to receive welfare payments, replace the special work projects component with a public service employment component, place greater emphasis on on-the-job training and public service employment, and require closer coordination of training with the job market. Child care and other social services are to be provided to all who have been called up for certification and those who have been certified for training or employment who need such care or services to permit them to accept training or employment. State expenditures are matched by Federal participation at the rate of 90%. Training and incentives are administered by the Department of Labor, child care by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

1. Training and incentives.—Under this activity, individuals are prepared for self-supporting employment through on-the-job training, public service employment, work experience, orientation, and institutional training. The program includes registration, assessment for employability planning, counseling and job development, direct placement, followup of all employed participants, and adjudication of the work test. Program development, evaluation, and administration of the WIN program are included under this activity.

2. Child care and other supportive services.—This activity provides for child care and other supportive services necessary for WIN participants to enable them to accept training or employment. An estimated 45% of the WIN participants in 1974 are mothers who are unable to provide child care for their children while they are undergoing WIN training. In addition, child care is provided for the children of WIN participants receiving training in other manpower funded training programs and for children of employed WIN participants. The child care and social services are provided to families in support of the work and training portion of the program through the separate administrative unit in the States established for the WIN program.

The rehabilitation program provides services to mentally and physically handicapped people so they may prepare for and engage in remunerative employment or employment in the home to the extent of their potential. Emphasis is placed on reducing clients' dependency to the greatest degree possible to enable them to live in dignity and self-sufficiency. Services may be extended to the families of clients, where this will contribute to the clients' rehabilitation. Services include medical and physical restoration, vocational training, counseling and job placement.

The major portion of the vocational rehabilitation program is carried out under section 2 of the Vocational Rehabilitation Act which provides for grants with an 80% Federal matching rate to States to rehabilitate handicapped individuals and place them in productive gainful employment. The funding level for section 2 grants in 1974 is $610 million within an allotment base of $645 million. The 1974 level represents an increase of $20 million over 1973 and $50 million over the 1972 level.

Grants for rehabilitation service projects are made to States agencies, local governments, and to private non-profit organizations to supplement the basic support program. These projects are designed to substantially increase the number of rehabilitations through improvement of facilities and expansion of services to the disabled. The 1974 funding level is $40 million to support approximately 300 projects.

The level planned for projects in 1974 will support the continuation of a major effort in conjunction with the basic support program to rehabilitate an increased number of handicapped people who are receiving public assistance payments. A total of $26 million will be used to serve approximately 54,000 and rehabilitate an estimated 14,000 public assistance recipients, on a full-year basis, in addition to the 209,000 served and 56,000 expected to be rehabilitated under the basic support program.

2. Grants for developmental disabilities.—Federal grants are made to States to assist in developing and administering a program of assistance for persons with mental retardation, epilepsy, cerebral palsy, and other neurological disabling conditions. Also supported are project grants made to States and public and other nonprofit agencies to improve care in mental retardation institutions and to initiate and expand community programs.

The 1974 program includes $21.7 million to be made available to designated State agencies in accordance with a statutory formula and $18.5 million in project funds. The 1974 program will provide services for about 169,000 persons and includes $4.2 million for university-affiliated facilities projects. These projects support the costs of operating demonstration facilities rendering specialized services.

3. Special programs for the aging.—A funding level of about $200 million in both 1973 and 1974 will support a broadened effort to enable the elderly to live with dignity in their own homes, to continue to contribute productively in society, and to enjoy the benefits presented by lengthening lifespans relieved of infirmity and dependency to the greatest possible extent. Special emphasis is being placed on services which enhance the lives of older Americans such as home-health aids, homemaker and nutrition services, and transportation assistance. The basic authority for these programs expired at the end of 1972. Legislation will be proposed to extend and improve the programs.

4. Youth development and delinquency prevention.—The budget includes an amendment to fund this demonstration program in 1973 at the $10 million level, carrying out the authorizing legislation enacted in August 1972. In 1974, the program will continue to focus on diverting youth from the juvenile justice system.

5. Research.—Projects are supported to develop and improve the administration and services of the Social and Rehabilitation Service programs. Research and demonstrations are conducted in the areas of rehabilitation and employability service, community services, medical assistance, child welfare, and services for the aged. Income maintenance experiments are supported to assess the alternative methods of income supplementation. Research and training centers are supported to provide for testing of methods of rehabilitation in critical areas such as stroke, paraplegia, and circulatory problems. Regional research centers provide for analysis of such areas as the factors relating to client dependency, problems of the rural poor, and health delivery systems for the poor. The 1974 program will continue to emphasize methods to provide coordinated services at the local level, testing of methods of rehabilitation of the disabled receiving assistance payments, and improving the health care delivery system under the medicare program. In reflection of a reassessment of relative priorities, commitments will be reduced below previous estimates in 1973 and held at that level in 1974.

6. Training.—Commitments under this program will be phased out by the end of 1974. A secondary loan market is being created by the Department that will enable students to secure guaranteed and when appropriate, subsidized student loans to continue graduate and undergraduate training for SRS-related activities.

The Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 and the International Health Research Act of 1960 authorize the conduct of research and related activities abroad. Research, demonstrations, and research training programs are supported with foreign currencies accruing to the United States through the sale of surplus agricultural commodities and through other sources. The estimate for 1974 proposes an appropriation of $4,000 thousand for the purchase of foreign currencies in excess currency countries to support research activities which complement, supplement, and strengthen domestic research and service programs. This program enables the United States to benefit from progress that other countries are making in dealing with social and rehabilitation and social security problems and to utilize the talents of foreign scientists working in these fields.

The request in 1974 will be used to generate new knowledge in rehabilitation techniques for the physically disabled and severely disabled including those with spinal cord injuries. Research will be undertaken to develop and test a variety of residential care alternatives for the developmentally disabled. Special problems related to rehabilitation engineering, rehabilitation medicine, sensory disorders, and mental health will be examined; new methods will be tested for rehabilitation of juvenile delinquents; and development of innovative programs for the elderly will be supported.

The interchange of U.S. experts and their counterparts in the cooperating countries will also be stressed as an indispensable adjunct to the SRS international research program. Comparative studies abroad will supplement the domestic research efforts in the evaluation of the old-age, survivors, disability, and Medicare provisions of the Social Security Act.

In 1961 the President established a program to assist Cuban refugees in the United States. On June 28, 1962, the Migration and Refugee Assistance Act of 1962 was enacted which now provides the legislative basis for assistance to Cuban refugees in the United States.

Refugees from Cuba were arriving in Miami at the rate of about 1,700 a week when the missile crisis occurred in October 1962 after which this number of arrivals decreased by about 90%. On October 3, 1965, the President of the United States announced that the United States would permit the orderly influx of refugees allowed to leave Cuba under a more liberal refugee policy adopted by the Cuban Government. In December 1965, a new influx of refugees started with the inauguration of freedom flights—the airlift operated by the United States as provided for in a United States-Cuban Memorandum of Understanding negotiated by the Swiss Government.

About 42 airlift flights brought approximately 3,500 refugees to Miami each month between December 1965 and August 1971 when the Cuban Government began a series of interruptions in airlift operations. From that time until January 1972 the average number of flights was reduced to only one-third of the former rate, and subsequently a total of only 26 airlift flights had occurred by December 1972—5% of the former annual rate. On December 11, 1972, the airlift resumed and it is expected that at least 40 flights will occur before another interruption. It appears that there now remains only a small residual group of refugees who will be allowed to depart Cuba on future airlift flights; the budget assumes there will be 75 flights in 1973 and none in 1974. Between 1961 and June 1972, 445,150 refugees had registered at the Cuban Refugee Center in Miami of which 295,816 had been resettled to other locations in the United States. Refugees continue to enter the United States by means other than the airlift.

The anticipated cessation of airlift activities and other considerations led the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare to plan a phaseout of the Cuban refugee program which would begin in July 1973, with complete termination of the program projected by June 30, 1977. These phaseout plans are reflected in the several services provided by the program for Cuban refugees which are discussed below.

1. Welfare assistance and services.—Since inception of the Cuban refugee program the Federal Government has provided 100% reimbursement to State and local welfare agencies for financial and medical assistance provided needy Cuban refugees. A major change is expected to be made in this policy effective July 1, 1973. In general, the plan contemplates limiting reimbursements for assistance of this type under the Cuban refugee program to refugees who have been in the United States less than 5 years; the States' regular welfare programs would be utilized for refugees in the United States over 5 years. It is anticipated that there would be some modification in this general policy to recognize unique situations such as in Florida where about one-half of the refugees in the United States reside. By the end of 1972, about 35,600 persons were receiving financial assistance in Florida, and about 55,100 persons in other States were receiving financial and/or medical assistance. Comparable estimates for June 30, 1973, of persons requiring assistance are 39,300 in Florida and 54,000 in other States. The estimates for 1974 reflect the change in funding policy mentioned above, as well as the federalization of the categorical public assistance programs for the aged, blind, and disabled effective January 1, 1974, further reducing the number of persons aided under this program. It is estimated that 23,200 persons will be receiving assistance under this program in Florida and 22,600 for all other States combined on June 30, 1974; over one-third of each of these groups are expected to be eligible for medical assistance only under this program.

2. Resettlement.—Through contracts with several voluntary nonprofit agencies, refugees are provided a variety of services to assist them assimilate into the mainstream of U.S. living, including counseling services, relocation to homes and jobs in areas other than Miami and post-resettlement services relating to emergencies, job placement, etc.

3. Education.—Selected training is provided to equip the refugees for employment through English and vocational training. Also, provision is made for Federal payments to help meet part of the added cost related to refugee children in the Dade County, Fla., public school system because of the sizable impact these children have on that school system. In addition, loans are made to needy college students: about 3,200 in 1972; for 1973 the estimate is 3,000 students and for 1974, 2,600 students.

4. Health services.—These services are provided to new arrivals and to needy refugees in Miami and include medical screening, examinations, treatment, and provision of prescribed drugs by the clinic; arrangements are made for outpatient clinic services when necessary at local hospitals and for care of patients with tuberculosis and mental illness. Due to a Federal court order those patients eligible for Florida's Medicaid program may have their medical needs met through this type of program rather than through the Cuban Refugee Clinic operated in Miami beginning in February 1973.

5. Movement of refugees from Cuba.—This activity has provided for the cost of airlifting the refugees from Cuba. In 1972, the cost approximated $513 thousand; for 1973, $340 thousand has been estimated and for 1974, $50 thousand. The 1974 estimate is based on the assumption that the airlift itself will not operate in 1974 and that only closeout costs for Swiss Embassy staff in Cuba that have been working on airlift matters will be necessary.

6. Program administration.—Provides Federal direction and day-to-day operation of the program, including a variety of services for incoming refugees such as reception, feeding, lodging, etc.; helping other Cuban refugees in the Miami area as necessary; and continuing work on training and employment and, if appropriate, on resettlement opportunities out of Miami for the refugees.

This appropriation provides for payments from Federal funds to the social security trust funds for certain types of benefits and related administrative costs not financed by contributions from workers and employers. Adjustments for differences between costs of prior years and the amounts appropriated in prior years for this appropriation are included in the budget year request. The 1974 appropriation request of $3,110,181 thousand covers the following types of payments:

1. Federal payments for supplementary medical insurance.—An estimated $2,031 million will be required in 1974 to finance the Government's contribution to the Federal supplementary medical insurance trust fund. For each monthly premium paid by enrollees in the voluntary medical insurance program, which primarily covers doctor bills, the Federal Government contributes a like amount for aged beneficiaries. For disabled beneficiaries, including persons eligible for treatment of chronic kidney disease, the Federal contribution will be a larger amount sufficient to cover the anticipated higher medical costs which the disabled incur. Disabled persons will be covered under this program effective July 1973 as a result of enactment by the last Congress of the Social Security Amendments of 1972. The standard premium rate for 1974 will be $6.30 per month. The estimate for 1974 assumes that an average of about 20.8 million aged persons and 1.7 million disabled persons will be enrolled in the program during 1974 as compared with an average of about 20.4 million aged persons in 1973.

2. Hospital insurance for the uninsured.—A payment of $537,393 thousand to the Federal hospital insurance trust fund is budgeted for 1974 to cover the costs of hospital and related care for certain individuals age 65 and over who are not insured under the social security or railroad retirement systems. (Costs for the aged and disabled who are insured are financed by contributions on earnings by workers and by employers.) The estimate assumes that there will be an average of 1.3 million uninsured persons covered for hospital insurance benefits during 1974. The uninsured group covered by this provision includes persons who retired before their occupations were covered by social security (such as teachers and State and local employees) and widows whose husbands died prior to earning coverage under social security.

3. Military service credits.—The appropriation includes reimbursement of $239 million to the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund, the Federal disability insurance trust fund and the Federal hospital insurance trust fund for benefits paid on the basis of noncontributory military service credits of veterans of World War II and certain veterans of the post-World War II period. The basis for the computation of these payments is prescribed in sections 217(g) and 229(b) of the Social Security Act and includes reimbursement for administrative expenses and interest lost to the trust funds.

The payment to each trust fund is (in millions of dollars):

Old-age and survivors insurance.....	139
Disability insurance.....	52
Hospital insurance.....	48
Total.....	239

4. Retirement benefits for certain uninsured persons.—This appropriation provides for a payment of $302,788 thousand to the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund as reimbursement for actual benefit payments made in 1972 to certain uninsured individuals aged 72 and over, related administrative expenses, and interest lost to the trust fund. These benefits were established to afford some protection for certain persons, or their surviving dependents, who retired before the enactment of social security legislation or before their occupations were covered by social security.

To be eligible an individual must have less than three quarters of coverage and have attained age 72 before 1968. These benefits must be reduced if an individual is also receiving another governmental pension. The amount of the reduction depends upon the amount of the other governmental pension. In addition, these benefits must be withheld if an individual is receiving payments under a federally aided public assistance program.

The Federal Coal Mine Health and Safety Act of 1969 provides for the protection of the health and safety of persons working in the coal mining industry. Title IV of the act provides monthly benefits to living coal miners who are totally disabled due to pneumoconiosis arising out of employment in coal mines and to surviving widows. The requirements for entitlement and the amounts of the benefits are stated in the law.

The Black Lung Benefits Act of 1972 (Public Law 92-303) made substantial changes to the original legislation. The principal provisions of the amended law are:

1. The Social Security Administration will be responsible for taking claims and paying lifetime benefits with respect to miner claims filed through June 30, 1973, rather than December 31, 1971.

2. Benefits are payable to orphans, and in certain circumstances to totally dependent surviving parents, brothers, and sisters.

3. Eligibility requirements are liberalized, including an occupational definition of "total disability" and a rebuttable presumption that a miner with 15 years of certain mine employment who is disabled from a respiratory or pulmonary impairment is presumed to be disabled from pneumoconiosis.

4. Black lung benefits payable by the Social Security Administration are not subject to the workmen's compensation offset provision of the Social Security Act.

Authority to obligate and expend funds for benefit payments and administrative expenses for title IV purposes is contained in the language for this appropriation. The 1972 amendments to the act greatly increased the number of beneficiaries who will be eligible. The 1973 obligations include almost $600 million in retroactive benefits for periods prior to 1973 payable to persons who originally filed claims in 1970, 1971, and 1972. The 1974 benefit costs represent the continuing level which will gradually decline in future years as beneficiaries die or are otherwise terminated from the rolls.

The number of miners, widows, and other dependents receiving benefits at the end of each fiscal year and the number of dependents represented in the benefit payments are as follows:

	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate

Title III of the Social Security Amendments of 1972 provides for the implementation of a new Federal supplemental security income program of assistance to needy persons aged 65 and over, and to the blind and totally disabled (without regard to age). The program provides a minimum income of $130 per month for an individual and $195 per month for a couple. The law encourages recipients of these payments to work when they are able to do so by not counting some income in determining eligibility and benefit level. Eligibility requirements and benefit support levels are the same in all States. The States may supplement the Federal payments and if they do so the Federal Government will pay the cost of administration for making these supplemental payments. A "hold harmless" provision limits the amount States have to pay for supplemental payments to the costs incurred in calendar year 1972 under the former State administered assistance programs for the aged, blind and disabled. The Federal Government will pay the additional amount necessary to assure that recipients do not receive smaller total payments than they did in 1972. The new program is effective January 1, 1974.

This appropriation request covers: (1) the Federal payments to the needy aged, blind and disabled beginning with the effective date of January 1, 1974; (2) the amount of Federal "hold harmless" payments to the States; (3) the cost of vocational rehabilitation services for blind and disabled recipients who have the potential for becoming more self-sufficient and possibly returning to work; and (4) the estimated cost for administering the entire program in 1974. Start-up administrative costs will be incurred in 1973 principally for the conversion of persons from the present State administered programs to the new Federal program, and for processing about 1 million of the 3.5 million anticipated applications from newly eligible persons. These 1973 costs are covered in a proposed 1973 budget amendment. The balance of the start-up costs plus program administrative costs for the second half of 1974 are included in the 1974 estimate.

For necessary expenses, not more than $1,887,898,000 may be expended as authorized by section 201(g)(1) of the Social Security Act, from any one or all of the trust funds referred to therein: Provided, That such amounts as are required shall be available to pay travel expenses either on an actual cost or commuted basis, to an individual for travel incident to medical examinations, and to parties, their representatives and all reasonably necessary witnesses for travel within the United States, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands to reconsideration interviews and to proceedings before administrative law judges under title II and title XVIII of the Social Security Act, as amended and section 301 of the Social Security Amendments of 1972; Provided further, That $25,000,000 of the foregoing amount shall be apportioned for use pursuant to section 3679 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (31 U.S.C. 665), only to the extent necessary to process workloads not anticipated in the budget estimates and to meet mandatory increases in costs of agencies or organizations with which agreements have been made to participate in the administration of section 301 of the Social Security Amendments of 1972, title XVIII and section 221 of title II of the Social Security Act, and after maximum absorption of such costs within the remainder of the existing limitation has been achieved: Provided further, That such amounts as may be agreed upon by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and the United States Postal Service shall be used for payment, in such manner as said organizations may jointly determine, of postage for the transmission of official mail matter in connection with the administration of the social security program by States participating in the program.

Note.—The appropriation language for this account for 1973 had not been enacted at the time this budget was prepared. A temporary continuing resolution is in effect for the period from July 1, 1972, to Feb. 28, 1973.

The Social Security Administration is responsible for administering national programs of old-age, survivors, disability, and health insurance and the new supplemental security income program for the needy aged, blind, and disabled which was established by the social security amendments of 1972. The principal costs for administration of these programs are financed by this appropriation; however, there are certain costs of other components of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and of the Treasury Department which relate to administration of these programs and are shown elsewhere in the budget.

Administration costs are related to workloads which emanate from the statutory provisions of social security programs. The size of these loads depends upon objective factors such as population growth, level of employment, economic conditions, income levels, incidence of illness, and mortality rates.

The 1974 appropriation request for salaries and expenses includes $25 million as a contingency reserve to be used with the approval of the Office of Management and Budget in the event that workloads and/or mandatory costs of agencies with which agreements have been made to participate in the program exceed the budget estimates. The fund is to be used only after maximum absorption of such costs within the existing limitation has been achieved.

1. Old-age and survivors insurance.—This program provides monthly benefits for retired workers and their dependents, survivors of deceased workers including disabled widows and widowers age 50 and over, and certain uninsured persons age 72 or over.

The number of persons receiving monthly benefits and the amount of benefits to be paid increase significantly in both 1973 and 1974 because of the 20% increase in benefits effective beginning with the month of September 1972 and the social security amendments of 1972 signed into law on October 30, 1972. In the social security amendments of 1972 the liberalization of the retirement test to permit earnings of $2,100 with no loss of benefits and a reduction of $1 for every $2 of earnings above $2,100 will result in a significant increase in benefit payments as well as some increase in new claims. Increased benefit payments and new claims will also result from an increase from 82½% to 100% of the deceased spouse's benefit for widows and widowers who started getting benefits at age 65 or older. Other provisions in the amendments which will result in increased benefit payments to persons already on the rolls include provisions providing credit for delaying retirement after age 65 and a special minimum benefit for persons who have worked many years under social security at low wage levels.

	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
OASI claims applications received.....	3,596,134	3,808,000	3,859,000

OASI benefit payments (in millions)....	$34,541	$42,323	$47,403

The administrative costs budgeted for this program provide for: Making the initial determination of eligibility for old-age and survivors benefits; reevaluating the initial determination when requested by the claimant; making changes in the beneficiary rolls to assure proper and correct payment of benefits; and investigating the beneficiary's continuing entitlement to benefits, including the evaluation of performance of representative payees.

2. Disability insurance.—This program provides monthly disability benefits for disabled workers and their dependents. In addition to normal increases in the number of persons receiving monthly benefits and the amount of benefits paid, the social security amendments of 1972 make several changes in the disability program. One which will significantly increase benefit payments is a reduction in the period of time a person must wait between the onset of disability and his first monthly benefit payment from 6 to 5 months. Another provision which will result in an increase in new claims as well as increased benefits is a liberalization of the insured status requirements for blind persons.

Disability claims applications received..	1,382,536	1,464,000	1,499,000
Disability beneficiaries in current pay status (average for year).....	2,930,000	3,228,000	3,511,000
Disability benefit payments (in millions)	$4,046	$5,242	$6,106

The administrative costs budgeted for this program cover the costs of processing initial disability determinations and reconsiderations and appeals of denied claims; making investigations and determinations of continuing disability of beneficiaries and servicing the beneficiary rolls; and making all changes due to deaths, changes of address, attainment of age 65, returns to employment and recoveries from disability. Determinations regarding the existence of continuation of a disability are made by State agencies and these costs are included in the budget estimates.

3. Health insurance.—This program includes the hospital insurance and the voluntary supplementary medical insurance programs which were established by the 1965 amendments and the 1972 amendments to the Social Security Act, commonly referred to as Medicare.

(a) Hospital insurance.—The hospital insurance program affords protection to persons age 65 and over against the cost of inpatient hospital services, posthospital home health services and posthospital skilled nursing facility services. In 1974 hospital insurance will also provide protection for disabled beneficiaries who have been eligible for social security disability benefits for at least 2 years and to persons covered by social security and their families for treatment of chronic kidney disease. Bills for services rendered under the hospital insurance program are generally submitted by hospitals, skilled nursing facilities, home health agencies, and in some instances by individuals who have received emergency care in nonparticipating hospitals. In most instances, these bills are processed by the Blue Cross associations and private insurance companies acting as intermediaries for the Social Security Administration. The individual beneficiary records of utilization of hospital services are maintained in the central office of the Social Security Administration. The growth in beneficiaries who will be covered by the program as the population of age 65 and over increases, the addition of coverage to disabled beneficiaries in 1974, and the rise in the utilization of available services causes an increase in the number of claims in both 1973 and 1974.

(b) Supplementary medical insurance.—Almost all persons age 65 and over are eligible to enroll in the supplementary medical insurance program, and in 1974 coverage is being extended to disability beneficiaries who have been eligible for benefits for at least 2 years and to persons covered by social security and their families for treatment of chronic kidney disease. Supplementary medical insurance covers the cost of physician services and other medical costs within certain deductible and coinsurance requirements. Program costs are financed by a monthly premium paid by enrollees and by appropriated contributions from Federal funds. Claims for services under the medical insurance program may be submitted by the physician or other supplier of service or by the beneficiary to Blue Shield associations and private insurance companies who have been designated to act as carriers for the Social Security Administration in specific geographical areas.

The volume of claims will rise in 1973 and 1974 as a result of the normal growth in the age 65 and over population, the projected increase in utilization of medical services, and the addition of disability beneficiaries in 1974.

The health insurance program data is reflected in the following table:

	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Claims received for services covered by hospital insurance.....	8,497,241	8,856,000	11,232,000
Claims received for services covered by medical insurance.....	64,077,559	70,756,000	92,309,000

Benefit payments (in millions):
Hospital insurance.....	$6,108	$6,645	$8,923
Medical insurance.....	$2,255	$2,455	$3,003

The administrative costs budgeted for this program cover the claim payment functions performed by the intermediaries and carriers; services performed by State agencies in certifying and consulting with providers of services; and all work performed by the Social Security Administration in directing the program, such as providing services to beneficiaries, maintaining records by individual beneficiary of utilization of hospital and medical services, and processing claims to establish entitlement to hospital insurance for persons not insured for cash benefits under either the social security or railroad retirement program.

4. Supplemental security income.—This new Federal program authorized in the social security amendments of 1972 provides monthly benefits from Federal funds to aged persons (65 and over), and to the blind and totally disabled (without regard to age). Because the administration of this program will be integrated with that of the social security program, the costs of administration of both programs are carried in the same Salaries and Expenses appropriation. A separate appropriation from Federal funds for benefits paid under the supplemental security income program and repayment to the trust funds for moneys advanced for the administrative expenses of the new program are carried in a separate appropriation account.

The program becomes effective on January 1, 1974. Prior to that date, over 3 million recipients of the present

State-administered programs must be converted to the Federal program and 3.5 million claims for new applicants (1 million in 1973) must be processed so that monthly payments can be made beginning with January 1974 to an estimated 6.3 million recipients. During the last 6 months of 1974 an estimated 1.1 million claims will be handled as turnover occurs in the benefit rolls.

SSI beneficiaries at end of year.....		6,300,000
SSI benefit payments (in millions).....			$1,700
Payments under hold harmless provisions (in millions).....			$150

The administrative costs budgeted for this program provide for: Making initial determinations of eligibility for aged, blind, and disabled benefits; reevaluating the initial determination when requested by the claimant; processing appeals of denied claims; making changes in the recipient rolls to assure proper and correct payment of benefits; and investigating the beneficiary's continuing entitlement to benefits through periodic redeterminations. Determinations regarding the existence of continuation of a disability are made by State agencies under contract with the Social Security Administration and these costs are included in the budget.

No 1974 obligational authority is requested for construction from the trust funds. Funds scheduled for obligation in 1974 are from appropriations of prior years.

1. Headquarters.—The 1965, 1966, 1967, and 1973 appropriations provided funds for the construction of additional office, operating, and warehouse space as well as acquisition of available land adjacent to the headquarters' site. Obligations scheduled for 1973 and 1974 represent progress on the projects funded from these prior year appropriations.

2. District offices.—Funds were provided in the 1965, 1966, and 1967 appropriations for the acquisition of sites, design, and construction of district offices in 107 selected cities throughout the country. Funds were provided in the 1971 appropriation for the acquisition of sites and the design of district office buildings in 30 more selected locations. Funds for the acquisition of sites and for the design of an additional 30 district office buildings in 1974 will be provided by a proposed transfer of $4,065 thousand from funds appropriated but no longer required for payment center construction. This is part of a long-range program to provide adequate space for the Social Security Administration's district offices in locations where construction of new buildings is determined to be more feasible than rental or occupancy of existing Federal structures. Obligations scheduled for this activity reflect the use of the funds appropriated in prior years.

