

THE
UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

FISCAL YEAR 1975

APPENDIX

THE BUDGET DOCUMENTS

Data and analyses relating to the budget for 1975 are published in four documents:

The Budget of the United States Government, 1975 contains the information that most users of the budget would normally need, including the Budget Message of the President. The Budget presents an overview of the President's budget proposals which includes explanations of spending programs and estimated receipts. This document also contains a description of the budget system and various summary tables on the budget as a whole.

The Budget of the United States Government, 1975—Appendix contains detailed information on the various appropriations and funds which comprise the budget.

The Appendix contains more detailed information than any of the other budget documents. It includes for each agency: the proposed text of appropriation language, budget schedules for each account, explanations of the work to be performed and the funds needed, proposed general provisions applicable to the appropriations of entire agencies or groups of agencies, and schedules of permanent positions. Supplemental proposals for the current year and new legislative proposals are identified separately. Information is also provided on certain activities, whose outlays are not part of the budget totals.

Special Analyses, Budget of the United States Government, 1975 contains 16 special analyses that are designed to highlight specified program areas or provide other significant presentations of Federal budget data.

This document includes analytical information about: Government finances and operations as a whole and how they affect the economy; Government-wide program and financial information for Federal education, manpower, health, income security, civil rights, and crime reduction programs; trends and developments in the areas of Federal aid to State and local governments, research and development, and environmental protection.

The United States Budget in Brief, 1975 provides a more concise, less technical overview of the 1975 Budget than the above volumes. Summary and historical tables on the Federal budget and debt are also provided, together with graphic displays.

GENERAL NOTES

1. All years referred to are fiscal years, unless otherwise noted.
2. Detail in the tables, text, and charts of this volume may not add to the totals because of rounding.

EXPLANATION OF ESTIMATES

Part I contains various tables and schedules in support of the budget, explanatory statements of the work to be performed and the money needed, and the text of the language proposed for enactment by Congress on each item for which congressional action in an appropriation bill is required. It also contains the text of general provisions proposed for enactment by the Congress, which apply to entire agencies or groups of agencies.

ARRANGEMENT

The chapters of this part reflect the branches of Government, and the major departments and agencies of the executive branch. For the latter, most smaller agencies are grouped in one chapter—"Other independent agencies."

Within each chapter there are three main sections. The first section covers programs authorized by existing legislation (including items for which extension or renewal of existing legislation is requested). This section is organized by major subordinate organizations within the agency (usually bureaus). For each bureau, Federal funds, covering the funds owned by the Government, precede trust funds, covering funds which are held in a fiduciary capacity by the Government. Generally, accounts with new budget authority in 1975 will precede those without such an entry.

The second major section of each chapter covers the legislative program which reflects the costs of proposed new legislation. This section is also organized by bureau or other major subordinate organization. The proposals are applicable to Federal funds unless otherwise indicated.

The third section of each chapter includes the general provisions of appropriation language which are applicable to the agency in that chapter, and are in addition to the specific language pertaining to individual appropriation items. General provisions which apply to specified groups of agencies are placed in the chapter covering the first agency which appears in the respective appropriation act. However, the general provisions which are Government-wide in scope (identified "Departments, Agencies, and Corporations") and are normally contained in the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government Appropriation Act, are placed at the end of the Executive Office of the President chapter.

An explanation of the types of funds included in the budget may be found in Part 6 of the compact volume—The Budget of the United States Government, 1975.

FORM OF DETAILED MATERIAL

APPROPRIATION LANGUAGE

The language proposed for inclusion in the 1975 appropriation acts is printed at the head of each item requiring action by Congress, except for those items which are not formally recommended at this time but will be proposed for later transmittal. The language of the 1974 appropriation acts, printed in roman type, is used as a base. Italic type indicates proposed new language. Brackets enclose material which is proposed for omission, as in this example:

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For expenses necessary for the general administration of the Department of Commerce, including not to exceed $1,500 for official entertainment, [$3,000,000] $10,773,000. (15 U.S.C. 1501; Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1974.)

Following the language, and printed in italic within parentheses, are citations to relevant authorizing legislation and to the appropriation act from which the basic text is taken. (When an appropriation has not been enacted at the time the budget is submitted, the language relates only to 1975 and is italicized with no brackets shown.)

BASIS FOR SCHEDULES

The 1973 column generally includes enacted amounts, except for amounts in two regular appropriation bills which were not enacted into law. In those instances, the amounts shown are equal to the maximums provided under the authority of temporary continuing appropriations.

The 1974 column generally includes enacted amounts. For a few accounts which have received supplemental appropriations but not their regular 1974 appropriations, separate memorandum entries appear for both pending and enacted 1974 budget authority. In some of those accounts, amendments to pending 1974 budget requests are shown in brief additional program and financing schedules in Part I. These amendments are explained and accompanied by any necessary appropriation language in Part III.

The basic schedules for Federal and trust funds exclude anticipated supplemental estimates except those for statutory and wage board pay raises. The anticipated supplemental estimates, other than for pay, are covered by brief program and financing schedules, without appropriation language. For those supplemental estimates which are being transmitted for consideration with the 1975 budget, pay supplementals identified in the regular schedules and separate schedules headed: "Supplementals now requested," the appropriation language is included in Part III of this document.

The 1975 column of the regular schedules includes proposed appropriations for recommended extension or renewal of expiring laws; however, amounts for proposed new legislation are shown in separate schedules, generally under the legislative program section of each chapter. Appropriation language is included with the regular schedules, but not with the separate schedules.

Where the required data are available in the accounting systems, budgets are presented in terms of costs. Detailed operating cost figures for each activity or object are the value of goods and services consumed in carrying out the program. In the case of capital outlay programs, costs shown are the value of assets acquired.

Total obligations are always shown; activities and objects are reflected on an obligation basis where cost data are not available. Obligations refer to orders placed, contracts awarded, loan agreements made, and recurring services (such as rent, utilities, and personal services) received during the year, regardless of the time of payment.

For a few Government corporations, the detail and the totals of their budget presentations are on the basis of accrued expenditures.

SCHEDULE OF PROGRAM AND FINANCING

This schedule consists of three parts. In the "Program by activities" section, costs or obligations are classified by purpose, program, type of activity, or project for 1973, 1974, and 1975. This classification is individually developed for each appropriation or fund, and is not uniform on a Government-wide basis. Similarly, the identification of capital outlay is not handled uniformly. Where it is of significance, capital outlay is shown by activity. Otherwise, the total for each year is disclosed by footnote.

Where budgets are presented in terms of costs, the relation of costs to obligations is summarized in an entry "Change in selected resources."

In certain cases, this schedule is expanded to include additional columns that provide a more informative presentation. This is done, for example, in some construction or procurement programs to show related cost data; for certain Defense items to identify the total obligations programmed; and for programs financed at a "preobligation" stage (such as "commitments" in some loan programs).

The "Financing" section shows the fund sources, budget authority, and other means of financing the program, and the disposition of unobligated amounts not used during the year.

NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The work planned and services proposed to be carried out are described briefly in a narrative statement for each appropriation or fund. Where practicable, the narrative statement presents accomplishments in relation to financial requirements, and available measures of program and performance.

SCHEDULE OF OBJECT CLASSIFICATION AND PERSONNEL SUMMARY

There is shown for each account a classification of obligations, costs, or accrued expenditures according to the following uniform list of object classifications:

10 PERSONAL SERVICES AND BENEFITS	30 ACQUISITION OF CAPITAL ASSETS
11 Personnel compensation	31 Equipment
12 Personnel benefits	32 Lands and structures
13 Benefits for former personnel	33 Investments and loans

22 Transportation of things	42 Insurance claims and indemnities
23 Rent, communications, and utilities	43 Interest and dividends
24 Printing and reproduction	44 Refunds
25 Other services
26 Supplies and materials

These object classes reflect the nature of the things or services purchased, regardless of the purpose of the program for which they are used. Data according to this classification are illustrated in the following schedule:

Several of the object classes are broken down into subclasses—personnel compensation, for example, is shown separately for permanent positions, for positions other than permanent, and for certain other payments.

A personnel summary is appended to the object classification schedule, as illustrated:

	1972 actual	1973 actual	1974 est.	1975 est.

Full-time equivalent of other positions.....	22	6	7

Average GS salary.....	$16,838	$17,027	$17,702
Average salary of ungraded positions.....	$10,148	$10,577	$10,783

Permanent positions are those which are established or occupied for a year or more. The nature of the position governs. Thus a permanent position may be occupied by an employee whose appointment is either temporary or permanent in nature. These positions may be full-time (full workweek) or part-time (less than a full workweek).

Average grades and salaries are computed arithmetically. Thus the average salary can fall outside the salary range of the average grade.

STATEMENT OF REVENUE AND EXPENSE

For many revolving funds there is a statement of revenue and expense that shows the resulting net income or loss for the year. This statement is usually on a full accrual basis including provision for depreciation, for losses on receivables, etc.

STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL CONDITION

For each fund showing a revenue and expense statement, there is also presented a balance sheet for assets, liabilities, and equity of the Government at the close of each year. This balance sheet excludes balances of appropriations and borrowing authorizations which have not yet been paid into the revolving fund. Because the balance sheet is on an accrual basis, the "Liabilities" section does not reflect obligations incurred for which the liability has not accrued. Nor does the "Assets" section reflect unfilled customer orders received, even though such orders are a basis for obligation in the case of intragovernmental revolving funds. The "Government equity" section, therefore, shows obligations (which have not yet become accrued liabilities), the unobligated balance, unfilled customers' orders on hand (where relevant), and invested capital and earnings.

The presentations herein for the Legislative Branch, the Judiciary, the Comptroller of the Currency in the Treasury Department, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Milk Market Orders Assessment Fund of the Depart-

ment of Agriculture, the Farm Credit Administration, and most of the annexed budgets have been included, without review, in the amounts submitted by the agencies.

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN BUDGET TABLES AND APPENDIX TABLES

INTRAGOVERNMENTAL TRANSACTIONS

The consolidation of Government-administered funds in the compact budget volume may cause duplication in the totals. This occurs when the payment from one of the fund groups (Federal or trust) is credited to a receipt account in the other, or when a payment from a Government agency excluded from the budget totals (annexed budgets) is credited to a budgetary receipt account and appropriated therefrom. In order to avoid duplication, intragovernmental transactions (i.e., intrabudgetary transactions and receipts from Federal agencies outside the budget totals) are deducted from the combined aggregates of both budget authority and outlays.

PROPRIETARY RECEIPTS FROM THE PUBLIC

The compact budget volume offsets against outlays for each agency and function the receipts from the public which are market-oriented or are mainly payments for goods and services, regardless of the fund structure. The Appendix continues the conventional practice of offsetting in the individual schedules only those amounts received that are earmarked by law for use in revolving funds, or as reimbursements to appropriations or other funds.

2. Organization and control of library materials.—Library materials are cataloged for ready retrieval and are classified for systematic arrangement on the shelves of the collection. Card catalogs are maintained. Issues of serial publications are identified and recorded. Cataloging data is converted to machine-readable form for the use of the Library of Congress and other libraries and cataloging service agencies. Systems of subject headings and classification are continuously developed for the Library's needs and for the national library community.

Objectives in these activities for 1975 are to continue to reduce backlogs in cataloging and catalog maintenance operations and to continue the development of the machine-readable cataloging data base.

Selected performance data for 1973 and estimated for 1974 and 1975 (not including processing activities performed by the Reference Department and Law Library) are as follows:

3. Reader and reference services.—Books and other library materials are provided inside and outside of the Library, reference and bibliographic assistance is rendered, and custody of the collections is maintained. The objective of this activity for 1975 is to continue to organize more material for use, to make it available to readers more readily, and to improve reference bibliographic and circulation services. The workload in major activities is expected to increase in 1974 and 1975 as follows:

4. National program for acquisitions and cataloging.—Under NPAC, the Library of Congress seeks to acquire, catalog immediately, and disseminate cataloging data rapidly for all current monographic works of research value, in order to meet the urgent needs of American libraries. The outstanding success of the program can be clearly measured by the enormous increase of 130 percent in the number of books cataloged—from 109,798 new titles in 1965 (prior to the program) to 253,260 new titles in 1973. This doubling of the amount of current cataloging available has resulted in savings of many millions of dollars by libraries across the Nation. Prior to the establishment of the NPAC program, independent studies have shown that Library of Congress cataloging for its own purposes met only 50% of the cataloging needs of the American research library community.

The objectives of this activity in 1975 are the continuation of the basic program at its 1974 level in order to continue providing necessary catalog copy automatically and rapidly to college, university, and other research libraries which now rely greatly upon the Library of Congress for such cataloging. New program objectives in 1975 include completion of NPAC shared cataloging coverage of Europe where possible and the searching of U.S. and Far Eastern imprint reports in order to inform research libraries of the status of Library of Congress cataloging.

5. Preservation of Library materials.—Library materials are preserved in their original format by being bound or rebound, by deacidification and lamination, or by repair and restoration. Materials are also preserved by converting them to a more durable base through such means as the microfilming of books and newspapers, by conversion of nitrate film to a safety base film, and by the conversion of deteriorating sound recordings to polyester tape. In addition, the Library conducts original research into the many unsolved preservation problems encountered in dealing with millions of deteriorating books and other materials in the Library of Congress collections as well as in the other research libraries of the Nation.

Description	1973 actual	1974 estimate	1975 estimate
Volumes processed for binding.....	216,219	200,000	250,000
Items receiving conservation treatment.....	51,833	55,000	60,000

Volumes labeled and prepared for service.....	243,607	250,000	275,000
Number of feet of motion picture film converted to safety base.....	4,335,545	5,000,000	5,750,000
Number of sound recordings converted to safety base.....	4,009	6,000	6,000

6. General administration.—This activity supports the executive staff of the Office of the Librarian, and the administrative department, except for preservation of the collections activities. Included are funds for equipment rentals; staff for personnel and fiscal management, procurement, protective services, and duplicating services. In addition, the Library is requesting $3,063 thousand to pay the General Services Administration for space it currently occupies in buildings under the control of that agency as provided by Public Law 92-313.

The Copyright Office is responsible for recording copyright claims, assignments, and renewals, for supplying copyright information to the public, for collection and accounting for copyright fees, and for printing complete and indexed catalogs for each class of copyright entries. The Office is conducted for the most part on a self-sustaining basis. The amount requested is substantially counterbalanced by fees received for services rendered and the value of books and other library materials deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act and transferred to the Library of Congress. The income and obligations for 1973 and estimated for 1974 and 1975 are as follows:

The program and performance under each of the activities described are predicated on an estimated 376,000 copyright registrations during 1975, an estimated 365,000 during 1974, and an actual 353,648 during 1973.

1. Receiving and accounting for applications, fees, and correspondence.—Materials received by the Copyright Office are assembled and routed; accounts are maintained for all moneys received; records relating to the registration of copyrights are filed; and materials are deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act. Performance data for 1973 and estimated for 1974 and 1975 are as follows:

Registrations .....	353,648	365,000	376,000
Mail received and dispatched .....	889,144	925,000	965,000

2. Examining copyright applications.—All applications and deposits are examined before issuance of registration certificates or recordings of documents to determine whether the provisions of the Copyright Act have been satisfied. Performance data are as follows:

	1973 actual	1974 estimate	1975 estimate
Cases and documents examined .....	397,003	408,900	421,200
Registrations and recordation of documents .....	387,173	399,000	411,000

3. Indexing and cataloging materials received.—The Register of Copyrights is required to print complete and indexed catalogs of all items registered. The catalog entries prepared by the Copyright Office are made available in part to the Library for its general operations. There were 353,648 registrations cataloged in 1973 and estimated for 1974 and 1975 are 365,000 and 376,000 respectively.

4. Reference services.—The Copyright Office makes available to the public, information concerning the provisions of the Copyright Act, including procedures, policies, and rulings; information concerning registrations is furnished on a fee basis. Obtaining compliance with registration requirements is also part of this activity. Performance data are as follows:

1. Policy analysis and research.—The Congressional Research Service provides analytical and consultative services to the Members and committees of Congress, assisting them in the analysis, appraisal, and evaluation of legislative issues and proposals, and of recommendations submitted to the Congress by the executive branch. Research services are also provided to assist Congress with its oversight, representative, and other responsibilities. Support comes in the form of background studies, in-depth policy analyses, consultations and briefings, legal research, assistance with committee hearings, and related data and materials. Lists of subjects and policy areas that a committee might profitably pursue are periodically made available to each congressional committee. These services are directed toward assisting Members and committees in determining the advisability of enacting legislative proposals, in estimating the probable results of such proposals and of alternatives to them, and in evaluating methods for accomplishing the results sought.

2. Documentation and status of legislation.—The Service periodically prepares and publishes for distribution to Members and committees the Digest of Public General Bills and Resolutions, which includes summaries of all public bills and resolutions introduced in Congress, the status of bills receiving action, and various pertinent indexes. The Service also prepares and distributes periodic reports that provide background and status information on major legislative issues and related bills. Upon request, the service provides Members and committees with legislative history memoranda on bills for which hearings have been announced, and compiles and makes available to each committee reports on legislatively authorized programs and activities within that committee's jurisdiction that are scheduled to terminate during the current Congress.

3. Information and reference services.—The Congressional Research Service provides extensive information and reference assistance to Members and committees. Reference files, containing clippings, pamphlets, and documents, and automated information services are maintained for rapid information retrieval. Lists of selected reports, prepared by CRS staff on legislative issues, are regularly distributed to congressional offices. To provide faster responses and in-person services, the Service also maintains reference centers in congressional office buildings and the Congressional Reading Room.

The Card Division sells copies of the Library's printed catalog cards, cataloging data in machine-readable form, book catalogs, and technical publications. It maintains a stock of over 100 million catalog cards representing approximately 670,000 titles which are frequently ordered. From this stock are supplied 90 percent of the cards which are sold. A master file containing a single, reproducible copy of each of the cards representing the approximately 6 million titles which the Library has cataloged since 1898 is also maintained. Requests for cards for any of the 5,330,000 less frequently ordered titles are satisfied by duplicating (through offset, photographic, or electrostatic means) the copy of the card kept in the master file. The Card Division carries on its books accounts for 35,825 subscribers, about 25,000 of which are active accounts in any given year. In fiscal 1973, 68% of this appropriation was recovered in the form of receipts from card and publications sales. Receipts of $6,890,236 were deposited in miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury in fiscal 1973. The objectives for 1975 are: meeting the continuing demand for catalog cards and maintaining a reasonable level of service and economy; the continued development of the "National Union Catalog" as the country's major bibliographic and locational tool; the development of other technical publications; and the use of new technology to improve service, to increase efficiency, and to reduce costs.

1. Supplying cards for the Library of Congress.—The number of cards supplied to the Library of Congress in fiscal 1973 was 40,407,471; estimated for 1974, 45 million; and estimated for 1975, 50 million.

2. Supplying cards for other libraries.—The number of cards sold in fiscal 1973 was 73,599,751; sales for 1974 and 1975 are estimated at about the same, or a slightly lower level.

3. Preparation, printing, and distribution of publications related to cataloging.—These publications are an integral part of the cataloging activities of the Library of Congress and include the "Classification Schedules," lists of "Subject Headings," "Cataloging Service" bulletins, and similar publications.

4. Preparation, printing, and distribution of the "National Union Catalog."—This catalog (a cumulative author list) is issued monthly and cumulated quarterly and annually. Subscribers also receive issues of "Films and Other Materials for Projection" (quarterly with annual cumulation), "Music Books on Music and Sound Recordings" (semiannual with annual cumulation), the "Register of Additional Locations," and the "National Register of Microform Masters." Note.—Includes $80 thousand in 1975 for activities previously financed from: Library of Congress, Salaries and Expenses: 1973, $80 thousand; 1974, $80 thousand.

This appropriation is used to acquire library materials, both current and noncurrent, in all subject fields except those in the field of law, clinical medicine, or technical agriculture. Materials acquired by purchase constitute an exceedingly important part of the Library's acquisitions. Although they generally amount to only a limited portion of the total number of pieces received annually, they are materials which are not generally or readily available to the Library of Congress from any other source and thus must be purchased to insure completeness of the collections. The objectives for 1975 are: to continue procurement of important research materials to insure the continuous and comprehensive development of the Library's collections thereby maintaining their national preeminence; to continue the purchase of important foreign commercial books, newspapers, and periodicals; to continue the extensive procurement of essential research materials from areas critical to U.S. foreign relations, particularly from Eastern Europe, Africa, Asia, and Latin America; to continue to strengthen the Library's current acquisitions in the rapidly expanding fields of science and technology; and to acquire highly selected, important, non-current materials needed to provide better service to Congress and to increase the usefulness to current research of the subject collections.

This appropriation constitutes the only means of acquiring law books published in the regular domestic trade (except for copyright deposits) and many foreign law books published in countries all over the world. The legal publications acquired by purchase constitutes the most important part of the Law Library's acquisitions, although a substantial part of the annual receipts is received by means other than purchase. The special objectives for 1975 are: to continue the procurement of certain current domestic and foreign legal materials where upkeep service and expeditious receipt are necessary and receipt through exchange and gift is irregular; to improve the coverage of important Hispanic, African, Middle Eastern, and Far Eastern sources; to continue the procurement of both current and noncurrent materials needed to strengthen the Law Library's already comprehensive holdings of critical areas in Eastern Europe, Asia, and Africa; and to continue the acquisition of microforms and photoduplicates of important research items, especially those from critical areas, which are no longer obtainable in the original.

The Division for the Blind and Physically Handicapped is responsible for administering a national program to provide reading material for the blind and physically handicapped of the United States and its outlying areas. It has two closely related operations.

1. Procurement and distribution.—It procures books in embossed characters, talking books with their associated reproducers, and catalogs and publications of material available. The books are distributed through 53 regional libraries and 75 other cooperating libraries which assume responsibility for their custody and circulation. The reproducers are distributed through 65 State agencies and libraries. The maintenance and procurement of these books are shown in the following table:

Description	1973 actual	1974 estimate	1975 estimate
Sound recording and players (disc and cassette):
(a) Books (titles).....	819	825	825
(b) Magazines.....	26	27	27
(c) Phonograph and cassette players purchased.....	42,500	40,000	50,000
(d) Players repaired.....	37,000	35,000	35,000
Embossed materials:
(a) Press braille books (titles).....	274	300	300
(b) Magazines.....	23	23	36
Music (scores and volumes).....	3,940	4,000	4,000

Objectives for 1975 are: (1) sustained procurement of books and magazines in braille and sound recording media, (2) procurement of a sufficient number of machines to equip newly registered blind and physically handicapped readers and to replace some of the obsolete machines, and (3) improvement of information resources for readers and librarians throughout the country about available material.

2. Reader service.—During the past 5-year period, 1969-73, the number of blind and physically handicapped readers throughout the country has grown from over 165,000 to about 383,000 and circulation from approximately 5,730,000 units (volumes, containers, and reels) to about 10,830,000. The number of readers and the circulation are expected to continue to increase in 1974 and 1975 at the same rate as in the past 5 years. Approximately 10,000 inquiries were received in 1973 concerning library and related services available to the blind and to other physically handicapped persons. Individuals throughout the Nation who are interested in transcribing or proofreading braille are trained, and those qualified are certified. During fiscal 1973 over 485 individuals were certified, and it is anticipated that this level will continue during 1974 and 1975. In addition, books are tape recorded by volunteers throughout the country. The division provides guidance and direction to the cooperating libraries throughout the country. The division maintains the national collections of braille and recorded books to supplement titles deposited in libraries across the country and to furnish direct service to residents of Puerto Rico and Americans living abroad. In addition, music materials are provided directly to readers throughout the country.

Under authority originally granted in section 104(n) of Public Law 85-931 (new sec. 104(b)(5) of the Food for Peace Act of 1966) the Librarian of Congress may use foreign currencies to provide information of technical, scientific, cultural, or educational significance to the United States through the collection of foreign library materials and the distribution of copies thereof to libraries and research centers in the United States. The program is being carried on in five countries in 1974: Egypt, India, Nepal (through the Library's New Delhi office using Indian rupees), Pakistan, and Poland. Of the total amount requested in 1975, $1,718,500 will be paid in foreign currencies, while $295,600 will provide U.S. dollar support.

1. Acquisition of books and other library materials.—Based upon the requirements of other Federal agencies and certain research libraries in the United States, publications and other library materials will be purchased in multiple copies from five countries and distributed to selected libraries and research centers in the United States, including the Library of Congress.

2. Program support (U.S. dollars).—U.S. dollars are required to pay certain expenses which cannot be paid by foreign currencies, such as salaries and personnel benefits of U.S. personnel abroad, salaries of the coordinating staff at the Library of Congress, shared administrative support provided by the Department of State, travel in some instances, and equipment and supplies which cannot be procured abroad.

The Oliver Wendell Holmes Devise Fund was established by 69 Stat. 533 to: (1) Prepare a history of the Supreme Court of the United States, and if deemed advisable, (2) to finance an annual lecture or series of lectures, and (3) publish a memorial volume of Justice Holmes' writings. The principal and interest on the fund are available for these purposes. The current program is devoted primarily to the preparation of the history of the Supreme Court, of which the first two volumes were published by the Macmillan Co. in fiscal year 1972. One volume will be published in 1974, and two additional volumes are planned for publication in 1975. An annual lecture series is also financed by this fund and reprints of the lectures are distributed to law schools and libraries throughout the country.

This schedule covers: (1) Funds received as gifts for immediate expenditure and receipts from the sale of recordings and photoduplication materials financed from capital originally received as gifts, (2) income from investments held by the Library of Congress Trust Fund Board, and (3) interest at the rate of 4% per annum paid by the Treasury on the principal funds deposited therewith as described under "Library of Congress Trust Fund, Principal Accounts." (2 U.S.C. 156-160; 31 U.S.C. 725s; 37 Stat. 319.)

1. Acquisition of Library materials.—During 1973, this included the procurement of manuscripts, Hispanic materials, fine prints, rare books, and other library materials from certain foreign areas for the Library of Congress, and the acquisition and distribution of Government documents for the Library of Congress and co-operating libraries.

2. Reader and reference services.—These services during 1973 included the preparation of bibliographies, indexes, digests, and checklists; lectures; surveys of bibliographic services; poetry readings; musical concerts; furtherance of musical research, composition, performance, and appreciation; and providing photostats, photographs, microfilm, and other forms of photoduplication, and sound recordings of folksongs and poetry to other Government agencies, libraries and other institutions, and to the general public; and distribution of recordings of the Library's literary programs and concerts to radio stations for public service broadcasts.

3. Organization and control of the collections.—In February 1967, the Library of Congress began the largest single bibliographical project in its history, the publication of the pre-1956 "National Union Catalog." It is expected that the project will be completed in 10 years, and that the published catalog will comprise 600 volumes. Over 300 volumes have been published. The preparation of the 19th full edition of the "Dewey Decimal Classification," begun during fiscal year 1972, continues.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

Appropriations in this Act available to the Library of Congress for salaries shall be available for expenses of investigating the loyalty of Library employees; special and temporary services (including employees engaged by day or hour or in piecework); and services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109.

Not to exceed fifteen positions in the Library of Congress may be exempt from the provisions of appropriation Acts concerning the employment of aliens during the current fiscal year, but the Librarian shall not make any appointment to any such position until he has ascertained that he cannot secure for such appointments a person in any of the categories specified in such provisions who possesses the special qualifications for the particular position and also otherwise meets the general requirements for employment in the Library of Congress.

