Fiscal Year 1974

Appendix

FOREWORD

This is one of several documents which relate to the budget for 1974:

The Budget of the United States Government, 1974, contains the Budget Message of the President, information on the Federal program by function and by agency and account, summary tables, and statistical information.

The Budget of the United States Government, 1974—Appendix, contains the text of appropriation estimates proposed for the consideration of the Congress together with specific supporting information on the various appropriations and funds, and other supplementary material. The contents of this volume are further explained at the beginning of each of its four parts.

The U.S. Budget in Brief, 1974, a pamphlet type publication, is available for those who wish a more concise and less technical presentation than either of the above two documents.

The Special Analyses, Budget of the United States Government, 1974, contains 18 special analyses of significant aspects of the Federal budget.

NOTE.—Unless otherwise indicated, all references to years in this volume are to fiscal years ending June 30. Financial tables are nearly always stated in thousands of dollars; details may not add to the totals because of rounding.

EXPLANATION OF ESTIMATES

Part I contains various tables and schedules in support of the budget, explanatory statements of the work to be performed and the money needed, and the text of the language proposed for enactment by Congress on each item for which congressional action in an appropriation bill is required. It also contains the text of general provisions proposed for enactment by the Congress, which apply to entire agencies or groups of agencies.

ARRANGEMENT

The chapters of this part reflect the branches of Government, and the major departments and agencies of the executive branch. For the latter, most smaller agencies are grouped in one chapter—"Other independent agencies."

Within each chapter there are three main sections. The first section covers programs authorized by existing legislation (including items for which extension or renewal of existing legislation is requested). This section is organized by major subordinate organizations within the agency (usually bureaus). For each bureau, Federal funds, covering the funds owned by the Government, precede trust funds, covering funds which are held in a fiduciary capacity by the Government. Generally, accounts with new budget authority in 1974 will precede those without such an entry.

The second major section of each chapter covers the legislative program which reflects the costs of proposed new legislation. This section is also organized by bureau or other major subordinate organization. The proposals are applicable to Federal funds unless otherwise indicated.

The third section of each chapter includes the general provisions of appropriation language which are applicable to the agency in that chapter, and are in addition to the specific language pertaining to individual appropriation items. General provisions which apply to specified groups of agencies are placed in the chapter covering the first agency which appears in the respective appropriation act. However, the general provisions which are Government-wide in scope (identified "Departments, Agencies, and Corporations") and are contained in the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government Appropriation Act, are placed at the end of the Executive Office of the President chapter.

An explanation of the types of funds included in the budget may be found in Part 6 of the compact volume—The Budget of the United States Government, 1974.

FORM OF DETAILED MATERIAL

APPROPRIATION LANGUAGE

The language proposed for inclusion in the 1974 appropriation acts is printed at the head of each item requiring action by Congress, except for those items which are not formally recommended at this time but will be proposed for later transmittal. The language of the 1973 appropriation acts, printed in roman type, is used as a base. Italic type indicates proposed new language. Brackets enclose material which is proposed for omission, as in this example:

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For expenses necessary for the general administration of the Department of Commerce, including not to exceed $1,500 for official entertainment, [$7,900,000] $8,000,000. (15 U.S.C. 1501; Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1973.)

Following the language, and printed in italic within parentheses, are citations to relevant authorizing legislation and to the appropriation act from which the text is taken. (When an appropriation bill has not been enacted at the time the budget is submitted, the language relates only to 1974 and is italicized with no brackets shown.)

BASIS FOR SCHEDULES

The 1973 column generally includes enacted amounts, except that two regular appropriation bills have not yet been enacted. In those instances, the amount shown will be the 1973 budget request, as revised. For certain accounts which have received supplemental appropriations, but as yet have not received their regular 1973 appropriation, separate memorandum entries appear for both pending and enacted 1973 budget authority amounts. In a few cases, amendments to 1973 pending budget requests are shown in a brief additional program and financing schedule in Part I. This amendment is further explained, and accompanied by any necessary appropriation language, in Part III.

In a few places rescissions of enacted appropriations are proposed and appear in the regular program and financing schedules of Part I. Proposed language and an explanation of the rescission are included in Part III.

The basic schedules for Federal and trust funds usually exclude supplemental estimates which are transmitted to Congress separately. These later transmittals are covered by brief program and financing schedules, without appropriation language. However, those supplemental estimates which are being transmitted for consideration with the 1974 budget, identified as: "Supplementals now requested", have appropriation language in Part III of this document.

The 1974 column includes, within the regular schedules, appropriations for recommended extension or renewal of expiring laws; however, money for new legislation is shown in separate schedules under the legislative program section of each chapter. Appropriation language is included with the regular schedules, but not with the separate schedules.

Where the required data are available in the accounting system, budgets are presented in terms of costs. Detailed operating cost figures for each activity or object are the value of goods and services consumed in carrying out the program. In the case of capital outlay programs, they are the value of assets acquired.

Total obligations are always shown; activities and objects are reflected on an obligation basis where cost data are not available. Obligations refer to orders placed, contracts awarded, loan agreements made, and recurring services (such as rent, utilities, and personal services) received during the year, regardless of the time of payment.

For a few Government corporations, the detail and the totals of limitations are on the basis of accrued expenditures.

SCHEDULE OF PROGRAM AND FINANCING

This schedule consists of three parts. In the "Program by activities" section, costs or obligations are classified by purpose, program, type of activity, or project for 1972, 1973, and 1974. This classification is individually developed for each appropriation or fund, and is not uniform on a Government-wide basis. Similarly, the identification of capital outlay is not handled uniformly. Where it is of significance, capital outlay is shown by activity. Otherwise, the total for each year is disclosed by footnote.

Where budgets are presented in terms of costs, the relation of costs to obligations is summarized in an entry "Change in selected resources." For appropriation accounts, and for revolving funds for which no business-type financial statements are presented, this entry is supported by a footnote identifying the amounts of the resources involved. For the remaining revolving funds, the items are identified on the statement of financial condition and the appended tabulation.

In certain cases, this schedule is expanded to include additional columns that provide a more informative presentation. This is done, for example, in some construction or procurement programs to show related cost data; for certain Defense items to identify the total obligations programed; and for programs financed at a "preobligation" stage (such as "commitments" in some loan programs).

The "Financing" section shows the fund sources, budget authority, and other means of financing the program, and the disposition of unobligated amounts not used during the year.

The section on "Relation of obligations to outlays" shows obligations net of receipts and other offsets, obligated balances at the start and end of the year, and other items which affect the relation of obligations to outlays.

NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The work planned and services proposed to be carried out are described briefly in a narrative statement for each appropriation or fund. Where practicable, the narrative statement presents accomplishments in relation to financial requirements, and available measures of program and performance.

SCHEDULE OF OBJECT CLASSIFICATION AND PERSONNEL SUMMARY

There is shown for each account a classification of obligations, costs, or accrued expenditures according to the following uniform list of object classifications:

10 PERSONAL SERVICES AND BENEFITS	30 ACQUISITION OF CAPITAL ASSETS
11 Personnel compensation	31 Equipment
12 Personnel benefits	32 Lands and structures
13 Benefits for former personnel	33 Investments and loans
20 CONTRACTUAL SERVICES AND SUPPLIES	40 GRANTS AND FIXED CHARGES

22 Transportation of things	42 Insurance claims and indemnities
23 Rent, communications, and utilities	43 Interest and dividends
24 Printing and reproduction	44 Refunds
25 Other services
26 Supplies and materials

These object classes reflect the nature of the things or services purchased, regardless of the purpose of the program for which they are used. Data according to this classification are illustrated in the following schedule:

99.0 Total obligations.....	8,051	9,224	8,000

Several of the object classes are broken down into subclasses—personnel compensation, for example, is shown separately for permanent positions, for positions other than permanent, and for certain other payments.

A personnel summary is appended to the object classification schedule, as illustrated:

Personnel Summary
Total number of permanent positions.....	330	339	325
Full-time equivalent of other positions.....	33	31	6
Average paid employment.....	337	345	306
Average GS grade.....	9.7	10.0	10.3
Average GS salary.....	$15,395	$15,587	$16,465
Average salary of ungraded positions.....	$9,691	$9,772	$9,790

Permanent positions are those which are established or occupied for a year or more. The nature of the position governs. Thus a permanent position may be occupied by an employee whose appointment is either temporary or permanent in nature. These positions may be full-time (full workweek) or part-time (less than a full workweek).

Average grades and salaries are computed arithmetically. Thus the average salary can fall outside the salary range of the average grade.

STATEMENT OF REVENUE AND EXPENSE

For many revolving funds there is a statement of revenue and expense that shows the resulting net income or loss for the year. This statement is usually on a full accrual basis, including provision for depreciation, for losses on receivables, etc.

STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL CONDITION

For each fund showing a revenue and expense statement, there is also presented a balance sheet for assets, liabilities, and equity of the Government at the close of each year.

¹ The "Changes in selected resources" entry on the program and financing schedule relates to this item.
 Note.—The estimated value of unpaid claims against National Shipping Authority not included above is $4.003 million on June 30, 1972.

This balance sheet excludes balances of appropriations and borrowing authorizations which have not yet been paid into the revolving fund. Because the balance sheet is on an accrual basis, the "Liabilities" section does not reflect obligations incurred for which the liability has not accrued. Nor does the "Assets" section reflect unfilled customer orders received, even though such orders are a basis for obligation in the case of intragovernmental revolving funds. The "Government equity" section, therefore, shows obligations (which have not yet become accrued liabilities), the unobligated balance, unfilled customers' orders on hand (where relevant), and invested capital and earnings.

Appended to the balance sheet is an "Analysis of Changes in Government Equity." This analysis is divided into three sections, as appropriate: (a) interest-bearing capital, (b) non-interest-bearing capital, and (c) retained earnings. Each of these sections shows the beginning balance, changes occurring during the year (e.g., net income for the year, retained earnings transferred to the general fund, net borrowing, etc.), and the balance at the end of the year.

BUDGETS NOT SUBJECT TO REVIEW

The presentations herein for the Legislative Branch, the Judiciary, the Comptroller of the Currency in the Treasury Department, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Milk Market Orders Assessment Fund of the Department of Agriculture, the Farm Credit Administration, and the annexed budgets (other than the Export-Import Bank) have been included, without review, in the amounts submitted by the agencies.

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN BUDGET TABLES AND APPENDIX TABLES

INTRABUDGETARY TRANSACTIONS

The consolidation of Government-administered funds in the compact budget volume may cause duplication in the totals. This occurs when the payment from one of the fund groups (Federal or trust) is credited to a receipt account in the other, and appropriated therefrom. In order to avoid duplication, intrabudgetary transactions (i.e., interfund and intragovernmental transactions) are deducted from the combined aggregates of both budget authority and outlays.

PROPRIETARY RECEIPTS FROM THE PUBLIC

The compact budget volume offsets against outlays for each agency and function the receipts from the public which are market-oriented or are mainly payments for goods and services, regardless of the fund structure. The Appendix continues the conventional practice of offsetting in the individual schedules only those amounts received that are earmarked by law for use in revolving funds, or as reimbursements to appropriations or other funds.

1. Acquisition of library materials.—The Library's collections are developed in accordance with established acquisition policies: materials are procured by purchase, gift, exchange, copyright deposit, transfer and official deposit; and materials are selected for addition to the permanent collections. The objective for 1974 is continued improvement in acquisition coverage and procedures. The collections totaled 85,200,777 items as of June 30, 1972, and consisted of 16,022,327 books and pamphlets; 30,618,658 manuscript pieces and 38,559,792 maps, pieces of music, reels of microfilm, photographs, and other miscellaneous items. Of the items received in 1972, 21,062,480 were added to the permanent collections. This figure is unusually high because of the large gift of the "Look" magazine pictorial file received during the year, numbering approximately 19,115,000 pieces. Pieces received from various sources in 1972 and estimated for 1973 and 1974 are as follows:

2. Organization of the collections.—Library materials are cataloged, classified, marked, and arranged; Library of Congress catalogs are maintained; special collections are organized for use. The objectives for this activity in 1974 are the continued maintenance on a current basis of the Library's record of serial publications, the maintaining of currency in the filing of cards into the Library Card Catalogs, the reduction of cataloging arrearages, the improvement of cataloging methods and procedures to assure the usefulness of the collections.

Selected performance data for 1972 and estimated for 1973 and 1974 (not including processing activities performed by the Reference Department and Law Library) are as follows:

3. Reader and reference services.—Books and other library materials are provided inside and outside of the Library, reference and bibliographic assistance is rendered, and custody of the collections is maintained. The objective of this activity for 1974 is to continue to organize more material for use, to make it available to readers more readily, and to improve reference and circulation services. The workload in major activities is expected to increase in 1973 and 1974 as follows:

4. National program for acquisitions and cataloging.—Under NPAC, the Library of Congress seeks to acquire abroad, catalog immediately, and disseminate cataloging data rapidly for all current monographic works of research value, in order to meet the urgent needs of American libraries. The outstanding success of the program can be clearly measured by the enormous increase of 128% in the number of books cataloged—from 109,789 new titles in 1965 (prior to the program) to 249,983 new titles in 1972. More than doubling the amount of current cataloging available has resulted in savings of many millions of dollars by libraries across the Nation. Prior to the establishment of the NPAC program, independent studies had shown that Library of Congress cataloging for its own purposes met only 50% of the cataloging needs of the American research library community.

The objectives of this activity in 1974 are the continuation of the basic program at its 1973 level in order to continue providing necessary catalog copy automatically and rapidly to college, university, and other research libraries which now rely greatly upon the Library of Congress for such cataloging. New program objectives in 1974 include the conversion of the Public Law 480 office in Tel Aviv to an NPAC regional acquisitions operation; completion of NPAC shared cataloging coverage of Europe where possible and the searching of U.S. and Far Eastern imprint reports in order to inform research libraries of the status of Library of Congress cataloging.

5. Preservation of library materials.—Library materials are preserved in their original format by being bound or rebound, by deacidification and lamination, and by repair and restoration. Materials also are preserved by converting them to a more durable base through microfilming of books and newspapers, by conversion of nitrate film to a safety base, and conversion of deteriorating sound recordings to a durable base material. In addition the Library conducts original research into the many unsolved preservation problems encountered in dealing with millions of deteriorating books and other materials in the Nation's libraries.

6. General administration.—This activity supports the executive staff of the Office of the Librarian, and the Administrative Department, except for preservation of the collections activities. Included are funds for equipment rentals; space rentals; staff for personnel and fiscal management, procurement, protective services, and duplicating services.

The Copyright Office is responsible for recording copyright claims, assignments, and renewals, for supplying copyright information to the public, for collection and accounting for copyright fees, and for printing complete and indexed catalogs for each class of copyright entries. The Office is conducted for the most part on a self-sustaining basis. The amount requested is substantially counterbalanced by fees received for services rendered and the value of books and other library materials deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act and transferred to the Library of Congress. The income and cost for 1972 and estimates for 1973 and 1974 are as follows:

The program and performance under each of the activities described are predicated on an estimated 380,000 copyright registrations during 1974, an estimated 362,000 during 1973, and an actual 344,574 during 1972.

1. Receiving and accounting for applications, fees, and correspondence.—Materials received by the Copyright Office are assembled and routed; accounts are maintained for all moneys received; records relating to the registration of copyrights are filed; and materials are deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act. Performance data for 1972 and estimated for 1973 and 1974 are as follows:

Registrations.....	344,574	362,000	380,000
Mail received and dispatched.....	856,579	959,000	1,100,000

2. Examining copyright applications.—All applications and deposits are examined before issuance of registration certificates or recordings of documents to determine whether the provisions of the Copyright Act have been satisfied. Performance data are as follows:

	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Cases and documents examined.....	391,532	411,100	431,600
Registrations and recordation of documents.....	381,636	400,700	420,700
Letters written.....	62,919	70,400	78,900

3. Indexing and cataloging materials received.—The Register of Copyrights is required to print complete and indexed catalogs of all items registered. The catalog entries prepared by the Copyright Office are made available in part to the Library for its general operations. There were 344,574 registrations cataloged in 1972 and estimated for 1973 and 1974 are 362,000 and 380,000, respectively.

4. Reference services.—The Copyright Office makes available to the public, information concerning the provisions of the Copyright Act, including procedures, policies, and rulings; information concerning registrations is furnished on a fee basis. Obtaining compliance with registration requirements is also part of this activity. Performance data are as follows:

	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Titles searched.....	138,994	145,000	152,000
Letters and search reports written.....	41,311	50,000	60,000

5. Printing the catalog of copyright entries and bulletins of decisions.—Catalogs for each class of copyright entries and bulletins of copyright decisions are printed and made available to the public.

6. Microfilming of copyright records.—This is the 6th year of a 10-year project to make a preservation microfilm copy of the important copyright records of the Office.

7. General supervision and legal services.—The work of the Copyright Office includes legal supervision and research into the present copyright law and international copyright relations. It also involves a study of improvement of the domestic law and our international copyright relations.

1. Policy analysis and research.—The Congressional Research Service provides research, information, and consultative services to Members and committees of Congress, assisting them in the analysis, appraisal, and evaluation of legislative issues and proposals, and of recommendations submitted to the Congress by the President or executive branch agencies. This support comes in the form of research reports, in-depth policy analyses, consultations, briefings, legal research, assistance with committee hearings, background studies, and related data and materials. Lists of subjects and policy areas which might profitably be pursued are periodically made available to each congressional committee. These services are directed toward assisting Members and committees in determining the advisability of enacting legislative proposals, in estimating the probable results of such proposals and of alternatives to them, and in evaluating methods for accomplishing the results sought.

2. Documentation and status of legislation.—The Service prepares and publishes on a periodic basis for distribution to Members and committees the Digest of Public General Bills, which includes summaries of all public bills and resolutions introduced in the Congress, the changes made therein during the legislative process, the status of bills receiving action, and various pertinent indexes. The Service also prepares and distributes weekly reports on the status of selected major legislation. Upon request from Members and committees, the Service provides legislative history memoranda with respect to measures on which hearings have been announced, and it compiles and makes available to each committee reports on legislatively authorized programs and activities which are within that committee's jurisdiction and which are scheduled to terminate during the current Congress.

3. Information and reference services.—The Congressional Research Service assists Members in the performance of their representative duties. Reference files, containing clippings, pamphlets, and documents, are maintained for rapid informational use. Staff researchers and Members are alerted to current articles and publications in their fields of interest by computer produced citations. Lists of multilithed reports prepared by CRS staff for use of congressional offices providing information on legislative issues are circulated, and reader services are provided by the Congressional Reading Room.

The Card Division sells copies of the Library's printed catalog cards, cataloging data in machine-readable form, book catalogs, and technical publications. It maintains a stock of over 160 million catalog cards representing approximately 650,000 titles which are frequently ordered. From this stock are supplied 90% of the cards which are sold. A master file containing a single, reproducible copy of each of the cards representing the approximately 6 million titles which the Library has cataloged since 1898 is also maintained. Requests for cards for any of the 5,350,000 less frequently ordered titles are satisfied by duplicating (through offset, photographic, or electrostatic means) the copy of the card kept in the master file. The Card Division carries on its books accounts for 34,496 subscribers, about 25,000 of which are active accounts in any given year. In 1972, 75% of this appropriation was recovered in the form of receipts from card and publications sales. Receipts of $7,188,821 were deposited in miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury in 1972. The objectives for 1974 are: meeting the continuing demand for catalog cards and maintaining a reasonable level of service and economy; the continued development of the "National Union Catalog" as the country's major bibliographic and locational tool; the development of other technical publications; and the use of new technology to improve service, to increase efficiency, and to reduce costs.

1. Supplying cards for the Library of Congress.—The number of cards supplied to the Library of Congress in 1972 was 47,856,877; estimated for 1973, 50 million, and estimated for 1974, 55 million.

2. Supplying cards for other libraries.—The number of cards sold in 1972 was 72,002,908; sales for 1973 and 1974 are estimated at about the same, or a slightly lower, level.

3. Preparation, printing, and distribution of publications related to cataloging.—These publications are an integral part of the cataloging activities of the Library of Congress and include the "Classification Schedules," lists of "Subject Headings," "Cataloging Service" bulletins, and similar publications.

4. Preparation, printing, and distribution of the "National Union Catalog."—This catalog (a cumulative author list) is issued monthly and cumulated quarterly and annually. Subscribers also receive issues of "Motion Pictures and Filmstrips" (quarterlies with annual cumulation), "Music and Phonorecords" (semiannual with annual cumulation), the "Register of Additional Locations," and the "National Register of Microform Masters." There were 2,441 paid subscriptions for all issues in calendar year 1971, and it is estimated that there will be 2,450 subscriptions for 1972 and about the same number for 1973.

5. Preparation, printing, and distribution of the "Subject Catalog."—This catalog is issued in three quarterly volumes with an annual cumulation. There were 967 paid subscriptions for calendar year 1971. It is estimated that there will be 1,000 paid subscriptions in 1972 and 1973.

6. Preparation, printing, and distribution of "New Serial Titles."—This catalog is a current and cumulative union list of serials that began publication January 1, 1950, or later. It continues, on a larger scale, the third edition of the "Union List of Serials" and is published in 13 issues per year—eight monthly, four quarterly, and an annual cumulation. There were 1,972 paid subscriptions for calendar year 1971, and it is estimated that there will be 2,000 paid subscriptions for the calendar years 1972 and 1973.

This appropriation is used to acquire library materials, both current and noncurrent, in all subject fields except those in the field of law, clinical medicine, or technical agriculture. Materials acquired by purchase constitute an exceedingly important part of the Library's acquisitions although they generally represent only a limited portion of the total number of pieces received annually. The objects for 1974 are: to continue procurement of important research materials to insure the continuous and comprehensive development of the Library's collections thereby maintaining their national preeminence; to continue the purchase of important foreign commercial books, newspapers, and periodicals; to continue the extensive procurement of essential research materials from areas critical to the U.S. foreign relations, particularly from Eastern Europe, Africa, Asia, and Latin America; to continue to strengthen the Library's current acquisitions in the rapidly expanding fields of science and technology; and to acquire highly selected, important, non-current materials needed to provide better service to Congress and to increase the usefulness to current research of the subject collections.

This appropriation constitutes the only means of acquiring law books published in the regular domestic trade (except for copyright deposits) and many foreign law books published in countries all over the world. The legal publications acquired by purchase constitute the most important part of the Law Library's acquisitions, although a substantial part of the annual receipts is received by means other than purchase. The special objectives for 1974 are: to continue the procurement of certain current domestic and foreign legal materials where upkeep service and expeditious receipt are necessary and receipt through exchange and gift is irregular; to improve the coverage of important Hispanic, African, Middle Eastern, and Far Eastern sources; to continue the procurement of both current and noncurrent materials needed to strengthen the Law Library's already comprehensive holdings of critical areas in Eastern Europe, Asia, and Africa; and to continue the acquisition of microforms and photo-duplicates of important research items, especially those from critical areas, which are no longer obtainable in the original.

The Division for the Blind and Physically Handicapped is responsible for administering a national program to provide reading material for the blind and physically handicapped of the United States and its outlying areas. It has two closely related operations.

1. Procurement and distribution.—It procures books in embossed characters, talking books with their associated reproducers, and catalogs and publications of material available. The books are distributed through 51 regional libraries which assume responsibility for their custody and circulation. The reproducers are distributed through 74 State agencies and libraries. The maintenance and procurement of these books are shown in the following table:

Description	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Sound recordings and players (disc and cassette):
(a) Books (titles)	860	825	825
(b) Magazines	24	26	27
(c) Phonograph and cassette players purchased	45,000	40,000	50,000
(d) Players repaired	39,000	30,000	30,000
Embossed materials:
(a) Press braille books (titles)	279	300	300
(b) Magazines	21	23	23
Music (press braille books and scores)	1,530	2,000	2,000

Objectives for 1974 are: (1) sustained procurement of books and magazines in braille and sound recording media, (2) procurement of a sufficient number of machines to equip newly registered blind and physically handicapped readers and to replace some of the obsolete machines, and (3) improvement of information resources for readers and librarians throughout the country about available material.

2. Reader Service.—During the past 5-year period, 1968-72, the number of blind and physically handicapped readers throughout the country has grown from over 142,000 to about 322,000 and circulation from approximately 5,300,000 units (volumes, containers, and reels) to about 9,110,000. As a result of the expanded program, the number of readers and circulation are expected to continue to increase in 1973 and 1974. Inquiries are received concerning library and related services available to the blind and to other physically handicapped persons. Individuals throughout the Nation who are interested in transcribing or proofreading braille are trained and those qualified are certified. During 1972 over 570 individuals were certified, and it is anticipated that this level will continue during 1973 and 1974. In addition, books are tape recorded by volunteers throughout the country. The division provides guidance and direction to the cooperating libraries throughout the country. The division maintains the national collections of braille and recorded books to supplement titles deposited in libraries across the country.

This schedule covers: (1) funds received as gifts for immediate expenditure and receipts from the sale of recordings and photoduplication materials financed from capital originally received as gifts, (2) income from investments held by the Library of Congress Trust Fund Board, and (3) interest at the rate of 4% per annum paid by the Treasury on the principal funds deposited therewith as described under "Library of Congress Trust Fund, Principal Accounts." (2 U.S.C. 156-160; 31 U.S.C. 725s; 37 Stat. 319.)

1. Acquisition of library materials.—During 1972, this included the procurement of manuscripts, Hispanic materials, fine prints, rare books, and other library materials from certain foreign areas for the Library of Congress, and the acquisition and distribution of Government documents for the Library of Congress and cooperating libraries.

2. Reader and reference services.—These services during 1972 included the preparation of bibliographies, indexes, digests, and checklists; lectures; surveys of bibliographic services; poetry readings; musical concerts; furtherance of musical research, composition, performance, and appreciation; and providing photostats, photographs, microfilm, and other forms of photoduplication, and sound recordings of folksongs and poetry to other Government agencies, libraries and other institutions, and to the general public; and distribution of recordings of the Library's literary programs and concerts to radio stations for public service broadcasts.

3. Organization of the collections.—In February 1967, the Library of Congress began the largest single bibliographical project in its history, the publication of the pre-1956 "National Union Catalog." It is expected that the project will be completed in 10 years, and that the published catalog will comprise 600 volumes. Over 240 volumes have been published. The preparation of the 18th full edition and the 10th abridged edition of the "Dewey Decimal Classification," begun during fiscal year 1966, was completed and both editions published in 1972 and work on the 19th edition is now underway.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

Appropriations in this Act available to the Library of Congress for salaries shall be available for expenses of investigating the loyalty of Library employees; special and temporary services (including employees engaged by day or hour or in piecework); and services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109.

Not to exceed fifteen positions in the Library of Congress may be exempt from the provisions of appropriation Acts concerning the employment of aliens during the current fiscal year, but the Librarian shall not make any appointment to any such position until he has ascertained that he cannot secure for such appointments a person in any of the categories specified in such provisions who possesses the special qualifications for the particular position and also otherwise meets the general requirements for employment in the Library of Congress.

Funds available to the Library of Congress may be expended to reimburse the Department of State for medical services rendered to employees of the Library of Congress stationed abroad and for contracting on behalf of and hiring alien employees for the Library of Congress under compensation plans comparable to those authorized by section 444 of the Foreign Service Act of 1946, as amended (22 U.S.C. 889(a)); for purchase or hire of passenger motor vehicles; for payment of travel, storage and transportation of household goods, and transportation and per diem expenses for families en route (not to exceed twenty-four); for benefits comparable to those payable under sections 911(9), 911(11), and 941 of the Foreign Service Act of 1946, as amended (22 U.S.C. 1136(9), 1136(11), and 1156, respectively); and travel benefits comparable with those which are now or hereafter may be granted single employees of the Agency for International Development, including single Foreign Service personnel assigned to A.I.D. projects, by the Administrator of the Agency for International Development—or his designee—under the authority of section 636(b) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (Public Law 87-195, 22 U.S.C. 2396(b)); subject to such rules and regulations as may be issued by the Librarian of Congress.

Payments in advance for subscriptions or other charges for bibliographical data, publications, materials in any other form, and services may be made by the Librarian of Congress whenever he determines it to be more prompt, efficient, or economical to do so in the interest of carrying out required Library programs.

Appropriations in this Act available to the Library of Congress shall be available, in an amount not to exceed [$50,000] $60,000, when specifically authorized by the Librarian, for expenses of attendance at meetings concerned with the function or activity for which the appropriation is made. (Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1973.)

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Undelivered orders, 1971, $255 thousand; 1972, $290 thousand; 1973, $340 thousand; 1974, $390 thousand.

The programs of the Office of the Superintendent of Documents are of a service nature. There is no control over the volume of work, which is required by law.

1. Sales distribution.—Selected Government publications are purchased from the Public Printer to be placed on sale to the public. The acquisition costs for these publications are paid from sales receipts. Consequently, no appropriation is required for printing sales copies. The sales price is the cost plus 50%, as required by law. At the end of each year, net profits from the sales program are turned in to the Treasury Department as miscellaneous receipts. For 1972, $8,240 thousand was returned under this program. It is estimated that $11,193 thousand will be returned in 1973 and an additional $9,501 thousand in 1974. Because of the significant increase in postage costs and because it is not feasible to increase prices of publications now in inventory, these returns do not cover the appropriation required to finance the sales program. But by fiscal year 1975, it is expected that the traditional balance between sales revenue and sales program costs will be restored.

The sale of Government publications has been steadily increasing, and in the past 10 years the sales volume has increased 112%. The current public interest in the Government's publishing program clearly indicates a continuing increase in the volume of sales.

2. Distribution for other agencies and Members of Congress.—The Superintendent of Documents maintains mailing lists, including the list for the Congressional Record, and performs mailing operations upon request of any Government agency. Mailing services are also provided for farmers' bulletins, soil surveys, and other publications which are allocated to Members of Congress on a quota basis.

3. Depository library distribution.—Upon request, one copy of every Government publication is supplied to libraries which are designated as depositories for Government publications. The number of depository libraries has increased 82% since 1962.

4. Cataloging and indexing.—This activity covers the preparation and distribution of catalogs and indexes of all publications issued by the Federal Government, the principal series being the Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications and the Numerical List and Schedule of Volumes.

The Government Printing Office executes orders for printing, binding, and blankbook work, placed by Congress and the various agencies of the Federal Government, and furnishes on order, blank paper, inks, and similar supplies. Operations are subject to the authority of the Joint Committee on Printing (44 U.S.C. 309).

All printing and binding work for the Congress and Federal agencies is done and financed through the Government Printing Office revolving fund. The fund is reimbursed by the customer agencies and net operating income is retained for reuse by the fund.

The U.S. Court of Claims has jurisdiction over all cases involving claims against the United States (except in pension suits) instituted upon constitutional grounds or under Federal law or regulations, all claims arising out of any contract with the Federal Government and its agencies, and claims for the refund of taxes. It also has general jurisdiction to hear and determine claims for damages other than tort actions, provided the claimants would have the right to sue in law or equity if the United States were not immune to such suits. It has jurisdiction in suits against the United States by contractors dissatisfied with the findings and decisions of contracting agencies under terminated war contracts and jurisdiction concurrent with that of the courts of appeals to review district court decisions in cases involving tort actions. It has exclusive jurisdiction to review the decisions of the Indian Claims Commission on appeal from the Commission. It also has jurisdiction in special act cases referred to the Court by the Congress, and the commissioners of the court have jurisdiction to render reports to the Congress on claims set forth in bills referred to the chief commissioner by either house of Congress.

The Office of Emergency Preparedness advises and assists the President with respect to nonmilitary emergency preparedness activities. This includes coordinating emergency preparedness programs of Federal departments and agencies and providing staff support and policy guidance for emergency resource management planning functions. The President has delegated to the Office of Emergency Preparedness responsibility for administering the Disaster relief fund and related natural disaster activities. Specific programs include:

1. Emergency readiness.—OEP develops policies, plans, and programs to provide for continuity of civil government at the Federal, State, and local levels. The principal objectives are to preserve duly constituted authority and leadership and to enable civil government to respond to, and operate in, a national emergency. OEP undertakes planning related to mobilization and management of critical resources for use during a national emergency, and develops plans to permit all levels of government to undertake economic stabilization activities during an emergency situation.

2. Critical materials policy planning.—OEP provides guidance to other Federal departments and agencies on the development of programs to administer national policy for certain critical material items. The Director of OEP is responsible for determining whether imports threaten to impair the national security; and for policy direction, coordination and surveillance of the oil import program.

3. Analytic and computational support.—The program activities described in paragraphs 1 and 2 above require extensive analytical and computational support. This support is provided by the activities in this program.

4. Executive direction, staff, and administrative support.—Executive direction and staff and administrative support for the Office of Emergency Preparedness is provided under this activity. Funds are included to finance the salaries of the Presidential appointees and their immediate staffs. Also contained in this activity are funds for the house-keeping expenses of the Office of Emergency Preparedness in Washington, general administrative functions, congressional liaison activities, public information support, and health and legal advisory personnel.

The Appalachian regional development program assists the Appalachian region to meet its problems, promote its economic development, and to establish a framework of joint Federal and State efforts to provide the basic facilities essential to economic growth in Appalachia.

Program investments made in the Appalachian region are concentrated in areas where there is significant potential for future growth and where the expected return on public dollars invested will be the greatest.

The States, acting through the Appalachian Regional Commission, are responsible for recommending local and State projects within their borders for assistance under this program.

1. Appalachian Development Highway System.—Section 201 of the Appalachian Regional Development Act authorizes construction of an Appalachian Development Highway System including local access roads. This System is designed to improve the accessibility of Appalachia; to reduce highway transportation costs to and within Appalachia; to provide the highway transportation facilities necessary to accelerate the overall development of Appalachia. The program is funded through contract authority available in the fiscal year preceding the year of authority. The budget for 1974 provides $155 million to fully liquidate obligations through that period. Contract authority available in 1974 will be allotted for later obligation of up to $160 million, limited primarily to high-priority development highway projects.

The status of the System of roads including mileage prefunded by the State follows:

Development system miles (cumulative):	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate

2. Demonstration health projects.—Grants are made for the construction, equipping, and operation of multicounty demonstration health facilities including hospitals, regional health diagnostic or treatment centers, and other facilities. In addition, grant support is provided for primary care and child development programs throughout the region. The 1974 program will provide continuation costs for health and child development demonstrations underway.

3. Mine area restoration.—Section 205 of the act authorizes a program for the sealing and filling of voids in abandoned coal mines, the planning and execution of projects for the extinguishment and control of underground and outcrop mine fires, and the reclamation and rehabilitation of strip and surface mine areas, including waste banks, on public land in those areas where the potential for economic growth exists in Appalachia. States or local sponsors must bear 25% of project cost. Approved projects on a cumulative basis are:

The 1974 program will be directed to surface restoration projects primarily in the Agnes disaster area.