3. Payment centers.—The 1972 appropriation provided $18,194 thousand for the acquisition of sites and for the design of four Social Security Administration payment center buildings: Birmingham, Ala.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Chicago, Ill.; and San Francisco, Calif. Since the appropriation was enacted, the space needs of the Birmingham, Ala., payment center have been met through lease-construction. While initial plans called for the construction of these payment centers through direct Federal construction, it is now planned to meet the needs of the remaining three payment centers through purchase-contract arrangements. Obligations scheduled for this activity in 1973 are to complete the design of these three buildings.

Direct program.—The old-age and survivors insurance program protects individuals and families from the risk of economic loss resulting from old-age and death by providing income to retired workers and their dependents and to dependent survivors of deceased workers. The program is financed by contributions to the trust fund which are made by workers, employers, and self-employed individuals based on earnings. The contribution rates on which financing of the old-age and survivors insurance program is based follow:

CONTRIBUTION RATE—USED TO FINANCE OASI PROGRAM

	[In percent]
	Calendar year
	1971	1972	1973	1974
Employees.....	4.050	4.050	4.300	4.300
Employers.....	4.050	4.050	4.300	4.300
Self-employed.....	6.075	6.075	6.205	6.205

The above contribution rates are applied to taxable earnings up to a specified maximum. The maximum is $9,000 in calendar year 1972, will increase to $10,800 in 1973 and $12,000 in 1974.

1. Benefit payments.—The Social Security Act provides for payment of monthly benefits to retired workers and their dependents and to survivors of deceased workers. The average numbers of persons receiving payments and the payment amounts classified by major types of beneficiaries for 1972-74 follow (in millions):

	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Retired workers.....	14.4	14.9	15.5
Dependents of retired workers.....	3.3	3.3	3.4
Survivors of deceased workers.....	6.7	6.9	7.2
Total beneficiaries.....	24.4	25.1	26.2
Payments to retired workers.....	$22,686	$27,740	$30,978
Payments to dependents of retired workers.....	$2,724	$3,258	$3,562

Payments to survivors of deceased workers.....	$9,131	$11,325	$12,863
Total benefit payments.....	$34,541	$42,323	$47,403

Normal growth in benefit payments will occur because of (1) increases in the numbers of beneficiaries as the number of aged persons in the population and the proportion of the aged who are insured rise, and (2) increases in average monthly benefits as general earnings levels continue to rise. The increases in benefit outlays in 1973 and 1974 exceed normal growth because they also include the added cost of new legislation. A 20% across-the-board increase in cash benefits, enacted by the Congress in Public Law 92-336, was effective with payments for September 1972. It will be reflected in 9 months of payments during 1973 and 12 months of payments during 1974. In addition, Public Law 92-603, enacted October 30, 1972, further liberalized this program. While the program improvements were numerous, those having the greatest impact on benefit payments are an increase in monthly benefits for widows and widowers, and liberalization of the retirement test. These changes are effective January 1973, and will be reflected in 5 months of payments during 1973 and in 12 months of payments during 1974.

2. Construction.—The costs of site acquisition, design, and construction of office facilities for the Social Security Administration are financed by this and the other social security trust funds.

3. Administration.—The Social Security Administration's expenses of administering the social security program as reflected in its salaries and expenses appropriation, and those incurred for social security programs by the Treasury Department and other Department of Health, Education, and Welfare components are financed in part by each trust fund.

4. Payment to railroad retirement account.—Annual payments are made from the old-age and survivors insurance trust fund to the railroad retirement fund so as to place the old-age and survivors insurance trust fund in the same position in which it would have been if railroad employment after 1936 had been included in social security coverage (45 U.S.C. 228E). Estimates are made of the yearly amounts of additional contributions the Social Security Administration would have collected, the additional benefits it would have paid and the additional administrative costs it would have incurred if railroad employees had been covered under social security. The payment made to the railroad retirement account represents the amount by which the estimated benefit payments and administrative costs exceed the estimated contributions, and includes interest through the date of the transfer. The components of the net transfers for 1972-74 follow (in millions of dollars):

Benefit payments.....	1,066.1	1,154.0	1,356.0
Administrative costs.....	11.0	11.0	12.0
Interest.....	48.5	59.1	70.1
Less contributions.....	-401.3	-418.9	-484.0
Net transfer.....	724.3	805.2	954.1

5. Vocational rehabilitation services.—The Social Security Act provides that payments may be made from the old-age and survivors insurance and the disability insurance trust funds for the purpose of making rehabilitation services available to individuals who are entitled to social security cash benefits because of a disability. Such payments are made in expectation that savings will accrue to the trust funds as a result of rehabilitating disabled beneficiaries into productive activity. Through 1972 the total annual amount to be used for rehabilitation services could not exceed 1% of the total benefits certified for payment to disabled workers and to disabled dependents of disabled, retired or deceased workers in the preceding year. Under a provision of Public Law 92-603, the limitation increases to 1.25% for 1973 and to 1.5% for 1974 and thereafter. The old-age and survivors insurance trust fund bears the cost of rehabilitation services provided to disabled old-age and survivors insurance beneficiaries (dependents of retired or deceased workers) while the disability insurance trust fund bears the cost of such services provided to disability insurance beneficiaries (disabled workers and their dependents).

Reimbursable program.—1. Section 305 of the Social Security Amendments of 1972 authorizes advances from this trust fund for the administrative expenses of the supplemental security income program for the aged, blind and disabled, with full reimbursement to the trust fund (including interest when appropriate). Reimbursement is budgeted in the account, Supplemental security income program.

The disability insurance program protects individuals and families against the risk of economic loss resulting from disability by providing income to severely disabled workers and their dependents. The program is financed by contributions to the trust fund which are made by workers, employers, and self-employed individuals based on earnings. During calendar years 1971-74 the contribution rate on which financing of the disability insurance program is based is 0.55% each for employers and employees. The rate for self-employed persons is 0.825% in calendar years 1971 and 1972, and 0.795% in 1973 and 1974.

1. Benefit payments.—The Social Security Act provides for payment of disability insurance benefits to certain disabled individuals and their dependents. The average number of persons receiving payments and the payment amounts classified by major types of beneficiaries for 1972-74 follow (in millions):

	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Disabled workers.....	1.6	1.8	2.0
Dependents of disabled workers.....	1.3	1.4	1.5
Total beneficiaries.....	2.9	3.2	3.5
Payments to disabled workers.....	$3,269	$4,242	$4,923
Payments to dependents of disabled workers.....	$777	$1,000	$1,183
Total benefit payments.....	$4,046	$5,242	$6,106

Normal growth in benefit payments can be expected essentially because of (1) increases in the number of beneficiaries as the population insured for disability benefits rises, especially at ages 50-64 where disability incidence rates are highest, and (2) increases in average monthly benefit amounts as general earnings levels continue to rise. The increases in benefit outlays in 1973 and 1974 exceed normal growth because they also include the added cost of new legislation. A 20% across-the-board increase in cash benefits, enacted by the Congress in Public Law 92-336, was effective with payments for September 1972. It will be reflected in 9 months of payments during 1973 and 12 months of payments during 1974. In addition, Public Law 92-603, enacted October 30, 1972, further liberalized this program. The principal improvement was to reduce from 6 to 5 months the waiting period throughout which a person must be disabled before disability payments can begin. This and several other changes in the disability program are effective January 1973.

2. Construction.—The costs of site acquisition, design, and construction of office facilities for the Social Security Administration are financed by this and the other social security trust funds.

3. Administration.—The administrative expenses of the Social Security Administration as reflected in its Salaries and expenses appropriation, and those incurred for social security programs by the Treasury Department and other Department of Health, Education, and Welfare components are financed in part by each trust fund.

4. Payment to railroad retirement account.—Annual payments are made from the disability insurance trust fund to the railroad retirement fund so as to place the disability insurance trust fund in the same position in which it would have been if railroad employment after 1936 had been included under social security coverage (45 U.S.C. 228E). This payment is computed on the same basis as the payment from the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund. The components of the net transfers for 1972-74 follow (in millions of dollars):

	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Benefit payments.....	75.7	77.0	100.0
Administrative costs.....	3.0	1.8	2.0
Interest.....	2.7	1.7	3.6
Less contributions.....	-57.2	-56.9	-63.0
Net transfer.....	24.2	23.6	42.6

5. Vocational rehabilitation services.—The Social Security Act provides that payments may be made from the old-age and survivors insurance and the disability insurance trust funds for the purpose of making rehabilitation services available to individuals who are entitled to social security cash benefits because of a disability. Such payments are made in expectation that savings will accrue to the trust funds as a result of rehabilitating disabled beneficiaries into productive activity. Through 1972 the total amount to be used for rehabilitation services could not exceed 1% of the total benefits certified for payment to disabled workers and to disabled dependents of disabled, retired or deceased workers in the preceding year. Under a provision of Public Law 92-603, the limitation increases to 1.25% for 1973 and to 1.5% for 1974 and thereafter. The old-age and survivors insurance trust fund bears the cost of rehabilitation services provided to disabled old-age and survivors insurance beneficiaries (dependents of retired or deceased workers) while the disability insurance trust fund bears the cost of such services provided to disability insurance beneficiaries (disabled workers and their dependents).

FEDERAL HOSPITAL INSURANCE TRUST FUND—Continued

The hospital insurance program protects eligible individuals and families against the costs of health care by helping them finance the cost of hospital and related care. Most people age 65 and over have been covered by the program since it was enacted in 1965.

Effective July 1973 the program also will cover people under age 65 who are entitled to social security or railroad retirement benefits because they are disabled, provided they have been entitled for at least 24 months. Also effective July 1973, the program will cover treatment of chronic kidney diseases for people under age 65 receiving monthly social security benefits and insured workers and their dependents.

For persons on the social security and railroad retirement rolls, the cost of services covered by the hospital insurance program and administrative costs are financed by contributions from workers, employers, and self-employed individuals based on earnings. Through calendar year 1972, the contribution rate on which financing of this trust fund is based was 0.6% of covered wages each for employers and employees. Effective January 1, 1973, the contribution rate was increased to 1.0% each for employers and employees. The contribution rates were applied to covered earnings up to a maximum of $9 thousand in 1972; this was increased to $10,800 on January 1, 1973, and will rise to $12 thousand in 1974. Self-employed persons are scheduled to pay one-half of the combined worker-employer contribution rate.

1. Benefit payments.—The hospital insurance program provides protection against the costs of inpatient hospital services, post-hospital home health services, and post-hospital skilled nursing facility services, with specified deductible and coinsurance amounts. The following table shows comparative data on hospital insurance beneficiaries and on benefit payments classified by type of coverage for 1972 through 1974 (in millions):

Persons with hospital insurance protection (average):	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Aged.....	20.6	20.9	21.2
Disabled.....	-----	-----	1.7
Beneficiaries receiving reimbursed services:
Aged.....	4.6	4.7	4.8
Disabled.....	-----	-----	0.6
Payments for inpatient hospital services:
Aged.....	$5,881	$6,388	$7,264
Disabled (excluding kidney care).....	-----	-----	$1,206
Payments for extended care services:
Aged.....	$180	$206	$257
Disabled.....	-----	-----	$62
Payments for home health services:
Aged.....	$47	$51	$56
Disabled.....	-----	-----	$13
Payments for kidney care.....	-----	-----	$65
Total benefit payments:
Aged.....	$6,108	$6,645	$7,577
Disabled.....	-----	-----	$1,346
Total.....	$6,108	$6,645	$8,923

The growth in benefit payments from 1972 to 1974 results primarily from increases in the size of the covered population and in the cost of health care services, and from Public Law 92-603. Over 50 provisions designed to improve the Medicare program are included in Public Law 92-603. Among them are the extension of coverage to disabled persons described above and addition of coverage of physical therapy, speech pathology and chiropractic services.

2. Construction.—The costs of site acquisition, design, and construction of office facilities for the Social Security Administration are financed by this and the other social security trust funds.

3. Administration.—This activity reflects the administrative expenses of the Social Security Administration and those incurred by the Treasury Department and the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare that are attributable to the hospital insurance program.

4. Incentive reimbursement experimentation.—This activity includes experiments for reimbursement of providers of services on a basis other than the "reasonable cost" or "reasonable charges" provisions generally applicable under the Medicare program.

The supplementary medical insurance program protects individuals and families against the costs of health care by helping eligible persons who elect this coverage to finance the cost of physicians' services and certain other medical and health services. Almost all persons aged 65 and over are eligible to enroll in the voluntary supplementary medical insurance program provided by the Social Security Act, and about 95% of those eligible have chosen to do so.

Effective July 1973, people under age 65 who are entitled to social security or railroad retirement benefits because they are disabled will be eligible to enroll, provided they have been entitled for at least 24 months. Also, effective July 1973, the program will cover treatment of chronic kidney disease for eligible people under age 65 who elect to enroll. The costs of services covered by the program and administrative expenses are financed by premium payments from enrollees together with contributions from the general revenues of the Treasury. The premium rate will be $6.30 on July 1, 1973.

1. Benefit payments.—Participants in the program are covered for the cost of physicians' services, home health services not covered under the hospital insurance program, outpatient services, and certain other medical costs, with specified deductible and coinsurance amounts. The following table shows comparative data on supplementary medical insurance beneficiaries and benefit payments, classified by type of coverage, for 1972 through 1974 (in millions):

Persons with supplementary medical insurance protection (average):
Aged.....	20.1	20.4	20.8
Disabled.....			1.7
Beneficiaries receiving reimbursed services:
Aged.....	10.3	10.4	10.4
Disabled.....			1.2

Disabled.....			$4
Payments for outpatient services:

Aged.....	$2,255	$2,445	$2,679
Disabled.....			$324
Total.....	$2,255	$2,445	$3,003

Growth in benefit payments normally results from increases in the size of the covered population and in the utilization and cost of medical care services. Public Law 92-603 extends coverage to disabled persons and persons eligible for treatment of chronic kidney disease, effective July 1973, increasing by 1.7 million the size of the population covered by the program.

2. Construction.—The costs of site acquisition, design, and construction of the office facilities for the Social Security Administration are financed by this and the other social security trust funds.

3. Administration.—This activity reflects administrative expenses of the Social Security Administration and those incurred by the Treasury Department and the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare that are attributable to the supplementary medical insurance program.

4. Incentive reimbursement experimentation.—This activity includes experiments for reimbursement of providers of services on a basis other than the "reasonable cost" or "reasonable charges" provisions generally applicable under the Medicare program.

1. Operation.—In 1973 the Model Secondary School for the Deaf continued to operate in temporary, leased facilities with enrollment increased to maximum permitted by available space. Staff and programs were expanded such that all planned components of the school were made operational on at least limited bases. Emphasis was placed on the development of additional curricular offerings, design and production of teaching materials following an instructional development model, implementation of planning and decisionmaking models based on the concepts of management by objectives, initiation of a broadly based research and evaluation program, expansion of staff development activities, and dissemination of materials and information to the profession of education of the deaf. For 1974, objectives for the school encompass continued maturation in each of the above areas with particular emphasis on refining and improving instructional and support programs. Development of instructional materials especially designed for the deaf adolescent and with a highly mediated format will receive high priority.

2. Construction.—In 1973 construction of the permanent Model Secondary School for the Deaf facilities was initiated.

1. Operations.—(a) Gallaudet College.—Gallaudet College is a private, nonprofit educational institution providing an undergraduate higher education program for the deaf, a tutorial school for deaf students who need such training to qualify for college admission, a graduate school program in the field of deafness and a continuing education program for deaf adults. The estimates for 1974 will provide funds for increases in educational technology, upgrading physical facilities, support for continuing education, expansion of the graduate school and maintenance of faculty salaries.

2. Construction.—(a) College.—A construction program designed to replace aging buildings and provide modern facilities to accommodate increased enrollments was initiated in 1956. Further construction has been temporarily halted until such time as the urgently required construction funds are made available.

(b) Kendall Demonstration Elementary School.—By an Act of Congress, Public Law 91-587, the College has the authority to operate the Kendall School as a national demonstration elementary school for the deaf. The school will: (1) Develop an exemplary educational program for children from the age of the onset of deafness through the age of 15; (2) develop a diagnostic center; (3) develop a parent education program; and (4) become a source of important research on learning problems of young deaf children. The 1974 operation estimates will provide for the maintenance of faculty salaries along with providing necessary built-in increases for food and transportation services. Construction of the permanent facility will be delayed until the necessary construction funds are made available.

The primary functions of the institution are the instructional, research, and public service programs. The following is a report on the number of persons enrolled in the instruction program.

The Office of Child Development was established at the direction of the President (34 F.R. 12190) in July 1969. Its purpose is to coordinate, plan, and evaluate Federal activities affecting development of young children, including those in health, social welfare, environment, and education. The Office also administers Head Start programs.

1. Research and demonstration.—Support is provided for research projects and grants designed to increase our knowledge of effective early childhood programs and to develop better statistical reporting on current services provided to young children. Under this same activity, projects will be designed to carry out the child research and reporting mandates of the Children's Bureau Organization Act of 1912. In 1974, research and demonstration efforts will be focused on child advocacy; day care and early childhood education; adoption and foster care; social ecology, including TV and other program media; child abuse; and education for parenthood.

2. White House Conference on Children and Youth.—Followup activities have been folded into regular Office of Child Development functions.

3. Head Start.—This program is a major demonstration effort focused on a variety of child development services during the first 5 years of life. In 1974, services will be provided to 300,000 full-year and summer children and 20,000 children in experimental programs which includes Health Start, Home Start, and the multiform child development centers. The Economic Opportunity Act Amendments of 1972 also mandated that 10% of the enrollment opportunities in Head Start be made available to serve handicapped children. In addition, funds are provided for career development and technical assistance to grantees and evaluation efforts will be continued. The experimental parent and child centers will provide services to children 0 to 3 years of age and their families.

4. Salaries and expenses.—Provides support for the administration, management, and direction of the Head Start program and programs of the Children's Bureau. Primary emphasis in 1974 will include continued improvement and innovative thrust in Head Start, coupled with intensive efforts to prevent and correct program deficiencies. Another priority effort will involve further improvements in our management systems. Also, program standards, policies and guidelines will be developed in areas of in-home and school-age care and to provide for an orderly and rapid expansion of services to handicapped children.

The Office for Civil Rights was established in 1966 to direct and coordinate the responsibilities assigned to the Department under title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Subsequently, enforcement responsibilities in the field of civil rights were centralized in the Office for Civil Rights and are largely implemented through the regional offices. Recent legislation has widened the Department's civil rights charter. The Higher Education Amendments of 1972 added two major responsibilities. Title VII of the amendments requires review of school districts for compliance with the terms of emergency school aid grants, and title IX prohibits sex discrimination in admission to educational institutions. The Comprehensive Health Manpower and Nurse Training Acts prohibit sex discrimination in admission to health professions schools.

Compliance enforcement.—Responsible for assuring that beneficiaries of approximately 200 major programs receive services on a nondiscriminatory basis. Federal assistance is provided through 500 State agencies and thousands of school districts, nursing homes, hospitals, colleges, and other similar entities.

Contract compliance.—Responsible for insuring compliance with Executive Orders on equal employment opportunity at universities, hospitals, and other institutions holding Government contracts.

Legislation is being proposed to promote the development and expansion of health maintenance organizations (HMO's) through technical and financial assistance in order to demonstrate the value of this health care option. HMO development will focus on specific major health care problems: rapid inflation, inefficient organization, and inadequate emphasis on illness prevention.

Support will be provided for planning, development, and initial operations of HMO's. Through application of these resources, approximately 40 HMO's will become operational during the year, and about 80 potential HMO's will receive assistance to bring them to the operational level.

Legislation will be proposed to initiate a special revenue sharing program for elementary and secondary education. This program will provide support for educational activities in areas where the Federal Government has developed strong interests in strengthening school programs, such as compensatory education for the disadvantaged, education of handicapped children, vocational education, aid to schools affected by Federal activities, and general support. The States and localities will have greater freedom to determine their own priorities within these areas and to decide how best to meet those priorities.

A number of amendments to the Social Security Act are proposed for the OASDI cash benefit programs and the Medicare program. The proposed change to the OASDI program, recommended by the 1971 Advisory Council on Social Security, would provide that social security benefits would not be paid retroactively for months before an application is filed when this would require a permanent reduction in the beneficiary's future monthly benefits. The advisory council recommendation is intended to insure that an OASDI beneficiary's continuing income, on which he has to rely for the remainder of his life, is not reduced. The proposed improvement would make the law more consistent with the objective of providing adequate benefit income for the aged, and would become effective with claims filed in June 1973.

Three cost-sharing reforms are proposed in the Medicare program to reduce financial burdens for patients with long hospital stays and to discourage the utilization of medically inappropriate or uneconomical services. The current hospital insurance cost sharing would be replaced by new provisions which, for the first time, would be directly related to actual services used and charges incurred by the beneficiary. This proposal would also sharply reduce the very high cost-sharing currently applicable to beneficiaries with long hospital stays. Other cost-sharing reforms include a substitute for the present annual deductible in the supplementary medical insurance (SMI) program by one which keeps pace with the beneficiary's ability to pay for medical care, as measured by the increase in cash benefits, and an increase in the SMI coinsurance rate. The proposals would be effective January 1, 1974.

DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

This chapter presents the budget and program estimates for the Department of Housing and Urban Development. In all but a few cases, these estimates are also covered in part 4 of the budget (the Federal program by function) under the heading "Community Development and Housing."

The major divisions of this chapter conform to the Department's functional organization for program administration, as set forth below:

1. Housing production and mortgage credit covers the programs and activities of the Federal Housing Administration and the Government National Mortgage Association. Among the activities covered by this head are commitments to provide housing under the homeownership assistance, rental housing assistance, rent supplement, and low-rent public housing programs.

Under these and other subsidy programs the Federal Government has committed itself to long-term housing assistance payments which will cost the Federal taxpayer in the range of $57 billion to $82 billion in direct subsidy payments alone, as well as additional sums for various tax subsidies. These programs have not produced results commensurate with the costs to the taxpayer. Instead, the statutory programs have:

(a) Provided a fortunate few with new housing through subsidies totaling $700 to $3,000 annually, while other families in the same income range pay more for unsubsidized housing that is not new;

(b) Provided windfall profits and tax shelters to intermediaries in the housing and financial sectors;

(c) Created strong pressures for builders, developers, suppliers, and laborers to inflate construction and land costs, causing subsidized housing to cost more than comparable unsubsidized housing; and

(d) Placed families in homes which they cannot afford to maintain, thus severely straining the family budget.

The Administration is evaluating alternative means for enabling families and individuals to afford adequate housing on their own. During this review, the Federal Government will continue to honor statutory and other commitments made under the low-rent public housing, rent supplements, homeownership assistance, and rental housing assistance programs. However, no new commitments under these programs will be made. The Federal Government will assist low- and moderate-income families to satisfy their housing needs by:

(a) Insuring low-downpayment mortgages;

(b) Continuing efforts to bring down the cost of housing through research and development of improved building techniques; and

(c) Enforcing laws against discrimination in housing which prevent families from obtaining decent housing.

Housing payments resulting from existing commitments are expected to total $2.0 billion in 1974.

2. Housing management includes the Department's single combined appropriation providing subsidy payments for homeownership assistance, rental housing assistance, rent supplements, low-rent public housing, and college housing. Certain other management functions, such as community disposal operations, liquidating programs, and disaster activities under reimbursement from the Office of Emergency Preparedness are also included under this heading.

The housing management function in the Department also includes the management and disposition of acquired properties, and loan and mortgage servicing for insured programs. These functions are not directly reflected under the "Housing Management" head in this chapter since they involve activities which relate to both housing production and management. They are included in the appropriate schedules under the heading "Housing Production and Mortgage Credit."

3. Community planning and management covers the provision of planning and management assistance through the comprehensive planning program. The new communities program, including the activities of the New Communities Development Corporation, is also presented under this head.

4. Community development programs include all of the physical development and assistance programs of the Department other than housing production and management, such as urban renewal and model cities. This category will include a program of urban community development revenue sharing beginning on July 1, 1974.

Other major divisions reflecting the Department's organization include the Federal Insurance Administration, Research and technology, Fair housing and equal opportunity, and Departmental management. Descriptions of these activities are found in the narratives under the appropriate headings.

Day-to-day administration, processing and funding decisions for programs of the Department of Housing and Urban Development are carried out in 39 area offices and in 37 insuring offices located within the geographical boundaries of 10 regional offices.

This appropriation covers the salaries and expenses of housing production and mortgage credit programs which are not financed from other sources. In addition to this appropriation, certain housing production activities are financed with the corporate funds of the Federal Housing Administration and the Government National Mortgage Association.

[RENT SUPPLEMENT PROGRAM]

[The limitation otherwise applicable to the maximum payments that may be required in any fiscal year by all contracts entered into under section 101 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965 (12 U.S.C. 1701s) is increased by $48,000,000: Provided, That no part of the foregoing contract authority shall be used for incurring any obligation in connection with any dwelling unit or project which is not either part of a workable program for community improvement meeting the requirements of section 101(c) of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1451(c)), or which is without local official approval for participation in this program.] (Department of Housing and Urban Development; Space, Science, Veterans, and Certain Other Independent Agencies Appropriation Act, 1973.)

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965 (12 U.S.C. 1701s) authorized rent supplement payments to owners of certain private housing on behalf of qualified low-income tenants. Housing owners eligible for contracts with a maximum term of 40 years are private nonprofit groups, cooperative, or limited dividend owners who provide housing financed with mortgages insured by FHA under the market interest rate mortgage insurance program for low- or moderate-income families.

To be eligible for rent supplements, a tenant cannot have an income higher than the maximum limits that can be established for occupancy of federally aided low-rent public housing in the same area. The tenant must be elderly, physically handicapped, displaced from his home by governmental action, living in substandard housing, an occupant or former occupant of a dwelling damaged or destroyed by a natural disaster, or member of the armed services serving on active duty or spouse thereof.

Tenants are required to pay 25% of their income for rent. Rent supplements making up the difference between this amount and full economic rent are paid to the project owner on behalf of the tenant. As the tenant's income rises, the supplement payments are reduced.

The HUD Act of 1968 made it possible for the rent supplement program to be used in conjunction with State and locally assisted subsidized housing programs, and the HUD Act of 1969 allowed up to 40% of housing under the rental housing assistance program (section 236) to be occupied by families receiving rent supplement assistance. This provision resulted in a greater economic mix in projects financed under the section 236 program, where HUD payments to lenders reduce effective interest rates on mortgages to as low as 1 percent.

Budget program.—Effective January 5, 1973, new commitments were suspended pending the review of Federal housing programs as discussed in the introduction to this chapter. Applications which have reached the feasibility approval stage may proceed to completion in 1973 and 1974. In addition, those units which are necessary to meet statutory or other specific program commitments will be approved in the coming months. Should the results of the reevaluation lead to the reinstatement of the program, ample carryover contract authority, estimated at $38.6 million, is expected to be available in 1974 for that purpose. This amount would provide support for an estimated 25,000 to 35,000 units.

The following table summarizes the significant program data relating to these units.

[HOMEOWNERSHIP AND RENTAL HOUSING ASSISTANCE]

[The limitation on total payments that may be required in any fiscal year by all contracts entered into under section 235 of the National Housing Act, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1715z), is increased by $170,000,000 and the limitation on total payments under those entered into under section 236 of such Act (12 U.S.C. 1715z-1) is increased by $175,000,000.] (Department of Housing and Urban Development; Space, Science, Veterans, and Certain Other Independent Agencies Appropriation Act, 1973.)