Funds available to the Library of Congress may be expended to reimburse the Department of State for medical services rendered to employees of the Library of Congress stationed abroad and for contracting on behalf of and hiring alien employees for the Library of Congress under compensation plans comparable to those authorized by section 444 of the Foreign Service Act of 1946, as amended (22 U.S.C. 889(a)); for purchase or hire of passenger motor vehicles; for payment of travel, storage and transportation of household goods, and transportation and per diem expenses for families en route (not to exceed twenty-four); for benefits comparable to those payable under sections 911(9), 911(11), and 941 of the Foreign Service Act of 1946, as amended (22 U.S.C. 1136(9), 1136(11), and 1156, respectively); and travel benefits comparable with those which are now or hereafter may be granted single employees of the Agency for International Development, including single Foreign Service personnel assigned to A.I.D. projects, by the Administrator of the Agency for International Development—or his designee—under the authority of section 636(b) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (Public Law 87-195, 22 U.S.C. 2396(b)); subject to such rules and regulations as may be issued by the Librarian of Congress.

Payments in advance for subscriptions or other charges for bibliographical data, publications, materials in any other form, and services may be made by the Librarian of Congress whenever he determines it to be more prompt, efficient, or economical to do so in the interest of carrying out required Library programs.

Appropriations in this Act available to the Library of Congress shall be available, in an amount not to exceed ["$50,000"] $65,000, when specifically authorized by the Librarian, for expenses of attendance at meetings concerned with the function or activity for which the appropriation is made. The Office of the Superintendent of Documents operates under a separate appropriation which provides all of the funds for: (1) The compilation of catalogs and indexes of Government publications; (2) the distribution of Government publications to designated depository libraries; and (3) the mailing for Members of Congress and other Government agencies of certain Government publications, as authorized by law. It also provides part of the funding for the sale of Government publications.

These four functions are related to the publication activity of other agencies and to the demands of the public, Members of Congress, and depository libraries. Consequently, the Public Documents Department can exercise little control over the volume of work which it may be called upon to perform. A description follows:

1. Sales distribution.—Selected Government publications are placed on sale to the public. Certain costs associated with these publications are deducted from sales receipts and the remaining amount returned to the Treasury. For many years the amount returned to the Treasury exceeded the appropriated funds provided for funding the sale of Government publications. Because of recent cost increases, particularly in postage that could not be recovered immediately through price increases, the return to the Treasury did not cover the appropriation for the sales program in fiscal years 1972 and 1973. Subscriptions run for 1 year or longer so no increase in revenue will be realized until these subscriptions expire and are renewed at the new prices. Furthermore, no increased revenue will be realized from publications in our present inventory until we reprice them at the current scale and revise all our catalogs and price lists. It is not considered possible to restore the historical balance between sales revenues and sales program costs before fiscal year 1976.

2. Distribution for other agencies and Members of Congress.—The Superintendent of Documents maintains mailing lists and mails, at the request of Government agencies and Members of Congress, certain publications specified by public law.

3. Depository library distribution.—As required, Government publications are supplied to libraries which are designated as depositories for Government publications.

4. Cataloging and indexing.—The Documents Department is charged with preparing catalogs and indexes of all publications issued by the Federal Government. The principal publication is the "Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications."

The U.S. Customs Court with offices in New York City has exclusive jurisdiction, throughout the United States and its possessions, embracing 46 customs collection districts and 286 ports of entry into which merchandise is imported, over civil actions arising under the tariff laws, the internal revenue laws relating to imported merchandise, the several Customs Simplification Acts, the proclamations of the President issued under reciprocal trade agreements, and other proclamations imposing taxes and/or quotas on imported goods, etc. Trials may be held at any port or any place within the jurisdiction of the United States, as designated by the chief judge. Cases before the court are tried under the legal procedure provided for in title 28, United States Code, entitled "Judiciary and Judicial Procedure." The Court tries cases without a jury, making findings of fact, and applies the law, both statutory and general, including constitutional issues. The Government is represented before the court by an Assistant Attorney General of the United States and a staff of special trial attorneys.

The U.S. Court of Claims has jurisdiction over all cases involving claims against the United States (except in pension suits) instituted upon constitutional grounds or under Federal law or regulations, all claims arising out of any contract with the Federal Government and its agencies, and claims for the refund of taxes. It also has general jurisdiction to hear and determine claims for damages other than tort actions, provided the claimants would have the right to sue in law or equity if the United States were not immune to such suits. It has jurisdiction in suits against the United States by contractors dissatisfied with the findings and decisions of contracting agencies under terminated war contracts and jurisdiction concurrent with that of the courts of appeals to review district court decisions in cases involving tort actions. It has exclusive jurisdiction to review the decisions of the Indian Claims Commission on appeal from the Commission. It also has jurisdiction in special act cases referred to the Court by the Congress, and the commissioners of the Court have jurisdiction to render reports to the Congress on claims set forth in bills referred to the chief commissioner by either house of Congress.

This program establishes a framework of joint Federal and State efforts to provide the basic facilities essential to economic growth in Appalachia.

Program investments made in the Appalachian region are concentrated in areas with significant potential for future growth.

The States, acting through the Appalachian Regional Commission, are responsible for recommending local and State projects within their borders for assistance under this program.

1. Appalachian Development Highway System.—Section 201 of the Appalachian Regional Development Act authorizes construction of an Appalachian Development Highway System including local access roads. This System is designed to improve the accessibility of Appalachia; to reduce highway transportation costs to and within Appalachia; to provide the highway transportation facilities necessary to accelerate the overall development of Appalachia. The program is funded through contract authority available in the fiscal year preceding the year of authority. The budget for 1975 provides $160 million to fully liquidate obligations through that period.

The status of the system of roads including mileage prefunded by the State follows:

Development system miles (cumulative):
Approved for construction.....	1,528	1,600	1,700
Miles contracted.....	1,246	1,400	1,530

Annual obligation (thousands).....	182,607	186,036	160,000

2. Area development programs.—Funds are provided for budget allocation to the Appalachian States for implementing programs of area development. The programs consist of projects aimed primarily at providing the basic facilities essential to the region's growth and economic development, particularly in the areas of health and education.

During 1975 emphasis will be placed on conducting area development activities within the four geographic sub-regions of Appalachia by an allocation system permitting greater State flexibility in the type of projects undertaken. These projects will be of the following four types, with the project mix depending on the State plans adopted within the context of the subregional development strategies.

(a) Demonstration health projects.—Grants are made for the construction, equipping, and operation of multicounty demonstration health facilities including hospitals, regional health diagnostic or treatment centers, and other facilities. In addition, grant support is provided for primary care and child development programs throughout the region.

Health operations.....	464	585
Construction.....	112	127
Child development.....	295	370
Annual obligations.....	$41,511	$50,872

(b) Mine area restoration.—Section 205 of the act authorizes a program for the sealing and filling of voids in abandoned coal mines, the planning and execution of projects for the extinguishment and control of underground and outcrop mine fires, and the reclamation and rehabilitation of strip and surface mine areas, including waste banks, on public land in those areas where the potential for economic growth exists in Appalachia. States or local sponsors must bear 25% of project cost. Approved projects on a cumulative basis are:

Mine fires.....	34	34
Mine subsidence.....	11	15
Surface restoration and well sealing.....	16	21

(c) Vocational education facilities.—Grants are made to States and local districts within the Appalachian region for the construction and equipment of vocational education facilities in Appalachia, and in limited cases for operation and demonstrations in Appalachia. Vocational education facilities are key elements for the training and upgrading of potential and existing labor force entrants in skills required in commercial and other vocations. Grants are administered through the Office of Education. Vocational education projects approved, including those aided by supplementary grants, are as follows:

Supplemental grants—section 214 (funds obligated).....	$6,728	$6,500

(d) Supplements to Federal grant-in-aid programs.—This program provides supplemental grants to enable areas to take advantage of other Federal programs. Direct grants, plus supplemental grants, cannot exceed 80% of the project cost. The amount of supplemental grants depends upon the relative need of the area and nature of the project.

The estimates provide for approved projects as follows: 1973, 169 projects, $40,006; 1974, 160 projects, $38,026. Supplemental assistance has been provided from inception through 1973 to the following types of projects:

This program provides for several ways of assisting the region in obtaining a larger share of housing for low- and moderate-income families. The Commission is authorized to make technical assistance grants for the organization of State housing corporations and local nonprofit groups to encourage such housing construction.

This program also provides authority to make loans for up to 80% of the preliminary cost of planning housing projects and obtaining federally insured mortgages. Eligible loan costs include preliminary site engineering and architectural fees, site options, and construction loan fees and discounts.

Under the 1971 amendments to the act, grants may be made for site development costs and offsite improvements such as sewer and water line extensions where necessary for economic feasibility of the housing project. Grants for such purposes may not exceed 10% of the project cost.

Funds are transferred from the "Appalachian regional development" appropriation to this revolving fund for the following workload:

1. Administration.—Up to 3 percent of the funds provided for disaster relief may be used for the administrative expenses of the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration in coordinating and administering the disaster relief program.

2. Aid to disaster areas.—Under the Disaster Relief Act of 1970, as amended, the Federal Government will provide supplementary assistance to State and local governments and to individuals in the event of a declared major disaster by the President. Funds may be made available directly to a State, or to Federal agencies as reimbursement for expenditures in disaster relief work performed under this authority. In addition, funds are also provided to States for disaster planning. Responsibility for administration of this program is delegated to the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development by Executive order.

The administration of disaster assistance would be consolidated and improved under the proposed Disaster Preparedness and Assistance Act. This bill is based upon a recent study of all disaster relief activities of the Federal Government. It places emphasis upon preventive measures and encourages the use of insurance before disasters occur. It increases the role of State and local officials in determining how Federal money would be spent in assisting disaster-stricken communities. The bill provides for automatic release of Federal funds in the case of major disasters. Federal assistance would be provided more rapidly. The bill also includes grant features for those disaster victims unable to repay Government loans while continuing grants to help communities restore their public facilities. With this legislation, a better job could be done in preparing for disasters and in providing assistance.

The activities of the Cost of Living Council, Internal Revenue Service, and other related activities of the economic stabilization program are included under this heading.

1. Cost of Living Council.—The Cost of Living Council exercises overall policy development and oversight of the economic stabilization program. The Cost of Living Council performs price analysis and issues decisions on price requests from particularly large and/or critical industrial, retail and wholesale firms that could have substantial impact on the economy. In addition, CLC provides the legal support necessary for regulation development, interpretations and rulings for the program. Further, as an adjunct to the field operations of the IRS, the CLC operates and maintains a management information system for workload monitoring and economic analysis of price and wage data.

2. Internal Revenue Service.—Internal Revenue Service was delegated the authority to operate and maintain local service and compliance centers, to receive all price stabilization submissions and reports from business firms, and to process, make decisions and issue orders with respect to most of those submissions.

As the compliance and enforcement agency of the program, IRS is also authorized to conduct investigations, to sign and issue subpoenas, to issue notices of probable violations, to issue remedial orders, and to take compliance actions. IRS is also authorized to compromise and collect civil penalties and disseminate public information regarding price stabilization.

The Economic Stabilization Act of 1970, as amended, will expire on April 30, 1974. Provision is made for possible extension of the economic stabilization program by including an estimate of funds for 1975 in the legislative program section of this chapter.

Under the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, designated agencies are authorized with Presidential approval to incur obligations and make expenditures to expand production of critical materials for programs certified as essential to the national defense. The program is conducted primarily through a revolving fund financed by borrowing from the Treasury. The amount borrowed may not exceed $2.1 billion outstanding at any one time. In addition, materials which are excess to defense requirements may be sold to other Federal agencies and the public. Disposals by the General Services Administration as of June 30 are as follows (in millions of dollars):

Sales.....	67.2	133.7	45.2
Receipts.....	28.2	133.7	45.2

Allocations of borrowing authority and net borrowing from the U.S. Treasury as of June 30, 1973, were as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Authorized agency	Borrowing authority allocated	Borrowings outstanding	Net available for borrowing
General Services Administration <sup>1</sup> .....	1,921,625	1,877,500	44,125
Department of Agriculture.....	126,245	97,740	28,505
Department of the Interior.....	51,950	38,800	13,150
Reserve.....	180		180
Total.....	2,100,000	2,014,040	85,960

<sup>1</sup> In addition, an appropriation of $108 million was applied to General Services Administration activities, thus providing financing of $2,030 million to that agency.

Financial condition of the fund.—Losses under the programs are reflected as $1,760 million as of June 30, 1973, with inventory of metals and minerals carried at acquisition cost of approximately $588 million. Using inventory market price of $307 million, the deficit would amount to about $2,041 million. Interest expense on borrowing from Treasury amounts to approximately $128 million for 1974 and $130 million for 1975.

Legislation has been proposed to correct the financing problem which has existed under the Defense Production Act for a number of years, resulting in losses in the revolving fund. The budget schedules reflecting the proposed legislation are shown at the end of this chapter.

In 1975, the personnel and other costs for administrative and custodial expenses are to be funded under appropriations to Federal Supply Service, Operating expenses and Office of Preparedness, Salaries and expenses.

Grants of defense articles and services are made to assist other countries to improve their defensive capabilities. As other nations are increasingly able to rely on their own resources, particularly manpower, the need for U.S. forces abroad should decline and the likelihood of having to commit U.S. combat forces in the future should decrease.

Most of the military items furnished under this program are produced in the United States. Orders are placed through the U.S. military services, which are reimbursed from this account when the items are delivered. Materiel already on hand, but excess to the needs of U.S. forces overseas, is used to meet the requirements of friendly governments at no charge to the military assistance appropriation except for the costs of rehabilitation and transportation.

In the absence of the emergency authority requested by the President to provide additional assistance to Cambodia, the 1974 program reflects the drawdown of $200 million in defense stocks under the authority of section 506 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended. Beginning in 1975, military assistance to Laos is provided from this appropriation rather than the appropriations to the military departments.

The administrative costs related to foreign military sales are included in this account.

This appropriation provides funds to finance credit sales of defense articles and services to foreign countries and international organizations. Two types of financing arrangements are used: (1) direct U.S. Government credit, and (2) commercial credit guaranteed by the Government. The 1975 budget request assumes enactment of a legislative proposal decreasing the funding required to guarantee commercial credits from 25% to 10% of the principal amount of the credit. The 1975 request does not contain funds for credits for Israel because of uncertainties in the Middle East. A budget amendment will be transmitted if required.

An appropriation of $315 million is requested for 1975 to finance a credit sales program of $543 million. Of the $543 million program, $253 million will be privately financed and $25 million of the appropriation will be set aside as a guarantee reserve for this private credit.

The administrative expenses related to this program are funded from the military assistance appropriation.

The 1975 request does not contain funds for supporting assistance for Israel because of uncertainties in the Middle East. A budget amendment will be transmitted if required.

As authorized by sections 21 and 22 of the Foreign Military Sales Act, as amended, this trust fund is used to facilitate cash sales of defense articles and services. The purpose of the trust fund, which is strictly a cash account, is to enable foreign governments to take advantage of savings which result from procurement through U.S. Government channels. In dollar volume, the major portion of this program consists of sales to European and other developed countries of the free world.

Defense articles from Department of Defense stocks are sold for U.S. dollars to eligible countries and international organizations if they agree to pay in advance or, as authorized by the President, within 120 days after delivery.

Defense articles and defense services may also be procured by the Department of Defense for foreign purchasers if the purchasers agree to pay the full amount of the procurement contract, which assures the Government against any loss on the contract. The Department of Defense may accept a dependable undertaking under which the purchaser agrees to pay within 120 days after delivery, in which case Defense appropriations are used to meet contract payments and are subsequently reimbursed with payments received from the purchasers.

Administrative expenses related to the execution of contracts under this authority are funded in the military assistance appropriation.

The United States along with many other countries provides funds to promote international monetary stability through the International Monetary Fund and to finance development lending and technical assistance through the international development banks.

As a result of the two recent official changes in the par value of the dollar, U.S. payments have been required in addition to regular contributions, as called for by the charters establishing the institutions, for maintenance of value (MOV) of our contributions in terms of gold. The United States has incurred total actual and contingent MOV obligations of $3.8 billion.

The budgetary outlays to cover MOV obligations are anticipated to be no more than $807 million and will be spread over a period of many years. The outlays represent MOV payments on U.S. paid-in capital subscriptions to the banks. Nearly 80% of the MOV obligations cover callable capital contributions, other contingent obligations and IMF obligations, none of which should result in budget outlays.

1. Investment in International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.—The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD), often called the World Bank, was created in 1944, and currently has 122 member countries. Total authorized capital stock, as of June 30, 1973, all for ordinary capital loans, was $27 billion, of which $25.2 billion had been subscribed. Cumulative loan commitments as of June 30, 1973, totaled $20.3 billion.

The Bretton Woods Agreements Act of July 31, 1945, (Public Law 79-171, as amended) authorized the United States to accept membership in the Bank. The U.S. subscription is $6.5 billion, of which the paid-in portion is 10% or $647.3 million excluding MOV payments.

2. Investment in International Development Association.—The International Development Association (IDA) was established in 1960 and is a special fund affiliated with the World Bank. IDA currently has 112 members.

Pursuant to authorization in the International Development Association Act, enacted June 30, 1960, the United States joined the Association in August 1960. The current U.S. share of the $5.3 billion in total subscriptions from all contributors is $2.1 billion. An appropriation of $320 million is requested for 1975, as the final payment toward that share.

Legislation authorizing the proposed U.S. payment was signed into law on March 10, 1972. Maintenance of value of $66 million is also due on this payment for which non-interest-bearing letters of credit will be provided from funds already appropriated.

3. Investment in Inter-American Development Bank.—The Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) promotes economic development in Latin American and Caribbean countries through loans and technical assistance. Twenty-four Western Hemisphere republics, including the United States and Canada, are members of the Bank. Pursuant to the Inter-American Development Bank Act, the United States joined the Bank in December 1959. The Bank's cumulative loan commitments, net of cancellations, as of June 30, 1973, totaled $5.7 billion. Approximately 41% of IDB lending has come from the Bank's ordinary capital resources and 59% from special fund resources.

Ordinary capital.—As of June 30, 1973, the total subscribed ordinary capital of the IDB was $5,139 million, of which $838 million-equivalent was paid in. The U.S. share was $1,958 million, including $299 million paid in. A further $193.4 million, including $25 million in paid-in form, was appropriated for the U.S. subscription to ordinary capital in 1974. With this subscription, including MOV payments already appropriated, the United States will have discharged in full its undertakings with respect to the 1970 replenishment of the Bank's ordinary capital resources.

Fund for special operations.—Contributions to the Fund for Special Operations (FSO) prior to the current replenishment totaled $2,388 million of which the United States contributed 75.4% or $1,800 million. In December 1972, the United States initiated payments on its $1 billion, or 66%, share of a $1.5 billion replenishment of FSO resources. Payments appropriated to date, including an appropriation of $225 million in 1974, total $500 million. An appropriation request of $500 million, representing the balance of funds due under the replenishment, is being sought in 1975.

4. Investment in Asian Development Bank.—The Asian Development Bank (ADB) was established in 1966 to foster economic growth in Asia by extending loans and technical assistance to the developing member countries of the region.

Ordinary capital.—On November 23, 1972, an increase in the Bank's authorized capital came into effect when the required number of stockholders subscribed to their shares of the capital increase. This action raised the Bank's total authorized capital stock from $1.1 billion to $2.7 billion, in current dollars. Because the United States had not yet subscribed to its share of the capital increase, the action reduced our proportionate share, currently $241 million, of total subscribed capital from 19.9% to 9.9%. An appropriation for $120.6 million will be sought in 1974 under proposed authorizing legislation for the first of three equal installments of the U.S. subscription to the capital increase in order to restore the equity position of the United States in the Bank.

Special funds.—As of June 30, 1973, contributions by other member countries to the ADB's special funds resources amounted to $268 million. Legislation authorizing a $100 million U.S. contribution to the special funds was passed in March 1972, and a $50 million appropriation was obtained in 1974. The balance of $50 million is being sought in 1975. Under authorizing legislation proposed for enactment, an additional $50 million will be sought in 1976 to permit full U.S. participation in a multilateral replenishment of the Bank's special funds. Total loan commitments, net of cancellations, as of June 30, 1973, from special funds, amounted to $246 million.

Investment in African Development Fund.—The African Development Fund (ADF), a special fund associated with the African Development Bank (AFDB), was established on June 30, 1973. Both AFDB members and developed nonregional countries may subscribe to the fund. A U.S. contribution of $15 million is being requested in 1975 under proposed legislation.

The current dollar value of the U.S. quota in the International Monetary Fund is $8,083 million, as a result of an increase of $808 million for maintenance of value arising from the recent modification of the value of the dollar in terms of gold. Pursuant to the Fund's charter, this modification required U.S. maintenance of value payments to the IMF totaling $754 million. Of this amount, $606 million represented U.S. obligations to maintain the value of its currency subscription to the IMF, which was three-fourths of the dollar value of the U.S. quota of $7,274 million at the time of devaluation. A $202 million increase in the dollar value of the remaining portion of the U.S. quota, representing our subscription in gold to the IMF, occurred automatically. In addition, payments of $148 million were required to cover U.S. maintenance of value obligations on outstanding drawings from the Fund of $1,331 million. As monetary transactions, the increase on the current dollar value of the U.S. quota, and other transactions with the IMF, represent exchanges of assets and do not result in budgetary expenditure.

Public Law 87-490, approved June 19, 1962, authorized an appropriation, to remain available until expended, of $2 billion for U.S. participation in a 10-nation, $6 billion arrangement providing, under specified conditions, for loans by the participants to the International Monetary Fund when needed to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary system. The appropriation for these arrangements, known as the General Arrangements to Borrow (GAB), was obtained on October 24, 1962.

The GAB has been drawn on by the Fund on six occasions in the total amount of $2,155 million. The United States has not yet participated in the loans extended under the GAB because the Fund's holdings of dollars have been adequate.

The Executive Directors of the International Monetary Fund renewed the GAB on October 17, 1969, for a period of 5 years, beginning October 24, 1970. The U.S. commitment to lend up to $2 billion to the Fund under the GAB will continue during the renewal period.

Voluntary contributions are made to international organizations and programs to encourage their development assistance efforts. The bulk of the request for United Nations technical assistance and other programs is for the United Nations Development Program, which finances most technical assistance and capital project feasibility studies undertaken within the United Nations system. Other major contributions are made to the United Nations Children's Fund and the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Arab refugees.

The second annual contribution will be made in 1975 to the United Nations Environment Fund, established in 1973, to support and coordinate international environmental programs.

Grants and loans are made to the Indus Basin development fund associated with the World Bank. This fund, to which a consortium of donors contributes, finances a construction program designed to insure an equitable division of the waters of the Indus Basin between India and Pakistan. It is supplementing irrigation and helping provide arable land for over 50 million people in the area. Funds are called for from donor nations only as needed to cover disbursement needs.

Development assistance is provided to less developed countries to assist them in their efforts to overcome critical problems that impede their development. Funds are provided in those functional areas which represent major worldwide obstacles to development and where the United States has the capacity and experience to provide effective assistance, including food and nutrition, population planning and health, and education and human resource development. Funds are also provided for assistance to the general economic structure of less developed countries involving improved transportation, power, industrial, and urban development. In addition, this appropriation provides funds in support of the general economy of selected countries and to certain private and international organizations.

sales are used for economic and military activities in furtherance of objectives of the U.S. foreign assistance program. Beginning in 1967, the Agency for International Development began to finance part of its local currency costs in Laos with currencies generated from cash grants to the monetary stabilization program.

The Alliance for Progress was established in 1961 as a cooperative effort of the United States and Latin American countries to promote the economic and social development of Latin America. The United States is helping in these efforts by providing economic and technical aid. The Latin American countries, in addition to providing a steadily increasing share of their own resources to development, are carrying out substantial reform programs. The United States assists development activities, particularly in agriculture, education, health, and economic integration. In order to stimulate economic activity in the region, this administration has made A.I.D. alliance loan dollars, previously restricted to U.S. procurement, eligible for procurement of goods and services throughout Latin America. Beginning in 1974 this activity will be financed from the Development Loans—revolving fund.

Development loans are made to friendly developing countries in order to promote their economic development. These loans are repayable in U.S. dollars at an interest rate of not less than 3% per annum. Loan repayments are to begin not later than 10 years following the date on which the funds are lent. During the initial 10-year period the rates of interest are not to be lower than 2% per annum.

Before a loan is made, the Agency for International Development must take into account (1) whether financing could be obtained in whole or in part from other free world sources on reasonable terms including private sources within the United States, (2) the economic and technical soundness of the activity to be financed, including the capacity of the recipient country to repay the loan, (3) whether the activity gives reasonable promise of contributing to the development of economic resources or to the increase of productive capacities, (4) the consistency of the activity with, and its relationship to, other development activities being undertaken or planned, and its contribution to realistic long-range objectives, (5) the extent to which the recipient country is demonstrating its determination to take effective self-help measures, and (6) possible effects upon the economy of the United States. Additional loan criteria and standards are established by an interagency development loan committee chaired by the Administrator of the Agency for International Development.

Beginning in 1974 the former Alliance for Progress—development loans schedule is merged with the Development Loans—revolving fund.

Also, beginning in 1974 budget authority for both loans and grants for development assistance will be included in the schedule Functional Development Assistance Program. The amounts of budget authority programmed for loans will be advanced to the Development Loans—revolving fund for obligation.

The Development Loan Fund was established as a corporation by the Mutual Security Act of 1958 to extend loans, credits, and guaranties to American or foreign individuals, businesses, financial institutions, or foreign governments in order to provide capital for projects and programs contributing to the economic growth of friendly developing countries.

Under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, the corporation was abolished and its functions were transferred, effective November 3, 1961, to the Agency for International Development. Subsequent to that date, the fund has remained open for the purpose of liquidating outstanding obligations. As of June 30, 1973, the undisbursed loan agreements amounted to $1.2 million. It is estimated that this balance will be fully disbursed in 1974.

Loan repayments and interest earned totaled $119.0 million in 1973 and are expected to total $115.9 million in 1974 and $118.7 million in 1975.

The housing guaranty fund includes the Latin American and worldwide housing guaranty programs. The objectives of these programs are to assist developing countries in the formulation of housing policies, in the development of housing institutions, in projects for lower income groups and on a selective basis, in high priority specific projects including disaster assistance.

The Foreign Assistance Act of 1969 continued available the $550 million issuing authority for the Latin American housing guaranty program, and also extended the program to include Africa and Asia under worldwide housing authority. The issuing authority under the worldwide housing guaranty program was increased from $155.1 million to $230.1 million in 1972, and to $330.1 million in 1974.

Consistent with the intent of Congress that the housing programs be totally self-supporting, the costs of administration, program evaluation and development, and claims investigations are paid from fee income.

The Foreign Assistance Act of 1969 established the Inter-American Social Development Institute, now called the Inter-American Foundation. Financing has been provided through the transfer of $50 million from the Agency for International Development. A recent agreement with the Inter-American Development Bank will also permit the Foundation to use some of the local currency holdings of the Social Progress Trust Fund.

The most important characteristics of the programs are: responsiveness to Latin American and Caribbean initiatives; innovation and replicability; support for change in social structures; direct impact on people's lives; and support for Latin American and Caribbean institutions. The Foundation's programs support projects involving social change as well as the dissemination of information relating to these projects.

The Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 created a revolving fund to provide for more effective use of U.S. Government-owned excess personal property in foreign assistance programs by authorizing such property to be acquired and rehabilitated in advance of specifically known requirements for country programs.

Many types of excess property are included, such as tractors, construction roadbuilding equipment, machinery, and machine tools, the general need for which can be anticipated with a reasonable degree of certainty.

<sup>1</sup> Includes $20 million multiple-year funds appropriated in 1972 for emergency food and medical services.

1. Research, development, and evaluation.—In 1974 research and development activities were delegated to agencies with statutory responsibility in fields of current OEO activity, and funds were appropriated to the receiving agencies to continue these activities.

2. Community action operations.—Funding for these activities will be dependent on State and local decisions in 1975.

In 1974, the Native American program was delegated to HEW. Funds were appropriated to HEW to continue the program and are included in that Agency's 1975 request. In 1973, obligations for this program in OEO were $23.1 million.

In 1975 funds to cover administrative costs associated with the phaseout of all grants funded under community action operations are requested for appropriation to HEW.