4. Vocational education facilities.—Grants are made to States and local districts within the Appalachian region for the construction and equipment of vocational education facilities in Appalachia, and in limited cases for operation and demonstrations in Appalachia. Vocational education facilities are key elements for the training and upgrading of potential and existing labor force entrants in skills required in commercial and other vocations. Grants are administered through the Office of Education. Vocational education projects approved, including those aided by supplementary grants, are as follows:

[Dollars in thousands]

Construction and equipment.....	385	430	470

Supplemental grants—section 214 (funds obligated).....	$13,350	$12,654	$12,000

5. Supplements to Federal grant-in-aid programs.—This program provides supplemental grants to enable areas to take advantage of other Federal programs. Direct grants, plus supplemental grants, cannot exceed 80 percent of the project cost. The amount of supplemental grants depends upon the relative need of the area and nature of the project.

The estimates provide for approved projects as follows: 1972, 324 projects, $47,051; 1973, 220 projects, $43,538; 1974, 170 projects, $34,000. Supplemental assistance has been provided from inception through 1972 to the following types of projects:

Total.....	1,480	251.3

The 1974 decrease reflects lesser supplementary requirements as basic Federal construction grant programs are lowered by the Government-wide effort to reduce non-essential expenditures.

6. Research and local development district program.—Appalachian planning assistance is provided through grants to multicounty local development districts and for research and demonstration projects. Grants are made for up to 75% of the administrative expenses of local development districts. Other planning and technical assistance is provided for (a) programs which improve the base for economic growth, (b) programs which will attract industrial development within the region, (c) programs which improve the health, education, and skills of people, and (d) projects which conserve, maintain, or improve natural resources.

This program provides for several ways of assisting the region in obtaining a larger share of housing for low- or moderate-income families. The Commission is authorized to make technical assistance grants for the organization of State housing corporations and local nonprofit groups to encourage such housing construction.

This program also provided authority to make loans for up to 80% of the preliminary cost of planning housing projects and obtaining federally insured mortgages. Eligible loan costs include preliminary site engineering and architectural fees, site options, and construction loan fees and discounts.

Under the 1971 amendments to the act, grants may be made for site development costs and offsite improvements such as sewer and water line extensions where necessary for economic feasibility of the housing project. Grants for such purposes may not exceed 10% of the project cost.

Funds are transferred from the "Appalachian regional development" appropriations to this revolving fund for the following workload:

Selective Service System, Salaries and expenses, $2,000 thousand.

The activities of the Cost of Living Council, the Pay Board, the Price Commission, and other related activities of the economic stabilization program are included under this heading.

1. Cost of Living Council.—The Council has the responsibility for establishing broad stabilization goals, providing overall coordination and administrative guidance of the economic stabilization program, setting program direction to assure achievement of the objectives, and directing the program's compliance activities.

2. Pay Board.—The Board formulates standards for wage adjustments to achieve the goals and objectives of the program. The specific objective of the Pay Board is to limit pay adjustments to an annual aggregate increase of 5.5%. The 5.5% general wage and salary standard is based on an expected 3% rise in productivity, plus an allowance of 2.5% for normal cost-of-living increases. The Board is empowered to analyze and review the economic provisions of a contract to see that they are consistent with wage guidelines. The Board has the power to deal with disputes over wages and can, where appropriate, request assistance from the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

3. Price Commission.—The Commission is charged with the development of explicit rules governing price adjustments. The specific goal of the Price Commission is to limit the average price increase of controlled items to an annual rate of 2.5%. It will also identify windfall profits and bring about price reductions where the operation of the stabilization program results in such profits. Like the Pay Board, the Price Commission has the authority to recommend that sanctions be invoked if voluntary adherence to the guidelines and standards issued by the Commission cannot be obtained.

4. Rent Advisory Board.—The Board provides advice concerning special considerations involved in the stabilization of rents. It also assists the Price Commission in the performance of its functions by making technical analyses of specific matters referred to it by the Commission.

Program extension.—Legislation is being proposed to extend the life of this program beyond April 30, 1973, when the Economic Stabilization Act Amendments of 1971 (Public Law 92-210) expire. An estimate of funds required under such new legislation is included in the legislative program section of this chapter.

Under the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, designated agencies are authorized with Presidential approval to incur obligations and make expenditures to expand production of critical materials for programs certified as essential to the national defense by the Office of Emergency Preparedness. The program is conducted primarily through a revolving fund financed by borrowing from the Treasury. The amount borrowed may not exceed $2.1 billion outstanding at any one time.

Allocations of borrowing authority by the Office of Emergency Preparedness and net borrowing from the U.S. Treasury as of June 30, 1972, were as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Authorized agency	Borrowing authority allocated	Borrowings outstanding	Net available for borrowing
General Services Administration ¹	1,932,193	1,877,500	54,693
Department of Agriculture	119,827	94,062	25,765
Department of Interior	47,800	38,800	9,000
Office of Emergency Preparedness (reserve)	180		180
Total	2,100,000	2,010,362	89,638

¹ In addition, an appropriation of $108 million was applied to General Services Administration activities, thus providing financing of $2.040 million to that agency.

Financial condition of the fund.—Losses under these programs are reflected as $1,643 million as of June 30, 1972, with inventory of metals and minerals carried at acquisition cost of approximately $656 million. Using inventory market price of $366 million, the deficit would amount to about $1,933 million. Interest expense on borrowing from Treasury amounts to approximately $125 million for 1973 and for 1974.

Legislation will be submitted to change the present financing method and substitute new arrangements as required. Passage of this legislation will amend title III of the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, to prohibit the financing of any new contracts for expansion of resources under the provisions of section 304; to terminate interest payments on notes issued pursuant to that section; to provide for the orderly retirement of those notes; and to provide for the ultimate cancellation of any remaining borrowing authority under section 304.

The budget schedules to reflect the proposed legislation are shown on page 108.

Under this program, grants of defense articles and services are made to assist other countries in improving their defensive capabilities. As the security of the free world is strengthened and other nations are increasingly able to rely on their own resources, particularly manpower, the need for U.S. forces abroad should decline and the likelihood of having to commit U.S. ground combat forces in the future should decrease.

The major portion of the military items furnished under this program is produced in the United States. Orders are placed through the U.S. military services, which are reimbursed from this account when the items are delivered. Materiel already on hand, but excess to the needs of U.S. forces, is supplied to friendly governments at no charge to the military assistance appropriation except for the costs of rehabilitation and transportation.

The administrative costs related to foreign military sales are included in this account.

This appropriation provides funds to finance credit sales of defense articles and services to foreign countries and international organizations. Two types of financing arrangements are used: (1) direct U.S. Government credit, and (2) commercial credit guaranteed by the Government. The U.S. Government also has the authority to sell promissory notes it holds in the commercial markets.

An appropriation of $525 million is requested for 1974 to finance a credit sales program of $760 million. Of the $760 million program, $313 million will be privately financed and $78 million of the appropriation will be set aside as a guarantee reserve for this private credit.

The administrative expenses related to this program are funded from the military assistance appropriation.

This account was created to fund credit sales to Israel authorized by section 501 of the Defense Procurement Act of 1970. Since the Foreign Military Sales Act had not yet been enacted and credits for Israel were urgently required, Congress enacted the separate authorization. Funds for Israel in 1972, 1973, and 1974 are included in the regular foreign military credit sales account.

The administrative expenses related to this program are funded from the military assistance appropriation.

SECURITY SUPPORTING ASSISTANCE

For necessary expenses of security supporting assistance, $732,000,000 to remain available until expended. (Authorizing legislation to be proposed.)

Note.—The appropriation for this account for 1973 had not been enacted at the time this budget was prepared. A temporary continuing resolution is in effect for the period Oct. 15, 1972, to Feb. 28, 1973. The amounts shown below for 1973 are based upon this continuing resolution and do not reflect the President's initial budget request for 1973.

Foreign policy of the United States emphasizes building the capacity of friendly nations to bear the burden of their own defense requirements. The economies of these nations are often initially not able to fully support these burdens from their own resources. Supporting assistance provides commodities, budget support, and technical assistance which assist these governments in maintaining economic and political stability and providing essential services through the transitional period of extraordinary demands. The bulk of supporting assistance funds goes to the friendly governments of Southeast Asia.

As authorized by sections 21 and 22 of the Foreign Military Sales Act of 1968, as amended, this trust fund is used to facilitate cash sales of defense articles and services. The purpose of the trust fund, which is strictly a cash account, is to enable foreign governments to take advantage of savings which result from procurement through U.S. Government channels. In dollar volume, the major portion of this program consists of sales to European and other developed countries of the free world.

Defense articles from Department of Defense stocks are sold for U.S. dollars to eligible countries and international organizations if they agree to pay in advance or, as authorized by the President, within 120 days after delivery.

Defense articles and defense services may also be procured by the Department of Defense for foreign purchasers if the purchasers agree to pay the full amount of the procurement contract, which assures the Government against any loss on the contract. The Department of Defense may accept a dependable undertaking under which the purchaser agrees to pay within 120 days after delivery, in which case Defense appropriations are used to meet contract payments and are subsequently reimbursed with payments received from the purchasers.

The United States along with many other countries provides funds to promote international monetary stability through the International Monetary Fund and to finance development lending and technical assistance through the international development banks.

Each of the banks is an international organization, corporate in form, whose capital stock is owned by its member governments. The banks make ordinary capital loans to member countries with funds generated from members' purchases of paid-in-capital stock and with funds borrowed on world capital markets. The borrowings are backed by members' subscriptions of callable capital, which would be drawn on for cash disbursements only in the unlikely event that funds would be required to meet an institution's obligations. Concessional financing, i.e., loans from special funds, is provided only from the paid-in subscriptions of members made specifically for this purpose.

Ordinary capital loans have long term maturities and near-market interest rates. Special fund loans (including all International Development Association credits) have longer maturities and low, sometimes even nominal, interest rates. In general, they are provided to those developing countries with the lowest incomes and for activities which, while necessary to the country's development, may not always directly produce an income flow.

U.S. commitments to the institutions take several forms. Callable capital is formally subscribed but is not obligated. Contributions to special funds are obligated through letters of credit which are drawn on only when needed for disbursements on bank loans. A portion of some paid-in ordinary capital contributions is made in cash with the remainder under letters of credit to be drawn according to agreed schedules related to the banks' operating requirements.

During the 1972-74 period, the United States, in addition to making payments to the institutions for regular subscription increases, is also committing funds for payments required as a result of the recent official modification of the par value of the dollar. The charters establishing the institutions require that members maintain the value of their contributions in terms of gold. Because the value of the dollar was reduced in terms of gold, the United States has incurred obligations to pay up to $1.6 billion in total for maintenance of value (MOV). Authorizing legislation for these payments was enacted on March 31, 1972, and appropriations were enacted on May 16, 1972 (Public Law 92-301).

The budgetary outlays from the letters of credit issued to cover MOV obligations are anticipated to be no more than $372 million and will be spread over a period of years. The outlays represent MOV payments on U.S. paid-in capital subscriptions to the institutions. Callable capital contributions to the institutions are a contingent liability and the associated MOV obligations of $663 million are not expected to become budgetary outlays. The MOV obligations of $541 million to the International Monetary Fund would also have no budgetary impact.

1. Investment in International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.—This institution, often called the World Bank, was initiated by the Bretton Woods Conference of 1944, and currently has 122 country members. Total authorized capital stock as of June 30, 1972, was $27 billion, of which $24.5 billion had been subscribed. Cumulative loan commitments totaled $18.05 billion.

The Bretton Woods Agreements Act of July 31, 1945, authorized the United States to accept membership in the Bank. The U.S. subscription is $6.47 billion, of which the paid-in portion is $647.3 million. Program costs in 1973 are made up of the $12.3 million paid-in portion of an increase in the U.S. subscription to the Bank's capital plus funds required for maintenance of value.

2. Investment in International Development Association.—The International Development Association is affiliated with the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and has substantially the same worldwide membership.

Pursuant to authorization in Public Law 86-565 (74 Stat. 293), enacted June 30, 1960, the United States joined the Association in August 1960. The U.S. share of the $2.7 billion in contributions provided by the 19 developed member countries of the Association prior to the current capital replenishment was $1.1 billion.

An appropriation of $320 million is being sought for 1974 for the second installment of a U.S. contribution of $960 million to the third replenishment of the Association's resources. This replenishment calls for a total of $2.4 billion to be provided by the Association's developed member countries in annual installments over a 3-year period. Legislation authorizing the U.S. contribution was signed into law on March 10, 1972. The first installment of $320 million has been paid under the provisions of a continuing resolution passed by the Congress in October 1972. The third installment of $320 million will be sought in 1975. For each installment, additional letters of credit of $27 million will be provided for maintenance of value.

3. Investment in Inter-American Development Bank. The Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) promotes economic development in Latin American and Caribbean countries through loans and technical assistance. Twenty-four Western Hemisphere republics, including the United States and Canada, are members of the Bank. Pursuant to Public Law 86-147 (73 Stat. 229), the United States joined the Bank in December 1959, and it began operations in October 1960.

Ordinary capital.—As of June 30, 1972, the total subscribed capital of the IDB was $4,027.8 million, of which $674.3 million was paid in. The U.S. share was $1,610.3 million, including $250 million paid in. The full amount requested in 1973 for the final payment of an ordinary capital increase was not included by the Congress in the provisions of the continuing resolution for the period October 15, 1972 to February 28, 1973 (Public Law 92-571).

The difference of $193.4 million between the amount requested for 1973 and the amount available under the continuing resolution, is proposed for appropriation in 1974. If funds ultimately appropriated in 1973 for ordinary capital are greater than the amount in the continuing resolution, the 1974 budget request for $693.4 million will be amended downward by an equivalent amount.

Fund for special operations.—Contributions to the Fund prior to the current replenishment totaled $2,388 million and the United States contributed 75.4%, or $1,800 million. On December 20, 1972, the United States formally agreed to participate in a $1.5 billion replenishment of FSO resources and made $275 million available to the Bank at that time. This action was taken under applicable authorizing legislation and under authority of the continuing resolution (Public Law 92-571) as well as an appropriation enacted in May 1971 (Public Law 92-18). An appropriation of $500 million is being requested in 1974.

4. Investment in Asian Development Bank.—The Asian Development Bank was established in 1966 to foster economic growth in Asia by making loans to the developing member countries of the region. At present it has 37 member countries—23 regional countries of whom three are classified as developed (Japan, Australia, and New Zealand) and 14 nonregional countries including the United States, Canada and 12 European countries.

Ordinary capital.—On November 23, 1972, an increase in the Bank's authorized capital came into effect when the required number of stockholders took up their shares of the capital increase. This action raised the Bank's total authorized capital stock from $1.1 billion to $2.7 billion.

Because the United States had not yet taken up its share of the subscription increase, the action reduced our proportionate share (currently $200 million) of total subscribed capital from 19.9% to 9.9%. An appropriation will be sought in 1974 under proposed authorizing legislation for a U.S. subscription to the capital increase in order to maintain the equity position of the United States in the Bank. As of December 31, 1972, cumulative ordinary capital commitments by the Bank amounted to $767 million.

Special funds.—As of December 31, 1972, contributions to the Asian Development Bank's special funds resources amounted to $226 million, including transfers from ordinary capital. Total loan commitments as of the same date from these funds amounted to $202 million. The United States has not yet made a contribution to the special funds of the Asian Development Bank, although legislation authorizing a $100 million U.S. contribution was passed by the Congress in February 1972 (Public Law 92-245).

The continuing resolution, Public Law 92-571, does not include the $100 million appropriation requested in 1973 to make this contribution. Therefore, $100 million is proposed for 1974 for this purpose. Should funds ultimately be appropriated in 1973 for a special fund contribution, the 1974 request will be amended downward by an equal amount.

The current dollar value of the U.S. quota in the International Monetary Fund is $7,274 million, as a result of an increase of $574 million for maintenance of value arising from the recent modification of the value of the dollar in terms of gold. Pursuant to the Fund's charter, this modification required U.S. maintenance of value payments to the IMF totaling $541 million. Of this amount, $431 million represented U.S. obligations to maintain the value of its currency subscription to the IMF, which was three-fourths of the dollar value of the U.S. quota of $6,700 million at the time of devaluation. A $143 million increase in the dollar value of the remaining portion of the U.S. quota, representing our subscription in gold to the IMF, occurred automatically. In addition, payments of $110 million were required to cover U.S. maintenance of value obligations on outstanding drawings from the Fund of $1,284 million. As monetary transactions, the increase on the current dollar value of the U.S. quota, and other transactions with the IMF, represent exchanges of assets and do not result in budgetary expenditures.

Public Law 87-490, approved June 19, 1962, authorized an appropriation to remain available until expended, of $2 billion for U.S. participation in a 10-nation, $6 billion arrangement providing, under specified conditions, for loans by the participants to the International Monetary Fund when needed to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary system. The appropriation for these arrangements, known as the General Arrangements to Borrow (GAB), was obtained on October 24, 1962.

The GAB has been drawn on by the Fund on six occasions in the total amount of $2,155 million. The United States has not yet participated in the loans extended under the GAB because the Fund's holdings of dollars have been adequate.

The Executive Directors of the International Monetary Fund renewed the GAB on October 17, 1969, for a period of 5 years, beginning October 24, 1970. The U.S. commitment to lend up to $2 billion to the Fund under the GAB will continue during the renewal period.

For international organizations and programs, including loans and grants for the Indus Basin Development Fund, as authorized by section 302(b) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, $152,000,000, to remain available until expended. (Authorizing legislation to be proposed.)

Note.—The appropriation for this account for 1973 had not been enacted at the time this budget was prepared. A temporary continuing resolution is in effect for the period Oct. 15, 1972, to Feb. 28, 1973. The amounts shown below for 1973 are based upon this continuing resolution and do not reflect the President's initial budget request for 1973.

Voluntary contributions are provided for international organizations and programs of special interest to the United States. The bulk of the request for United Nations technical assistance and other programs is for the United Nations Development Program which finances most technical assistance and capital project feasibility studies undertaken within the United Nations system. Other major contributions are provided for the United Nations Children's Fund and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees.

A new contribution is provided for the United Nations Environment Fund, which was proposed by the President to coordinate and support international environmental programs.

Grants and loans are made by a consortium of donors to the Indus Basin development fund associated with the World Bank. This fund finances a construction program to facilitate an equitable division of the waters of the Indus Basin between India and Pakistan and to help provide arable land for over 50 million people.

The Alliance for Progress was established in 1961 as a cooperative effort of the United States and Latin American countries to promote the economic and social development of Latin America. The United States is helping in these efforts by providing economic and technical aid. The Latin American countries, in addition to providing a steadily increasing share of their own resources to development, are carrying out substantial reform programs. The United States assists development activities, particularly in agriculture, education, health, and economic integration. In order to stimulate economic activity in the region, Alliance loan dollars, previously restricted to U.S. procurement, have been made eligible for procurement of goods and services throughout Latin America. Total Alliance for Progress appropriations of $240,100,000 million are proposed for 1974. Of this amount $150,000,000 million is proposed for development loans to support private industry, agriculture, education, and regional integration.

Development loans are made to friendly developing countries in order to promote their economic development. These loans are repayable in U.S. dollars at an interest rate of not less than 3% per annum. Loan repayments are to begin not later than 10 years following the date on which the funds are lent. During the initial 10-year period the rates of interest are not to be lower than 2% per annum. Budget authority of $201.4 million is proposed for 1974.

These loans are used to finance the importation of normally scarce capital, equipment or agricultural inputs such as seeds and fertilizer. Before a loan is made, the Agency for International Development must take into account (1) whether financing could be obtained in whole or in part from other free world sources on reasonable terms including private sources within the United States, (2) the economic and technical soundness of the activity to be financed, including the capacity of the recipient country to repay the loan, (3) whether the activity gives reasonable promise of contributing to the development of economic resources or to the increase of productive capacities, (4) the consistency of the activity with, and its relationship to, other development activities being undertaken or planned, and its contribution to realistic long-range objectives, (5) the extent to which the recipient country is demonstrating its determination to take effective self-help measures, and (6) possible effects upon the economy of the United States. Additional loan criteria and standards are established by an interagency development loan committee chaired by the Administrator of the Agency for International Development.

The Development loan fund was established as a corporation by the Mutual Security Act of 1958 to extend loans, credits, and guaranties to American or foreign individuals, businesses, financial institutions, or foreign governments in order to provide capital for projects and programs contributing to the economic growth of friendly developing countries.

Under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, the Development Loan Fund Corporation was abolished and its functions were transferred, effective November 3, 1961, to the Agency for International Development. Subsequent to that date, the fund has remained open for the purpose of liquidating outstanding obligations. As of June 30, 1972, the undisbursed loan agreements amounted to $7 million. It is estimated that this balance will decrease to $0.8 million in 1973 and be fully disbursed in 1974.

Loan repayments and interest earned totaled $126.8 million in 1972 and are expected to total $128.6 million in 1973 and $123.2 million in 1974.

The Housing guaranty fund includes the Latin American housing guaranty program and Worldwide housing guaranty program.

The purpose of the Latin American housing guaranty program is to assist in the development in the American Republics of self-liquidating housing projects, the development of institutions engaged in Alliance for Progress programs, including cooperatives, free labor unions, savings and loan-type institutions, and other private enterprise programs in Latin America engaged directly or indirectly in the financing of home mortgages, the construction of homes for lower income persons and families, the increased mobilization of savings, and the improvement of housing conditions in Latin America.

The purpose of the Worldwide housing guaranty program is to facilitate and increase the participation of private enterprise in furthering the development of the economic resources and productive capacities of less developed friendly countries and areas, and to promote the development of thrift and credit institutions engaged in programs of mobilizing local savings for financing the construction of self-liquidating housing projects and related community facilities.

The Foreign Assistance Act of 1969 continued available the $550 million issuing authority for the Latin American housing guaranty program. The total face amount of guaranties that may be outstanding at any one time under the Worldwide housing program was limited to $130 million, not including the $30.1 million authorized and issued under predecessor programs. $5 million of the $30.1 million previously authorized by Congress for the Worldwide program cannot be utilized since the prior authority did not permit the guaranty of interest. In 1972 Congress increased Worldwide housing authority by $75 million.

Program projections indicate that the total amount available for authorizations for the guaranty of investments in both the Latin American and Worldwide programs will be authorized or in process during 1973. For 1974 projected increases in statutory authorizations for Latin American and Worldwide housing programs are as follows:

(a) Latin American housing.—An increase of $44.9 million, increasing the present ceiling from $550 million to $594.9 million.

(b) Worldwide housing.—An increase of $275 million, increasing the proposed 1973 and 1974 ceiling of $230.1 million to $505.1 million.

Consistent with the intent of Congress that the housing programs be totally self-supporting, the costs of administration, program evaluation and development, and claims investigations are paid from fee income.

The Overseas Private Investment Corporation was established by the Foreign Assistance Act of 1969 to facilitate and encourage U.S. long-term private investment in the developing countries. The Corporation's major activities include investment insurance and guaranties, loans and investment promotion.

The Corporation's income in 1974 is estimated to be $40.7 million, less deductions of $5.4 million for administrative and preinvestment assistance expenses; $12 million, which would be charged to reserves, has been provided for claims. No provision has been made for extraordinary claims payments that may be required as a result of events in Chile.

An appropriation of $72.5 million in 1974 is requested to increase the insurance reserve to a more adequate level, given the size of the outstanding portfolio and an increase in events leading to insurance claims. While it is the full faith and credit of the U.S. Government and not the ready cash reserves which secures the Corporation's outstanding insurance contracts, an adequate cash reserve is necessary to enable the Corporation to pay off its insurance claims promptly.

As a result of expropriatory actions by the Government of Chile, it may become necessary at a subsequent date to seek additional funds for the Corporation.

The legislation establishing the Corporation authorizes the appropriation of such amounts as may be necessary from time to time to replenish the insurance reserve or to discharge the Corporation's liabilities.

Section 608 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 created a revolving fund to provide for more effective use of U.S. Government-owned excess personal property in foreign assistance programs by authorizing such property to be acquired and rehabilitated in advance of specifically known requirements for country programs.

Many types of excess property such as tractors, construction roadbuilding equipment, machinery, and machine tools, the general needs for which can be anticipated with a reasonable degree of certainty, are included.

¹ Includes $20 million multiple-year funds appropriated in 1972 for emergency food and medical services.

1. Research, development, and evaluation.—Projects supported under research and development provide the basis for planning national programs to alleviate poverty and promote equality of opportunity. Projects and staff will be transferred to agencies with primary responsibility in the areas of current OEO research efforts. The 1974 request for the National Institute of Education (HEW) includes $23.9 million to continue the educational voucher demonstration and other projects designed to test ways to provide equal educational opportunities. The 1974 request for the Office of Child Development (HEW) includes $12.6 million to continue experiments and studies in alternative approaches to day care and child development. The 1974 request for the Office of the Secretary (HEW) includes $22.7 million to continue policy studies on the causes of poverty and develop ways to overcome environmental health problems which confront disadvantaged persons. Funding is also provided for a health insurance experiment to measure the cost to the Government and consumers of alternative plans and the resultant change in the health status of families. The 1974 request for the Department of Labor includes $5.3 million to continue OEO research in the fields of manpower training and labor force participation. The 1974 request for the Department of Housing and Urban Development includes $13.4 million to continue efforts to test ways to provide adequate housing for disadvantaged persons.

The total request for former OEO research efforts is $78 million, an increase of $11.3 million over the 1973 level.

2. Community action operations.—Community action has had an adequate opportunity to demonstrate its value to local communities. Little justification for continuing separate categorical funding can be identified. Evidence is lacking that community action agencies are moving substantial numbers of people out of poverty on a self-sustaining basis. If the constituencies of individual communities desire to continue providing financial support to local community action agencies, general and special revenue sharing funds could be used.

Consistent with the policy to make community action funding decisions a local option, direct Federal grants to Indian community action agencies will cease. Instead, grants will be made directly to tribal councils who can then elect to continue the community action agencies or to use the funds in other ways that will implement the Administration's policy of self-determination for Indians. In 1974, funding responsibility for this demonstration program in Indian self-determination will be assumed by HEW. The 1974 request for this program is $32.1 million, which is $9.7 million over the 1973 level. The expanded budget will enable tribal councils to determine their own priorities. Illustrative uses of the increased funding include continuation of current programs, increased emphasis on self-determination programming specially aimed at developing capabilities of reservation Indians to take over services now provided by non-Indian controlled organizations, and funding for the food projects previously funded through the emergency food and medical services program. In addition, increased funds are provided for continuation of the urban center demonstration program.

Through 1973, Federal funding for the senior opportunities and services program will continue. Effective July 1, 1973, new funds for this program will become a local option. For special programs for the aging, the HEW request includes about $200 million in 1974. Special emphasis is being placed on services which enhance the lives of older Americans such as home-health aids, home-maker and nutrition services, and transportation assistance. These funds can be used, at the option of State and local governments, to continue support for similar projects currently funded through this program.

In 1974, funds to cover administrative costs associated with the phaseout of all grants funded under section 221 of the Economic Opportunity Act are requested for appropriation to the General Services Administration.

3. Health and nutrition.—A request for $147 million for OEO health programs is included in the HEW appropriations in 1974. Funding for the comprehensive health projects and family planning services will be included in the health services delivery budget. This assures that all federally supported health centers are funded by the same agency and that the Federal funds to finance the direct delivery of health services will be used to benefit the greatest number of recipients.

The OEO drug rehabilitation effort will be assumed by the National Institute of Mental Health in HEW. Essential OEO health manpower activities will be supported within the Bureau of Health Manpower Education in the National Institutes of Health.

4. Community economic development.—The community economic development program is directed toward providing significant economic and community development impact in rural and urban areas having concentrations of low-income persons. These efforts have the same basic objectives as programs funded through the Office of Minority Business Enterprise (OMBE). The 1974 request for OMBE includes $39.3 million to fund grantees currently funded under this activity and related research projects previously funded under the research and development activity. This consolidation of effort will increase the effectiveness of Federal programs designed to bring minority entrepreneurs into the mainstream of economic life. The requested funding will enable a concentration of funding on the more successful community development models to test their ability to accelerate the rate at which impact can be created; and will enable continued research and development.

5. Migrants and seasonal farmworkers.—Under the special migrant program, over 327,000 farmworkers and family members will participate in projects currently administered through 70 grantees in 35 States. Major types of local activities include: Economic upgrading, farmworker housing, high school equivalency programs, and day care. Thirteen new high school equivalency programs will be developed in 1974 to serve school dropouts from poor families drawing their income from seasonal agricultural labor.

This program will be delegated to Department of Labor and $40 million is included in that 1974 request to fund this program and to continue the food programs for migrants previously funded through the emergency food and medical services program.

6. Legal services program.—The 1974 request for this program is for appropriation to HEW for payment to the proposed Legal Services Corporation.

7. General support.—This activity provides supportive administration for the OEO programs described above. Included in the 1974 request for the General Services Administration in $33 million to insure the orderly phase-out of outstanding grants and contracts of discontinued activities.

Legislation is being proposed to extend the economic stabilization program beyond April 30, 1973, when the current Economic Stabilization Act Amendments of 1971 expire. While the details of the extended program will be laid out in the proposed bill, the basic authority of the President to maintain wage and price controls in all important sectors of the economy, including food, would be retained. Experience under the current act demonstrates the program's effectiveness in reducing the rate of inflation in the economy. If it proves possible to terminate the extended program prior to the expiration of proposed legislation, any funds appropriated in excess of those required would revert to the Treasury.

The Service conducts basic and applied research in the fields of livestock, plant sciences, entomology, soil and water conservation, agricultural engineering, utilization and development, nutrition and consumer use, marketing, and on the development of methods to eradicate narcotic-producing plants.

The decrease requested for 1974 reflects the effects of realigning the Agency's research efforts to: (1) Terminate projects reaching completion or of lower priority in relation to the needs of American agriculture; (2) consolidate complementary lines of work into existing centers for research; and (3) transfer scientists into existing research centers to provide a broader nucleus of scientific disciplines to meet current needs for broad-based interdisciplinary research.

The activities financed from this appropriation are described below.

1. Research.—(a) Farm research.—Improved breeding, feeding, and management practices, including management of animal wastes, are developed for farm livestock, poultry, and domestic fur animals. Practical methods are sought for control of diseases, parasites, and insect pests affecting them and to protect them from chemical toxicity and other hazards.

Investigations are conducted to improve varieties of food, feed, fiber, and other plants, and to develop new crops; to improve crop-production practices, including methods to control plant diseases, nematodes, and weeds, and reduce cost of production; and to develop safe chemical, biological, and other methods for control of harmful pests affecting farm production.

Investigations are conducted to improve the management of natural resources, including investigations to improve soil and water management (including salinity and saline soils), irrigation, and conservation practices; to study hydrologic problems of agricultural watersheds; to determine the relation of soil types and water to plant, animal, and human nutrition; and to apply engineering principles to improve efficiency and reduce costs of agricultural production.

The research is aimed at the profitable production of an adequate supply of food, feed, fiber, and other agricultural products of desired quality at minimum costs. Increased attention has been given to studies on protection of plants, animals, and natural resources from harmful effects of soil, water, and air pollutants. Research also concerns the application of remote sensing techniques in meeting agricultural problems.

(b) Utilization research and development.—Chemical, physical, and biological research is conducted to develop increased industrial uses of farm products, and new and improved foods, feeds, and fabrics; and to develop improved methods for processing agricultural commodities.

The research aim is to expand the demand for farm products by developing new and improved products and economical processes tailored to the requirements of the domestic and foreign markets. The research conducted includes studies to protect food and feed products from harmful microbial organisms and naturally occurring toxins and studies of health-related problems of tobacco. Effort is also being given to the processing of agricultural commodities to minimize waste formation and to utilize waste products to avoid pollution.

(c) Nutrition and consumer use research.—Studies are made of human nutritional requirements, composition and nutritive value of foods, and consumer and food economics. The research aim is to determine nutrient requirements and how foods can supply these to best assure nutritional well-being of people throughout their lifespan; to provide up-to-date information about food consumption and nutrition of the population; and to develop improved procedures for household preparation, care, and preservation of foods which will preserve their nutritional, sanitary, and wholesome quality.

(d) Marketing research.—Practical answers to reduce costs and maintain product quality in moving products from farm to consumer are sought through research. For farm products as they pass through marketing channels, efforts are made to develop safe methods to protect against insect attack, find objective methods to determine quality, reduce losses from waste and spoilage, and improve efficiency in physical handling and transportation. The work includes research at each stage of marketing, such as assembly points and storage facilities, and of transportation at terminal or central markets, and at wholesale and retail markets. Research is also concerned with mycotoxins in agricultural products in relation to off-farm handling, conditioning, and storage.

(e) Research and development on the eradication of narcotic-producing plants.—Research under this activity was started in 1972 as outlined under the Omnibus Drug Control Message of June 17, 1971. The research conducted under this activity is directed toward the development of technology for the detection and destruction of illicit growth of narcotic-producing plants without adverse ecological effects. The development of this eradication technology is carried out in cooperation with research institutions in foreign countries.

(f) Coordination of departmental and interdepartmental activities related to pests and their control.—The 1974 estimates provide for the availability of $158 thousand for the use by the Secretary to meet emergency situations relating to the safe use of pesticides. The project provided for coordination with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Department of the Interior, Environmental Protection Agency, and other agencies of the Federal Government in development of measures to protect the public health, producers, and resources.

(g) Construction of facilities.—The 1974 estimates provide for a decrease of $3,460 thousand to eliminate non-recurring amounts provided for planning and construction of facilities in 1973.

(h) Contingencies.—Beginning in 1962, $1 million was provided to meet urgent needs that develop unexpectedly during the year when such needs cannot be met by redirection of resources from other projects.

(i) Special improvements, National Arboretum.—The 1974 program provides for a nonrecurring increase of $1,130 thousand to remain available until expended for special bicentennial improvements at the National Arboretum. The proposed increase would provide for necessary road changes, planting, and other improvements at the National Arboretum as part of the bicentennial plans for the Washington area.

2. Plant and animal disease and pest control.—The regulatory and control activities previously carried out under this subappropriation item by the Agricultural Research Service were transferred to the Animal and Plant Health Service which was established effective October 31, 1971, pursuant to authority of Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1953. Narrative statements describing the programs and performance of these activities are included in the Budget appendix under Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. The level of costs, financing, and outlays relating to obligations incurred under these activities prior to October 31, 1971, are included under this account.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Undelivered orders, 1971, $16,349 thousand; 1972, $17,091 thousand; 1973, $23,502 thousand; 1974, $24,155 thousand.