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 authorized two programs of subsidies to reduce mortgage interest rates on behalf of lower income families to as low as 1% in order to assist them in purchasing or renting new or existing housing which they could not otherwise afford.

Under the Homeownership assistance program, periodic payments are made to mortgagees on behalf of families purchasing their own homes. The homeowner is required to make monthly payments totaling 20% of family income toward mortgage principal, interest, taxes, insurance, and mortgage insurance premiums. Eligibility to participate in the program is limited to families whose incomes do not exceed 135% of incomes set for admission to low-rent public housing in the area, except that 20% of the funds for these programs may be used for families with higher incomes which do not exceed 90% of the limits for section 221(d)(3) below market interest rate housing. A deduction of $300 per minor child is permitted in determining family income without regard to any income of such child. Family incomes are recertified every year.

Under the rental housing assistance program, assistance payments to the mortgagee reduce the monthly payment which the owner of a rental or cooperative project is required to pay for principal, interest, and mortgage insurance premium under the mortgage covering the project. These savings are passed on to the tenant in the form of reduced rentals. Rental charges collected by the project owner in excess of the basic charges are returned to the Secretary for deposit in a revolving fund to offset payments made to the mortgagee. While income eligibility requirements are the same as for the homeownership program, the family is required to make rental payments amounting to 25% of income.

Budget program.—Effective January 5, 1973, new commitments were suspended pending the review of Federal housing programs as discussed in the introduction to this chapter. Applications which have reached the feasibility approval stage may proceed to completion in 1973 and 1974. In addition, those units which are necessary to meet statutory or other specific program commitments will be approved in coming months. Should the results of the reevaluation lead to the reinstatement of the programs, ample carryover contract authority, estimated at $221.0 million for section 235 and $171.5 million for section 236 is expected to be available in 1974 for that purpose. This amount would provide support for an estimated 260,000 section 235 units and 190,500 section 236 units.

Assistance to nonprofit sponsors of low- and moderate-income housing is authorized by section 106 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968, as amended.

Rehabilitation or construction loans.—Under section 106(b) the Secretary is authorized to make interest-free loans to nonprofit organizations to cover 80% of pre-construction costs in connection with low- and moderate-income housing projects which are covered by a federally assisted program.

Technical assistance.—Under section 106(a), information, advice, and technical assistance may be provided with respect to the construction, rehabilitation, and operation of low- and moderate-income housing by nonprofit organizations.

Budget program.—Beginning in January 1973, no further loans will be made under section 106(b) pending review of Federal housing subsidy programs as discussed in the introduction to this chapter. Activity under section 106(a) was discontinued in 1973, since the program is considered an ineffective means of providing assistance which is available elsewhere from a variety of public and private organizations.

This section describes the production program for the low-rent public housing program and the status of the low-rent public housing loan fund. Appropriations for payments of annual contribution contracts are provided under the heading Housing payments in the Housing management section of this chapter.

The United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1401 et seq.), authorizes a low-rent public housing program to help provide safe and sanitary dwellings within the financial reach of low-income families. Such housing is owned and operated by local housing authorities created under State law. Federal loans and annual contributions assist local housing authorities (LHA's) in financing the construction of low-rent housing and in maintaining the low-rent character of such housing after completion.

Contract authority is available for use without specific appropriation action although the budget program is subject to congressional review. Management of the program, including modernization and payment of operating subsidies, is administered by the Assistant Secretary for Housing Management. The production phase of the program is administered by the Assistant Secretary for Housing Production and Mortgage Credit.

The following table shows the commitment of annual contribution contract authority compared with available authority:

¹ Commitments of contract authority, before 1972, had been made at the execution stage of contract approval. In 1972, in order to provide a better basis for conformity with decentralization of the approval process, the commitment of contract authority was changed to the point at which projects are approved.

Annual contribution obligation requirements based on contract authority utilized are estimated at $1,214.5 million in 1973 and $1,305.0 million in 1974 and are included in the Housing payments estimates in the Housing management section of this chapter.

Budget program.—Production. Effective January 5, 1973, new commitments were suspended pending the review of Federal housing programs as discussed in the introduction to this chapter. However, projects which are necessary to meet statutory or other specific program commitments including the execution of preliminary loan contracts, will proceed to annual contributions contract approval in 1973 and 1974. Depending upon the results of the housing program reevaluation previously referred to, additional contract authority may be requested for the 1974 program.

The projected workload accomplishments and the status of the production program is presented in the following tabulations:

Operating subsidies.—The $350 million for operating subsidies in 1973, includes full forward funding in 1973 as well as additional amounts to adjust prior year budgets under the terms of the interim policy announced by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development on December 1, 1972. The 1974 level provides for continuation of this policy through 1974 and full forward funding for that year. These amounts will compensate local housing authorities in each year for the cost of mandatory rent reductions imposed by congressional legislation. They will also provide additional funds to assist local authorities in meeting their operating costs.

Loans.—Loans are made to local authorities to finance the early costs of project development, modernization of existing projects and certain administrative requirements. These loans are made with available working funds, and, when necessary, with funds borrowed from the Treasury for this purpose. Under the Housing Act of 1949, borrowings outstanding at any one time from the Treasury may not exceed $1.5 billion. No outstanding borrowings are anticipated on June 30, 1973, or June 30, 1974.

Financing.—Loan approvals cover the maximum amount of funds the Department may loan under contract to local housing authorities in developing or modernizing projects. The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1969 authorizes these loans up to 100% of the total project costs. Experience indicates, however, that only a minor portion of Federal loan approvals will be outstanding at any one time in the form of direct Federal loans because private financing is relied upon as the major source of funds for temporary loans. Accordingly, section 203(b) of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 amended section 20 of the Housing Act of 1937 so that the ceiling on borrowing authority of $1.5 billion applies only to Federal loans which the Secretary estimates will actually be disbursed and not to Federal approvals which are not expected to result in actual outlays. The Secretary has set the maximum Federal loan exposure factor (i.e., the maximum demand for Federal loans at any one time) at 10% of loan approvals outstanding. The following table shows the status of loan approvals:

¹ Data presented on a commitment basis. Conversion made in 1972 to provide better control and conformity with decentralization of the approval process.

When the Federal direct loans to a local housing authority accumulate to an amount which is attractive to private investors, the authority sells short-term temporary notes to the public and utilizes the proceeds to repay the Federal loans and to meet current needs for additional working capital. These notes are secured by the Federal Government's pledge to make Federal loans, if necessary, covering up to 100% of the development cost of the project. The notes sold at an average interest rate of 2.8% in 1972.

In 1972, direct Federal loans were refunded through secured loans by private investors in the amount of $721 million. Refunding is estimated at $730 million in 1973 and $490 million in 1974. The temporary notes sold to private investors are issued for short periods averaging 7 months, and may be reissued several times and in increasing amounts before the project or modernization is permanently financed. As a result, a considerable turnover of short-term notes takes place and the volume of loan activity conducted under the program during any fiscal year greatly exceeds the amount of loans outstanding at the end of that fiscal year. The following table shows the status of temporary financing and refinancing of production and management loans during 1972 and estimated transactions during 1973 and 1974.

	[In millions of dollars]

Normally, LHA-owned dwellings are permanently financed at or near completion through the sale of long-term bonds to the public. These are usually 40-year serial bonds and are secured by the Federal Government's pledge to pay annual contributions in sufficient amounts to meet principal and interest payments. In 1972 bonds sold at an average interest rate of 5.1%. As of June 30, 1972, there were 917,000 dwellings potentially eligible for bonding. Of these, 823,500 dwellings had been bonded, leaving approximately 93,500 dwellings to be bonded.

The utilization of permanent financing obtained from bond sales for 1972, 1973 and 1974 follows:

¹ Balances of selected resources are identified on the statement of financial condition.

Title IV of the Housing Act of 1950 (12 U.S.C. 1749), as amended, authorized financial assistance to colleges and eligible hospitals for the construction or acquisition of housing and related facilities such as student centers, dining halls, and infirmaries. This assistance was usually provided through debt service grants which reduce the cost of borrowing on the private market. Grants could be made for a period not to exceed 40 years in amounts equal to the difference between the average annual debt service on loans obtained in the private market, and the average annual debt service which would have been required if the loan had been made at a 3 percent interest rate.

Budget Program.—The college housing program was terminated on January 5, 1973. Existing program commitments will continue to be honored, however, including those pursuant to outstanding loan and grant reservations. The college housing program is an ineffective means of carrying out the Presidential policy of focusing higher educational assistance on individual students, based on need. Under this program, the benefits are passed uniformly to assist all resident students, regardless of income. Even when available, the indirect assistance does little to reduce the financial barrier to the education of low-income students, since the total charges for education are so high.

Financing.—Funds for the direct loan program have come primarily through the use of Treasury borrowing authority and from the sale of participation certificates backed by pools of college housing loans held by the Federal Government, as authorized by appropriation acts. The Treasury borrowing authority now totals $3,775 million.

Sales of participation certificates, as provided in Public Law 89-429, Participation Sales Act of 1966 (80 Stat. 164), amounted to $2.2 billion through 1969. In order to pay the interest on the participation certificates, funds are appropriated to match the difference between the interest due on the participation certificates and the interest collections on the college housing bonds underlying the certificates.

The budget authority required for insufficiencies is computed as follows:

Normally a private security supported by a debt service grant is sold by the educational institution at the time of construction contract award. In those cases where an institution is unable to obtain funds in the private market the Department of Housing and Urban Development will ordinarily purchase its bond when construction is well advanced. Direct Federal loan disbursements are estimated at $50 million in 1973 and $30 million 1974.

¹ Balances of selected resources are identified on the statement of financial condition.

The direct loan program was established by section 202 of the Housing Act of 1959 to provide financial assistance for housing for lower middle-income persons who are elderly or handicapped. This program has been phased out and similar housing has been provided under the rental housing assistance program.

Budget program.—No additional loan authority has been authorized in recent years and none are proposed.

Financing.—Funds for loans have been provided by appropriations which constitute a revolving fund. Additional financing has been obtained through issuance of certificates of participation in pools of mortgages from this program as provided by the Participation Sales Act of 1966 (80 Stat. 164). In order to pay the interest of participation certificates, appropriations are required for the difference in the interest rates on the participation certificates and that on the mortgages underlying the certificates.

The appropriations required for insufficiencies are computed as presented in the following table:

Operating results.—Estimated retained earnings at the close of the budget year are $69.6 million. This position reflects the fact that interest is collected on loans outstanding while no interest is paid on appropriations, the primary source of financing for the program.

The FHA created by the National Housing Act of 1934, is a noncorporate business-type entity, which was brought under the Government Corporation Control Act by the Housing Act of 1948. The principal purposes of FHA are to improve home financing practices, to encourage improved housing standards and conditions, to further homeownership, and to stabilize the mortgage market. These objectives are achieved through the insurance of loans for financing the production, purchase, repair, and improvement of residential properties.

The accompanying table identifies the various programs and shows the amount of insurance written and the amount in force as of June 30, 1972, under each.

For financial purposes, FHA programs are grouped under four separate insurance funds established by statute. The largest insurance fund is the Mutual mortgage insurance fund for the insurance of mortgage loans on homes under section 203. Under this fund, mortgagors are allowed, at termination of their mortgages, to share in the rebate of premiums paid into the fund which are not required for expenses or losses. Through June 30, 1971, such participation payments to homeowners had amounted to $208.7 million.

The Cooperative management housing insurance fund covers the insurance of mortgages on management-type cooperatives and supplementary loans under section 213. This fund is mutual also, and participation payments made through 1972 totaled $11.6 million.

The General insurance fund covers the insurance of loans on property repairs and improvements; on basic and special-purpose multifamily housing, including cooperatives (except management-type cooperatives), condominiums and housing for the elderly; on urban renewal, middle-income, armed forces housing, and on war and defense housing. Insurance of loans for land development, group practice medical facilities and nonprofit hospitals are also covered by this fund. In addition, the insurance of supplemental loans for the financing of improvements and additions to multifamily projects, nursing homes and group practice medical facilities is included in the General insurance fund.

The Special risk insurance fund was created by the Housing Act of 1968 to carry out mortgage insurance obligations in cases where insurance was written on a mortgage covering property in older, declining urban areas which would not otherwise be eligible for mortgage insurance; on behalf of a high-risk mortgagor who would not be eligible for FHA mortgage insurance but who, with counseling, can become an acceptable credit risk; on behalf of a mortgagor receiving interest reduction payments; and on a mortgage covering experimental housing where strict adherence to State or local building regulations is not observed.

Income from fees, premiums, and investments are credited to the funds; operating expenses and other expenses and losses connected with foreclosed property and defaulted notes and mortgages are charged to the funds. Through June 30, 1972, income had amounted to $6,324.5 million, and expenses, losses, and distributive share payments to $4,694.1 million, leaving a reserve of $1,630.4 million for the payment of future expenses and losses.

Budget program.—Budget requirements for mortgage and loan insurance operations are embodied in (1) an administrative expense limitation covering those expenses of the central office related to the general direction of operations, the establishment of policies and procedures, and the provision of administrative management and services for the agency, and (2) a nonadministrative expense limitation covering the operating expenses of both the central office and the field related to the initiation of insurance, the maintenance of insurance on the books, and the settlement activities associated with the payment of claims; the acquisition, management, and disposition of mortgages and properties acquired under mortgage insurance contracts; and the liquidation of notes acquired in connection with claims under property improvement loan insurance contracts. The Assistant Secretary for Housing Production and Mortgage Credit is responsible for housing production activities under the mortgage insurance and housing subsidy programs, for the servicing of insured home mortgages, and for direction of the property improvement program. The Assistant Secretary for Housing Management is responsible for the servicing of insured multifamily housing mortgages, for the management and disposition of mortgages and properties acquired under mortgage insurance contracts, and for the administration of contracts for housing subsidy payments. Program developments for 1974 are summarized in the accompanying table Program Highlights.

Summary of operating expense estimates.—Operating expenses are paid out of operating income, subject to congressional limitation. Expenses for 1973 are estimated at $16.6 million for administrative operations and $170.6 million for nonadministrative operations. The 1974 estimate is $15.3 million for administrative expenses and $178.7 million for nonadministrative expenses.

Financing.—Through 1965, insurance claims were met largely by the issuance of debentures, which are subsequently redeemed out of income and proceeds from the sale of acquired properties and mortgages. In 1972, $21.3

million of debentures were issued, and $54.1 million were redeemed. The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965 authorized FHA to pay claims in cash and to borrow from the Treasury as necessary to do so. Home mortgage claims and multifamily housing claims under sections 220, 221, 233 and 235(j) are now being paid in cash.

The Special risk insurance fund, initiated by the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968, was capitalized with $5 million advanced from the General insurance fund in 1969. During the first few years of operation of a new insurance fund, operating costs generally exceed income from fees and premiums. An additional $10 million was transferred from the General insurance fund in 1970 and $5 million in 1971, bringing the total amount transferred to $20 million, the maximum amount allowable by law. Borrowing from the Treasury to pay insurance claims under the Special risk insurance fund will aggregate $475 million by the end of 1974.

Retained earnings.—Insurance reserves, available for the payment of future expenses and losses, amounted to $1,630.4 million at the end of 1972.

Insurance authority.—The authority given to the FHA for its insurance operations was extended by House Joint Resolution 1301 to June 30, 1973. In general, these authorizations are without dollar limitation, except for the credit assistance homeownership program.

The Housing Act of 1964, as amended by the Participation Sales Act of 1966, authorizes the pooling of mortgages or other types of obligations of certain Government departments or agencies and the sale by the Government National Mortgage Association, as trustee, of beneficial interests, or participations, in such pools. The Participation Sales Act of 1966 also authorized the establishment of appropriations to cover payments for insufficiencies in the amounts required to be paid by the trustors on account of outstanding participations. These insufficiencies are comprised primarily of the excess of interest payments to holders of participation certificates over the interest payments received from the pooled mortgages or other obligations. A permanent, indefinite appropriation is available to cover insufficiencies for sales authorized in 1967, while those authorized in 1968 require annual appropriations. Use of the indefinite and definite insufficiency appropriations is reflected in the following trustor accounts: Housing for the elderly or handicapped fund; college housing fund; public facility loans; and Government National Mortgage Association, special assistance functions and management and liquidating functions funds.

Since 1971, certificates are being redeemed as they mature in lieu of reselling them in the private market. This will reduce the volume of outstanding certificates as well as the interest insufficiencies. Certificates will be redeemed in 1973 by using the unobligated balance in certain trustee accounts (primarily the college housing fund and the Veterans Administration loan guaranty revolving and direct loan revolving funds).

Through September 30, 1968, this fund purchased and sold preferred stock in the secondary market operations of the Federal National Mortgage Association and made loans to it as needed to support its operations involving the purchase of federally insured or guaranteed mortgages. On that date, the Association redeemed all preferred stock and became a private corporation owned by its common stockholders. All authority for investment in preferred stock of the corporation lapsed.

The fund is still authorized to make loans to the Association. Such loans were made in the first few months of the Association's existence as a private corporation while it arranged lines of credit with commercial banks. No loans have been made since that time and the loan authority will be used only in emergency situations.

The Association is authorized to make commitments to purchase and to purchase FHA-insured and VA-guaranteed mortgages totaling $7,750.2 million at any one time. Of this, $5,537.4 million is available to the President to provide special assistance, as may be in the public interest, for financing of (1) selected types of home mortgages pending establishment of their marketability, and (2) home mortgages generally as a means of stabilizing homebuilding activities and of contributing to overall economic stability. In addition, specific assistance programs have been authorized by the Congress in the amount of $2,212.8 million for cooperative housing mortgages, low- and moderate-income housing mortgages and a phased-out program for military housing mortgages.

Budget program.—Special assistance activity is of two principal types: (1) commitments which are expected to mature into purchase of mortgages which will be held in the GNMA portfolio; and (2) commitments under the Tandem Plans which will be sold to a private investor before purchase of the mortgage or which, if a purchase by GNMA results, will be followed by a sale of the mortgage to private investors.

New commitments of the first type are estimated to total $5 million in 1973 for financing mortgages on single-family residences in disaster areas. No new commitments are planned in 1974.

Commitments of the second type are estimated at $4.8 billion in 1973 and $2.4 billion in 1974. The decrease in commitments results from the suspension of new commitments under the housing subsidy programs and the fact that tandem plans for unsubsidized housing, while available will not be needed in 1974. Such commitments primarily will provide financing for: (1) multi-family market rate interest mortgages insured by FHA under section 221(d)(3), Rent Supplement or section 236; and (2) homes for lower income families. In addition to these new commitments, the budget contains provisions to adjust the final amounts of commitments made previously.

Actual purchases by GNMA are estimated at $1.7 billion in 1973 and $1.2 billion in 1974. Of these mortgages $1.6 billion will be disposed of by prompt sales to private investors in 1973 and $1.1 billion in 1974.

Purchase of below-market interest rate mortgages during 1973 and 1974 are estimated at $114 million and $125 million, respectively. No further commitments are contemplated.

During 1973, it is planned to sell approximately $769 million of mortgages from the portfolio which will realize net receipts of approximately $460 million.

Financing.—Funds for the mortgage loan portfolio are obtained from mortgage principal liquidations and from borrowings from the Treasury. A portion of the mortgage portfolio is financed by participation certificate sales, which amounted to $1.2 billion in prior years and for which there is a remaining liability of $813 million offset by $121.6 million on deposit with the trustee in anticipation of scheduled retirements. Until 1969, participation certificate sales were considered as sales of assets and as budgetary receipts. Since then, they are classified as agency borrowings. In view of the revised treatment, further participation certificate borrowings are not contemplated in lieu of regular Treasury borrowings. Funds for operating costs, mainly interest expenses and tandem point allowances, are obtained primarily from mortgage investment earnings and from appropriations for deficiencies between the interest expense on participation certificates and the income from related mortgage interest and investment earnings.

Operations.—Until 1969, income from operations exceeded expenses, and a reserve of $115.2 million was accumulated from retained earnings. After that date, the impact from purchases of section 221(d)(3) below-market interest mortgages and the current costs of tandem plan programs has resulted in losses of $226.5 million through 1972—$10.2 million in 1969, $30.8 million in 1970, $60.2 million in 1971, and $125.3 million in 1972. Of these losses, $15.7 million has been restored by appropriations for participation certificate interest deficiencies. After offsetting the reserve of $115.2 million, the remaining loss is now carried as an impairment to capital in the amount of $95.6 million at June 30, 1972. An appropriation to restore capital is requested for 1974. Because of the continued higher interest rates of Treasury borrowings and participation certificate borrowings over mortgage portfolio interest rates, operations are expected to result in net expenses exceeding income and losses are estimated at $166.3 million in 1973 and $128.6 million in 1974.

Appropriations for insufficiencies under Participation sales fund will restore $10.3 million of the 1973 losses and $9.2 million of the 1974 losses.

The Association, under its management and liquidating functions, is required by law to manage and liquidate its initial mortgage portfolio and those other mortgages, loans, or obligations that have been or that may be acquired from authorized sources (Public Law 89-117, approved Aug. 10, 1965). Such liquidation is to be conducted in an orderly manner, with a minimum of adverse effect upon the home mortgage market and minimum loss to the Federal Government. Liquidation of the portfolio is accomplished through regular principal repayments according to their amortization schedules, by sales of mortgages as rapidly as they can be absorbed by private investors without serious disruption of normal market conditions, and as the result of other principal credits arising from prepayments and foreclosures.

The initial mortgage portfolio in this activity consisted of mortgages on hand at, or purchased under contracts made before, November 1, 1954. Certain additional mortgages, loans, and other obligations may be acquired for this portfolio from the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, and residential housing mortgages may also be acquired from any Federal instrumentality from time to time pursuant to the provisions of Public Law 89-117.

Budget program.—Purchases of mortgages under contracts made prior to November 1, 1954, for this portfolio were completed during 1958.

In 1972 GNMA purchased $301 thousand of mortgages from the Federal Housing Administration under these functions. It is not expected that any purchase of mortgages under these functions will be made during 1973 or 1974.

Sales of mortgages in the amount of $210.6 million were made in 1972. Sales of $469.5 million are estimated for 1973, and $175.9 million in 1974.

Financing.—These functions are financed principally by Treasury borrowings, portfolio liquidations and sales of participations in mortgage pools. Net repayments to the Treasury were $268.4 million in 1972 and is estimated at $494.2 million in 1973, and $155.9 million in 1974.

Principal repayments on pooled mortgages were transferred to the Participation sales fund for repayment of certificates of participation in the amount of $69.7 million in 1972, and transfers of $76.5 million and $68.6 million are expected in 1973 and 1974, respectively. This program is more fully explained under the Participation sales fund.

Operating results.—Net income amounted to $5.2 million in 1972. A loss of $21.2 million is estimated for 1973 and a loss of $10.5 million is estimated for 1974. The following table shows the financing of the insufficiencies:

Retained earnings reserved for insufficiencies and other losses and contingencies amounted to $147.1 million at the end of 1972 and are estimated at $126.0 million and $115.5 million, respectively, for 1973 and 1974. Reductions in the amount of retained earnings at the end of 1962, 1963, 1964, and 1965 resulted from payments from earnings of $40 million, $25 million, $15 million, and $15 million, respectively, to the U.S. Treasury, amounts which were considered to be in excess of the Association's needs for losses and contingencies. No payment to the Treasury out of earnings is projected for 1973 and 1974.

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 authorizes the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) to guarantee the timely payment of principal and interest on trust certificates or other securities issued by any financial institution approved for this purpose, and based on and backed by a trust or pool composed of FHA-insured or VA-guaranteed mortgages.

Budget program.—During 1972, GNMA issued guarantees on securities totaling $3.5 billion. Guarantees of mortgage-backed securities are estimated at $4.8 billion for 1973 and $5.3 billion in 1974.

Financing.—In addition to an application fee, guarantee fees and other charges will be assessed issuers of guaranteed securities to cover costs incurred by GNMA in connection with the guarantees and to establish a reserve against possible future payments of claims under the guarantee.

Operating results.—No claims are anticipated. Fees collected exceeded expenses by $2.8 million in 1972. Fee collections are expected to exceed expenses by $5.3 million in 1973 and $7.2 million in 1974. These amounts will be retained to cover future year expenses and as a reserve against losses.

Title III of the National Housing Act, as amended, authorized the Association to create trusts to facilitate the financing of mortgages and other loan obligations owned by Government agencies. Under this authority, the Association sold to private investors participations in the interest and principal collections on pooled loan obligations pledged by various trustor agencies.

Sales of certificates of participation in those pools were shown as borrowings from the public in the budget schedules of the trustor agencies originally owing the loan obligations. Collections on the pooled obligations are transferred to the Association as trustee and invested by the Participation sales fund until distributed to the holders of participation certificates in accordance with the terms of the trust agreement. At this time, they are redistributed to trustor agencies for payment of interest and retirement of certificates.

A total of four separate trusts have been created. The amount of participation certificates originally issued under each is as follows (in millions of dollars):

Trust	Certificates issued
Government mortgage liquidation trust.....	1,790
Small business obligations trust.....	350
Federal assets liquidation trust.....	3,230
Federal assets financing trust.....	4,250

For purposes of budget presentation, the operations of these four trusts are combined into a single set of schedules.

The assets pooled in these trusts were pledged by the Veterans' Administration, the Small Business Administration, the Department of Agriculture, and the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, as well as the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The Small Business obligations trust was liquidated in 1971.

Whenever interest collections on pooled obligations together with investment income are insufficient to cover required interest payments and a share of administrative and other costs, the trustor agencies pay to the Association, as trustee, amounts equal to the insufficiencies. The costs of any such insufficiencies are covered by appropriations which appear in the accounts of the trustor agencies.

In the event the principal collections on pooled loans are not sufficient to meet scheduled retirements of participation certificates, the Association, as trustee, may either borrow from the Treasury or sell additional certificates to redeem those coming due. Alternatively, those trustor accounts with unobligated balances available may repurchase pooled loans to provide the cash required for scheduled redemptions. This latter course was used in 1972 and will be used in 1973.

The College housing fund repurchased $331 million of pooled loans in 1972. In 1973 the Veterans' Administration loan guaranty and direct loan funds will repurchase about $175 million and the College housing fund about $19 million.

This consolidated appropriation provides for housing subsidy payments for the following programs: Rent supplement, homeownership assistance (section 235), rental housing assistance (section 236), low-rent public housing, and college housing. With the exception of low-rent public housing, authority to enter into the underlying contracts is approved in appropriation acts. Authority to enter into contracts under the low-rent public housing program is available without appropriation action.

The cumulative contract authority shown in the following tables represent an annual limitation on the total obligations that may be incurred to make annual housing payments. Most contracts obligate the Federal Government to make annual payments up to the contract amount over the life of the project or a mortgage which may not exceed 40 years. Since payments generally commence only upon completion of construction, the annual payments would not begin to reach the maximum amounts authorized until 1 to 4 years after approval of the contracts.