3. Health and nutrition.—Early in 1974 health and related projects, excluding the emergency food and medical services program, were delegated to HEW.

During 1973, $28.6 million was obligated by OEO for the emergency food and medical services program. In 1974, funds will be made available for activities consistent with the statutory objectives of this program.

4. Migrants and seasonal farmworkers.—Migrant and seasonal farmworker programs were delegated to the Department of Labor early in 1974.

5. Community economic development.—The community economic development program is directed toward providing significant economic and community development impact in rural and urban areas having concentrations of low-income persons. These efforts have similar objectives as programs funded through the Office of Minority Business Enterprise (OMBE). Legislation has been submitted to authorize the operation of the community economic development programs in OMBE. This consolidation of effort will increase the effectiveness of Federal programs designed to bring minority entrepreneurs into the mainstream of economic life. To continue this activity, $39.3 million is requested for appropriation to OMBE in 1975.

6. Legal services.—The 1975 estimate of $71.5 million for this program is for appropriation to HEW for payment to the proposed Legal Services Corporation. The estimate is sufficient to provide initial capital for the Corporation.

7. General support.—This activity provides supportive administration for the OEO programs described above. Included in the 1975 request for HEW is $33 million to insure the orderly phaseout of outstanding grants and contracts of discontinued activities.

The Service conducts research to provide the means for a safer, more economical, and more abundant supply of agricultural products for the Nation. The Service uses coordinated, interdisciplinary approaches to perform basic and applied research in the fields of livestock, plants, soil, water, and air resources, marketing and use of agricultural products, food and nutrition, consumer services, and agricultural health hazards. The programs financed from this appropriation are described below.

1. Research on animal production.—Research is conducted to improve livestock productivity (including poultry) through improved breeding, feeding, and management practices and to develop methods for controlling diseases, parasites, and insect pests affecting them. The increase requested for 1975 would provide for research to reduce the cost of beef, sheep, and swine production.

2. Research on plant production.—Research is conducted to improve plant productivity (including ornamentals, trees, turf, tropical and subtropical crops) through improved varieties of food, feed, fiber, and other plants; develop new crop resources; and improve crop production practices, including methods to control plant disease, nematodes, insects, and weeds. The increase requested for 1975 would provide for research to reduce the vulnerability of field crops to diseases and insects, research on the nutrition of crops and for the development of improved oil crops for domestic uses and exports.

3. Research on the use and improvement of soil, water, and air.—Research is conducted to improve the management of natural resources, including investigations to improve soil and water management, irrigation, and conservation practices, and to determine the relation of soil types and water to plant, animal, and human nutrition. The research includes studies on hydrologic problems of agricultural watershed and the application of remote sensing techniques in meeting agricultural problems. Research is also conducted on agricultural pollution problems such as protection of plants, animals, and natural resources from harmful effects of soil, water, and air pollutants, and ways to minimize and utilize industry processing wastes of agricultural commodities. The increase requested for 1975 would provide for research on the control of water erosion and sedimentation.

4. Research on marketing, use and effects of agricultural products.—Research is conducted to develop new and improved foods, feeds, fabrics, and industrial products and processes for agricultural commodities for domestic and foreign markets. Research is conducted on marketing of agricultural products. Studies concern the processing, transportation, storage, wholesaling and retailing of products, to reduce the costs of marketing, to maintain product quality, and to reduce losses from waste and spoilage.

Research is conducted on human nutritional requirements, composition, and nutritive value of food needed for consumers and for Federal, State, and local agencies administering food and nutrition programs.

Research is conducted on problems of human health and safety. Studies concern developing means to insure food and feed supplies and products free from toxic or potentially dangerous residues from agricultural sources and processing operations, harmful chemicals, microorganisms, and from naturally occurring toxins. The research conducted also includes studies concerning means to control insect pests of man and his belongings; prevent transmission of animal diseases and parasites to man; reduce the hazards to human life resulting from pesticide residues, toxic molds, tobacco, and other causes; and, develop technology for the detection and destruction of illicit growth of narcotic-producing plants.

Research is conducted on consumer services to measure family use of resources, to identify economic problems of families; and to provide information on fabric performance and the use and care of clothing and household articles by consumers.

Research on housing is conducted to provide knowledge and technology to help bring about improved designs, material, and construction methods for both low-cost renovation and new construction of rural housing suitable for low-to-moderate-income rural residents.

The increase requested for 1975 would provide for research on the nutrient composition of foods, food and nutrition research, and to plan and monitor a food consumption and dietary levels survey.

5. Construction of facilities.—The 1975 estimates provide for an increase of $6,420 thousand for construction of: (1) Sewage treatment facilities at Beltsville, Md., and (2) an abattoir, a meat research laboratory, and an engineering laboratory at Clay Center, Nebr.

6. Contingencies.—$1 million is available to meet urgent needs that develop unexpectedly during the year when such needs cannot be met by redirection of resources from other projects.

This fund finances, on a reimbursable basis, central facilities and services furnished to agencies at the Agricultural Research Center (64 Stat. 658). The capital consists of $300 thousand appropriated in 1951 and donated assets of $419 thousand as of June 30, 1973. Earnings are retained to furnish adequate working capital.

Effective July 1, 1973, the activities are being carried out and financed under the Agricultural Research Service regular appropriation. Services performed for other agencies are now on a reimbursable basis. The fund will be dissolved on June 30, 1974, and the initial $300 thousand appropriation will be returned to the general fund of the Treasury.

The major objectives of the Service are (1) to inspect meat and poultry products intended for human consumption to make sure they are wholesome and labeled according to law, and (2) to protect the animal and plant resources of the Nation from destructive pests and diseases.

1. Meat and poultry inspection.—Federal inspection is required for all meat, poultry, and processed products moving in interstate and foreign commerce. All meat and poultry moving in intrastate commerce must be federally inspected or inspected by States with inspection systems meeting Federal standards. The Federal program also provides financial and technical assistance to States for improving the quality of their inspection programs. Extensive laboratory analyses are conducted for detection of chemical residues, antibiotics and other additives.

The increase in the 1975 estimates provides for expansion of inspection services for the increasing number of plants requiring Federal inspection, additional funding to meet the Federal share of increased State program costs, and additional costs resulting from the reclassification of slaughter inspectors.

The volume of inspections and examinations is indicated by examples given in the following table:

MEAT AND POULTRY INSPECTION
Federally inspected establishments:	1973 actual	1974 estimate	1975 estimate
Meat	5,089	5,560	5,980

Poultry processing	20,169	22,842	24,929
Cooperative agreements with States:
Meat	41	40	40
Poultry	32	31	31

2. Plant disease and pest control.—Programs are designed to keep out of this country by inspection at ports of entry those insects, plant diseases, nematodes, and other pests which would be harmful to agriculture. Cooperative programs are conducted to eradicate or prevent the spread to uninfested areas of certain plant pests which are established in this country. The 1975 estimates propose an increase to analyze the effectiveness of a boll weevil elimination program.

The level of activities for plant pest control is shown by the selected examples that follow:

3. Animal disease and pest control.—Programs are conducted to keep communicable diseases of foreign origin from entering this country and to prevent the spread of disease through interstate shipments of livestock or distribution of impure or impotent veterinary biologics. In cooperation with States, other programs are directed at the control and eradication of livestock diseases present in this country. The animal welfare program is concerned with the humane care and handling of approximately 40 million warmblooded animals. The 1975 estimates propose increases for a cooperative screwworm eradication program in Mexico and a cooperative program with Colombia and Panama to prevent the introduction of foot-and-mouth disease into Panama and other FMD-free countries to the north. Also included is an increase in funds needed to repay Commodity Credit Corporation for advances made to combat emergency disease outbreaks.

The level of activities for the major control programs on animal diseases and pests is as follows:

4. Construction of facilities.—The 1975 estimates propose an increase for construction of a veterinary biologics laboratory. Construction of a new animal import center to replace the Clifton, N.J., quarantine station for which $1.5 million was appropriated in the fiscal year 1970 Appropriation Act has been delayed because the Department has been unable to acquire a suitable site in the New York-New Jersey port area.

5. Contingencies.—Of the total annual amounts provided under this appropriation, $1.5 million is apportioned for use pursuant to section 3679 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, for the control of outbreaks of insects, plant diseases, and animal diseases to the extent necessary to meet emergency conditions.

6. Reimbursement program.—Reimbursements include amounts for overtime work performed in meat and poultry processing plants, and overtime and travel performed in connection with import-export inspection services and cooperative programs with other Federal agencies.

Public Law 88-592, approved September 12, 1964, authorized the sale of the Animal Quarantine Station, at Clifton, N.J., to the city of Clifton, and application of the proceeds of sale to the planning and construction costs of a new station in the New York-New Jersey port and airport area. A sales contract between the Department and the city of Clifton was executed on December 16, 1966, at the appraised value of $527 thousand. Of that amount, $100 thousand was paid to the Department upon execution of the contract. An additional $100 thousand will be paid to the Department upon award of an architect-engineering contract for development of design and construction plans, and the balance will be paid upon publication of bids for construction of the new quarantine station. A total of $6 thousand has been spent by the Department on survey and related costs associated with obtaining a new site. An additional $1.5 million was appropriated in 1970 for construction of the new station. Establishment of a new animal import center to replace the Clifton quarantine station has been delayed because the Department has been unable to acquire a suitable site in the New York-New Jersey port area.

The Service administers funds for payments and grants to State agricultural experiment stations and other eligible institutions for the support of research in agriculture, the rural home, the rural community, and forestry. This administration involves supervision of the funds, and close advisory relations with the State agricultural experiment stations, schools of forestry, and other institutions eligible to receive funds. The Service participates in planning and coordination of research programs among the States and between the States and the Department.

1. Payments to agricultural experiment stations under the Hatch Act, and for penalty mail.—Grants under the Hatch Act are allocated to agricultural experiment stations of the land-grant colleges in the 50 States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands, for agricultural research including investigations and experiments to promote a permanent and efficient agricultural industry and improvements in the rural home and rural community. The increase requested for fiscal year 1975 will provide for increased costs of conducting research.

Funds to cover the cost of penalty mailings for State agricultural experiment station directors are provided under this appropriation. The decrease requested reflects nonrecurring penalty mail costs.

2. Grants for cooperative forestry research.—These grants are allocated to land-grant colleges or agricultural experiment stations in the 50 States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands, and other State-supported colleges and universities offering graduate training in the sciences basic to forestry and having a forestry school. The act requires that the Federal funds paid to each institution be matched by funds from non-Federal sources for forestry research. The increase requested for fiscal year 1975 will provide for increased costs of conducting research.

3. Contracts and grants for scientific research.—These funds are for the support of grants on specific research problems at nonprofit institutions of higher education or nonprofit organizations whose primary purpose is the conduct of such research. Every competitive research proposal selected for funding must be evaluated and classified as outstanding and appropriate to the needs of the designated problem area. A portion of the special grant funds is utilized to support research on special problems of joint concern to the USDA and to the States. The balance of the special grant funds is earmarked for the land-grant colleges of 1890 and Tuskegee Institute. The increase requested for fiscal year 1975 will provide for increased research on beef and pork production, soybeans, pest management, environmental quality, and food and nutrition, and also for the increased cost of conducting research at the colleges established under the Second Morrill Act of 1890 and Tuskegee Institute.

5. Funds for rural development research.—Grants under the Rural Development Act of 1972 are allocated to land-grant colleges and universities of the 50 States and Puerto Rico, to conduct pilot research programs in support of the development of rural areas. Funds are requested for fiscal year 1975 to support pilot research programs initiated in fiscal year 1974.

6. Federal administration.—A coordinating and review staff is maintained to examine research projects and assist State institutions and Federal agencies. The reimbursable program consists of miscellaneous services to other accounts; funds to train foreign participants in this country—Agency for International Development; and the Current Research Information System which provides information on research projects, status of the research, and fund resources for research programs of the State agricultural experiment stations and other institutions.

The primary function of the nationwide system of cooperative extension work is out-of-school applied education in agriculture, home economics, community development, 4-H youth programs, and related subjects. This educational work takes research results, technological advancements, and program facts of the Department of Agriculture, the State agricultural colleges and experiment stations, and incorporates them into a program for action. Cooperative Extension Service interprets, disseminates, and encourages practical use of knowledge. It transmits information from researchers to people.

1. Payments to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands.—Funds appropriated under the Smith-Lever Act for payments to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands are distributed primarily on the basis of population and to a degree on basis of special problems and needs. Funds appropriated under the Agricultural Marketing Act are distributed to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands on a matching basis under approved projects. Funds are used primarily for the employment of State, area and county extension workers who work with individuals, families, community organizations, marketing concerns, and others by providing advice and assistance in the application of improved methods for production, marketing, nutrition, family living, and community development. Work with youth is accomplished largely through the 4-H program. Extension agents are paid from Federal, State, and county sources. The employer's contribution to the retirement fund as required by Public Law 854 is provided by this Federal appropriation. Funds also provide for Federal payment to the Bureau of Employees' Compensation Fund. Funds for the cost of penalty mailings for State extension directors and cooperative extension agents are also provided.

The net increase of $3,299 thousand in this item will include $7,310 thousand to meet increased salary costs at the 1862 Land-Grant colleges, $260 thousand at the 1890 Land-Grant Institutions and Tuskegee Institute, and $34 thousand in the District of Columbia, $1,180 thousand for expansion of the pest management program, $1,020 thousand to develop a farm safety educational program, $850 thousand for increased employer retirement costs for extension agents offset by decreases in the costs of penalty mailings for State extension directors and cooperative extension agents of $4,463 thousand, $2,892 thousand for the low-income nutrition and family education program.

2. Federal administration and coordination.—The Extension Service provides leadership and assistance to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, and the District of Columbia in developing extension programs, improving teaching methods, efficient use of available resources, evaluation of programs, and administrative services. The $691 thousand increase will be used for special projects to evaluate programs, establish and finance pilot projects in selected areas, provide reimbursement to General Services Administration for space occupied in Washington, D.C., and provide financing for the Departmental working capital fund.

agricultural, chemical, and biological sciences. It serves the research, extension, regulatory, and other programs of the Department and State agricultural agencies. Since the Library's primary purpose is to provide for research needs, it has acquired and preserved what is considered to be the most exhaustive body of literature available on all phases of agriculture and the allied sciences—botany, chemistry, animal industry, veterinary medicine, biology, agricultural engineering, rural sociology, forestry, entomology, food and nutrition, soils and fertilizers, and the marketing, transportation, and other economic aspects of agricultural products. Publications are currently acquired from more than 150 governments and jurisdictional entities in some 50 different languages. In addition, printed information of agricultural societies, organizations and cooperatives, and general material in the field of agriculture are collected and made available for use.

Information contained in the agricultural literature is disseminated through bibliographies, reference services, loans and photocopies to agricultural colleges and universities, research institutions, Government agencies, agricultural associations, industry, individual scientists, farmers, and the general public in every part of the world.

During 1973, 252,435 separate issues of periodicals were added to the collection by purchase, gift, and exchange. During the same period, 149,498 loans or photocopies of books and periodicals were made and 103,050 inquiries handled.

The increase proposed would be used to continue to develop or maintain a comprehensive collection of books and journals in agriculture and related specialized subject areas through the acquisition or preservation programs which are aimed at providing more complete and timely agricultural information to users.

The Service administers the Department's programs of crop and livestock estimates and statistical research and service. Statistical and economic data developed by the Service on food and agriculture are essential to farmers, processors, and handlers in making production and marketing decisions. It also helps legislators, administrators, and others concerned with developing and administering agricultural programs. Further, data provided by the Service are basic to economic research and analysis and other agricultural research programs.

1. Crop and livestock estimates.—The Service provides the official national estimates of acreage, yield, and production of crops; stocks and value of farm commodities; and numbers and inventory value of livestock items. Data on approximately 150 crops and livestock products are covered in some 550 reports issued each year. Data collected and published on prices paid and received by farmers are basic to computation of parity prices.

The work of the Service is conducted through 44 State offices serving the 50 States; most of these offices are operated as joint State and Federal services. Cooperative arrangements with State agencies provide much additional State and county data; Federal funds are not available for collection and publication of these data. During 1973 cooperating States expended an estimated $4 million of their own funds on such associated State programs.

A comparison of activities in 1972 and 1973, including work performed under cooperative arrangements, follows:

	1972 actual	1973 actual
Separate mailings of inquiry forms, average per field office.....	414	404
Total questionnaires handled:
Number distributed.....	8,550,000	8,700,000

Number of enumerative and objective survey contacts (measurements and interviews).....	204,000	221,000
Number of official reports issued, all offices.....	9,800	9,900
Copies of reports distributed.....	14,163,000	12,434,000
Copies of publications distributed.....	2,249,000	2,175,000
Special requests for information answered by field offices.....	78,600	78,100

The increases requested in fiscal year 1975 will be used to conduct complete multiple frame cattle and hog surveys and an export sales program.

2. Statistical research and service.—Departmental clearance and review.—This work includes the review, coordination, and monitoring of data gathering surveys conducted by the Department. This involves (1) the review of all proposed statistical forms and survey plans requiring Office of Management and Budget clearance in accordance with the Federal Reports Act of 1942, and (2) coordination of all interdepartment and intradepartment programs for the improvement of agricultural statistics and related data.

Improvement of crop and livestock estimates.—This research is devoted primarily to improving statistical methods and techniques for producing agricultural statistics with a high degree of accuracy at a minimum cost. This work is in support of the Statistical Reporting Service's long-range program for improving crop and livestock estimates, and is directed toward developing better sampling, yield forecasting, and survey techniques for the agency. Current research activities include compiling and maintaining lists of farms (farm directory); developing new sampling techniques combining lists of farms and aerial photographs with area sampling frames; constructing mathematical models for forecasting crop yields from objective counts and measurements of plant characteristics; and reducing reporting and other non-sampling errors by improving questionnaire design, and by devising better field, editing and processing procedures. These research studies are tested by pilot surveys under actual operating conditions, and then, if indicated, placed into operation.

A comparison of activities for 1972 and 1973 follows:

The Department's responsibilities in the agricultural phases of the U.S. foreign development assistance programs are administered by the Economic Research Service. This includes direction of the Department's activities under agreement with the Agency for International Development (AID), Peace Corps, and other development assistance organizations, particularly agricultural technical assistance and training programs. The Service participates with AID in the planning of agricultural development policy, in formulating technical assistance projects, and in the review and evaluation of agricultural assistance efforts. In performing these functions, the Service works closely with other U.S. and international organizations to help them utilize the scientific and institutional competence of American agriculture in carrying out development assistance programs. The activity is financed mainly with funds transferred from AID.

The major objectives of the Commodity Exchange Authority, in the enforcement of the Commodity Exchange Act, are to protect the price and hedging services of the commodity futures markets. These services are widely used by farmers, merchandisers, and processors. To carry out its enforcement objectives, the Commodity Exchange Authority works to maintain fair trading practices and competitive pricing on commodity exchanges, and to prevent price manipulation, cheating, fraud, and abusive acts and practices in commodity transactions. Enforcement of the act includes supervision of 21 commodity exchanges designated as contract markets, approximately 260 brokerage firms registered as futures commission merchants, and about 1,400 registered floor brokers operating on the exchanges.

For the fourth consecutive year, volume of futures trading in regulated agricultural commodities reached an all-time record. The increase over last year's figure was 41.7%. Futures transactions during the year ending June 30, 1973, for 21 commodities totaled 17.8 million contracts and were valued at an estimated $268.3 billion. Comparable figures for 1 year earlier were 12.6 million contracts valued at $148.0 billion. In all, volume increased during fiscal 1973 for two-thirds of the regulated commodities that were actively traded in the previous year. Four commodities—corn, cattle, live hogs, and shell eggs—recorded all-time highs.

Grain markets.—Activity in the grain markets increased 143% this year to 5.6 million contracts or about 31% of the total volume for all regulated commodities. In the previous year, grain trades of 2.3 million contracts represented 18% of the year's volume. Corn futures, posting a record high of 3.5 million contracts, ranked second only to soybeans in market activity. The previous record of 2.7 million contracts was set in fiscal year 1971. In the wheat market, number of transactions climbed from .7 million contracts in fiscal 1972 to 1.9 million this year. This represented the highest level of trading since fiscal year 1967 when 2.1 million transactions occurred. At the Board of Trade of Kansas City, Mo., Inc., volume in wheat set a record high of .4 million contracts traded, nearly double the previous record of fiscal year 1968. Trading in oats also gained, reversing its downtrend of prior years with a 96% increase in volume.

Livestock complex.—In the livestock and livestock product commodities, cattle and live hog futures set volume records of 2.1 and .8 million contracts, respectively. With the 119.8% increase in trading activity, volume in the cattle market surpassed that of the consistently high pork belly futures for the first time. Trading in bellies decreased about 20% from last year's 2 million contracts. In all, livestock and livestock product trades accounted for 26.8% of the year's volume, as compared to the 27% of 1 year earlier.

Soybean complex.—Trading in soybeans and soybean products registered a net gain of 4.7%. The 6.1 million contracts traded in these commodities accounted for 34% of this year's record volume as compared to 46.2% of last year's. Volume in soybeans, still the most active commodity, was down 6% from last year's record 3.96 million contracts. The 1.64 million trades in soybean oil represented an increase of 22% over volume in fiscal year 1972. This was just short of the futures high of 1.67 million contracts traded during fiscal year 1970. Volume in soybean meal was up 49% from last year's figure.

Other markets.—Shell eggs and potatoes more than doubled their trading volume of the previous year. The previous record for volume in shell eggs set in fiscal year 1970 was exceeded by the .66 million transactions this year. Volume in the cotton futures market continued to gain this year. The .434 million transactions represent an increase of 6% over last year's .411 million contracts. Trading in wool also became more active this last year. Total volume for fiscal year 1973 was 4,811 contracts as compared to 3,157 for fiscal year 1972. Coconut oil, trading for the first time this year, had a volume of 6,150 contracts.

1. Registration and auditing of brokerage houses.—This consists of (a) protection of customers' funds through the establishment and enforcement of minimum financial standards for futures commission merchants and periodic audits of their books and records, and (b) annual registration of futures commission merchants and floor brokers.

The program is aimed at assuring fair play in the marketing of livestock, meat, and poultry. Its principal purpose is to maintain effective competition for livestock, meat, and poultry, so as to bring to farmers and ranchers the true market value of their livestock and poultry. Consumers and members of the livestock, poultry, and meat industries are also protected against unfair business practices in the marketing of meats and poultry, and from restrictions on competition which could unduly affect meat and poultry prices.

The increase for 1975 will be used to expand the Department's activities in the areas of (1) scale accuracy and weighing of livestock and meat, and (2) custom feedlot marketing and custom feeding by packers and livestock sales by packers to competitor buyers.

The volume of work performed is indicated by the following examples:

Farmer Cooperative Service conducts research, advises directly with cooperative leaders and others, promotes cooperative organization and development through other Federal and State agencies, and publishes reports, "News for Farmer Cooperatives," and other educational material. This work is aimed (1) to help farmers get better prices for their products and reduce operating expenses, (2) to help rural and small-town residents use cooperatives to develop rural resources, and (3) to help all Americans understand the work of these cooperatives.

In fiscal year 1975, FCS plans to adjust its resources to emphasize work on the following new programs: 1. coordination in the pork industry, 2. coordinated transportation and distribution system for cooperatives, 3. cooperative programs for acquiring farm inputs, and 4. agricultural bargaining.

The Foreign Agricultural Service helps American agriculture to maintain and expand foreign markets for its products and reports foreign developments as a guide to American agricultural production, policies, and programs.

(a) The Service maintains a worldwide agricultural intelligence and reporting service that enables American agriculture to carry out its production, policies, and programs in the context of world developments. Pertinent agricultural and economic data of foreign production and markets, and information on foreign agricultural policies are continuously analyzed and reported.

(b) The Service helps to develop foreign markets for U.S. farm products through continuous efforts to remove international trade barriers that inhibit export sales and through effective market promotion under special export programs.

1. International trade.—The Service directs and coordinates Department responsibilities in international trade agreement programs and negotiations, under the authority of the Trade Expansion Act. It identifies and strives to reduce foreign trade barriers to U.S. agricultural exports. Developments in foreign trade policies are examined and their effect on agricultural trade and operations are reported with recommendations as to courses of action.

The Service recommends Department positions and participates in negotiations on trade agreements and international commodity agreements. It reviews and reports trade regulations of countries (primarily those signatory to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) as to how such regulations affect the movement of U.S. farm products in world trade.

The Service administers a program of import controls, in accordance with section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, on foreign farm products which would render ineffective or materially interfere with Department programs relating to agricultural commodities. It is also responsible for administering import controls established under the 1964 Meat Import Act and section 204 of the Trade Expansion Act.

2. Agricultural attachés.—The Service maintains agricultural attachés at 63 foreign posts to assist in the development of markets abroad for U.S. agricultural commodities.

They work closely with numerous U.S. agricultural trade groups and maintain contacts with foreign governments to promote greater market accessibility for U.S. farm products. They carry out a comprehensive schedule of reporting foreign agricultural production, marketing, and trade policy developments to keep U.S. agriculture, industry, and Government currently informed.

3. Foreign marketing.—(a) General sales manager.—Public Law 480 program.—The Service conducts programs which facilitate the sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on a long-term credit basis and for the donation of agricultural commodities to foreign governments, inter-governmental and voluntary agencies and the world food programs in some 100 countries. These programs are authorized by titles I and II of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended (Public Law 480).

Commercial credit and barter programs.—The Service conducts the CCC export credit sales program under authority of the Corporation's charter authority and section 4 of the Food for Peace Act (7 U.S.C. 1707a). This is a commercial program under which U.S. agricultural commodities from private stocks are financed for export up to a maximum credit period of 3 years. For all transactions there is required an irrevocable letter of credit from an acceptable foreign or U.S. bank assuring payment in dollars, with interest at rates comparable to private U.S. commercial rates. The Service also has the authority to conduct, under the CCC Charter Act, and the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, barter transactions which use agricultural exports to generate the funds to pay for goods and services which U.S. Government agencies would otherwise buy abroad with dollars. Exports are restricted to areas where they will help maintain or increase the U.S. share of markets, thereby benefiting the balance of payments. The agricultural commodities may be from private stocks or from those acquired by CCC in its price support operations and purchased by private exporters for unrestricted use. The barter program was temporarily suspended at the end of fiscal year 1973. The 1975 program will consist of working off contracts entered into prior to June 30, 1973.

Commodity exports.—The Service administers programs to facilitate and expand the commercial export sales of privately owned and Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) owned agricultural commodities, and develops pricing policies and export payment rates for applicable commodities. The Service also carries out the domestic operations to implement the Wheat Trade Convention of the International Wheat Agreement. These programs are authorized by the CCC Charter Act, and the Agricultural Act of 1949, 1964, and 1970, as amended.

(b) Market development.—The Service administers programs concerned with the development of foreign markets for agricultural products of the United States, and coordinates interagency participation and action essential to administration of these programs. These functions involve:

Providing foreign tradesmen with services that are necessary to build and maintain markets for U.S. agricultural products.

Developing a system of worldwide promotional programs, on a commodity-by-commodity basis, in cooperation with national organizations of producers, processors, and exporters, and providing overall guidance to these organizations in carrying out cooperative programs.

Developing, operating, and evaluating a worldwide system of multicommodity promotional programs utilizing trade fairs, trade centers and point-of-purchase campaigns to expand overseas markets.

Reviewing foreign marketing plans; providing technical assistance in their design; developing procedures and controlling budgets and funds essential to their implementation; and evaluating programs implemented.

Cooperating with State and local organizations in programs designed to provide technical assistance to U.S. agricultural export firms and to stimulate participation of new U.S. "cooperator" groups in promotional projects.

Developing and guiding a systematic review of foreign markets on a country-by-country basis to find new market opportunities for U.S. agricultural products and to develop long-range promotional plans for such markets.