Foreign currencies which the Treasury Department determines to be excess to the normal requirements of the United States are used for expenses of carrying out programs of the Department of Agriculture as authorized by law and described under sections 104(b)(1) and 104(b)(3) of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended. Research is carried on through agreements negotiated with research institutions and organizations in foreign countries. The research must be of importance to American agriculture. It serves to preserve and expand existing markets and develop new ones for agricultural commodities. It provides for research supplementary to domestic programs on problems of farm, marketing, utilization, agricultural economics and human nutrition, and makes possible the conduct of research on exotic insect pests and diseases of plants and animals which could not be done in the United States. Specialized projects provide for the translation and dissemination of foreign language scientific publications. Total estimated cost in U.S. dollars (charged to regular appropriations) for program direction and supervision of projects in 1974 is $607 thousand.

The 1974 budget estimate for the Forest Service provides $1 million for a special foreign currency program on forestry projects; therefore, no new forestry research projects will be initiated by the Agricultural Research Service in 1974. To avoid establishing a separate new administration for this research in the Forest Service, the Agricultural Research Service will continue to cover the overseas administrative costs of the forestry research program.

The Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service was established on April 2, 1972, pursuant to the authority of the Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1953. The programs of the Service were formerly performed by the Animal and Plant Health Service and the Consumer and Marketing Service.

The major objectives of the Service are to insure that the meat and poultry products available to consumers are wholesome in every respect and labeled according to law and to protect the animal and plant resources of the Nation from destructive pests and diseases. These objectives are accomplished through the workings of our meat and poultry inspection program and through a series of plant and animal disease and pest control programs.

Costs, financing and outlays relating to obligations incurred under the plant and animal disease and pest control programs prior to October 31, 1971, are included in the budget appendix under Agricultural Research Service. Costs, financing and outlays relating to obligations incurred under the meat and poultry inspection program prior to April 2, 1972, are included in the budget appendix under Agricultural Marketing Service. The level of activity performed prior to these dates is included in the data below for comparative purposes.

1. Meat and poultry inspection.—Federal meat inspection is required for all meat and meat products moving in interstate and foreign commerce to insure a clean and wholesome meat supply for human consumption, free from adulteration, and truthfully labeled. All meat and meat products moving in intrastate commerce must be federally inspected or inspected by States to standards at least equal to the Federal. The work includes inspection of animals, carcasses, meat, and meat-food products at various stages of handling and processing.

Measures are enforced to insure informative labeling, and that meats imported or exported are inspected. The Federal program also provides financial and technical assistance to States for improving the quality of their inspection programs. Inspection of poultry meat and poultry meat products for wholesomeness is provided pursuant to the Poultry Products Inspection Act of 1957, as amended. All poultry processed in plants shipping in interstate or foreign commerce is required to be inspected both before and after slaughter. Birds found to be unfit for human consumption are condemned and removed from channels of trade. The Federal program also provides financial and technical assistance to States for improving the quality of their inspection programs.

The increases in the 1974 estimates provide for inspection of additional plants and assumption of intrastate inspection responsibilities from States unable to maintain an inspection system at least equal to the Federal.

The volume of inspections and examinations is indicated by examples given in the following tables:

2. Plant disease and pest control.—Programs are designed to keep out of this country by inspection at ports of entry those harmful insects, plant diseases, nematodes, and other pests that cause great damage to agriculture in other countries. Working with the States, programs are conducted to eradicate or prevent spread of crop pests that become established in this country. Assistance is given to the States to suppress incipient and emergency outbreaks of crop pests when and where they occur. The 1974 estimates propose decreases for the gypsy moth, fire ant, European chafer, soybean cyst nematode, sweetpotato weevil and phony peach and peach mosaic programs.

The level of activities for plant pest control is shown by the selected examples that follow:

3. Animal disease and pest control.—Programs are conducted to keep communicable diseases of foreign origin from entering this country and to prevent the spread of disease through interstate shipments of livestock or distribution of impure or impotent veterinary biologics. Other programs are directed at the control and eradication of livestock diseases. The animal welfare program is concerned with the humane care and handling of approximately 40 million warm-blooded animals. The 1974 estimates propose increases for a cooperative screw-worm eradication program in Mexico and a Newcastle disease surveillance program. The estimates also propose a decrease in the salmonella program. Increases are also included for repayments to Commodity Credit Corporation for advances made for exotic Newcastle disease and hog cholera emergencies.

4. Construction of facilities.—The 1974 estimates propose a decrease in nonrecurring planning funds appropriated in fiscal year 1973. Construction of an animal quarantine station in accordance with Public Law 88-592 is planned in fiscal year 1974 with the $1.5 million appropriated in fiscal year 1970.

5. Contingencies.—Of the total annual amounts provided under this appropriation, $1.5 million is available for the control of outbreaks of insects, plant diseases, and animal diseases to the extent necessary to meet emergency conditions.

Public Law 88-592, approved September 12, 1964, authorized the sale of the Animal Quarantine Station, at Clifton, N.J., to the city of Clifton, and application of the proceeds of sale to the planning and construction costs of a new station in the New York-New Jersey port and airport area. A sales contract between the Department and the city of Clifton was executed on December 16, 1966, at the appraised value of $527 thousand. Of that amount, $100 thousand was paid to the Department upon execution of the contract. An additional $100 thousand will be paid to the Department upon award of an architect-engineering contract for development of design and construction plans, and the balance will be paid upon publication of bids for construction of the new quarantine station. A total of $6 thousand has been spent by the Department on survey and related costs associated with obtaining a new site. An additional $1.5 million was provided in 1970 under the sub-appropriation Plant and animal disease and pest control, now redesignated Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, for the remainder of the total cost of $2,027 thousand for the new station. The Department has recently been informed by the General Services Administration that the proposed site on Floyd Bennett Field is not available. The Department is presently investigating other possible sites.

The Service administers funds for payments and grants to State agricultural experiment stations and other eligible institutions for the support of research in agriculture, the rural home, the rural community, and forestry. This administration involves supervision of the funds, and close advisory relations with the State agricultural experiment stations, schools of forestry, and other institutions eligible to receive funds. The Service participates in planning and coordination of research programs among the States and between the States and the Department.

1. Payments to agricultural experiment stations under the Hatch Act.—Grants under the Hatch Act are allocated to agricultural experiment stations of the land-grant colleges in the 50 States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands, for agricultural research including investigations and experiments to promote a permanent and efficient agricultural industry and improvements in the rural home and rural community. In addition, funds are provided to cover the cost of penalty mailings for State agricultural experiment station directors. A reduction in Hatch Act payments is requested in 1974 as part of a departmental reorientation of research priorities. An increase in penalty mail is requested to meet increased postal costs.

2. Grants for cooperative forestry research.—These grants are allocated to land-grant colleges or agricultural experiment stations in the 50 States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands, and other State-supported colleges and universities offering graduate training in the sciences basic to forestry and having a forestry school. The act requires that the Federal funds paid to each institution be matched by funds from non-Federal sources for forestry research. In 1974, a reduction in funds is requested as part of a departmental reorientation of research priorities.

3. Contracts and grants for scientific research.—These funds are for the support of grants on specific research problems at nonprofit institutions of higher education or nonprofit organizations whose primary purpose is the conduct of such research. Every competitive research proposal selected for funding must be evaluated and classified as outstanding and appropriate to the needs of the designated problem area. A decrease is requested in special grant funds to meet a proportional decrease in research. Funds will be utilized to support research in rural development. This is a problem of joint concern to the USDA and the States. The balance of the special grant funds is earmarked for the land-grant colleges of 1890 and Tuskegee Institute.

5. Rural development research.—This covers the allocation of funds under section 502(b) of the Rural Development Act of 1972 to conduct pilot research programs in support of the development of rural areas.

6. Federal administration.—A coordinating and review staff is maintained to examine research projects and assist State institutions and Federal agencies.

7. Miscellaneous services to other accounts.—These funds are used to provide technical assistance in administration of various agricultural experiment stations.

8. Agency for International Development.—These funds are used for Cooperative State Research Service personnel to train foreign participants in this country.

9. Current research information system.—These reimbursable funds from other agencies of the Department are used to operate the current research information system. This system provides information on research projects, status of the research and fund resources for research programs of the State agricultural experiment stations and other institutions.

The primary function of the nationwide system of cooperative extension work is out-of-school applied education in agriculture, home economics, community development, 4-H youth programs, and related subjects. This educational work takes research results, technological advancements, and program facts of the Department of Agriculture, the State agricultural colleges and experiment stations, and incorporates them into a program for action. Cooperative Extension Service interprets, disseminates, and encourages practical use of knowledge. It transmits information from researchers to people.

1. Payments to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands.—Funds appropriated under the Smith-Lever Act for payments to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands are distributed primarily on the basis of population and to a degree on basis of special problems and needs. Funds appropriated under the Agricultural Marketing Act are distributed to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands on a matching basis under approved projects. Funds are used primarily for the employment of State and county extension workers who work with individuals, families, community organizations, marketing concerns, and others by providing advice and assistance in the application of improved methods for production, marketing, nutrition, and family living. Work with youth is accomplished largely through 4-H clubs. Funds also provide for Federal payment to the Bureau of Employees' Compensation Fund. Extension agents are paid from Federal, State, and county sources. The mandatory retirement contribution for these agents is authorized by Public Law 854, approved July 31, 1956. The employer's contribution to the retirement fund is provided by this Federal appropriation. Funds under section 502(a) of the Rural Development Act are for payments to conduct pilot extension education activities in support of the development of rural areas.

Funds for the cost of penalty mailings for State extension directors and cooperative extension agents are also provided. The net increase of $2,502 thousand in this item will include a decrease of $2,440 thousand in funds for program operations under section 3(c), $3,200 thousand for the low-income nutrition and family education program under section 3(d) and $1,000 thousand for rural development work under section 3(d) offset by increases of $2,400 thousand to conduct pilot extension educational activities in support of the development of rural areas and $6,742 thousand in penalty mail for increased postal rates.

2. Federal administration and coordination.—The Extension Service provides leadership and assistance to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands in developing extension programs, improving teaching methods, efficient use of available resources, evaluation of programs, and administrative services. Extension Service also coordinates the educational activities of U.S. Department of Agriculture agencies. The decrease of $2 thousand will reduce funds available for pilot projects in selected areas.

The National Agricultural Library, cooperating jointly with the two other national libraries—the Library of Congress and the National Library of Medicine—provides coverage and servicing of worldwide publications in the agricultural, chemical, and biological sciences. It serves the research, extension, regulatory, and other programs of the Department and State agricultural agencies. Since the Library's primary purpose is to provide for research needs, it has acquired and preserved what is considered to be the most exhaustive body of literature available on all phases of agriculture and the allied sciences—botany, chemistry, animal industry, veterinary medicine, biology, agricultural engineering, rural sociology, forestry, entomology, food and nutrition, soils and fertilizers, and the marketing, transportation, and other economic aspects of agricultural products. Publications are currently acquired from more than 150 governments and jurisdictional entities in some 50 different languages. In addition, printed information of agricultural societies, organizations and cooperatives, and general material in the field of agriculture are collected and made available for use.

Information contained in the agricultural literature is disseminated through bibliographies, reference services, loans and photocopies to agricultural colleges and universities, research institutions, Government agencies, agricultural associations, industry, individual scientists, farmers, and the general public in every part of the world.

During 1972, 229,051 separate issues of periodicals were added to the collection by purchase, gift, and exchange. During the same period, 178,634 loans or photocopies of books and periodicals were made and 133,587 inquiries handled.

The Service administers the Department's programs of crop and livestock estimates and statistical research and service. Statistical and economic data developed by the Service on food and agriculture are essential to farmers, processors, and handlers in making production and marketing decisions. It also helps legislators, administrators, and others concerned with developing and administering agricultural programs. Further, data provided by the Service are basic to economic research and analysis and other agricultural research programs.

1. Crop and livestock estimates.—The Service provides the official national estimates of acreage, yield, and production of crops; stocks and value of farm commodities; and numbers and inventory value of livestock items. Data on approximately 150 crops and livestock products are covered in some 550 reports issued each year. Data collected and published on prices paid and received by farmers are basic to computation of parity prices.

The work of the Service is conducted through 44 State offices serving the 50 States; most of these offices are operated as joint State and Federal services. Cooperative arrangements with State agencies provide much additional State and county data; Federal funds are not available for collection and publication of these data. During 1972, cooperating States expended an estimated $3.9 million of their own funds on such associated State programs.

A comparison of activities in 1971 and 1972, including work performed under cooperative arrangements, follows:

2. Statistical research and service.—This work includes review of all statistical forms, survey plans, and reporting and recordkeeping requirements originating in the Department which require Office of Management and Budget approval; liaison within the Department and with other agencies for coordination of statistics; research on and development of sampling, forecasting, and other basic statistical techniques and methods to improve the crop and livestock estimates of the Department; provision of technical consulting services on new or improved statistical techniques to other agencies of the Department; use of and consultation on automatic data processing, to develop and adapt this technology to the improvement of the accuracy and timeliness of crop and livestock estimates; and conduct of special surveys relating to the marketing of agricultural products. A comparison of SRS activities in the statistical research and service area for 1971 and 1972 is as follows:

The Economic Research Service was established by Secretary's Memorandum No. 1446, Supplement No. 1, of April 3, 1961, under Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1953 and other authorities. The Service develops and carries out a program of economic research designed to provide economic intelligence for the Department of Agriculture and other Federal decisionmakers, farmers, and related industries and the general public. The findings of this research are made available to these users through research reports and through economic outlook and situation reports on major commodities, the national economy, and the international economy. The Service carries out the following major activities:

1. Farm economics research consists of a nationwide program of research dealing with the economic problems of agricultural production and resource use. Farm production economics research includes analyses of farm production costs and efficiency, use of capital, labor, and other resources in agriculture, profitable adjustments in farming, and financial problems of farmers. Natural resource economics includes studies of the use and management of land and water resources, including the quality of these resources, resource institutions, and watershed and river basin development problems. Economic development research includes a broad program of economic studies on development of rural areas, employment opportunities for farm and other rural people, and availability and factors affecting the availability of public and private facilities and services necessary to improve the quality of rural life, including local governments and their organization.

2. Marketing economics research includes economic analyses and research relating to the marketing of agricultural commodities, the organizational structure, practices, and performance of commodity markets from the farm to the consumer, costs and margins involved in the marketing of agricultural products, farmer's bargaining power, the economics of product quality and grade, market potentials, distribution and merchandising of agricultural products, and the economics of transportation.

The increase requested in fiscal year 1974 will be used to improve the estimates of marketing margins.

3. Domestic and foreign economic analysis.—Domestic economic analysis consists of economic and statistical research on agricultural prices, farm income, commodity outlook and situation, supply and consumption of farm products, and agricultural history. Foreign economic analysis includes: Studies of supply and demand and trade in farm products in foreign countries and their effect on prospects for U.S. exports; analysis of farm export programs, progress in economic development and its relationship to sales of farm products, assembly and analysis of agricultural trade statistics; and analysis of international financial monetary programs and policies as they effect the competitive position of U.S. farm products.

The increase requested in fiscal year 1974 will be used to improve estimates of farm income and related statistical series.

The Service functions through a central office in Washington, D.C., and a small field staff at each of 56 locations, principally the land grant colleges and universities throughout the United States. Much of the research is carried on in cooperation with State agricultural experiment stations.

¹ Includes capital outlays as follows: 1972, $13 thousand; 1973, $0 thousand; 1974, $0 thousand.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Undelivered orders, 1971, $153 thousand (1972 adjustments, $36 thousand); 1972, $42 thousand; 1973, $42 thousand; 1974, $42 thousand.

The major objectives of the Commodity Exchange Authority, in the enforcement of the Commodity Exchange Act, are to protect the price and hedging services of the commodity futures markets. These services are widely used by farmers, merchandisers, and processors. To carry out its enforcement objectives, the Commodity Exchange Authority works to maintain fair trading practices and competitive pricing on commodity exchanges, and to prevent price manipulation, cheating, fraud, and abusive acts, and practices in commodity transactions. Enforcement of the act includes supervision of 20 commodity exchanges designated as contract markets, approximately 275 brokerage firms registered as futures commission merchants, and about 1,300 registered floor brokers operating on the exchanges.

Futures trading in the 20 agricultural commodities regulated under the Commodity Exchange Act continued its upward trend in fiscal year 1972. Volume of trading reached a new record of 12.6 million transactions, up 7% from the previous record of 11.8 million transactions in fiscal year 1971. Value of futures trading, estimated at $148 billion, was 30% greater than the $114 billion a year earlier. Soybeans, the most active commodity, reached an alltime record in trading volume. The 3,961 million transactions covered 19.8 billion bushels of soybeans, up 48% from 13.48 billion bushels in the previous year. Frozen pork bellies, one of the consistently high-volume commodities in recent years, ranked second in market activity. Trading of 2,043,384 contracts represented a 34% increase over fiscal year 1971. Trading in live hogs, following the pattern for pork bellies, rose substantially and reached a new trading record of 366,450 contracts. Activity in the live cattle markets also reached a record level and the cotton futures market was the largest in 17 years.

1. Registration and auditing of brokerage houses.—This consists of (a) protection of customers' funds through the establishment and enforcement of minimum financial standards for futures commission merchants and periodic audits of their books and records, and (b) annual registration of futures commission merchants and floor brokers.

The program is aimed at assuring fair play in the marketing of livestock, meat, and poultry. Its principal purpose is to maintain effective competition for livestock, meats, and poultry, so as to bring to farmers and ranchers the true market value of their livestock and poultry. Members of the livestock, poultry, and meat industries are also protected against unfair business practices in the marketing of meats and poultry, and from restrictions on competition which could unduly increase meat and poultry prices.

No increase is requested for fiscal year 1974.

Farmer Cooperative Service conducts research, advises directly with cooperative leaders and others, promotes cooperative organization and development through other Federal and State agencies, and publishes reports, "News for Farmer Cooperatives," and other educational material. This work is aimed (1) to help farmers get better prices for their products and reduce operating expenses, (2) to help rural and small-town residents use cooperatives to develop rural resources, and (3) to help all Americans understand the work of these cooperatives.

FOREIGN AGRICULTURAL SERVICE—Continued

The Foreign Agricultural Service helps American agriculture to maintain and expand foreign markets for its products and reports foreign developments as a guide to American agricultural production, policies, and programs.

(A) The Service helps to develop foreign markets for U.S. farm products through effective market promotion under special export programs and through continuous efforts to remove international trade barriers that inhibit export sales.

(B) The Service maintains a worldwide agricultural intelligence and reporting service that enables American agriculture to carry out its production, policies, and programs in the context of world developments. Pertinent agricultural and economic data of foreign production and markets, and information on foreign agricultural policies are continuously analyzed and reported.

1. International trade.—The Service directs and coordinates Department responsibilities in international trade agreement programs and negotiations, under the authority of the Trade Expansion Act. It identifies and strives to reduce foreign trade barriers to U.S. agricultural exports. Developments in foreign trade policies are examined and their effect on agricultural trade and operations are reported with recommendations as to courses of action.

The Service recommends Department positions and participates in negotiations on trade agreements and international commodity agreements. It reviews and reports trade regulations of countries (primarily those signatory to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) as to how such regulations affect the movement of U.S. farm products in world trade.

The Service administers a program of import controls, in accordance with section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, on foreign farm products which would render ineffective or materially interfere with Department programs relating to agricultural commodities. It is also responsible for administering import controls established under the 1964 Meat Import Act and section 204 of the Trade Expansion Act.

2. Agricultural attachés.—The Service maintains agricultural attachés at 62 foreign posts to assist in the development of markets abroad for U.S. agricultural commodities. They work closely with numerous U.S. agricultural trade groups and maintain contacts with foreign governments to promote greater market accessibility for U.S. farm products. They carry out a comprehensive schedule of reporting foreign agricultural production, marketing, and trade policy developments to keep U.S. agriculture, industry, and Government currently informed.

3. Market development.—The Service administers programs concerned with the development of foreign markets for agricultural products of the United States, and coordinates interagency participation and action essential to administration of these programs. These functions involve: (a) Developing a system of worldwide promotional programs, on a commodity-by-commodity basis, in cooperation with national organizations of producers, processors, and exporters, and providing overall guidance to these organizations in carrying out cooperative programs; (b) developing, operating, and evaluating a worldwide system of multicommodity promotional programs utilizing trade fairs, trade centers and point-of-purchase campaigns to expand overseas markets; (c) reviewing foreign marketing plans; providing technical assistance in their design; developing procedures and controlling budgets and funds essential to their implementation; and evaluating programs implemented; (d) cooperating with State and local organizations in programs designed to provide technical assistance to U.S. agricultural export firms and to stimulate participation of new U.S. "cooperator" groups in promotional projects; (e) developing and guiding a systematic review of foreign markets on a country-by-country basis to find new market opportunities for U.S. agricultural products and to develop long-range promotional plans for such markets; and (f) exploring new methods and techniques to stimulate the flow of U.S. farm products into overseas markets.

4. Commodity programs.—Information essential to domestic planning and to foreign marketing of specific U.S. farm commodities is obtained, analyzed, and made available to U.S. farm and trade groups and to Government. Foreign agricultural competition is analyzed and reported. Marketing programs, in which producers, exporters, and Government officials participate, are developed to maintain and expand the foreign market for U.S. farm products. Assistance is given to U.S. trade representatives in negotiations with foreign officials. Assistance is given to American exporters and foreign importers to bring them together under conditions favorable to trade.

Market development projects.—Foreign currencies generated by the sale of agricultural commodities under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, as well as foreign currencies acquired by the United States from other sources, are used by the Foreign Agricultural Service to develop new foreign markets and expand existing markets for U.S. agricultural commodities, including cotton, dairy products, fats and oils, grain, feed, livestock and meat, poultry, fruits and vegetables, and tobacco.

The type of market development projects being carried out include sales promotion campaigns, trade fairs and exhibits, nutrition demonstrations, and market analyses. In 1974 it is planned that the unobligated balance brought forward in this appropriation will be used to purchase those currencies necessary to carry on the program. Dollar funds for use in other countries are included in the appropriation Foreign agricultural service.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS AND SPECIAL EXPORT PROGRAMS

Facilities and funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation may by law be used in carrying out programs for exporting agricultural commodities. The laws also authorize appropriations to be made to cover costs of such programs. When funds become available, advances are made to the Corporation for estimated costs. If the amounts appropriated are greater than actual needs, the excess is used to reduce future appropriation requests. If appropriations are less than actual needs, other Corporation funds may be used temporarily to finance the balance of authorized costs.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Included in this category are the following activities carried out under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, Public Law 480, 83d Congress, as amended: Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I); sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms (title I); and commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad (title II).

1. Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies and for dollars on credit terms are made under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (Public Law 480), as amended (7 U.S.C. 1701-1710).

The Corporation finances all sales made pursuant to agreements concluded under title I. Sales are made to friendly countries—as defined in section 103(d) of the act—and must not displace expected commercial sales for cash dollars (secs. 103 (c) and (n)).

No agreements may be entered into after December 31, 1973 (sec. 409), and agreements may not be made under title I in any calendar year which call for an appropriation to reimburse the Corporation in excess of $1.9 billion, plus unused prior years' authorizations.

Whenever practicable, terms of agreements must require payment at time of delivery of not less than 5% of the purchase price in dollars or in currencies convertible to dollars. These initial payments are applied against costs to reduce appropriation requests. On credit agreements under title I, the President is authorized to require payment upon delivery in dollars or foreign currencies of amounts needed for payment of U.S. obligations and certain other purposes.

The act provides for a progressive shift from foreign currency sales to dollar credit sales, to be completed by December 31, 1971. To the extent that transition from foreign currency sales to dollar credit sales is not possible, transition to convertible foreign currency credit sales is authorized on terms which permit conversion to dollars at the exchange rate applicable to the sales agreement. The 1973 program costs for foreign currency sales represent final shipments under sales agreements signed on or before December 31, 1971.

Factors determining availability of commodities for disposition under Public Law 480 are productive capacity, domestic requirements, farm and consumer price levels, anticipated commercial exports, and adequate carryover. No commodity is available for disposition if the disposition thereof would reduce the domestic supply below that needed to meet domestic requirements, adequate carryover, and anticipated exports for dollars.

The Corporation may finance only the differential between U.S.-flag rates and world rates for the cost of ocean freight.

(a) Sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I).—Sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies were made to countries unable to expand commercial purchases because of a lack of dollar exchange. Foreign currencies received in payment are deposited to the account of the U.S. Treasury and can be used only as stated in section 104. The dollar value of such deposits through June 30, 1972, amounted to $12.9 billion.

Uses fall into two groups—those of benefit to the foreign country, mainly loans and grants to promote economic development and to support common defense, and those of benefit to the United States. The latter includes, among others, expenses of the U.S. Government abroad, agricultural market development, educational exchange, construction of military family housing, and sales of foreign currency to U.S. citizens and tourists.

Certain uses of foreign currencies including foreign currency loan repayments for U.S. uses, and certain foreign currency grants, are subject to the appropriation process. Sales agreements specify particular uses, and in those entered into after December 31, 1964, at least 20% of the foreign currencies are required to be subject to the appropriation process, with certain exceptions. Such uses reduce dollar outflow and the deficit in the balance of payments of the United States. The Corporation is reimbursed for the dollar value of currencies so used. Proceeds from sales of foreign currencies and from dollar repayments of foreign currency loans are applied as a reduction in appropriation requests.

Section 509 of Public Law 86-500, approved June 8, 1960 (7 U.S.C. 1704b note) provides that at least 75% of the total cost of foreign military housing projects (unless otherwise specified) shall be paid from foreign currencies acquired under title I. Pursuant to 10 U.S.C. 2681(b), as amended, the estimate reflects transfer to the Corporation of $6 million each year to liquidate amounts due. Of this amount, $2 million will be applied to the French housing barter transaction discussed under the Corporation's special activities and the remaining $4 million will be applied against other amounts due, with a balance of $27 million remaining unpaid as of June 30, 1974.

From inception through June 30, 1972, sales agreements have been signed with 55 countries. They cover sales of commodities at an export market value of over $13 billion. Major items are wheat, cotton, fats and oils, rice, and feed grains.

The following table reflects costs incurred (in thousands of dollars):

Fiscal year	Program		Total

(b) Sales of agricultural commodities for dollars or convertible foreign currencies on credit terms (title I).—Sales of U.S. agricultural commodities under long-term dollar credit terms are also authorized.

Agreements are made with friendly countries or with United States and foreign private trade. They may provide for delivery in annual installments for not more than 10 years from the date of the agreement subject to the availability of the commodity.

Payments are in dollars with interest at rates not less than the minimum required by section 201 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, for loans made under that section. Payments are made in reasonable annual amounts over periods of not to exceed 20 years from the date of last delivery in each calendar year under the agreement, except that the first annual payment may be deferred for a period of not more than 2 years after such date of last delivery. Interest is computed from the date of such last delivery. As payments are received each year, they are applied against current costs to reduce the appropriation request. Private trade agreements must provide for projects to establish improved storage or marketing facilities or otherwise encourage private economic enterprise in friendly countries.

Credit terms for convertible foreign currency credit sales are to be no less favorable to the United States than those for development loans made under section 201 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, which authorized loans to be made on the basis of payment in 40 years with a 10-year grace period. Dollar payments, when received, will also be applied to reduce appropriation requests.

Total agreements made since inception to June 30, 1972, amount to $3,465.1 million cost value, including ocean freight for shipment on U.S. ships. Major commodities are wheat, cotton, oils, rice, and feed grains. Payments for the period amount to $484.3 million, of which $327.1 million was applied to principal and $157.2 million to interest.

2. Commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad (title II).—Available agricultural commodities are furnished to meet famine or other urgent or emergency relief needs. Also, commodities are furnished to promote economic and community development in friendly developing countries, to combat malnutrition, and for needy people, and nonprofit school lunch and preschool feeding programs. They are furnished through friendly governments and private or public agencies, including inter-governmental organizations such as the World Food program. The Food for Peace Act, in amending title II, expressed the sense of Congress that other advanced nations should be encouraged to make increased contributions for the purpose of combating world hunger and malnutrition, and that to achieve this objective, the United States should work to expand the United Nations' World Food program.

The Agency for International Development is responsible for administering title II programs. However, the Corporation makes available the commodities or products requested for disposition under title II. Such commodities or products are made available from the Corporation's stocks of commodities or products acquired under its support program or are purchased at market prices when this is determined to be in the best interest of the Government.

The Corporation is authorized to pay, with respect to commodities made available, the costs of acquisitions, packaging, processing, enrichment, preservation, fortification, transportation, handling, and other incidental costs incurred up to the time of delivery to U.S. ports and ocean freight charges and general average contributions arising out of ocean transport.

Approximately $7½ million each year may be used to buy foreign currencies accruing under title I of this act to meet costs (other than personnel and administrative costs of cooperating sponsors, distributing agencies, and recipient agencies) directed to community and other self-help activities designed to alleviate the causes for the need for such aid.

Through December 31, 1972, appropriations totaling $6,700 million were authorized. No programs of assistance can be entered into after December 31, 1973, and none shall be undertaken under this title during any calendar year which call for an appropriation of more than $600 million to reimburse the Corporation for costs incurred, including its investment, plus any amount by which programs of assistance undertaken under this title in the preceding calendar year have called or will call for appropriations in amounts less than authorized during the preceding year. Any incidental sales proceeds and proceeds from loss, damage, and other claims are applied against Commodity Credit Corporation costs to reflect a reduction in appropriation requests.

SPECIAL EXPORT PROGRAM

In addition to the foreign assistance programs described, the Commodity Credit Corporation conducted a special export program for bartered materials for the supplemental stockpile (7 U.S.C. 1856). This program was closed out in 1971. Barter activities are now limited to barter for offshore procurement for other Government agencies on a reimbursable basis.

This account includes funds to cover expenses of programs administered by, and functions assigned to, the Service. The funds consist of direct appropriation, transfers from the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC), and miscellaneous advances from other sources. This is a consolidated account for administrative expenses of National, Commodity, State, and county offices.

The Commodity offices in Kansas City, Minneapolis, and New Orleans play an important role in administering support programs and the field operations stemming from producer loan and purchase agreements, inventory management, and merchandising activities.

The data processing center in Kansas City provides data processing services in connection with loan and purchase programs; inventory operations; merchandising computation and issuance of producer payments under feed grain, wheat, and cotton programs; tobacco marketing and quota program; county office payrolls; and providing farmers, employees, and Internal Revenue Service information for tax purposes.

The State committees are in general charge of all programs carried out in their respective States. Within the framework of national policy, they determine the policies to be followed and direct the adaptation of national programs to the State.

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation elected county committees are responsible for the local administration of programs. They make local program decisions and policies and appoint a county executive director who directs the office staff in handling the day-to-day detailed administrative work.

The programs and activities carried out by this service include: rural environmental assistance program; emergency conservation measures; Water Bank Act program; Appalachian region conservation program; acreage allotment and marketing quota programs; Sugar Act program; conservation reserve program; feed grain, wheat, and cotton programs; cropland conversion program; cropland adjustment program; dairy and beekeeper indemnity programs; Wool Act program; bin storage program; and support and related programs.

The activities carried out by the Service fall within three major categories:

1. Program formulation and appraisal.—The supply adjustment, conservation, and commodity support programs, and the management and merchandising of commodities acquired under the support program, have a tremendous impact on the national and, to a lesser extent, the international economy. This activity provides for constant review of the effectiveness of these programs. It also provides for the analysis of data to formulate even more effective programs.

2. Operation of supply adjustment, conservation, and support programs.—This activity includes all functions dealing with the administration of programs carried out through the farmer committee system, including: (a) developing program regulations and procedures; (b) holding meetings with employees and producers to discuss new programs or changes in existing programs; (c) collecting and compiling basic data for individual farms; (d) establishing individual farm allotments, bases, and yields; (e) establishing proportionate shares for sugar farms when necessary; (f) notifying producers of allotments, proportionate shares, productivity indexes, and payment rates; (g) determining farm marketing allocations; (h) handling appeals; (i) conducting referendums and certifying results; (j) checking compliance with acreage allotments and use of set-aside acres; (k) developing pooling agreements under which several farmers work jointly to solve a common conservation problem which cannot be solved by individual action; (l) issuing marketing cards so that production from the allotted acreage can be marketed without penalty; (m) processing producer requests for conservation cost sharing; and (n) processing commodity loan documents and issuing sight drafts.

3. Inventory management and merchandising.—This activity includes: (a) overall management of CCC-owned commodities; (b) selling commodities; (c) donating commodities; and (d) accounting for loans and commodities. The value of the commodities owned by CCC on June 30, 1972, was about $1,090 million.

The objectives are to provide consumers with adequate supplies of sugar at reasonable prices, to protect the welfare of the domestic sugar industry, and to promote the export trade of the United States. Total U.S. requirements and quotas are determined each year. The quota for each domestic area is allotted to individual sellers when necessary to achieve orderly marketing. Restrictive farm acreage allotments are established for producers when necessary to avoid surpluses.

Payments are made which supplement the income of domestic producers of cane and beets. Payments require compliance with specified conditions of employment, production, and price. Payments are also made for abandonment of planted acreage and crop deficiencies on harvested acreage due to natural calamities.

The increase of $5.0 million proposed for 1974 is required to provide necessary funds to complete payments on the 1972 crop, and to make payments on the 1973 crop to eligible producers in fiscal year 1974.

Tax collections from imports of sugar exceed total obligations by $684.7 million for fiscal years 1938 through 1972.

This program is designed to encourage conservation by sharing with farmers, ranchers, and woodland owners the cost of carrying out approved soil- and water-conserving practices, including related wildlife-conserving practices, and water, air, and land pollution-abatement practices which farmers generally would not perform to the needed extent with their own resources. The rate of cost-sharing averages about 50% of the cost. Cost-sharing may be in the form of conservation materials and services or a payment after completion of the practice.

Conservation measures offered include those primarily designed to establish permanent protective cover, improve and protect established vegetative cover, conserve and dispose of water, establish temporary vegetative cover, temporarily protect soil from wind and water erosion, provide wildlife benefits, and abate agriculture-related pollution.

The following and other practices were installed under the 1971 program on more than 0.6 million farms:

Loans from Commodity Credit Corporation are used to make advance payments to vendors. These payments are for conservation materials and services furnished to farmers and ranchers prior to the time funds are appropriated each year. Repayment is made from balances of prior appropriations or from new funds appropriated.

The purposes of this program are to preserve, restore, and improve the wetlands of the Nation, and thereby to conserve surface waters, to preserve and improve habitat for migratory waterfowl and other wildlife resources, to reduce runoff, soil and wind erosion, and contribute to improved water quality and reduce stream sedimentation, to contribute to improved subsurface moisture, to reduce acres of new land coming into production and to retire lands now in agricultural production, to enhance the beauty of the landscape, and to promote comprehensive water management planning.