Under the various direct subsidy housing programs, contract authority already available through 1972 will cost the taxpayer in the range of $57 billion to $82 billion over the life of the projects, as well as additional sums for various tax subsidies.

Contracts for units of production are approved by the Assistant Secretary for Housing Production and Mortgage Credit. The Assistant Secretary for Housing Management is responsible for the management of all assisted housing when completed and for making required subsidy payments resulting from the contractual commitments entered into during the production phase of the five programs. In addition, he is responsible for providing low-rent public housing operating subsidies to local authorities (LHAs) and for the administration of the low-rent public housing modernization program.

1. Rent supplement.—Payments are made pursuant to contracts under section 101 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965 (12 U.S.C. 1701s) which authorizes the Secretary of HUD to pay rent supplements to owners of certain private housing rented to low-income tenants. The following table presents the units under payment and the amount needed to make those payments. The increase in payments reflects a substantial rise in the number of units under management based on commitments made through January 5, 1973 (dollars in thousands):

	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Units under payment.....	92,070	126,200	162,000
Cumulative contract authority commitments.....	$204,916	$241,416	$241,416
Obligations.....	$77,608	$122,000	$164,000

2. Homeownership assistance.—Payments are made pursuant to contracts under section 235 of the National Housing Act, as amended. Under this program, the Federal Government makes periodic payments on behalf of lower income families purchasing their own homes thereby reducing the homeowner's monthly payment.

The following table sets forth the units under payment and the amounts needed to make those payments. The increase in required payments reflects the rapid growth in the number of units under payment based on commitments made through January 5, 1973 (dollars in thousands):

	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Units under payment:

Cumulative contract authority commitments.....	$411,517	$440,017	$444,017
Obligations.....	$235,159	$340,000	$412,000

3. Rental housing assistance.—Interest reduction payments are made pursuant to section 236 of the National

Housing Act, as amended. These periodic payments on behalf of the owner of the project are passed on to lower income families occupying the units in the form of reduced rent. The following table sets forth the units under payment and the amounts needed to make those payments. The increase in required payments reflects the rapid rise in the number of units under payment based on commitments made through January 5, 1975 (dollars in thousands):

	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Units under payment.....	98,699	174,000	355,000
Cumulative contract authority commitments.....	$436,927	$528,527	$527,227

Less repayment of excess rent collections.....	-$2,499	-$3,000	-$5,000
Obligations, net.....	$82,818	$112,000	$200,000

4. Low-rent public housing.—Annual contribution contracts are entered into pursuant to the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1401 et seq.). The housing is owned and/or leased and operated by local housing authorities (LHAs) created under State law. Contractual payments are made by the Federal Government based upon contracts executed with the LHAs.

The use of $350 million for operating subsidies in 1973 include full forward funding of operating subsidies in 1973 as well as additional amounts to adjust prior year budgets under the terms of the interim policy announced by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development on December 1, 1972. The 1974 level will continue this policy through 1974, providing full forward funding for that year. These amounts will compensate local housing authorities for the cost of mandatory rent reductions imposed by congressional legislation. They will also provide additional funds to assist local authorities to meet their operating costs. The following table summarizes the annual contribution payments required in 1974 as compared with 1972 and 1973 (dollars in thousands):

Cumulative contract authority committed.....	$1,345,807	$1,574,250	$1,574,250

The increase in annual contributions requirements from $1,214.5 million in 1973 to $1,305 million in 1974 is attributable largely to: (1) an increased number of dwellings eligible for annual contributions resulting from the completion or permanent financing of projects approved through January 5, 1973; and (2) the increased requirements resulting from financing the cost of modernization of existing structures and dwellings.

HOUSING PAYMENTS—Continued

5. College housing grants.—Payments under this program result from commitments entered into through January 5, 1973, pursuant to title IV of the Housing Act of 1950 (12 U.S.C. 1749), as amended, which authorizes payment of debt service grants to colleges and eligible hospitals. Grant payments are made directly to a Federal Reserve bank, and are paid semiannually starting with the first interest payment date on the outstanding private loan following the date of initial occupancy of the project.

The following table summarizes the debt service grants required in 1974 as compared with 1972 and 1973. The increase in requirements reflects the rise in the number of facilities eligible for grants during this period based on commitments made through January 5, 1973.

Homeownership counseling to assist low and moderate income families to become and remain homeowners is authorized by sections 235 and 237 of the National Housing Act, as amended.

The appropriation for 1972 financed an evaluation of local homeownership counseling programs, which began late in 1972 and should continue through 1974. This evaluation effort includes support for the development of training aides to assist local counseling agencies and a demonstration program under which local agencies provide counseling to homeowners in default.

In addition, the Department has been active in the enlistment of voluntary private public-service-oriented agencies to perform counseling in the area of housing selection, purchase procedures, property care and maintenance, home management, money management, and referrals to local community services. A third type of support for counseling services has been funded by means of fees paid by builders or sellers.

The Revolving fund (liquidating programs) was established by the Independent Offices Appropriation Act of 1955 for the more efficient liquidation of assets acquired under a number of housing and urban development programs. In 1971, the Public works planning advances, Grants to aid advance acquisition of land, and Alaska housing programs were transferred to the fund for liquidation.

As of June 30, 1972, the combined program assets amounted to approximately $108.7 million with a net book value of $62.5 million after allowance for losses. By the close of 1974, $901.5 million will have been recovered and returned to the Treasury.

The return to the Treasury may vary from the estimated $250 thousand depending on developments during the course of the year.

Under the Disaster Relief Act of 1970, the Office of Emergency Preparedness has the authority to direct the Department to undertake disaster relief operations. These usually involve the provision and management of temporary housing for persons displaced by disasters.

Section 406 of the Department of Housing and Urban Development; Space, Science, Veterans, and Certain Other Independent Agencies Appropriation Act of 1973 authorized the Secretary to establish a fund for disaster assistance. This fund will enable the Department to carry out disaster relief operations promptly using its own resources, when requested to do so by OEP pursuant to the Disaster Relief Act. When necessary, moneys are transferred to the fund from one or more appropriations or funds of the Department to finance disaster assistance. After the fund has been reimbursed by OEP, the contributing accounts may be repaid, although sufficient balances will be retained to enable the Department to provide emergency relief promptly.

Section 701 of the Housing Act of 1954, as amended (40 U.S.C. 461), authorizes grants to supplement State and local funds for the purpose of financing comprehensive planning programs concerned with urban and rural development. The process supported by these grants embraces all the basic factors essential to balanced growth and development, and includes: (1) preparation of comprehensive plans, (2) programming of capital improvements and other expenditures, (3) coordination of related plans adopted at various levels of government, and (4) preparation of regulatory and administrative measures in support of the foregoing. In making grants, primary emphasis is given to those agencies which are in a position to coordinate and implement public policy.

Planning and management assistance is provided under this program to States, cities, counties, multijurisdictional areas, multistate regional commissions, Indian reservations, and organizations of public officials.

Grants usually cover two-thirds of project costs, but may cover up to three-fourths of project costs for planning and management programs in certain designated areas.

In 1974, all planning and management grants will be made to States, allowing Governors to make suballocations to local governments and other eligible recipients in accordance with State priorities. The request includes an increase of $10 million which States may use to further strengthen planning and management functions including interstate planning activities. Legislation will be proposed to further broaden this program into a more flexible instrument of community planning and management assistance, which will support all aspects of governmental management, including the application of development resources.

Title VIII of the Housing Act of 1964 (20 U.S.C. 801-805; 811), as amended, authorized: (1) matching grants to States for programs which provide special training and skills needed for efficient community development, and (2) fellowship awards to qualified students preparing for careers in urban public service.

The 1974 budget proposes that these programs will terminate on June 30, 1973. No additional grant approvals will be made by the Department for these programs during 1974. Specialized training grants and fellowships are low-priority uses of Federal resources in a time of severe budgetary limitations. Assistance for training and education will be continued under other Federal programs providing aid to States and local governments and aid to students in need of financial assistance.

New community assistance grants are authorized by title IV of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3911), as amended, and title VII of the HUD Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C. 4519). Grants may be made to supplement water, sewer, and open space projects which are being assisted under section 702 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965, as amended; title VII of the Housing Act of 1961, as amended; or section 306(a)(2) of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961, as amended. In addition, under title VII, grants may be made to supplement assistance provided to projects under section 3 of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964; section 120(a) of title 23, United States Code; section 19 of the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1970; title VI of the Public Health Service Act; title II of the Library Services and Construction Act; section 5 of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965; section 703 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965; section 8 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act; section 103 or 104 of the Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963; or section 101(a)(1) of the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965.

The 1974 budget proposes that this program will terminate on June 30, 1973. No additional grant reservations will be made by the Department for this program during 1974. The budget proposes that Federal categorical support of new communities in excess of that available to other communities be discontinued. New communities may finance facilities under the new communities fund guarantee program described elsewhere in this section. Additional assistance to new communities may also be provided under other existing Federal grant programs.

Title IV of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3901), as amended, and title VII of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C. 4501), as amended, authorized several programs offering assistance to private and public new community developers. The major area of Federal support is a program of Federal guarantees under which the Secretary is authorized to guarantee the bonds, debentures, notes, and other obligations issued by or on behalf of private and public new community developers to finance land assembly and development costs.

Under title VII, a new community development project is eligible if it: (1) Will provide an alternative to disorderly urban growth; (2) will be economically feasible; (3) will contribute to the welfare of the entire area; (4) is consistent with comprehensive planning for the area; (5) has received all governmental reviews and approvals required; (6) will contribute to good living conditions in the community; (7) makes substantial provision for housing within the means of persons of low and moderate income; and (8) will make significant use of advances in design and technology. Federal guarantees of obligations issued by developers may not exceed $50 million for each new community project.

Guarantee commitments are expected to be made for 10 new communities in 1973 and 10 new communities in 1974. Guarantee commitments of $45 million for two projects were made under the title IV authority; all subsequent guarantee commitments are made under the $500 million authority provided in title VII. The following table shows the use of available title VII guarantee authority (in thousands of dollars):

TITLE VII GUARANTEE AUTHORITY

Financing.—Developers receiving guarantees are charged fees, and it is estimated that over time these will be adequate to provide sufficient funds for a self-supporting program. Treasury borrowings and appropriations for guarantee payments are authorized, if required.

Operating results.—Net operating income is estimated at $5,957 thousand in 1973 and $6,733 thousand in 1974.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Undisbursed grant obligations, 1971, $664,540 thousand (1972 adjustments, -$72 thousand); 1972, $745,303 thousand; 1973, $806,679 thousand; 1974, $206,679 thousand.

Under the model cities program, participating cities receive financial and technical assistance intended to help them plan, develop, and carry out demonstration programs containing new and imaginative proposals for improving urban living conditions.

No appropriation is requested for this program in 1974. While serving as a vehicle for demonstrating the value of local decisionmaking, the model cities program does not have a significant enough impact on social and economic problems nationally to justify continued funding as a separate program. The model cities program will be phased out during 1973. After June 30, 1973, local model cities activities may be continued at the option of the localities using funds available to them. These activities will be eligible for funding under the proposed urban community development revenue sharing program which is scheduled to begin on July 1, 1974.

Section 703 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3103) authorizes the Secretary to help finance the construction of multipurpose neighborhood centers by making grants to local public bodies and agencies for part of the project development costs. Grants do not provide funding for services offered through the centers; this is the responsibility of the local community.

The following table shows the number of centers expected to be in operation in each of the years covered by this budget:

Centers in operation:	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Start of year.....	236	336	456
Begin operation during year.....	100	120	140

No appropriation is requested for the neighborhood facility program in 1974. Since benefits from assisted projects go to residents of the localities in which they are located, there is adequate incentive to provide them at the local level, and continued Federal support for individual facilities is not warranted. Localities, however, may choose to assist such facilities using funds provided under the proposed urban community development revenue sharing program, which is scheduled to begin on July 1, 1974.

Title VII of the Housing Act of 1961 (42 U.S.C. 1500), as amended, authorizes grants to assist public bodies in preserving and creating open space lands which will enhance the urban environment. The program encourages the protection of lands having scenic, recreation, conservation, or historic value, and which at the same time promotes orderly patterns of urban growth. Grants normally cover up to 50% of total project costs.

The open space land program was terminated on January 5, 1973, and no new commitments will be made in 1974. Provision of local open space is a low priority use for Federal resources, since benefits accrue to local residents and should be supported from local financial resources. Local communities may continue to provide public open space through the use of Federal shared revenues.

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965, as amended (42 U.S.C. 3102), authorized the Secretary to make grants to local public bodies and agencies for basic water and sewer facilities other than waste treatment works. Grants normally covered up to 50% of eligible project development costs.

The program was terminated on January 5, 1973, and no new commitments will be made. Federal assistance under this program has been available to local governments which should have adequate incentive to provide such facilities themselves, and which are able to finance them through user charges. The program has benefited relatively few communities in providing services which all communities have an equal obligation to provide.

Local governments may choose to provide these facilities using funds received under the program of urban community development revenue sharing proposed for initiation on July 1, 1974.

URBAN RENEWAL

Title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1450 et seq.) authorizes Federal assistance to local public agencies for rehabilitation and redevelopment of slums and blighted areas. Activities supported under the program include: slum clearance, enforcement of local housing codes, demolition, rehabilitation, interim assistance for blighted areas, preservation of historic structures, and construction of community facilities.

Budget program.—New commitments to provide urban renewal assistance will total approximately $1 billion in 1973, excluding the special assistance provided to communities devastated by major disasters in calendar year 1972.

In 1974 $137.5 million will be used to close out urban renewal projects approved in prior years. No new projects will be approved during 1974. Project-oriented physical development programs such as urban renewal have not had sufficient success in alleviating urban problems to warrant continued separate support by the taxpayers. While urban renewal has had some success in correcting manifestations of social and economic problems, the problems themselves cannot be solved through physical development projects. Activities eligible for support under this program will be eligible for assistance under the proposed Urban community development revenue sharing program, at the discretion of recipient communities.

Budget program.—Planning advances, temporary project financing, and long-term financing of land disposed under lease agreements are provided to local renewal agencies through direct or guaranteed loans under a Treasury borrowing authorization of $1 billion. Loan commitments cover total expenditures by the local public agency in carrying out an urban renewal project. Cumulative loan commitments will be $15,893 million by the end of 1974, which will have been reduced by $8,849 million in repayments and commitment waivers, leaving a net outstanding commitment of $7,004 million on June 30, 1974.

The maximum Federal exposure (that is, the estimated maximum demand on Federal loans at any one time) is estimated at $832 million on June 30, 1974. This exposure is estimated at 12% of temporary loans, 18% of definitive loans, and 75% of planning advance commitments.

The status of loan commitments outstanding at the end of each fiscal year is given below (in thousand of dollars):

	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Total outstanding Federal loans and commitments, end of year.....	6,770,905	8,252,925	7,004,635

Unutilized commitments.....	3,230,267	3,964,322	2,272,426

Financing.—Borrowing authority previously committed is replenished through: (1) repayment of planning advances; (2) cancellation of temporary loan commitments; and (3) the repayment of direct Federal and federally guaranteed private loans from project settlement funds, including land disposition proceeds and Federal and local cash grants. Temporary Federal loan repayments from the proceeds of guaranteed loans are estimated at $429 million in 1974.

Operating results.—Grant appropriations may be used to repay borrowing from the Treasury which is otherwise unrecoverable due to losses in connection with terminated projects.

The annual net income represents only the difference between interest income and interest expense. The original deficit of $29,140 thousand which resulted from the use of appropriated funds to pay administrative expenses, will have been reduced to $23,352 thousand by June 30, 1974. It is not anticipated that a restoration of capital impairment will be necessary during the period covered by this budget.

Section 312 of the Housing Act of 1964, as amended, (42 U.S.C. 1452b), authorized the Secretary to assist owners or tenants finance the rehabilitation of residential and business properties. To be eligible for loan assistance, properties must be located in urban renewal, neighborhood development, or code enforcement project areas; certified areas; or areas covered by fair access to insurance requirements (FAIR) plans.

Budget program.—The $20 million increase in loan approvals during 1973 will be used in urban renewal project areas which are scheduled for closeout in the near future. No loan approvals will be made by the Department during 1974.

The availability of private capital for private property renovation can best be assured through local action aimed at making individual neighborhoods attractive areas in which to invest. This program has not had sufficient impact on the attractiveness of such neighborhoods to warrant continuation of a Federal subsidy. Moreover, funds have necessarily been limited to a relatively few persons, often without regard to income, resulting in an inequity to those who must take care of their own needs for rehabilitation without a subsidy. After July 1, 1974, local governments may, at their discretion, provide rehabilitation financing using funds made available under Urban community development revenue sharing.

The volume of loan activity during the 1972-73 period is as follows:

APPROVALS—NET

	1972 actual		1973 estimate
	Number	Amount	Number	Amount

Nonresidential loans.....	50	1,500	50	1,500
Total.....	6,775	$49,961	9,054	$70,000

Costs for acquired security and collateral are incurred when defaulted loans are returned to the Department by private banking institutions servicing the loans because normal collection procedures show no reasonable prospect for repayment. Such costs are estimated at $100 thousand in 1974.

Operating results.—Net operating income is estimated to be $260 thousand in 1973 and $5,105 thousand in 1974, reducing the cumulative deficit in retained earnings to $6,855 thousand. It is not anticipated that a restoration of capital impairment will be necessary during the period covered by this budget.

The Housing Amendments of 1955, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1491), authorize the Secretary to help finance public facilities construction with Federal long-term loans, when credit to support such projects is not otherwise available on reasonable terms. Loans may be made to municipalities and other political subdivisions (including Indian tribes) having populations under 50,000.

Budget program.—The program was terminated on January 5, 1973, and additional loan commitments will be made under this program. Continuation of the program is not warranted, given the ability of State governments to help communities within their borders gain access to private credit.

Financing.—The public facility loans program is funded by a Treasury borrowing authorization totaling $600 million. In the past, the Secretary has sold certificates of participation in pools of public facility loans, as authorized by Public Law 89-429. Funds are appropriated annually to cover the difference between interest due on the participation certificates and interest collections on the public facility loans underlying the certificates. The budget authority required for insufficiencies is computed as follows (in thousands of dollars):

	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Interest accrued on participation certificates	8,771	8,432	8,184
Interest accrued on an equal amount of loans in the pool	-5,277	-5,217	-4,715

Sales authorized in the 1968 appropriation act (definite appropriation)	1,782	1,221	1,100

Operating results and financial condition.—The estimated net operating loss of $6 million in the budget year is attributable in part to the $2.3 million loss on participation certificates (offset by a $2.3 million appropriation). That portion of the loss which is not offset by appropriation will bring the cumulative deficit at the end of 1974 to $26.9 million of which $18.3 million represents the allowance for losses. No restoration of capital impairment will be necessary during the period covered by this budget.

The National insurance development fund provides the funding source for two Government programs designed to meet market availability problems of property insurance: (1) the FAIR plan/riot reinsurance program, designed to afford reasonable access to essential property insurance in urban areas and to provide a degree of protection to primary insurers cooperating in such plans against excess losses from riots or civil disorders; and (2) the Federal crime insurance program, which makes insurance against burglary and robbery available at affordable premium rates in States where such coverage is not available in the normal market. The programs are authorized by the Urban Property Protection and Reinsurance Act of 1968, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1749bbb-1749bbb-21).

The FAIR plan/riot reinsurance program encompasses cooperative action by insurance companies, State governments, and the Federal Government. First, private insurers, working together and with the State insurance authority, establish a plan to provide property owners in urban areas with access to fire, extended coverage, and vandalism and malicious mischief insurance. The plan, usually referred to as the State FAIR (fair access to insurance requirements) plan, must meet specified statutory and regulatory criteria. Plans are operative in 25 States, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico. Second, each State, if the benefits of Federal riot reinsurance coverage are to be made available, must enact legislation providing for a sharing of the insured losses resulting from riots and civil disorders. Third, the Federal Government provides an opportunity to spread the risk of riot and civil disorder loss on a nationwide basis through reinsurance of private carriers at premium charges deemed adequate to meet expected losses. The basic reinsurance premium rate is currently 5 cents per $100 of direct premiums earned in reinsured lines. An Office of Review and Compliance conducts periodic examinations of FAIR plans to assure that the benefits of Federal riot reinsurance are available only to participants in FAIR plans which meet statutory and regulatory criteria.

The Federal crime insurance program provides for issuance of direct policies of insurance covering losses from burglary, robbery, and similar occurrences. Policies are issued through the facilities of private insurance companies acting as servicing agents for the program upon application directly by a property owner or through any licensed insurance agent or broker in States in which such coverages are not available at affordable rates. Insurance is written at premium rates determined to be affordable (a rate which would permit the purchase of a specific type of insurance by a reasonably prudent person in similar circumstances with due regard to the costs and benefits involved). Policies include appropriate deductible provisions and are available only on properties that meet underwriting requirements, particularly with respect to reasonable protective measures and devices to prevent or reduce loss. Premium rates are based upon the type and amount of coverage, and (for commercial risks) the nature of the enterprise and the annual gross receipts.

Budget program.—1. Riot reinsurance claims.—The amount which the Federal Government pays under the riot and civil disorder reinsurance is expected to continue at a low level.

2. Crime insurance.—(a) Insurance claims.—Claims are estimated at approximately 80% of direct earned crime insurance premiums, a substantially higher ratio than in the private crime insurance market, but at the same time reflecting loss-preventive measures and policy terms and conditions.

(b) Operating expenses.—Expenses incurred by private insurance companies acting as fiscal agents for the Government under competitively awarded contracts include an estimated 15% commission to agents and brokers, $10 per policy written, and $100 per loss. Estimated volume of activity is as follows (dollars in thousands):

	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Number of policies written.....	20,000	40,000
Amount of direct written premium.....	$2,000	$4,000
Number of losses.....	3,000	6,500

3. Studies and surveys.—This item includes expenses of continuing reviews of market availability of basic property insurance and of crime insurance, as required by law.

4. Administrative expenses.—This represents the administrative costs to the Government of operating the programs.

Financing.—The Secretary is authorized to borrow up to $250 million from the Treasury to carry out the reinsurance and direct insurance programs. It is estimated that claims and expenses can continue to be paid from premium income and income from holdings of Government securities. Thus, although appropriations are authorized if needed to maintain the fund in an operative condition adequate to meet its liabilities, no appropriations are recommended.

Operating results.—It is expected that in 1973 and 1974, as in prior years, premium and investment income will exceed claims and expenses, permitting continued growth in reserves of the fund.

Net losses of the crime insurance program, estimated at $825 thousand in 1973 and $1,222 thousand in 1974, will be funded on an interim basis by the reserves of the riot reinsurance program. Such interim funding, when amounts are finally determined, will be reimbursed either from program operations or appropriations.

The National Flood Insurance Act of 1968 authorizes a cooperative program by the Federal Government and the private insurance industry to provide flood insurance on a national basis. Coverage, initially available only for one- to four-family residential property and small businesses, was extended to other types of property during 1972. The face amount of flood insurance outstanding at any given time has been limited to $2.5 billion; legislation will be proposed to increase this limitation as well as authorize higher limits of coverage for individual properties and make other changes in the program.

Private insurance companies sell and service the flood insurance policies written under this program, pursuant to a contractual agreement between the Federal Government and the National Flood Insurers Association. Companies wishing to participate in the association as risk-bearers commit risk capital and share in the operating expenses and profits or losses of the program. Other companies participate on a non-risk-bearing basis, acting as fiscal agents for the pool.

In order to provide insurance coverage at reasonable premium rates on eligible property, the Federal Government makes premium equalization payments to the pool based upon the relationship between the estimated full-cost actuarial premium rate and the premium rate actually charged in the regular program or upon a contractual formula in the emergency program.

As part of the flood insurance program the Government also provides reinsurance coverage to the industry pool.

Flood insurance may be sold or continued in force only in communities which enact and enforce appropriate land-use and land-management measures designed to reduce future flood losses.

Under the permanent flood insurance program, studies must be made of differential flood risks in flood-prone areas to establish appropriate premium rates on a sound actuarial basis, although limited amounts of coverage may be made available to existing properties for a reduced premium; the difference between the actuarial and chargeable rates is a measure of the Federal Government subsidy provided by the program. An emergency program, first authorized by the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1969, permits insurance up to these limited amounts of coverage at the subsidized chargeable premium rate without prior studies to determine actuarial rates. This authority will expire on December 31, 1973, unless extended.

Budget program.—1. Insurance underwriting expense.—This is the Government's share of the allowable costs to the flood insurers pool of initiating and maintaining 300,000 and 500,000 insurance policies in force at June 30, 1973, and 1974, respectively. The Federal Government's share of eligible expenses is estimated at 90% for 1973 and 1974.

2. Loss and adjustment expense.—This is the Federal Government's 90% share of insured flood losses and associated loss adjustment expenses.

3. Interest expense.—Funds to defray Federal underwriting and loss expense payments in excess of reinsurance premium payments and amounts made available as trust and deposit liabilities are derived, in the first instance, from borrowings from the Treasury. It is these borrowings against which interest is being accrued.

4. Studies and surveys.—The major aspect of the program is the studies to identify areas having special flood hazard and to determine appropriate actuarial premium rates which are conducted by other Federal agencies and, in some instances, by private contractors.

5. Administration.—This represents the administrative cost to the Federal Government of carrying out the flood insurance program.

Financing.—The Secretary is authorized to borrow up to $250 million to carry out the program. Borrowings are estimated to total $17,444 thousand by the end of 1974; an appropriation to restore the borrowing authorization, as audited, may be requested in a later year. The program is also financed through reinsurance receipts and from excess of operating balances in favorable years. Administrative expenses and costs of studies and surveys are paid from appropriated funds.

Operating results.—Cumulative expenses are expected to exceed revenue and receipts from non-Federal sources by approximately $76 million by the end of 1974. The cumulative deficit will have been financed by cumulative appropriations of $44 million and by charges against borrowing authorization.

The Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act (15 U.S.C. 1701) provides greater protection to the public in connection with the purchase or lease of subdivision lots. Statements of record and property reports of subdivisions containing 50 or more lots must be filed with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development before initiation of sales programs in interstate commerce.

The Secretary is authorized to charge a fee, not exceeding $1 thousand, to be paid by a developer when filing a statement of record as required by the act. These fees may be used by the Secretary to pay costs of rendering services under the act. During the past year, 4,578 filings of initial, consolidated, and amended registration statements, exemption advisory opinions, and claims of exemption affirmations were received. Fees totaling $745 thousand were received for these filings. Filings are estimated at 5,600 in 1973 and 7,100 in 1974, producing about $885 thousand and $1,100 thousand in fees during these respective years.

In 1973, an estimated $1,075 thousand from the appropriation "Salaries and expenses, housing production and mortgage credit programs" will be used to finance program operations. In 1974, the estimated $1,460 thousand for costs of administering the program will be derived from fees.

Title V of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1970 (12 U.S.C. 1701z-1 et seq.) directs the Secretary to undertake programs of research, studies, testing, and demonstrations related to the mission and programs of the Department. These functions may be carried out through grants to and contracts with industry, nonprofit research organizations, educational institutions, and through agreements with State and local governments and other Federal agencies. Additional authority for such a research program is provided by the Department of Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965.