Exploring new methods and techniques to stimulate the flow of U.S. farm products into overseas markets.

4. Foreign commodity analysis.—Information essential to foreign marketing of specific U.S. farm commodities and to domestic planning is obtained, analyzed, and made available to U.S. farm and trade groups and to Government. Selected agricultural commodities and/or foreign geographic areas of key importance are analyzed from a competitive standpoint with the ultimate objective to develop markets for U.S. agricultural products. The program area maintains a supporting role by providing statistical data and analyzed information to other action program areas of the Foreign Agricultural Service. Assistance is given to American exporters and foreign importers to bring them together under conditions favorable to trade.

Effective in January 1974 the Foreign Marketing Branches of the eight Commodity Divisions within the Commodity programs activity will be realigned under the foreign marketing activities of the Foreign Agricultural Service.

Market development projects.—Foreign currencies generated by the sale of agricultural commodities under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, as well as foreign currencies acquired by the United States from other sources, are used by the Foreign Agricultural Service to develop new foreign markets and expand existing markets for U.S. agricultural commodities, including cotton, dairy products, fats and oils, grain, feed, livestock and meat, poultry, fruits and vegetables, and tobacco.

The type of market development projects being carried out include sales promotion campaigns, trade fairs and exhibits, nutrition demonstrations, and market analyses. In 1975 it is planned that the unobligated balance brought forward in this appropriation will be used to purchase those currencies necessary to carry out the program. Dollar funds for use in other countries are included in the appropriation Foreign Agricultural Service.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS AND SPECIAL EXPORT PROGRAMS

Facilities and funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation may by law be used in carrying out programs for exporting agricultural commodities. The laws also authorize appropriations to be made to cover costs of such programs. When funds become available, advances are made to the Corporation for estimated costs. If the amounts appropriated are greater than actual needs, the excess is used to reduce future appropriation requests. If appropriations are less than actual needs, other Corporation funds may be used temporarily to finance the balance of authorized costs.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Included in this category are the following activities carried out under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, Public Law 480, 83d Congress, as amended: Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I); sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms (title I); and commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad (title II).

1. Sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies and for dollars on credit terms are made under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (Public Law 480), as amended (7 U.S.C. 1701-1710).

The Corporation finances all sales made pursuant to agreements concluded under title I. Sales are made to friendly countries—as defined in section 103(d) of the act—and must not displace expected commercial sales for cash dollars (secs. 103 (c) and (n)).

No agreements may be entered into after December 31, 1977 (sec. 409), and agreements may not be made under title I in any calendar year which call for an appropriation to reimburse the Corporation in excess of $1.9 billion, plus unused prior years' authorizations.

Whenever practicable, terms of agreements must require payment at time of delivery of not less than 5% of the purchase price in dollars or in currencies convertible to dollars. These initial payments are applied against costs to reduce appropriation requests. On credit agreements under title I, the President is authorized to require payment upon delivery in dollars or foreign currencies of amounts needed for payment of U.S. obligations and certain other purposes.

The act provides for a progressive shift from foreign currency sales to dollar credit sales, to be completed by December 31, 1971. To the extent that transition from foreign currency sales to dollar credit sales is not possible, transition to convertible foreign currency credit sales is authorized on terms which permit conversion to dollars at the exchange rate applicable to the sales agreement.

Factors determining availability of commodities for disposition under Public Law 480 are productive capacity, domestic requirements, farm and consumer price levels, anticipated commercial exports, and adequate carryover. No commodity is available for disposition if the disposition thereof would reduce the domestic supply below that needed to meet domestic requirements, adequate carryover, and anticipated exports for dollars.

No sales of agricultural commodities shall be made to North Vietnam unless authorized by act of Congress enacted after July 1, 1973.

The Corporation may finance only the differential between U.S.-flag rates and world rates for the cost of ocean freight in the case of regular foreign currency sales. Since December 31, 1971, agreements entered into under title I have only provided for long-term credit (including convertible foreign currency credit), and on these transactions the Corporation may finance the entire cost of ocean freight in the case of U.S.-flag vessels which are required to be used.

(a) Sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I).—Sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies were made to countries unable to expand commercial purchases because of a lack of dollar exchange. Foreign currencies received in payment are deposited to the account of the U.S. Treasury and can be used only as stated in section 104. The dollar value of such deposits through June 30, 1973, amounted to $12.9 billion.

Uses fall into two groups—those of benefit to the foreign country, mainly loans and grants to promote economic development and to support common defense, and those of benefit to the United States. The latter includes, among others, expenses of the U.S. Government abroad, agricultural market development, educational exchange, construction of military family housing, and sales of foreign currency to U.S. citizens and tourists.

Certain uses of foreign currencies, including foreign currency loan repayments, for U.S. uses, and certain foreign currency grants, are subject to the appropriation process.

Sales agreements specify particular uses, and in those entered into after December 31, 1964, at least 20% of the foreign currencies are required to be subject to the appropriation process, with certain exceptions. Such uses reduce dollar outflow and the deficit in the balance of payments of the United States. The Corporation is reimbursed for the dollar value of currencies so used. Proceeds from sales of foreign currencies and from dollar repayments of foreign currency loans are applied as a reduction in appropriation requests.

Section 509 of Public Law 86-500, approved June 8, 1960 (7 U.S.C. 1704b note) provides that at least 75% of the total cost of foreign military housing projects (unless otherwise specified) shall be paid from foreign currencies acquired under title I. Pursuant to 10 U.S.C. 2681(b), as amended, the estimate reflects transfer to the Corporation of $6 million each year to liquidate amounts due. Of this amount, $2 million will be applied to the French housing barter transaction discussed under the Corporation's special activities and the remaining $4 million will be applied against other amounts due, with a balance of $23 million remaining unpaid as of June 30, 1975.

From inception through December 31, 1971, local currency sales agreements were signed with 55 countries. They covered sales of commodities at an export market value of $13 billion. Major items were wheat, cotton, fats and oils, rice, and feed grains. Program costs incurred after December 31, 1971, represent financing of shipments made under agreements signed prior to January 1, 1972.

The following table reflects costs incurred (in thousands of dollars):

(b) Sales of agricultural commodities for dollars or convertible foreign currencies on credit terms (title I).—Sales of U.S. agricultural commodities under long-term dollar credit terms are also authorized.

Agreements are made with friendly countries or with United States and foreign private trade. They may provide for delivery in annual installments for not more than 10 years from the date of the agreement subject to the availability of the commodity.

Payments are in dollars with interest at rates not less than the minimum required by section 201 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, for loans made under that section. Payments are made in reasonable annual amounts over periods of not to exceed 20 years from the date of last delivery in each calendar year under the agreement, except that the first annual payment may be deferred for a period of not more than 2 years after such date of last delivery. Interest is computed from the date of such last delivery. As payments are received each year, they are applied against current costs to reduce the appropriation request. Private trade agreements must provide for projects to establish improved storage or marketing facilities or otherwise encourage private economic enterprise in friendly countries.

Credit terms for convertible foreign currency credit sales are to be no less favorable to the United States than those for development loans made under section 201 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, which authorized loans to be made on the basis of payment in 40 years with a 10-year grace period. Dollar payments, when received, will also be applied to reduce appropriation requests.

Total agreements made since inception to June 30, 1973, amount to $3,826.8 million cost value, including ocean freight for shipment on U.S. ships. Major commodities are wheat, cotton, oils, rice, and feed grains. Payments for the period amount to $649.2 million, of which $453.8 million was applied to principal and $195.4 million to interest.

2. Commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad (title II).—Available agricultural commodities are furnished to meet famine or other urgent or emergency relief needs. Also, commodities are furnished to promote economic and community development in friendly developing countries, to combat malnutrition, and for needy people, and nonprofit school lunch and preschool feeding programs. They are furnished through friendly governments and private or public agencies, including inter-governmental organizations such as the World Food program. The Food for Peace Act, in amending title II, expressed the sense of Congress that other advanced nations should be encouraged to make increased contributions for the purpose of combating world hunger and malnutrition, and that to achieve this objective, the United States should work to expand the United Nations' World Food program.

The Agency for International Development is responsible for administering title II programs. However, the Corporation makes available the commodities or products requested for disposition under title II. Such commodities or products are made available from the Corporation's stocks of commodities or products acquired under its support program or are purchased at market prices when this is determined to be in the best interest of the Government.

The Corporation is authorized to pay, with respect to commodities made available, the costs of acquisitions, packaging, processing, enrichment, preservation, fortification, transportation, handling, and other incidental costs incurred up to the time of delivery to U.S. ports and ocean freight charges and general average contributions arising out of ocean transport.

Approximately $7½ million each year may be used to buy foreign currencies accruing under title I of this act to meet costs (other than personnel and administrative costs of cooperating sponsors, distributing agencies, and recipient agencies) directed to community and other self-help activities designed to alleviate the causes for the need for such aid.

Through December 31, 1973, appropriations totaling $7,300 million were authorized. No programs of assistance can be entered into after December 31, 1977, and none shall be undertaken under this title during any calendar year which call for an appropriation of more than $600 million to reimburse the Corporation for costs incurred, including its investment, plus any amount by which programs of assistance undertaken under this title in the preceding calendar year have called or will call for appropriations in amounts less than authorized during the preceding year. Any incidental sales proceeds and proceeds from loss, damage, and other claims are applied against Commodity Credit Corporation costs to reflect a reduction in appropriation requests. No donations of agricultural commodities shall be made to North Vietnam unless authorized by act of Congress enacted after July 1, 1973.

SPECIAL EXPORT PROGRAM

In addition to the foreign assistance programs described, the Commodity Credit Corporation conducted a special export program for bartered materials for the supplemental stockpile (7 U.S.C. 1856). This program was closed out in 1971. Barter activities are now limited to barter for off-shore procurement for other government agencies on a reimbursable basis.

Effective at the beginning of fiscal year 1974, barter program contract negotiations were suspended. Estimated commodity shipments for 1974 and 1975 represent completion of shipments under contracts made prior to the suspension.

This account includes funds to cover expenses of programs administered by, and functions assigned to, the Service. The funds consist of direct appropriation, transfers from the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC), and miscellaneous advances from other sources. This is a consolidated account for administrative expenses of National, Commodity, State and county offices.

The Commodity offices in Prairie Village and Minneapolis play an important role in administering support programs and the field operations stemming from producer loan and purchase agreements, inventory management, and merchandising activities.

The State committees are in general charge of all programs carried out in their respective States. Within the framework of national policy, they determine the policies to be followed and direct the adaptation of national programs to the State.

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation elected county committees are responsible for the local administration of programs. They make local program decisions and policies and appoint a county executive director who directs the office staff in handling the day to day detailed administrative work.

The programs and activities carried out by this Service include: Rural environmental assistance program; emergency conservation measures; Water Bank Act program; Appalachian Region conservation program; acreage allotment and marketing quota programs; Sugar Act program; conservation reserve program; feed grain, wheat, and cotton programs; cropland conversion program; cropland adjustment program; dairy and beekeeper indemnity programs; Wool Act program; bin storage program; and commodity support and related programs.

In order to improve program management as well as provide information to county offices to improve services to farmers, ASCS is introducing a new ADP and communications system into its operation. This involves installing individual terminals in county offices and remote batch terminals in the field offices and Washington. A pre-pilot operation is planned to begin in 1975. (Further details may be found under the program narrative for the Commodity Credit Corporation Fund, Nonadministrative Expenses.)

The activities carried out by the Service fall within three major categories:

1. Program formulation and appraisal.—The supply adjustment, conservation, and commodity support programs, and the management and merchandising of commodities acquired under the support program, have a tremendous impact on the national and, to a lesser extent, the international economy. This activity provides for constant review of the effectiveness of these programs. It also provides for the analysis of data to formulate even more effective programs.

2. Operation of supply adjustment, conservation, and support programs.—This activity includes all functions dealing with the administration of programs carried out through the farmer committee system, including (a) developing program regulations and procedures; (b) holding meetings with employees and producers to discuss new programs or changes in existing programs; (c) collecting and compiling basic data for individual farms; (d) establishing individual farm allotments, bases and yields; (e) establishing proportionate shares for sugar farms when necessary; (f) notifying producers of allotments, proportionate shares, productivity indexes and payment rates; (g) determining farm marketing allocations; (h) handling appeals; (i) conducting referendums and certifying results; (j) checking compliance with acreage allotments and use of set-aside acres; (k) developing pooling agreements under which several farmers work jointly to solve a common conservation problem which cannot be solved by individual action; (l) issuing marketing cards so that production from the allotted acreage can be marketed without penalty; (m) processing producer requests for conservation cost-sharing; and (n) processing commodity loan documents and issuing sight drafts.

3. Inventory management and merchandising.—This activity includes: (a) overall management of CCC-owned commodities; (b) selling commodities; (c) donating commodities; and (d) accounting for loans and commodities. The value of the commodities owned by CCC on June 30, 1973, was about $479 million.

The objectives are to provide consumers with adequate supplies of sugar at reasonable prices, to protect the welfare of the domestic sugar industry, and to promote the export trade of the United States. Total U.S. requirements and quotas are determined each year. The quota for each domestic area is allotted to individual sellers when necessary to achieve orderly marketing. Restrictive farm acreage allotments are established for producers when necessary to avoid surpluses.

Payments are made which supplement the income of domestic producers of cane and beets. Payments require compliance with specified conditions of employment, production and price. Payments are also made for abandonment of planted acreage and crop deficiencies on harvested acreage due to natural calamities.

The increase of $1.7 million proposed for 1975 is required to provide necessary funds to complete payments on the 1973 crop, and to make payments on the 1974 crop to eligible producers in fiscal year 1975.

Tax collections from imports of sugar exceed total obligations by $713.5 million for fiscal years 1938 through 1973.

This program is designed to encourage conservation by sharing with farmers, ranchers, and woodland owners the cost of carrying out approved soil- and water-conserving practices, including related wildlife-conserving practices and water, air, and land pollution-abatement practices which farmers generally would not perform to the needed extent with their own resources. The rate of cost-sharing averages about 50% of the cost. Cost-sharing may be in the form of conservation materials and services or a payment after completion of the practice.

Conservation measures offered include those primarily designed to establish permanent protective cover, improve and protect established vegetative cover, conserve and dispose of water, establish temporary vegetative cover, temporarily protect soil from wind and water erosion, provide wildlife benefits, and abate agriculture-related pollution.

The following and other practices were installed under the 1972 program on almost 0.7 million farms:

(In thousands)
Constructing water storage reservoirs	structures	48
Constructing terraces	acres served	572
Establishing stripcropping systems	acres	178
Establishing or improving enduring vegetative cover	do.	4,567

Planting trees and shrubs	acres	227
Improving stands of forest trees	do.	206
Wildlife conservation measures	acres served	908
Pollution-abatement structures or measures	number	25

Funds are distributed among the States on the basis of conservation needs. They are, in turn, distributed by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation State committees to counties. The county committees approve conservation practice cost-sharing for eligible persons.

Loans from Commodity Credit Corporation are used to make advance payments to vendors. These payments are for conservation materials and services furnished to farmers and ranchers prior to the time funds are appropriated each year. Repayment is made from balances of prior appropriations or from new funds appropriated.

Amounts repaid or estimated to be repaid on the Commodity Credit Corporation loans are:

	1973 actual	1974 estimate	1975 estimate	Total
Loan repayment	35,000		25,000	60,000
Interest			25	25

A level of $90 million for the 1974 program is proposed, excluding administrative expenses. Payments for the 1974 program will be made principally from the 1975 appropriation.

RURAL ENVIRONMENTAL PROGRAM—Continued

Program objectives and priorities.—The new national program would provide for three groups of practices, or functions, representing the three basic program objectives: (1) Soil and water conservation, (2) timber incentives, and (3) recreation and wildlife. These are discussed below.

1. Soil and water conservation.—The primary objective of soil and water conservation would be to encourage farmers and ranchers to carry out whole-farm, long-term conservation plans that would emphasize conservation benefits of national concern, and achieve desirable land-use adjustments.

Whole-farm conservation plans, developed with SCS assistance and approved by soil and water conservation districts, will be the basis for long-term contracts. While this requirement would not necessarily apply to cost-sharing for timber production, recreation or wildlife practices, or to cost-share funds set aside specifically for annual contracts assistance provided for such practices will be on the basis that they are needed, feasible and would be harmonious elements of a soil and water conservation plan for the operating unit.

It is recognized that whole-farm conservation plans and long-term contracts also will contain essential soil and water conservation practices that are profitable for farmers to carry out without cost-sharing.

The emphasis on long-term cost-sharing based on whole-farm plans, approved by soil and water conservation districts, would provide incentives for increased participation in the SCS technical assistance program. Many farm conservation plans would be changed and updated to facilitate this participation, and other farmers and ranchers heretofore nonparticipants in the technical assistance program would be expected to request SCS planning assistance. Annual program funding levels for long-term contracts would be set at "not less than" levels and funds could not be reallocated to other purposes without the specific approval of the Secretary.

2. Timber incentives.—Among the objectives of cost-sharing for timber production is the increased supply of sawtimber on nonindustrial private lands. Forests are among the best of vegetative covers for preventing soil erosion and for enhancing recreation opportunities and wildlife habitats. Forest land management plans would be emphasized for this program.

Cost-share payments for annual (nonending) practices and other crop production increasing practices that are otherwise profitable to the landowner would be eliminated.

Annual program funding levels for timber incentives would be set at "not less than" levels and could not be reallocated to other purposes without the specific approval of the Secretary.

3. Recreation and wildlife.—The primary objective of cost-sharing for recreation and wildlife would be for preserving wetlands for increasing migratory and other waterfowl populations. Recreation and wildlife practices would continue to be supported, but on a somewhat lower priority basis than at present. The USDA water bank program would be superseded by the practices under this objective. Contracts would all be multiyear contracts.

4. Emergency measures.—$10 million of the cost-share funds available each year for cost-share contracts would be reserved for use in designated emergency areas to finance restoration of damage to agricultural lands caused by natural disaster. Terms and conditions would be similar to those presently applied in the ASCS emergency conservation measures program.

The purposes of this program are to preserve, restore, and improve the wetlands of the Nation, and thereby to conserve surface waters, to preserve and improve habitat for migratory waterfowl and other wildlife resources, to reduce runoff, soil and wind erosion, and contribute to improved water quality and reduce stream sedimentation, to contribute to improved subsurface moisture, to reduce acres of new land coming into production and to retire lands now in agricultural production, to enhance the beauty of the landscape, and to promote comprehensive water management planning.

The Secretary of Agriculture enters into agreements with landowners and operators for the conservation of specified wetlands. The agreements are for 10 years with provision for renewal for additional periods. During the period of the agreement, the landowner agrees not to drain, burn, fill or otherwise destroy the wetland character of such areas, nor to use such areas for agricultural purposes, as determined by the Secretary. The Secretary makes annual payments to the owner or operator at a rate to be determined.

The Secretary carries out the program in harmony with wetlands programs administered by the Secretary of the Interior and utilizes the technical and related services of appropriate State, Federal, and private conservation agencies to assure proper coordination.

The cropland adjustment program was authorized by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965 which expired with the 1970 crop year. Cropland adjustment programs were approved only for 1966 and 1967. This program assisted farmers, through long-term agreements, to divert cropland from the production of certain crops to more needed uses that promote the development and conservation of our soil, water, forest, wildlife, and recreational resources. The period of an agreement was not less than 5 years nor more than 10 years. The program also helped farmers establish, protect, and conserve open spaces and natural beauty, and prevent air and water pollution.

In return for diverting the cropland to approved public benefit uses, producers receive adjustment payments. They also are eligible to receive cost-sharing assistance for establishing approved land treatment measures. Additional incentive payments are made to producers who entered into agreements to permit free public access to land designated under the cropland adjustment program agreement, for hunting, trapping, fishing, and hiking.

Under the Greenspan provisions of the program, funds were also made available to Federal, State, or local governmental agencies for use in acquiring cropland for permanent conversion to specified public uses, and cost-shares could also be paid to such agencies for establishing approved land treatment measures consistent with the conditions and costs under agreements entered into with producers.

This appropriation provides special funds for sharing the cost of emergency conservation measures to deal with cases of severe damage to farm and range-lands resulting from natural disasters. The criteria under which assistance may be made available are set forth in the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590(h)).

Funds are allocated for use only in those counties designated by the Secretary of Agriculture as disaster counties. Assistance is made available to treat new conservation problems which (1) if not treated will impair or endanger the land, (2) materially affect the productive capacity of the land, (3) represent damage which is unusual in character and, except for wind erosion, is not the type which would recur frequently in the same area, and (4) will be so costly to rehabilitate that Federal assistance is or will be required to return the land to productive agricultural use.

Under the 1973 program cost-sharing assistance is being provided to treat farmlands damaged by flood, tornado, hurricane, freeze, and fire. As of August 31, 1973, there were 521 counties in 33 States where assistance was being provided.

DAIRY AND BEEKEEPER INDEMNITY PROGRAMS

*For necessary expenses involved in making indemnity payments to dairy farmers for milk or cows producing such milk and manufacturers of dairy products who have been directed to remove their milk or milk products from commercial markets because it contained residues of chemicals registered and approved for use by the Federal Government, and to beekeepers who through no fault of their own have suffered losses as a result of the use of economic poisons which had been registered and approved for use by the Federal Government, $1,850,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That none of the funds contained in this Act shall be used to make indemnity payments to any farmer whose milk was removed from commercial markets as a result of his willful failure to follow procedures prescribed by the Federal Government. Under this program the Department makes indemnification payments to dairy farmers, manufacturers of dairy products, and beekeepers.

This program began in 1964 and was limited (until the passage of the Agricultural Act of 1970) to payments to dairy farmers, who were directed to remove their milk from commercial markets because it contained residues of chemicals registered and approved for use by the Federal Government.

The Agricultural Act of 1970 authorized indemnification payments, beginning with the date of its enactment, to manufacturers of dairy products who have been directed to remove their products because it contained residues of chemicals registered and approved for use by the Federal Government.

The Agricultural Act of 1970 also authorized payments to beekeepers who, through no fault of their own, have suffered losses of honey bees after January 1, 1967, as a result of utilization of pesticides near or adjacent to the property on which the beehives of such beekeepers were located.

The Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973 extended the authority for making indemnity payments to dairy farmers and to manufacturers of dairy products to June 30, 1977, and to beekeepers to December 31, 1977. That act also authorizes indemnity payments on dairy cows producing contaminated milk.

Claims paid through June 30, 1973:
Indemnity payments to dairy farmers	$1,411,985
Indemnity payments to manufacturers of dairy products	110,166
Indemnity payments to beekeepers	9,552,829

Long-range agreements were approved with farmers and ranchers from 1963 to 1967 to make changes from their past cropping systems and land uses to other income-producing, public benefit uses.

The agreements, not to exceed 10 years, provide for payments, the furnishing of materials and services, and other assistance to farmers. In return, farmers change the land-use and install and maintain conservation practices. Adjustment payments were authorized to be made either upon approval of the agreement or on an annual installment basis. Land treatment practice payments are made after the practice is installed.

The law places a limit of $10 million on payments made in a calendar year under signed agreements.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, a wholly owned Government Corporation, was created on February 16, 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1501-1519), to carry out the provisions of the Federal Crop Insurance Act. The purpose of this act is to promote the national welfare by improving the economic stability of agriculture through a sound system of crop insurance, and to provide the means for the research and experience helpful in devising and establishing such insurance.

Crop insurance offered to agricultural producers by the Corporation provides protection from losses caused by natural hazards, such as insect and wildlife damage, plant diseases, fire, drought, flood, wind, and other weather conditions. It does not indemnify producers for losses resulting from negligence or failure to observe good farming practices.

The crop insurance programs are developed and analyzed in the Washington headquarters office and are administered in the field by 14 sales and contract service centers. Sales and servicing of contracts at the county level is performed by private agents under contractual agreements with the Corporation and by Corporation employees hired on a permanent, part-time, or WAE (when actually employed) basis. Detailed administrative and program accounting and statistical functions are performed by the National Service Office in Kansas City, Mo., as well as the underwriting and actuarial analysis work.

Budget program.—For the 1975 crop year it is planned that the program will be expanded to additional counties to provide crop insurance protection to farmers on the following commodities: Apples, barley, beans, citrus, combined crop, corn, cotton, flax, grain sorghum, grapes, oats, peaches, peanuts, peas, raisins, rice, soybeans, sugar beets, sugarcane, tobacco, tomatoes, and wheat.

The following table indicates the scope of the insurance operations planned for 1974 and 1975, as compared with 1973. Amounts in the 1973 column are actual, and pertain to the 1972 crop year. The 1974 column pertains to the 1973 crop year, and the 1975 column pertains to the 1974 crop year.

Financing.—Capital stock of $100 million is authorized to be subscribed by the United States. As of June 30, 1973, the Secretary of the Treasury held receipts for $60 million of authorized stock, leaving $40 million unissued.

Funds from the issuance of capital stock provide working capital for the Corporation. Receipts which are for deposit to this fund come mainly from premiums paid by farmers for crop insurance indemnity costs. The principal payments from this fund are for: indemnities to insured farmers; the direct cost of adjusting crop losses; and a part of the administrative and operating expenses. However, the direct cost of loss adjustment and the administrative and operating expenses paid from the fund are not provided for in the premium rates (section 508(b) of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended).

The annual appropriation for the major portion of the administrative and operating expenses of the Corporation is presented earlier in the budget.

It is estimated that gross income of $48 million from operations will provide adequate operating funds for fiscal year 1975, unless heavy losses occur early in the fiscal year.

Operating results and financial condition.—As of June 30, 1973, the Corporation reflected a deficit of $9 million which is lower by $12 million than the deficit of the year before. The smaller deficit resulted from increased premiums over indemnities for crop year 1972 to cover expenses paid from the fund. Crop year 1972 premiums of $42.1 million exceeded indemnities by $16.9 million, resulting in a loss ratio of 0.60 as compared with the 1971 loss ratio of 0.60.

A 0.75 loss ratio is estimated for crop year 1973. Premiums of $47 million are estimated to exceed indemnities by $11.8 million. For the crop years 1948 through 1972, premium income ($697 million) exceeded indemnity costs ($645.2 million) by $51.8 million; the loss ratio for the period was 0.93. Premium income exceeded indemnity costs in 14 of the 25 years.

The following table summarizes the insurance operations by commodities for 1973, 1974, and 1975:

<sup>1</sup> Statutory obligations against borrowing authority include only borrowing from, or with the approval of Treasury. A sufficient amount of CCC's borrowing authority is required to be reserved to cover obligations to purchase notes, or other obligations evidencing loans, and accrued interest thereon, made by lending agencies and others. Such obligations, other obligations, contingent liabilities, and commitments do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowing from Treasury. Only that portion of the borrowing authority is available which has neither been so reserved nor charged by actual borrowings.

The Corporation was created to stabilize, support, and protect farm income and prices, help maintain balanced and adequate supplies of agricultural commodities, their products, foods, feeds, and fibers, and help in their orderly distribution (15 U.S.C. 714-714p). It may also make available materials and facilities required in connection with the production and marketing of agricultural commodities. In addition to its basic functions, it is used to administer and, in some cases, temporarily finance numerous special activities.

The Corporation's capital stock of $100 million is held by the United States. Up to $14.5 billion may be borrowed to finance operations.

Budget assumptions.—The following general assumptions form the basis for the Corporation's 1974 and 1975 budget estimates: (a) Employment, production, and national income will rise both in 1974 and 1975 from the present level; (b) generally, exports of agricultural commodities in 1975 will be slightly lower than 1974 levels; (c) yields for the 1974 crops are based on recent averages adjusted for trend; (d) acreage allotments and marketing quotas will be in effect for the 1974 crops of peanuts and certain kinds of tobacco (flue-cured tobacco will be on an acreage-poundage program and Burley tobacco will be on a poundage allotment); acreage allotments but no marketing quotas will be in effect for the 1974 crop of rice; and (e) no set-aside program for cotton, feed grains, and wheat will be in operation. Payments on these commodities will be based on an established or target price if the price received by farmers is below such price.