The Secretary of Agriculture enters into agreements with landowners and operators for the conservation of specified wetlands. The agreements are for 10 years with provision for renewal for additional periods. During the period of the agreement, the landowner agrees not to drain, burn, fill or otherwise destroy the wetland character of such areas, nor to use such areas for agricultural purposes, as determined by the Secretary. The Secretary makes annual payments to the owner or operator at a rate to be determined.

The Secretary carries out the program in harmony with wetlands programs administered by the Secretary of the Interior and utilizes the technical and related services of appropriate State, Federal, and private conservation agencies to assure proper coordination.

The cropland adjustment program was authorized by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965 which expired with the 1970 crop year. Cropland adjustment programs were approved only for 1966 and 1967. This program assisted farmers, through long-term agreements, to divert cropland from the production of certain crops to more needed uses that promote the development and conservation of our soil, water, forest, wildlife, and recreational resources. The period of an agreement was not less than 5 years nor more than 10 years. The program also helped farmers establish, protect, and conserve open spaces and natural beauty, and prevent air and water pollution.

In return for diverting the cropland to approved public benefit uses, producers receive adjustment payments. They also are eligible to receive cost-sharing assistance for establishing approved land treatment measures. Additional incentive payments are made to producers who entered into agreements to permit free public access to land designated under the cropland adjustment program agreement, for hunting, trapping, fishing, and hiking.

Under the Greenspan provisions of the program, funds were also made available to Federal, State, or local governmental agencies for use in acquiring cropland for permanent conversion to specified public uses, and cost-shares could also be paid to such agencies for establishing approved land treatment measures consistent with the conditions and costs under agreements entered into with producers.

This program, initiated in 1956, has two objectives. One is to bring total crop acreage more nearly in line with demand by withdrawing cropland from production. The other is to establish and maintain sound conservation practices on the land withdrawn. The Secretary was authorized, through calendar year 1960, to enter into 3- to 15-year contracts with producers. For removing designated cropland from production and for establishing necessary conservation practices, the producer receives an annual rental payment each year of the contract period. He also receives cost-sharing assistance for the establishment of required practices. Total annual rental payments to a producer are limited to $5 thousand.

This appropriation provides special funds for sharing the cost of emergency conservation measures to deal with cases of severe damage to farm and range lands resulting from natural disasters. The criteria under which assistance may be made available are set forth in the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590(h)).

Funds are allocated for use only in those counties designated by the Secretary of Agriculture as disaster counties. Assistance is made available to treat new conservation problems which (1) if not treated will impair or endanger the land, (2) materially affect the productive capacity of the land, (3) represent damage which is unusual in character and, except for wind erosion, is not the type which would recur frequently in the same area, and (4) will be so costly to rehabilitate that Federal assistance is or will be required to return the land to productive agricultural use.

Under the 1972 program cost-sharing assistance is being provided to treat farmlands damaged by flood, tornado, hurricane, freeze, and fire. As of November 30, 1972, there were 89 counties in 18 States where assistance was being provided.

Under this program the Department makes indemnification payments to dairy farmers, manufacturers of dairy products, and beekeepers.

This program began in 1964 and was limited (until the passage of the Agricultural Act of 1970) to payments to dairy farmers, who were directed to remove their milk from commercial markets because it contained residues of chemicals registered and approved for use by the Federal Government

The Agricultural Act of 1970 authorized indemnification payments, beginning with the date of its enactment, to manufacturers of dairy products who have been directed to remove their products because it contained residues of chemicals registered and approved for use by the Federal Government.

The Agricultural Act of 1970 also authorized payments to beekeepers who, through no fault of their own, have suffered losses of honey bees after January 1, 1967, as a result of utilization of economic poisons near or adjacent

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, a wholly owned Government Corporation, was created on February 16, 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1501-1519), to carry out the provisions of the Federal Crop Insurance Act. The purpose of this act is to promote the national welfare by improving the economic stability of agriculture through a sound system of crop insurance, and to provide the means for the research and experience helpful in devising and establishing such insurance.

Crop insurance offered to agricultural producers by the Corporation provides protection from losses caused by natural hazards, such as insect and wildlife damage, plant diseases, fire, drought, flood, wind, and other weather conditions. It does not indemnify producers for losses resulting from negligence or failure to observe good farming practices.

The crop insurance programs are developed and analyzed in the Washington headquarters office and are administered in the field by 14 sales and contract service centers. Sales and servicing of contracts at the county level is performed by private agents under contractual agreements with the Corporation and by Corporation employees hired on a permanent, part-time or WAE (when actually employed) basis. Detailed administrative and program accounting and statistical functions are performed by the National Service Office in Kansas City, Mo., as well as the underwriting and actuarial analysis.

FEDERAL CROP INSURANCE CORPORATION FUND—Continued

Budget program.—The program for fiscal year 1974 will provide crop insurance protection to farmers amounting to approximately $925 million on the following commodities: apples, barley, beans, citrus, combined crop, corn, cotton, flax, grain sorghum, grapes, oats, peaches, peanuts, peas, raisins, rice, soybeans, sugar beets, sugarcane, tobacco, tomatoes, and wheat. Also, the Corporation has been reinsuring a portion of the crop insurance written by the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico since crop year 1968.

The following table indicates the scope of the insurance operations planned for 1973 and 1974, as compared with 1972. Amounts in the 1972 column are actual, and pertain to the 1971 crop year. The 1973 column pertains to the 1972 crop year, and the 1974 column pertains to the 1973 crop year.

Financing.—Capital stock of $100 million is authorized to be subscribed by the United States. As of June 30, 1972, the Secretary of the Treasury held receipts for $60 million of authorized stock, leaving $40 million unissued.

Funds from the issuance of capital stock provide working capital for the Corporation. Receipts which are for deposit to this fund come mainly from premiums paid by farmers for crop insurance indemnity costs. The principal payments from this fund are for: indemnities to insured farmers; the direct cost of adjusting crop losses; and a part of the administrative and operating expenses. However, the direct cost of loss adjustment and the administrative and operating expenses paid from the fund are not provided for in the premium rates (section 508(b) of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended).

The annual appropriation for the major portion of the administrative and operating expenses of the Corporation is presented earlier in the budget.

It is estimated that gross income of $46 million from operations will provide adequate operating funds for fiscal year 1974, unless heavy losses occur early in the fiscal year.

Operating results and financial condition.—As of June 30, 1972, the Corporation reflected a deficit of $21 million which is lower by $14.6 million than the deficit of the year before. The smaller deficit resulted from increased premiums over indemnities for crop year 1971 to cover expenses paid from the fund. Crop year 1971 premiums of $48 million exceeded indemnities by over $19.5 million, resulting in a loss ratio of 0.59 as compared with the 1970 loss ratio of 0.94.

A 0.90 loss ratio is estimated for crop year 1972. Premiums of $42 million are estimated to exceed indemnities by $4 million. For the crop years 1948 through 1971, premium income ($654.9 million) exceeded indemnity costs ($619.9 million) by $35 million; the loss ratio for the period was 0.95. Premium income exceeded indemnity costs in 13 of the 24 years.

The following table summarizes the insurance operations by commodities for 1972, 1973, and 1974:

¹ Balances of selected resources are identified on the statement of financial condition.² Includes sale of time drafts in the commercial financial market in 1973, $300,535 thousand; 1974, $968,249 thousand.³ Statutory obligations against borrowing authority include only borrowing from, or with the approval of Treasury. A sufficient amount of CCC's borrowing authority is required to be reserved to cover obligations to purchase notes, certificates of interest, or other obligations evidencing loans held by banks and accrued interest thereon, but such obligations, other obligations, contingent liabilities, and commitments do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowing from Treasury. Only that portion of the borrowing authority is available which has neither been so reserved nor charged by actual borrowings.

Note.—This statement excludes contingent liabilities for short-term export credit (guaranteed by CCC).

The Corporation was created to stabilize, support, and protect farm income and prices, help maintain balanced and adequate supplies of agricultural commodities, their products, foods, feeds, and fibers, and help in their orderly distribution (15 U.S.C. 714-714p). It may also make available materials and facilities required in connection with the production and marketing of agricultural commodities. In addition to its basic functions, it is used to administer and, in some cases, temporarily finance numerous special activities.

The Corporation's capital stock of $100 million is held by the United States. Up to $14.5 billion may be borrowed to finance operations.

Budget assumptions.—The following general assumptions form the basis for the Corporation's 1973 and 1974 budget estimates: (a) Employment, production, and national income will rise both in 1973 and 1974 from the present level; (b) generally, exports of agricultural commodities in 1974 will increase over 1973 levels; (c) yields for the 1973 crops are based on recent averages adjusted for trend; (d) acreage allotments and marketing quotas will be in effect for the 1973 crops of peanuts, rice, and certain kinds of tobacco (flue-cured tobacco will be on an acreage-poundage program and Burley tobacco is on a poundage allotment beginning with the 1971 crop); and (e) set-aside programs for cotton, feed grains, and wheat will be in operation.

It is difficult to forecast with accuracy, requirements for the year ending June 30, 1974. Complex and unpredictable factors are involved, such as weather, other factors which affect the volume of production of crops not yet planted, feed and food needs here and overseas, and available dollar exchange.

Support.—The Corporation, through loans, purchases, payments, and other means, provides support of agricultural commodities to producers. This is done mainly under the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act (15 U.S.C. 714 et seq.) and the Agricultural Act of 1970, Public Law 91-524 (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.).

Support is mandatory for the basic commodities—corn, cotton, wheat, rice, peanuts, and tobacco. It also requires support of the following nonbasic commodities: Tung nuts, honey, milk, barley, oats, rye, and grain sorghum. The National Wool Act of 1954, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1781-87), requires support for wool and mohair. Support for other nonbasic commodities is discretionary. The support program may also include operations to remove and dispose of surplus agricultural commodities in order to stabilize prices at levels not in excess of those permissible by law.

The principal methods of providing support are loans to and purchases from producers. With limited exceptions, loans made on commodities are nonrecourse. The commodities serve as collateral for the loan and on maturity the producer may deliver or forfeit such collateral to satisfy his obligation without further payment.

Direct purchases are also made from processors as well as producers, depending on the commodity involved. Also, special purchases for the removal of surpluses are made under certain laws, for example: The act of August 19, 1958, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431 note), and section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431). For feed grains, in addition to loans and purchases, producers receive payments. For upland and extra-long staple cotton, producers receive payments in addition to loans. For wheat, in addition to loans and purchases, producers receive marketing certificates as hereinafter described. In the feed grains, wheat, and cotton programs, the producers must comply with acreage set-aside provisions (hereinafter described), if in effect, in order to be eligible for loans, purchases, payments, and certificates (in the case of wheat). Also, the total amount of payments which a person is entitled to receive under each of these three programs on the 1971, 1972, or 1973 crop of the commodity shall not exceed $55 thousand.

In support operations, normal trade facilities are used to the maximum extent practicable. Cooperatives and financial institutions are used in lending activities.

Commercial facilities are used to a great extent for storage.

Besides the Charter Act and laws mentioned above, many other laws are applicable to the disposition through sales, donations, and barter of commodities acquired under the support program. For accounting purposes, the Corporation credits to the support program proceeds of commodities sold from its stocks, including those disposed of through redemption of domestic and export payment-in-kind certificates and through special activities.

Commodity export.—The Corporation promotes the export of agricultural commodities and products through sales, barter, payments, and other operations. Other than in barter for stockpiling purposes, such commodities and products may be those held in private trade channels as well as those acquired by the Corporation. This program is carried out under the authority contained in the Corporation's charter, particularly section 5 (d) and (f), and in accordance with specific statutes where applicable. Export sales for foreign currencies or on long-term credit are financed by the Corporation under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, although such sales of commodities owned by the Corporation may also be made under its charter authority.

The activities described below are illustrative of those conducted under this program during 1973. With respect to barter, the emphasis is on exports in connection with various types of offshore procurement of materials and services needed by the Department of Defense, the Agency for International Development, and other agencies, for which they pay the Corporation. Commodities available for barter vary from time to time.

When necessary to encourage export movement from free-market supplies, as well as from its own stocks, the Corporation makes payments on exports of agricultural commodities. The rate of payment generally is the difference between the prevailing world export sales price and the domestic market price. Except for old crop tobacco and some carryover from 1973 wheat contracts, it is not anticipated that payments will be required during fiscal year 1974. However, if payments for wheat and rice are needed to make these commodities competitive in the world markets, they will be reinstated.

To help develop or expand foreign markets, the Corporation may furnish farm commodities and products for samples or exhibits at international trade fairs and for use abroad in testing consumer acceptance and commercial market potentials.

To maximize exports of agricultural commodities, including products thereof, the Corporation conducts an export credit sales program under which it finances, for a period of not to exceed 3 years, commercial export credit sales by exporters of agricultural commodities obtained either from Corporation inventories or from private stocks. These commercial transactions are financed under the Corporation's charter authority and section 4 of the Food for Peace Act (7 U.S.C. 1707a) and are to be distinguished from the long-term credit contracts involving foreign assistance authorized by the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended. Section 4 of the Food for Peace Act authorized appropriations to reimburse the Corporation annually for its actual costs incurred or to be incurred under this program. Under its charter authority, the Corporation plans to sell time drafts on the export credit sale receivables in the commercial financial market. These will be contingent liabilities guaranteed by the Corporation.

Storage facilities.—The Corporation conducts a program to provide storage adequate to fulfill its program needs. This program is conducted pursuant to sections 4 (h) and (m), and 5 (a) and (b) of the charter.

The Corporation has authority to buy bins (in storage-short areas) and equipment for the care and storage of commodities owned by the Corporation or under its control. This authority to purchase bins has not been exercised since 1956. The Corporation has now reduced its storage capacity from 990 million bushels in 1957 to 295 million bushels on June 30, 1972. The Corporation makes loans for the purchase, building, or expanding of facilities for storage and care of commodities on the farm and sells, to producers and others, bins needed for the storage of agricultural commodities. Bins sold by the Corporation may be those acquired for resale for such storage or those which are no longer required by the Corporation for the storage of its own commodities. Public Law 89-758 permits the sale of grain storage facilities no longer needed for such program use to public and private nonprofit agencies and organizations. The Corporation may also provide storage use guarantees to encourage building of commercial storage, and undertake other operations necessary to provide storage adequate to carry out the Corporation's programs.

Section 805 of the Agricultural Act of 1970 authorized the Secretary to make or guarantee loans for construction of farm storage facilities for baled hay from diverted or set-aside acreage. This program will be conducted through the ASCS county committees and be financed with capital funds of the Corporation.

Supply and foreign purchase.—The Corporation procures from domestic and foreign sources food, agricultural commodities, and products and related materials to supply the needs of Federal agencies, foreign governments, and private and international relief agencies. It similarly procures or aids in the procurement of such foods, commodities, products, and material for sale to meet domestic requirements during periods of short supply or during such other times as will stabilize prices or facilitate distribution. Through purchases, loans, sales, or other means the Corporation may also make available materials and facilities needed for the production and marketing of agricultural commodities. This program is conducted under section 5 (b) and (c) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act.

Purchases for other Federal agencies of commodities not in the Corporation's support stocks has been the main activity. Purchases of limited quantities of breeder, foundation, and registered seeds of improved varieties of grasses and legumes are made through production contracts in order to assure supplies thereof for farmers. No foreign purchases have been made in recent years.

Section 4 of the act of July 16, 1943 (15 U.S.C. 713a-9), requires that the Corporation be fully repaid from funds of such agencies for services performed, losses sustained, operating costs incurred, or commodities bought or delivered to or on behalf of any other Federal agency. Operations not subject to section 4 may involve losses if such are necessary to the accomplishment of the objectives of the particular operation.

Wheat certificate program.—The Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended by the Agricultural Act of 1970, authorizes a wheat certificate program for the 1971, 1972, and 1973 crops to be conducted by the Secretary through the Corporation. Domestic marketing certificates are to be issued to participating farmers which may be sold at face value to the Corporation. Processors of wheat are required to buy domestic certificates equivalent to the number of bushels of wheat used in the manufacture of food products. The Corporation is to sell certificates at a cost of 75 cents per bushel. While existing law provides for the acquisition of export marketing certificates by wheat exporters, the Agricultural Act of 1970 authorizes the Secretary to suspend this requirement for the period July 1, 1971, through June 30, 1974. The requirement has been suspended under this provision by law.

Set-aside program.—The Agricultural Act of 1970 authorizes the Secretary to conduct through the Corporation, set-aside programs on the 1971, 1972, and 1973 crops of wheat, feed grains, and upland cotton if he determines that otherwise the total supply of agricultural commodities will likely be excessive. If a set-aside is in effect for any such commodity, producers must, as a condition of eligibility for loans, purchases, payments, and certificates (in the case of wheat) on such commodity, set aside and devote to approved conservation uses specified acreages of cropland and otherwise comply with program requirements. Participants in the 1973 set-aside program are eligible for a small additional payment for permitting public access to set-aside acreage.

Land diversion payments.—To assist in adjusting the acreage of commodities to desirable goals, the Secretary is authorized by the Agricultural Act of 1970 to make land diversion payments, through the Corporation, to producers who devote to approved conservation uses acreages of cropland in addition to those required to be so devoted under the set-aside programs.

Cotton research and promotion.—Under section 610 of the Agricultural Act of 1970, the Corporation, through the Cotton Board, and upon approval of the Secretary, is authorized to enter into agreements for cotton market development, research, and sales promotion programs, programs to aid in the development of new and additional markets, marketing facilities, and uses for cotton and cotton products, and programs to facilitate the utilization and commercial application of cotton research findings. Each year the amount available for such programs shall be the sum of amounts, not exceeding $10 million, which are not paid to cotton producers because of statutory payment limitations. For each of the 1972 and 1973 crops, an additional amount, not exceeding $10 million may be used by the Secretary for such programs from funds available for payments on 1972 and 1973 crop cotton.

Administrative expenses.—Administrative expenses are for the services of: The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, the Agricultural Marketing Service, the Export Marketing Service and other agencies of the Department engaged in the Corporation's activities; the General Accounting Office for audit; and the General Services Administration for space. Estimates for 1974 include a limitation of $41.8 million on administrative expenses, including a reserve of not less than 7% for contingencies.

The requested authorization excludes administrative expenses in connection with the wool and mohair program under the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended, which are included with the cost of this program under special activities.

Nonadministrative expenses.—Expenses for acquisition, operation, maintenance, improvement, or disposition of property which the Corporation owns or in which it has an interest have been treated as program rather than administrative expenses. Such expenses include inspection, classing, and grading work performed on a fee basis by Federal employees or Federal- or State-licensed inspectors; work performed on a contract or fee basis by Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation county committees relating to CCC programs; and special services performed by other Federal agencies outside of this Department.

Most of these general nonadministrative expenses, including storage and handling, transportation, inspection, classing, and grading and resale payments are included in program costs, in the entry entitled "Storage, transportation, and other costs not included above", in the program and financing schedule. The item "Nonadministrative expense", which appears in the schedule, covers part of the expenses of county offices for work related to programs of the Corporation, other Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service expenses offset by revenue, custodian and agency expense of the Federal Reserve banks and lending agencies, and miscellaneous costs.

ASCS is planning the acquisition and installation of an advanced computer system containing a centralized data base of farm producer and ASCS farm program information, with on-line terminals in Washington and field offices. The equipment and software required for this new system will represent capital investment under the statutory authority of the Commodity Credit Corporation. It is contemplated that equipment will be delivered in fiscal year 1975. If ASCS leases the computer, rather than purchasing it, the additional cost would be shown in "Limitation on Administrative Expenses, CCC".

The Corporation receives reimbursements for grain requisitioned pursuant to Public Law 87-152 (7 U.S.C. 447-449) by the States from Corporation stocks to feed resident wildlife threatened with starvation, through the appropriation Reimbursement for net realized losses. The Corporation also obtains recovery through this appropriation for the funds transferred to the Agricultural Research Service pursuant to the Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act of 1964, for cost of production research and other related research designed to reduce surplus commodities held by the Corporation.

These activities are carried out under authority of section 5(g) of the Corporation's Charter Act and specific statutory authorizations or directives with respect thereto which are currently in effect or which may subsequently be enacted.

¹ Financial data included under respective appropriation item.

The Corporation receives appropriations or reimbursement for cost of these activities as described under each.

To the extent that sufficient appropriations are not provided in advance, expenditures under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended and investments in materials transferred to the supplemental stockpile, are made by the Corporation subject to reimbursement from subsequent appropriations authorized for such purpose.

Activities currently being carried out are as follows (see foreign assistance programs and special export program for details of items (1)–(4)):

(1) Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I, Public Law 480).

(2) Sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms (title I, Public Law 480).

(3) Commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad (title II, Public Law 480).

(4) Bartered materials for supplemental stockpile.

(5) Military housing (barter and exchange).—During 1957, a contract was completed for the disposition of Corporation-owned commodities valued at $50 million for the construction of military housing in France with foreign currencies obtained from this transaction. 10 U.S.C. 2681(b) as amended, provides for annual payment to the Corporation by the Department of Defense until liquidation of the amounts due for foreign currencies obtained under Public Law 480 for military housing. It is estimated that $2 million will be applied against the amounts due under the French housing transaction in each year. Beginning in 1967, the Treasury Department has classified this as a nonexpenditure transaction.

(6) National Wool Act.—Under the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended by the Agricultural Act of 1970, support of prices of wool and mohair is mandatory. The Corporation makes payments to producers in order to bring the national average price received by all producers up to the support price required under the act.

(7) Grain for migratory waterfowl feed.—To prevent damage of crops by migratory waterfowl, the Corporation is directed to furnish to the Secretary of the Interior (7 U.S.C. 442–445) such grain acquired through support operations and certified by the Corporation as available for such purposes or in such condition as to be undesirable for human consumption, as the Secretary of the Interior shall requisition. This appropriation item is included under that Department to reimburse CCC.

(8) Surplus grain for migratory birds.—Under Public Law 87–152, approved August 17, 1961 (7 U.S.C. 448) the Secretary of the Interior may requisition grain of the Corporation to feed starving migratory birds. This appropriation item is included under that Department to reimburse CCC.

(9) Grading and classing activities.—The Corporation may make advances to the Agricultural Marketing Service for classing and grading of agricultural commodities without charge to producers (7 U.S.C. 414a, 440). Such advances used for classing cotton and grading tobacco not placed under support loan are repaid from an appropriation of the Service.

(10) Research to increase domestic consumption of farm commodities.—The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act of 1964 authorized the transfer of not more than $16 million from the appropriation. Removal of surplus agricultural commodities (sec. 32), to the Corporation to be used to increase domestic consumption of surplus farm commodities, and provided for the transfer for such purposes thereafter of such sums not in excess of $25 million in any 1 year, as may be approved by Congress. The 1965 appropriation act authorized the transfer of $12,175 thousand of section 32 funds for this purpose. The Corporation transfers such funds to the Agricultural Research Service and Cooperative State Research Service to conduct the required research.

(11) Defense activities.—Upon the declaration of a national emergency, the facilities, services, authorities, and funds of the Corporation may be used, as directed by the Secretary and in accordance with applicable provisions of law, to carry out responsibilities and functions assigned to the Secretary under the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, the Civil Defense Act, as amended, and such other defense legislation as may be enacted.

(12) Transfer of long-staple cotton from national stockpile for sale by Commodity Credit Corporation.—The act of July 10, 1957 (71 Stat. 290), authorized the transfer of 50,000 bales of domestically grown cotton from the national stockpile to the Corporation for sale. Also, about 219,000 bales of cotton, both American-Egyptian and foreign grown, in the stockpile were made available to the Corporation for disposition under Public Law 87–548, approved July 25, 1962. The cotton is not recorded as a Corporation asset. Proceeds less costs incurred, including administrative expenses, are covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts from time to time. No interest is paid by the Corporation for the use of the money prior to covering. This program was closed out in 1971.

(13) Loans for rural environmental assistance.—Under section 391(c) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1391(c)), the Corporation advances funds to the Secretary in amounts not to exceed $50 million annually to purchase conservation materials and services. Repayments of the loans plus interest are made from balances of prior appropriations or from new funds appropriated for the rural environmental assistance program.

(14) Use of CCC facilities for ASCS programs.—Under the respective enabling legislation, the services, facilities, and authorities of the Corporation are used to make payments to producers under various programs administered by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Among these programs are conservation reserve, cropland conversion, rural environmental assistance, cropland adjustment, Appalachia regional conservation, emergency conservation measures, the Sugar Act program and the Water Bank Act program.

(15) Purchases of dairy products under sec. 709 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965.—The Corporation, on behalf of the Secretary, purchases at market prices dairy products which are donated to meet the requirements for schools, domestic relief distribution, community action programs, and other programs as are authorized by law, when there are insufficient stocks of such products in the hands of the Corporation available for such purposes. This program is conducted under sec. 5(g) of the Corporation's Charter Act and sec. 709 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965. Costs incurred for this activity are included in the Corporation's net realized loss for which it is reimbursed annually by appropriation pursuant to Public Law 87–155.

(16) Loan for animal disease eradication.—Public Law 92–73, approved August 10, 1971, authorizes the Secretary to transfer from funds of agencies or corporations of the Department such sums as he deems necessary to be available in emergencies which threaten the livestock or poultry industries, for the arrest and eradication of contagious or infectious diseases of animals or poultry and for expenses in accordance with the act of February 28, 1947, as amended. During fiscal year 1972, $12.5 million for exotic Newcastle disease was transferred from Commodity Credit Corporation funds. In 1973, an additional $28.0 million for exotic Newcastle disease, and $5.7 million for hog cholera emergency operations are estimated to be transferred, with reimbursement in 1974, from funds appropriated to the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

FINANCING

Borrowing authority.—The Corporation has an authorized capital stock of $100 million held by the United States and authority to borrow up to $14.5 billion.

Funds are borrowed from Treasury and may also be borrowed from private lending agencies and others. The Corporation reserves a sufficient amount of its borrowing authority to purchase at any time all notes and other obligations evidencing loans made or held by lending agencies or other financial institutions or certificates of interest issued in connection with the financing of its operations. All bonds, notes, debentures, and similar obligations issued by the Corporation are subject to approval by the Secretary of the Treasury as required by the act of March 8, 1938 (15 U.S.C. 713a–4).

Interest on borrowings from the Treasury (and on capital stock) is paid at a rate based upon the average interest rate of all outstanding marketable obligations (of comparable maturity date) of the United States as of the preceding month. Interest is also paid on certificates of interest and lending agency obligations for the period the agencies have their funds invested.

The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1966, made provision for terminating interest after June 30, 1964, on the portion of the Corporation's borrowings from the Treasury equal to the unreimbursed realized losses recorded on the books of the Corporation after June 30 of the fiscal year in which such losses are realized.

The computation of the transfer from interest-bearing to non-interest-bearing capital is (in thousands of dollars):

Item	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Realized deficit not previously reimbursed, start of year	8,271,283	7,515,361	7,940,241
Less appropriations for year	4,213,331	4,057,952	3,457,409
Total non-interest-bearing, end of year	4,057,952	3,457,409	4,482,832

On the basis of the budgetary assumptions, the estimated requirements indicate no need for an increase in borrowing authority. Since there are so many uncontrollable factors involving crops which have not even been planted, it must be recognized that estimates are highly tentative.

POSITION WITH RESPECT TO BORROWING AUTHORITY AS OF JUNE 30

[In thousands of dollars]

Item	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Statutory borrowing authority	14,500,000	14,500,000	14,500,000
Deduct:
Borrowings from Treasury	11,501,010	10,809,548	10,067,191
Contingent liabilities for short-term export credits (guaranteed by Commodity Credit Corporation)		300,535	968,249
Accrued interest on above contingent liabilities		9,767	62,936
Total statutory borrowing authority in use	11,501,010	11,119,850	11,098,376
Net statutory borrowing authority available	2,998,990	3,380,150	3,401,624

Note.—A sufficient amount of the borrowing authority is required to be reserved to cover obligations to purchase notes and certificates of interest held by financial institutions and accrued interest thereon. Such obligations, however, as well as accounts payable, accrued liabilities and other outstanding obligations not reflected on this table, do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowings from the Treasury.

Contract authority.—Support and other programs required by statute may result in the Corporation incurring obligations in excess of available funds and borrowing authority. Such obligations are liquidated from subsequent appropriations and other funds which may become available to the Corporation. Any increase in obligations in excess of available fund resources is reported as contract authority in the year involved; a decrease is reported as the application of appropriations and other funds to liquidate the authority. The budget reflects a net increase of $317 million in 1972, a decrease of $790 million in 1973, and none in 1974.

Appropriations.—Under section 2 of Public Law 87-155 (15 U.S.C. 713a-11), annual appropriations are authorized for each fiscal year to reimburse the Corporation for net realized losses incurred as of the close of each year.

The realized losses for 1972 subject to reimbursement were $3,457 million, and the cumulative losses not yet appropriated for were $7,515 million. An appropriation of $3,457 million would provide sufficient funds for the operations described for 1974. It would also leave a desirable operating margin to assure flexibility of operations in view of the volume of transactions handled.

The special activities are financed as indicated in the program description above. In addition to certain reimbursements from other agencies, appropriations are made for the National Wool Act (see above) and for foreign assistance and special export programs (see that heading on p. 141).

Deficit.—The net realized losses of the Corporation have previously been reimbursed as follows (in thousands of dollars):

¹ The change in this item is reflected on the program and financing schedule.

Such obligations, however, as well as accounts payable, accrued liabilities, and other outstanding obligations not reflected on this table, do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowings from the Treasury.

NOTES

In addition to obligations other than liabilities, the Corporation does not reflect in its accounts claims by the Corporation on which adequate proof has not been established.
This statement excludes contingent liabilities for short-term export credits guaranteed by the Commodity Credit Corporation in principal amounts at June 30, 1973, $300,535 thousand; 1974, $968,249 thousand.

The Administration conducts two capital investment programs: (a) The rural electrification program to provide electric service to farms and other rural establishments; and (b) the rural telephone program to furnish and improve telephone service in rural areas.

1. Rural electrification.—This capital investment program is financed through direct loans which are made for the construction and operation of generating plants, electric transmission and distribution lines on systems in rural areas. The loans must be repaid within a period not to exceed 35 years.

Loans are also made for shorter periods of time to electrification borrowers to be reloaned to their consumers for the purpose of financing the wiring of premises and the acquisition and installation of electrical and plumbing appliances and equipment.

Direct loans from funds borrowed from the Secretary of the Treasury are being discontinued in favor of guaranteed and insured loans on January 1, 1973. The financing for these loans will be provided in the Rural Development Insurance Fund which is reflected in the budget for the Farmers Home Administration. This program change permits considerably higher loan levels than would otherwise be possible since private lenders will be providing the credit thereby substantially reducing the outlay impact.

The 1974 budget request reflects the availability of supplemental financing from the National Rural Utilities Cooperative Finance Corporation and other sources in fiscal years 1973 and 1974 to satisfy a part of the capital requirements of the rural electric systems.

The Rural Electrification Administration makes loans for the extension and improvement of electric and telephone service in rural areas. Most electric loans are made concurrently with supplemental financing provided by the National Rural Utilities Cooperative Finance Corporation (CFC) or other supplemental sources. Telephone loans are made by the REA or by the Rural Telephone Bank, established by Public Law 92-12. In some cases, concurrent loans will be made by the REA and by the telephone bank. The rural telephone bank partially or jointly utilizes the facilities and services of employees of the REA without cost to the bank. Concurrent loans in both programs, and the development of the rural telephone bank, has required the development and implementation of extensive new procedures for loan approval and advance of funds.

Assistance is provided to electrification borrowers and potential borrowers to negotiate for adequate supplies of power on reasonable terms. Business management and technical help is furnished borrowers where needed to protect the Government's loan security, to assure that construction and operation of their systems conform to approved standards, and that the systems will provide continuous and reliable service and facilitate the most effective use of resources to achieve program objectives.

Public Law 92-12, approved May 7, 1971, amended the Rural Electrification Act, as amended, by providing for the establishment of a Rural Telephone Bank as a supplemental source of financing for the REA telephone loan program. Public Law 92-324, approved June 30, 1972, further amended the act to permit the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase the bank's debentures.

Capital for the Rural Telephone Bank is obtained through the sale of its stock to the U.S. Government and to borrowers of loan funds, and the sale of debentures to the Secretary of the Treasury, limited to eight times the paid-in capital and retained earnings of the bank. The legislation establishing the bank authorizes U.S. stock purchases totaling $300 million, with up to $30 million to be appropriated annually from net collection proceeds in the rural telephone account. This will require an appropriation of $30 million in 1974. It is estimated that an additional $7.7 million in capital will be obtained through the sale of stock to borrowers and retained earnings. Borrowings by the bank during the year are estimated at $30 million in 1973 and $90 million in 1974.

Bank loans bear interest rates at the highest rate consistent with the borrowers' ability to pay, but not less than 4%. Some borrowers receive concurrent loans from REA and from the telephone bank. Bank loans supplement the REA telephone loan program and enable borrowers to provide adequate and dependable telephone service to rural residents at a faster pace. It is estimated that the bank will make loans totaling $126 million in 1973 and $150 million in 1974.

Although the bank may partially or jointly use the personnel and facilities of REA and other agencies of the Department without cost to the bank until conversion to borrower control, there are certain operating costs which must be borne by the bank. The compensation and expenses of the eight members of the bank board who are not Federal employees or officers, and of officers and employees engaged solely on telephone bank activities and procurement for the bank, must be paid by the bank. In addition, the authorizing legislation specifies that the bank shall at no time be entitled to transmission of its mail free of postage.

Rural water and waste disposal grants.—This program is authorized by subtitle A of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act. It provides for planning grants to be made to public and private bodies with authority to prepare comprehensive plans for the development of water or waste disposal systems in rural areas which do not have funds available for such planning. In addition, development grants are made to associations, including nonprofit corporations, public and quasi-public agencies, and certain Indian tribes to finance specific projects for the development, storage, treatment, purification, or distribution of water or the collection, treatment, or disposal of waste in rural areas. The amount of the grant may not exceed 50% of the development cost of the project.

Development grants to associations may be made in connection with insured loans for water and waste disposal systems described under the Rural development insurance fund.

This program was among those selected for termination, reduction, or reform after a review of Federal programs to identify those that were of relatively low priority. As a result of this review, and as a result of new authorities provided in the clean water bill, this program is being terminated effective January 1, 1973. Applications which had been certified for approval by this date will be processed for approval and disbursement.

Rural housing for domestic farm labor.—Financial assistance in the form of grants is provided to public or private nonprofit organizations, or other eligible organizations for low-rent housing and related facilities for domestic farm labor, as authorized by the Housing Act of 1964.