1. Operation Breakthrough.—Operation Breakthrough is a program to modernize the Nation's housing process to achieve self-sustained, volume production of marketable housing at stable or reduced cost and accessible and attractive to all income groups. Breakthrough has developed, tested and demonstrated innovations in housing design, construction, land use, financing, management and marketing, and has served as a catalyst for the removal of institutional constraints on the manufactured housing industry. In calendar 1973, site development and housing construction, now partially completed, will be fully completed at all demonstration sites and many units will be fully occupied by the end of the year. In calendar 1974, final marketing activities will be completed, followup surveys will be initiated, and contract closeout procedures will be completed. Continuing emphasis will be given to encouraging innovative and volume production systems for industrialized housing, and disseminating the systems, methods and technology developed under Operation Breakthrough.

2. Other contracts, studies, and performance of research.—The activities in this category include a number of experimental efforts begun in previous years which will be carried forward, building upon the results of prior research. Special emphasis will be given to the areas of housing allowances, housing management, conservation of neighborhoods, preventing housing abandonment, and utilities technology. Other areas which will receive continued attention include: Encouraging the application of new building technology, developing municipal and regional information systems, gathering and evaluating data on housing and mortgage markets, applying university resources to urban problems, improving the environment of communities, reducing natural environmental hazards, and strengthening the capabilities of State and local governments to deal with urban problems.

The Working capital fund finances, on a reimbursable basis, administrative services which can be performed more advantageously on a centralized basis. It was authorized by section 7(f) of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Act of 1965 (79 Stat. 670) and was established in June 1968.

Budget program.—The main activities are printing and reproduction, visual arts, central supply, communications, and data processing. The printing and reproduction activity provides centralized services for all Departmental printing, reproduction, and distribution. The visual arts activity provides Washington controlled photographic and design services along with preparation of visual presentations, displays, exhibits, illustrated visual aids, and administrative graphics (charts, maps, diagrams, etc.). The central supply activity handles all procurement, develops programs for storage of supplies and equipment, maintains tele-ticketing travel services for all Washington personnel, and maintains "inhouse" capability for limited office machine servicing and furniture and equipment repair. The communications activity includes costs of the Federal Telecommunications System, penalty mail, and the Washington correspondence, mail, and messenger functions. The data processing activity includes complete ADP service to program operations and to such administrative functions as Departmental payroll, personnel, finance and accounting, budgeting, nonexpendable property inventories, and related common services.

Financing.—As authorized in the Independent Offices and Department of Housing and Urban Development Appropriation Act, 1968, (Public Law 90-121), $1,500 thousand was transferred in 1968 from the unobligated balance of the Revolving fund for liquidating programs to provide capital for the Working capital fund. An appropriation of $4,338 thousand was received in 1970 for replacement of the main large-scale computer then in use and for related data processing equipment. No appropriations were requested for 1971 through 1973 and none is requested for 1974.

This consolidated working fund has been established for administration of Integrated Grant Administration pilot projects for which HUD will be the lead agency. Obligations are based on project approvals by Federal regional councils and fund commitments by participating agencies. As projects proceed, drawdowns against letters of credit issued from the consolidated working fund are charged against participating agency funds.

Four projects were begun in 1972, and it is anticipated that four additional IGA projects will be assigned to HUD as lead agency in 1973. It is estimated that all projects begun in 1972 and 1973 will be completed before the end of 1974.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

PUBLIC LAND MANAGEMENT

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

The Bureau of Land Management is responsible for the conservation, management, and development of some 450 million acres of the Nation's public lands, including 278 million acres in Alaska.

In addition, the Bureau administers mining and mineral leasing on other federally owned lands, on former Federal lands where minerals have been reserved in public ownership and on the submerged lands of the Outer Continental Shelf.

The work of the Bureau produces revenue from various sources. These revenues are distributed as follows (in millions of dollars):

1. Resource management, conservation, and protection.—Includes such activities as land and mineral management, range management, forestry, soil and watershed conservation, protection, and recreation and wildlife. These activities provide realty, leasing, and records services as well as related land classification and mineral examination work; utilization of rangelands by livestock to help meet local and regional demands for livestock forage; a sustained yield of timber to help meet demands for wood products; management and treatment practices needed to maintain and improve water quality, reduce flood damage, and prevent and control erosion from BLM lands; contract and force account wildfire protection for public land resources; fish and wildlife habitat management and improvement; and recreation management, planning and site investigation on Bureau administered lands.

Proposed increased funding is required to assure systematic development of geothermal resources; to protect the environment of the Outer Continental Shelf; to safeguard surface resources subject to damage because of mineral leasing and exploration; to help insure that advanced consideration for the environment is given to all BLM actions; to accelerate inventory and planning efforts; to implement the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act; to provide increased emphasis on recreation management of off-road vehicle use; to implement the Act to protect wild horses and burros; and to maintain soil and watershed facilities to protect the existing capital investment.

2. Cadastral survey.—In Alaska, surveys are performed on lands selected by the State for transfer under the Alaska Statehood Act, for native townsites, for native allotments, for additional claims resulting from the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, and for other special purposes.

In other States surveys are performed to obtain positive land identification as a prerequisite to resource management and improvement. Resurveys are often required to reestablish lost corners. An increase will be used to expand cadastral survey capabilities in support of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act.

3. Firefighting and rehabilitation.—Provides for the suppression of fires burning on or near the public lands under Bureau jurisdiction. Rehabilitation of burned-over areas is accomplished to restore land productivity and preserve watersheds. A supplemental appropriation for 1973 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

4. General administration.—Provides executive direction and general administrative services, such as financial management, personnel management, management analysis, procurement, and property management to support Bureau activities. The increase will provide for the additional services required as a result of an expansion in the Bureau's total management responsibilities.

1. Construction.—(a) Buildings.—The necessary buildings and appurtenant facilities, such as office buildings, warehouses, equipment storage buildings, fire stations and lookouts, district yards, parking areas, and housing in isolated areas, are constructed to carry out Bureau programs. The 1974 program provides for construction of a warehouse in Anchorage, Alaska, completion of Phase I construction of a new district complex at Roseburg, Oreg., completion of other construction begun in prior years, and survey and design of future facilities.

(b) Recreation facilities.—Recreation facilities for family camping, picnicking and other outdoor recreational activities are constructed on public land sites receiving heavy public recreational use. These facilities provide safe attractive camping and picnicking units, potable water, sanitary facilities and other improvements to assure public health and safety as well as to prevent stream pollution and fire damage to resources. The 1974 program will provide 70 family units and for completion of phase I construction of the Red Rocks visitor center in Nevada.

2. Maintenance.—(a) Buildings.—Provides for maintenance of physical facilities such as buildings, warehouses, equipment shelters, fire stations, and lookouts. The 1974 program will provide for an accelerated corrective maintenance program to repair, replace and/or enlarge inadequate and unsafe electrical and heating systems, and repair and replace leaking roofs, worn or warped floors, and inadequate plumbing. The program also includes funds and manpower for preventive maintenance operations and maintaining facilities to be constructed in 1973.

(b) Recreation facility operation and maintenance.—Provides for the operation and maintenance of developed recreation facilities and the cleanup of litter and trash from undeveloped recreation sites. Increases will contribute to adequate maintenance schedules on existing developed sites receiving increased recreational use and provide for new sites to be constructed under the 1973 program.

(c) Road maintenance.—Provides for preventive and corrective maintenance on the public lands access roads under Bureau jurisdiction. Increases will upgrade the maintenance on existing roads and provide maintenance for newly constructed roads and trails.

1. Educational assistance, facilities, and services.—The Bureau operates Federal school facilities where public schools are not available or cannot meet the special needs of Indian children. Financial assistance is extended to public schools enrolling Indian children where tax-free Indian lands result in financial problems for the local districts and where other special problems exist that are not covered by Federal impact legislation. This assistance will be increased to meet the needs of public schools for increased costs and enrollments. Grants are made to Indian students attending college. Federal plans include increased enrollment in boarding and day schools and in dormitories; adequate base funding of the Indian education program; and for training of Indian paraprofessional staff in Federal schools. Program plans also provide for employment of Indian education coordinators and for operation of schools by Indian school boards. The numbers of children enrolled in Bureau schools and dormitories and those receiving college aid are:

This fund and miscellaneous tribal funds provide the only source of financing for Indians who cannot borrow from other Government credit agencies or from ordinary commercial lenders because of their low economic status, isolated geographic location, lack of bankable security, or for other reasons (25 U.S.C. 70n-1; 443; 470; 470a; 473a; 482; 506; and 631). Loans are made to tribes and other Indian organizations for relending to individual members and groups of members, to finance tribal business enterprises; and to help tribes attract industries to operate in localities that will promote the economic development of the Indians. Loans are also made to tribes for use by them in obtaining expert assistance for the preparation and trial of claims pending before the Indian Claims Commission. Direct loans are made to cooperative associations and individual Indians for any purpose that will promote the economic development of the borrower, including loans for educational purposes.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Undelivered orders, 1971, $8,753 thousand (1972 adjustments, -$175 thousand); 1972, $10,328 thousand; 1973, $10,328 thousand; 1974, $10,328 thousand.

The Geological Survey provides basic scientific data concerning water, land, and mineral resources, and supervises the prospecting, development, and production of minerals and mineral fuels on leased Federal, Indian, and Outer Continental Shelf lands.

1. Special resource and environmental projects.—Multi-disciplinary projects drawing on a broad array of Survey's competence are developed to address a particular resource or environmental problem at a specific point in time. The projects proposed for 1974 include: (a) urban area studies to provide land and water resource and hazard data to improve the basis for urban and regional planning for wise, safe, and efficient land use; (b) studies in response to the Mining and Minerals Policy and Resources Recovery Acts; (c) investigation and evaluation of geothermal resources and supervision of operations on geothermal leases on Federal lands.

2. Alaska pipeline related investigations.—Funds for this activity will provide topographic, geologic, and hydrologic data needed by the Department to fulfill its environmental protection and land management responsibilities related to the proposed transportation system for oil and gas associated with the development of the Prudhoe Bay oil fields.

3. Topographic surveys and mapping.—Topographic maps, at various scales, furnish the fundamental information required to inventory, develop, and manage the natural resources of the country, and to provide a visual accurate display of its physical environment. They also have numerous other uses such as the location and development of highways and lines of communications, urban planning, and military and civil defense. There will be about 57% of the United States and outlying areas, excluding Alaska, with published 7½-minute maps by the end of 1973. In Alaska, 1:63,360-scale maps are the norm. About 79% of Alaska will have published 1:63,360-scale maps by the end of 1973. During 1974, mapping of about 100,000 square miles of previously unsurveyed or inadequately surveyed areas in the United States will be started. About 50,000 square miles of 7½-minute series revision and about 100 small-scale and special maps will be added by the 1974 program.

4. Geologic and mineral resource surveys and mapping.—The continuing national program of geologic research and investigations produces: (a) new or improved methods, techniques, and instruments for mineral exploration on land and on the submerged continental margins; (b) geologic, geophysical, and geochemical maps and analyses that show the distribution, age, composition, structure, and physical properties of the rocks and mineral deposits at and beneath the surface of the earth including the Nation's continental shelves and slopes; (c) information on the chemistry and physics of the earth and the geologic processes by which it was formed and is being continually modified; and (d) geologic data that are directly applicable to urban development, land utilization, and the solution of land construction problems. The 1974 program provides for continuing the development of new methods of acquiring and presenting land resource data in forms suitable for land-use planning and decisionmaking; for mapping of earthquake geologic hazards and for research on earthquake prediction and control; and a slight increase for systematic geological mapping and appraisal of the potential mineral resources of the Outer Continental Shelves.

5. Minerals discovery loan program.—In order to help find new sources of many of our essential minerals that are in short supply, the Federal Government is continuing to provide financial assistance to private industry for promising exploration projects.

6. Water resources investigations.—The continuing national program of water resources investigations during 1974 has the objective of seeing that the Nation's water resources are appraised and that the necessary water data to develop and manage them efficiently are available when needed. The program produces data and information relevant to the flow and sediment discharge of rivers, location and quantity of underground waters, chemical quality and temperatures of waters, changes caused by nature and by man, availability and suitability of water supplies for present and future demands—all of which are essential to water planning and management. Included in the program is research needed to increase our understanding of fundamental principles of water occurrence, movement, and interaction with its environment, and also to increase the accuracy and usefulness of water data through improvements in technology. Although there is a decrease in overall funding there will be some strengthening of activities in the water quality data segments of the national water data system by reprogramming funds from program elements having a lesser degree of national urgency.

7. Conservation of lands and minerals.—The 1974 program provides for (a) classification of federally owned lands for the existence and workability of leasable minerals and sites for development of water resources; (b) evaluation, to determine fair market value, of all resources offered for lease by competitive bidding, and (c) regulation and supervision of prospecting for, and development and production of minerals and fuels from leased Federal, Indian, and Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) lands. Funds for resource assessment and evaluation and lease supervision of the Outer Continental Shelf resource will be increased in 1974. Royalties from leased Federal OCS and Indian lands are expected to be about $472 million in 1974.

9. Facilities.—The activities included in this budget activity are for the relocation of personnel and operations from the Metropolitan Washington, D.C. Area to the national center at Reston, Va., and for other activities necessary to operate and maintain the physical facilities located at the national center.

10. Earth resources observation systems.—The 1974 program will directly support the ERTS-1 experiment and will include operation of the EROS Data Center at Sioux Falls, S. Dak., the conduct of experiments on applications of ERTS-1 data and evaluation of their economic, environmental, and social benefits, and definition of the characteristics of an operational space-based resource data system to permit projections of costs and applications benefits. Operational use of high-altitude aircraft photography and airborne geophysical surveys will continue as part of a program to provide systematic orthophoto mapping and aeromagnetic surveys of the Nation and its resources. A limited program of research on remote sensing techniques and data applications will continue.

11. Resource and land information program.—The RALI program is a departmentwide program designed to assure that the Department of the Interior's data, information and analytic services have maximum usefulness at Federal, State, regional, and local levels for planning, resource development, and management of the land. The program is aimed at better organization, cataloging, storing, interpretation, and dissemination of existing and new data; better understanding of and interaction with other systems; provision of a central referral service and catalog of information needed; and the development of new and more rapid methods for acquisition, analysis, and display of information. The effort in 1974 will be devoted to: A comprehensive survey of user needs and information now available in the resource and land subject area; design and initial implementation of a system to refer users to the location of existing data; development of the performance requirements of an interdisciplinary resource and land information system; and examination of the question of defining appropriate user charges for information.

Revolving fund.—An unobligated balance of $400 thousand is carried forward each year to pay the expenses of reimbursable work pending collection from cooperating agencies. This advance is not available for obligation.

Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are from States and municipalities for making cooperative topographic and geologic surveys and water resources investigations (44 Stat. 963), proceeds from sale to the public of copies of photographs and records (43 U.S.C. 45), proceeds from sale of personal property (40 U.S.C. 481(c)), reimbursements from permittees and licensees of the Federal Power Commission (16 U.S.C. 797), and reimbursements from friendly countries and international organizations for technical assistance (22 U.S.C. 2357). Reimbursements from other Federal agencies (31 U.S.C. 686) are for special-purpose mapping, investigations, and computer services performed at the request of the financing agency, much of which contributes to the basic objectives of the Geological Survey.

This appropriation includes activities which focus on conserving, evaluating, and developing mineral resources and promoting health and safety of miners through mine inspections, enforcements, education and training, and research. This is accomplished through the following programs:

1. Mineral resource development: (a) Energy.—Research and demonstration programs are conducted to provide greater efficiency in the extraction, processing, and utilization of energy resources, to conserve those resources, to develop alternative energy resources such as oil shale and synthetic fuels, to improve methods of managing energy-related wastes and pollutants, and to provide technical guidance needed to establish and administer national energy policies.

(b) Metallurgy.—Research is carried out seeking new and improved processes to extract, recover, purify, fabricate, and recycle metallic and nonmetallic minerals for the most efficient resource utilization attainable through increased production, reduced costs, and a minimum of waste. Of particular interest is research leading to advanced metallurgical technology, abatement of pollution from metallurgical processes, management of mineral wastes, improvement of mineral materials, and research on effective recovery and reuse of mineral materials from urban wastes.

(c) Mining.—Mining research is conducted to develop improved extractive systems through technological advancement of fundamental subsystems elements to increase significantly total mining output at less cost. An integral part of this objective is provision for the maintenance of health and safety and preservation of the environment. Also, explosives and explosions research is conducted on safe handling and use of commercial explosives and blasting agents; on safety characteristics of explosives certified for use in underground mines; and on the means of combating and controlling fires and explosions occurring in minerals and mineral fuels.

(d) Data collection and analysis.—Technical and economic data on mineral resources, production and consumption and international trade are compiled and analyzed and forecasts undertaken for guidance in the formulation of national mineral and energy policies and to assist Federal, State, and local governments and industry in coping with problems of mineral supply and planning for meeting mineral requirements.

2. Engineering, evaluation, and demonstration.—Engineering investigations and evaluations are conducted relative to the conservation, development, and utilization of mineral resources and their impact on the environment; appraisal of mineral development and the potential of wilderness and primitive areas as provided under the Wilderness Act; and engineering investigations of mineral resources in areas affected by water development or other public works. Research and demonstration programs are conducted on the restoration of mined land surfaces, control of subsidence caused by mining, control of fires in

3. Mine health and safety.—(a) Coal mine inspections.—Activities include inspection of coal mines and enforcement of the Federal Coal Mine Health and Safety Act of 1969, assistance in mine rescue operations, investigations of serious accidents in coal mines and recommendations to reduce working hazards, safeguarding the health of workers, promoting efficiency in the coal industry, and assisting industry in improving conditions of mine health and safety. Development of State health and safety programs is encouraged through a grant program and through technical assistance.

(c) Education and training.—Instruction designed to develop greater safety awareness and to make the student a safer worker is provided to employees of the mineral industry. Training covers the causes and prevention of accidents and unhealthy work environments, safe mining practices, first aid, and mine rescue methods. Courses are in the form of classroom instruction, demonstrated lectures, motion pictures, and other instructional media.

(d) Technical support.—Under this activity the Bureau provides on-site day-to-day technical services and advice to health and safety field managers, mine inspectors, and State and industry management to assist enforcement or effect improvements in practices relating to ventilation, roof support, use and application of electrical equipment, fire protection, use of explosives, haulage, hoisting, illumination, mine communications, dust collection and abatement, and other related safety practices, devices, techniques, and equipment. The Bureau also provides analytical data relative to the cause, frequency, and manner of accidents and the events or the practices that contribute to their cause or that may be identified as principal hazards contributing to the frequency of disabling injuries or unhealthy working conditions.

(e) Research.—Research is conducted to attain a much safer environment and working conditions for miners, and to reduce health hazards to mineworkers. The research involves the development of new and improved technology for inherently safer mining methods, equipment, techniques, and systems to cope adequately with mining. Current research includes: Support of mine roof and control of overburden; ventilation of mines; methods of allaying harmful and combustible dusts and methane and of coping with other mine air contaminants; prevention of underground fires and explosions; provisions of safe electrical equipment and installations; and improvements in mining machine design to reduce noise and optimize other man/machine interrelationships to enhance health and safety.

4. Program administration.—Provides for the immediate Office of the Director and part of those administrative functions in the headquarters office and the eastern and western administrative offices that support the Bureau's general administrative functions. The balance of the cost for the general administrative program is charged to program funds appropriated directly or transferred from other agencies. In addition, this activity provides the necessary funds to reimburse the employee compensation fund for payments made resulting from the injury or death of employees under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Mines as required in section 209 of Public Law 86-767.

The Government's helium program is conducted under authority of the Helium Act Amendments of 1960 (Public Law 86-777). The principal program elements are: (1) production and sale of helium for use by Federal agencies and their contractors, and by other interested parties; and (2) conservation of helium extracted from natural gas marketed as fuel, and underground storage of helium for future use. Engineering development, technical and laboratory services required in connection with production and sales and conservation are maintained.

The market for helium produced by the Bureau of Mines is estimated to be about 180 million cubic feet. Federal agencies will consume about 98% of the volume sold by the Bureau, and commercial consumers will account for the other 2%. The Federal agencies will purchase about 140 million cubic feet directly from the Bureau and an additional 40 million cubic feet from commercial distributors under Federal supply schedule contracts and through 30 CFR, part 2 helium distributors. NASA will consume about 60% of the helium sold by the Bureau.

Helium produced by the Bureau will supply about one-third of the total market for U.S. helium. The other two-thirds will be supplied by private helium producers.

The funded operating costs, exclusive of contract helium purchases and capital expenditures for operations, are reduced 16% from 1972 by improvement and consolidation of operations, discontinuance of extraction of helium at the Exell plant from gas under a gas processing agreement with Colorado Interstate Gas Co., and other changes.

Budget program.—Extraction of helium for production and sales will be conducted only at the Keyes (Okla.) helium plant, which is owned and operated by the Bureau of Mines. The Amarillo (Tex.) loading terminal will continue to make shipments in small cylinders, using helium transported to it from the Keyes plant. Helium extracted from available gas supplies at the Keyes plant that is not needed to meet the demands for Federal agencies will be placed in underground storage for future use. Operations at the Exell (Tex.) plant will be confined to processing functions required in connection with the operation and control of the underground helium storage reservoir in Cliffside Field. No expenses for contract purchases of helium for storage and conservation have been included in 1974 because of the uncertainty of the status of the helium purchase contracts. Such amounts as may later be determined to be necessary for 1974 will be separately requested. A supplemental appropriation for 1973 is anticipated for separate transmittal.

Financing the budget program.—The helium program of production and sales and conservation is financed from the helium fund. Income from helium sales and services, credited to the helium fund, are estimated to provide 100% of the needed funding.

Operating results and financial conditions.—As of June 30, 1972, the Government had $465.4 million invested in the helium program. Of this amount, $349 million is owed to the U.S. Treasury in accordance with the Helium Act Amendments of 1960, leaving a net investment of $116.4 million. The investment at June 30, 1972, was about 12% in helium plants and facilities and about 88% in helium stored underground.

On June 30, 1974, the Government's investment is estimated to be $507.8 million, of which $390.7 million will be owed to the U.S. Treasury, leaving a net investment balance of $117.1 million. The estimated increase from June 30, 1972, of $0.7 million in net Government investment (equity) results from an increase in retained earnings accrued during 1973 and 1974.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Undelivered orders, 1971, $8,254 thousand; 1972, $23,399 thousand; 1973, $23,399 thousand; 1974, $23,399 thousand.

The Office, as required by the Coal Research Act, contracts for research and development of new and more efficient methods of mining, preparing, and utilizing coal. It contracts for, sponsors, cosponsors, and promotes the coordination of, research with recognized interested groups (including, but not limited to, coal trade associations, educational institutions, and agencies of States and political subdivisions).

The Office is responsible for developing the full potentiality and versatility of coal as the Nation's largest energy resource to the maximum benefit of the United States. The aspect of insuring a clean environment while minimizing or eliminating pollution-causing energy products, is an important consideration in all of the research projects. The Office is devoting its efforts to expand the use of coal through development of new uses as well as within presently known fields of utilization. The scientific and technical aspects of the program are performed through a program of contract research.

1. Administration and contract supervision.—This portion of the program performs all necessary functions relating to contracts. This includes drafting, negotiation, and execution of the contracts, together with review and monitoring of technical and administrative phases of the contract work. Proposals are evaluated to ascertain technical and economic feasibility and to avoid and eliminate possible duplication with other work.

2. Contract research.—The entire research activity cited above as the responsibility of OCR is represented in the contract aspect of the OCR operation. Proposals received from, or discussions with, potential contractors relate to a prospective area of activity in which the proposer has expressed interest, and for which the organization is qualified. Careful review and controls preclude duplicative research efforts. Contract research activities are conducted with profit and nonprofit research organizations. Contracts vary from complete Government funding to joint funding. Only applied research and development projects are undertaken. Several have now reached the pilot plant phase of their development. No grant research projects are carried on, and basic research is extremely limited—only insofar as a project may support other ongoing research.

In accordance with the President's energy message of June 4, 1971, the Office is charged with responsibility for accelerating the coal gasification program to develop a process or processes that can result in commercial-scale plants producing a clean, high quality gas from coal by 1980. This accelerated activity will be funded two-thirds by the Government and one-third by industry sources in the range of $30 million total funding annually for the next several years.

The Office coordinates the implementation of Federal oil and gas policies; provides leadership and coordination of petroleum statistics within the Federal establishment; provides advice and assistance to Federal agencies and international organizations on all phases of petroleum and gas; and serves as the principal channel of communication between the Federal Government and the petroleum, gas, petrochemical, and allied industries. Domestic and worldwide studies are made to maintain data on adequacy of petroleum and gas, to define deficient areas or elements, and to develop ways to alleviate actual or potential deficiencies. This Office administers the Department's oil import program, pursuant to Presidential Proclamation No. 3279, as amended, establishing quotas for importers of crude oil and oil products under the mandatory quota system. The Department's program for emergency planning and readiness for the oil and gas industries and the recruitment, training, and assignment of 600 executive reservists for the Emergency Petroleum and Gas Administration are assigned responsibilities of the Office.

1. Habitat preservation.—Modification of the Nation's natural environment to fulfill man's needs has had a substantial impact on, and continues to pose a serious threat to, fish and wildlife resources by degrading and destroying essential habitat. Studies are conducted of the character of habitat alteration to determine measures for avoiding or mitigating unnecessary deterioration. Biological monitoring of fish, wildlife, and associated ecosystems is used to determine the rate of environmental pollution and degradation. Research is conducted to determine the impact of pesticides, chemicals, heavy metals, oil, and other pollutants on fish and wildlife and their habitats. Continuing studies of natural resource development are used to determine the impact of dredge and fill activities in navigable waters; nuclear, thermal, and hydroelectric power projects; major water resource developments; and small-watershed projects. Recommendations are formulated to prevent or minimize losses when they are unavoidable and provisions are made for mitigation of such losses. Environmental impact statements for all Federal or federally assisted projects are reviewed as are State water quality standards. Fish and wildlife input is provided for comprehensive regional water resource development plans. Studies of the wilderness potential of wildlife refuge lands are carried out.

2. Wildlife resources.—The Bureau assists in the enhancement and control of the Nation's wildlife resources to assure that sufficient populations are available for the use and enjoyment of all Americans and to prevent excessive damage by wildlife to economic activities with minimal impact on the wildlife. Principal responsibility for management of migratory birds in the United States is dictated by treaty and is discharged by the Bureau. To carry out these responsibilities, the Bureau maintains an extensive wildlife refuge system consisting of 342 areas containing 30.7 million acres managed for both migratory birds and other wildlife of national significance; acquires land to preserve migratory bird habitat; guides and coordinates national migratory bird programs; enforces Federal game laws and regulations; provides technical assistance in the management of wildlife on Indian and other Federal lands; conducts research to improve wildlife management capabilities; provides technical assistance and extension services to Federal, State, Indian, and other public or private entities for responsible control of wildlife causing damage to human enterprises (cooperator funds totaling $4.3 million are anticipated in 1973 to support this function); and supports cooperative wildlife research units at 20 universities to train wildlife biologists and conduct research.