It is difficult to forecast with accuracy requirements for the year ending June 30, 1975. Complex and unpredictable factors are involved, such as weather, other factors which affect the volume of production of crops not yet planted, feed and food needs here and overseas, and available dollar exchange.

Support.—The Corporation, through loans, purchases, payments, and other means, provides support of agricultural commodities to producers. This is done mainly under the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act (15 U.S.C. 714 et seq.) and the Agricultural Act of 1949, (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.) as amended by the Agricultural Act of 1970, Public Law 91-524, and the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973, approved August 10, 1973 (87 Stat. 221-250).

Support is mandatory for the basic commodities—corn, cotton, wheat, rice, peanuts, and tobacco. The Agricultural Act of 1949 also requires support of the following nonbasic commodities: Tung nuts, honey, milk, barley, oats, rye, and grain sorghum. The National Wool Act of 1954, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1781-87), requires support for wool and mohair. Support for other nonbasic commodities is discretionary. The support program may also include operations to remove and dispose of surplus agricultural commodities in order to stabilize prices at levels not in excess of those permissible by law.

The principal methods of providing support are loans to and purchases from producers. With limited exceptions, loans made on commodities are nonrecourse. The commodities serve as collateral for the loan and on maturity the producer may deliver or forfeit such collateral to satisfy his obligation without further payment.

Direct purchases are also made from processors as well as producers, depending on the commodity involved. Also, special purchases are made under certain laws for the removal of surpluses, for example: the act of August 19, 1958, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431 note), and section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431).

For feed grains and wheat, producers receive payments in addition to loans and purchases. For upland and extra-long staple cotton, producers receive payments in addition to loans. Producers of feed grains, wheat and upland cotton must comply with acreage set-aside provisions (hereinafter described), if in effect, in order to be eligible for loans, purchases and payments. Also, the total amount of payments which a person is entitled to receive under one or more of the annual programs for 1974 through 1977 crops of the commodities shall not exceed $20 thousand.

Public Law 93-86 (Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973) established target prices for three major commodities—wheat, feed grains and upland cotton; set minimum loan rates for wheat and feed grains; and established the loan level for upland cotton at 90% of the average world price for American cotton for the preceding 3 years subject to adjustment to reflect current average world price if the loan level so calculated is above then current average world prices for American cotton. Government payments for the three commodities are required when the established prices for those commodities exceeds the national average market price or the loan rate, whichever is higher. For the 1976 and 1977 crops, the established prices for these commodities will be adjusted in relation to the costs of production. In addition, the act provides for making disaster payments to producers who are prevented from planting feed grains, wheat, or upland cotton because of a natural disaster or condition beyond the control of the producers or who, because of such a disaster or condition, harvest less than a specified quantity.

In support operations, normal trade facilities are used to the maximum extent practicable. Cooperatives and financial institutions are used in lending activities. Commercial facilities are used to a great extent for storage.

Besides the Charter Act and laws mentioned above, many other laws are applicable to the disposition through sales, donations, and barter of commodities acquired under the support program. For accounting purposes, the Corporation credits to the support program proceeds of commodities sold from its stocks, including those disposed of through redemption of domestic and export payment-in-kind certificates and through special activities.

Commodity export.—The Corporation promotes the export of agricultural commodities and products through sales, barter, payments, and other operations. Other than in barter for stockpiling purposes, such commodities and products may be those held in private trade channels as well as those acquired by the Corporation. This program is carried out under the authority contained in the Corporation's charter, particularly section 5(d) and (f), and in accordance with specific statutes where applicable. Export sales for foreign currencies or on long-term credit are financed by the Corporation under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, although such sales of commodities owned by the Corporation may also be made under its charter authority.

The activities described below are illustrative of those conducted under this program during 1974. With respect to barter, the emphasis is on exports in connection with various types of offshore procurement of materials and services needed by the Department of Defense, the Agency for International Development, and other agencies, for which they pay the Corporation. Commodities available for barter were limited to cotton and tobacco by the end of June 1973, and no further invitations to bid have been issued.

When necessary to encourage export movement from free-market supplies, as well as from its own stocks, the Corporation makes payments on exports of agricultural commodities. The rate of payment generally is the difference between the prevailing world export sales price and the domestic market price. Except for 1972 or older crop tobacco, payments are limited to carryover from 1973 contracts on wheat and rice (to be paid in 1974). However, if payments for wheat and rice are needed to make these commodities competitive in world markets, they will be reinstated.

To help develop or expand foreign markets, the Corporation may furnish farm commodities and products for samples or exhibits at international trade fairs and for use abroad in testing consumer acceptance and commercial market potentials.

To maximize exports of agricultural commodities, including products thereof, the Corporation conducts an export credit sales program under which it finances, for a period of not to exceed 3 years, commercial export credit sales by exporters of agricultural commodities obtained either from Corporation inventories or from private stocks. These commercial transactions are financed under the Corporation's charter authority and section 4 of the Food for Peace Act (7 U.S.C. 1707a) and are to be distinguished from the long-term credit contracts involving foreign assistance authorized by the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended. Section 4 of the Food for Peace Act authorized appropriations to reimburse the Corporation annually for its actual costs incurred or to be incurred under this program.

Storage facilities.—The Corporation conducts a program to provide storage adequate to fulfill its program needs. This program is conducted pursuant to sections 4 (h) and (m), and 5 (a) and (b) of the charter.

The Corporation has authority to buy bins (in storage-short areas) and equipment for the care and storage of commodities owned by the Corporation or under its control. This authority to purchase bins has not been exercised since 1956. The Corporation has now reduced its storage capacity from 990 million bushels in 1957 to 198 million bushels on June 30, 1973. The Corporation makes loans for the purchase, building, or expanding of facilities for storage and care of commodities on the farm and sells, to producers and others, bins needed for the storage of agricultural commodities. Bins sold by the Corporation may be those acquired for resale for such storage or those which are no longer required by the Corporation for the storage of its own commodities. Public Law 89-758 permits the sale of grain storage facilities no longer needed for such program use to public and private nonprofit agencies and organizations. The Corporation may also provide storage use guarantees to encourage building of commercial storage, and undertake other operations necessary to provide storage adequate to carry out the Corporation's programs.

Section 805 of the Agricultural Act of 1970 authorized the Secretary to make or guarantee loans for construction of farm storage facilities for baled hay from diverted or set-aside acreage. This program will be conducted through the ASCS county committees and be financed with capital funds of the Corporation.

Supply and foreign purchase.—The Corporation procures from domestic and foreign sources, food, agricultural commodities, and products and related materials to supply the needs of Federal agencies, foreign governments, and private and international relief agencies. It similarly procures or aids in the procurement of such foods, commodities, products, and material for sale to meet domestic requirements during periods of short supply or during such other times as will stabilize prices or facilitate distribution. Through purchases, loans, sales or other means the Corporation may also make available materials and facilities needed for the production and marketing of agricultural commodities. This program is conducted under section 5 (b) and (c) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act.

Purchases for other Federal agencies of commodities not in the Corporation's support stocks has been the main activity. Purchases of limited quantities of breeder, foundation, and registered seeds of improved varieties of grasses and legumes are made through production contracts in order to assure supplies thereof for farmers. No foreign purchases have been made in recent years.

Section 4 of the act of July 16, 1943 (15 U.S.C. 713a-9), requires that the Corporation be fully repaid from funds of such agencies for services performed, losses sustained, operating costs incurred, or commodities bought or delivered to or on behalf of any other Federal agency. Operations not subject to section 4 may involve losses if such are necessary to the accomplishment of the objectives of the particular operation.

Wheat certificate program.—The Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973 repealed, effective July 1, 1973, the requirement of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, under which processors purchased domestic wheat marketing certificates equivalent to the bushel quantity of wheat used to manufacture food products. Necessary action was taken to facilitate transition to a noncertificate program. Effective with the 1974 program, domestic wheat marketing certificates will not be issued to producers.

Set-aside program.—The Agricultural Act of 1970, as amended by the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973, authorizes the Secretary to conduct, through the Corporation, set-aside programs on the 1971 through 1977 crops of wheat, feed grains, and upland cotton if he determines that otherwise the total supply of agricultural commodities will likely be excessive. If a set-aside is in effect for any such commodity, producers must, as a condition of eligibility for loans, purchases, and payments on such commodity, set aside and devote to approved conservation uses specified acreages of cropland and otherwise comply with program requirements. Participants in a set-aside program are eligible for a small additional payment for permitting public access to set-aside acreage.

For the 1974 crops of wheat, feed grains and upland cotton, the Secretary has announced that there will be no set-aside of land for feed grains, soybeans, wheat and cotton. This action will release approximately 19 million acres for additional production in 1974, and help assure adequate supplies of food for domestic and export markets.

Land diversion payments.—To assist in adjusting the acreage of commodities to desirable goals, the Secretary is authorized by the Agricultural Act of 1970, as amended, to make land diversion payments, through the Corporation, to producers who devote to approved conservation uses acreages of cropland in addition to those required to be so devoted under the set-aside programs.

Cotton research and promotion.—Under section 610 of the Agricultural Act of 1970, as amended, the Corporation, through the Cotton Board, and upon approval of the Secretary, is authorized to enter into agreements for cotton market development, research, and sales promotion programs, programs to aid in the development of new and additional markets, marketing facilities, and uses for cotton and cotton products, and programs to facilitate the utilization and commercial application of cotton research findings. Each year the amount available for such programs shall be $10 million. For each of the 1972 through 1977 crops, an additional amount, not exceeding $10 million may be used by the Secretary for such programs from funds available for payments on 1972 through 1977 crop cotton. The Agriculture-Environmental and Consumer Protection Appropriation Act of 1974 (P.L. 93-135) limits expenditures to $3 million for research only in fiscal year 1974, and it is estimated that $3 million will be paid in fiscal year 1975.

Disaster reserve.—Under section 813 of the Agricultural Act of 1970, as amended by the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973, the Secretary shall establish, maintain and dispose of a separate reserve of inventories of not to exceed 75 million bushels of wheat, feed grains and soybeans for the purpose of alleviating distress caused by a natural disaster. The Secretary shall acquire such commodities through the price support program; 50 million bushels of oats held by the Commodity Credit Corporation has been designated as a disaster reserve. In order to rotate, distribute and locate reserves, such reserves may be sold at equivalent prices. The Secretary may use the Commodity Credit Corporation and shall utilize usual and customary channels, facilities and arrangements of trade and commerce to the maximum extent possible. Appropriations are authorized for sums necessary to carry out the purposes of this section.

Administrative expenses.—Administrative expenses are for the services of: The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, the Agricultural Marketing Service, the Export Marketing Service, the Foreign Agricultural Service, and other agencies of the Department engaged in the Corporation's activities; the General Accounting Office for audit; and the General Services Administration for space. Estimates for 1975 include a limitation of $42.2 million on administrative expenses, including a reserve of not less than 7% for contingencies.

The requested authorization excludes administrative expenses in connection with the wool and mohair program under the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended, which are included with the cost of this program under special activities.

Nonadministrative expenses.—Expenses for acquisition, operation, maintenance, improvement, or disposition of property which the Corporation owns or in which it has an interest have been treated as program rather than administrative expenses. Such expenses include inspection, classing, and grading work performed on a fee basis by Federal employees or Federal- or State-licensed inspectors; work performed on a contract or fee basis by Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation county committees relating to CCC programs; and special services performed by other Federal agencies outside of this Department.

Most of these general nonadministrative expenses, including storage and handling, transportation, inspection, classing, and grading and resale payments, are included in program costs, in the entry entitled "Storage, transportation, and other costs not included above", in the program and financing schedule. The item "Nonadministrative expense", which appears in the schedule, covers part of the expenses of county offices for work related to programs of the Corporation, other Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service expenses offset by revenue, custodian and agency expense of the Federal Reserve banks and lending agencies, and miscellaneous costs.

ASCS plans to introduce a significant new ADP and communications system into its operation. This effort is an integral part of a broader Management Analysis Project (MAP) which addresses itself to the managerial and operating effectiveness of ASCS and the services offered producers and others. Initially, there will be a prepilot operation beginning in fiscal year 1975. During this phase, selected counties will be converted to the new system in order to test system design concepts and specialized equipment needed to conduct the pilot operation to begin late in fiscal year 1975. Terminals will be leased and installed in county offices participating in prepilot and pilot operations. Remote batch terminals will be leased and installed in the field offices and Washington. The cost of leasing this equipment will be shown in "Limitation on Administrative Expenses, CCC". Equipment purchases for this new system will represent capital investment under the statutory authority of the Commodity Credit Corporation. New ADP equipment to be purchased in fiscal year 1975 consists of two remote service centers to process input to and output from the central site in Kansas City and one data display terminal in Washington.

The Corporation receives reimbursements for grain requisitioned pursuant to Public Law 87-152 (7 U.S.C. 447-449) by the States from Corporation stocks to feed resident wildlife threatened with starvation, through the appropriation Reimbursement for net realized losses. The Corporation also obtains recovery through this appropriation for the funds transferred to the Agricultural Research Service pursuant to the Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act of 1964, for cost of production research and other related research designed to reduce surplus commodities held by the Corporation.

SPECIAL ACTIVITIES

These activities are carried out under authority of section 5(g) of the Corporation's Charter Act and specific statutory authorizations or directives with respect thereto which are currently in effect or which may subsequently be enacted.

The Corporation receives appropriations or reimbursements for cost of these activities as described under each. To the extent that sufficient appropriations are not provided in advance, expenditures under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, and investments in materials transferred to the supplemental stockpile, are made by the Corporation subject to reimbursement from subsequent appropriations authorized for such purpose.

Activities currently being carried out are as follows (see foreign assistance programs and special export program for details of items (1)-(4)):

(1) Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I, Public Law 480).

(2) Sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms (title I, Public Law 480).

(3) Commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad (title II, Public Law 480).

(4) Bartered materials for supplemental stockpile.—This program was closed out in 1971.

(5) Military Housing (barter and exchange).—During 1957, a contract was completed for the disposition of Corporation-owned commodities valued at $50 million for the construction of military housing in France with foreign currencies obtained from this transaction. 10 U.S.C. 2681(b) as amended, provides for annual payment to the Corporation by the Department of Defense until liquidation of the amounts due for foreign currencies obtained under Public Law 480 for military housing. It is estimated that $2 million will be applied against the amounts due under the French housing transaction in each year. Beginning in 1967, the Treasury Department has classified this as a nonexpenditure transaction.

(6) National Wool Act.—Under the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended by the Agricultural Act of 1970, and the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973, support of prices of wool and mohair is mandatory. The Corporation makes payments to producers in order to bring the national average price received by all producers up to the support price required under the act.

Total payments made under the National Wool Act cannot at any time exceed an amount equal to 70% of the accumulated totals, as of the same date, of the gross receipts from import duties collected on and after January 1, 1953, on wool and wool manufactures. Actual or estimated payments compared with this limitation are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Funds of the corporation are used to carry on this program. For the purpose of reimbursing the Corporation, section 705 of the act appropriates each fiscal year an amount equal to amounts expended by the Corporation during the preceding year and to amounts expended in prior fiscal years not previously reimbursed, but not to exceed an amount equal to 70% of the gross receipts from duties collected on wool and wool manufactures during the calendar year preceding the fiscal year.

(7) Grain for migratory waterfowl feed.—To prevent damage of crops by migratory waterfowl, the Corporation is directed to furnish to the Secretary of the Interior (7 U.S.C. 442-445) such grain acquired through support operations and certified by the Corporation as available for such purposes or in such condition as to be undesirable for human consumption, as the Secretary of the Interior shall requisition. This appropriation item is included under that Department to reimburse CCC.

(8) Surplus grain for migratory birds.—Under Public Law 87-152, approved August 17, 1961 (7 U.S.C. 448) the Secretary of the Interior may requisition grain of the Corporation to feed starving migratory birds. This appropriation item is included under that Department to reimburse CCC.

(9) Grading and classing activities.—The Corporation may make advances to the Agricultural Marketing Service for classing and grading of agricultural commodities without charge to producers (7 U.S.C. 414a, 440). Such advances used for classing cotton and grading tobacco not placed under support loan are repaid from an appropriation of the service.

(10) Research to increase domestic consumption of farm commodities.—The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act of 1964 authorized the transfer of not more than $16 million from the appropriation removal of surplus agricultural commodities (sec. 32) to the Corporation to be used to increase domestic consumption of surplus farm commodities, and provided for the transfer for such purposes thereafter of such sums not in excess of $25 million in any 1 year, as may be approved by Congress. The 1965 appropriation act authorized the transfer of $12,175 thousand of section 32 funds for this purpose. The Corporation transferred such funds to the Agricultural Research Service and Cooperative State Research Service to conduct the required research. This program was closed out in 1973.

(11) Defense activities.—Upon the declaration of a national emergency, the facilities, services, authorities, and funds of the Corporation may be used, as directed by the Secretary and in accordance with applicable provisions of law, to carry out responsibilities and functions assigned to the Secretary under the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, the Civil Defense Act, as amended, and such other defense legislation as may be enacted.

(12) Transfer of long-staple cotton from the national stockpile for sale by Commodity Credit Corporation.—The act of July 10, 1957 (71 Stat. 290), authorized the transfer of 50,000 bales of domestically grown cotton from the national stockpile to the Corporation for sale. Also, about 219,000 bales of cotton, both American-Egyptian and foreign grown, in the stockpile were made available to the Corporation for disposition under Public Law 87-548, approved July 25, 1962. The cotton was not recorded as a Corporation asset. Proceeds less costs incurred, including administrative expenses, were covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts from time to time. No interest was paid by the Corporation for the use of the money prior to covering. This program was closed out in 1971.

(13) Loans for rural environmental assistance.—Under section 391(c) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1391(c)), the Corporation advances funds to the Secretary in amounts not to exceed $50 million annually to purchase conservation materials and services. Repayments of the loans plus interest are made from balances of prior appropriations or from new funds appropriated for the rural environmental assistance program.

(14) Use of CCC facilities for Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service programs.—Under the respective enabling legislation, the services, facilities, and authorities of the Corporation are used to make payments to producers under various programs administered by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Among these programs are Cropland Conversion, Rural Environmental Assistance, Cropland Adjustment, Appalachia Regional Conservation, Emergency Conservation Measures, the Sugar Act Program and the Water Bank Act Program.

(15) Purchases of dairy products under sec. 709 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965.—The Corporation, on behalf of the Secretary, purchases at market prices dairy products which are donated to meet the requirements for schools, domestic relief distribution, community action programs, and other programs as are authorized by law, when there are insufficient stocks of such products in the hands of the Corporation available for such purposes. This program is conducted under sec. 5(g) of the Corporation's Charter Act and section 709 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965. Costs incurred for this activity are included in the Corporation's net realized loss for which it is reimbursed annually by appropriation pursuant to Public Law 87-155.

(16) Loan for animal disease eradication.—Public Law 92-73, approved August 10, 1971, authorizes the Secretary to transfer from funds of agencies or corporations of the Department such sums as he deems necessary to be available in emergencies which threaten the livestock or poultry industries, for the arrest and eradication of contagious or infectious diseases of animals or poultry and for expenses in accordance with the act of February 28, 1947, as amended. Funds so transferred or estimated to be transferred are usually repaid in subsequent years from funds appropriated to the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

(17) Cotton insect eradication.—Under sec. 611 of the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973, the Secretary is authorized to carry out programs to reduce cotton production costs, to prevent the movement of certain cotton plant insects to areas not now infested and to enhance the quality of the environment. The programs authorized by this subsection shall be carried out through the Commodity Credit Corporation in cooperation with Federal, State, private agencies and cotton organizations. Expenditures for carrying out the purposes of this subsection shall not be made unless the Corporation has received funds from appropriations made to carry out the purposes of this subsection.

(18) Purchasing of commodities for donation.—Section 4(a) of the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973 authorizes the Secretary to use the funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation to purchase agricultural commodities and the products thereof, of the types customarily available under section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, if stocks of the Corporation are not available. Purchases may be made of commodities for donation to maintain annually programed levels of assistance for schools, domestic relief distribution and such other domestic food assistance programs as are authorized by law.

This authority is available until July 1, 1974. Costs incurred for this activity will be included in the Corporation's net realized loss for which it is reimbursed annually by appropriation pursuant to Public Law 87-155.

FINANCING

Borrowing authority.—The Corporation has an authorized capital stock of $100 million held by the United States and authority to borrow up to $14.5 billion.

Funds are borrowed from Treasury and may also be borrowed from private lending agencies and others. The Corporation reserves a sufficient amount of its borrowing authority to purchase at any time all notes and other obligations evidencing loans made by such agencies and others. All bonds, notes, debentures, and similar obligations issued by the Corporation are subject to approval by the Secretary of the Treasury as required by the act of March 8, 1938 (15 U.S.C. 713a-4).

Interest on borrowings from the Treasury (and on capital stock) is paid at a rate based upon the average interest rate of all outstanding marketable obligations (of comparable maturity date) of the United States as of the preceding month. Interest is also paid on other notes and obligations at a rate prescribed by Commodity Credit Corporation and approved by the Secretary of Treasury.

The Department of Agriculture and related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1966, made provision for terminating interest after June 30, 1964, on the portion of the Corporation's borrowings from the Treasury equal to the unreimbursed realized losses recorded on the books of the Corporation after June 30 of the fiscal year in which such losses are realized.

The computation of the transfer from interest-bearing to non-interest-bearing capital is (in thousands of dollars):

Item	1973 actual	1974 estimate	1975 estimate
Realized deficit not previously reimbursed, start of year.....	7,515,361	7,551,352	6,769,835
Less appropriations for year.....	4,057,952	3,301,940	4,249,412
Total non-interest-bearing, end of year.....	3,457,409	4,249,412	2,520,423

On the basis of the budgetary assumptions, the estimated requirements indicate no need for an increase in borrowing authority. Since there are so many uncontrollable factors involving crops which have not even been planted, it must be recognized that estimates are highly tentative.

Net statutory borrowing authority available.....	3,635,680	5,706,849	9,159,308

Note.—A sufficient amount of the borrowing authority is required to be reserved to cover obligations to purchase notes or other obligations and accrued interest thereon, evidencing loans made by lending agencies and others. Such obligations, however, as well as accounts payable, accrued liabilities and other outstanding obligations not reflected on this table, do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowings from the Treasury.

Contract authority.—Support and other programs required by statute may result in the Corporation incurring obligations in excess of available funds and borrowing authority. Such obligations are liquidated from subsequent appropriations and other funds which may become available to the Corporation. Any increase in obligations in excess of available fund resources is reported as contract authority in the year involved; a decrease is reported as the application of appropriations and other funds to liquidate the authority. The budget reflects a net decrease of $790 million in 1973 and none in 1974 and 1975. It is estimated that unobligated balances of authority to spend public debt receipts will amount to $5,367 million at the end of 1974 and $9,000 million at the end of 1975.

Appropriations.—Under section 2 of Public Law 87-115 (15 U.S.C. 713a-11), annual appropriations are authorized for each fiscal year to reimburse the Corporation for net realized losses incurred as of the close of each year.

The realized losses for 1973 subject to reimbursement were $4,094 million, and the cumulative losses not yet appropriated for were $7,551 million. An appropriation of $4,249 million would provide sufficient funds for the operations described for 1975. It would also leave a desirable operating margin to assure flexibility of operations in view of the volume of transactions handled and the uncertainties of future years under the escalation provisions of the new farm legislation.

The special activities are financed as indicated in the program description above. In addition to certain reimbursements from other agencies, appropriations are made for the National Wool Act (see above) and for foreign assistance and special export programs see page 137.

The Rural Electrification Administration was organized to carry into effect the loan programs authorized by the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, as amended. The Administration conducts two capital investment programs: (1) the rural electrification program, to provide electric service to farms and other rural establishments; and (2) the rural telephone program, to furnish and improve telephone service in rural areas.

Public Law 93-32, approved May 11, 1973, amended the Rural Electrification Act by establishing the Rural Electrification and Telephone Revolving Fund (RETRF). The initial assets of the fund, amounting to about $7.8 billion, consisted of all notes, bonds, obligations, liens and mortgages assigned to the Administrator, undisbursed balances of electric and telephone loans, collection of principal and interest since July 1, 1972, and shares of the capital stock of the Rural Telephone Bank, purchased pursuant to section 406(a) of the Act. Public Law 93-32 also removed budget authority and outlays of the RETRF from the budget totals of the U.S. Government. Schedules showing the activity of the RETRF from May 12, 1973, to June 30, 1973, and estimates for 1974 and 1975 are included in part IV, Annexed Budgets and Other Material.

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

<sup>2</sup> Excludes $1,222 thousand in obligations recorded in the Rural development insurance fund and associated with loans financed under the authority of the Rural Development Act of 1972, refinanced or converted to REA loans as of May 11, 1973, when Public Law 93-32 was enacted.

The Rural Electrification Administration makes insured loans and guarantees loans made by private lenders for the extension and improvement of electric and telephone service in rural areas. Most electric loans are made concurrently with supplemental financing provided by the National Rural Utilities Cooperative Finance Corporation (CFC) or other supplemental sources. Supplemental financing is provided in the telephone program by the Rural Telephone Bank, which utilizes the employees and facilities of REA and the Office of the General Counsel on a part-time basis without cost to the bank. Public Law 93-32, approved May 11, 1973, established the Rural Electrification and Telephone revolving fund as a source of financing the insured and guaranteed loan programs. The loan guarantee program is expected to require the hiring of employees with expertise in areas not needed before in REA, and the development of new procedures for loan approval and advance of funds.

Assistance is provided to electrification borrowers and potential borrowers to negotiate for adequate supplies of power on reasonable terms. Business management and technical help is furnished borrowers where needed to protect the Government's loan security, to assure that construction and operation of their systems conform to approved standards, and that the systems will provide continuous and reliable service and facilitate the most effective use of resources to achieve program objectives.

Public Law 92-12, approved May 7, 1971, amended the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, as amended, to establish the Rural Telephone Bank as a supplemental source of financing for the REA telephone program. Public Law 92-324, approved June 30, 1972, amended the act to permit the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase the bank's debentures. This will minimize REA borrowing costs and help avoid cash-flow problems associated with obtaining funds on the private money market. Public Law 93-32, approved May 11, 1973, further amended the act to increase the bank's borrowing authority from 8 to 20 times its paid-in capital and retained earnings, and to eliminate the required disclaimer of any government guarantee on debentures issued by the bank.

Public Law 93-32 also removed budget authority and outlays of the Telephone Bank from the budget totals of the U.S. Government. Schedules showing the activity of the Bank from May 12, 1973 to June 30, 1973, and estimates for 1974 and 1975 are included in part IV, Annexed Budgets and Other Material.

Rural housing for domestic farm labor.—Financial assistance in the form of grants is authorized to public or private nonprofit organizations, or other eligible organizations for low-rent housing and related facilities for domestic farm labor, as authorized by the Housing Act of 1964.

Assistance not to exceed 90% of the total development cost is authorized for new structures (including basic household furnishings) and sites, and for rehabilitation, alteration, conversion, or improvement of dwellings, dining halls, community rooms, or buildings and infirmaries used by domestic farm laborers.

No funds are being requested for fiscal year 1975 since the Administration believes the Government's proper role can best be served by other programs.

Mutual and self-help housing.—This assistance was authorized by section 1005 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 (Public Law 90-448). These grants are especially designed to aid the development of comprehensive plans to permit an expansion of mutual and self-help housing programs under which groups of families build their own homes by mutually exchanging labor. In 1973, a total of 24 grants was made for $3,728,451. It is estimated that 27 grants totaling $3,832,000 will be made to nonprofit organizations in 1974. No program is planned for fiscal year 1975, since the grants plus the subsidy cost of the associated loans has resulted in high unit costs to the Government without corresponding benefits to those aided.