Assistance not to exceed 90% of the total development cost may be provided for new structures (including basic household furnishings) and sites, and for rehabilitation, alteration, conversion or improvement of dwellings, dining halls, community rooms or buildings, and infirmaries used by domestic farm laborers. Such financial assistance may be made in connection with insured farm labor housing loans under the Rural housing insurance fund. No new obligations will be incurred under this grant program after January 8, 1973, pending completion of a thorough evaluation of federally subsidized housing programs. This evaluation will focus on whether the programs: (1) are the most effective mechanisms available for providing housing assistance to low income families; (2) are providing excessive benefits to others than the intended beneficiaries; (3) represent a proper Federal role. Applications which had been certified for approval by this date will be processed for approval and disbursement.

Mutual and self-help housing.—This assistance was authorized by section 1005 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 (Public Law 90-448). These grants are especially designed to aid the development of comprehensive plans to permit an expansion of mutual and self-help housing programs under which groups of families build their own homes by mutually exchanging labor. In 1972, a total of nine grants were made for $1,617,910. It is estimated that 25 grants totaling $3,729 thousand will be made to nonprofit organizations in 1973 and that 25 grants totaling $3,832 thousand will be made in 1974. These organizations will provide technical staffs to assist approximately 3,000 low-income families in 1973 and in 1974 to build their homes by the self-help method.

This fund was established in 1965 (Public Law 89-117) pursuant to section 517 of title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended. Initial capitalization of the fund at $100 million was provided by the Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1966.

Public Law 91-152, approved December 24, 1969, provided that the rural housing direct loan account be abolished and that the assets and liabilities of, and authorizations applicable to, the direct loan account be transferred to this fund.

This fund is used to insure rural housing loans, farm labor housing loans, rural housing site loans, and loans for rural rental and cooperative housing. Loans are made to persons of low or moderate incomes if their need for necessary housing cannot be met with financial assistance from other sources, including assistance available under sections 235 or 236 of the National Housing Act. The insured loans made by the Farmers Home Administration in fiscal year 1973 will bear interest at 7¼% with provision for interest credits up to 6¼% under certain circumstances, except that insured farm labor housing loans will bear interest at the rate of 1%. Insured rural housing disaster loans bear interest at 1%, 3%, or at a rate determined monthly not in excess of 6%, depending on when the disaster occurred.

The 1973 Appropriation Act provided for making direct loans from funds available in this fund. These direct loans are limited to very low income housing repair loans. Repair and improvement loans not in excess of $2,500 are made to very-low-income families who are owners of farms or nonfarm rural property to repair or improve their dwellings and essential farm buildings in order to make them safe and sanitary and to remove health hazards to the families or the community. Loans which involve water supply, septic tanks, or bathroom and kitchen plumbing facilities may be made in amounts not in excess of $3,500. These loans are made at 1% interest and are repayable in not more than 10 years.

Insured building loans are made to farmowners, owners of other real estate in rural areas, others who are or will become rural residents, and long-term leaseholders. Loans are repayable in not more than 33 years. Loans are made to enable eligible applicants to construct, improve, alter, repair, or replace dwellings and essential farm service buildings, and may include funds to buy a house, building site, and farm service buildings. Loans are limited to rural areas which include towns, villages, or other rural places of not more than 10,000 population, which are not part of an urban area.

Insured rural housing disaster loans are made in designated areas to provide for repair or replacement of farm or rural dwellings, farm service buildings and related facilities damaged by a natural disaster. Public Law 91-606 authorized loans in areas where the President has declared a major disaster, with special provisions for refinancing real estate debts under restricted conditions, for cancellation of a portion of principal up to $2,500, and for deferment of interest and principal payments up to 3 years. Public Law 92-385, approved August 16, 1972, authorized special conditions for loans made in connection with disasters occurring between June 30, 1971, and July 1, 1973. Such loans may bear a lower interest rate, be eligible for deferred payments, and for cancellation of principal up to $5 thousand under certain circumstances. Such principal cancellations totaled $4 million in fiscal year 1972 and are estimated at $15 million in 1973.

No new loan obligations will be incurred under the low-income housing, rural rental housing, and farm labor housing loan programs after January 8, 1973, pending completion of a thorough evaluation of federally subsidized housing programs. This evaluation will focus on whether the programs: (1) are the most effective mechanisms available for providing housing assistance to low-income families; (2) are providing excessive benefits to other than the intended beneficiaries; (3) represent a proper Federal role. Applications which had been certified for approval by this date will be processed for approval and disbursement.

This fund is used to insure farm ownership, recreation, soil and water, farm operating, and emergency loans to individuals, as well as the following types of loans to associations: Irrigation and drainage, grazing, recreation, Indian land acquisition, watershed protection, flood prevention, and resource conservation and development. The insurance endorsement on each insured loan may include an agreement by the Government to purchase the loan after a specified initial period. The initial fund of $1 million may be supplemented by amounts retained by the Government out of interest collected from insured loan borrowers and by borrowing from the Secretary of the Treasury. From any amounts so retained, not to exceed one-half of 1% of the outstanding principal obligations must be deposited to the fund. Any remainder of such charges may be used for administrative expenses.

Loans may be made directly from the fund from available receipts or borrowings from the Treasury for the purpose of acquiring blocks of loans if there is a reasonable assurance that the loans can be sold to investors without undue delay. With respect to all new loans made from this fund, with the exception of emergency loans, not more than $500 million may be held in the fund at any one time. Present money market interest rates are in excess of the statutory rate paid by most borrowers. The excess interest paid to private investors to make the loans salable is paid from Treasury borrowings.

Public Law 92-419, approved August 30, 1972, abolished the Farmers Home Administration Direct loan account and the Emergency credit revolving fund and provided for transfer of the assets and liabilities of, and authorizations applicable to, these accounts to the Agricultural credit insurance fund. It also provided for transfer from the Agricultural credit insurance fund to the newly constituted Rural development insurance fund of the assets and liabilities of the Agricultural credit insurance fund applicable to loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities. Such transfers were accomplished as of September 30, 1972.

The following loans are financed through this fund.

Loans to individuals.—1. Farm ownership loans are made to farmers and ranchers, at a 5% interest rate for 40 years or less, for acquiring, enlarging, or improving farms, including dwellings and farm buildings; for financing land and water development, use and conservation; for developing recreational and other nonfarm enterprises; for forestry development; for refinancing indebtedness; and for loan closing costs. Loans are confined to farms which are not larger than family farms and cannot exceed the market value of the farm or $100 thousand, whichever is the lesser. The loan limitation includes the unpaid indebtedness against the farm or other security. The Farmers Home Administration has broadened its farm ownership loan policies so that private or cooperative lenders and the agency can make loans to the same borrowers on the same security.

2. Recreation loans are made to individual farmers and ranchers, at a 5% interest rate for 40 years or less, for converting all or a portion of the farms or ranches they own or operate to outdoor income-producing recreational enterprises which will supplement or supplant farm income and permit carrying on sound and successful operations. These loans may be made on farms which are larger than family farms and may include funds for operating purposes.

4. Farm operating loans are authorized to be made to farmers and ranchers for costs incident to reorganizing a farming system for more profitable operations; for a variety of essential farm expenses such as the purchase of livestock, farm equipment, feed, seed, fertilizer, and farm supplies, and other essential operating expenses, including cash rent, and costs incident to the production and harvesting of forestry products; for financing land and water development, use, and conservation; for developing recreational and other nonfarm enterprises; for other farm and home needs; for refinancing indebtedness; for complying with certain safety standards; for operation of farming enterprises by rural youths in connection with their participation in 4-H Clubs, Future Farmers of America and similar organizations; and for loan closing costs. Loans for farming operations are confined to operators of not-larger-than family farms. The outstanding principal loan balance for operating loans to any individual is limited to $50 thousand. Loans bear interest at a rate based on the average rate paid by the U.S. Treasury on obligations with a similar maturity period. The rate for fiscal year 1973 is 5%. Loans may be scheduled for payment over periods from 1 to 7 years depending on loan purposes. In some situations, they may be renewed for not more than 5 additional years. Loans are secured by crop and chattel liens and, when necessary, by real estate mortgages. Other reliable agricultural credit sources are encouraged to furnish as much as possible of the essential needs of loan applicants with the balance being supplied with an operating loan from the Farmers Home Administration.

5. Emergency loans are made in designated areas where a natural disaster has caused a general need for agricultural credit. The former statutory emergency loan requirement of inability to obtain credit elsewhere was suspended by Public Law 91-606, approved December 31, 1970, for loans made before the end of the first full operating year following the disaster. Thereafter, however, applicants must be unable to obtain credit elsewhere in order to qualify for additional emergency loans based on the same disaster. Emergency loans are made to eligible established farmers, ranchers, or oyster planters, and to private domestic corporations or partnerships engaged primarily in farming, ranching, or oyster planting. Emergency loans are made primarily for financing farm operating needs, family living expenses, and a number of closely related purposes. Loans bear interest at 1%, 3%, or at a rate determined monthly not in excess of 6% depending on when the disaster occurred. Loans are repayable over periods not longer than regular loans made by the Farmers Home Administration for similar purposes.

Public Law 91-606 authorized loans in areas where the President has declared a major disaster, with special provisions for refinancing real estate debts under restricted conditions, for cancellation of a portion of principal up to $2,500, and for deferment of interest and principal payments up to 3 years on loans for other than operating expenses. Under Public Law 92-173, approved November 24, 1971, emergency loans are authorized to be insured on the same basis as insured farm ownership loans.

Public Law 92-385, approved August 16, 1972, authorized special conditions for emergency loans made in connection with disasters occurring between June 30, 1971, and July 1, 1973. Such loans may bear a lower interest rate, be eligible for deferment of payments, and for cancellation of principal up to $5 thousand under certain circumstances.

The low-interest rate and forgiveness features of the legislation were originally proposed by the Administration to assist persons who suffered losses in major Presidentially declared disaster areas such as the Hurricane Agnes area. The act was subsequently broadened by congressional action to include areas designated by the Secretary as emergency areas because of adverse weather conditions affecting agricultural crops (drought, hail, excessive rain, etc.), and to eliminate the requirement that applicants must be unable to obtain credit elsewhere. Owing to the broadened scope of the legislation, an unprecedented number of emergency loan applications have been received from secretarily declared areas, producing a result totally inconsistent with the intent of the original proposal. Principal cancellations totaled $7.4 million in 1972 under the previous more restrictive Public Law 91-606. In comparison, cancellations are expected to reach $245 million in 1973 under the provisions of the current law.

Effective December 27, 1972, new procedures were initiated governing the acceptance of applications in designated disaster areas. Applications will be accepted in secretarily declared areas through December 27, 1972, or to a date 60 days after designation, whichever is later. Applications will be accepted in Presidentially declared areas through January 15 or to a date 60 days after designation, whichever is later.

Loans to associations.—1. Irrigation and drainage association loans are made to an organization primarily composed of farmers, ranchers, certain Indian tribes, and other rural residents for a project which includes the application or establishment of soil conservation practices, the construction, improvement, or enlargement of facilities for drainage, or the conservation, development, use, or control of water, primarily serving farmers and other rural residents. Membership in an association permits a farmer or rancher to graze his livestock on association pasture for the grazing season and return them to his base unit for the balance of the year. Such a plan provides a farmer or rancher an opportunity to increase the size of his operations. These loans are made at 5% interest rate for 40 years or less.

6. Resource conservation and development loans are made to sponsors of projects approved for operation by the Soil Conservation Service. Loans are made to local organizations and individuals for planned conservation measures and works of improvement specified in approved workplans. These loans are repayable in not more than 30 years, with repayment of principal and interest deferred up to 5 years, if necessary. Loans bear interest at a rate based on the average rate paid by the U.S. Treasury on obligations of similar maturity. The rate for the 1973 fiscal year is 3.649%.

This fund was established on October 1, 1972, pursuant to section 309A of the Rural Development Act of 1972 (Public Law 92-419, approved Aug. 30, 1972).

The assets and liabilities of the Agricultural credit insurance fund applicable to loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities were transferred to the Rural development insurance fund. Loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities are now made from this fund under authorities of the Rural Development Act. No waste disposal facility loans will be made in fiscal year 1974 since new authorities contained in the Clean Water Act will provide credit for this purpose.

A number of new types of loans for community facilities and for private business enterprises in rural areas are authorized to be made from the Rural development insurance fund, including rural electrification and telephone loans. (See narrative statement for Rural Electrification Administration.) The fund also may be utilized to pay costs of administration of the rural development loan program, including costs incidental to guaranteeing rural development loans. It is anticipated that State and local units of government will assume a major role in the administration of these programs.

This program has been administered by the Farmers Home Administration of the Department of Agriculture through delegation of authority. Under the program, loans were provided to low-income rural residents for small-farm and nonfarm enterprises to help to increase income. Loans were also made to rural cooperative enterprises serving the rural poor through purchasing, processing, and marketing activities.

Evaluations of the program have shown that these small loans have not been effective in improving the income potentials of the rural poor. No new loans have been made since mid-1971 under this program. In the Farmers Home Administration request for "Salaries and expenses" for 1974, $2.5 million is included to cover the administrative costs associated with this loan fund.

Combinations of needed soil and water conservation practices are planned together and in relation to each other so as to have well balanced conservation programs in each district. The Service aids land users, groups, units of government and other policy and decisionmakers marshal the facts and consider the potentials and alternatives before embarking on a course of action. Both vegetative and structural measures are used in accordance with the needs of the land for protection, treatment, and resource improvement. Plans reflect the decisions of the land users, community groups, and units of government as to how they will use and treat the land and water resources.

Technicians of the Soil Conservation Service explain the various soil conditions, develop alternative uses and treatments, help to evaluate the costs and returns of conservation work, and furnish assistance in applying the needed treatments.

The technical services provided through conservation operations are instrumental in encouraging farmers, ranchers, and others to establish conservation practices. For each dollar used to provide technical assistance, the individual landowner or user invests over two dollars in conservation work.

The national land inventory and monitoring program will provide soil, water, and related resource data for land conservation, use, and development, for guidance of community development to achieve a balanced rural-urban growth, for identification of prime agriculture producing areas that should be protected, for evaluating land use changes and trends, and for use in protecting the quality of the environment. A land resource inventory report reflecting soil, water, and related resource conditions, issued at not less than 5-year intervals, will provide essential planning data for individual land users and community, county, regional, State, and national units and agencies of government.

² In addition, there have been 24 interim reports completed in the Colorado River, Oregon River, Sevier River, Florida Rivers, and Central Lahontan studies.

³ Includes review studies of Cape Fear, Yazoo-Mississippi, and Tombigbee River Basin.

⁴ Includes the Hawaiian water resources regional study initiated with transfer funds ($50 thousand) from Corps of Engineers through Water Resources Council. For years beyond 1973 it is included in this appropriation.

River Basin Program Development and Coordination.—Section 6 of Public Law 566, 83d Congress, as amended, authorizes the Department to cooperate with other Federal, State, and local agencies in making surveys and investigations of the watersheds of rivers and other waterways as a basis for the development of coordinated water and related land resource programs. The Department currently is participating in cooperative surveys and investigations in river basins with the Corps of Engineers and other interested Federal and State agencies. The Department also maintains representation on seven river basin commissions and three river basin interagency committees. These serve as points of contact in coordination between representatives of this Department and other Federal departments and agencies and the States in these basin areas. They keep all concerned mutually informed of the activities of the member agencies and facilitate matters of interagency coordination. During 1972, the Department maintained such representation on committees in the Arkansas-White-Red, Missouri, Pacific-Southwest, and Southeast areas. The MBIAC was dissolved when the MRBC was formed during 1972. The Department is also represented on the Water Resources Council which was formed in accordance with section 101, Public Law 89-80, Water Resources Planning Act, to coordinate water and related land resource activities of Federal departments and agencies.

The Senate Select Committee on National Water Resources proposed a goal of surveying all of the Nation's river basins and making determinations of our future water and related land resource needs. Twenty-one planning regions were established nationwide. The Department of Agriculture has cooperated in framework level planning in 14 of these regions. This Department and other member departments of the Water Resources Council have jointly considered needs for additional river basin surveys and investigations necessary to attain the goal.

Based on this joint coordination, current needs are $893 thousand to continue interagency comprehensive surveys now in progress and to initiate two proposed new studies during 1974; $8,864 thousand to continue other Federal-State cooperative river basin surveys now in progress and to start nine additional surveys in cooperation with States; $200 thousand for interregional economic analysis; $850 thousand for flood hazard analyses; and $1,700 thousand for interagency coordination and program formulation.

Small watershed project investigations and planning.—The Department makes surveys of proposed small watershed projects, and work plans are prepared in cooperation with local sponsors. These plans outline the soil and water management problems in the watershed, the steps that have been or are authorized to be taken to alleviate these problems, the proposed works of improvement to be installed, the estimated benefits and costs, cost-sharing and operation and maintenance arrangements, and other facts necessary to justify Federal participation in project development.

Small watersheds.—The Department cooperates with the States and other agencies in installing works of improvement in small watersheds to reduce damage from floodwater, sediment, and erosion and for the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water. It provides loans to local organizations to help them finance their share of the costs of certain works of improvement.

1. Watershed works of improvement.—The Department provides technical and financial assistance to local organizations to install the watershed works of improvement for watershed protection, flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife development features specified in the work plans.

(a) Pilot demonstration watersheds.—Sixty-two pilot watersheds were started in 1954 in cooperation with local sponsors under authority of the act of April 27, 1935 (16 U.S.C. 590a-f) to demonstrate and evaluate the effectiveness of works of improvement installed in small watersheds for watershed protection and flood prevention. As of June 30, 1972, work had been discontinued in eight projects and completed as planned in 54. The following table shows the total cost for the completed pilot watershed projects:

¹ Includes $1,264,860 for project evaluation studies charged to project costs prior to 1960.

(b) Public Law 566 watersheds.—After local sponsoring organizations have developed watershed work plans with the Department's assistance or with State and local resources, and the projects have been approved as suitable for Federal participation (projects involving an estimated Federal contribution in excess of 2,500 acre-feet require congressional approval), technical services and financial assistance are provided for specified works of improvement. On non-Federal lands, local sponsoring organizations may contract for construction work or request the SCS to do the contracting for them, operate and maintain the projects, and in the case of multiple-purpose structures, bear a share of construction costs. In addition, local organizations must acquire water rights and furnish land, easements, and rights-of-way for all structural measures except that up to one-half the cost of land, easements, and rights-of-way allocated to public fish and wildlife and recreational developments may be paid with Public Law 566 funds. Federal agencies do this work on Federal lands which they administer with appropriate contributions being made by the local people who receive benefits.

Preconstruction and land treatment and engineering services are furnished to all approved projects before they are advanced to the construction stage. During the preconstruction stage, surveys and investigations are made and detailed designs, specifications, and engineering cost estimates are prepared for construction of structural works; areas are delineated where easements are required, and technical services are furnished for accelerating planning and application of land treatment measures if provided for in the watershed work plan.

The following tabulation shows the status of Public Law 566 projects by stage of assistance and amounts obligated or estimated to be obligated. The table excludes obligation for loan services.

2. Loans and related expense.—Loans are made to local sponsoring organizations to finance the local cost of installing works of improvement in approved watershed projects. Repayment with interest is required within 50 years after the principal benefits of improvements have become available. Loans will be made from the Agriculture credit insurance fund of the Farmers Home Administration. Loan services related to processing and making loans will be financed from this appropriation.

Flood prevention.—1. Works of improvement.—The Department cooperates with soil conservation districts and other local organizations in planning and installing works of improvement for flood prevention and for furthering the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water in the 11 watersheds authorized by the Flood Control Act of 1944. The Federal Government shares in the cost of works of improvement for flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, fish and wildlife development facilities.

The Department furnishes additional technical and, in certain instances, financial assistance to landowners to accelerate planning and installation of land treatment measures for runoff retardation, sediment control, and water management. Local sponsoring organizations generally must furnish all land easements, and rights-of-way, water rights, except those for fish and wildlife development and recreation, and operate and maintain all completed works of improvement on private lands.

Within the 11 watersheds authorized for flood prevention work by the Flood Control Act of 1944, 397 subwatershed areas have been identified in which installation of flood prevention works of improvement is feasible. Installation progress in these subwatersheds is shown in the following table:

2. Loan services.—Loans are made to local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of planned works of improvement. Repayment with interest is required within 50 years after the principal benefits of improvements first become available for this purpose. Loans will be made from funds available for this purpose from the Agriculture credit insurance fund of the Farmers Home Administration. Loan services related to processing and making loans are financed from funds available to this appropriation.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Undelivered orders, 1971, $28,566 thousand; 1972, $30,399 thousand; 1973, $30,785 thousand; 1974, $31,277 thousand.

This program provides cost-sharing assistance and technical services to participating landowners or operators in the Great Plains area in the development and installation of long-term conservation plans and practices for their land. It is a voluntary program which complements other conservation programs of the Department in 465 designated counties of 10 Great Plains States. Cost-sharing contracts with individual landowners range in time from 3 to 10 years.

Plans of conservation operations are made for each farm or ranch as a basis for cost-sharing certain practices. The fundamental purposes of this program are to achieve needed land-use adjustments, conservation treatments, and economic stability of each operating unit. The planned work is installed under contract according to specific time schedules.

MAIN WORKLOAD FACTORS

Program participants:	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Number of new contracts during year	2,440	2,976	3,000
Number of contracts serviced during year	19,724	19,473	18,989

As of June 30, 1972, there was a backlog of 5,690 un-serviced applications pending and a total of 16,757 active contracts. Cooperating landowners or operators finance the entire cost of installing recurring management-type practices and pay a specified part of the cost-shared practices installed on their land.

Program regulations provide the cost-share rates offered in any contract shall not exceed 80% of the cost of installing eligible practices within the designated county.

Cost-sharing varies among practices and between States due to differences in conservation and program needs. Cost-sharing for practices that are primarily to enhance fish and wildlife and recreation resources, to promote the economic use of land, or to reduce or control agricultural related pollution is limited to not more than $2,500 in any one contract, or one-fourth of the total Federal obligation, whichever is larger. Cost-sharing is further limited to $2,500 for any one structure for constructing, enlarging, or sealing dams, pits or ponds for irrigation water. Cost-sharing for irrigation practices in any one contract shall not exceed $2,500 or one-fourth of the total Federal obligation (exclusive of cost-sharing for practices for enhancing fish and wildlife and recreation resources, promoting the economic use of land, and reducing or controlling agricultural related pollutants), whichever is larger. There is also a cost-sharing limitation of $25 thousand for any contract.

Each participant who signs a Great Plains program contract is responsible for implementing his plan of operations; and the Department is committed to furnish the necessary technical help needed for design, layout, and other services. Cooperating landowners and operators are encouraged to make use of other available assistance under local, State, and Federal programs as a means of further improving their land and water resources.

The Department cooperates with other Federal agencies, States, local units of government, groups and individuals in developing and carrying out programs and plans for resource conservation and development and shares in the cost of installing planned project measures, when justified as a public need. Loans are provided to qualified local sponsoring organizations when needed to help them finance their share of the cost of certain project measures which are in the public interest. Project measures planned will contribute to improvement in the economy of the area and to needed land use adjustments.

Technical assistance is provided in each project area approved for planning to help sponsoring organizations prepare overall plans for resource conservation and development. Project plans will have been finished and operations begun in 90 areas by June 30, 1973. Project planning will be initiated in 15 areas during 1974. Project plans will be completed in 18 areas during 1973 and 20 will be completed during 1974. The 20 project plans completed in 1974 will bring the number of areas authorized for operations by June 30, 1974, to 110.

Each project authorized for operations is provided technical assistance to help cooperating groups and individuals plan and install land treatment measures; to design and supervise installation of community-type project measures; and, to assist in the preparation of plans for resource development and economic improvement within project areas.

The main workload factors in 1974 include:

(a) Assistance to local sponsors in developing suitable plans.

(b) Operations in 110 project areas for which plans will have been completed.

(c) Acceleration of project measures installation expected to be made possible by additional State and local funds, and through the use of resource conservation and development program technical and financial assistance for eligible erosion and sediment control, flood prevention, agricultural water management, and public water-based recreation and fish and wildlife measures.

Field work under this program consists primarily of planning, designing, and supervision of installation of project measures and conservation practices, the purpose of which is to develop or improve the economic use of natural resources. This includes outdoor recreation facilities and income-producing enterprises where needed and where consistent with good land use. Investigations, surveys, and planning are prerequisite to the operating phase of this program. Financial contributions, loans, and other Federal assistance are used to help plan and install project measures as specified in project plans.

Loans are made to qualified local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of installing project measures. Funds will be available for loans from the Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund of the Farmers Home Administration.

² Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Undelivered orders, 1971, $218 thousand (1972 adjustments, $190 thousand); 1972, $12,784 thousand; 1973, $12,784 thousand; 1974, $12,784 thousand.

These activities assist producers and handlers of agricultural commodities through various marketing and regulatory services. These services continue to expand and become more complex as the volume of agricultural commodities increases, as a greater number of new processed commodities are developed, and as the market structure undergoes dramatic changes. Marketing changes include increased concentration in food retailing, direct buying, decentralization of processing, growth of interregional competition, vertical integration, and contract farming. The individual activities include:

1. Market news service.—This service provides current information on supply, movement, and prices at specific markets for practically all agricultural commodities. This day-to-day market information enables American farmers to determine where and when to sell and at what price. The information is collected and disseminated at year-round and seasonal offices maintained in more than 140 cities and towns, often with local and other support and cooperation, generally from State departments of agriculture. Dissemination is made primarily by radio, television, and mimeographed reports. The volume of work performed is indicated by examples given in the following table:

2. Inspection, grading, classing, and standardization.—
(a) Meat and poultry inspection.—The inspection activities previously carried out under this subappropriation item by the former Consumer and Marketing Service were transferred to the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service which was established on April 1, 1972, in accordance with Secretary's Memorandum No. 1762, Supplement I, dated March 22, 1972. Narrative statements describing the programs and performance of these activities are included in this volume under the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. The level of costs, financing, and outlays relating to obligations incurred under these activities prior to April 1, 1972, are included under this Marketing Services account.

(b) All other (inspection, grading, classing, and standardization).—Nationally uniform standards of quality for agricultural products are established and applied to specific lots of products to: Promote confidence between buyers and sellers; reduce hazards in marketing due to misunderstandings and disputes arising from the use of nonstandard descriptions; encourage better preparation of uniform quality products for market; and furnish consumers with more definite information on the quality of products they buy. The standards are applied by or under the supervision of Federal employees at the request of any interested party, and generally for a fee. Approximately 75% of the total cost of this work was offset by fees and other revenue in 1972.

marketplace, to protect producers and handlers of agricultural commodities from financial loss due to careless or fraudulent marketing practices, and to preserve free and open competition in the marketing of farm products. Assistance is also provided to farmers and others in obtaining and maintaining equitable and reasonable transportation rates and services on farm products and supplies. The Cotton Research and Promotion Act is designed to improve the competitive position and expand markets for cotton through a program of self-assessment by cotton producers. The Service also administers the Wheat Research and Promotion Act, Agricultural Fair Practices Act of 1967, and the Plant Variety Protection Act.

Payments are made on a matching fund basis to State marketing agencies for carrying out specifically approved marketing service programs designed to bring about improved marketing. Under this activity, marketing specialists work with farmers, marketing firms, and agencies in solving marketing problems and in utilizing marketing research results.

This program covers such projects as: Methods of maintaining and improving the quality of products; ways of reducing marketing costs; expanding outlets for surplus products; collecting and disseminating special State and local market information and statistics; and improving the organizational structure of the marketing system. Through this cooperative approach, the Federal Government's leadership and money are coupled with State resources and experience to aid in the solution of the most urgent local and area marketing problems.

Under section 32 of the act of August 24, 1935, as amended (7 U.S.C. 612c), 30% of customs receipts collected during each calendar year plus unused balances up to $300 million are available for expanding outlets for farm commodities. An amount equal to 30% of receipts collected on fishery products is transferred to the Department of Commerce to encourage the distribution of such products. As provided in recent appropriation acts, other transfers have been made from this fund primarily to the child nutrition programs for the purchase and distribution of agricultural commodities and cash reimbursements for meals served. Section 32 funds are also authorized for the administration of marketing agreements and orders. The basic legislation provides that funds devoted to any one commodity or product thereof must not exceed 25% of funds available. It also provides that the funds must be devoted principally to perishable agricultural commodities other than those receiving price support under title II of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended. It has been determined that this provision can be legally satisfied by setting aside or reserving the principal portion of section 32 funds for the use of perishable nonbasic agricultural commodities.

1. Commodity program payments are of five types: (a) Direct purchases are donated to schools, summer camps, child-care centers, nonprofit institutions serving needy persons, persons certified by welfare as eligible for relief, and disaster victims; (b) diversion payments enable processors to purchase surplus commodities on the domestic market, divert them to byproducts and new uses, and sell them at prices comparable to competing products, thus creating new markets for surplus commodities; (c) export payments enable exporters to purchase surplus commodities on the domestic market and sell them on the world market at competitive world prices; (d) production payments help to reestablish farmers' purchasing power; (e) financial assistance to States enable State distributing agencies to improve the distribution system supplying commodities to needy families. During the past 2 years, assistance under these programs was given to the following commodity groups (in millions of dollars):

FUNDS FOR STRENGTHENING MARKETS, INCOME, AND SUPPLY
(SECTION 32)—Continued

The use of section 32 program funds is contingent upon marketing conditions. The estimates for both 1973 and 1974 reflect the foreseeable needs for perishables and other activities regularly financed with section 32 funds. If troublesome surpluses not now foreseen should develop, steps will be taken to use additional available funds for their removal or diversion as conditions might warrant.

Funds have been used for the certification and distribution of food to needy families in selected counties where local governmental agencies are unwilling or unable to operate food distribution programs.

2. The special feeding program was initiated in 1969 to meet the urgent need for providing additional foods to needy children and adults who are determined to be suffering from general and continued hunger. The funds provided are channeled primarily through the child feeding programs authorized by the School Lunch and Child Nutrition Acts.

Working with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and the Office of Economic Opportunity, the Department developed a distribution system to provide special food packages for infants, and expectant and new mothers. These packages are being distributed in both food stamp and commodity donation areas. Funds have also been used for conducting a pilot food certificate program designed to increase the food purchasing power of expectant and new mothers and infants through the issuance of certificates to be exchanged at their local grocery for certain commodities.

3. Surplus removal operating expenses occur mainly in connection with purchasing, diverting, and exporting surplus commodities, and in distributing section 32 and Commodity Credit Corporation commodities to eligible outlets. Distribution in 1972, including that under section 6 of the National School Lunch Act, is summarized below (in millions):

Distribution	Number of recipients (peak month)	Value of commodities distributed	Pounds of commodities distributed
By recipients:
Schoolchildren.....	25.6	$315.1	1,183.8
Needy persons.....	3.6	313.6	1,234.6
Persons in charitable institutions....	1.3	26.1	125.0
Total.....		654.8	2,543.4
By program:
Section 32.....		282.7	994.4
Donation by Commodity Credit Corporation, section 416.....		308.1	1,290.1
Section 6, National School Lunch Act.....		64.0	258.9
Total.....		654.8	2,543.4

In cooperation with the food trade, press, and radio, greater consumption of abundant foods is encouraged through publication of a monthly plentiful foods list and conducting various food drives. In 1972 the monthly plentiful foods list contained an average of eight foods. Twenty-one national and two area, State, and local drives were conducted.

4. Marketing agreements and orders are put into effect upon request of producers or handlers after hearings and investigations, and upon approval of producers (handlers in the case of marketing agreements). They help to stabilize prices, and benefit producers and consumers by establishing and maintaining orderly marketing conditions. Administration at the local level is financed by assessment upon handlers. On June 30, 1972, there were in effect 62 orders for milk, 49 agreements and orders for tree fruits, nuts, and vegetables, and one order for shade-grown tobacco. The expenses of advisory committees established to advise the Secretary, public hearings, referenda to determine producer sentiment, and other developmental work as authorized by the Agricultural Act of 1961 are also financed under this project.

License fees are deposited in this special fund and are used to meet costs of administering the Perishable Agricultural Commodities and the Produce Agency Acts (7 U.S.C. 491-497, 499a-499s). The law currently provides that annual license fees may be set at a maximum of $100. Effective July 1, 1972, the fee was increased from $60 to $75.

The acts are intended to assure equitable treatment to farmers and others in the marketing of fresh and frozen fruits and vegetables. Commission merchants, dealers, and brokers handling these products in interstate and foreign commerce are licensed. Complaints of violations are investigated and violations dealt with by (a) informal agreements between the two parties, (b) formal decisions involving payment of reparation awards, and (c) suspension or revocation of license and/or publication of the facts.

¹ Administrative fund totals are comprised of 62 separate independent order accounts in 1972. The Marketing service fund totals are comprised of 52 separate independent order accounts in 1972.

The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, as amended—under certain conditions—to issue Federal milk marketing orders establishing minimum prices which handlers are required to pay for milk purchased from producers.

Market administrators are responsible for carrying out locally the terms of specific marketing orders. Their operating expenses, partly financed by assessments on regulated handlers and partly by deductions from producers, are reported in these schedules. These funds are collected locally, deposited in local banks, and disbursed directly by the market administrator.

Each milk order is administered locally by a market administrator who is appointed by the Secretary. His staff is employed directly by the market administrator.

The activities conducted in the local office are concerned primarily with monthly computations and public announcement of class and uniform blend prices, associated butterfat differentials, examination of handlers records, and facilities to verify their reports and payments to producers, and in checking weights and tests of producer milk.

The expenses of each local office are met from an administrative fund and a marketing service fund which are prescribed in each order. The administrative fund is derived from prorated handler assessments. The marketing service fund of the individual order provides for the expense of disseminating market information to producers who are not members of a qualified cooperative. It also provides for the verification of the weights, sampling, and testing of milk from these producers. The cost of these services is borne by such producers.

The maximum rates for administrative assessment and for marketing services are set forth in each order and adjustments below these rates are made from time to time upon recommendations by the market administrator and upon approval of the Agricultural Marketing Service to provide reserves at about a 6-month operating level. Upon termination of any order, the statute provides for distributing the proceeds from net assets pro rata to contributing handlers or producers as the case may be.

Milk sold by regulated handlers supplied almost 143 million persons in calendar year 1971.

The following table gives an indication of the growing role of Federal orders on the marketing of milk over the past few years:

The child nutrition programs have been greatly strengthened and expanded by the passage of three significant laws within the past 2½ years. Public Law 91-248, which became law on May 14, 1970, clearly established that priority shall be given to reaching needy children, and provided for the establishment of a national minimum eligibility standard for free and reduced price meals and a maximum price which might be charged for these meals. This law emphasized that access to the school lunch program should be available to children in all schools.

Public Law 92-153, enacted November 5, 1971, increased Federal support for the national school lunch program by mandating a minimum $0.40 rate in special assistance (sec. 11) for free lunches, and a lesser minimum rate for reduced price lunches. This law also authorized an average rate of reimbursement of $0.06 per meal within each State.