Five development centers and three training schools improve fish cultural technology and practices. Research activities are carried out at 14 other laboratories and 10 field stations relative to (1) sport fish productivity, (2) efficiency of production of hatchery fish, (3) effects of environmental contaminants on fishery resources, and (4) methods of controlling undesirable fishes. Technical assistance is provided by 25 field stations to Indian tribes and to Federal, State, and other land-owners in the management of their sport fisheries. 4. Endangered species.—The purpose of this program is to restore, to the point at which they are once again a viable component of their ecosystems, any species or sub-species of vertebrate, mollusk, or crustacean which has been identified as being threatened with extinction and, further, to take such action as necessary to prevent any such animal with becoming threatened with extinction. Presently, 101 species are on the endangered list. If a pending amendment to the Endangered Species Conservation Act is enacted, some 300 additional species will be added. This program involves development; continual review and updating of an endangered species list; development of species recovery plans; initiation of management committees to oversee implementation of the plans; co-ordination of all national efforts in this field; as well as monitoring imports of fish and wildlife from foreign countries. A wide ranging research program supports these activities. All activities are carried out in close cooperation with State agencies, private groups, and foreign governments.

5. Interpretation and recreation.—The goal of this activity is to expand understanding and appreciation of fish and wildlife, wildland ecology, and man's role in his environment. A related goal is to provide visitors to Bureau installations with a safe, enjoyable experience oriented toward enhancing their understanding of natural environments. These goals are accomplished by providing a wide range of outdoor opportunities on Bureau lands including interpretive experiences, environmental study areas, and wildlife-oriented recreation activities, such as wildlife observation, hunting and fishing, as well as nonwildlife-related recreational experiences, such as swimming and boating. Currently, more than 70% of visits to national wildlife refuges, national fish hatcheries, and research laboratories are for wildlife-oriented activities. Current information concerning fish and wildlife and its relationship to man is made available to the general public through specialized media and publications.

Funds for two of the above activities are supplemented by moneys appropriated under the permanent accounts, Federal aid in fish restoration and management, Federal aid in wildlife restoration, and National wildlife refuge fund, as follows:

Assistance is given to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands by appropriation of funds for fish hatcheries and management equal to the revenue of the 10% excise tax on sport fishing tackle and for wildlife restoration equal to the 11% excise tax on the manufacture of firearms and ammunition.

1. Federal aid in fish restoration and management.—States are reimbursed up to 75% of the cost of approved fish restoration and management projects, including research into fish culture, formulation of restocking plans, and acquisition and improvement of fish habitat (16 U.S.C. 777a-k).

2. Federal aid in wildlife restoration.—States are reimbursed up to 75% of the cost of approved wildlife restoration projects, including acquisition and development of land and water areas, and for wildlife management research (16 U.S.C. 669-669j), also 50% of the cost of approved hunter safety programs (Public Law 91-503).

3. National wildlife refuge fund.—The Refuge Revenue Sharing Act (16 U.S.C. 715s) authorizes the expenditure of revenues from the sale of products from the National Wildlife Refuge System. Part of the net proceeds of refuge products is paid to counties in which refuges are located for benefit of public schools and roads. Payment is based on 25% of the proceeds or 0.75% of the value of lands acquired in fee, whichever is larger. The balance of the proceeds is available for management of the refuge system and for enforcement of the Migratory Bird Treaty Act.

4. Proceeds from sales.—Receipts derived from water resources development projects conducted on national wildlife refuge lands on which other agencies have primary jurisdiction (16 U.S.C. 460d).

1. Park management.—The Service administers 299 park areas comprising about 29.1 million acres of federally owned land located in 47 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. The program of work proposed in the 1974 budget estimate for park management encompasses several program elements vital to the operations of the System. These include (1) overall management of park areas necessary to accommodate an estimated 225,300,000 visitors in 1974; (2) maintenance of buildings and facilities required to accommodate visitor use as well as to protect the Government's investment; (3) interpretive programs to enhance the visitors park experience; (4) law enforcement to protect the visitors well-being and reduce vandalism and other destruction to park resources; and (5) resource management necessary for the protection and preservation of the unique natural, cultural, and historical features in the Park System.

The following tabulation shows the actual and estimated visits, and general and special fund revenues collected and to be collected by the National Park Service, including recreation fee revenues deposited in the Land and Water Conservation Fund:

1. Buildings, utilities, and other facilities.—The Service carries out a program for the planning, construction, and development of physical facilities in units throughout the National Park System. The facilities include visitor service and administrative buildings, employee housing, utilities, camping and picnic areas, and a variety of miscellaneous items. Objectives of this program are to provide additional facilities for many park areas where developments have not kept pace with visitor demands, to provide additional facilities required to continue on-going projects, to protect existing investment, and to provide initial visitor and administrative facilities at newly authorized areas. The program for 1974 focuses on facilities for the American Revolution Bicentennial Celebration.

2. Park, recreation, and wilderness planning.—The programs comprising this activity are as follows: National Park System Plan, Landmarks, New Area Studies, Land Use Studies, Water Resource Studies, Wilderness Act Implementation, and Master Planning.

Staff direction and coordination is provided for the interpretive programs of all units of the National Park System. Studies are conducted to give formal recognition to natural landmarks of national significance. Studies are conducted to determine the significance and suitability of natural, historical, and recreational areas proposed for inclusion in the National Park System. Overall direction is provided in all land acquisition matters including development of land cost estimate procedures and actual land cost estimates (prior to the availability of Land and Water Conservation Funding); in solving problems relating to both normal and adverse uses made of park lands; and determining boundaries of proposed areas and recommending changes in existing park boundaries. Studies and investigations are carried out leading to management of water resources as to sources and quality of water supplies. Studies are conducted concerning the designation of wilderness areas within park areas; and planning studies are conducted to determine basic land utilization, development of physical facilities and other considerations for the preparation of a master plan for each park in the System.

Service facilities. The program provides mainly for the maintenance of existing capacity through such measures as resurfacing and reconstruction and for the development of some new capacity. Program objectives are to prevent a loss of investment in existing road and trail systems, eliminate unsafe sections, and provide some new capacity to meet traffic demands, and to study alternate means of access to park areas.

WATER AND POWER RESOURCES

BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

The Bureau plans, constructs, and operates facilities to irrigate lands, furnish municipal and industrial or other water supplies, and develop related hydroelectric power and flood control in the 17 Western States and Hawaii.

Appropriations to the Bureau are made from the general fund and special funds. The special funds are (a) the Reclamation fund, largely derived from certain irrigation and power revenue; receipts from the sale, lease, and rental of public lands; and certain oil and mineral revenue; and (b) the Colorado River Dam fund, derived from the revenue of the Boulder Canyon project. The 1974 estimates are summarized by source, as follows (in thousands of dollars):

The total appropriation request of $390.6 million represents a decrease of $133.5 million compared with the current year appropriation and a decrease of $13.4 million compared with the preceding year.

Federal Funds

General and special funds:

For carrying out the functions of the Bureau of Reclamation as provided in the Federal reclamation laws (Act of June 17, 1902, 32 Stat. 388, and Acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto) and other Acts applicable to the Bureau, as follows:

This appropriation provides for the planning of potential developments for the conservation and utilization of water and related land resources and includes plan formulation investigations and general engineering and research studies.

Investigations and surveys are made to determine the feasibility of potential reclamation projects and the need for rehabilitation of existing Federal reclamation projects.

1. Plan formulation investigations.—These include basin appraisal surveys, feasibility investigations, and special investigations throughout the 17 Western States to formulate resources development plans for basins and specific projects leading to authorization, including studies relating to the rehabilitation, financial adjustment, or water conservation on existing Federal reclamation projects.

2. Geothermal investigation.—The studies are directed toward determination of the feasibility of developing geothermal resources as a usable water source. Initial efforts have been centered in the Imperial Valley of California.

3. General engineering and research.—Studies directed toward improvements in planning procedures and in engineering methods and materials. Included are studies of atmospheric water resources, of alternative uses and reuse of water, and continuing activities in waste water reclamation opportunities in the Western States.

4. Fish and Wildlife studies.—These funds are transferred to the Fish and Wildlife Service for studies of the fish and wildlife aspects of reclamation projects in the planning stage, authorized for construction or under construction.

² Reimbursements from non-Federal sources result from sale of power and are applied against charge for purchase of power and wheeling.

The Bureau operates and maintains the power-generation and transmission facilities, and generally the storage dams and reservoirs, of completed projects. Where necessary, irrigation works are operated and maintained until the water users are able to undertake the responsibilities. In 1974 a total of 32 projects, project areas or divisions of projects will be operated and maintained for irrigation, power, municipal and industrial water supplies, and other benefits with funds made available under this appropriation. The Fort Peck project revolving fund finances the operation and maintenance of project power facilities physically integrated with the Pick-Sloan Missouri Basin program.

Provision is also made for flood control operations on certain projects, soil and moisture conservation operations on public lands under jurisdiction of the Bureau, the Colorado River front work and levee system program, negotiation and administration of water marketing contracts on Corps of Engineers' projects in California, marketing of power from the Corps of Engineers' powerplants on the Pick-Sloan Missouri Basin program and from the International Boundary and Water Commission's powerplant in Texas, examination of existing structures, and for purchase power and wheeling.

Energy sales resulting from Bureau of Reclamation power operations excluding the Colorado River storage project and the Colorado River Basin project are as follows (dollars in thousands):

Year:	Energy sales (millions of kw.-hrs.)	Income from energy sales
1972 (actual).....	44,277	$131,499
1973 (estimate).....	44,202	119,260
1974 (estimate).....	43,591	112,305

The above sales data for 1972 includes $6.7 million in revenues associated with 15.1 billion kilowatt-hours of energy from nine reclamation powerplants for which Bonneville Power Administration was the marketing agent. Sales data for the Upper Colorado River storage project and the Colorado River Basin project are provided in the program and performance statements for the two projects.

Commercial power is sold to wholesale customers such as municipalities, Rural Electrification Administration cooperatives, irrigation districts, public utility districts, State and Federal Government agencies, and private utilities. These revenues are deposited in the reclamation fund, the Colorado River Dam fund, the general fund, and the Fort Peck revolving fund.

The program is $28,122 thousand in 1974 for the purchase of power and wheeling including credits for net billing. The establishment in 1961 of a net billing procedure for certain of these power transactions between the Federal Government and non-Federal utilities precludes the need for $6,046 thousand of this amount in 1974.

Construction costs of the Central Arizona project including the Navajo project participation agreement are financed through appropriations to the Lower Colorado River Basin Development Fund. Project revenue and certain other revenues as provided by the act will be credited to the fund and be available without further appropriation for defraying the costs of operation, maintenance, replacements, and emergency expenditures for all facilities of the projects, within such separate limitations as may be included in annual appropriation acts. Revenue in excess of these costs will be utilized to make annual payments to the general fund to return project costs allocated to irrigation, power, and municipal and industrial water.

1. Construction.—The 1974 program provides for continuing construction on the Central Arizona project.

2. Navajo project participation agreement.—The 1974 program provides for the requirements to liquidate contract authority for the prepayment of power generation and power facilities (82 Stat. 890).

3. Operation and maintenance.—The 1974 program provides for Reclamation's share of operation and maintenance costs of the Navajo project participation agreement. Financing will be from project revenue. Energy sales resulting from the Bureau's portion of power generated at the Navajo Generating Station are as follows:

² Selected resources are identified on the statement of financial condition.

Upper Colorado River Basin fund.—Construction will be underway on three units of the Colorado River storage project and on eight participating projects. The construction completed through 1973 will provide full irrigation service to 16,800 acres, a supplemental water supply to 215,000 acres, annually provide 354,800 acre-feet of municipal and industrial water, and 1,248,000 kilowatts of hydroelectric power. The impact of 1974 construction upon reclamation goals will be felt in subsequent years as facilities are completed and irrigation service provided, municipal and industrial water furnished, and hydroelectric power is generated.

Operation and maintenance program.—In 1974, the Bureau of Reclamation will operate and maintain five units of the Colorado River storage project with 34,301,000 acre-feet of storage space, 1,248,000 kilowatts of power generation capacity, and 1,869 circuit miles of transmission facilities, including the Seedskaadee participating project power operations. Financing will be from project revenue. Quality of water and consumptive use studies and flood control studies of the Florida and Paonia participating projects and nonreimbursable operation and maintenance will be financed from operating revenues and the repayable debt of the storage project and participating projects will be reduced by this amount. Energy sales resulting from Bureau of Reclamation power operations financed from Upper Colorado River Basin fund are as follows:

This fund defrays the expense of operating the power generation and transmission facilities of the Fort Peck project, Corps of Engineers—Civil, and emergency expenses to insure continuous operation (16 U.S.C. 833).

Budget program.—Funded program costs in 1974 are higher than 1973 primarily as a result of modernization of the Fort Peck powerplant by the Corps of Engineers.

Operating results.—A net loss of $413 thousand is estimated for 1974, a decrease of $1,819 thousand from the current year, anticipating a decrease to normal operations in sale of electric energy resulting from Fort Peck reservoir drawdown. Earnings in excess of current operating needs are retained so as to maintain a continuing emergency fund of $500 thousand. The balance is paid into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts toward amortizing with interest that part of the Government investment allocated to power generation and transmission. Such payments totalled $2.9 million in 1972 and are estimated at $1.9 million in 1973 and zero in 1974 as a result of extraordinary maintenance repairs requiring drawdown of the reservoir in fiscal 1974.

The Alaska Power Administration operates and maintains the Eklutna project which supplies 30,000 kilowatts and 164 million kilowatt-hours to the greater Anchorage, Alaska, area. In December 1972, APA expects to put the first phase of the 70,000-kilowatt Snettisham project into commercial operation supplying wholesale power to utilities in the greater Juneau area.

Energy sales resulting from power operations, including the first half year of Snettisham operation in 1973, are as follows:

BONNEVILLE POWER ADMINISTRATION

The Bonneville Power Administration constructs, operates, and maintains facilities to market electric power produced at Federal hydroelectric generating plants over its high-voltage transmission grid system to public and private utilities and industrial customers in the Pacific Northwest. It also wheels, exchanges, and purchases power from non-Federal hydroelectric and thermal generating plants.

The estimated amounts of peak generating capacity on the Federal transmission system are as follows (in thousands of kilowatts):

	July 1, 1973	July 1, 1982
Federal projects	12,607	21,024
Power wheeled and exchanged for non-Federal utilities	8,077	14,444
Total	20,684	35,468

The transmission facilities will integrate new generating facilities into the system. By July 1, 1973, 27 Federal hydroelectric generating plants are scheduled to be in operation on the system and four Federal generating plants will be under construction. These new plants, along with additional generating units being installed at six existing Federal projects, will bring the total Federal installed capacity from 12.6 million kilowatts to 21 million kilowatts.

1. System operation and maintenance.—This activity consists of the scheduling and dispatching of power; the operation of substations; the maintenance of transmission lines, substations, and other facilities; power requirements and marketing studies; planning and integration of power resources; and system engineering.

Transmission facilities of BPA are expanded as increased generating capacity becomes available. The system will be operated and maintained at a level which will insure safe operation and provide a reliable grade of service to customers.

The following table shows the rising trend of several of the more important indexes of the operation and maintenance activity:

2. Purchase power and wheeling.—This activity includes the acquisition of power from other entities by purchase and exchange, and the use of transmission facilities. Exchange arrangements and net-billing procedures between BPA and other entities preclude the need for an additional appropriation of $32.2 million in 1974.

3. Power contracts and rates.—This activity provides for the negotiation of power sales and wheeling contracts, the billing and servicing of these contracts, the review of resale rates, the development of service plans, and the establishment of wholesale rate schedules. Receipts which are deposited in the Treasury amounted to $129.9 million in 1972, and are estimated at $129.2 and $153.2 million for 1973 and 1974, respectively.

The Bonneville Power Administration constructs, operates, and maintains transmission facilities which are not provided by the Administration under its customer service policy when requested and financed by non-Federal entities. These facilities increase efficiency on the system, reduce loads on existing facilities, and improve service to customers. Also, facilities of the Administration are relocated as required for highway construction and other purposes under similar arrangements. In addition, trust agreements are developed for the purchase of interruptible replacement energy to meet requirements of industrial customers during periods when operating conditions on the Federal system require the Administration to curtail its delivery of interruptible power (16 U.S.C. 832a(f)) (31 U.S.C. 725s).

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Undelivered orders, 1971, $4,982 thousand (1972 adjustments, -$8 thousand); 1972, $5,993 thousand; 1973, $5,993 thousand; 1974, $5,993 thousand.

The objective of this program is to stimulate, sponsor, provide for, and supplement present programs for the conduct of research, investigations, experiments, and the training of scientists in the fields of water and of resources which affect water, in order to assist in assuring the Nation at all times of a supply of water sufficient in quantity and quality to meet the requirements of its expanding population.

1. Assistance to States for institutes.—This activity provides for annual grants to all 50 States and to Puerto Rico, for assistance in developing and carrying on the work of a competent and qualified water resources research institute at one college or university in such political and geographic entity. The function of such institute is to: conduct research, investigations, and experiments of either a basic or practical nature, or both, in relation to State water resources problems; provide for the training of scientists through student and professional participation in such research, investigations, and experiments; and arrange for dissemination of research results to persons and organizations who need and will apply them. The State institutes are encouraged to develop coordinated research efforts involving water problems of multistate or regional concern.

2. Matching grants to institutes.—This activity provides for grants to match, on a dollar-for-dollar basis, funds made available to institutes by States or other non-Federal sources to meet the necessary expenses of specific water resources research projects which could not otherwise be undertaken.

3. Additional water research.—This activity provides for grants to and contracts and matching or other arrangements with educational institutions, private foundations or other institutions, with private firms and individuals whose training, experience, and qualifications are adequate for the conduct of water research projects, and with local, State, and Federal Government agencies, to undertake research into aspects of urgent and significant water problems related to the mission of the Department of the Interior which are deemed desirable and which are not otherwise being studied.

4. Scientific information center.—This activity provides for the operation of a national water resources scientific information center. The objectives of center operations are to be responsive to the needs of the State institutes and to other Federal and non-Federal water resources officials and organizations by making information available concerning water resources research results and developments, to avoid replication of research, and to improve communications and coordination of efforts among all those engaged in federally sponsored water-related research.

5. Administration.—This activity provides for the administration of the Water Resources Research Act including: development of needed policies and procedures; review and appraisal of institute programs; developing and establishing research priorities; evaluation of research proposals; making and monitoring of allotments, contracts, and grants; establishment and maintenance of cooperation and coordination among the institutes and between the institutes and Federal and other organizations concerned with water resources; and all other related and essential business management program activities.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is the investigative branch of the Department of Justice and obtains evidence for use in civil litigation and prosecution of criminal violations of Federal law. It has primary responsibility for the internal security of the Nation. It assists law enforcement agencies in training, identification, and technical matters.

1. Security and criminal investigations.—This activity includes the Bureau's investigative responsibilities, the coordination and maintenance of the data gathered, and the maintenance of the Bureau's communications system. Data are disseminated to other Government agencies having an official interest. During 1972 the FBI received 2,145,868 names for search through its files. Name-check work, most of which is performed for other Government agencies, is expected to remain near this level.

This is a wholly owned Government corporation. A board of six directors appointed by the President controls its policies. Supervision is by the Director of the Bureau of Prisons who has jurisdiction over all industrial enterprises and vocational training programs in all Federal penal and correctional institutions. Products manufactured by inmates are sold only to institutions in the Federal Prison System and to other Government agencies. Earnings, in excess of operating requirements, are paid as dividends into the U.S. Treasury.

The Corporation is authorized, under the Attorney General, to establish and operate industries in Federal penal and correctional institutions and disciplinary barracks (18 U.S.C. 4121-4128). Its purposes are to provide employment for inmates, provide maximum vocational training for qualified inmates in connection with regular institutional and industrial activities; and to operate a placement service to assist released inmates to secure jobs.

Under the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 as amended, the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration is charged with the responsibility for assisting State and local governments in reducing crime and improving the quality of the criminal justice system. The program includes the following activities:

1. Grants for development and implementation of comprehensive plans.—Support of State and local planning agencies which prepare, adopt, and implement comprehensive law enforcement plans based on their evaluation of State and local criminal justice system problems. Funds for this activity are provided under special revenue sharing beginning in 1974.

2. Matching grants to improve and strengthen law enforcement.—Of the total available, 85% is distributed by formula in the form of block grants for the States and local units to carry out action programs and projects to reduce crime and improve the operations of their criminal justice systems. Of the total available for such grants, 15% is allocated among the State and local governments for programs or projects of national interest as determined administratively by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. Funds for this activity are provided under special revenue sharing in 1974.

3. Financial assistance for law enforcement purposes.—Proposed amendments to the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968, as amended, would provide for special revenue sharing payments in lieu of new obligational authority in 1974 for planning and action grants, corrections, technical assistance, and manpower development programs. Some 85% of the total available for this activity will be distributed by formula to the States as special revenue sharing payments and 15% at the discretion of LEAA to encourage State and local governments to develop and implement programs and projects to reduce and prevent crime and delinquency.

4. Aid for correctional institutions and programs.—Grants are made to State and local units of government for the improvement and construction of correctional facilities and the improvement of correctional programs. Funds for this activity are provided under special revenue sharing in 1974.

5. Technical assistance.—These funds provide for technical assistance to States and units of local government, public and private agencies, and institutions in matters relating to the improvement of law enforcement and criminal justice. Funds for this activity are provided under special revenue sharing in 1974.

6. Technology analysis, development, and dissemination.—Support is provided for research and development of techniques, systems, equipment, and devices to reduce crime, strengthen law enforcement, and improve the operations of the criminal justice system.

7. Manpower development.—Funds for educational development, internships, training in the latest techniques and methods, and grants and loans to law enforcement officers and other criminal justice system personnel enrolled on a full- or part-time basis in an approved program leading to a degree are provided in this activity. Funds for this activity are included under special revenue sharing in 1974.

8. Data systems and statistical assistance.—Compiling and publishing information and statistics on the criminal justice system and assisting States and units of local government in the development of statistics and information systems to meet their needs are carried out in this activity.

9. Management and operations.—This activity includes funds for the administrative operations of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

Effective July 1, 1973, under the existing authorities the new form of Manpower Revenue Sharing will begin to decentralize planning and operational responsibility with broad flexibility to State and local governments.

1. State and local programs.—Covers funds for programs which are allocated to State and local governments. Beginning in 1974, agreements will be established with local officials and Governors who will be prime sponsors for the operation of manpower programs in their jurisdictions. They will identify the needs in their respective areas and determine the kinds of programs which will best meet those needs. The kinds of programs available are those programs authorized by the Manpower Development and Training Act, as amended, the Economic Opportunity

Act, as amended, and the Trade Expansion Act. Those acts provide for programs such as institutional training, on-the-job training, work experience, vocational counseling, remedial education, and job placement services.

2. National programs.—Covers those programs and support activities which are administered on the national level. Programs included in this activity are: (a) National training programs.—Services provided under this program are directed toward meeting the training needs of the labor force which cannot be served as well through manpower programs available at the State or local level. Agreements are entered into with organizations that operate on a nationwide or multiregional basis. The programs place emphasis on aiding veterans, criminal offenders, Spanish-speaking persons, Indians, migrant workers, unemployed and underemployed persons residing in areas designated as redevelopment areas and through the Job Corps program assists disadvantaged youth.

(b) Program support.—This activity provides for technical assistance and training for Federal, State, and local personnel involved in the planning, administration, and direction of manpower programs. It provides a comprehensive system to develop labor market information; contractual funds for research and demonstration projects; and evaluation of manpower programs.

(c) Computerized job placement.—Lists and updates job orders on a daily basis and, using modern ADP and telecommunications, matches the qualifications of jobseekers to jobs. In 1974, this activity is being transferred to the Grants to states for employment services accounts.

In addition, this provides for administrative costs of State and local governments that serve as program sponsors in their areas.

2. Federal support.—Provides for Federal administration of the program. Technical assistance is provided the State and local program agents to assure the program is effectively implemented and efficiently operated.

This program pays benefits to workers who exhaust their basic benefits during periods of high unemployment under the Employment Security Amendments of 1970, Public Law 91-373, and the amendments to the Social Security Act, Public Law 92-224 and Public Law 92-329. The Employment Security Amendments of 1970 become operative on a national basis whenever the insured unemployment rate for the Nation is 4.5%, seasonally adjusted, for 3 consecutive months. The program becomes operative in an individual State (whenever it is not operating nationwide) when the insured unemployment rate for that State averages 4% for any 13-consecutive-week period and equals 120% of the average rate for the same 13-week period in each of the 2 preceding years. Public Law 92-599 modified Public Law 91-373, eliminating the 120% criterion in determining whether a State, once eligible, may remain eligible, through the period ending June 30, 1973. Public Law 92-224, as amended by Public Law 92-329, is a temporary program which becomes operative whenever the rate of unemployment for a State equals or exceeds 6.5% for a 13-week period. It provides an individual 50% of his State regular compensation or 13 times his average weekly benefit amounts for his benefit year, whichever is lesser. No compensation is payable after March 31, 1973.

This fund, established by the Employment Security Act of 1960 (74 Stat. 970), received an original appropriation of $250 million. It makes advances without fiscal year limitation to the Employment security administration account in the Unemployment trust fund. The purpose of this fund is to finance the Federal and State administrative costs of the employment security programs on a repayable basis from the beginning of the fiscal year until the Federal unemployment tax receipts become available. As a result of the Employment Security Amendments of 1970, which authorize the retention of excess funds in the Employment Security Administration account after fiscal year 1972 equal to 40% of the total appropriated by Congress for the fiscal year in which the excess occurs, no interest-bearing loans are anticipated for fiscal year 1974.

The financial transactions of the Federal-State and railroad unemployment insurance systems are made through the Unemployment Trust Fund. In the Federal-State system, benefit payments are made by each State, financed by State payroll taxes. These tax receipts are deposited in the Unemployment Trust Fund and invested in Government securities until needed for benefit payments. The expenses of State and Federal administration (including those of the Federal-State employment service), are paid from the fund out of revenue from the Federal unemployment tax, assessed on employers, of 0.5% of the first $4,200 of wages.

Both the benefit payments and administrative expenses of the separate unemployment insurance program for railroad employees are paid from the Unemployment Trust Fund and receipts from the tax on wages of railroad employees are deposited in the fund to meet expenses.

1. Unemployment insurance services.—State agencies pay unemployment compensation to eligible workers and collect State unemployment taxes from employers. Also unemployment benefits for Federal employees and ex-servicemen, and trade adjustment benefits, are paid from funds provided under a separate Federal appropriation. Administrative support and executive leadership are provided to maintain and improve unemployment insurance operations. The figures in the following table show the actual program statistics for past years and the capability which can be supported by the 1973 and 1974 funding estimates, including the contingency amount.