RURAL HOUSING INSURANCE FUND

For direct loans and related advances pursuant to section 517(m) of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, [ $10,000,000 ] $20,000,000 shall be available from funds in the rural housing insurance fund, and for insured loans as authorized by title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, [ $2,144,000,000, of which not less than $1,200,000,000 shall be available for subsidized interest loans to low-income borrowers as determined by the Secretary ] $2,122,000,000: Provided, That the Secretary may, on an insured basis or otherwise, sell any notes in the fund or sell certificates of beneficial ownership therein to the Secretary of the Treasury, to the private market, or to such other sources as the Secretary may determine. Hereafter, farmer applicants for direct or insured rural housing loans shall be required to provide only such collateral security as is required of owners of nonfarm tracts.

Rural housing insurance fund.—This fund was established in 1965 (Public Law 89-117) pursuant to section 517 of title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended. Initial capitalization of the fund at $100 million was provided by the Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1966. Public Law 91-152, approved December 24, 1969, provided that the Rural housing direct loan account be abolished and that the assets and liabilities of, and authorizations applicable to, the Direct loan account be transferred to this fund.

This fund is used to insure rural housing loans, farm labor housing loans, rural housing site loans, and loans for rural rental and cooperative housing. Loans are made to persons of low or moderate incomes if their need for necessary housing cannot be met with financial assistance from other sources, including assistance available under sections 235 or 236 of the National Housing Act. The insured loans currently made by the Farmers Home Administration bear interest at 8½% with provision for interest credits up to 7½% under certain circumstances, except that insured farm labor housing loans will bear interest at the rate of 1%.

The 1974 Appropriation Act also provided for making direct loans from funds available in this fund. These direct loans are limited to very low-income housing repair purposes, and these loans are made at 1% interest and are repayable in not more than 15 years.

This budget provides for an interim rural housing policy which moves in the direction supported by the President's housing study through greater emphasis on using existing housing, rental housing, home repairs and rehabilitation, and makes Farmers Home Administration programs more available to persons with the greatest housing needs. This action is being taken pending completion of the HUD experimental housing program. Guaranteed loans are to be used on an experimental basis during 1974 and 1975 for a portion of both the moderate income and rental housing programs.

Insured building loans are made to farm owners, owners of other real estate in rural areas, others who are or will become rural residents, and long-term leaseholders. Loans are repayable in not more than 33 years. Loans are made to enable eligible applicants to construct, improve, alter, repair, or replace dwellings and essential farm service buildings, and may include funds to buy a house, building site, and farm service buildings. Loans are limited to rural areas which include towns, villages, or other rural places of not more than 10,000 population, which are not part of an urban area.

The Agricultural credit insurance fund is used to insure or guarantee farm ownership, soil and water, recreation, farm operating, and emergency loans to individuals, as well as the following types of loans to associations: Irrigation and drainage, grazing, recreation, Indian land acquisition, watershed protection, flood prevention, and resource conservation and development. The insurance endorsement on each insured loan may include an agreement by the Government to purchase the loan after a specified initial period. The initial fund of $1 million may be supplemented by amounts retained by the Government out of interest collected from insured loan borrowers and by borrowing from the Secretary of the Treasury. From any amounts so retained, not to exceed one-half of 1% of the outstanding principal obligations must be deposited in the fund. Any remainder of such charges may be used for administrative expenses.

Loans may be made directly from the fund from available receipts or borrowings from the Treasury if there is a reasonable assurance that the loans can be sold to investors without undue delay, or by private lenders having a contract of guarantee from Farmers Home Administration. With respect to all new loans made from this fund, with the exception of emergency loans, not more than $500 million may be held in the fund at any one time. Present money market interest rates are in excess of the statutory rate paid by most borrowers. The excess interest paid to private investors to make loans salable or pay part of the borrower's interest on guaranteed loans is paid from Treasury borrowings.

Public Law 92-419, approved August 30, 1972, abolished the Farmers Home Administration Direct loan account and the Emergency credit revolving fund and provided for transfer of the assets and liabilities of, and authorizations applicable to, these accounts to the Agricultural credit insurance fund. It also provided for transfer from the Agricultural credit insurance fund to the Rural development insurance fund of the assets and liabilities of the Agricultural credit insurance fund applicable to loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities.

The following loans are financed through this fund.

Loans to individuals.—1. Farm ownership loans are made to farmers and ranchers, at a 5% interest rate for 40 years or less, for acquiring, enlarging or improving farms, including dwellings and farm buildings; for financing land and water development, use and conservation; for developing recreational and other nonfarm enterprises; for forestry development; for refinancing indebtedness; and for loan closing costs. Loans are confined to farms which are not larger than family farms. The unpaid indebtedness against a farm or other security at the time the loan is made may not exceed $225,000 or the market value of the farm or other security. The loan may not exceed $100,000 or the amount certified by the county committee, whichever is the lesser. The Farmers Home Administration has broadened its farm ownership loan policies so that private or cooperative lenders and the agency can make loans to the same borrowers on the same security.

These loans may be made on farms which are larger than family farms and may include funds for operating purposes.

4. Farm operating loans are made to farmers and ranchers for costs incident to reorganizing a farming system for more profitable operations; for a variety of essential farm expenses such as the purchase of livestock, farm equipment, feed, seed, fertilizer, and farm supplies and other essential operating expenses, including cash rent, and costs incident to the production and harvesting of forestry products; for financing land and water development, use, and conservation; for developing recreational and other nonfarm enterprises; for other farm and home needs; for refinancing indebtedness; for complying with certain safety standards; for operation of farming enterprises by rural youths in connection with their participation in 4-H clubs, Future Farmers of America, and similar organizations; and for loan closing costs. Loans for farming operations are confined to operators of not larger than family farms. The outstanding principal loan balance for operating loans to any individual is limited to $50 thousand. Loans bear interest at a rate based on the average rate paid by the U.S. Treasury on obligations with a similar maturity period. The rate for fiscal year 1974 is 6¼%. Loans may be scheduled for payment over periods from 1 to 7 years depending on loan purposes. In some situations, they may be renewed for not more than 5 additional years. Loans are secured by crop and chattel liens and, when necessary, by real estate mortgages. Other reliable agricultural credit sources are encouraged to furnish as much as possible of the essential needs of loan applicants with the balance being supplied with an operating loan from the Farmers Home Administration.

Note.—In fiscal year 1973, a total of 6,738 loans for $51.7 million was made as direct loans; all loans in 1974 and 1975 will be made on an insured or guaranteed loan basis.

5. Emergency loans are made in designated areas where a natural disaster has caused a general need for agricultural credit. Emergency loans are made to eligible established farmers, ranchers, or oyster planters and to private domestic corporations or partnerships engaged primarily in farming, ranching, or oyster planting. Emergency loans are made primarily for financing farm operating needs, family living expenses, and a number of closely related purposes. Loans bear interest not in excess of 5% and are repayable over periods not longer than the regular loans made by the Farmers Home Administration for similar purposes. Loans may be made outside of designated areas under certain conditions to persons or corporations who have suffered severe production losses not general to the area as a result of a natural disaster, or to persons who are indebted for emergency loans made under prior authorities. Public Law 93-24, approved April 20, 1973, eliminated the former provisions for making loans to applicants who could obtain credit elsewhere, for cancellation of a portion of principal advances, for lower interest rates, and for deferment of payments. However, Public Law 93-237, approved January 2, 1974, restores these provisions for disasters which occurred after December 26, 1972, but prior to April 20, 1973. In addition, it amends Public Law 93-24 to provide that "Such loans shall be made without regard to whether the required financial assistance is otherwise available from private, cooperative, or other responsible sources."

The objectives may be met through such assistance as to a group of farmers and other rural residents to develop community irrigation dams and canals; a soil and water conservation district to purchase heavy earth moving equipment; a community for drainage of land; a group of farmers to develop soil conservation measures such as terraces, shelter belts, and similar development. These loans are made at a 5% interest rate for 40 years or less.

Such a plan provides a farmer or rancher an opportunity to increase the size of his operations. These loans are made at a 5% interest rate for 40 years or less.

The Rural development insurance fund was established on October 1, 1972, pursuant to section 309A of the Rural Development Act of 1972 (Public Law 92-419), approved August 30, 1972.

The assets and liabilities of the Agricultural credit insurance fund applicable to loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities were transferred to the Rural development insurance fund. Loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities are now made from this fund under authorities of the Rural Development Act. In addition, the law authorized a number of new types of insured and guaranteed loans related to the development of rural business, community facilities, and economic improvement in rural areas. These programs are being implemented beginning in fiscal year 1974.

Association loans for water and waste disposal development and for essential community facilities may be made to organizations including certain Indian tribes and corporations not operated for profit and public and quasi-public agencies. Loans to associations for water and waste disposal development are made for the development, storage, treatment, purification, or distribution of water or the collection, treatment, or disposal of waste in rural areas. Loans to associations for community facilities are made to construct, enlarge, extend or otherwise improve community facilities providing essential service to rural residents. Loans are made for facilities which serve rural residents of open country and rural towns and villages of not more than 10,000 population, which are not part of an urban area.

Industrial development loans are made to public, private, or cooperative organizations organized for profit or nonprofit, to certain Indian tribes, or to individuals. These loans are made for purposes of improving, developing, or financing business, industry, and employment and improving the economic and environmental climate in rural areas. Such purposes include financing business and industrial acquisition, construction, conversion, enlargement, repair or modernization; financing the purchase and development of land, easements, rights-of-way, buildings, equipment, facilities, leases, machinery, supplies and materials; and payment of startup costs and supplying working capital. In addition, community facility and water and sewer loans may also be made to finance community facilities which are required to aid business and industrial development. Industrial development and supportive community facility loans may be made in any area that is not within the outer boundary of any city having a population of 50,000 or more and its immediately adjacent urbanized and urbanizing areas with a population density of more than 100 persons per square mile. Special consideration for such loans is given to areas other than cities having a population of more than 25,000.

Economic opportunity loan fund.—This program has been administered by the Farmers Home Administration of the Department of Agriculture through delegation of authority. Under the program, loans were provided to low-income rural residents for small-farm and nonfarm enterprises to help to increase income. Loans were also made to rural cooperative enterprises serving the rural poor through purchasing, processing, and marketing activities.

Evaluations of the program have shown that these small loans have not been effective in improving the income potentials of the rural poor. No new loans have been made since mid-1971 under this program, however, necessary advances credited to individuals and cooperatives are still being made to protect the Government's security interest in the loans. The Farmers Home Administration is servicing outstanding loans totaling $42 million on June 30, 1973, from funds provided under "Salaries and expenses."

These funds are administered by the Farmers Home Administration, under agreements with individual States, for use in carrying out subtitles A and B of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act. In these States, real-estate type loans are purchased with these funds and insured under the Agricultural credit insurance fund. A partial return of cash or other assets, at face value, has been made to nine of these States for rural rehabilitation purposes agreed upon between each corporation and the Federal Government. The entire assets of 33 other State rural rehabilitation corporations have been returned to those States. All remaining assets will be returned to the States by June 30, 1974. The face value of returned corporation assets totals $45.5 million.

Assistance to conservation districts, community groups, units of government and other cooperators consists mainly of the following:

(a) Soil surveys and investigations, with interpretations and publications, that provide physical land facts needed for program development, resource conservation planning, installation of planned practices, and for use by other Federal, State, and local agencies;

MAIN WORKLOAD FACTORS

(c) Technical programing, design, layout, installation services, and consultation on those practices and measures provided for in resource conservation plans;

(d) Technical and other assistance to communities and units of government on land use planning, mine spoil restoration, control of erosion, sedimentation, agricultural related pollutants, and protection and enhancement of the environment, and other special problems that can best be solved through coordinated local action;

(e) The granting of special equipment to soil conservation districts for use in applying conservation practices;

(f) Water supply forecasts prepared from snow surveys in Western States that are useful in making efficient seasonal use of water for irrigation, flood control, fish and wildlife, recreation, power generation, municipal and industrial water supply, and water quality management;

(g) The selection and evaluation of plant materials to determine their suitability for erosion control, conservation purposes, and other environmental improvements;

(h) Technical assistance to participants in the Rural Environmental Program in establishing specified permanent-type practices;

(i) Technical services to participants in other programs involving land use adjustments and soil and water conservation;

(j) Technical assistance in the planning and applying of soil and water conservation practices for which loans are made by the Farmers Home Administration; and Combinations of needed soil and water conservation practices are planned together and in relation to each other so as to have well-balanced conservation programs in each district. The Service aids land users, groups, units of government and other policymakers and decisionmakers marshal the facts and consider the potentials and alternatives before embarking on a course of action. Both vegetative and structural measures are used in accordance with the needs of the land for protection, treatment, and resource improvement. Plans reflect the decisions of the land users, community groups, and units of government as to how they will use and treat the land and water resources.

Conservationists of the Soil Conservation Service explain the various soil conditions, develop alternative uses and treatments, help to evaluate the costs and returns of conservation work, and furnish assistance in applying the needed treatments.

The technical services provided through conservation operations are instrumental in encouraging farmers, ranchers, and others to establish conservation practices. For each dollar used to provide technical assistance, the individual landowner or user invests over $2 in conservation work.

<sup>3</sup>In addition, there have been 24 interim reports completed in the Colorado River, Oregon River, Sevier River, Florida Rivers, and Central Lahontan studies.

River Basin surveys and investigations.—Section 6 of Public Law 566, 83d Congress, as amended, authorizes the Department to cooperate with other Federal, State, and local agencies in making surveys and investigations of the watersheds of rivers and other waterways as a basis for the development of coordinated water and related land resource programs. The Department currently is participating in cooperative surveys and investigations in river basins with the Corps of Engineers and other interested Federal and State agencies. The Department also maintains representation on six river basin commissions and three river basin interagency committees. These serve as points of contact in coordination between representatives of this Department and other Federal departments and agencies and the States in these basin areas. They keep all concerned mutually informed of the activities of the member agencies and facilitate matters of interagency coordination. During fiscal year 1973, the Department maintained such representation on committees in the Arkansas-White-Red, Missouri, Pacific-Southwest, and Southeast areas. The MBIAC was dissolved when the MRBC was formed during fiscal year 1972. The Department also is represented on the Water Resources Council which was formed in accordance with section 101, Public Law 89-80, Water Resources Planning Act, to coordinate water and related land resource activities of Federal departments and agencies.

The Senate Select Committee on National Water Resources proposed a goal of surveying all of the Nation's river basins and making determinations of our future water and related land resource needs. Twenty-one planning regions were established nationwide. The Department of Agriculture has cooperated in framework level planning in 14 of these regions. This Department and other member departments of the Water Resources Council have jointly considered needs for additional river basin surveys and investigations necessary to attain the goal.

Based on this joint coordination, current needs are $946 thousand to continue interagency comprehensive surveys now in progress. $10,088 thousand to continue other Federal-State cooperative river basin surveys now in progress and to start five additional surveys in cooperation with States; $285 thousand for interregional economic analysis; $1,200 thousand for flood hazard analyses; and $1,708 thousand for interagency coordination and program formulation.

The Department makes surveys of proposed small watershed projects, and work plans are prepared in cooperation with local sponsors. These plans outline the soil and water management problems in the watershed, the steps that have been or are authorized to be taken to alleviate these problems, the proposed works of improvement to be installed, the estimated benefits and costs, cost-sharing and operation and maintenance arrangements, and other facts necessary to justify Federal participation in project development.

WATERSHED AND FLOOD PREVENTION OPERATIONS—Continued

Small watersheds.—The Department cooperates with the States and other agencies in installing works of improvement in small watersheds to reduce damage from floodwater, sediment, and erosion and for the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water and the conservation and proper utilization of land. It provides loans to local organizations to help them finance their share of the costs of certain works of improvement.

Work in progress at June 30.....	722	722	722

1. Works of improvement.—The Department provides technical and financial assistance to local organizations to install the watershed works of improvement for watershed protection, flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, water quality, and fish and wildlife development, and other features specified in the work plans.

After local sponsoring organizations have developed watershed work plans with the Department's assistance or with State and local resources, and the projects have been approved as suitable for Federal participation (projects involving an estimated Federal contribution in excess of $250 thousand for construction or any single structure having a capacity in excess of 2,500 acre-feet require congressional approval), technical services, and financial assistance are provided for specified works of improvement. On non-Federal lands, local sponsoring organizations may contract for construction work or request the SCS to do the contracting for them, must operate and maintain the projects, and in the case of multiple-purpose structures, must bear a share of construction costs. In addition, local organizations must acquire water rights and furnish land, easements, and rights-of-way for all structural measures except that up to one-half the cost of land, easements, and rights-of-way allocated to public fish and wildlife and recreational developments may be paid with Public Law 566 funds. Federal agencies do this work on Federal lands which they administer with appropriate contributions being made by the local people who receive benefits.

During the preconstruction stage, surveys and investigations are made and detailed designs, specifications, and engineering cost estimates are prepared for construction of structural works; areas are delineated where easements are required, and technical services are furnished for accelerating planning and application of land treatment measures if provided for in the watershed work plan.

2. Loans and related expense.—Loans are made to local sponsoring organizations to finance the local cost of installing works of improvement in approved watershed projects. Loans will be made from the Agriculture credit insurance fund of the Farmers Home Administration. Loan services related to processing and making loans will be financed from this appropriation.

Flood Prevention.—1. Works of improvement.—The Department cooperates with soil conservation districts and other local organizations in planning and installing works of improvement for flood prevention and for furthering the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water and the conservation and proper utilization of land in the 11 watersheds authorized by the Flood Control Act of 1944. The Federal Government shares in the cost of works of improvement for flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, fish and wildlife development facilities, water quality, and other authorized purposes.

The Department furnishes additional technical and, in certain instances, financial assistance to landowners to accelerate planning and installation of land treatment measures for runoff retardation, sediment control, and water management. Local sponsoring organizations must furnish all land easements, and rights-of-way, water rights, and the entire cost of works of improvement for nonagricultural water management measures, except those for fish and wildlife development and recreation, and operate and maintain all completed works of improvement.

Within the 11 watersheds authorized for flood prevention work by the Flood Control Act of 1944, 402 subwatershed areas have been identified in which installation of flood prevention works of improvement is feasible. Installation progress in these subwatersheds is shown in the following table:

Subwatershed status	End of fiscal year—
	1973	1974	1975
In construction.....	141	144	146
Completed.....	148	153	159
Not started.....	113	105	97
Total subwatersheds.....	402	402	402

2. Loan services.—Loans are made to local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of planned works of improvement. Loans will be made from funds available for this purpose from the Agriculture credit insurance fund of the Farmers Home Administration. Loan services related to processing and making loans are financed from funds available to this appropriation.

This program provides cost-sharing assistance and technical services to participating landowners or operators in the Great Plains area in the development and installation of long-term conservation plans and practices for their land. It is a voluntary program which complements other conservation programs of the Department in 469 designated counties of 10 Great Plains States. Contracts with individual landowners range in time from 3 to 10 years.

Plans of conservation operations are made for each farm or ranch as a basis for cost-sharing certain practices. The fundamental purposes of this program are to achieve needed land-use adjustments, conservation treatments, and economic stability of each operating unit. The planned work is installed under contract according to specific time schedules.

MAIN WORKLOAD FACTORS

Program participants:	1973 actual	1974 estimate	1975 estimate
Number of new contracts during year.	2,565	2,500	-----
Number of contracts serviced during year.	19,322	18,388	-----

As of June 30, 1973, there was a backlog of 7,204 unserved applications and 15,838 active contracts on hand. Cooperating landowners or operators finance the entire cost of installing recurring management-type practices and pay a specified part of the cost-shared practices installed on their land.

Program regulations provide that cost-share rates offered in any contract shall not exceed 80% of the cost of installing eligible practices within the designated county. The rates vary among States and practices due to differences in conservation and program needs. Cost-sharing for practices that are primarily to enhance fish and wildlife and recreation resources, to promote the economic use of land, or to reduce or control agricultural related pollution is limited to not more than $2,500 in any one contract, or one-fourth of the total Federal obligation, whichever is larger. Cost-sharing is further limited to $2,500 for any one structure for constructing, enlarging, or sealing dams, pits or ponds for irrigation water. Cost-sharing for irrigation practices in any one contract shall not exceed $2,500 or one-fourth of the total Federal obligation (exclusive of cost-sharing for practices for enhancing fish and wildlife and recreation resources, promoting the economic use of land, and reducing or controlling agricultural related pollutants) whichever is larger. There is also a cost-sharing limitation of $25,000 for any contract.

Each participant who signs a Great Plains program contract is responsible for implementing his plan of operations; and the Department is committed to furnish the necessary technical help needed for design, layout, and other services. Cooperating landowners and operators are encouraged to make use of other available assistance under local, State, and Federal programs as a means of further improving their land and water resources.

The Great Plains conservation program is to be consolidated into the departmental rural environmental program in fiscal year 1975.

The Department cooperates with other Federal agencies, States, local units of government, groups, and individuals in developing and carrying out programs and plans for resource conservation and development and shares in the cost of installing planned project measures, when justified as a public need. Loans are provided to qualified local sponsoring organizations when needed to help them finance their share of the cost of certain project measures which are in the public interest. Project measures planned will contribute to improvement in the economy of the area and to needed land use adjustments.

Technical assistance is provided in each project area approved for planning to help sponsoring organizations prepare overall project plans for resource conservation and development. The initial phase of project plan development will have been finished and operations begun in 107 areas by June 30, 1974. Project planning will be initiated in 25 areas during 1975. Project plans will be completed in 25 areas during 1974 and 17 will be completed during 1975. The 17 project plans completed in 1975 will bring the number of areas authorized for operations by June 30, 1975 to 124.

Each project authorized for operations is provided technical assistance to help cooperating groups and individuals plan and install land treatment measures; to design and supervise installation of community-type conservation measures; and, to assist in the preparation of plans for resource development and economic improvement within project areas.

The main workload factors in 1975 include:

(a) Assistance to local sponsors in developing suitable plans.

(b) Operations in 124 project areas for which initial project plans will have been completed.

(c) Acceleration of project measures installation expected to be made possible by additional State and local funds, and through the use of resource conservation and development program technical and financial assistance for eligible erosion and sediment control, flood prevention, agricultural water management, and public water-based recreation and fish and wildlife measures.

Field work under this program consists primarily of planning, designing, and supervision of installation of project measures and conservation practices, the purpose of which is to develop or improve the economic use of natural resources. This includes outdoor recreation facilities and income-producing enterprises where needed and where consistent with good land use. Investigations, surveys, and planning are prerequisite to the operating phase of this program. Financial contributions, loans, and other Federal assistance are used to help plan and install project measures as specified in project plans.

Loans are made to qualified local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of installing project measures. Funds will be available for loans from the Agricultural credit insurance fund of the Farmers Home Administration.

These activities assist producers and handlers of agricultural commodities through various marketing and regulatory services. These services continue to expand and become more complex as the volume of agricultural commodities increases, as a greater number of new processed commodities are developed, and as the market structure undergoes dramatic changes. Marketing changes include increased concentration in food retailing, direct buying, decentralization of processing, growth of inter-regional competition, vertical integration, and contract farming. The individual activities include:

1. Market news service.—This service provides current information on supply, movement, contractual agreements, and prices at specific markets for practically all agricultural commodities. The marketing of agricultural products is characterized by a series of decision points through which product flows concentrate and transactions take place. Market news provides American farmers at these decision points with timely, accurate, and unbiased information pertinent to market conditions. Thus, on a day-to-day basis, the American farmer is in a position to make the critical decisions of where and when to sell, and at what price.

Market news information is collected and disseminated at year-round and seasonal offices maintained in more than 140 cities and towns, often with local and other support and cooperation, generally from State departments of agriculture. Dissemination is primarily by radio, television, and mimeographed reports. The volume of work performed is indicated by examples given in the following table:

2. Inspection, grading, classing, and standardization.—

(a) Meat and poultry inspection.—The inspection activities previously carried out under this subappropriation item by the former Consumer and Marketing Service were transferred to the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service which was established on April 1, 1972 in accordance with Secretary's Memorandum No. 1762, Supplement I, dated March 22, 1972. Narrative statements describing the programs and performance of these activities are included in this volume under the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. The level of costs relating to obligations incurred under these activities prior to April 1, 1972 are included under this Marketing Services account.

(b) All other (inspection, grading, classing, and standardization).—Nationally uniform standards of quality for agricultural products are established and applied to specific lots of products to: Promote confidence between buyers and sellers; reduce hazards in marketing due to misunderstandings and disputes arising from the use of nonstandard descriptions; encourage better preparation of uniform quality products for market; and furnish consumers with more definite information on the quality of products they buy. The standards are applied by or under the supervision of Federal employees at the request of any interested party, and generally for a fee. Approximately 68% of the total cost of this work was offset by fees and other revenue in 1973.

3. Regulatory activities.—These include the administration of regulatory laws such as the U.S. Warehouse and Federal Seed Acts to assure fair play in the market place, to protect producers and handlers of agricultural commodities from financial loss due to careless or fraudulent marketing practices, and to preserve free and open competition in the marketing of farm products. Assistance is also provided to farmers and others in obtaining and maintaining equitable and reasonable transportation rates and services on farm products and supplies. The Cotton Research and Promotion Act is designed to improve the competitive position and expand markets for cotton through a program of self-assessment by cotton producers. The Service also administers the Wheat Research and Promotion Act, the Agricultural Fair Practices Act of 1967, and the Plant Variety Protection Act.

4. Administration and coordination of State payments.—

This project covers Federal activity required in administering and coordinating the marketing service work performed by the States and financed jointly by State funds and Federal funds provided by the appropriation, Payments to States and possessions. In 1973 this work was carried on in 45 States and 130 work projects.

Federal funds are not included for this program in fiscal year 1975 since appropriated funds are not being requested under the Payments to States and possessions program.

Payments are made on a matching fund basis to State marketing agencies for carrying out specifically approved marketing service programs designed to bring about improved marketing. Under this activity, marketing specialists work with farmers, marketing firms, and agencies in solving marketing problems and in utilizing marketing research results.

This program covers such projects as: Methods of maintaining and improving the quality of products; ways of reducing marketing costs; expanding outlets for surplus products; collecting and disseminating special State and local market information and statistics; and improving the organizational structure of the marketing system.

Federal funds are not included for this program in fiscal year 1975. State marketing bureaus or equivalent and private marketing resources will perform this market place function from 1975 onward.

Under section 32 of the act of August 24, 1935, as amended (7 U.S.C. 612c), 30% of customs receipts collected during each calendar year plus unused balances up to $300 million are available for expanding outlets for farm commodities. An amount equal to 30% of receipts collected on fishery products is transferred to the Department of Commerce to encourage the distribution of such products. As provided in recent appropriation acts, other transfers have been made from this fund primarily to the child nutrition programs for the purchase and distribution of agricultural commodities and cash reimbursements for meals served. Section 32 funds are also authorized for the administration of marketing agreements and orders. The basic legislation provides that funds devoted to any one commodity or product thereof must not exceed 25% of funds available. It also provides that the funds must be devoted principally to perishable agricultural commodities other than those receiving price support under title II of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended. It has been determined that this provision can be legally satisfied by setting aside or reserving the principal portion of section 32 funds for the use of perishable nonbasic agricultural commodities.

1. Commodity program payments currently being used are of four types: (a) Direct purchases are donated to schools, summer camps, child-care centers, nonprofit institutions serving needy persons, persons certified by welfare as eligible for relief, and disaster victims; (b) export payments enable exporters to purchase surplus commodities on the domestic market and sell them on the world market at competitive world prices; (c) financial assistance to States enable State distributing agencies to improve the distribution system supplying commodities to needy families; (d)

other: FNS purchases of farina for the special package, supplemental food program. During the past two years, assistance under these programs was given to the following commodity groups (in millions of dollars):

	OBLIGATIONS

Dairy products.....	16.0	16.0
Eggs and poultry.....	83.3	79.7
Fats and oils.....	1.3	1.8

Total.....	291.2	198.5

<sup>1</sup> Includes $8.9 of special feeding program commodities purchased for special food packages donated in food stamp areas.