The most recent of the child nutrition legislation is Public Law 92-433, enacted September 26, 1972. In addition to authorizing an increase in the average rate of reimbursement from 6 cents per meal to 8 cents within each State, the new law also provides for higher eligibility standards for free and reduced price lunches and for funding on a performance basis for section 4 lunches and the breakfast program.

1. Cash payments to States.—The programs are operated under an agreement entered into by the State educational agency and the Department. Funds are advanced under letters of credit to State agencies for use in reimbursing participating schools and child-care institutions. Sponsors make application to the State agency and, if accepted, are reimbursed in accordance with the terms of their agreement. In fiscal year 1974, however, funding for the school lunch program (sec. 4) and the breakfast program will be strictly on a performance basis.

(a) School lunch program.—Assistance in the form of both funds and food is provided to the States, as defined in the National School Lunch Act, for serving lunches to schoolchildren. At the present time, each State's portion of the section 4 general-assistance funds available is determined by a statutory formula. The formula takes into account the participation rate in the State, and the relationship between the per capita income of the State and the average U.S. per capita income. States must match the Federal cash grant from sources within the State at a 3-to-1 ratio. For States with below average per capita income, this ratio is decreased. In 1972, sources within the State contributed $1,661 million to this program, most of which came from children's payments. Beginning in fiscal year 1974, State revenue matching requirements will be based on the level of section 4 payments received the preceding fiscal year.

The program during the peak month in fiscal year 1972 provided lunches daily to about 57% of the approximately 40.7 million children in daily attendance. The number of lunches served increased approximately 3% over fiscal 1971. Participation in the program in May 1972 reached a daily average of about 24.1 million children in 83,339 schools and a significant increase is expected in 1973.

(b) Special assistance.—At the present time, special cash assistance may be provided to any school which has needy children in attendance. The statutory formula for apportionment of funds to States relates to children from families with incomes of less than $4 thousand per year. Increased funding provided a Federal average cash reimbursement rate of 38 cents per free or reduced price meal, in addition to the average of 6 cents per meal from section 4 funds in fiscal year 1972. A daily average of approximately 7.9 million children were served 1,275 million free or reduced price lunches. At the end of the 1971-72 school year, 8.4 million children were receiving free or reduced price lunches. The increases for fiscal 1973 should provide lunches for a daily average of 8.9 million needy children this school year.

The recently enacted Public Law 92-433 gives States the option of serving free and reduced price lunches to the children of families whose incomes are as much as 25% (for free lunches) and 50% (for reduced price lunches) above the Secretary's poverty income guidelines.

(c) School breakfast program.—The Child Nutrition Act of 1966 authorized a school breakfast program for 2 years on a pilot basis to assist States through grants-in-aid and other means to initiate, maintain, or expand nonprofit breakfast programs in schools. Public Laws 92-32 and 92-153 extended the breakfast program through fiscal year 1973 and provided higher eligibility standards.

At the present time, funds are apportioned to States by a statutory formula. While the basic payments are limited to food assistance, in circumstances of severe need financial assistance may be authorized for up to 100% of the additional assistance needed.

Presently, the breakfast program is operated in schools drawing attendance from areas in which poor economic conditions exist and where a substantial portion of the children enrolled travel long distances. In fiscal year 1972, an average of 1,032,000 children were served 167.7 million breakfasts in 7,830 schools. About 80% of the breakfasts were served free or at token charges to children. In fiscal year 1973, it is estimated that a daily average of 1,818,000 children will participate.

Public Law 92-433 provides for the breakfast program to be available to all schools that make application and that funding be on a performance basis in 1974.

(d) Nonfood assistance program.—The Child Nutrition Act of 1966 authorized a permanent program to assist the States through grants-in-aid and other means to supply schools in low-income areas with food service equipment, other than land or buildings. Under the Public Law 92-433 amendments, 50% of the funds for equipment assistance are reserved for use in schools without food service. These funds are apportioned on the basis of the ratio of the number of children enrolled in schools without a food service in the State to the total number of children enrolled in schools without a food service in all States. State and local sources must bear 25% of the cost of the equipment or facilities financed under this authority, except in schools that are determined by the State to be especially needy.

The remaining funds are apportioned on the basis of the ratio of the number of lunches served in each State to the total number of lunches served in all States. All schools which receive equipment must agree to take part in the national school lunch program and/or the school breakfast program. They must also justify their need for assistance on a project basis and submit a detailed description of the equipment to be acquired, including their proposals for its use in meeting the nutritional needs of children.

In fiscal year 1972, a total of 6,950 schools with a total attendance of 3.0 million students received equipment assistance of about $18 million. This included section 32 funds and provided assistance in all 50 States, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, and American Samoa.

(e) State administrative expenses.—The Child Nutrition Act of 1966 provides for advances to each State educational agency for administrative expenses. These funds are used for supervising and giving technical assistance to the local school districts and service institutions for additional activities undertaken by them to reach more children under the school lunch, special assistance, school breakfast, nonfood assistance, and nonschool food programs.

(f) Nonschool food program.—The National School Lunch Act was amended in 1968 to authorize a pilot program for 3 years to assist States to initiate, maintain, or expand nonprofit food service programs for children in service institutions where children are not maintained in residence. Public Law 92-433, approved September 26, 1972, extends the program through fiscal year 1975. Pre-school children receive year-round assistance in child day-care centers. School-age children from areas of economic need and from areas with a high concentration of working mothers receive assistance during the summer months.

Each State may receive a basic grant of $50 thousand. The remaining funds are apportioned determined by the ratio of the number of children (aged 3 to 17 inclusive) from families with incomes under $3 thousand per year in each State, to the total number of such children in all States. Up to 80% of the total cost of meals served may be paid in cases of severe need, and not more than 75% of the equipment costs may be paid to the institutions. All meals served must meet minimum nutritional standards as a condition for receiving assistance.

In fiscal year 1972, 76.8 million meals were served to an average of 1.0 million children in the summer program, which included July–August 1971 and June 1972. This was more than double the number of meals served in the fiscal 1971 summer program. Each child received an average of 1.5 meals per day at a cost of approximately 51 cents per child. Approximately 104.5 million meals were served in the fiscal 1972 year-round program to an average of 192,000 children. Each child received about 2.2 meals per day at a cost of about 37.4 cents per child.

2. Commodity procurement.—Commodity procurement under section 6 of the National School Lunch Act provides additional commodities to schools to supplement foods purchased locally or otherwise made available for the lunch program. As amended by Public Law 91-248, these commodities may also be used to supplement the school breakfast and nonschool food programs. Section 6 procurement helps to insure nutritionally adequate meals and appreciation for quality foods. It also broadens agricultural markets. Commodities are purchased by the Department on the basis of their nutritional value and acceptability to schools and service institutions.

Protein items of chicken and meat accounted for approximately two-thirds of the purchases in fiscal year 1972. The remaining one-third consisted of fruits and vegetables.

Commodities acquired under programs that strengthen markets, income, and supply are also available to schools and child-care institutions. The volume of these commodities distributed depends upon market conditions.

During fiscal 1972 $1.6 billion worth of agricultural commodities and other foods were used. About 20% of this amount represented commodities contributed under section 6 and the Federal programs for strengthening markets, income, and supply. Approximately 80% was purchased through local suppliers.

3. Nutritional training and surveys.—Up to 1% of the total funds available may be used for nutritional training and for studies and surveys of food service requirements, as provided for in Public Law 91-248.

In fiscal year 1973, emphasis will be placed on the training of nutrition education specialists at the State level and survey of food use in the schools.

schools and child-care institutions. Policies, procedures, and standards are developed for administering the programs and determining eligibility. The programs are administered directly in private schools where the State educational agency is prohibited by law from disbursing funds and in child-care institutions where no State agency has assumed the responsibility for administering the program. Participation in the programs from 1971 through 1974 is as follows:

1. Cash payments to States.—This program was designed to increase the consumption of fluid milk by children in nonprofit schools of high school grade and under, child-care centers, summer camps, and similar nonprofit institutions.

Funds are provided to State agencies to reimburse eligible participants for a part of the cost of fluid milk consumed. Beginning in 1968, available funds were apportioned among the States on the basis of payments made to schools and child-care institutions for program reimbursement during the preceding fiscal year. In especially needy schools, reimbursement payments may be made for the full cost of this milk for children who are unable to pay.

In 1972, over 2.5 billion half-pints of fluid milk were consumed by children—over five times the quantity in 1955, the first year of operation of the program. This represents almost 3% of the total nonfarm consumption of the fluid milk in the United States.

The need for a separate special milk program in schools that have food service no longer exists as every lunch or breakfast contains a half-pint of milk. However, since all schools do not have a lunch and/or breakfast program, the special milk program will continue in these no-program schools until they institute a food service program.

The funds projected for 1974 would provide milk for approximately 4.5 million children in over 15,000 schools. This should be sufficient to cover all schools without food service programs in 1974.

Program activities for 1971 and 1972 are as follows:

	1971 actual	1972 actual
Outlet participation.....	97,584	94,008

Policies, procedures, and standards are developed for administering the program and determining eligibility. The program is administered directly in outlets where no State agency has assumed the responsibility for its administration, or where such agencies are prohibited by law from disbursing funds to such participants.

The Food stamp program helps persons and families with low incomes to buy subsidized food through regular retail stores. Participating households purchase enough food stamps to provide a nutritionally adequate diet, paying a price for the stamps which is determined by household size and income. Households with no income receive free stamps.

Food stamp programs are established at the request of State social service agencies, which assume responsibility for certifying eligible households and issuing stamps. The Federal Government bears the full cost of the stamps, but administrative costs are shared between Federal and State governments.

Legislation in 1971 extensively revised the Food stamp program, establishing nationwide uniform income and resource eligibility standards, simplifying certification and issuing procedures, and intensifying outreach efforts.

The legislation also required cost-of-living increases in food stamp allotments. The first increase was effective on July 1, 1972, when, for example, the allotment for a family of four rose from $108 to $112 a month.

Participation in the program is expected to decline somewhat in 1974 because: (1) Able-bodied adults are now required to register for and accept work or training as a condition of eligibility, (2) the decreasing unemployment rate will remove some persons from participation, (3) the supplemental security income program and higher social security benefits will make some persons ineligible for food stamps, and (4) the management reforms in public assistance will eliminate some ineligibles currently using food stamps.

The Food Stamp program now requires State agencies to implement a quality control system to assess the general accuracy of determinations of household eligibility, purchase requirements, and allotments made by employees of certifying agencies. The system will be operating nationwide in fiscal year 1974.

In fiscal year 1973, elderly participants over 60 years of age who were physically handicapped, feeble, or could not prepare all of their meals, were permitted to use their food stamps to pay for meals delivered to their home through various volunteer activities commonly referred to as meals on wheels. There were 366 nonprofit meal delivery services in 37 States and the District of Columbia authorized to participate in June 1972.

FOREST SERVICE

The Service carries on three primary functions: (1) Protection, development, and use of about 187 million acres of land in national forests and national grasslands in the United States and Puerto Rico; (2) forestry research for all public and private forest lands and related ranges to improve protection from fire, insects, and diseases; to increase production of timber, forage, water, and other products; to improve methods for developing and managing recreation resources; to develop better utilization and marketing of forest products; and to maintain a current inventory of forest resources through a nationwide forest survey; and (3) cooperation with States and private landowners to obtain better fire protection on approximately 574 million acres of forest land and non-forest watersheds and in rural communities; to provide technical advice and financial assistance to promote development, improvement, and expansion of forest pest detection and suppression programs; to improve forest practices on about 393 million acres of State and local government and privately owned commercial timberlands; to enhance environmental values associated with use of trees in urban and community areas; and to encourage reforestation and stimulate development and management of State, county, and community forests.

These primary functions include construction and maintenance of roads and trails, control of forest pests, protection against floods, land acquisition and exchange, and a number of cooperative projects.

1. Forest land management.—(a) National forest protection and management.—The 154 national forests and 19 units of national grasslands are managed under multiple use and sustained yield principles. The natural resources of outdoor recreation, range, timber, watershed, and wildlife are utilized in a planned combination that will best meet the needs of the Nation without impairing productivity of the land and that will be environmentally acceptable. The management and utilization principles were recognized in the Multiple Use-Sustained Yield Act of June 12, 1960 (74 Stat. 215). Work programs and budget estimates are related to meeting the increased demands for specific national forest resource needs through 1974 and for long-term objectives to the year 2000. Increases are provided in the budget to further attainment of these program objectives. Funds appropriated under Cooperative range improvements are merged with this appropriation for obligational purposes.

FOREST PROTECTION AND UTILIZATION—Continued

(b) Water resource development related activities.—Provides for impact surveys, construction liaison, land treatment, soil stabilization, and cover improvement required by water resource projects of other agencies which are located within or adjacent to the national forests and studies of designated wild and scenic rivers.

(c) Fighting forest fires.—Provides for employment of additional manpower and other facilities for forest fire emergencies which cannot be met under national forest protection and management. Costs above estimates for the current and budget years are authorized from advances from other Forest Service appropriations. A supplemental appropriation for fighting forest fires is anticipated for 1973.

	Fiscal year

Forest fires controlled (number).....	13,910	12,607	11,750
Area burned (acres).....	575,040	128,726	150,000

(d) Insect and disease control.—Activities to suppress and control destructive insects and diseases that threaten timber areas include two types of work carried on jointly by Federal, State, and private agencies: (1) Surveys on forest lands to detect and evaluate infestations of forest insects and infections of tree diseases and determination of protective measures to be taken, and (2) control operations to suppress or eradicate forest insects and diseases, including white pine blister rust.

(e) Cooperative law enforcement program.—Public Law 92-82 authorizes the cooperation with any State or political subdivision thereof in the enforcement of State or local laws on lands of the national forest system.

2. Forest research.—Research is conducted at eight regional forest experiment stations, the Forest Products Laboratory, and the Institute of Tropical Forestry.

(a) Forest and range management.—Research provides land managers and owners with a sound basis for management of timber, forage, wildlife, recreation, and watershed lands. Studies are conducted to maintain a sustained yield of products at least cost; improve forage and habitat for livestock and wildlife without damage to soil, watershed, or other values; assure maximum regular flow of usable water, and reduce floods and sedimentation; and improve methods for developing and managing recreation resources; and provide management methods for all uses that will insure environmental protection.

(b) Forest protection.—Research is conducted to develop measures for the protection of forests from damage by fire, insects, and diseases. Forest fire and atmospheric science research provides improved methods of preventing fires, predicting fire danger, and preparing for and combating fire by combinations of ground and aerial methods. Insect and disease research develops direct controls, cultural measures, and biological agents to combat forest pests.

(c) Forest products and engineering.—Studies are conducted to develop new and improved forest products, to reduce and utilize waste, and to use low-quality wood and less desirable species. Research is also conducted to advance the mechanization and efficiency of forestry operations, and to develop and evaluate machines and similar equipment for such operations as harvesting, planting, timber stand improvement, and protection of forests.

(d) Forest resource economics.—Investigations are conducted to inventory and appraise the condition of forest lands, volume and quality of standing timber, ownership of timber resources, annual growth and depletion, and the potential need for timber products. Economic studies are made of forest crop production, resource productivity, and the marketing potentials of forest products.

3. State and private forestry cooperation.—Assists States, other public and private agencies and individuals to protect, manage, and develop non-Federal forest lands, and improve the production of forest products. By so doing, the social and economic welfare of rural people will be improved and an adequate supply of forest and related resources for the future will be assured. The 393 million acres of non-Federal commercial forest lands produce about 70% of all timber cut.

(a) Forest fire control.—Assistance is furnished 50 States in preventing and suppressing forest fires on private and State-owned lands by financial aid, coordination, training, development, and procurement of equipment, and a nationwide fire prevention campaign. About 94% of the 614 million acres of non-Federal ownership planned for protection is now covered. During 1971 the acreage burned on protected areas was 0.32% as against an estimated 1.85% on unprotected lands. Of the total expenditures under this program, 86.0% is contributed by States and counties, 1.1% by private owners, and 12.9% by the Federal Government.

(b) Forest tree planting.—Financial and technical assistance is provided to the States for the production, acquisition, and distribution of over half of the Nation's tree planting stock for forest and windbarrier planting on non-Federal lands. More than 50 million acres of non-stocked, poorly stocked, or open lands need to be reforested.

(c) Forest management and processing.—In cooperation with 50 States, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, technical assistance is given to woodland owners in applying multiple use management to their forest holdings, and to operators of forest products manufacturing plants in improving their manufacturing and processing techniques to extend timber supplies.

(d) General forestry assistance.—Technical management assistance is provided usually by Federal personnel and also through other arrangements to State, community, private, and other Federal agencies, forest industries, colleges, and landowners. This program also provides forest products utilization assistance to wood-using industries and loggers.

Roads and trails are essential to protection and management of national forests and utilization of their resources.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1970 provided authority of $170 million each for 1972 and 1973. The authority is available for obligation a year in advance of the year for which authorized. This budget provides for utilization of $70.9 million unused contract authority.

The 1974 program will involve the construction and reconstruction of about 173 miles of timber access roads to harvest national forest timber. In 1972, 844 miles of all types of roads were built and 719 miles will be built in 1973.

Of the revenues received annually from national forest activities, 10% is available under the permanent appropriation Roads and trails for States, for construction and maintenance within the States from which such proceeds are derived. Such amounts are merged with this appropriation for obligational purposes.

The Working capital fund was established by the act of August 3, 1956 (16 U.S.C. 579b), as amended by the act of October 23, 1962 (16 U.S.C. 579b). It is a self-sustaining revolving fund which provides services to national forests, experiment stations, and when necessary, to other Federal agencies and as provided by law to State and private agencies and persons who cooperate with the Forest Service in fire control and other authorized programs.

The following services were provided by the Working capital fund in fiscal year 1972:

1. Equipment service.—This service owns, operates, maintains, and replaces approximately 13,500 pieces of common use motor driven and similar equipment. This equipment is rented to a total of 146 administrative units, i.e., national forests, experiment stations and other units, and in some cases to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of operation, repair and maintenance, management, and depreciation. The rates also include an increment which provides additional cash which when added to depreciation earnings and the residual value of equipment provides sufficient funds to replace the equipment. This service operates 74 repair shops.

2. Aircraft service.—This service operates and maintains 57 Forest Service-owned aircraft used in fire surveillance and suppression and in other Forest Service programs. The aircraft are based at 16 locations and are rented to national forests, experiment stations, and in some cases to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of depreciation, operation, maintenance, repair, and improvements in the airworthiness of the aircraft. Aircraft replacement costs are financed from either appropriated funds or the Forest Service Working capital fund, or a combination of both. This service operates three aircraft maintenance shops.

3. Supply service.—This service operates the following common services:

(a) Central supply.—This service has two locations for procurement, warehousing, and supply of common use items, such as work project tools, provisions, and supplies. Grass seed is procured, stored and issued from two other locations. Issuances and sales are made to national forests, experiment stations, and others at prices which recover cost.

(b) Photo reproduction.—Six photo reproduction laboratories store, reproduce, and supply aerial photographs, aerial maps, and other photographs of national forest lands. The photographic reproductions are sold to national forests, experiment stations, and others at cost.

(c) Sign shop.—These include four small shops which manufacture and supply special signs for the national forests for use in regulating traffic and as information to the public and other users of the national forests. The signs are sold to national forests and experiment stations at cost.

(d) Subsistence.—There are 26 facilities which prepare and serve meals at cost to Forest Service work crews working in remote areas where adequate public restaurant facilities are not available.

(e) Cribbing.—This facility is located on the Angeles National Forest, Calif., to manufacture special concrete structural material used in embankments for erosion control purposes along access roads in the national forests. This material is sold to national forests at prices which recover costs.

4. Nurseries.—This service operates 13 forest tree nurseries and cold storage facilities for storage of tree and seed stock and one seed extractory. Tree seed is procured, cleaned, bagged, and stored in refrigerated facilities. Tree and seed stock is sold to national forests, States, and other Federal agencies at cost.

Legislation has been proposed which would change the method of financing administrative expenses by gradually including these costs in premium rates. The Corporation would phase out the use of appropriated funds by $1 million each year beginning with 1974 and increase by a like amount each year the funds authorized for administrative expenses from premium income of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation Fund. Additional funds ($500 thousand) for planned expansion of the program in counties already offering crop insurance and to 25 new counties would also be financed from premium income.

Note.—Includes $1,300 thousand in 1974 for activities to be transferred in 1974 from General Revenue Sharing, Department of the Treasury.

The activities of this appropriation provide for (1) the collection, compilation, and publication of a broad range of current statistics dealing with economic, demographic, and social data, and (2) the preparation, interpretation, and projection of measures of aggregate economic activity.

1. Current economic statistics programs.—(a) Business statistics.—Periodic sample surveys are conducted which provide estimates of retail sales (1) weekly for major kinds of business, and monthly for individual kinds of business for the total United States and (2) monthly for summary and selected kinds of business for regions, census geographic divisions, and selected large States and individual standard metropolitan statistical areas (SMSA's), and monthly sales of department stores for many SMSA's and counties. Also provided are end-of-month national estimates of retail inventories and accounts receivable balances by kind of business and annual national estimates of retailers' purchases, end-of-year inventories, and sales-inventory ratios by kind of business. Surveys also provide (1) monthly national estimates of the receipts of selected service trades and (2) sales and inventories of merchant wholesalers for individual kinds of business on the national level, and for summary and selected kinds of business for major geographical regions. In addition, during the marketing season, estimates are made of canned food stocks held by distributors, and quarterly reports are prepared regarding green coffee roastings, and inventories.

A county business patterns report, providing statistics on employment payrolls by detailed kinds of business and by individual county, is prepared annually; this report covers nonfarm paid employment included in the social security program.

Additional resources were provided in 1973 for the retail trade survey to reduce the variance in national totals, improve the reliability of the estimates currently published by kind of business, and permit publication of more kinds of business categories. In addition, the wholesale trade program was expanded.

Further improvements are scheduled to be made in 1974 to increase the statistical reliability of retail sales estimates and methodological research will be expanded to see whether retail and wholesale inventory data of acceptable quality can be obtained more frequently than annually.

(b) Construction statistics.—Monthly reports are published for housing starts, residential and nonresidential construction authorized by building permits, and the value of new construction put in place. Quarterly reports are provided on expenditures for residential alterations and repairs and quarterly price indexes are compiled for new single-family houses sold. Publication, on a quarterly basis, of the one-family house price index began in 1971 and a quarterly index for multifamily residential structures will be published in 1973. An annual report is published on permits issued for demolition of residential structures. Work will be initiated in 1973 to collect data on State and local governments construction.

Beginning in 1974, the survey of one-family housing starts will be expanded to obtain data on the value of new construction put in place during each month.

(c) Manufacturing statistics.—Statistics are provided monthly on manufacturers' sales, inventories, and orders for total manufacturing and for about 35 industry breakdowns. Additional resources were provided in 1972 and 1973 to strengthen this survey. An annual survey of manufactures produces statistics on the important measures of factory operations such as employment, value added, and investment. Work is now underway on a report of industrial mergers, acquisitions, and disposals. Monthly, quarterly, and annual commodity surveys are conducted of production, shipments, orders, and materials consumed for important industries and products. During 1973 and 1974 the current commodity report surveys are being modified to eliminate one annual and one monthly report, reduce the content of two quarterly reports, and convert seven reports from a monthly to an annual basis.

Beginning in 1974, an annual survey of oil and gas will be undertaken. This survey will obtain data on the cost of finding and producing crude petroleum and natural gas.

(d) Transportation statistics.—Through 1972 methods were developed and tested for undertaking or improving periodic surveys in transportation areas.

(e) Foreign trade statistics.—Monthly, cumulative-to-date, and annual reports are published on the quantity, shipping weight, dollar value of imports and exports, by mode of transportation, detailed commodity category, customs district, and country of origin or destination. Beginning in 1973, the program was expanded to provide additional data on textile imports and permit import data to be published on a cost, insurance, and freight basis.

(f) State and local governments statistics.—Reports are published annually regarding the revenue, expenditures, indebtedness and debt transactions, financial assets, employment, and payrolls of State and local governments. Quarterly information on the national level is furnished regarding State and local tax revenue by type of tax and governmental level. Technical consultation and assistance are provided to State and local government officials, and catalogs are published detailing the statistical publications and data available which would be of use to State and local governmental officials. Statistics regarding the construction expenditures of State and local governments are provided monthly.

Statistics regarding governmental units needed by the Department of the Treasury in the allocation of funds to individual political units under revenue sharing are included in the 1974 estimates.

(g) Agriculture statistics.—Information on cotton ginnings and production as required by statute, is compiled and published. Statistical services are provided regarding the information from the census of agriculture.

2. Industrial directory.—In 1972 developmental work began on the establishment of an industrial directory. This directory will list all U.S. business firms and their establishments. It will show the latest information available on name, mailing address, physical location, industrial classification, and other basic identification data. The directory is designed to provide the Bureau of the Census and other Federal statistical programs with a common frame for obtaining and interpreting economic data.

Work on the directory will proceed in 1974 to develop the technology for the efficient operation of the system and to extend the annual survey of multiunit companies.

3. Current economic analysis programs.—(a) National income and product data.—Calculations are made of the gross national product, national income, personal income, and their components, providing an overall view of the state of the economy. Input-output accounts supplement the national income and product accounts by providing a closeup of the manner in which the various industries interact in the production of the national output. Regional accounts provide a profile of our economy by States and smaller subdivision. During 1973, programs were initiated to improve the national income and product estimates and analyses and to supply estimates of personal income by county to each State.

The 1974 request provides for improvement in the Government sector of the GNP accounts and in the estimates of GNP by industry; and for the preparation of annual estimates of personal income and employment by county.

(b) Analysis of business trends.—The business situation is assessed monthly and the results of continuing analyses of the major factors underlying cyclical developments and long-range business trends are published regularly. Included are surveys that collect information on business investment plans, work on an econometric model which forecasts the future movement of the gross national product, its components, and other key elements in the national accounts, and a system of leading, lagging, and coincident indicators of business conditions. During 1973, a program to review and improve the system of indicators was initiated.

(c) Balance of payments data.—Balance of payments accounts provide yet another elaboration of the national income and product accounts by depicting in detail all economic transactions with foreign nations. During 1973, work proceeded on the development of an information system on the economic activities of multinational corporations. Additional international investment detail is being collected and the processing and preparation of this information will be put on an accelerated basis.

4. Current demographic statistics programs.—(a) Population statistics.—This activity provides annual estimates of the population of the United States, each of the States, a limited number of standard metropolitan statistical areas and some other areas. It also includes current estimates of the number of households, the farm population, school enrollment and educational levels, personal income, population mobility, size of families, voting registration and other characteristics of the population, as well as statistics concerning purchases, stocks, and intentions to purchase major consumer items.

In 1974 the current population survey will be strengthened so that it can meet the demand for reliable and consistent data.

(b) Housing statistics.—National and regional quarterly estimates are provided for housing vacancy rates. The program also provides vacancy rates by broad classes of rental and homeowner portions of the housing market and produces information on selected characteristics of the occupied housing inventory. The housing statistics program will also develop current annual estimates and projections of the housing inventory. In addition, technical assistance was available through 1972 to local areas wishing to conduct housing surveys. The technical assistance work and problem housing area studies are being discontinued in 1973.

5. Environmental and social statistics.—(a) Environmental statistics.—In 1974 a new program will be initiated to assess the economic impact of environmental efforts. This program is planned to (1) identify efforts to improve environmental quality, and (2) measure the economic impact of environmental programs.

(b) Social indicators.—The request provides for an annual compilation and publication of a compendium of measures of social change and related analytical work.

6. Boundary and coding guide updating.—This program updates the present area boundary and address location files to recognize changes in boundaries of incorporated places and to reflect changes in street patterns resulting from urban development.

7. Other programs and publications.—(a) Statistical Abstract and supplements.—The Statistical Abstract, issued annually, summarizes Government and private statistics on the industrial, social, political, and economic activities of the United States.

(b) General research.—Research is conducted on survey methods and techniques, including sample survey methods and theory, questionnaire design, response errors, equipment design and utilization, computer editing and administrative control, operations, analytical techniques including techniques of geographic analysis, for the purpose of increasing accuracy, output, and usefulness of statistical data per unit of cost.

This appropriation provides for comprehensive and detailed information in several major economic and demographic areas once or twice each decade. It also funds the acquisition of large scale data processing equipment and major special surveys that may be authorized.

1. Economic statistics programs.—(a) 1967 economic censuses.—Final costs on this census were incurred in 1972.

(b) 1972 economic censuses.—The economic censuses supply statistics, as provided for in 13 U.S.C. 131, on the volume of production and trade, and the Nation's business and industrial enterprises. Economic censuses are taken every fifth year covering years ending in 2 and 7.

Plans and specifications for the 1972 economic censuses were largely completed with funds appropriated in 1971 and 1972. Funds provided in 1973 are being used to complete the design, clearance, and printing of census forms, mail out respondents' forms, and conduct most of the followup, check-in, and other related procedures. Many computer tabulation programs will be completed and keypunching will begin. A second survey of minority-owned enterprise is being conducted.

The request for 1974 provides for completing the collection of report forms, precomputer processing, keypunching the bulk of the returns, and computer editing of the data. The request also provides for the purchase of administrative records from other Federal agencies to obtain data on smaller firms and for the collection, processing and publication of minority-owned enterprises data.

(c) 1972 census of governments.—A census of governments is required "for the year 1957 and every fifth year thereafter" by 13 U.S.C. 161. The law specifies that "each such census shall include, but shall not be limited to data on tax valuations, governmental receipts, expenditures, indebtedness, and employees of States, counties, cities, and other governmental units." During 1973 work will be completed on two of the four major phases of the census—governmental organization and property values. The other two programs, governmental employment and finances, will have data collection completed and the bulk of their data processed.

The request for 1974 is the final request for this work and provides for the development and review of tables, text preparation, and the issuance of publications.

(d) 1977 census of agriculture.—A census of agriculture is required to be taken every 5th year covering years ending in 4 and 9 by 13 U.S.C. 142. The census provides measures concerning the agricultural economy of each State and county. Data are obtained from the census on the number of farms, acres in farms, value of farmland, cropland harvested, production statistics for major crops, and number and kinds of livestock, equipment, farm practices, and the use of fertilizer and pesticides.

Funds were appropriated in 1973 to begin planning on a 1974 census of agriculture. However, the 1974 request proposes the postponement of the census until 1977 and its combination with the 1977 economic censuses. The 1973 appropriation will be used to plan the transition. A legislative proposal will be submitted to change the timing of the census.

2. Demographic statistics programs.—(a) 19th decennial census.—The final results of the 1970 census of population and housing and the 1969 census of agriculture will be completed and sent to publication in 1973.

(b) 1975 survey of the social and economic characteristics of the population.—Preparatory funds are requested in 1974 for a sample survey of the population which will provide data on employment and unemployment, type of job, income, education, geographic mobility, family composition, minority group characteristics, the aged, and housing. This survey will be conducted in conjunction with a program based on administrative records that will provide local area population estimates.

(c) Preparation for 20th decennial census.—The request in 1974 is for the purpose of beginning preparations for the 20th decennial census of population and housing. Planning work will be initiated including (1) reviewing the methods and procedures used during the 1970 census; (2) developing the scope of activities to be undertaken during the decade leading to the 1980 census; (3) initiating questionnaire design and content considerations; and (4) developing improved processing procedures and collection techniques.

3. Data processing equipment.—The 1974 estimate provides for the leasing of electronic data processing equipment to update existing computer systems.

Capital outlay.—Acquisition of data processing equipment.—Final costs were incurred in 1972 for equipment purchased in 1971 from the appropriation Modernization of computing equipment.

Capital outlay.—Other capital outlay.—This provides for the acquisition of computer tape, office furniture and machines, and other miscellaneous equipment necessary to conduct periodic censuses and surveys.

As an extension of its primary mission, SESA provides statistical data and analyses to other Federal agencies as well as utilizing its technical capabilities to provide various statistical, analytical, training, and data processing services. Such work or services are provided to the extent that they do not interfere with the performance of the regular work financed from funds appropriated to SESA and are consistent with its public duties and obligations.

In 1972 the largest segments of work continued to be the collection of employment and unemployment data for the Department of Labor; health data for the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare; and statistical assistance to underdeveloped countries for the Agency for International Development.

Major increases from 1972 to 1973 are for a consumer expenditures survey; a survey of victims of crime which is being enlarged to include a national household sample; an annual housing survey; and the collection of population, urbanization, and per capita income data for the revenue sharing program. These projects are funded respectively by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, the Department of Housing and Urban Development, and the Department of the Treasury.

The decrease from 1973 to 1974 relates primarily to special tabulations from the 1970 census and to the consumer expenditure survey. The consumer expenditure special tabulations have been requested by the Department of Labor for their use in connection with the Emergency Employment Act. They will be completed in the first part of the year. Data collection and most of the processing for the consumer expenditure survey will be completed in 1974 with final completion scheduled for 1975.

The Social and Economic Statistics Administration performs, at cost, special statistical work and data analysis for State and local governments, universities, trade associations, and individuals requesting such data. These services are provided only when it has been determined that they are in the public interest; are consistent with the Administration's duties; and that the statistics furnished will not identify individuals or particular organizations. In addition, the Administration furnishes age and citizenship data from past census records on a fee basis. Funds received for these purposes are used to pay expenses in the performance of such work (13 U.S.C. 8; 15 U.S.C. 1525).

These lower priority programs are being curtailed in 1973 and terminated in 1974 as part of the Government-wide effort to reduce nonessential expenditures. Terminating these programs now is required to avoid unnecessary inflationary pressures during the next 2 years or more. The rural development objectives of these programs will be assumed by the Department of Agriculture as part of its activities under the Rural Development Act. The 30% increase in the business loan program in the Small Business Administration will provide more effective incentives for private investment in economic development.

The Domestic and International Business Activities of the Department of Commerce seek to increase the economic strength of the United States by promoting the growth and competitive position of U.S. industry in domestic and international markets. Current emphasis is on assessing the competitiveness of U.S. industry in world markets, increasing U.S. industry access to foreign markets through trade negotiations, expanding export sales, encouraging East-West trade, and focusing on U.S. energy problems.

The principal activities are:

1. International economic research and planning.—Provides long-range planning and strategic program/policy guidance for all activities. The activity also provides basic international trade analyses and studies for use by planning and policy officials of both Government and industry.

2. Competitive assessment and business policy.—This activity is directed toward assessing the competitiveness of American industries in domestic and international markets through studies of specific industries, sectors, and functions of the U.S. and foreign economies; and developing and operating early warning systems to anticipate shifts in competitive positions. The activity also provides a working forum for business and Government on domestic business policy issues, particularly economic and financial issues, labor-management relations, industrial pollution, and short-supply export controls.