2. Employment services.—A nationwide network of more than 2,300 local employment offices financed by Federal grants provide a full range of manpower services including computerized job placement to assist workers in obtaining suitable employment and to assist employers in resolving their manpower problems. Special emphasis is placed on providing services to disadvantaged applicants who may require extensive assistance to become competitive in the job market. Assistance to employers includes analyzing their manpower requirements, solving problems of recruitment and turnover, and developing labor-market information. Communities are aided in developing employment opportunities, and employment services are provided to workers and employers in areas where the establishment of full-time offices is not feasible. It is estimated that not less than $25 million will be available for services to veterans.

1. Improving and protecting wages.—This program seeks to obtain compliance with the minimum wage, overtime, child labor, and other employment standards under the Fair Labor Standards Act, under the various Federal procurement acts, under the Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act, and under the wage garnishment provisions in title III of the Consumer Credit Protection Act. As a complement to the compliance program, regulations and interpretative materials are developed and special minimum wage standards are set. About 450,000 workers will be directly aided each year by these efforts. This activity also includes determinations of prevailing wage rates and fringe benefits for all workers employed on Federal and federally assisted contracts for construction subject to the Davis-Bacon Act and related acts. Prevailing wage rate and fringe benefit determinations are also made to protect workers under the Service Contracts Act.

2. Elimination of discrimination in employment.—The major effort under this activity is to make equal opportunity an employment reality. Under Executive Order 11246, as amended to include sex discrimination, the Employment Standards Administration works to insure nondiscrimination in employment on Federal contracts. Under the Executive order each contracting agency is responsible for obtaining compliance concerning those contracts entered into by the agency or its contractors. ESA is responsible for the direction, coordination, and evaluation of the contracting agencies' compliance program. ESA also assists local communities in the development of voluntary area-wide compliance plans in the construction industry. These plans are designed to increase employment opportunities for minorities through voluntary agreements among labor, management, and community groups. Through its Women's Bureau, the Employment Standards Administration develops policies and programs to promote the welfare of wage-earning women and to encourage their fuller utilization in the work force. Enforcement of the equal pay provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act and the Age Discrimination in Employment Act is also included in this activity.

3. Workmen's compensation.—Under this activity, the Employment Standards Administration administers the Federal Employees' Compensation Act and the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Act and their various extensions. Beginning July 1, 1973, the compensation provisions of the Coal Mine Health and Safety Act will be assumed. These programs insure that injured workers covered under these acts and their dependents receive the benefits to which they are entitled and are referred for rehabilitation. Under current programs, some 700,000 benefit payments are made each year.

4. Program development and administration.—This activity provides for the direction and coordination of employment standards programs. Program planning, research, evaluation, budget, and other administrative activities of the Employment Standards Administration are carried out to insure effective and efficient program management and execution.

Benefits are currently paid on a long-term continuing basis via periodic payment rolls to over 27 thousand civil employees of the Government disabled in the performance of duty or to their dependents, to dependents of certain reservists in the Armed Forces who died while on active duty with the Armed Forces or while engaged in authorized training in time of peace, to a number of former relief work employees and their dependents, and to numerous others by various extensions of the Federal Employees' Compensation Act.

New injuries reported involve determinations of entitlement and payment of compensation benefits and medical costs, as appropriate. When compensation is involved, either one or more payments may be made—depending on the type and length of the disability. In a fatal case, payments are made once each month to the eligible survivors.

In 1974 the program provides for black lung compensation payments to eligible coal miners and their dependents under the Federal Coal Mine Health and Safety Act of 1969, as amended. The administration of the provision of title IV for all new claims becomes the responsibility of the Department of Labor on July 1, 1973.

The trust fund contains funds received from employers for compensation for the death of an employee where there are no survivors and from fines and penalty payments. These funds are available for payments of additional compensation for second injuries. Maintenance payments are also made to employees undergoing vocational rehabilitation and compensation payments are also made where employers are insolvent (33 U.S.C. 908; 31 U.S.C. 725, 33 U.S.C. 944).

In October 1972, the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act was amended to increase benefit payment levels for employees on the rolls prior to enactment. One-half of the cost of increased benefits will be derived from direct appropriation and the remaining half from the trust funds. Employers will be assessed at the beginning of each calendar year for their proportionate share of these payments.

Note.—1973 and 1974 estimates are for activities previously financed from Employment Standards Administration; 1972, $35,884 thousand.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration is responsible for performing the functions assigned to the Secretary of Labor by the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970. The act extends Federal safety and health protection to nearly 60 million workers in almost 5 million places of employment.

1. Safety and health standards.—Standards are promulgated to assure the greatest protection of the safety and health of workers. New and revised safety and health standards are developed with the aid of advisory committees and promulgated under public hearing procedures utilizing criteria documents from the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health, and recommendations from various standards-setting organizations and affected employer and employee groups. In 1974 new and revised permanent standards will be promulgated covering approximately 50 occupational safety and health issues.

2. Enforcement.—Enforcement of the occupational safety and health standards is performed by the physical inspection of plants and facilities. Employers may be cited for violations and penalties assessed, subject to appeal to the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission. In 1972, 32,701 safety and health investigations and inspections were completed. In the establishments inspected, which employed about 6 million employees, 102,861 violations were alleged resulting in issuance of 23,231 citations. Penalties were proposed amounting to $2.3 million. Approximately 10% of the enforcement program was devoted to investigating reports of fatal injuries and catastrophies; 15% to complaints alleging imminent danger situations or potential hazards to employees; 38% to five exceptionally hazardous target industries and five target health problems; and the remainder to a cross section of work establishments. In 1973, 55,000 inspections will be conducted, increasing to 80,000 in 1974.

3. Training, education, and information.—Training, education, and information are provided to employees, employers, and the general public to make them aware of the occupational safety and health problem, the provisions of the Occupational Safety and Health Act, and of their rights and responsibilities in relation to the act. Short-term technical and professional training is conducted at the OSHA Training Institute to increase the number and competence of personnel engaged in the field of occupational safety and health. Training and technical assistance are provided to Federal agencies in establishing and operating voluntary safety programs which will afford the same protection to Federal employees as that provided by the act for private sector employees. In 1974 training actions will be provided to approximately 40,000 individuals including Federal and State compliance personnel, trade associations, labor organizations, employers, and employees.

4. State programs.—Federal matching grants are provided to the States to develop and operate occupational safety and health programs which will be at least as effective as the Federal program. States may eventually assume full responsibility for occupational safety and health programs after the Secretary has approved a plan and has evaluated the operation of the plan for at least 3 years. A State plan must provide for the coverage of one or more occupational safety and health issues by standards and a program for the enforcement of those standards which is at least as effective as the Federal program. In addition, the plan must assure that the State has adequate legal authority and resources for the administration of the plan. A State may submit for approval a plan which is not initially as effective as the Federal program, but which will become so with the completion of the scheduled steps included in the plan. The 22 State plans projected for approval in 1973 will be in full year operation in 1974.

5. Safety and health statistics.—Data on occupational fatalities, injuries, and illnesses are collected and disseminated to identify occupational safety and health problems and to facilitate improvements in the administration of the act. Regulations require all employers with eight or more employees to maintain records of work-related deaths, injuries, and illnesses. These records must be available for examination by compliance officers, and will provide the source of data for annual nationwide statistical surveys of a selected sample of establishments. Studies are conducted to identify circumstances and events associated with injuries and illnesses which may suggest causes and means of prevention.

6. Executive direction and administration.—Executive direction, planning, and management support activities are structured to assure the prompt and effective implementation of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, and to decentralize as rapidly as possible the administration of the act to those levels of government closest to the people.

The United States contributes its assessed share of the expenses of the international organizations listed above.

The major increases are for the U.S. contributions to the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the World Health Organization, the Pan American Health Organization, the Organization of American States, and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Significantly more than half of the increases are attributable to the costs of maintaining the prior-year level of operations, including wage and price increases and currency revaluations. Major program increases include: (1) The United Nations is increasing its activities in the economic and social field, including implementation of proposals made by the Stockholm Conference on the Human Environment and the Santiago meeting of the United Nations Committee on Trade and Development, additional construction costs in Geneva, the modernization of equipment for the United Nations Office of Public Information, and preparations for a Law of the Sea Conference; (2) the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization is increasing its activities, particularly the World Science Information System, Man and the Biosphere, the Inter-governmental Oceanographic Commission, and programs in the fields of the social sciences, drug abuse prevention, population, and family planning; (3) the World Health Organization is expanding its activities in the fields of public health services, environmental health, medical research, and communicable disease control; (4) the Pan American Health Organization is increasing its activities in programs concerned with tuberculosis, zoonoses, foot-and-mouth disease, parasitic diseases, and public health services.

The 1968 appropriation completed the financing, as authorized by the American-Mexican Chamizal Convention Act of 1964, for compliance with the Chamizal Convention between the United States and Mexico. The transfer of the lands between Mexico and the United States has been accomplished. The relocation of the Rio Grande channel was completed in December 1968.

With remaining available funds, the acquisition of lands, channel strengthening, and levee improvements will be completed to extend the rectification project 3.4 miles to the land boundary, as authorized by the Chamizal Convention. These 3.4 miles of unregulated and unimproved river require improvement to complete the stabilization of the boundary river and control floods between the cities of Juarez and El Paso. This work was undertaken jointly with Mexico. With completion of this work, all of the requirements of the Chamizal Convention will have been fulfilled.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Undelivered orders, 1971, $6,762 thousand; 1972, $15,348 thousand; 1973, $10,348 thousand; 1974, $10,348 thousand.

The Department of Transportation Act of 1966 assigns to the Secretary broad responsibilities for the development and coordination of national transportation policies and programs. This appropriation finances those research activities and studies which directly support the Secretary's responsibilities and which can more effectively or appropriately be conducted in the Office of the Secretary than by the operating administrations within the Department. The program is carried out primarily through contracts with other Federal agencies, educational institutions, nonprofit research organizations, and private firms.

1. Transportation policy and planning.—Comprehensive long-range policy formulation is supported in this activity by broad-based research emphasizing economic and social sciences. The objective of long-range policy planning is the orderly development of the Nation's transportation network so as to provide efficient through-service for all users. This research provides essential empirical information and assessment of existing transportation service; identifies factors and policy issues influencing efficiency; assesses the effects of economic regulation by various levels of government on transportation efficiency; and examines the interrelationship of transportation with changing economic and social goals.

2. University research.—Scientific and technological research and interdisciplinary studies are designed to assure that resources of the higher education community are effectively brought to bear on transportation problems and to encourage greater involvement of universities and colleges with the Department, State, and local governments, and the transportation industry. In addition to mission-oriented research, university-based seminars and conferences bring university, industry, and government representatives together for joint study of transportation needs.

3. Transportation systems development and technology.—Projects are carried out to advance transportation technology generally; to seek solutions to transportation problems which are intermodal in nature; to provide information and forecasts on new technology required as a basis for planning and development of transportation systems, policies, and programs; to conduct research on longer range technical problems in transportation; and to manage research programs of such priority that they demand secretarial emphasis. Funds requested in this activity will continue advanced research and development to improve air transportation (to be financed partially from the Airport and airway trust fund); to develop multimodal and intermodal systems and technology, and to promote environmental and ecological improvements. In general, projects are designed to complement research and development programs of the operating administrations and to stimulate industry efforts to advance transportation technology.

4. Environment and urban systems.—Research is conducted to assist in the formulation, execution, and evaluation of departmental policies, programs, and procedures related to environmental and urban systems aspects of transportation.

5. Special programs.—Projects are chiefly to provide technical studies and other data in support of departmental effort in the areas of safety program coordination, consumer affairs, hazardous materials, and pipeline safety.

The Transportation Systems Center serves as a technical resource for the Office of the Secretary and the operating administrations. Its specific projects planned for 1974 are grouped generally along the following lines:

Transportation safety.—The emphasis under this heading is in the highway safety field with a strong effort in aviation, highway, and railway safety.

Pollution reduction.—This grouping has a significant effort in clean transportation power and includes aircraft, railroad, and marine pollution tasks.

Noise abatement.—Problems of noise reduction, measurement, and analysis related to transportation systems are covered in this area with emphasis on development of right-of-way and surface transportation vehicle noise reduction.

Air transportation.—This grouping of the Center's projects is primarily directed to air and ground traffic control. The balance of the effort is divided among communication, navigation, and landing systems development.

Ground transportation.—Highway utilization and traffic control, new urban transportation systems, advanced high-speed systems, and conventional railroad systems are the main project areas under this category.

Multimodal systems.—Projects which are not directed towards a single mode of transportation are included here, with the primary effort in analyzing and evaluating the socioeconomic aspects of future transportation needs as well as payoff analyses to determine the merits of various transportation alternatives.

The Coast Guard employs multipurpose vessels, aircraft, and shore units, strategically located along the coasts and inland waterways of the United States and in selected areas overseas to carry out the duties specified in title 14, United States Code.

Direct program.—1. Search and rescue.—Most Coast Guard operating facilities have the capacity for promoting safety on or over the high seas and on waters subject to the jurisdiction of the United States. The Coast Guard performs any and all acts necessary to rescue and aid persons and save property placed in jeopardy due to marine and aircraft accidents, floods, and ice conditions (14 U.S.C. 88). Coast Guard activities in the area of search and rescue fall within the National SAR Plan and other agreements. Also included in this program are icebreaking operations in domestic harbors and waterways to facilitate the movement of waterborne commerce (DOT Act, title 49) and to assist in the prevention of flooding caused by ice accumulation (14 U.S.C. 141).

2. Aids to navigation.—A network of manned and unmanned aids to navigation is maintained along our coasts and on our inland waterways through the use of tenders and shore facilities to insure the safe passage of the mariner. Loran stations are operated in the United States and abroad to serve the needs of the armed services and marine and air commerce (14 U.S.C. 81). Administrative control is exercised over the construction, maintenance, and operation of bridges across the navigable waters of the United States to insure that the safe passage of navigation is not unreasonably interfered with (33 U.S.C. 401, 491, 499, and 525).

3. Marine safety.—The Coast Guard insures compliance with Federal statutes and regulations pertaining to the merchant marine industry by reviewing plans and specifications for the construction or alteration of merchant vessels; by periodic inspections; by conducting marine casualty investigations; and by setting standards, procedures, and practices under which merchant marine personnel are regulated (14 U.S.C. 2). Coast Guard vessels and personnel assisted by the Coast Guard Auxiliary and State and local personnel provide a balanced boating program.

4. Maritime environmental protection.—Under the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, the National Environmental Policy Act, and other laws, international agreements, and conventions, the Coast Guard is charged with the prevention of damage to the marine environment from intentional and unintentional acts and the enhancement of environmental quality. Also, under title 14 of the United States Code, the Dangerous Cargo Act, the Tank Vessel Act, the Ports and Waterways Safety Act (Public Law 92-340), Executive Order 10173, as amended, and various statutes, the Coast Guard must maintain an acceptable level of safety and security in U.S. ports to insure their availability for maximum economic utilization, their availability in time of national emergency, and their environmental quality.

Manned ocean stations from which the National Weather Service takes weather observations will be phased down from five to one during 1974 (14 U.S.C. 90). Polar icebreaking is performed by specially constructed icebreakers engaged in operations with other agencies (14 U.S.C. 2). Also included in this program is conduct of the International Ice Patrol (46 U.S.C. 738) and enforcement of international agreements and Federal laws except for those related to pollution, traffic control, and port and vessel safety.

During peacetime, an effective state of military preparedness is maintained through unit, multiship, and joint naval training exercises and through other Coast Guard operations (14 U.S.C. 3).

7. General support.—Certain facilities of the Coast Guard provide overall direction and support of all Coast Guard programs. Included are training stations, supply facilities, and nonoperational services at headquarters and district offices.

Reimbursable program.—8. Miscellaneous services for other accounts.—The Coast Guard performs various functions for other agencies and accounts for which reimbursement is received.

This appropriation provides for the acquisition, construction, and improvement of vessels, shore facilities, and aids to navigation.

Direct program.—1. Vessels.—The programs under this activity provide for the construction of three inland construction tenders and barges, the replacement of several small utility boats, and the renovation and improvement of several buoy tenders.

3. Shore stations and navigational aids.—This activity will include programs to: (a) Replace or renovate existing facilities at 11 various locations; (b) provide housing and barracks facilities for Coast Guard personnel and their dependents where living accommodations are inadequate; and (c) facilitate the survey and design of future construction projects. The lighthouse automation and modernization program (LAMP) will be continued in 1974. Also provided for in this activity are the establishment of and changes to aids to navigation projects marking river and harbor improvements effected by the U.S. Corps of Engineers and other urgent needs. Other programs under the aids to navigation activity provide for the purchase of five large navigational buoys (LNB's) to replace three lightships and one light station. The establishment of Vessel Traffic Systems in New York and New Orleans and augmentation of an existing system in Puget Sound, Wash., will represent significant steps toward improved maritime traffic management, vessel collision avoidance, environmental protection, and increased port safety. In the area of pollution control there are projects that provide for the installation of various pollution abatement systems on board several Coast Guard vessels and shore units to control the discharge of oily and nonoily wastes and polluted air from various spray painting and sandblasting projects.

4. Repair and supply facilities.—This activity provides for continued construction of the new Coast Guard Base at Portsmouth, Va., and renovation and consolidation of the Coast Guard Base at Kodiak, Alaska.

5. Training and recruiting facilities.—Included in the 1974 training facilities program is the construction of a dining hall at Cape May, N.J.

Work will continue on four bridges for which alterations have previously been funded.

The Coast Guard Reserve training program's objective is to provide qualified individuals and trained units to be available for active duty in time of war or national emergency, and to augment regular forces during domestic emergencies and natural disasters. The Reserve program consists of four activities as follows:

1. Initial training.—Direct costs associated with officer trainees performing 1 year's initial training duty and enlisted trainees performing 5 to 11 months' initial training duty are programed under this activity. The officer trainees receive 4 months of officer candidate school and 8 months' duty in an operating unit. The 5- to 11-month enlisted trainees attend class A school and the period of initial training duty is governed by the length of the class A school plus recruit training.

2. Continuing training.—Direct costs of officer and enlisted trainees for drill, annual active duty for training, and extended active duty for training to augment regular forces are programed under this activity.

3. Operation and maintenance of training facilities.—All costs for the operation and maintenance of Reserve training facilities are programed under this activity. Included are the costs of a training vessel, the prorated share of the cost of joint usage of Coast Guard and other Armed Forces facilities, the cost of providing station-keeper support to the organized Reserve training units, and the procurement of training aids and facilities (under $50 thousand).

4. Administration.—This activity encompasses all administrative costs of the Reserve training program.

1. Search and rescue.—Activities in this program area are to complete development of the distress alerting and location system and to continue efforts in helicopter sensors and the safe, rapid recovery system for helicopter operations aboard our ships.

2. Aids to navigation.—Activities under this program are designed to: Reduce the system costs, and the likelihood of collision and grounding of vessels, thereby obviating legal suits against the Government.

A major activity in 1974 will be the initial field test of an experimental precision navigation system developed in prior years for rivers and harbors.

Buoy system activities will include: Continued development and testing of improved buoy types, mooring concepts, nonpolluting power sources and light sources.

3. Marine safety.—Activities in this program area provide technical knowledge to support regulations and, in particular, recent legislation such as title II of the Ports and Waterways Safety Act of 1972 and the Federal Boat Safety Act of 1971.

The 1974 activities in commercial vessel safety include: Extension of the spill risk project to identify the critical factors and the corrective actions necessary to reduce the potential for and hazards from spills; materials research and model test of a membrane system for isolating cargo from ballast water; analysis and testing of special cargoes, equipment and systems carried or used on vessels carrying hazardous material; continued development of improved fire and survival safety systems; and research to establish regulations for vessel maneuvering and stopping distances, as well as ship design, construction and operations.

Activities in support of boating safety include: Development and testing of improved life jackets; and research and limited tests of critical boat stability, construction, materials, and performance factors.

4. Maritime environmental protection.—1974 efforts will continue work initiated in prior years. These activities support new legislative responsibilities given the Coast Guard.

Development of the vessel traffic system in San Francisco will continue with primary efforts on system automation (computerization), reliability, and maintainability. Work will also be conducted to develop improved displays, and alternate (nonradar) vessel traffic system concepts.

Pollution response activities include: Full-scale testing of the high seas oil recovery systems, development of specifications for fast current cleanup systems; preliminary concepts for Arctic oil spill response systems; development of concepts and specifications for high speed surface delivery cleanup system; and implementation of the chemical hazardous materials response information system (CHRIS).

Pollution prevention and enforcement efforts include: Test and evaluation of airborne oil detection systems; and continued research and testing of "in situ" pollutant surveillance and monitoring devices.

In-house abatement work will focus on: Shipboard testing of prototype 50-man and 20-man sewage treatment systems; completion of feasibility studies of shipboard oil-water separators; and development of portable vessel air pollution monitors.

5. Ocean operations.—No activity funded in this area.

6. Program support.—This area provides support for the administrative and project management personnel at Coast Guard headquarters; and for the administration, operation, maintenance, and personnel costs at the Coast Guard Research and Development Center, Groton, Conn. Research and development activities at the Center will be primarily directed towards projects in the maritime environmental protection and boating safety areas.

This appropriation provides financial assistance for State boating safety programs as authorized by the Federal Boat Safety Act of 1971 (Public Law 92-75).

The act provides for a coordinated national boating safety program to improve boating safety and to foster greater development, use, and enjoyment of all the waters of the United States by encouraging and assisting participation by the several States, the boating industry, and the boating public in development of more comprehensive boating safety programs.

The act authorizes appropriations through 1976, prescribes the manner in which funds are to be allocated among the eligible States, prescribes the level of matching State funds, and also permits allocation of not more than 5 per centum of funds appropriated in any fiscal year for national boating safety activities of one or more national nonprofit public service organizations.

The fund will be used when a spill occurs and the responsible vessel owner or facility operator (whether in the public or private sector) is not in a position to accomplish immediate cleanup with his own resources. Expenditures from the fund will later be reimbursed by the responsible owner or operator (whether in the public or private sector). In addition, all fines and civil penalties assessed under section 311 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended, will be deposited into the fund.

The Coast Guard supply fund, in accordance with 14 U.S.C. 650, finances the procurement of uniform clothing; commissary provisions; general stores; technical material; and fuel for vessels over 200 feet in length. The fund is financed by reimbursements from sale of goods.

Activity of approximately $34 million in this fund in 1974 is divided 11% for uniform clothing; 60% for commissary provisions; and 29% for general stores, technical material, and fuel.

Higher sales in 1973 and 1974 in clothing, commissary provisions and fuel are expected as a result of increases in the number of recruits and assumption of inventory control at Coast Guard Base, Kodiak, Alaska. General stores and technical material sales are expected to decrease due to increased emphasis on utilization of other government agencies for supply support.

² Includes capital outlay as follows: 1973, $8,261 thousand; 1974, $13,180 thousand.

1. Operations.—(a) Operation of traffic control system.—This activity covers the operation on a daily 24-hour basis of a national system of air traffic management in the United States and its possessions. With the aid of radar, communications, and other facilities, traffic management personnel at 27 centers monitor and control en route flights of civil and military aircraft conducted under instrument conditions to assure safety and to expedite the flow of traffic. Control towers are operated at 376 major civil airports to guide traffic movements on and in the vicinity of the airports. Some 324 domestic and international flight service stations transmit weather and other information to pilots and relay traffic control data between ground controllers and pilots. The increase in 1974 will provide for increased employment in the controller work force to handle workload growth and to operate newly commissioned air traffic control facilities.

(b) Installation and materiel services.—This activity covers procurement, contracting and materiel management programs; supply support and leased communications services for the traffic control system; and supply support for agency aircraft except for aircraft related to the research and development programs.

(c) Maintenance of traffic control system.—This activity covers the direction and engineering services related to the establishment and improvement of facilities and equipment in the traffic control system; and technical operation and maintenance of a national network of air navigation and traffic control aids in the United States and its possessions. The increase in 1974 will provide for employment increases required in the field maintenance work force to maintain new traffic control and navigation aids planned for commissioning.

(d) Administration of flight standards program.—This activity provides for: (1) Monitoring the accuracy of signals emitted from the air navigation aids; and (2) the establishment and enforcement of the civil air regulations which are designed to assure the high standards of safety in aviation. Inspections are made and certificates issued for aircraft, airmen, aircraft operators, and air agencies which meet safety or competency requirements. This program also provides for the management, operation and maintenance of agency aircraft used in facility flight inspection, development of flight procedures, and inspector flight training. Resources are also included under this activity for the conduct of the Federal Government's air transportation security program.

(e) Administration of medical programs.—This activity covers the development of regulations governing the physical and mental fitness of airmen and other persons whose health affects safety in flight; the development and supervision of a health and medical program for agency personnel; the administration of an aviation medical research program, the project costs of which are financed under Research, engineering, and development; and the operation of the Civil Aeromedical Institute building.

(f) Development direction.—This activity covers the planning, direction and evaluation of the engineering and development program, the direct project costs of which are financed under the Research, engineering, and development appropriation; and the related administrative support for the operation of the National Aviation Facilities Experimental Center at Atlantic City, N.J.

(g) Administration of airports program.—This activity provides for the administration of an airport planning grant program, a development assistance program for the improvement of public airports, and an airports certification program as authorized by the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1970.

2. Facilities and equipment.—A proposed amendment to the 1973 appropriation language is included in Part III.

3. Engineering and development.—Under the engineering and development activity of this appropriation, there are the following subactivities:

(a) Aircraft safety.—This activity covers the development of standards, rules, regulations, and certification for an accident prevention program designed to promote flight safety of civil aircraft by assuring the design, flight performance characteristics, and airworthiness of aircraft.

Development of such antihijacking devices as weapon and explosive detection systems and methods of reducing risk to life resulting from hijackings are contained in this activity.

Environmental programs are also included in this category. Principal efforts are the development of data to support rulemaking decisions, and development of certification standards and criteria to economically minimize the undesired environmental effects on the public. This effort includes a program to investigate the feasibility of achieving significant engine noise reduction through improved design features.

(b) Aviation medicine.—This activity provides for conducting an aeromedical engineering and development program to identify and eliminate those physical, physiological, and psychological factors which may jeopardize flight safety.

The Airport and Airway Revenue Act of 1970 (title II of Public Law 91-258) establishes in the Treasury of the United States an Airport and airway trust fund. Section 208(b) of the act provides that all revenues from aviation user taxes are appropriated to the trust fund. Section 208(d) of the act authorizes additional appropriations to the trust fund as may be required to make expenditures for airport and airway activities conducted by the Federal Aviation Administration which are specifically described under section 208(f) of the act.

This account provides for a definite appropriation in accordance with section 14(e) of the act, equal to the difference between tax revenues estimated to be collected by the Treasury and appropriations enacted and minimum authorizations by the Congress under the Airport and airway trust fund. No payment to the trust fund is required in 1974.

This appropriation finances maintenance, operations, management, and capital outlay costs for equipment and facility projects at the federally owned Washington National and Dulles International Airports which serve the National Capital Area.

The operation of the airports is conducted on a business basis with revenues derived from landing fees, concession activity, and lease arrangements deposited as receipts in the general fund of the Treasury. The direct operating costs and capital outlays are financed by direct appropriation.