The use of section 32 program funds is contingent upon marketing conditions. The estimates for both 1974 and 1975 reflect the foreseeable needs for perishables and other activities regularly financed with section 32 funds. If troublesome surpluses not now foreseen should develop, steps will be taken to use additional available funds for their removal or diversion as conditions might warrant.

Funds have been used for the certification and distribution of food to needy families in selected counties where local governmental agencies are unwilling or unable to operate food distribution programs.

2. Cash payments to States were initiated in 1969 to meet the urgent need for providing additional foods to needy children who are determined to be suffering from general and continued hunger. The funds provided are channeled through the child feeding programs authorized by the School Lunch and Child Nutrition Acts.

3. Supplemental food programs were initiated in 1969 to meet the urgent need for providing additional foods to needy children and adults who are determined to be suffering from general and continued hunger. The Department developed a distribution system to provide special food packages for infants, and expectant and new mothers. These packages are being distributed in both food stamp and commodity donation areas.

Funds have also been used for conducting a pilot food certificate program designed to increase the food purchasing power of expectant and new mothers and infants through the issuance of certificates to be exchanged at their local grocery for certain food items.

An additional supplemental food program authorized in 1973 provides cash grants to health departments or comparable State agencies to make special foods available to women, infants, and children. This program dealing with women, infants, and children is commonly referred to as the WIC program.

4. Cash payments in lieu of commodities for school feeding was authorized for 1973 by Public Law 93-13. The volume and variety of food donations to school lunch and child nutrition programs in 1973 were significantly below the amounts programmed and budgeted. Schools participating in these programs were confronted with serious financial problems in obtaining sufficient supplies of food required to meet the nutritional standards established by law for these programs.

5. Commodity program operating expenses occur mainly in connection with purchasing and distributing section 32 and Commodity Credit Corporation commodities to eligible outlets. Distribution in 1973, including that under section 6 of the National School Lunch Act, is summarized below (in millions):

Distribution	Number of recipients (peak month)	Value of commodities distributed	Pounds of commodities distributed
By recipients:
School children.....	25.1	260.2	980.1
Needy persons.....	2.8	254.7	981.6

Sec. 6, National School Lunch Act.....		59.5	198.6
Total.....		542.3	2,089.7

6. Marketing agreements and orders are put into effect upon request of producers or handlers after hearings and investigations, and upon approval of producers (handlers in the case of marketing agreements). They help to stabilize prices, and benefit producers and consumers by establishing and maintaining orderly marketing conditions. Administration at the local level is financed by assessment upon handlers. On June 30, 1973, there were in effect 60 orders for milk, 49 agreements and orders for tree fruits, nuts, and vegetables, and one order for shade-grown tobacco. The expenses of advisory committees established to advise the Secretary, public hearings, referenda to determine producer sentiment, and other developmental work as authorized by the Agricultural Act of 1961 are also financed under this project.

License fees are deposited in this special fund and are used to meet costs of administering the Perishable Agricultural Commodities and the Produce Agency Acts (7 U.S.C. 491-497, 499a-499s). The law currently provides that annual license fees may be set at a maximum of $100. The prior license fee of $75 per year was not producing sufficient revenue to meet current administrative expenses. It has been increased to $100, effective January 1, 1974.

The acts are intended to assure equitable treatment to farmers and others in the marketing of fresh and frozen fruits and vegetables. Commission merchants, dealers, and brokers handling these products in interstate and foreign commerce are licensed. Complaints of violations are investigated and violations dealt with by (a) informal agreements between the two parties, (b) formal decisions involving payment of reparation awards, and (c) suspension or revocation of license and/or publication of the facts.

<sup>1</sup> Administrative fund totals are comprised of 60 separate independent order accounts in fiscal year 1973. The Marketing Service fund totals are comprised of 47 separate independent order accounts in fiscal year 1973.

The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, as amended—under certain conditions—to issue Federal milk marketing orders establishing minimum prices which handlers are required to pay for milk purchased from producers.

Market administrators are responsible for carrying out locally the terms of specific marketing orders. Their operating expenses, partly financed by assessments on regulated handlers and partly by deductions from producers, are reported in these schedules. These funds are collected locally, deposited in local banks, and disbursed directly by the market administrator.

Each milk order is administered locally by a market administrator who is appointed by the Secretary. His staff is employed directly by the market administrator.

The activities conducted in the local office are concerned primarily with monthly computations and public announcements of class and uniform blend prices, associated butterfat differentials, examination of handlers' records and facilities to verify their reports and payments to producers, and in checking weights and tests of producer milk.

The expenses of each local office are met from an administrative fund and a marketing service fund which are prescribed in each order. The administrative fund is derived from prorated handler assessments. The marketing service fund of the individual order provides for the expense of disseminating market information to producers who are not members of a qualified cooperative. It also provides for the verification of the weights, sampling, and testing of milk from these producers. The cost of these services is borne by such producers.

The maximum rates for administrative assessment and for marketing services are set forth in each order and adjustments below these rates are made from time to time upon recommendations by the market administrator and upon approval of the Agricultural Marketing Service to provide reserves at about a 6-month operating level. Upon termination of any order, the statute provides for distributing the proceeds from net assets pro rata to contributing handlers or producers as the case may be.

Milk sold by regulated handlers supplied almost 143 million persons in calendar year 1972.

The following table gives an indication of the growing role of Federal orders on the marketing of milk over the past few years:

The child nutrition programs have been strengthened and expanded by the passage of four significant laws in as many years. Public Law 91-248, which became law on May 14, 1970, clearly established that priority shall be given to reaching needy children and provided for the establishment of a national minimum eligibility standard for free and reduced price meals and a maximum price which might be charged for these meals. This law emphasized that access to the school lunch program should be available to children in all schools.

Public Law 92-153, enacted November 5, 1971, increased Federal support for the national school lunch program by mandating a minimum $0.40 rate in special assistance (sec. 11) for free lunches, and a lesser minimum rate for reduced price lunches. This law also authorized an average rate of reimbursement of $0.06 per meal within each State.

Public Law 92-433, enacted September 26, 1972, authorized an increase in the average rate of reimbursement from 6 cents per meal to 8 cents within each State. It also provided for higher eligibility standards for free and reduced price lunches and for funding on a performance basis for section 4 lunches and the breakfast program.

The most recent child nutrition legislation, Public Law 93-150, enacted November 7, 1973, increases the average payment for all lunches served from 8 cents to 10 cents. It provides that special cash assistance (section 11) average payments to States will be at least 45 cents for free lunches and 10 cents less for reduced price lunches. These section 11 funds will now be distributed on a national average payment basis rather than on a guaranteed minimum payment basis. The school breakfast average payment is set at 8 cents, with an additional 15 cents provided for reduced price breakfasts and 20 cents for free breakfasts. In areas of special need, a payment of up to 45 cents may be made for free breakfasts. The law also provides for semiannual adjustments in January and July of each fiscal year should the Consumer Price Index of the cost of food away from home warrant such an increase. A 5% increase will be effective January 1, 1974.

1. Cash payments to States.—The programs are operated under an agreement entered into by the State educational agency and the Department. Funds are advanced under letters of credit to State agencies for use in reimbursing participating schools and child-care institutions. Sponsors make application to the State agency and, if accepted, are reimbursed in accordance with the terms of their agreement. Beginning in fiscal year 1974, funding for the school lunch program and the breakfast program is strictly on a performance basis.

(a) School lunch program.—Assistance in the form of both funds and food is provided to the States, as defined in the National School Lunch Act, for serving lunches to schoolchildren. Federal support to the States is determined by the number of lunches served. States must match the Federal cash grant from sources within the State at a 3-to-1 ratio and 6% of the matching funds must come from State appropriated funds. For States with below average per capita income, the 3-to-1 ratio is decreased. State revenue matching requirements are based on the level of section 4 payments received the preceding fiscal year. In 1973, sources within the State contributed $1,804.6 million to this program, most of which came from children's payments.

The program during the peak month of December in fiscal year 1973 provided lunches daily to about 62% of the approximately 40.6 million children in daily attendance. The number of lunches served increased approximately 1.5% over fiscal 1972. Participation in the program in May 1973 reached a daily average of about 24.4 million children in 86,390 schools.

(b) Special assistance.—Special cash assistance may be provided to any school which has needy children in attendance. Increased funding provided a Federal average cash reimbursement rate of 40 cents per free and reduced price meal, in addition to the average of 8 cents per meal from section 4 funds in fiscal year 1973. Public Law 93-150 raises the reimbursement rate to 45 cents for a free lunch and 10 cents less for a reduced price lunch. A daily average of approximately 8.5 million children were served 1,399 million free or reduced price lunches. The increases for fiscal 1974 should provide lunches for a daily average of 8.9 million needy children this school year.

Public Law 92-433 gives States the option of serving free and reduced price lunches to the children of families whose incomes are as much as 25% (for free lunches) and 50% (for reduced price lunches) above the Secretary's poverty income guidelines. Under Public Law 93-150, the scope of the reduced price lunch option is broadened to include those children whose family's income is 75% above the Secretary's poverty income guidelines.

(c) School breakfast program.—The Child Nutrition Act of 1966 authorized a school breakfast program for 2 years on a pilot basis to assist States through grants-in-aid and other means to initiate, maintain, or expand nonprofit breakfast programs in schools. Public Laws 92-32 and 92-153 extended the breakfast program through fiscal year 1973 and provided higher eligibility standards. Since the enactment of Public Law 92-433, which extended the program through fiscal year 1975 and provided for performance funding, the breakfast program has been available to all schools that make application.

Federal support to the States is determined by the number of breakfasts served. In circumstances of severe need financial assistance may be authorized for up to 100% of the additional assistance needed.

In fiscal year 1973, an average of 1,175,000 children were served 195 million breakfasts in 9,881 schools. About 80% of the breakfasts were served free or at token charges to children. In fiscal year 1974, it is estimated that a daily average of 1,537,000 children will participate.

(d) Nonfood assistance program.—The Child Nutrition Act of 1966 authorized a permanent program to assist the States through grants-in-aid and other means to supply schools in low-income areas with food service equipment, other than land or buildings. Under Public Law 92-433, 50% of the funds for equipment assistance are reserved for use in schools without food service. These funds are apportioned on the basis of the ratio of the number of children enrolled in schools without a food service in the State to the total number of children enrolled in schools without a food service in all States. State and local sources must bear 25% of the cost of the equipment or facilities financed under this authority, except in schools that are determined by the State to be especially needy.

The remaining funds are apportioned on the basis of the ratio of the number of lunches served in each State to the total number of lunches served in all States. All schools which receive equipment must agree to take part in the national school lunch program and/or the school breakfast program. They must also justify their need for assistance on a project basis and submit a detailed description of the equipment to be acquired, including their proposals for its use in meeting the nutritional needs of children.

In fiscal year 1973, a total of 6,269 schools with a total attendance of 3.4 million students received equipment assistance of about $16 million. This included section 32 funds and provided assistance in all 50 States, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico, and American Samoa.

(e) State administrative expenses.—The Child Nutrition Act of 1966 provides for advances to each State educational agency for administrative expenses. These funds are used for supervising and giving technical assistance to the local school districts and service institutions for additional activities undertaken by them to reach more children under the school lunch, special assistance, school breakfast, nonfood assistance, and nonschool food programs.

(f) Nonschool food program.—The National School Lunch Act was amended in 1968 to authorize a pilot program for 3 years to assist States to initiate, maintain, or expand nonprofit food service programs for children in service institutions where children are not maintained in residence. Public Law 92-433, approved September 26, 1972, extends the program through fiscal year 1975. Preschool children receive year-round assistance in child day-care centers. School-age children from areas of economic need and from areas with a high concentration of working mothers receive assistance during the summer months. Beginning on January 1, 1974, previously non-USDA funded food service programs in Head Start centers will begin to participate. The amount of this assistance will be $13,316,000 in fiscal year 1974 and $25,000,000 in fiscal year 1975.

Each State may receive a basic grant of $50 thousand. The remaining funds are apportioned according to the ratio of the number of children (aged 3 to 17 inclusive) from families with incomes under $3 thousand per year in each State, to the total number of such children in all States. Up to 80% of the total cost of meals served may be paid in cases of severe need, and not more than 75% of the equipment costs may be paid to the institutions. All meals served must meet minimum nutritional standards as a condition for receiving assistance.

In fiscal year 1973, 66.4 million meals were served to an average of 1.2 million children in the summer program, which included July–August 1972 and June 1973. Each child received an average of 1.1 meals per day at a cost of approximately 48 cents per child per day. Approximately 116.2 million meals were served in the fiscal 1973 year-round program to an average of 195,000 children. Each child received about 2.4 meals per day at a cost of about 37.0 cents per child per day.

2. Commodity procurement.—Commodity procurement under section 6 of the National School Lunch Act provides additional commodities to schools to supplement foods purchased locally or otherwise made available for the lunch program. As amended by Public Law 91-248, these commodities may also be used to supplement the school breakfast and nonschool food programs. Section 6 procurement helps to insure nutritionally adequate meals and appreciation for quality foods. It also broadens agricultural markets. Commodities are purchased by the Department on the basis of their nutritional value and acceptability to schools and service institutions.

Protein items of chicken and meat accounted for approximately three-fourths of the purchases in fiscal year 1973. The remaining one-fourth consisted of fruits and vegetables.

Commodities acquired under programs that strengthen markets, income, and supply are also available to schools and child-care institutions. The volume of these commodities distributed depends upon market conditions.

During fiscal 1973, $1.67 billion worth of agricultural commodities and other foods were used. About 20% of this amount represented commodities contributed under section 6 and the Federal programs for strengthening markets, income, and supply. Approximately 80% was purchased through local suppliers.

3. Nutritional training and surveys.—Up to 1% of the total funds available may be used for nutritional training and for studies and surveys of food service requirements, as provided for in Public Law 91-248.

In fiscal year 1974, about one-half of the available funds will be spent on studies and surveys and one-half on nutrition education and training. Major areas of emphasis include a national survey of food used in the Nation's schools, a study of nutritional quality in food safety, and a project supporting nutrition education specialists in State departments of education.

4. Operating expenses.—Administrative and technical assistance is furnished to State agencies, participating schools and child-care institutions. Policies, procedures, and standards are developed for administering the programs and determining eligibility. The programs are administered directly in private schools where the State educational agency is prohibited by law from disbursing funds and in child-care institutions where no State agency has assumed the responsibility for administering the program. Participation in the programs from 1972 through 1975 is as follows:

The food stamp program helps persons and families with low incomes to buy subsidized food through regular retail stores. Participating households purchase enough food stamps to provide a nutritionally adequate diet, paying a price for the stamps which is determined by household size and income. Households with no income receive free stamps.

Food stamp programs are established at the request of State social service agencies, which assume responsibility for certifying eligible households and issuing stamps. The Federal Government bears the full cost of the stamps, but administrative costs are shared between Federal and State governments.

The changes in the food stamp program required by the farm bill (Public Law 93-86) amendments will have a profound impact on participation levels and costs for fiscal year 1975. The mandatory nationwide expansion of the program will reach an additional 789 areas bringing total projects to 3,156 at the beginning of fiscal year 1975. This expansion and new participation spurred by higher bonus and higher eligibility standards is expected to reach an estimated average of 15.0 million recipients in fiscal year 1975.

The most costly provision requires a cost-of-living adjustment in the coupon allotment effective January 1, 1974. The allotments will be increased to $142 for a family of four based on the cost of the economy food plan in August 1973.

As a condition of program eligibility, able-bodied adults are required to register for and accept suitable employment. Reports of work registration activity indicate over 1.1 million persons have been registered out of a total 12.6 million persons participating in March 1973. As a result of improved employment opportunities, monthly food stamp benefits were reduced or terminated for some 1.6 million persons.

The meals-on-wheels program provides for the use of food coupons to pay for meals delivered to certain elderly handicapped persons. This program has continued to grow. There were 834 nonprofit meal delivery services authorized to participate by the end of fiscal year 1973, compared to 366 in 1972.

Implementation of a quality control system, a food stamp program requirement, was announced by an additional 29 States during fiscal year 1973. This makes a total of 45 States which have announced implementation of this method of continuing review of certification to insure only eligible households are able to participate.

Public Law 93-233 permits supplemental security income recipients to retain eligibility for food stamps except in States providing a cash supplement to replace the bonus value of the stamps. This provision is effective during the first 6 months of 1974. The budget assumes an extension of the provision through fiscal year 1975.

Federal, State, and private agencies: (1) Surveys on forest lands to detect and evaluate infestations of forest insects and infections of tree diseases and determination of protective measures to be taken, and (2) control operations to suppress or eradicate forest insects and diseases, including white pine blister rust.

(d) Cooperative law enforcement program.—Public Law 92-82 authorizes the cooperation with any State or political subdivision thereof in the enforcement of State or local laws on lands of the national forest system.

2. Forest research.—Research is conducted at eight regional forest experiment stations, the Forest Products Laboratory, and the Institute of Tropical Forestry.

(a) Forest and range management.—Research provides land managers and owners with a sound basis for management of timber, forage, wildlife, recreation, and watershed lands. Studies are conducted to maintain a sustained yield of products at least cost; improve forage and habitat for livestock and wildlife without damage to soil, watershed, or other values; assure maximum regular flow of usable water, and reduce floods and sedimentation; and improve methods for developing and managing recreation resources; and provide management methods for all uses that will insure environmental protection.

(b) Forest protection.—Research is conducted to develop measures for the protection of forests from damage by fire, insects, and diseases. Forest fire and atmospheric science research provides improved methods of preventing fires, predicting fire danger, and preparing for and combating fire by combinations of ground and aerial methods. Insect and disease research develops direct controls, cultural measures, and biological agents to combat forest pests.

(c) Forest products and engineering.—Studies are conducted to develop new and improved forest products, to reduce and utilize waste, and to use low-quality wood and less desirable species. Research is also conducted to advance the mechanization and efficiency of forestry operations, and to develop and evaluate machines and similar equipment for such operations as harvesting, planting, timber-stand improvement, and protection of forests.

(d) Forest resource economics.—Investigations are conducted to inventory and appraise the condition of forest lands, volume and quality of standing timber, ownership of timber resources, annual growth and depletion, and the potential need for timber products. Economic studies are made of forest crop production, resource productivity, and the marketing potentials of forest products.

3. State and private forestry cooperation.—Assists States, other public and private agencies, and individuals to protect, manage, and develop non-Federal forest lands, and improve the production of forest products. By so doing, the social and economic welfare of rural people will be improved and an adequate supply of forest and related resources for the future will be assured. The 393 million acres of non-Federal commercial forest lands produce about 70% of all timber cut.

(a) Forest fire control.—Assistance is furnished 50 States in preventing and suppressing forest fires on private and State-owned lands by financial aid, coordination, training, development, and procurement of equipment, and a nationwide fire prevention campaign. About 91% of the 631 million acres of non-Federal forest ownership planned for protection is now covered. During 1972 the acreage burned on protected areas was 0.17% as against an estimated 1.85% on unprotected lands. Of the total expenditures under this program, 83.42% is contributed by States and counties, 0.65% by private owners, and 15.93% by the Federal Government.

(b) Forest tree planting.—Financial and technical assistance is provided to the States for the production, acquisition, and distribution of over half of the Nation's tree planting stock for forest and windbarrier planting on non-Federal lands. More than 50 million acres of non-stocked, poorly stocked, or open lands need to be reforested.

(c) Forest management and processing.—In cooperation with 50 States, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, technical assistance is given to woodland owners in applying multiple use management to their forest holdings, and to operators of forest products manufacturing plants in improving their manufacturing and processing techniques to extend timber supplies.

(d) General forestry assistance.—Technical management assistance is provided usually by Federal personnel and also through other arrangements to State, community, private, and other Federal agencies, forest industries, colleges, and landowners. This program also provides forest products utilization assistance to wood-using industries and loggers.

common use motor driven and similar equipment. This equipment is rented to a total of 146 administrative units, i.e., national forests, experiment stations and other units, and in some cases to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of operation, repair, and maintenance, management, and depreciation. The rates also include an increment which provides additional cash which when added to depreciation earnings and the residual value of equipment provides sufficient funds to replace the equipment. This service operates 87 repair shops.

2. Aircraft service.—This service operates and maintains 57 Forest Service-owned aircraft used in fire surveillance and suppression and in other Forest Service programs. The aircraft are based at 13 locations and are rented to national forests, experiment stations, and in some cases to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of depreciation, operation, maintenance, repair, and improvements in the airworthiness of the aircraft. Aircraft replacement costs are financed from either appropriated funds or the Forest Service Working capital fund, or a combination of both. This service operates three aircraft maintenance shops.

3. Supply service.—This service operates the following common services:

Central supply.—This service has one location for procurement warehousing, and supply of common use items, such as work project tools, provisions, and supplies. Grass seed is procured, stored, and issued from two other locations. Issuances and sales are made to national forests, experiment stations, and others at prices which recover cost.

Photo reproduction.—Six photo reproduction laboratories store, reproduce, and supply aerial photographs, aerial maps, and other photographs of national forest lands. The photographic reproductions are sold to national forests, experiment stations, and others at cost.

Sign shop.—These include four small shops which manufacture and supply special signs for the national forests for use in regulating traffic and as information to the public and other users of the national forests. The signs are sold to national forests and experiment stations at cost.

Subsistence.—There are 26 facilities which prepare and serve meals at cost to Forest Service work crews working in remote areas where adequate public restaurant facilities are not available.

Cribbing.—This facility is located on the Angeles National Forest, Calif., to manufacture special concrete structural material used in embankments for erosion control purposes along access roads in the national forests. This material is sold to national forests at prices which recover costs.

4. Nurseries.—This service operates 13 forest tree nurseries and cold storage facilities for storage of tree and seed stock and one seed extractory. Tree seed is procured, cleaned, bagged, and stored in refrigerated facilities. Tree and seed stock is sold to national forests, States, and other Federal agencies at cost.

The Department of Commerce special foreign currency program supplements the activities of the Domestic and International Business Administration, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and the National Bureau of Standards. Decreases are the result of a lack of excess foreign currencies.

1. Domestic and International Business Administration.—Excess foreign currencies are used to support U.S. export expansion programs in developing countries and to assist the U.S. economy by stimulating and expanding our foreign commerce through the use of trade and industrial exhibits, trade development centers, trade missions, and special promotional techniques.

2. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.—International cooperation in environmental research and allied sciences supplements domestic research and development.

3. National Bureau of Standards.—In-house resources are augmented by utilizing scientific and technological capabilities of foreign countries.

The activities of this appropriation provide for (1) the collection, compilation, and publication of a broad range of current statistics dealing with economic, demographic, and social data, and (2) the preparation, interpretation and projection of measures of aggregate economic activity.

1. Current economic statistics programs.—(a) Business statistics.—Monthly surveys provide retail sales data by kind of business and major geographic areas. In addition, for major retail business categories, national data are published on weekly sales, end-of-month inventories and accounts receivable. Annual estimates are made for retail purchases, inventories, and sales-inventory ratios. Surveys also provide (1) monthly national estimates of receipts of selected service industries and (2) sales and inventories of merchant wholesalers. Estimates are made quarterly of green coffee roastings and inventories and periodically on canned food stocks. An annual county business pattern report provides data on nonfarm payrolls by detailed kinds of business and by county.

(b) Construction statistics.—Monthly reports are published for housing starts, residential and nonresidential construction authorized by building permits, and the value of new construction put in place. Quarterly reports are provided on expenditures for residential alterations and repairs and quarterly price indexes are compiled for new single-family houses sold. An annual report is published on permits issued for demolition of residential structures.

(c) Manufacturing statistics.—Statistics are provided monthly on manufacturers' sales, inventories, and orders for total manufacturing for about 30 industry breakdowns and quarterly estimates on sales and inventory expectations. An annual survey of manufactures produces statistics on the important measures of factory operations such as employment, value added, and investment. Work is also conducted on industrial mergers, acquisitions, and disposals. Monthly, quarterly, and annual commodity surveys are conducted of production, shipments, orders, and materials consumed for important industries and products.

The 1975 request provides for an annual survey of manufacturing capacity utilization, and the establishment of a series of rotating surveys to provide benchmark statistics for selected aspects of industry and business which will improve the quality of national income and product data and measure more frequently the use of certain natural resources.

(d) Transportation statistics.—Beginning in 1975, feasibility studies will be conducted on an international travel survey. This survey will provide data on expenditures related to international travel, and the characteristics of travelers and trips.

(e) Foreign trade statistics.—Monthly, cumulative-to-date, and annual reports are published on the quantity, shipping weight, dollar value of imports and exports, by mode of transportation, detailed commodity category, customs district, and country of origin or destination.

In 1975, funds will be provided to (1) accommodate the workload increase that has resulted from an increased volume of foreign trade, (2) reconcile U.S. foreign trade statistics with those of its major trading partners, and (3) collect new data on the extent, terms, and sources of financing of U.S. exports.

(f) State and local governments statistics.—Reports are published annually regarding the revenue, expenditures, indebtedness and debt transactions, financial assets, employment, and payrolls of State and local governments. Quarterly information on the national level is furnished regarding State and local tax revenue by type of tax and governmental level. Technical consultation and assistance are provided to State and local government officials, and catalogs are published detailing the statistical publications and data available which would be of use to State and local governmental officials. Statistics regarding the construction expenditures of State and local governments are provided monthly.

(g) Agriculture statistics.—Information on cotton ginnings and production as required by statute, is compiled and published. Statistical services are provided regarding the information from the census of agriculture.

2. Industrial directory.—In 1972 developmental work began on the establishment of an industrial directory. This directory will list all U.S. business firms and their establishments. The directory is designed to provide Federal statistical programs with a common frame for obtaining and interpreting economic data.

The 1975 request will provide for the completion of developmental work and for implementation of the industrial directory system.

3. Current economic analysis programs.—(a) National income and product data.—Calculations are made of the gross national product, national income, personal income, and their components, providing an overall view of the state of the economy.

The 1975 request provides for the preparation of annual estimates of the distribution of personal income among the families and individuals of the Nation within the framework of the GNP. It also provides for new estimates of the impact of governmental activity on the economy.

(b) Analysis of business trends.—The business situation is assessed monthly and the results of continuing analyses of the major factors underlying cyclical developments and long-range business trends are published regularly. Included are surveys that collect information on business investment plans, work on an econometric model which forecasts the future movement of the gross national product, its components, and other key elements in the national accounts, and a system of leading, lagging, and coincident indicators of business conditions.

(c) Balance of payments data.—Balance of payments accounts depict in detail all economic transactions with foreign nations. The 1975 request proposes improvements in the quality of existing data used in the balance of payments accounts.

4. Current demographic statistics programs.—(a) Population statistics.—This activity provides annual estimates of the population of the United States, each of the States, SMSA's, all counties in 39 States, and some other areas. It also includes current estimates of the number of households, the farm population, school enrollment and educational levels, personal income, population mobility, size of families, voting registration and other characteristics of the population, as well as statistics concerning purchases and ownership of major consumer items.

In 1975, this program will be expanded to provide annual population estimates for congressional districts and improvements in the current population survey to better measure individual and family income data.

(b) Housing statistics.—National and regional quarterly estimates are provided for housing vacancy rates. The program also provides vacancy rates by broad classes of rental and homeowner portions of the housing market and produces information on selected characteristics of the occupied housing inventory. In addition, the program develops current annual estimates of the housing inventory.

5. Environmental statistics.—A new program was initiated in 1974 to assess the economic impact of environmental efforts. This work provides for developing information on expenditures for pollution abatement. In 1975 the program will be extended to measure damages resulting from pollution.