In support of policy recommendations and program actions within this activity and other activities of the Department and Government, domestic and international data is collected, analyzed, and maintained (except for the fiber, textile, and apparel sectors of industry) in such categories as production, pricing, inventories, marketing, labor, financing, taxation, and location and size of company.

Included in this activity, as a reimbursable program, is support of the Defense Production Act of 1950. The objectives of this program are to assure, through administration of the priorities and allocations authorities of the Act, timely completion of programs for production, construction, and research and development, and an adequate supply of strategic and critical materials for national emergency supporting activities; and to assure maximum readiness of the industrial resources of the United States to meet any future national emergency.

3. Resources and import programs.—Serves as the principal point of contact within the Department on special import problems involving industries experiencing difficulty from import competition and on problems in the field of international trade in primary commodities. In addition, the activity assists in energy policy development, coordinates legislative proposals and provides coordination of existing and proposed Commerce energy programs. The activity also administers the Department's trade adjustment assistance responsibilities of the Trade Expansion Act of 1962.

4. International trade development.—The goal of this activity is to increase the international economic strength of the United States. This is done by improving U.S. industry access to foreign markets; seeking the adoption of U.S. economic policies to enable U.S. business to compete more effectively overseas; strengthening official representation of U.S. commercial interests abroad; and promoting the expansion of U.S. exports. The activity employs various export expansion techniques including the relatively new domestic approach of stimulating U.S. industry interest in and action toward exporting; helping business improve its use of foreign market information; assisting U.S. industry to compete for specific export opportunities; and conducting overseas promotional activities (such as trade fairs, trade missions, and trade center shows) to introduce the businessman to foreign markets, buyers, and agents.

In 1974, an expanded program of market development exhibits will be conducted in cooperation with the Department of State. These exhibits may range from small embassy-sponsored events to full-size Commerce-sponsored trade fairs held in selected developing countries.

The activity also seeks the adoption of U.S. economic policies which will increase the international economic strength of the United States by improving the U.S. environment for international trade, and by developing long-term policies in the field of international investment.

5. East-West trade.—This activity was established in 1973 as the focal point for carrying out the Department's responsibilities under the East-West exchange program. The goal is to increase the international economic strength of the United States by expanding East-West trade and other commercial relationships with the markets of Eastern Europe and the People's Republic of China, and by administering the Export Administration Act of 1969, as amended.

6. Business field services.—Serves as the Department's principal medium of contact with the local business community for: (1) ascertaining business needs and desires for information and assistance; (2) planning, arranging, and participating in the delivery of the Department's business-related information, products, and services to local business communities and agencies; (3) performing the fieldwork and services involved in the programs of Domestic and International Business Administration, and for other organizations of Commerce; and (4) promoting participation of the general business community in the resolution of economic and business problems of the Nation.

This activity also evaluates prospective international expositions to be held in the United States and prepares studies and recommendations for the President regarding the nature and extent of Federal participation therein, and performs all activities relating to the certification and promotion of domestic trade fairs pursuant to the Trade Fair Act of 1959 (19 U.S.C. 1751-1756).

In addition, the activity publishes the Commerce Business Daily in accordance with Public Law 87-305.

7. Administration.—Provides support for all the foregoing programs in budget and accounting, personnel, organization and management, administrative services, public affairs, and other centralized support functions.

The Trade Expansion Act of 1962 authorizes trade adjustment assistance to firms who are injured or threatened by increased imports where the rise of imports is due to a trade agreement entered into by the United States. The rationale for making assistance available is that, since tariff reductions benefit the entire economy, the Nation should share the cost of any injury to individual businesses affected.

Firms, which have been certified eligible by the Tariff Commission and the Department, may receive financial assistance, which consists of direct loans and/or loan guarantees, and/or technical assistance.

The Department is required by law to maintain operating reserves with respect to anticipated claims under the loan guarantee portion of the program. By establishing reserves of 10% of the guaranteed amount, obligations of $5 million will support a $50 million guarantee program. This coupled with $35 million in loans, will comprise a program totaling $85 million for financial assistance and $5 million for technical assistance.

¹ Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Undelivered orders, 1971, $133 thousand (1972 adjustment, -$39 thousand); 1972, $35,120 thousand; 1973, $41,115 thousand; 1974, $40,046 thousand.

The Office of Minority Business Enterprise (OMBE) was established under Executive Order 11458 of March 5, 1969, and began operating in 1969. On October 13, 1971, Executive Order 11625 was issued which prescribed additional arrangements for developing and coordinating a national program for minority business enterprise. The substantive provisions of Executive Order 11458 of March 5, 1969, are carried over and expanded in Executive Order 11625.

The Office works with other Federal agencies, State and local governments, and private organizations to improve the economic conditions of the minority people of the United States by extending to them an equal opportunity to participate in the American business system.

1. Community investment.—OMBE provides financial support to several kinds of local business development organizations which help minority entrepreneurs create new businesses and expand existing ones. These organizations perform the threefold function of being the initial point of contact for the potential businessman, aiding minorities with information and access to resources, and providing the technical expertise necessary to obtain and productively use business resources. Approximately one hundred and twenty local business development organizations will be operating in 1973 and 1974.

2. Private investment.—OMBE funds local organizations which assist private institutions to increase the access of minority businessmen to capital, markets, business opportunities, and management and technical assistance.

3. Government investment.—OMBE assists State and local governments to set up programs similar to the national OMBE program to utilize these governments' resources in areas that would not be otherwise served.

4. Business management development.—OMBE helps to strengthen existing sources of business education and training by supporting entrepreneurial courses in a variety of institutions at the regional and local levels, as well as by commissioning development of new curricula and materials.

5. Experiment and demonstration.—These funds are used to develop and test innovative methods of stimulating public and private sector involvement in minority business enterprise activity. The largest part of these funds ($37,700 thousand) is for support of community development corporations which are the major experiments in minority business development.

6. Program development and management.—The entire management, administration, and direction of Minority Business Enterprise programs is financed under this heading. This includes $1,600 thousand in support of the community development corporation program.

This appropriation provides for the research, development, support of operating programs, and acquisition of facilities needed to fulfill the basic responsibilities of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

1. Mapping, charting, and surveying services.—This activity provides for the systematic collection, processing, and analyses of data required for mapping, describing and geodetic surveying of the coastal and intracoastal waterways and land areas of the United States. The 1974 Budget will provide for continued automation of the nautical chart processing.

2. Ocean fisheries and living marine resources.—This activity provides for the protection, development, and management of our living marine resources through research on the abundance, geographic distribution, and characterization of such resources, and through coordinated State-Federal programs to develop fisheries, to provide marketing services for the fishermen and the public and to provide financial assistance to the fishing industry. Increases in 1974 will provide for marine mammal conservation research and development efforts in the State-Federal management program.

3. Marine ecosystems analysis and ocean dumping.—This activity integrates NOAA's existing research capabilities to describe, understand, monitor, and predict the physical, chemical, and biological processes of marine environmental systems; relate these processes to marine resources; and provide information to policy and decisionmakers for effective management and development of the marine environment and its resources.

4. Marine technology.—This activity provides undersea research and development of oceanographic instruments, testing and evaluation of oceanographic instruments, and analysis of the effects of marine mining operations on the environment.

5. Sea grant.—The talents and knowledge of academic scientists and engineers are directed toward the practical problems of marine resources, development, and management.

6. Basic environmental services.—This activity provides the observations, communications, data processing, and forecast guidance used to provide public and specialized forecasts and warnings and to support Department of Defense agencies and many other segments of the economy. Increases in 1974 will provide additional radar and satellite observations, and research on improved techniques of basic analysis and predictions through computer modeling.

7. Environmental satellite services.—This activity provides for the operation of a national satellite system to observe worldwide environmental conditions and to acquire, process, analyze, and distribute the data for use in environmental services and research. Increases in 1974 will continue the polar-orbiting satellite system with the launch of ITOS E, and begin procurement of ITOS I and parts for ITOS J. The geostationary operational environmental satellite (GOES) program will continue with the launch of GOES A and the start of fabrication of GOES B and C. Increased emphasis will be placed on development and application of satellite technology to oceanographic and hydrologic problems.

8. Public forecast and warning services.—This activity provides NOAA's public weather, marine prediction, hurricane and tornado warning, and river and flood forecast and warning services. It includes research to improve the forecasting techniques used to provide these services. Increases in 1974 will provide for development and dissemination of more timely and detailed forecasts and warnings by extending the weatherwire, expanding community preparedness services, and expanding and improving river and flood forecast and warning services.

9. Specialized environmental services.—This activity provides fire weather services, agricultural weather services, upper atmosphere and space services, and seismological and geomagnetic services.

10. Environmental data and information services.—This activity provides for the archiving, retrieval, analysis, and product preparation and dissemination of climatic, oceanographic, and geophysical data and for research to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of these data services.

11. Global monitoring of climatic change.—This activity provides the basis for determining variations in the overall quality of the atmosphere and the effects of these changes on weather and climate. Increases in 1974 will provide operating funds for a recently established station.

12. Weather modification.—This activity develops scientific and practical potentialities of weather modification of severe storms through theoretical studies, laboratory investigations, computer modeling of atmospheric processes, and field experiments. Increases in 1974 will provide instrumentation of research aircraft.

13. GARP Atlantic tropical experiment.—A major part of the global atmospheric research program (GARP) is the GARP Atlantic tropical experiment. This experiment is being pursued since meteorology of the tropical oceans constitutes one of the weakest links in our understanding of the general circulation of the atmosphere and therefore in our ability to model and predict weather for extended periods into the future. Nine nations have made tentative commitments of substantial contributions to the project, and many other countries in South America and Africa have expressed their interest in participating. The experiment will include the entire tropical Atlantic and the adjacent continental regions of Latin America and Africa. Increases in 1974 will provide for U.S. participation in this experiment.

14. International field year for the Great Lakes.—This activity provides the development of a sound scientific basis for water resource management on the Great Lakes as an aid in solving problems of water quality and quantity. This is a joint United States-Canadian project in which a series of hydrological and limnological studies, as well as special phenomenological investigations associated with the effects of ice and lake storms, will serve to meet management requirements for environmental factors pertinent to navigation, hydropower, public water supply, waste disposal, recreation, fish productivity, highway transportation, and the operation of port facilities.

15. National data buoy project.—A decision has been made not to deploy and operate networks of buoys. Future buoy deployment will be dictated by the needs of other programs. Buoys will be purchased from commercial sources for research activities where necessary to complement other data gathering systems such as satellites, ships, and aircraft.

16. Retired pay, commissioned officers.—This activity provides for the retirement pay of NOAA commissioned officers and payments to survivors of retired officers under the Retired Serviceman's Family Protection Plan.

17. Executive direction and administration.—This activity provides the overall executive direction and administrative services for the programs of NOAA. It also includes a portion of the administrative expenses related to inspection and grading of fishery products (trust fund), such expenses being 8.2% of the total costs of the program, and the total administrative expenses for the Fisheries loan fund.

This fund provides for loans to segments of the fishing industry unable to obtain commercial loans on reasonable terms for financing or refinancing the cost of purchasing, constructing, equipping, maintaining, repairing, or operating new or used commercial fishing vessels or gear. The act of July 24, 1965, Public Law 89-85, authorized extension and broadening of the program. Administrative expenses in 1974 will be paid from the appropriation Operations, research, and facilities, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The NOAA revolving fund represents that portion of the Corps of Engineers—Civil revolving fund assets applicable to the U.S. lake survey functions which were transferred to NOAA from the Department of the Army on October 3, 1970, pursuant to Reorganization Plan No. 4 of 1970. The amounts represent financing for the map and chart production and distribution activities.

Budget program for 1972 reflects full-year operation of the revolving fund. The program in 1973 and 1974 will be reimbursable and included in the appropriation Operations, research and facilities.

1. Patent Office.—The Office administers laws governing the granting of patents for invention and the registration of trademarks.

Patent application disposals totaled 109,245 in 1971 and 106,273 in 1972; for 1973 and 1974, 114,000 and 115,000 are estimated. Trademark disposals in 1971 were 30,684 and 30,531 in 1972; estimates for 1973 and 1974 are 32,000 and 36,000, respectively. Progress has been made toward the average pendency goal of 18 months for patent applications (from receipt to issue). The Office is also attempting to lower the average pendency of trademark applications to 3 months (from receipt to first action).

The 1974 request includes funds and staff to accomplish the above goals and to expand manual classification.

Receipts from fees were $27.9 million in 1972. In 1973 and 1974, they are respectively estimated at $27.7 million and $28.1 million. Legislation to increase patent fees, which would generate additional income, is being proposed.

(a) Examination of patent applications.—Applications are examined to determine the patentability of claimed inventions; and quasi-judicial functions are performed in appeal and interference proceedings within the Office.

(b) Examination of trademark applications.—Applications are examined to determine the registrability of trademarks, and quasi-judicial functions are performed in appeal or adversary proceedings within the Office. Specifications and drawings of successful applications are printed, and registered trademarks are published weekly.

(c) Collection, assembly, and dissemination of technical and legal patent and trademark information.—Specifications and drawings of successful applications are printed, and issued patents are published weekly. In addition, this activity includes preparation and issuance of patent grants, furnishing copies of records, maintenance of public search room and scientific library facilities, and recording instruments conveying ownership of patent and trademark rights.

2. National Bureau of Standards.—(a) Basis for Nation's physical measurement system.—The purpose of this activity is to insure that the users of science and technology in the United States will be able to make physical measurements which are meaningful (measure the desired property with the required accuracy), reproducible (yield the same results time after time), and compatible (will be reconcilable with other like measurements made elsewhere at different times).

Programs in this activity include developing, maintaining, and improving the standards of physical measurement and developing and making readily available a range of specialized products and services, including calibrations, standard reference materials and standard reference data, that will effectively transfer the results of the Bureau's work to other elements of the Nation's measurement system.

(b) Scientific and technological services for industry and Government.—The purpose of this activity is to facilitate effective use of science and technology by governmental institutions and by industry. In the United States most of the effort devoted to developing and using technology is in the private sector. A variety of problems exist in certain areas of technology, however, where the Government has a substantial investment or where complexity, cost, or scope of impact are such as to require a national-level effort.

Programs in this activity include: (a) Biomaterials, metals, alloys, polymers, inorganic, and composite materials technology; (b) evaluation and improvement of measurement methods in support of environmental pollution abatement programs; (c) building science and technology; (d) computer science and technology; (e) electronic technology; (f) cryogenic technology; (g) technology utilization analysis; and (h) the application of analytical techniques to the management of research. The 1974 increase will provide for development of technical bases for measurements and standards setting in air, water, and noise pollution abatement, and for development of technology leading to reduction of fuel and power consumption in buildings.

(c) Technical basis for equity in trade.—The purpose of this activity is to provide a common technical basis for fair exchange between buyers and sellers in commercial dealings with minimum legal regulation at the Federal level. Programs in this area include: (a) Voluntary engineering standards services to assist private sector groups to develop national and international engineering standards and disseminate information on such standards, (b) quantity measures to insure a proper degree of measurement accuracy in commercial quantity determinations, including development and promotion of better weights and measures technology, (c) standards to measure the performance of industrial and consumer products, (d) test services to promote the application of product standards and standardized product test methods by Federal, State, and commercial testing laboratories, and (e) fair packaging and labeling programs to reduce undue proliferation of commodity package sizes by voluntary means.

(d) Technical services to promote public safety.—Programs of this activity provide standards, test methods, information, and specialized services as required by law to protect the public from certain specified hazards. Subjects included are: (a) Fire research and safety, which involves research, information, and services aimed at reducing loss of life and property due to fire, (b) product safety, which provides the technical basis for assessing hazards, and (c) radiation safety, which deals with standards for sources of potentially hazardous nonionizing radiation. Increases in 1974 will be applied to the fire research and safety program.

(e) Technical information services.—The purpose of this activity is to disseminate information on research results and services to users through a variety of appropriate, easily accessible channels. Programs employed to achieve this objective are: (a) Central reference services, such as NBS information analysis centers which provide highly specialized technical information, (b) symposia, technical meetings, and training courses, (c) research and development in information sciences including employment of experimental hardware/software configurations to improve the response time and adequacy of the Bureau's information-providing services, and (d) consulting and advisory services which are made available, usually at no cost to the user.

(f) Central technical support.—The purpose of this activity is to provide technical supporting services to other Bureau programs. These services include operation of research tools such as the NBS research reactor, linear electron accelerator, and other high energy accelerators. Also included are mathematical and statistical services.

(g) Experimental technology incentives.—This activity will encourage private research and development oriented toward attaining national goals, such as increased productivity. Funding will be by contracts with industry, associations, and universities emphasizing demonstrations of technology applications.

3. National Technical Information Service.—The National Technical Information Service collects and distributes scientific, technological, business, and demographic information generated by the Federal Government.

4. Office of Telecommunications.—The Office of Telecommunications (OT) conducts research needed in the evaluation and development of telecommunication policy as required by the Director, Office of Telecommunications Policy (OTP), Executive Office of the President; assists the OTP in the management of Federal use of the radio spectrum; assists other Federal agencies in the use of telecommunications; conducts research, engineering, and analysis to meet specific Government concerns; and, serves as a source of information on the efficient use of telecommunication resources and stimulates the effective development and exchange of this information.

(a) Spectrum management support.—OT provides administrative and technical support to OTP through tasks particularly concerned with assignment of specific frequencies and allocations of frequency bands for Federal use. Work is coordinated with the Interdepartment Radio Advisory Committee and OTP on use and management of the spectrum. OT efforts concern ensuring that electronic equipment and systems will operate without unacceptable interference.

(b) Policy analysis and telecommunication technology.—OT provides technical and economic policy research, analyses, and policy option formulation to support the development by OTP of effective telecommunication policy and programs promoting the public interest; and for effective use of Government telecommunication resources. OT also provides the basic technical information required for support of Commerce programs, OTP, and other agencies. It provides the technical base for technical and economic analyses of telecommunications policy problems, for improving electromagnetic spectrum management, and for improving the comprehension and use of telecommunications science technology.

The working capital fund finances from advances and reimbursements all operations of the Bureau except major construction projects and the foreign currency program. Amounts reported include investments in equipment and inventories, and research, development and services performed for other Government agencies and the public. Programs of direct appropriations and trust funds are covered in the schedules for those accounts. The principal of the fund, as of June 30, 1972 consisted of $5 million in appropriations, $9 million in capital provided by appropriations of the Bureau, and $143 million in net donated assets. Retained earnings at the end of each year are transferred to Treasury the following year.

This appropriation provides subsidies for the construction of ships in American shipyards in order to offset the disparity between domestic and foreign shipbuilding costs. The budget request for 1974 is designed to continue the pace of the shipbuilding program which accelerated sharply in 1972 and is anticipated to reach record levels in 1973. A main objective of the program is to motivate increased efficiency in U.S. shipyards in order to narrow the gap between domestic and foreign merchant ship production costs. The maximum allowable construction differential is scheduled to be reduced from 41% for 1973 to 39% or below by 1974; however, the rate for construction of liquefied natural gas (LNG) carriers is as low as 23.7%.

The 1974 ship construction program will provide multi-year funding of ship construction contracts. Construction subsidy contracts for 17 ships are planned in 1974. It is anticipated that 13 of these ships, as well as two ships under 1973 contracts, will be constructed from 1974 funds and multiyear financing will be utilized for the remaining four. The tentative ship program will consist of (dollars in millions):

The major thrust of this plan is to meet shortages in the supply of domestic energy by constructing ships which will carry imported liquefied natural gas and petroleum to the United States.

The Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, provides that operating subsidies shall be paid to qualified operators of U.S. flag vessels in order to promote the maintenance of a U.S. merchant marine capable of providing essential shipping services. Essential services are defined as those services, routes, and lines essential for the promotion, development, expansion, and maintenance of the foreign commerce of the United States.

Subsidies, equivalent to the differential between American and foreign operating costs, are paid to operators of U.S. flag vessels performing essential shipping services enabling them to compete on a competitive cost basis with foreign operators. New regulations and procedures instituted by the Merchant Marine Act of 1970 have resulted in faster and more efficient administration of the subsidy program. Three new bulk vessels qualifying for subsidy under the new regulations will enter into subsidized service in fiscal 1974. The experimental program subsidizing bulk carriage on the Great Lakes will be continued. Additionally, funding is provided in 1973 and 1974 to pay for subsidies for U.S. flag carriage of 1973 Russian grain purchases.

The operations under the program are detailed in the following table:

The 1974 program provides funding for the continuation of the R. & D. programs in support of the President's maritime program. One important aspect of the R. & D. program is the participation of industry in cost-sharing which results in maximum benefits at minimum cost to the Government. Efforts in 1974 are planned in the areas of advanced nuclear propulsion systems, shipbuilding methods improvement, and automated shipping systems. The overall program for 1974 is as follows:

1. Advanced ship development and construction.—This activity is concerned with the programs related to institutional programs, advanced propulsion, competitive nuclear ships, competitive shipbuilding, advanced ship systems, shipping systems analysis and requirements, and technology support. These programs are designed to improve ship development and construction and to bring about a reduction in construction subsidy. The major effort will be in the competitive nuclear ship program which will consist of the final design engineering. Also, major efforts will be conducted in the shipbuilding improvement program which relate to a second generation of automated shipbuilding hardware and the development of computer program modules to form an inclusive shipbuilding production and management control system.

2. Advanced ship operations systems.—This activity is concerned with programs chiefly designed to improve the operation of ships and their supporting systems with ultimate goal to accomplish a reduction in operating costs and subsidy. Programs related to this activity include automated ships, pollution abatement systems, advanced tug-barge systems, shipping operations information systems, and technology support related to these programs.

3. Advanced port and intermodal systems operations.—Research planned in this program is to promote the development and operation of U.S. ports and maintain adequate port capability in keeping with technological advances in ocean transportation, and port and terminal systems.

1. Development of waterborne transportation systems.—This activity provides for direct technical and administrative costs of promoting the development of high capacity shipping systems which meet our Nation's maritime requirements including, the addition of new highly productive ships to the privately owned U.S. flag fleet. Activity financed includes: contract administration for the ship construction subsidy program and research and development projects in the advanced ship development and construction program; maintenance of a technical engineering and design staff to support both those programs; and administration of the construction loan and mortgage insurance and capital construction funds programs which facilitate private investment in the American Merchant Marine, and civil rights responsibilities assigned to the Maritime Administration. In 1974, administration of the construction loan and mortgage insurance program will be financed from the Federal ship mortgage insurance fund.

2. National security support capability.—Costs are covered for preservation work and security on ships retained in the National Defense Reserve Fleet. The activity also provides for planning and evaluation of the emergency planning/operations program which includes evaluation of the emergency response capability of our nation's shipyards and ports, readiness planning for effective operation of the merchant fleet in time of national emergency, and administration of war risk insurance contracts.

3. Merchant Marine Academy.—The Merchant Marine Academy was established to train cadets to serve as deck and/or engineering officers in the U.S. merchant marine. In addition, many of the Academy graduates now serve as leaders in the U.S. maritime industry. Approximately 200 cadets graduate each year. The Academy provides space on their grounds at Kings Point, N.Y., for two other agencies plus the Maritime Administration's National Maritime Research Center. During the past 2 years an intensified modernization program resulted in renovation of the cadet dining room, canteen, barracks and recreational building (Land Hall). In 1974 projects are proposed for partial modernization of the electrical system.

4. State marine schools.—Federal assistance is given to eligible States who establish a State marine school to train cadets to serve as deck or engineering officers in the U.S. Merchant Marine. The States supply the majority of the funding, while the Federal Government provides yearly direct grants of $75 thousand; annual allowances of $600 for each enrolled cadet; and repair of training ships. Currently schools are established in California, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, New York, and Texas. In 1972, there were 355 graduates.

5. Use of waterborne transportation systems.—This activity provides for direct technical and administrative costs of programs aimed at enhancing the use of waterborne transportation systems and meeting the Nation's shipping requirements with a minimum of Government aid. These include programs for: Operating-differential subsidy; market development; cargo preference; port development; and promotion of intermodal systems. This activity also provides for the costs of a technical engineering and design staff in support of research and development projects in the advanced ship operations systems program.

6. General administration.—This activity covers all administrative support costs that are not directly assignable to other entity programs. This includes a major portion of the following functions: accounting, budgeting, management analysis, personnel, public affairs, administrative services, data processing and executive direction. These costs include salaries, benefits, travel, and other support items necessary to carry out these activities.

The Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, established the Federal ship financing fund for the purpose of insuring construction loans and mortgages on U.S. flag vessels built in the United States. The fund is authorized to insure aggregate outstanding balances of up to $3 billion less $25 million of authority which has been transferred to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to insure construction loans and mortgages on fishing vessels.

Budget program.—The 1973 program provides for advances up to $1.9 million to operators for principal payments because of depressed tanker and general cargo ship market so as to avert defaults on mortgages insured by the fund. There are no anticipated advances or defaults in 1974. A main feature of the 1974 program is the commencement of payment of all costs of administering this program from income to the fund. A reimbursement of $1,928 thousand to the Operations and training appropriation is anticipated.

Financing.—The fund receives income from insurance premiums on construction loans and mortgages, fees and interest on U.S. Government securities and mortgages held directly. The payment of administrative expenses is to be made from income, while payments for advances to operators, redemption of defaulted loans and mortgages are paid from income, equity, and borrowings from the Treasury Department. No borrowings are anticipated in 1974.

The Maritime Administration is authorized to re-activate, operate, deactivate, charter merchant vessels, and operate experimental vessels under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Commerce. These operations are financed by the Vessel operations revolving fund. In addition, the fund is available to finance the necessary expenses to protect, maintain, preserve, acquire and use vessels involved in mortgage-foreclosure or forfeiture proceedings instituted by the United States.

Budget program.—As of June 30, 1972, there are approximately 400 claims with an estimated settlement value of $2 million in process of settlement which resulted from operation of Government-owned ships and general agency agreements in the Vietnam sealift. In addition, the ship reactivation evaluation program will continue. It was developed in 1972 to establish and evaluate techniques necessary to rapidly convert a reserve fleet ship from lay-up to an active or berth status when required to meet an emergency need.

Financing.—Expenses are financed by charter hire revenue and reimbursements from Federal agencies.

The Maritime Administration is authorized by 46 U.S.C. 1281-1294, as amended, to insure against loss or damage by marine war risks when it is found commercial insurance cannot be obtained on reasonable terms and conditions. This insurance includes war risk hull and disbursements interim insurance, war risk protection and indemnity interim insurance, second seamen's war risk interim insurance, and war risk builder's risk prelaunching and postlaunching insurance and a contingent war risk cargo insurance standby program. Authority to underwrite insurance has been authorized to September 7, 1975, having been extended at 5-year intervals since 1950.

Budget program.—As of June 30, 1972, insurance outstanding covered over 1,100 vessels in operation and under construction in domestic yards. In the event of an outbreak of war between any of the five great powers, the insurance exposure would approximate $17 billion.

In addition, under 46 U.S.C. 1285, the Maritime Administration provides second seamen's war risk insurance covering the crews of 134 vessels under contract to or chartered by the Military Sealift Command.

Financing.—Under 46 U.S.C. 1288, the Secretary of Commerce established the War risk insurance revolving fund. It receives income from binder fees, insurance premiums, interest from investments and claim reimbursements from other Federal agencies. Underwriting agent's fees and expenses, appraisal contractors' fees, and insurance claims are paid from this income. While additional appropriations for the program are authorized, none are requested for 1974.

RESERVE FORCES

The following appropriations are for the reserve components, which include: Army and Air National Guard; and Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force Reserves.

National Guard and Reserve personnel.—These programs provide funds for training members of the Ready Reserve required for early mobilization needs of the active forces. Most of the paid National Guard and Reserve personnel perform 48 or 24 drills and attend 2 weeks of active duty for training each year. Other personnel not requiring as intensive training receive only a period of active duty for training (usually 2 weeks) during the year. Active duty for basic training is provided for personnel enlisting in the National Guard or Reserve who have not previously received military training. Service schools and special tours of active duty training provide additional training for limited numbers of the Ready Reserve.

The numbers of National Guard and Reserve personnel estimated to participate in the paid training programs are summarized in the following table:

Reserve officer candidates.—The Reserve Officers' Training Corps program provides training for reserve and regular officer candidates who have enrolled in the course while attending a collegiate institution at which an ROTC unit has been established. College graduates who satisfactorily complete the advanced course of the program are commissioned and are ordinarily ordered to active duty for a minimum period of 2 years.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps Vitalization Act of 1964, as amended by Public Law 92-166, authorizes a limited number of scholarships for 4-year ROTC students on a competitive basis. Successful candidates for the scholarships are required to serve a minimum period of 4 years on active duty upon graduation and appointment as a commissioned officer. There will be about 6,500 scholarship recipients in the Army and Air Force and about 5,900 in the Navy in 1974.

The Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force provide training for students who elect to enroll in ROTC training at the secondary level of education, and are programed to have units at 650, 233, 47, and 275 schools, respectively, in operation in 1974.

The numbers of candidates commissioned from these programs are summarized below:

This estimate includes funds for the pay of all military personnel on the retired lists of the Department of Defense. The estimate represents the consolidated requirements of the military departments for: (a) Payments to retired officers and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force; (b) retainer pay of regular enlisted personnel of the fleet reserve of the Navy and Fleet Marine Corps Reserve; and (c) survivors' benefits. The primary gains to the retired rolls can be attributed to the greater number of individuals attaining eligibility for retirement after 20 or more years of active military service. The following tabulation shows the average number of personnel on the rolls during 1972 compared with estimated numbers for 1973 and 1974.

Under the provisions of Public Law 92-425 "Survivors Benefit Plan" greater coverage is provided for survivors of retired and active military personnel at a lower cost than under the old Retired Serviceman's Family Protection Plan which is no longer available. It also guarantees current widows of deceased members with minimum annual incomes. Since coverage under Public Law 92-425 is automatic unless specifically declined by the military member, it is anticipated that at least 75% of eligible members will subscribe. As a result their contributions will offset payments to survivors by $70 million in 1974.

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

The appropriations under this title finance the day-to-day costs, except military personnel costs, of operating and maintaining the Armed Forces, including the reserve components, and related support activities of the Department of Defense. These funds include amounts for pay of civilians, contract services for maintenance of equipment and facilities, fuel, supplies, and repair parts for weapons and equipment. Financial requirements for these appropriations are influenced by a variety of factors, the principal of which are force levels, such as the number of aircraft squadrons or Army or Marine Corps divisions, military strength and deployments, rates of operational activity, number of installations, and quantity and complexity of major equipment (aircraft, ships, missiles, tanks, etc.) in operation.

ACTIVE FORCES

Funds to operate the active forces and their support are contained in five operation and maintenance appropriations: one for each of the four services and one for Defense agencies. In 1974 the operation and maintenance appropriations will include approximately $0.6 billion for the cost of alterations and modifications to major weapons and equipments, previously financed in various procurement appropriations. The 1974 estimates also contain approximately $140 million for the replacement of about 31,000 military personnel with civilians in various support-type positions.

The programs covered under this heading are described below:

1. Strategic forces.—Strategic offensive forces include more than 450 manned B-52 and FB-111 bombers and 1,054 advanced ICBM's operated by the Air Force as well as the Navy's submarine missile fleet which deploys 656 Polaris and Poseidon missiles. Estimates for 1974 reflect increased deployment of Minuteman III missiles and conversion of additional submarines from Polaris to the more advanced Poseidon ballistic missile.

Strategic defensive forces consist of antiaircraft missile units of the Army, interceptor fighter aircraft of the Air Force, and various warning, command, and control systems operated by the Air Force.

2. General purpose forces.—These forces of the four military services operate under the control of the various unified and specified commands. They consist of the tactical air forces of the Navy, Air Force, and Marines, the ground forces and supporting aircraft elements of the Army and Marine Corps, and Navy combatant and support ships. Among these forces are those deployed to eastern Asia, the western Pacific, and to Europe in the NATO area; the fleets operating in the Pacific, the Atlantic, and the Mediterranean; and the backup contingency forces in the United States.

Our tactical air forces consist of Air Force tactical air wings, Navy carrier-based air wings, and Marine air wings. The missions performed by these forces include maintaining air superiority, interdiction bombing, close air support, reconnaissance, combat crew training and special operations. During 1974 the F-4 Phantom jet fighter will continue to be the workhorse for all three services. The F-14 will be introduced into the Navy to replace some F-4's in the air superiority/fleet air defense role; the Air Force will continue to phase in the A-7 to replace older attack aircraft; and the Marine Corps will initiate a modernization program to replace its older F-4's with the improved F-4J system.

Army land forces to be supported in 1974 consist of infantry, mechanized, armored, airborne, and airmobile divisions for the conduct of land warfare. Also provided for are the force elements needed for support of these divisions during the initial stages of combat plus a limited number of units required for sustained combat support.

Marine Corps land forces consist of divisions and supporting force troop elements designed to conduct amphibious assault operations and other missions with the close support of Marine aviation.

Naval forces include aircraft carriers, submarines, amphibious forces, antisubmarine forces, and antiair warfare forces. Additional nuclear-propelled vessels will be introduced into the fleets in 1974. These include the aircraft carrier Nimitz, five submarines and two guided missile frigates. Five conventional combat ships will also become operational. The addition of all these modern vessels will permit inactivation of obsolete vessels constructed during World War II. During 1974 all anti-submarine warfare aircraft carriers (CVS's) will be phased out of the fleet. A total of three attack carriers (CVA's) will be configured for multi-purpose operations (CV's) by the end of 1974.

3. Intelligence and communications.—This program comprises the centrally directed Defense intelligence and security function, the major portion of the consolidated telecommunications program (CTP), the National Military Command System, and other special activities which are related to and support the missions of the combat forces in the strategic, general purpose, and airlift/sealift programs. Included in the CTP portion are the bulk of the Defense Communications System (DCS) common user transmission and switching systems as well as certain non-DCS communications. Funds to support intelligence, security, and communications activities are contained in the various appropriations of each of the military services, and, in the case of the Defense Communications Agency, Defense Nuclear Agency, Defense Intelligence Agency, Defense Mapping Agency, Defense Investigative Service, and National Security Agency, in the Defense agencies appropriation. Included among the special activities are Army combat development activities, Navy oceanographic and weather programs and Air Force weather, air rescue and recovery, and air traffic control and landing system programs.

4. Airlift and sealift.—This provides air, land, and sea transportation services for all the Armed Forces in peacetime as well as quick reaction strategic mobility and logistical support in wartime. The major commands in this program are the Military Airlift Command of the Air Force, the Military Sealift Command of the Navy, and the Military Traffic Management and Terminal Service of the Army, all of which are industrially funded operations whose costs are reimbursed by the users. The operation and maintenance appropriations directly provide for certain administrative and base service support expenses for each of these industrially funded activities.