Combined revenues of the two airports are expected to exceed the 1974 appropriation request by $5.7 million and make a significant contribution to the recovery of interest and depreciation charges. In 1974 for the first time, before application of interest and depreciation charges, Dulles International Airport is expected to return an operating profit of $0.9 million. This will make both airports self-supporting in terms of recovery of direct operating costs through revenues.

The rate structures and concession arrangements are established so as to assure the recovery of operating costs, interest expenses and an appropriate return on the Government's investment during the useful life of the airports. Revenues, however, are expected to grow at a faster rate than expenses.

The following table reflects increase in activity at the airports:

This appropriation finances construction of major improvements to, and expansion of, facilities at Washington National Airport and Dulles International Airport. Projects are undertaken whenever necessary to insure the capability of these airports to adequately, safely, and efficiently meet air travel needs of the public and to promote development of aviation activities in general.

At Washington National Airport, funds are provided for repair of the terminal apron, overlay of taxiways, overlay of Runway 3-21, relocation of a water main, expanding the industrial waste disposal system, and security improvements.

At Dulles International Airport, funds are provided for expanding the airfield pavements, sealing airfield pavement joints, providing weather protection for passengers at the terminal, replacing airfield pavement panels, and security improvements.

All outlays for physical improvements are added to the airports' capital investment and will be subsequently recovered through fees and charges to the tenants and users of the airports, in accordance with established business practices.

The fund currently provides premium aviation war risk hull insurance, effective immediately, to U.S. international air carriers. Premium binders are also issued to cover aircraft, persons, and property and will become war risk insurance in wartime and in situations short of war; policies covering aircraft, persons, and property which become active insurance upon issuance are available to certain civil air carriers in connection with Government contract operations. Administrative costs are out of fee receipts (49 U.S.C. 1531, as amended; 75 Stat. 210).

Unfunded contingent liability as of October 31, 1972, is estimated at $65 billion. This amount includes hull insurance and personal and property liability on approximately 627 aircraft insured under this program.

The Airport and Airway Development Act of 1970 (Public Law 91-258, 84 Stat. 219), provides for the transfer of revenue from the general fund to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund. This revenue is derived from the aviation fuel tax and certain other taxes paid by airport and airway users. The Secretary of the Treasury estimates the amounts to be so transferred. In turn, annual appropriations are authorized from this fund to meet expenditures for Federal-aid airports and airways.

Under the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1970 (Public Law 91-258; 84 Stat. 219), grants are made to public agencies in the development and improvement, as well as planning, of public airports. The act authorizes grants for airport development in the total amount of $295 million annually up through 1975. An amount not to exceed $15 million is available for planning grants, and the remainder of $280 million is for airport improvement projects. Projects supported by airport development and improvement grants include construction of runways and taxiways, purchase of land, provision of runway and taxiway light systems, and construction of buildings to house safety equipment. Projects to be supported by airport planning grants include the development of construction plans for regional systems of airports and plans for individual airports.

This request provides for a 1974 program of $15 million in new planning grants and $280 million for airport development grants.

Liquidating cash totaling $200 million is provided to pay for airport development and improvement projects including land acquisition.

FACILITIES AND EQUIPMENT (AIRPORT AND AIRWAY TRUST FUND)—Continued

Under this appropriation, the Federal airways system is improved by the installation of new equipment and the construction and modernization of facilities to keep pace with aeronautical activity. The appropriation also finances major capital investments required by other agency programs such as aircraft for facility flight inspection and training, and experimental facilities for the engineering and development program. The 1974 estimate will carry forward the program to increase the capacity of the airway system and make its operation safer and more efficient. It provides for the continuation and enhancement of major efforts already underway to provide an automation capability in the air traffic control system. Operating costs of facilities procured under this appropriation are financed under the Operations general fund appropriation.

1. Air route traffic control centers.—(a) Long range radar provides FAA air traffic controllers with information on aircraft positions, at distances up to 185 miles, (b) automation equipment covers computers and other devices which aid controllers in handling en route air traffic, (c) other center facilities cover the installation of equipment to provide communications and related services.

2. Airport traffic control towers.—(a) Terminal area radar aids traffic control in the vicinity of airports by displaying aircraft positions at distances up to 60 miles, (b) terminal area automation covers computers and other devices which aid controllers in handling terminal air traffic, (c) other tower facilities cover the establishment, improvement and relocation of airport traffic control tower facilities.

3. Flight service stations.—(a) Domestic flight service stations and associated facilities provide flight assistance service to pilots, (b) international flight service stations provide long-distance communications for transoceanic flights.

4. Air navigation facilities.—(a) Very high frequency omni-directional radio ranges equipped with tactical air navigation capabilities (VORTAC) are standard short-range navigation aids used to define airways and air routes and to provide distance and direction information to pilots, (b) low- and medium-frequency facilities include radio beacons and ranges which provide pilots with direction and weather information, (c) instrument landing systems provide pilots with direction, distance, and glide slope information necessary for making safe approaches to runways under poor visibility conditions, (d) visual aids consist primarily of lighting aids which also assist the pilot in making final approaches to airport runways, particularly in areas where terrain or other environmental factors cause potential hazards to safe landings.

5. Housing, utilities, and miscellaneous facilities.—This section includes general support facilities and items not covered elsewhere.

6. Aircraft and related equipment.—Provides for facility flight inspection, including aircraft and avionics equipment to inspect the accuracy and other characteristics of navigation and traffic control aids from the air.

7. Development, test, and evaluation facilities.—This activity provides for the construction and improvement of plant and facilities at the National Aviation Facilities Experimental Center in Atlantic City, N.J. It also includes the procurement of capital items of equipment for use in the engineering and development program.

The FAA conducts engineering and development programs to improve the national air traffic control system and to increase progressively its capacity to meet air traffic demands of the 1975-85 time period. The effort to increase capacity is based on exploiting current technology and applying system engineering techniques to the development and integration of new equipment into the total system. The agency also administers aviation medical research aimed at increasing the personal effectiveness of traffic controllers.

These programs are conducted, under the direction of the agency's technical personnel, through contracts with qualified private firms, universities, individuals, and other Government agencies.

1. Air traffic control.—This provides for incremental system improvements and the major upgrading of those systems required to perform modern traffic control functions. These include the surveillance of aircraft by tracking radars and control center processing of flight information received from pilots, airline dispatchers, flight service stations, and the surveillance system through a national communications network. The high-speed, or real-time, computerized processing of this data for traffic controllers is the key to increasing system capacity. This traffic control program also provides for increasing the capacity of major airports to safely and efficiently handle larger, faster passenger aircraft. These increases in airport capacity will be achieved by the development of new, computerized airport traffic control systems which will enable more efficient metering and spacing of terminal traffic under all weather conditions. The objective of these development programs is to double airport/airway capacity by 1980.

2. Navigation.—This provides for the development of ground-based systems which insure the precision navigation of aircraft. This capability ranks in importance with the radar surveillance of aircraft in the effort to increase system capacity. It requires the development of new omnirange stations and sophisticated landing systems capable of handling increased air traffic in adverse weather conditions. These activities are an integral part of the effort to double system capacity by 1980.

3. Aviation weather.—This provides for a program, coordinated with the Departments of Defense and Commerce, to modernize the acquisition, processing, dissemination and display of weather information tailored to the needs of aviation users.

4. Aviation medicine.—This provides for conducting aeromedical research directed toward identifying and eliminating those physiological and psychological factors inimical to personnel engaged in operating the traffic control system.

FEDERAL HIGHWAY ADMINISTRATION

Title 23, U.S.C. ("Highways") and other supporting legislation provide authority for the various programs of the Federal Highway Administration designed to secure and develop national highway systems.

In summary, the 1974 budget estimate contemplates $5.8 billion in budget authority, $4.6 billion in obligations, and $4.7 billion in outlays.

Obligations incurred provide the best measure of program activity in the various accounts of the Federal Highway Administration. The following table compares 1974 obligations with those of prior years:

This account provides for the salaries and expenses of the Administration required to conduct and administer Federal-aid and several direct highway programs.

Expenses for planning, operation, and administration of the Federal-aid highway programs and highway research are financed by reimbursements from Federal-aid highway (trust fund) authorizations. Motor carrier safety programs and one-third of the amount for highway-related safety research and development programs are financed by this Federal fund appropriation. Beginning in 1972, the functions formerly financed by the appropriation for Motor carrier safety and by the Limitation on general expenses of the Federal-aid highway (trust fund) account are now carried out under this account. Beginning in 1974, the highway-related safety research and development programs will be fully funded from the Highway trust fund.

Administrative services for other programs of the Federal Highway Administration, including highway safety, and for road construction programs of other Federal agencies are initially financed from this activity and reimbursements are collected from those programs. This account does not cover administrative expenses of Highway beautification, Darien Gap Highway, and Territorial highways, which are provided by separate appropriations.

1. Program direction and coordination.—(a) Provides overall direction and coordination of the highway transportation mission; (b) provides legal services for all programs; (c) develops and administers programs for a continuing audit of claims against Federal funds and a thorough investigation of alleged irregularities; (d) plans and directs public affairs programs; and (e) develops, recommends policies and standards, and assures compliance with the civil rights and equal opportunity procedures within the Federal Highway Administration and by recipients of grants-in-aid administered by the Federal Highway Administration. Increases are requested to provide additional personnel to meet the mounting workload in the civil rights activity.

2. General program support.—(a) Formulates policy, multiyear and long-range plans and goals for highway programs and develops data and analyses for current and long-range programing; (b) conducts direct and contract research and development relating to traffic operations, new construction techniques, highway safety, and the social and environmental aspects of highways; and (c) provides the full range of necessary administrative support services for all elements of the Federal Highway Administration. Increases are requested to intensify the contract planning and research and development efforts.

3. Highway programs.—(a) Provides engineering guidance to Federal and State agencies and to foreign governments, and conducts a program to encourage use of modern traffic engineering procedures to increase the traffic-carrying capacity of existing highways and urban streets; (b) assists States, other Federal agencies, and certain foreign countries in right-of-way acquisition and develops procedures for highway location selection and consideration of environmental impacts; and (c) provides program and engineering supervision of the Interstate, primary, secondary, and urban highway programs through nine regional and 52 division offices.

4. Motor carrier and highway safety.—(a) Develops and executes policy and programs for accomplishment of the motor carrier safety mission; and (b) administers a program of assistance to States and communities in the establishment of safety programs based on the highway-oriented safety standards. Increases are requested to provide additional personnel for motor carrier safety investigation and supervision, to meet expanded workload in hazardous materials activities and to provide additional research funds.

5. Training programs.—Provides on-the-job training for highway engineers and program managers, and finances construction skill training programs for disadvantaged workers hired by contractors on federally aided highway projects. Increases are requested to intensify the level of effort in the construction skill training program.

This appropriation provides funds for projects initiated pursuant to the provisions of the Highway Beautification Act of 1965, together with the Federal-Aid Highway Acts of 1968 and 1970.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1970 provides for completely revised program emphasis to concentrate on the outdoor advertising portion of the program. The primary objective of this program is to remove all non-conforming outdoor signs along the Nation's Interstate and Federal-aid primary highways. It is anticipated that the total Federal cost of this effort will aggregate approximately $300 million.

Particular emphasis is being placed on sign removal in terms of an entire company rather than on the basis of sign-by-sign location as in the past. This approach will offer the greatest potential for success at the least cost.

The $55 million program planned for 1974 will enable the continuation of screening and/or removal of junkyards along the Nation's highways and continue the emphasis on the sign removal program by placing it back in phase with planned completion dates.

Additional contract authority for 1975 will be requested in proposed highway legislation. Contract authority is available for obligation 1 year in advance of the year for which authorized.

The planned distribution of new program obligations in 1974 as compared to 1973 is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

The Highway Safety Act of 1970 provided contract authority of $30 million for each of the years 1972 and 1973 for grants to States and communities for implementing certain highway-related safety standards. The contract authority is available 1 year in advance of the year for which authorized, and 2 years thereafter. Two-thirds of the funds are provided from the Highway trust fund and one-third is provided from the general fund of the Treasury.

The combination of general and trust funds will provide a total program of $13.2 million in 1974 for grants to assist States and localities in implementing these highway safety standards, which deal with traffic control devices, highway construction and maintenance, accident location surveillance, and highway-related aspects of pedestrian safety. Since related highway safety standards are also administered by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, this amount is a tentative distribution. The final distribution will be determined after the annual program plans of the States for 1974 are submitted and approved by the two agencies.

Section 322 of title 23, United States Code, as added by the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1970, authorizes the Secretary to carry out a demonstration project for the elimination of all public ground-level rail-highway crossings along the route of high-speed ground transportation demonstration projects between Washington, D.C., and Boston, Mass., and in the vicinity of Greenwood, S.C. The authorization provides for the appropriation of not to exceed $22 million from general funds and $9 million from the Highway trust fund.

The program is financed jointly by the Highway trust fund and the general fund of the Treasury. Under existing legislation, if the grade crossing involved is located on any Federal-aid highway system, the Federal share of the project cost is 90%, financed from the Highway trust fund, and the railroad's share is 10%. If the grade crossing involved is located on a highway not part of any Federal-aid system, then the Federal share of the project cost is 80%, financed from the general fund of the Treasury, the railroad's share is 10%, and the State in which the highway is located pays the remaining 10% share.

The budget authorities and outlays contained in these schedules are the general-fund financed portion only. The combination of general and trust funds will provide for a 1974 program of $18 million.

Assistance is provided for an arterial highway system, and necessary interisland connectors, as designated by each territorial Governor and approved by the Secretary of Transportation.

The Secretary is also authorized to provide technical assistance to each territorial government to establish an effective long-range highway development program and to organize an appropriate agency to administer the highway programs, including planning, design, construction, maintenance, right-of-way acquisition, and relocation assistance.

Additional contract authority for the years 1974 and 1975 will be requested in proposed highway legislation.

A total 1974 program of $4 million is planned for technical assistance and highway improvements.

Grants are made to States for construction and improvements on the Interstate System and for urban and rural highway-oriented transportation programs.

The Federal Government pays 90% of the costs for interstate projects and is scheduled to pay 70% of the costs of most other Federal-aid projects. The Federal share of project costs is increased in those States with large areas of public domain.

Legislation will be proposed to provide contract authorities for 1974 and 1975 for carrying on the Federal-aid highways program. The program structure outlined below reflects the probable structure of this legislation.

1. The National System—Interstate Highways.—$2.6 billion is provided for continued construction on the National Interstate System. As of October 1, 1972, 33,796 miles of the 42,500-mile interstate were open to traffic, 3,742 miles were under construction, and engineering or right-of-way acquisition was in progress on another 3,632 miles.

2. The State network.—(d) Rural transportation program.—$625 million will finance highway construction for rural noninterstate highways with emphasis on arterial routes. Some forms of rural mass transit may also be eligible for funding from this program.

3. The urban systems.—(d) Urban transportation program.—$800 million is provided to stimulate surface transportation investments by urban areas to alleviate existing congestion and avoid further accentuation of urban transportation problems as population continues to grow. It is anticipated that this program will permit urban areas to use their share of these funds for capital investments in either highways or mass transit systems.

4. Safety programs: Bridge replacement.—$75 million will provide for the replacement of the most critical of many unsafe bridges now in use by motorists.

5. Other programs.—This category includes $113 million for emergency relief, which aids States and localities in repairing highways damaged from natural disasters, and $81 million for grants to the States for highway planning and research.

6. Administration.—$106 million represents the amount to be transferred to the Salaries and expenses appropriation to provide for executive direction and general administration of the Federal-aid highways program.

Actual and estimated progress of Federal-aid programs is summarized in the following table:

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1968 provided for the establishment of a right-of-way revolving fund to provide interest-free loans for the advance acquisition of rights-of-way by the States and payment of relocation expenses including the State share of the cost. Upon construction of the highway project, the advance for right-of-way acquisition and relocation expenses is repaid to the revolving fund.

Contract authority totaling $300 million was authorized from the Highway trust fund. In 1974, additional obligations of $48 million will be made to the States from unused contract authority balances.

Rail crossings—demonstration projects.—Provides $5.4 million in 1974 from the Highway trust fund for the elimination of unsafe highway-railroad grade crossings along the route of the Washington, D.C., to Boston, Mass., highspeed rail demonstration project, and in the vicinity of Greenwood, S.C., when the crossing is located on any designated Federal-aid highway system. This amount will reimburse the appropriation, Rail crossings—demonstration projects, which provides for the Federal fund portion of the demonstration program.

Highway-related safety grants.—The Highway Safety Act of 1970 provided $30 million of contract authority for each of the years 1972 and 1973, two-thirds of which is financed from the Highway trust fund, for grants to States and communities to implement the highway safety standards administered by the Federal Highway Administration.

Additional contract authority for 1975, all from the Highway trust fund, will be requested in proposed legislation. Contract authority is available 1 year in advance of the year for which authorized. No contract authority is requested for 1974 since sufficient authority exists from prior years.

NATIONAL HIGHWAY TRAFFIC SAFETY ADMINISTRATION

The Highway Safety Act of 1970 established the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) within the Department of Transportation. The 1970 act also contained funding authorizations for carrying out highway safety programs on a matching basis with the States and for conducting an associated highway research and development program during 1972 and 1973. Two-thirds of the authorized funding for those years was provided from the Highway trust fund. For subsequent years, authorization for these programs will be provided in total from the Highway trust fund under proposed authorizing legislation. An authorization level of $150 million will be proposed for 1974 for the highway safety grant program. No authority will be requested for 1973 programs since sufficient authority exists from prior years. Traffic and motor vehicle safety and motor vehicle consumer enforcement programs are to be financed entirely from Federal funds.

The following table depicts the source of financing identified with the specific item of authorizing legislation for all programs (in thousands of dollars):

1. Program direction and coordination.—This activity provides direction, coordination, and implementation of overall policies, programs, and objectives. Staff offices carry out responsibilities in planning, scientific matters, legal services, consumer affairs and civil rights.

2. Motor vehicle program.—This activity encompasses the development, promulgation, and enforcement of safety standards for new and used motor vehicles, tires, and equipment. Compliance evaluations and defects investigations are undertaken to determine safety-related motor vehicle defects. Studies are made to determine the effects on product costs and leadtime for implementation by industry.

3. Traffic safety programs.—This activity provides for headquarters and field staff to establish policy, program, and technical guidance to the States in executing highway safety programs, to determine program effectiveness and to assure conformity with governing laws and regulations. Funding is also provided to carry out training and execution programs, conduct demonstration projects that will speed the implementation of new safety techniques into practice. Funding requirements for 1974 reflect a slight net reduction below 1973 due to the completion of nine alcohol safety action projects.

4. Research and analysis.—This activity provides for motor vehicle and highway safety research and development, for the collection of data to determine the relationship between motor vehicle or equipment performance characteristics and crashes or the occurrence of death or personal injury as a result of such crashes, and for operation of the National Driver Register, which provides centralized information on license revocations.

Under the State and community highway safety program, Federal grants are provided to assist the States and their political subdivisions in the establishment of highway safety programs such as driver licensing, motor vehicle registration, traffic records, police traffic services, driver education, etc. Individual States are also utilizing this funding to supplement federally funded alcohol safety action projects. 1974 programs will emphasize high payoff alcohol countermeasures and selective traffic enforcement. Highway safety programs are based on comprehensive statewide plans prepared in accordance with uniform standards promulgated by the Secretary of Transportation. The States are required to match Federal grants.

A total of $90 million in obligations is planned for highway safety programs in 1974, including those obligations to be incurred by both the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) and the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA). A tentative distribution would include $13 million for FHWA and $77 million for NHTSA. Annual program plans as submitted by the States and approved by the two agencies will determine the actual distribution of obligations.

This appropriation finances research, development, and demonstration programs in high-speed ground transportation.

1. Research and development.—This includes research of conventional and advanced technology ground transportation systems, including vehicle propulsion, guideways, and aerodynamics. The 1974 funding provides for limited continued development and testing of an experimental tracked air cushion research vehicle, while research efforts directed at railroad track structure improvements are increased.

2. Demonstrations.—This provides for conducting demonstrations of improved intercity rail passenger systems to determine the contributions that can be made to more efficient and economical service. In 1974, programs emphasize projects of near-term application, such as continued development of an improved passenger train (IPT).

3. Administration.—This provides for the personnel and related administrative costs for conducting the high-speed program, including the test center at Pueblo, Colo.

The Rail Passenger Service Act of 1970, as amended¹ created the National Railroad Passenger Corporation (AMTRAK), a private "for-profit" corporation. Funds appropriated under the act are to assist AMTRAK in providing modern, efficient, intercity rail passenger service. Congress has mandated that the Department provide by March 15, 1973 a detailed report on the effectiveness of AMTRAK and recommendations for an intercity rail system after termination of the experimental period on June 30, 1973. This report will present the Administration's position regarding a future system for AMTRAK.

Budget program.—There are no significant changes planned in the rail line operation program and other operating programs and activities for 1974. Those programs are budgeted at a slightly higher cost than previous years primarily to support industrywide negotiated pay increases.

Financing.—Programs are financed by revenues earned from freight and passenger service and other services incidental thereto. The Administration will continue to support legislation which would authorize the sale of the Alaska Railroad.

This fund was established to finance all grants, contracts, and loan activities authorized by the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964, as amended.

Under the provisions of the 1970 amendments (Urban Mass Transportation Assistance Act of 1970) additional capital was provided in the form of authority to obligate $3.1 billion. During 1973, legislation will be transmitted to increase contract authority by $3 billion. Additional authority is required to complement the current efforts to sustain the high Federal priority in assisting State and local public bodies to improve urban transportation systems. The capital facilities, relocation, and technical studies activities are financed by the authority to obligate in advance of appropriations. Grants and contracts for the research, development, and demonstration; managerial training; and university research and training activities are funded through appropriations, as are administrative expenses.

Capital outlay.—Capital facilities grants.—Grants are made to State and local public agencies to assist in financing acquisition, construction, reconstruction, and improvement of facilities, of mass transportation service in urban areas.

In 1974 the activity level will be $872.0 million with an estimated 291 projects. This compares with $863.7 million in 1973 with an estimated 229 projects and $510.0 million in 1972 with 158 projects. It is estimated that in 1974 this activity will assist in the purchase of 5,000 new buses, 215 commuter rail cars, and 275 rail rapid transit cars. As of September 30, 1972, this activity has assisted in the purchase of 10,974 new buses, 1,844 rail rapid transit cars, and 970 commuter rail cars. It is estimated that in 1974 this activity will receive 115 applications and amendments with a dollar value of $1,500 million. This compares with the 1973 estimated receipts of 110 applications and amendments with a total value of $1,000 million. The number of closeouts during 1972 was 36 with a dollar value of $71.3 million.

Technical studies grants.—Under this activity authorized by section 9 of the act, State and local public agencies are assisted in carrying out studies relating to management operations, capital requirements, economic feasibility, and conducting similar activities in preparation for the construction, acquisition, or improved operation of mass transportation systems, facilities and equipment.

In 1974 the activity level will be $38 million with an estimated 245 projects. This compares with $33.5 million in 1973 with an estimated 205 projects and $25 million in 1972 with 163 projects. It is estimated that in 1974 this activity will receive 120 applications and amendments with a dollar value of $45 million. This compares with the 1973 estimate of 110 applications and amendments with a dollar value of $40 million and the 1972 amount of 88 applications and amendments with a dollar value of $24.2 million. During 1972 this activity had project closeouts of $3.9 million with 29 projects.

Research, development, and demonstrations, grants and contracts.—This activity—conducted under section 6 of the act—involves projects designed for the development, testing, and demonstration of new facilities, equipment, techniques, and methods which assist in reducing urban transportation needs, in improving mass transportation services, or in meeting total urban transportation needs at an effective cost level.

In 1974 the activity level will be $80.0 million with an estimated 160 projects. This compares with $73.2 million in 1973 with an estimated 160 projects and $61.4 million in 1972 with 105 projects. It is estimated that in 1974 this activity will receive 300 applications and amendments with a dollar value of $105 million. This compares with the 1973 estimate of 259 applications and amendments with a dollar value of $70 million and the 1972 amount of 95 applications and amendments with a dollar value of $30.3 million. During 1972 this activity had project closeouts of $9 million with 12 projects.

Managerial training.—Grants under this activity authorized in section 10 of the act, are made to public bodies to provide university fellowships for up to 1 year of advance training. Fellowship awards are made for the training of personnel employed in managerial, technical, and professional positions in the urban mass transportation field.

In 1974 the activity level will be $0.5 million with an estimated 100 fellowships. This compares with $0.5 million in 1973 with an estimated 100 fellowships and $0.5 million in 1972 with 100 fellowships. It is estimated that in 1974 this activity will receive 275 applications for fellowships with a dollar value of $1.7 million. This compares with the 1973 estimate of 100 fellowships with a dollar value of $0.5 million and the 1972 amount of 105 fellowships with a dollar value of $0.3 million. During 1972 this activity had fellowship closeouts of $0.3 million with 130 fellowships.

University research and training.—Grants under this activity authorized in section 11 of the act, are awarded to public and private nonprofit institutions of higher learning. The grants are to assist in establishing or continuing programs which combine professional training in urban transportation, and related fields.

In 1974 the activity level will be $2.5 million with an estimated 63 projects. This compares with $2.5 million in 1973 with an estimated 72 projects and $2.5 million in 1972 with 70 projects. It is estimated that in 1974 this activity will receive 70 applications and amendments with a dollar value of $8.5 million. This compares with an estimated 70 applications and amendments in 1973 with a dollar value of $8.5 million and the 1972 amount of 77 applications and amendments with a dollar value of $8 million. During 1972 this activity had project closeouts of $0.45 million with five projects.

Administrative expenses.—This activity provides for carrying out administrative functions, including executive direction, budgeting, accounting, property management, and personnel management. The administrative expense activity will be conducted at a $7.0 million level in 1974. This level compares to $6.5 million in 1973, and $4.6 million in 1972. Also, there will be approximately 723 ongoing projects totaling $1,794.8 million which must be administered.

Capital facilities loans.—Under this activity, two types of loans are available. Capital improvement loans are to finance the acquisition, construction, reconstruction, and improvement of facilities and equipment. Loans are also provided for the advance acquisition of real property to be used as a part of planned mass transportation systems. While there are pending applications for loans, this activity has such a low volume of approvals no effort is made to estimate new loan commitments. Authority available is sufficient to cover any possible loan and an administrative adjustment is made to accommodate this activity.

Financing.—The 1970 amendments to the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 provided budget authority of $3,100 million. An additional $3 billion will be required in fiscal year 1973.

The amendments for 1970 provide an authorization for appropriations to liquidate obligations, and, further, require that all other appropriations be accounted for within this authorization. This provision provides annual scheduled dollar limits which total $1,860 million through June 30, 1975, and the balance, $1,241 million, authorized for appropriation after June 30, 1975. For 1974, $450 million is being requested and this compares with $334.8 million and $221.3 million appropriated in 1973 and 1972, respectively, which are charged to the authorization. There follows a series of schedules reflecting usage of appropriation (dollars in millions):