7. Central supply and maintenance.—This program includes funds for specialized supply and maintenance activities. It provides resources for the determination of inventory levels, procurement (excluding acquisition costs), storage, distribution, depot-level maintenance and transportation of military materiel. These functions are managed by the military services and conducted at various locations worldwide such as supply depots and centers, inventory control points, and repair facilities as well as through commercial contractors.

In addition, the Defense Supply Agency provides common supply and service support to the military services within the continental United States and manages bulk petroleum worldwide. The Defense Supply Agency also manages Defense-owned idle industrial plant equipment, the Defense surplus property disposal program, and the Defense portion of the Federal catalog program. It is also responsible for providing contract administration services including enforcement of the equal employment provisions of Executive Order 11246, as amended, administration and supervision of Department of Defense material utilization program, and coordinated procurement programs. Requirements for the Defense Supply Agency are included under Operation and Maintenance, Defense Agencies.

The 1974 estimates reflect the reorganization and consolidation of certain supply functions.

8. Training, medical, and other general personnel activities.—Each of the military services trains individuals for duty as officers or enlisted men. This includes recruit training, career training, and specialized training in many occupational skills. These requirements are influenced by the number of new recruits entering the services, the total strength of the services, and by the introduction of new equipment and weapons. Most of this training is conducted at service-operated facilities, such as training centers for the training of new recruits, at technical schools which afford training in specific military occupational skills, and at pilot training bases. Education of prospective officers is accomplished by the three service academies and by Reserve Officer Training Corps units at universities and colleges.

The complete transition to an all-volunteer force by the start of 1974, necessitates a strong recruiting effort to attract new personnel, and greater incentives to retain existing personnel. Funds for these purposes are included in the 1974 estimates.

The services operate 206 hospitals to provide medical care for active and retired military personnel and for dependents. In addition, this program finances a medical program at civilian medical facilities for personnel in areas where service hospitals are not accessible.

9. Administration and associated activities.—This program includes the costs of departmental administration of major field command headquarters, and general support activities such as finance and audit.

10. Support of other nations.—This program includes the direct support of Allied Forces in Southeast Asia, military assistance missions, and advisory groups of foreign nations, and also the U.S. share of NATO, SEATO and CENTO costs, and support of U.S. organizations related to these international military headquarters.

RESERVE FORCES

The following appropriations are for the reserve components, which include: Army and Air National Guard; and Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force Reserves. The military services train reserve component units and operate and maintain facilities such as training centers, air bases, and field training sites for the use of such units. Changes in financial requirements are primarily related to priorities given to improving mobilization readiness through equipment modernization and intensified training. Appropriations for the Army and Air National Guard retain the structure of previous years. Newly established appropriations for the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force Reserves are structured as follows:

Mission forces.—Included within this category are training operations and logistics support.

Depot maintenance.—This provides depot level maintenance including repair, overhaul, and modification of vehicles, aircraft, and other equipment.

Other support.—Consists primarily of activities related to base operations and maintenance, medical support, and headquarters and command.

ALLOCATIONS RECEIVED FROM OTHER ACCOUNTS

Note.—Obligations incurred under allocations from other accounts are shown in the schedules of the parent appropriations, as follows:
Funds appropriated to the President: "Military assistance."

PROCUREMENT

The procurement appropriations of the Department of Defense finance the acquisition of capital equipment such as aircraft, missiles, ships, combat and support vehicles, weapons, torpedoes, and communications; air, ground, and ship munitions; major items for support of the capital equipment when it is in use; the industrial facilities necessary to produce that equipment; and major modification of equipment in inventory where modernization can be achieved without buying new equipment. The capital equipment financed by these appropriations is principally procured from private contractors or produced in Government arsenals, shipyards, and plants.

The 1974 program continues the production of modern equipment and weapons in support of United States and allied forces. The equipment inventories necessary to support conventional as well as strategic warfare missions of armed services continue to be augmented and modernized. Our military capability is improved by continuing programs to increase the mobility and firepower of ground forces, strengthen the tactical air forces, modernize airlift forces, and augment the capabilities of antisubmarine warfare forces.

Direct budget programs are estimated as follows (in millions of dollars):

This appropriation provides for the construction of new ships and the conversion of existing ships, including all hull, mechanical and electrical equipment, electronics, guns, torpedo and missile launching systems, and communication systems. It also provides for the procurement of long-leadtime items for ships for which authorization will be required in the 1975 and later year programs.

The 1974 program continues the Navy's long-range modernization and replacement program designed to provide the fleet with modern balanced forces which can effectively respond to a wide variety of challenges in supporting our national policies.

1. Fleet ballistic missile ships.—Funds are requested in this activity to convert five ballistic missile submarines from the Polaris to the Poseidon missile capability to improve our sea-based ballistic missile weapons system. The request also includes the first ballistic missile firing submarine of the Trident class. This ship will be capable of firing a larger undersea strategic missile. Long-leadtime equipment will also be procured for additional future submarines.

2. Other warships.—The 1974 request includes the third Nimitz class nuclear powered aircraft carrier. It will provide the Navy with an aircraft carrier capable of sustained operations and long-range assignments independent of fuel limitations. The request also includes five high-performance, high-speed nuclear powered attack submarines and seven DD-963 class destroyers. The DD-963 destroyers will stress standardization, automation, and improved reliability and maintainability to minimize life cycle costs. They will include the latest design techniques and margins for future modernization. Funds are also requested for procurement of long-leadtime components for submarines and destroyers whose authorization will be requested in 1975. Funds are requested for modernization of one nuclear powered guided missile frigate and two conventionally powered guided missile frigates to improve fleet anti-air-warfare capability. The request also includes advance procurement funds for the first Sea Control Ship whose authorization will be requested in 1975.

4. Mine warfare and patrol ships.—This activity includes funds for the procurement of long-leadtime components to be installed on patrol hydrofoil ships and patrol frigates whose authorization will be requested in 1975.

5. Auxiliaries and craft.—Various funds are requested in this budget activity for craft, outfitting material, post delivery, cost growth, and escalation.

They also provide for scientific research supporting defense functions and operations. Work is performed by Government laboratories, universities, industrial contractors, and nonprofit organizations. Research and development programs are as a rule funded so that each year's resources support 1 year's increment of the total program cost. Funds required for the research and development related to civil defense responsibilities of the Department of Defense are carried in the separate title, Civil Defense.

The total 1974 budget plan for Defense research, development, test, and evaluation appropriations includes a $536 million increase from the current 1973 plan, reaching a total of $8,555 million. The specific activities included in the 1974 budget plan are discussed below under each budget activity. The budget plans and estimated obligations under appropriations in this title for the Army, Navy, Air Force, Defense agencies, and Director of Test and Evaluation, Defense are summarized as follows (in thousands of dollars):

1. Military sciences.—This activity supports research of potential military application in the physical, mathematical, environmental, engineering, biomedical, and behavioral sciences. The objective of this research is to provide the basic understanding necessary to efficiently develop new systems and improve military operations.

Some of the support for in-house organizations such as the Naval Research Laboratory and some of the Federal contract research centers is also provided here. In addition to the amounts directly provided for in this activity, applied research is supported in industry by certain allowable indirect costs which may be permitted under contracts funded by both the research, development, test, and evaluation and procurement appropriations.

2. Aircraft and related equipment.—This activity funds research, development, test, and evaluation related to airframes, engines, avionics, and other installed aircraft equipment, as well as applied research in supporting aeronautical technologies. It also funds the development of major aircraft systems.

Programs receiving major increases in 1974 include the Air Force A-X close air support aircraft, EF-111A electronic warfare support aircraft, SCAD strategic bomber penetration decoy, and advanced medium STOL transport; the Navy CH-53E helicopter; and the Army UTTAS logistics helicopter, heavy lift helicopter, and new advanced attack helicopter. Funds are also programmed for aerial targets, new engines, and Navy air ASW systems.

The Air Force B-1 advanced strategic bomber continues in full-scale development. Prototype programs continuing development include the Air Force lightweight fighter and the Navy V/STOL aircraft. Programs nearing completion in 1974 include the Air Force F-15 air superiority fighter and F-5E international fighter; and the Navy F-14A and F-14B interceptors, S-3A antisubmarine warfare aircraft, and E-2C airborne early warning aircraft.

This activity also funds research and development efforts at centers such as the Air Force Armament Development and Test Center in Florida, the Naval Air Development Center in Johnsville, Pa., and the Army Air Mobility Centers in Virginia, Ohio, California, and Missouri.

3. Missiles and related equipment.—This activity provides for research, development, test, and evaluation of missile systems of all types. In the strategic area, the Trident submarine-launched ballistic missile system shows a major increase in 1974. Development will commence on a submarine launched strategic cruise missile. In addition, development will proceed on the Safeguard antiballistic missile system; on Site Defense of Minuteman, and on technology for improved strategic missile and antiballistic missile systems.

Tactical systems continuing in development include the Army SAM-D air defense system, Stinger man-portable anti-aircraft missile system, and Hellfire helicopter air-to-ground missile; and the Navy Harpoon antiship missile, and Agile air-to-air dogfight missile. Tactical systems nearing completion include the Navy Phoenix air-to-air missile system, improved Sidewinder and Sparrow air-to-air missiles, Condor air-to-surface missile, and Aegis fleet defense missile system.

In addition to funding contracts with industry in the missile research and development program, this activity is a major source of financial support for the operation of certain test and evaluation facilities such as the Western Test Range, the White Sands Missile Range, the Naval Weapons Center at China Lake, and the research and development programs at the Army's Redstone Arsenal.

4. Military astronautics and related equipment.—Funded under this activity are programs directed toward the improvement of space technology for military purposes and the development of space vehicles for specific military missions. Major programs include a spaceborne ballistic missile early warning system and a new tactical communications satellite. There is increased funding in 1974 for a prototype satellite to demonstrate precise navigation capabilities. Continued support will be provided for flight experiment programs as well as technology effort in advanced navigation, guidance, sensors, cooling, reentry, and propulsion. Funding will be made available for investigations relating to potential military uses of the NASA Space Shuttle program. This activity also includes funds for the Aerospace Corporation, as well as contractual efforts related to space technology.

5. Ships, small craft, and related equipment.—This activity provides for applied research, development, test, and evaluation of ship structures and equipment, including propulsion, communications, navigation, and surveillance systems directly affecting ship operations. It includes the design, prototype fabrication, and performance evaluation of new types of ships, sonars, countermeasure devices, marine gas turbines, and nuclear propulsion plants.

Effort will increase on surface effects ship development. There will be continuing effort on new antisubmarine warfare sensors, nuclear propulsion reactors, patrol hydrofoil craft, and antiship missile countermeasures. Much of the effort at the Naval Ship Research and Development Center is funded under this activity.

6. Ordnance, combat vehicles, and related equipment.—This activity provides for the development, test, and evaluation of improved artillery, guns, rocket launchers, mortars, small arms, mines, grenades, torpedoes, nuclear and chemical munitions, and conventional air-launched weapons, as well as for the exploration and evaluation of new fuzes, propellants, explosives, detonators, dispensers, and armor.

Programs increasing in 1974 include improved guns for the Air Force A-X close air support aircraft and F-15A air superiority aircraft, the new Army main battle tank prototype, the Army vehicle rapid fire cannon, and tri-service programs exploring the feasibility of military applications for lasers. Continuing in development are the Army mechanized infantry combat vehicle, armored reconnaissance scout vehicle, and new 105 mm. howitzer. Programs nearing completion in 1974 are the Navy Captor mine and MK-48 torpedo, and the Army 155 mm. advanced howitzer.

This activity provides principal support for research and development activities at several Army centers.

7. Other equipment.—This activity provides for research, development, test, and evaluation of equipment not separately funded under other activities. Examples of programs funded here are electronic warfare devices, chemical and biological agent detection and protective equipment, antisubmarine warfare surveillance systems, intelligence and reconnaissance equipment, and defense suppression projects. Programs in support of improved logistics, facilities design, and training are provided in this activity. Major programs funded here include the Air Force airborne warning and control system (AWACS) and advanced airborne command post. This activity also funds much of the support at the Electromagnetic Compatibility Analysis Center, the Army Land Warfare Laboratory, and the Army Desert Test Center.

8. Programwide management and support.—For the Army, this activity provides support for programwide activities and technical information efforts not distributed directly to other budget activities. For the Navy, this activity funds similar programwide support effort as well as test and evaluation programs such as the USS Hip Pocket. For the Air Force, this activity provides for certain costs of central administration both for the Air Force Systems Command and several large research development, test, and evaluation centers. Support for interservice test and evaluation is funded in this activity.

9. Emergency fund.—No funds are requested in 1974.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

The direct military construction programs for the Armed Forces, both Active and Reserve, shown in the individual schedules of this title are summarized in the following table:

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

(In thousands of dollars)

	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Active forces.....	1,121,989	1,392,488	1,716,200
Reserve forces.....	93,026	121,800	126,200
Interservice activities.....	11,681	45,121	49,100
Total.....	1,226,696	1,559,409	1,891,500

Most of the appropriations required for the military construction accounts are dependent upon the enactment of authorizing legislation. The details of this legislation have been completed and are being submitted to the Congress for early consideration.

1. Major construction.—This category provides for the acquisition of land and for construction of military projects as authorized in currently effective military construction acts and the new authorization, referred to above. These authorizations include construction projects as defined in Department of Defense Directive 7040.2 where the estimated cost of such construction generally exceeds $50 thousand per project. Under this category the major activities proposed for 1974 are as follows:

Strategic forces.—Provision has been made to upgrade existing facilities and provide for personnel support for strategic warfare systems. Funds also have been provided to commence construction of a complex to support the Trident weapons system.

General purpose forces.—Projects in this category support general combat forces including their command organizations, the logistics organizations organic to these forces, and the related support units, including medical, which are deployed or deployable as constituent parts of military forces and field organizations. The 1974 funding reflects continuing increased emphasis on service attractiveness, particularly improved troop housing and community support facilities.

Specialized activities.—Funds are provided for the continued support of the joint defense effort of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Funding for abatement of air and water pollution at defense installations is continued at the previous high levels to assure that actions to correct violations of Federal, State, and local air and water quality standards have been taken or are underway.

Research and development.—The 1974 program includes facilities required in support of programs to advance knowledge and technology in such areas as weapons systems, communications, electronics, and medicine. These programs emphasize reliability, effectiveness, security, and safety, as well as improved capability.

Reserve components.—The increased funding programed for facilities required for the training of the National Guard and the other Reserve forces reflects the importance placed on these activities being identified as the primary source of augmentation of Active forces in future emergencies.

Logistics.—Funding is provided at about the same level as in recent years for the modernization and replacement of aircraft, ship and ground equipment maintenance, overhaul and repair facilities needed to satisfy deficiencies in current operations and meet new requirements resulting from technological advances.

Personnel support.—A major portion of the 1974 program will provide funds for improved housing, medical and community support for lower grade enlisted personnel and junior grade officers to encourage their retention in the service and the development of an all-volunteer force. Upgrading of existing facilities with the application of improved standards has been provided in addition to new construction.

2. Minor construction.—Provision is made for construction of permanent and temporary projects that are not otherwise authorized by law but which are determined to be urgently required and do not exceed $300 thousand per project for the Active forces and $50 thousand per project for the Reserve component projects. An Active force project may be accomplished without determination of urgency if the cost does not exceed $50 thousand or if the savings in maintenance and operations cost are estimated to exceed the cost of the project within 3 years after project completion. Operation and maintenance funds are to be used where the estimated cost of an Active force project is $50 thousand or less.

3. Planning.—This provides for necessary planning of military construction projects, including design, standards, criteria, studies, appraisals, and other related activities.

4. Supporting activities.—Provision is made for activities such as the defense access road program and minor land acquisition.

sideration. An appropriation of $1,250.6 million is requested for 1974, of which $423.8 million is for construction of new housing, construction of mobile home facilities, improvement of existing housing and related projects, and $826.8 million is for the operation and maintenance of family housing and related facilities, for leasing of family housing, for payments required on the indebtedness assumed to acquire Capehart and Wherry housing, and to build surplus commodity housing in foreign countries and for authorized payments of servicemen's mortgage insurance premiums.

1. Construction. (a) Construction of new housing.—The construction of 11,688 new permanent units at an estimated cost of $351.9 million is proposed in furtherance of the continuing effort to provide adequate family housing for eligible personnel. The 11,688 units are distributed by service as follows: Army—6,135; Navy and Marine Corps—3,741; Air Force—1,800; and Defense Intelligence Agency—12. In addition to the construction of new permanent family housing units, $5.7 million is provided for construction of mobile home facilities to accommodate those service members with privately owned mobile homes.

(b) Construction improvements.—Execution of the $65.5 million improvement program will be realized during 1974, of which $2.7 million provides for projects to be accomplished under the authority of 10 U.S.C. 2674.

(c) Planning.—Funds are included in the construction of new housing budget activity to design the 11,688 housing units in the 1974 program. Costs to be incurred for planning future year housing projects and for projects which will not go forward to completion are estimated at $700 thousand.

2. Operation, maintenance, and interest payment.—(a) Operation.—$334.2 million is required in 1974 for the operation of an estimated 380,006 family housing units (excluding leased units); and $44.7 million is required in 1974 to lease 16,654 units in both the United States and in foreign countries as part of the program to provide adequate family housing for eligible personnel.

(b) Maintenance of real property.—The cost of maintenance and repair of the 1974 family housing inventory is estimated at $294.4 million. Minor alterations, not to exceed an average of $100 per unit, are funded in this subactivity.

(c) Interest payments.—A total of $58.4 million is required in 1974 to defray interest charges on the indebtedness assumed to acquire Capehart and Wherry housing and for related expenses. In addition, appropriation of $100.2 million is required in 1974 for reduction of agency indebtedness that was assumed with the acquisition of the Capehart, Wherry, and surplus commodity housing.

(d) Mortgage insurance premiums.—Premium payments of $6.0 million are required on mortgage insurance provided by the Federal Housing Administration: (1) through the General insurance funds on mortgages assumed by Defense to acquire Capehart and Wherry housing; and (2) on mortgages assumed by active military personnel for housing purchased under the provisions of 12 U.S.C. 1715m.

This fund finances a program for reducing the losses of military personnel and civilian employees incident to disposition of their one- or two-family dwellings when military installations are closed or when reductions in the scope of operations are ordered. Eligible personnel may be reimbursed for certain losses resulting from the sale of their dwellings located at or near such installations, or the Department of Defense may acquire such property. Proceeds from sale or rental of such property are deposited in this fund. The following business-type statements reflect operations of the program which started in 1968.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE STOCK FUNDS

By authority of 10 U.S.C. 2208, the Department of Defense stock funds finance the acquisition of inventories of consumable materials and supplies (items which are uneconomical to repair) for resale to the military services and other authorized customers. These inventories are stocked and sold at defense activities worldwide. The stock funds also finance inventories of consumable material for use in case of mobilization.

Budget program.—Obligations increase in 1973 and 1974 as inventory approaches balance with required stock levels. Year end inventories are estimated as shown below (in millions of dollars):

Financing the budget program.—Funds for financing the budget program are usually derived from sales to customers. During 1972, reductions of inventory levels and sales of inventory capitalized without cost generated an excess working capital balance of $509 million which was transferred to other appropriations. In 1973, an additional excess $719 million is programmed for transfer. Expenditures in 1974 are projected to decrease by $166 million from 1973 resulting from reductions in inventory levels. Yearly expenditures are estimated as shown below (in millions of dollars):

	Gross expenditures
	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Army stock fund	2,593	2,843	2,739
Navy stock fund	1,844	1,772	1,725
Marine Corps stock fund	187	192	197
Air Force stock fund	3,018	3,026	3,062
Defense stock fund	2,175	2,272	2,216
Total DOD stock funds	9,817	10,105	9,939

DOD stock funds are authorized to incur obligations in anticipation of future year sales (10 U.S.C. 2210(b)). This is necessary because the procurement leadtime on material is greater than the time required to fill and collect for customer orders. Pursuant to this authority, contract authority of $823 million was available at the end of 1972, decreasing to $314 million in 1974.

Operating results and financial condition.—Net losses of $213 million and $37 million are forecast for 1973 and 1974 respectively. These losses result largely from disposal and donation of excess and surplus inventory.

Investment (equity) of the U.S. Government at the end of 1974 is estimated at $8,346 million; including $19,227 million in inventory and other assets capitalized less $6,215 million in working capital transferred out and a cumulative operating deficit of $4,666 million.

INDUSTRIAL FUNDS

Department of Defense industrial funds finance activities performing industrial or commercial type functions on a reimbursable basis (10 U.S.C. 2208). Work orders are received at the activities from a variety of service accounts; the funds provide working capital for the completion of these orders. The customer then reimburses the activity through progress payments for the full production costs. Government investment as of June 30, 1974, is estimated at $554 million.

Budget program.—Estimated total costs of goods and services produced in 1974 are projected to decrease by $262 million, reflecting a continuing downtrend in support requirements. Year end totals are shown in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

TOTAL PRODUCTION COSTS

	1972 actual	1973 estimate	1974 estimate
Army industrial fund.....	1,372,221	1,443,769	1,306,872
Navy industrial fund.....	4,686,824	4,688,072	4,581,493
Marine Corps industrial fund.....	20,768	21,595	21,149

Total	8,869,449	8,740,881	8,478,522

The U.S. Army activities financed through the Army industrial fund include depot maintenance activities, research activities, arsenals, the U.S. Army Missile Command and the Eastern and Western areas of the Military Traffic Management and Terminal Service. Depot maintenance activities are projected to show a decrease in 1974.

The Navy industrial fund finances a wide variety of activities including aircraft rework facilities, ordnance stations, research laboratories, shipyards, strategic systems project offices, printing plants, public works centers and the Military Sealift Command. Increases in workload at research activities are offset by decreases in the workload of ordnance stations and the Military Sealift Command.

The Marine Corps industrial fund finances maintenance depots engaged in repairing or overhauling Marine Corps equipment and providing technical engineering support. The cost of operations is projected to remain relatively level over the 3-year period.

The activities financed under the Air Force industrial fund include printing plants, laundries, depot maintenance activities, and the Military Airlift Command. The two research and development laboratories will be phased out by the end of 1973. The costs of goods and services produced are decreasing due to the removal of the research activities and lower airlift customer requirements.

The Defense industrial fund finances the Defense Clothing and Textile Supply Center and leased communications procured by the Defense Commercial Communications Office. The cost decrease in 1974 is due to a reduction in the quantity of transoceanic circuitry for the Defense Communications System.

1. Surveys.—Navigation and flood control studies are made to determine the need and economic justification for proposed water and related land resource developments. Beach erosion control studies are undertaken to determine the need for shore protection and remedial measures at specific localities. Funds are provided in 1974 to continue 71 navigation, 119 flood control, and 17 beach erosion surveys. A total of 10 new and reoriented studies (including one special study) will be undertaken, placing major emphasis on the solution of urgent urban area water problems.

Comprehensive river basin studies provide for broad consideration of water and related land resource needs of river basins. They are coordinated with the related river basin planning efforts of the Departments of the Interior and Agriculture and other concerned agencies.

Work will be continued in 1974 on the following comprehensive basin studies:

- | | |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------|
| 1. Connecticut River supplemental study | 4. Platte River Basin, Nebr. |
| 2. Long Island Sound Region, Conn. and N.Y. | 5. Southeastern New England Region, Mass., Conn., and R.I. |
| 3. Pacific Northwest River Basins, Idaho, Mont., Oreg., and Wash. | |

Work will be initiated in 1974 on the following:

- | | |
|----------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------|
| 1. Hawaii framework | 3. Minneapolis-St. Paul Metro Area, Minn. |
| 2. Maumee River Basin, Ohio, Ind., and Mich. | |

In addition, funds are provided for preparation of authorization reports on the following:

- | | |
|---------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------|
| 1. Big Muddy River Basin, Ill. | 5. Susquehanna River Basin, N.Y., Pa., and Md. |
| 2. Connecticut River Basin, Conn., Mass., N.H., and Vt. | 6. Wabash River Basin, Ind. and Ill. |
| 3. Kanawha River Basin, W. Va., Va., and N.C. | 7. Willamette River Basin, Oreg. |
| 4. Puget Sound Region, Wash. | |

Special studies are made to resolve unique or especially complex water resources problems. Funds are requested to continue four special studies including a nationwide inventory of dams.

Funds are provided to restudy three authorized projects previously carried in a deferred category.

Funds also are provided, in accordance with section 216 of Public Law 91-611, to review the operation of completed projects constructed by the Corps of Engineers when found advisable due to significantly changed physical or economic conditions and recommendations are made to Congress for desirable modifications.

Surveys are made in coordination with Federal, State, and local agencies and interests. They give appropriate consideration to present and future requirements for all beneficial uses of water and related land resources, including navigation, flood control, water supply, irrigation, water quality control, power, recreation, and fish and wildlife conservation.

2. Collection and study of basic data.—Funds are transferred to the Geological Survey for installation, operation, and maintenance of stream gaging stations; to the Weather Bureau for hydrometeorological studies; and to the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife for preauthorization studies of the effects of proposed projects upon fish and wildlife. The Corps of Engineers participates on a number of engineering and control boards that study and control international streams mutually affecting the United States and Canada. Information about the flood hazard, advice, and assistance are furnished to the States and local governmental agencies, upon their request, and to other Federal agencies for guidance in the management of flood plain areas to assure the best and safest use of such areas. A hydrologic engineering center embraces the functions of hydrological research, training, methods systemization, and special project assistance. A scientific and technical information center prepares and distributes literature to scientists and engineers to improve their knowledge of new developments in their fields.

3. Research and development.—Coastal engineering research and development studies deal with physical phenomena, techniques, basic principles, and remedial or control measures related to shore protection and improvement. The results of these studies are disseminated to interested Federal, State, and local agencies and individuals.

Civil works investigations are conducted to improve procedures for analysis of engineering data; to conduct research and training activities; to refine design methods; to develop better materials and practices for the construction, operation, and maintenance of water resource facilities; to investigate rapid excavation techniques by use of explosives in the construction of civil works projects; and to improve procedures used in formulating plans for water resources development.

The requested appropriation of $859 million is a decrease of $346 million from the appropriation for 1973, and a decrease of $166 million compared with the appropriation for 1972. About 69% of the requested appropriation will be applied to 46 major projects in amounts of $5 million or more each.

1. Advance engineering and design.—Design studies establish project features and cost estimates required for preparation of contract plans. The funds requested will bring designs and plans for a limited number of high-priority projects to the stage where they will be ready for construction, and will permit continuation or initiation of planning on other needed projects.

2. Navigation projects.—This activity includes construction of locks, dams, and canals, and improvement of channels and harbors by dredging and by construction of breakwaters, jetties, and dikes. The construction of small navigation projects not requiring specific congressional authority will be financed from funds appropriated in prior years.

With the funds requested, work will be continued in 1974 on 13 lock, dam, and canal projects and on 31 channel and harbor projects, of which one will be completed. Construction will be initiated on the following:

CHANNEL AND HARBOR PROJECTS

- | | |
|--------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------|
| 1. Humboldt Harbor, Alaska | 3. Chowan River, N.C., and Blackwater River, Va. ¹ |
| 2. Tred Avon River, Md. ¹ | |

¹ To be initiated and completed.

3. Beach erosion control projects.—The Federal Government assists in the construction of works for the restoration and protection against erosion by waves and currents of the shores of the United States and its possessions. Existing law provides for Federal payment of 50% of the cost of beach erosion control works for the protection of non-Federal publicly owned or publicly used shores, and up to 70% of the cost of protection of State and other publicly owned shore parks and conservation areas that meet certain criteria. The construction of small beach erosion control projects not requiring specific congressional authority will be financed from funds appropriated in prior years.

Funds are requested for nine beach erosion projects. Seven are for continuing construction and two are for reimbursement to local interests of which one will be completed.

4. Flood control projects.—This activity includes local protection projects and reservoirs for flood control and other purposes, such as water supply, but without power installations. Local protection projects consist of channel improvements, levees, and floodwalls. Provision is made for snagging and clearing work on navigable streams and tributaries when such work is necessary; and for emergency bank protection. The construction of small flood control projects not requiring specific congressional authority will be financed from funds appropriated in prior years.

With the funds requested, work will be continued on 61 local protection projects, of which two will be completed with 1974 funds; and on 77 reservoir projects, of which four will be completed. Construction will be initiated on the following:

LOCAL PROTECTION PROJECTS

1. Clinton, Iowa

2. Portugues and Bucana Rivers, P.R.

5. Multiple-purpose projects, including power.—Work will be continued on 29 multiple-purpose projects with power installations.

6. Recreation facilities at completed projects.—A total of $8.8 million is included: $6.8 million to replace sanitary facilities and to finish those recreation areas which can be completed with 1974 funds, and $2 million for projects to be developed under a new policy which would require local cost-sharing comparable to that now required for the recreation features of all new projects.

7. Land acquisition fund.—This fund, established in 1971, permits the acquisition of lands required for authorized Federal projects in those cases where delay creates an extreme hardship on owners or causes an unusual escalation of project land costs. This activity will be continued in 1974 with available funds.

8. Small authorized projects.—Activities in 1974 will be financed from funds appropriated in prior years.

9. Fish and wildlife studies.—This program provides for detailed studies and reports by the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife to determine the effects on fish and wildlife resources of water-control projects of the Corps of Engineers.

10. Rehabilitation.—Rehabilitation work is undertaken on existing projects that have deteriorated to the extent that their usefulness has been impaired. Work will be continued on one navigation project, John Hollis Bankhead Lock and Dam (lock replacement), Ala.

11. Aquatic plant control.—This program is for the control and progressive eradication of water hyacinths, alligatorweed, Eurasian watermilfoil, and other obnoxious aquatic plant growths from navigable waters, tributaries, connecting channels, and other allied waters of the United States, in the interest of navigation, flood control, drainage, agriculture, fish and wildlife conservation, public health, and related purposes. The authority includes research to develop the most effective and economic control measures.

The Corps of Engineers—Civil is responsible for the flood control program for the lower Mississippi Valley from Cape Girardeau, Mo., to the Gulf of Mexico, including the main alluvial stream, the basins of the St. Francis and White, lower Arkansas, Yazoo, Tensas, and Atchafalaya Rivers, and Bayou La Fourche, and the alluvial lands around Lake Pontchartrain. The adopted plan calls for raising and strengthening about 1,600 miles of existing levees along the main river, for enlarging or constructing some 1,700 miles of levees on tributaries and in side basins, for channel improvement by bank stabilization from Head of Passes, La., to Cairo, Ill., and by dredging a navigation channel 12 feet deep and 300 feet wide from Baton Rouge, La., to Cairo, Ill., and for five flood detention reservoirs on minor tributaries.

1. General investigations.—Eleven studies will be continued, of which three will be completed with 1974 funds. Basic data subsequently used in planning and designing projects are collected.

2. Advance engineering and design.—Funds are requested to continue planning on three features.

3. Construction.—The total cost of flood control and related improvements in the lower Mississippi River and its alluvial valley is estimated at $3,799 million, of which $1,819 million has been appropriated through 1973. The funds requested will be applied to continuation of 12 features of which one feature will be completed.

4. Maintenance.—Provision is made for operation and maintenance of major features of the project.

The fund provides for the acquisition, operation, and maintenance of floating and land-based plant and equipment used in civil works functions, for temporary financing of services finally chargeable to civil works appropriations and for the furnishing of facilities and services for the military functions of the Department of the Army and other governmental agencies and private persons (67 Stat. 199). Income derived from all sources, including the plant replacement increment and the sale of obsolete plant, is utilized to finance the overall requirements of the Revolving Fund.

Budget program.—Operating costs.—Operating costs are expected to remain at about the same level in 1973 and 1974.

Capital outlay.—Land and structures include replacement and improvement costs of buildings, facilities, and related land. Dredges and other floating plant include replacement and improvement costs for dredges and dredging equipment and other vessels such as tugs, tenders, and towboats. Land-based equipment includes replacement and improvement costs of transportation equipment, construction equipment, and fixed-land equipment such as shop tools and fixed power-driven equipment. Major items for replacement and plant improvement are noted in the following narrative.

Land and structures.—The 1974 program includes: $1.764 million for design and construction of facilities for the Coastal Engineering Research Center at Fort Belvoir, Va.; $0.17 million for design and initiation of construction of facilities for the Waterways Experiment Station at Vicksburg, Miss.; $0.1 million for completion of construction of the Cleveland Warehouse, Cleveland, Ohio; $0.2 million for completion of construction of the Revetment Material Warehouse for Vicksburg District; and $0.13 million for completion of design and construction of Bay City Repair and Service Building for Detroit District.

Dredges.—The 1974 program includes $0.7 million for preparation of plans and specifications and procurement of long-lead items of equipment to convert the electrical systems of Comber class dredges.

Other.—Other floating plant includes: $1.14 million for completion of construction of a replacement vessel for the drift collector Gorham, for use in New York Harbor; $0.945 million for rehabilitation of a mat sinking barge for the Vicksburg District; $2.41 million for the completion of construction of a bank grader for Memphis District; $0.1 million for completion of construction of a mooring barge for dredge Hains direct pumpout operations; $0.535 million for completion of construction of a replacement mooring barge for Vicksburg District mat revetment operations; $1.0 million for completion of construction of a replacement mooring barge for Memphis District mat revetment operations; $0.2 million for completion of construction of a floating lock caisson for the Nashville District; $0.3 million for completion of construction of a replacement rotary crane for the Vicksburg District derrick boat.

Remaining outlays relate to a variety of relatively small items of floating plant, land-based equipment, and tools, office furniture, and equipment.

Operating results and financial condition.—Unreserved earnings in 1972 amount to $3.9 million and are expected to remain at about the same level in 1973 and 1974. Initial capital of the fund was provided by assumption of the assets, liabilities, and obligations of the plant accounts as carried on the records of the Corps of Engineers—Civil at June 30, 1953, and by an appropriation from general funds of $100. Capital (Government equity) of the fund amounted to $180.1 million at June 30, 1972, and is limited to $197 million by the Public Works for Water, and Power Development and Atomic Energy Commission Appropriation Act, 1973 (Public Law 92-405). In 1972, the capital was increased by net earnings of $4.2 million. Increases in 1973 and 1974 are principally due to earnings reserved for plant replacement which are wholly invested in assets.

Capital of the fund is expected to reach $193.6 million at the end of 1973 and $210.6 million at the end of 1974. To permit operation at program levels for those years and into the first quarter of 1975, an increase in authorized capital to $214 million is required.

Consolidated summary of personnel.—The Revolving Fund is used to initially finance all payrolls of the Corps of Engineers—Civil.

The table which follows shows the distribution of personnel and salary costs to appropriations of the Corps of Engineers and to other accounts.