6. Boundary and coding guide updating.—This program updates the present area boundary and address location files to recognize changes in boundaries of incorporated places and to reflect changes in street patterns resulting from urban development. In 1975, this program will be transferred to and funded within the Periodic censuses and programs appropriation.

7. Other programs and publications.—(a) Statistical Abstract and supplements.—The Statistical Abstract, issued annually, summarizes Government and private statistics on the industrial, social, political, and economic activities of the United States.

(b) General research.—Research is conducted on survey methods and techniques, including sample survey methods and theory, questionnaire design, response errors, equipment design and utilization, computer editing and administrative control, operations, analytical techniques including techniques of geographic analysis, for the purpose of increasing accuracy, output, and usefulness of statistical data per unit of cost.

This appropriation provides for comprehensive and detailed information in several major economic and demographic areas once or twice each decade. It also funds geographic support activities required by the various censuses, the acquisition of large scale data processing equipment and other major periodic activities which may be authorized.

1. Economic statistics programs.—(a) 1972 economic censuses.—The economic censuses supply statistics, as provided for in 13 U.S.C. 131, on the volume of production and trade, and the Nation's business and industrial enterprises. Economic censuses are taken every fifth year covering years ending in 2 and 7.

The 1975 request provides for completing the remaining tabulations, reviewing the data, and issuing the balance of the publications.

(c) 1977 census of governments.—A census of governments is required “for the year 1957 and every fifth year thereafter” by 13 U.S.C. 161. The law specifies that “each such census shall include, but shall not be limited to data on tax valuations, governmental receipts, expenditures, indebtedness, and employees of States, counties, cities, and other governmental units.”

The request for 1975 will fund initiation of planning the scope, content, and methodology of the census.

(d) 1974 census of agriculture.—A census of agriculture is required to be taken every 5th year covering years ending in 4 and 9 by 13 U.S.C. 142. The census provides measures concerning the agricultural economy of each State and county. In 1975, efforts will focus on the completion of the preparatory work, collection of data, and the beginning of data processing.

2. Demographic statistics programs.—(b) Intercensal demographic estimates.—This program provides for the development and preparation of updated population and per capita income estimates as required by the Department of the Treasury for the equitable allocation of funds under the General Revenue Sharing Act. Administrative records are utilized to generate the estimates for approximately 38,500 general purpose governmental units. In addition to their use for revenue sharing, these estimates will serve the same general purpose needs as other population data which enter into other Federal and State fund allocations, facilities and services planning, and legislative decisions.

(c) Preparation for 20th decennial census.—Funds were provided in 1974 to begin preparations for the 20th decennial census of population and housing. The 1975 request provides for developing alternative solutions to the problems identified in 1974 and during the evaluation phase of the 19th decennial census. Basic design problems for the questionnaires will be analyzed, field pretests will be conducted to extend mail techniques to new areas, and tests will be conducted to evaluate alternative processing techniques.

3. Periodic programs geographic support.—This program provides for the maintenance of a continuing program to fulfill the geographic requirements of the various periodic censuses and large scale surveys. It includes the present Boundary and Coding Guide Updating program transferred from the “Salaries and expenses” appropriation. This program updates the 1970 census area boundary and address location files to recognize changes in boundaries of incorporated places and to reflect changes in street patterns resulting from urban development, and provides for the correction, update, and extension of the standard base maps and computerized address coding guide files.

The program proposed for 1975 will permit the boundary and coding guide system to be extended to the present boundaries of each Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area (SMSA) now in the system and the inclusion of 30 of the 34 new SMSA's established subsequent to the 1970 census. The 1975 request also provides for the establishment of geographic specialists in selected Census regional data collection centers to furnish professional advice to local communities and to assist in the development of a nationwide map procurement and improvement program.

4. Data processing equipment.—The 1975 request provides for continued leasing of selected electronic data processing equipment to update existing computer systems.

Capital outlay.—Large scale data processing equipment.—The 1975 request provides for the purchase of additional electronic equipment needed to modernize the data processing installation of the Bureau of the Census.

Other capital outlay.—This provides for the acquisition of computer tape, office furniture and machines, and other miscellaneous equipment necessary to conduct periodic censuses and surveys.

The Regional Action Planning Commissions' programs will be continued in 1975 at a reduced funding level to permit an orderly transition to a new economic adjustment program to be proposed by the administration.

The Regional Commission program is authorized by title V of the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965, as amended. Seven regional commissions encompass all or parts of 29 States. With commissions composed of the Governors of member States and Federal cochairmen appointed by the President, the program is a Federal-State partnership which jointly plans and executes development programs to overcome economic lag and regional problems such as energy, transportation, and resource use.

1. Development programs.—The five original commissions have completed long-range comprehensive development plans approved by the Secretary of Commerce. The two newest commissions have this process well underway. The 1975 development programs will continue the planning process, technical assistance and supplemental grant programs, and support a modest regional research program carried on by the Department of Commerce.

2. Administrative expenses.—This activity provides for staff costs of the commissions, the Federal cochairmen, and the Special Assistant to the Secretary for Regional Economic Coordination.

1. International economic policy and research.—Provides long-range planning and strategic program/policy guidance for all activities, and provides basic statistical data, analyses and studies regarding international trade for use by planning and policy officials of both Government and industry. In the area of trade and economic policy development, direct support to the upcoming worldwide multilateral trade negotiations will be provided.

Increased funds are requested to provide additional analytical and statistical support for policy activities.

2. Domestic business and industry affairs.—This activity provides a mechanism for business input on domestic business policy issues, particularly economic and financial issues, labor-management relations and pollution control.

DOMESTIC AND INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION—Con.

[SALARIES AND EXPENSES] OPERATIONS AND ADMINISTRATION—con.

Included in this activity, as a reimbursable program, is support of the Defense Production Act of 1950, to assure timely completion of programs for production, construction, and research and development; an adequate supply of strategic and critical materials; and maximum readiness of the industrial resources of the United States to meet any future national emergency.

Increased funds are requested to support studies on international trade and the related impact of pollution control costs as set forth in section 6 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act Amendments of 1972.

3. Resources and import programs.—Provides the principal contact point within the Department on problems involving those domestic industries experiencing difficulties from import competition, and on problems in the international trade of certain primary commodities. In addition, the activity administers certain statutory functions relating to imports, basic commodities, and foreign trade zones, and assists in energy policy development by providing and coordinating Commerce input for energy programs, including energy conservation. The activity also administers the Department's trade adjustment assistance responsibilities under the Trade Expansion Act of 1962.

4. International trade development.—This activity encourages and assists U.S. businesses to export by sponsoring trade promotion events overseas, such as trade fairs, trade shows, trade missions, seminars, and foreign department store promotions of U.S. consumer goods; by providing foreign marketing information and "early warnings" of overseas sales leads; and by assisting U.S. companies to compete successfully for major foreign capital projects and product purchases.

5. East-West trade.—Implements the Department's responsibilities to increase the international economic strength of the United States by expanding trade with the markets of the U.S.S.R., Eastern Europe, and the Peoples' Republic of China.

Increased resources are requested for additional market research and trade promotion to the U.S.S.R., the Peoples' Republic of China, and other Eastern European countries.

6. Export Administration.—This activity administers the Export Administration Act of 1969, as amended, and has primary responsibility for the administration of the short supply control program, for which $1,173 thousand has been provided in 1974. The short supply control program involves monitoring and licensing commodities in short supply domestically. This program will be curtailed in 1975.

7. Field operations.—Serves as the Department's principal medium of contact with the local business community for planning, arranging, and participating in the delivery of the Department's business-related information and services to businesses and "multiplier" agencies, including efforts to expand exports and to encourage additional U.S. firms to participate in exporting. In addition, the activity publishes the Commerce Business Daily in accordance with Public Law 87-305.

Increased resources are requested to expand the field effort in export expansion by reaching firms in those industries with high export potential and stimulating these firms to enter exporting, increase their exporting activities and continue to export on a sustained basis.

8. Domestic business policy analysis.—This new activity improves the capability to provide analysis and advice regarding a variety of issues which impact domestic business conditions, including proposed legislation, regulatory actions and Federal programs.

The resources are requested to establish a domestic business policy analysis group independent of the operating bureaus. This will insure objective analysis performed from a broad perspective.

9. Administration.—Provides necessary program support services, such as budgeting, accounting, personnel, management analysis, general office services, and public affairs.

Increased resources are requested to provide for leasing of office space from GSA beginning in 1975.

The Trade Expansion Act of 1962 authorizes trade adjustment assistance to firms who are injured or threatened by increased imports when the increase is due to a trade agreement entered into by the United States. The rationale for making assistance available is that, since tariff reductions benefit the entire economy, the Nation should share the cost of any injury to individual businesses affected.

Firms, which have been certified eligible by the Tariff Commission and the Department, may receive financial assistance, which consists of direct loans and/or loan guarantees, and/or technical assistance.

The Office of Minority Business Enterprise (OMBE) was established under Executive Order 11458 of March 5, 1969, and Executive Order 11625 of October 13, 1971.

In its leadership role of coordinating the minority business enterprise program, the Office of Minority Business Enterprise seeks to create improved national conditions within which the minority people of the United States will have an equal opportunity to participate in the American business system.

1. Community investment.—OMBE provides financial support to several kinds of local business development organizations which help minority entrepreneurs create new businesses and expand existing ones. Approximately 150 local business development organizations will be operating in 1974 and 1975.

2. Private investment.—OMBE funds local organizations to assist private institutions in increasing the access of minority businessmen to capital, markets, business opportunities, management skills and technical assistance.

3. Government investment.—OMBE assists State and local governments to set up programs similar to the national OMBE program.

4. Business management development.—OMBE helps to strengthen existing sources of business education and training for minorities by supporting entrepreneurial courses in a variety of institutions at the regional and local levels, as well as by commissioning development of new curricula and materials. In 1975 a marketing development program will be established ($2,000 thousand in new obligational authority) to help determine market potential for products or services of potential new businesses, and to develop and disseminate market techniques.

5. Community economic development.—The community economic development program is directed toward providing significant business and economic development activity in areas having a concentration of low-income persons, particularly minorities. Legislation has been submitted to authorize the transfer of the program from OEO to Commerce. This consolidation of effort will increase the effectiveness of Federal programs designed to bring minority entrepreneurs into the mainstream of economic life.

6. Experiment and demonstration.—These funds are used to develop and test innovative methods of stimulating public and private sector involvement in minority enterprise activity.

7. Program development and management.—The management, administration and direction of the minority business enterprise program is financed under this heading. countries with the greatest potential for producing tourism revenue for the United States. Emphasis will be on developing economical package tours to make the United States more competitive as a destination, and to supporting U.S.-bound tours with consumer advertising, public information, and travel trade training programs. The objective for 1975 is to increase earnings from tourism by $200 million over levels that would result from normal growth in foreign travel to the United States.

2. Tourist services and facilities.—Emphasis is on developing reception and service facilities for the substantial influx of foreign visitors expected during the Bicentennial era. The objective for 1975 is to continue multilingual receptionist programs at major airports.

3. Industry and State programs.—U.S. industry, States, and cities will be encouraged to participate in promoting travel to the United States through a research program designed to provide them with essential market information and basic data, and through a matching grant program to assist States and cities with up to half the cost of worthwhile, locally developed programs. USTS will also work with industry to establish incentive travel programs to the United States from American-owned businesses abroad, to increase foreign attendance at U.S. trade shows, and to commit international associations to select the United States as their convention site.

4. Executive direction.—Primary emphasis is on refining the USTS performance measurement system for determining the effectiveness of USTS programs.

This appropriation provides for the research, development, support of operating programs, and acquisition of facilities needed to fulfill the basic responsibilities of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

1. Mapping, charting, and surveying services.—This activity provides for the systematic collection, processing, and analyses of data required for charting the Nation's coastal and Great Lakes regions; producing aeronautical charts for safe and efficient commercial and general aviation use of the national airspace system; and basic geodetic surveys. The 1975 budget will permit automation of the nautical chart production system, further vessel pollution abatement measures in compliance with Executive Order 11507, accelerate estuarine circulatory measurements in Alaska, and initiate the readjustment of the North American Geodetic Datum.

2. Ocean fisheries and living marine resources.—This activity provides continued consumer availability of safe fishery products and viable commercial and marine sports fishing industries by protecting, developing, and managing our living marine resources. Increases in 1975 will provide for further programs aimed at protecting and conserving marine mammals, a Government-industry cooperative program to develop a new commercial fishery in the central Pacific Ocean, enforcement of domestic and international regulations, and additional State-Federal management programs.

3. Marine ecosystems analysis and ocean dumping.—This activity brings to a focus NOAA's research capabilities to provide critical environmental information for effective management of the marine environment and its resources. In 1975 the program will continue to focus on the New York Bight.

4. Marine technology.—This activity provides for development, testing, evaluation, and calibration of oceanographic instruments for use by Federal agencies, State and local governments, and private industry.

5. Sea grant.—The sea grant program carries out the provisions of the National Sea Grant College and Program Act of 1966 by making matching fund grants to public and private universities, institutes, and industries to seek solutions to problems related to management and use of marine resources, and transfer of new technology to marine users. Increases in 1975 are directed toward assisting regional agencies plan for water pollution control activities in estuaries and to expand applied research on marine resources.

6. Coastal zone.—This activity administered the provisions of the Coastal Zone Management Act of 1972 through the end of 1973.

7. Basic environmental services.—This activity provides the fundamental networks of observations, communications systems, analyses and predictions and maintenance that underpin all forecasts and warnings. Increases in 1975 will improve natural disaster warnings through accelerated modernization of local warning radars and expanded radar coverage of severe storms.

8. Environmental satellite services.—This activity provides for the operation of a national environmental satellite system using satellites in polar orbits for observations of global cloud patterns and vertical profiles of temperature and moisture and spacecraft in geosynchronous orbits to provide near-continuous observations of North and South America and surrounding oceans. Increases in 1975 provide for continuation of both the polar orbiting and geosynchronous systems and start up of the next generation polar orbiting model.

9. Public forecast and warning services.—This activity provides weather services to the general public; hurricane and tornado warnings and river and flood forecasts and warnings to all segments of the population, industry, and Government; weather and sea predictions for marine interests; and research to improve these services. Increases in 1975 focus on developing an automated system to reduce manpower needs in NOAA's weather offices, improving the accuracy and timeliness of public services, and expanding the NOAA Weather Wire Service which delivers forecasts and warnings to mass media for dissemination to the public.

10. Specialized environmental services.—This activity provides environmental services to the agricultural and aviation industries, weather services to help protect the Nation's forests and range lands from fires and to support clean air operations by Government and industry, and information on the sun's activities and conditions in nearspace for use by the Nation's space program, by telecommunications agencies and industries and by electrical power distributors.

11. Environmental data and information services.—This activity provides the public, industry and all levels of government with basic data and products on the atmosphere, oceans, solid earth, the sun and nearspace. A series of standard products meet many user needs but special analyses are prepared in response to requirements such as locations for powerplants and superports, stresses on offshore drilling rigs and energy allocation decisions.

12. Global monitoring of climatic change.—This activity represents the United States part of a U.N.-sponsored worldwide program to carefully monitor the long-term changes taking place in the earth's atmosphere, assess the effects of these changes on weather and climate and predict the changes that will occur in global weather and climate.

13. Weather modification.—This research activity examines the feasibility of modifying hurricanes, and other severe storms to reduce their intensity. In addition, this activity supports research into means of increasing rainfall from tropical cumulus clouds and provides the instrumented aircraft that support all NOAA research programs. Increases in 1975 will continue the aircraft modernization program initiated in 1974 preparatory to starting a major hurricane modification experiment in the western Pacific in 1976 or 1977.

14. International projects.—This activity is composed of three major programs based on international agreements. The Global Atmospheric Research Program's Atlantic Tropical Experiment is sponsored by the World Meteorological Organization with 14 nations participating for the purpose of providing the knowledge necessary for more accurate and longer range weather forecasts, assessing effects of atmospheric pollution and determining feasibility of large-scale weather modification. The International Field Year for the Great Lakes is a cooperative undertaking with Canada for extensive studies of the water resources of the Great Lakes. The President has reached bilateral agreements related to cooperative ocean environmental research efforts with the U.S.S.R., France, and Japan.

15. Retired pay, commissioned officers.—This activity provides for the retirement pay of NOAA commissioned officers and payment to survivors of retired officers under the Retired Serviceman's Family Protection Plan and the Survivors Benefit Plan.

16. Executive direction and administration.—This activity provides for overall technical leadership and administrative management for all elements and programs of NOAA. Increases in 1975 provide for long leadtime items and planning for NOAA consolidation at the Fort Lincoln site.

(b) Examination of trademark applications.—Applications are examined to determine the registrability of trademarks, and quasi-judicial functions are performed in appeal or adversary proceedings within the Office.

(c) Collection, assembly and dissemination of technical and legal patent and trademark information.—Specifications and drawings of successful applications are printed, and issued patents and registered trademarks are published weekly. In addition, this activity includes preparation and issuance of patent grants, furnishing copies of records, maintenance of public search room and scientific library facilities, and recording instruments conveying ownership of patent and trademark rights.

2. National Bureau of Standards.—(a) Basis for Nation's physical measurement system.—The purpose of this activity is to insure that the users of science and technology in the United States will be able to make physical measurements which will measure the desired property with the required accuracy, yield the same results time after time, and be reconcilable with other like measurements made elsewhere and at other times.

The 1975 increase will provide the methods and standards essential for improved reliability and effectiveness of measurements made in clinical laboratories.

(b) Scientific and technological services for industry and Government.—The purpose of this activity is to facilitate effective use of science and technology by governmental institutions and by industry. Programs include materials technology activities in such areas as biomaterials, metals, alloys, polymers, and inorganic and composite materials; evaluation and improvement of measurement methods in support of environmental pollution abatement; and building technology programs.

The 1975 increase will: (a) Develop and provide the methods, standards, and data for environmental quality required by enforcement authorities for achieving clean water and acceptable noise levels, and (b) supply mechanisms for increasing effectiveness in the use of Federal automatic data processing resources, produce efficient criteria for data processing equipment procurement and utilization, and provide a means for maintaining security in processing and storage of data.

(c) Technical basis for equity in trade.—The purpose of this activity is to provide a common technical basis for fair exchange between buyers and sellers in commercial dealings with minimum legal regulation at the Federal level.

The increase in 1975 will develop and provide consumer information on the relative efficiency in the use of energy of similar types of appliances offered in the marketplace.

(d) Technical services to promote public safety.—Programs of this activity provide standards, test methods, information, and specialized services as required by law to protect the public from certain specified hazards. Areas included are fire research and safety and radiation safety.

The increase in 1975 will help to provide the means for protecting the public from radiation hazards by providing the States with a measurement basis for their own regulation and enforcement of radiation hazards.

(e) Technical information services.—The purpose of this activity is to disseminate information on the research results and services.

This appropriation provides subsidies for the construction of ships in American shipyards in order to offset the disparity between domestic and foreign shipbuilding costs. The Merchant Marine Act of 1970 provides incentives for increasing shipyard productivity. The subsidy rate, which measures the differential between foreign and domestic costs, is scheduled to decrease by 2% per year. The subsidy rate goals—39% in 1974 and 37% in 1975—will be met and exceeded. Recent contracts for tankers have been awarded at subsidy rates of 36.47% and 35.18%, well below the ceiling rate as outlined in the Merchant Marine Act of 1970. These rates reflect effects of recent currency devaluations as well as the advantages of series production in the shipbuilding program. Benefits accrue due to quantity procurement, stable shipyard employment, and increased labor productivity due to learning curve effects. In addition, the sustained ship construction activity generated by the construction differential subsidy program has encouraged shipyard investment in facility upgrading and expansion. The planned 1974-5 shipbuilding program is in consonance with productivity objectives. Productivity benefits of series production are reflected in follow-on contracts planned for five shipyards.

The tentative 1975 program will consist of:

[Dollars in millions]

	Number of ships contracted	1975 funding		1976 funding
		Number of ships	Amount	Number of ships	Amount
1974 contracts funded in 1975:

Total program, 1975.....	9	12	280.5
Less: Carryover from 1974.....			-5.5
Total request, 1975.....	9	12	275.0

The above program has been developed from applications now on hand and estimates of private demand. The precise ship mix will be a product of many factors including the international competitive position of U.S. shipyards, reappraisals of national defense requirements, prospective foreign trade agreements, operator preferences, and latest cost estimates.

OPERATING-DIFFERENTIAL SUBSIDIES (LIQUIDATION OF CONTRACT AUTHORITY)

Subsidies designed to achieve a reasonable parity between American and foreign ship operating costs are paid to qualified operators of U.S. flag ships performing essential shipping services enabling them to compete economically.

1. Passenger/combo ships.—Largely due to the competitive advantage of transoceanic airline service and rising passenger ship operating costs, passenger ship operators are finding it unprofitable to continue such service. Two subsidized U.S. flag passenger and three combination passenger-cargo ships remain viably employed.

2. General cargo ships.—Subsidies provided to U.S. flag general cargo liner ships have been a significant factor in enabling U.S. ships to carry 22–24% of the total general cargo tonnage in U.S. foreign commerce over the period 1966–72. Replacement of many older ships with faster more productive ships has offset the decline in the number and tonnage capacity of the U.S. fleet. As the full impact of newly constructed or converted ships under the Federal ship construction program begins to take effect, U.S. flag trade penetration is expected to increase.

3. Bulk carrier ships.—U.S. flag participation in carriage of bulk cargoes has been low in recent years. As a result of the Merchant Marine Act of 1970, new efforts are being directed toward revitalizing this increasingly important segment of the industry. Assistance was provided to enable the U.S. fleet to carry approximately 17% of the grain purchased by the Soviet Union in 1973. New ore-bulk-oil carriers and tankers are beginning to enter subsidized service and an experimental program to subsidize carriage of U.S. foreign commerce on the Great Lakes is to be continued.

The operations under the program are detailed in the following table:

The 1975 program provides funding for the initiation and continuation of R. & D. efforts to reduce costs of operation and building U.S. ships. Major efforts in 1975 are planned in the areas of advanced nuclear ship development, ship machinery, more productive shipbuilding methods, improved navigation/communication systems, and investigation of shipboard automation. The principal aims are to improve the productivity of U.S. shipyards and to reduce the life cycle costs of U.S. flag ships in order to make the U.S. maritime industry more competitive with foreign fleets. The continued participation of industry in cost-sharing of R. & D. projects provides increased results for the government investment. The MarAd R. & D. program for 1975 will be involved in the following areas:

1. Advanced ship development and construction.—This activity is concerned with improving the productivity of U.S. shipyards in order to reduce the cost of building U.S. ships, to improve shipping systems to be built in the 1970's and to develop new shipping systems for the 1980's.

2. Advanced ship operations systems.—This activity funds programs for improved operation of ships and related supporting systems with the objective of maximizing throughput of cargo at least economic cost. These R. & D. developments will have a direct impact on the goal of reduction of operating subsidies.

3. Advanced port and intermodal systems operations.—The R. & D. effort in this area is directed toward development of offshore, deep-water terminals, new port systems and improved port management.

The Merchant Marine Act of 1936, as amended, established the Federal Ship Financing Fund for the purpose of insuring construction loans and mortgages on U.S.-flag vessels built in the United States. The fund is authorized to insure aggregate outstanding balances of up to $5 billion less $25 million of authority which has been transferred to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to insure construction loans and mortgages on fishing vessels. The maximum amount of aggregate obligations guaranteed by the Federal ship financing fund was raised from $3 billion to the present level of $5 billion pursuant to Public Law 93-70 of July 10, 1973.

Budget program.—Beginning in 1974, administrative expenses incurred in the operation of the Federal ship financing fund will be paid from income to the fund. Reimbursements to the Operations and training appropriation of $1,890 thousand and $2,175 thousand are anticipated in 1974 and 1975 respectively. Advances to operators of $2,100 thousand are planned in 1974 in order to forestall possible defaults on insured mortgages. No advances are anticipated for 1975.

Financing.—The fund receives income from insurance premiums on construction loans and mortgages, fees and interest on U.S. Government securities and mortgages held directly. The payment of administrative expenses is to be made from this income, while payments for advances to operators, redemption of defaulted loans and mortgages are paid from income, equity, and borrowings from the Treasury Department. No borrowings are anticipated in 1975.

The Maritime Administration is authorized by 46 U.S.C. 1281-1294, as amended, to insure against loss or damage by marine war risks when it is found commercial insurance cannot be obtained on reasonable terms and conditions. This insurance includes war risk hull and disbursements interim insurance, war risk protection and indemnity interim insurance, second seamen's war risk interim insurance, and war risk builder's risk prelaunching and postlaunching insurance and a contingent war risk cargo insurance stand-by program. Authority to underwrite insurance has been authorized to September 7, 1975, having been extended at 5-year intervals since 1950.

Budget program.—As of June 30, 1973, insurance outstanding covered 1,100 vessels in operation and under construction in domestic yards. In the event of an outbreak of a general war, the insurance exposure would approximate $18 billion.

In addition, under 46 U.S.C. 1285, MarAd provides second seamen's war risk insurance covering the crews of 104 vessels under contract to or chartered by the Military Sealift Command.

Financing.—Under 46 U.S.C. 1288, the Secretary of Commerce established the War Risk Insurance Revolving Fund. It receives income from binder fees, insurance premiums, interest from investments and claim reimbursements from other Federal agencies. Underwriting agents' fees and expenses, appraisal contractors' fees, and insurance claims are paid from this income. While additional appropriations for the program are authorized, none are requested for 1975.

RESERVE FORCES

The following appropriations are for the reserve components, which include: Army and Air National Guard; and Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force Reserves.

National Guard and Reserve personnel.—These programs provide funds for training members of the Ready Reserve required for early mobilization needs of the active forces. Most of the paid National Guard and Reserve personnel perform 48 or 24 drills and attend 2 weeks of active duty for training each year. Other personnel not requiring as intensive training receive only a period of active duty for training (usually 2 weeks) during the year. Active duty for basic training is provided for personnel enlisting in the National Guard or Reserve who have not previously received military training. Service schools and special tours of active duty training provide additional training for limited numbers of the Ready Reserve.

The numbers of National Guard and Reserve personnel estimated to participate in the paid training programs are summarized in the following table:

Reserve officer candidates.—The Reserve Officers' Training Corps program provides training for reserve and regular officer candidates who have enrolled in the course while attending a collegiate institution at which an ROTC unit has been established. College graduates who satisfactorily complete the advanced course of the program are commissioned and are ordinarily ordered to active duty for a minimum period of 2 years.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps Vitalization Act of 1964, as amended by Public Law 92-166, authorizes a limited number of scholarships for 4-year ROTC students on a competitive basis. Successful candidates for the scholarships are required to serve a minimum period of 4 years on active duty upon graduation and appointment as a commissioned officer. There will be about 6,500 scholarship recipients in the Army and Air Force and about 6,000 in the Navy in 1975.

The Armed Forces health professions scholarship program provides a source of commissioned officers for the various health professions. Student enrollment in 1975 will be about 1,850 in the Army and 1,575 in the Navy and Air Force.

The Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force provide training for students who elect to enroll in ROTC training at the secondary level of education, and are programmed to have units at 650, 223, 49, and 275 schools, respectively, in operation in 1975.

The number of candidates commissioned from these programs are summarized below:

This estimate includes funds for the pay of all military personnel on the retired lists of the Department of Defense. The estimate represents the consolidated requirements of the military departments for: (a) Payments to retired officers and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force; (b) retainer pay of regular enlisted personnel of the fleet reserve of the Navy and Fleet Marine Corps Reserve; and (c) survivors' benefits. The primary gains to the retired rolls can be attributed to the greater number of individuals attaining eligibility for retirement after 20 or more years of active military service. The following tabulation shows the average number of personnel on the rolls during 1973 compared with estimated numbers for 1974 and 1975.

Under the provisions of Public Law 92-425 "Survivors' Benefit Plan" greater coverage is provided for survivors of retired and active military personnel at a lower cost than under the old Retired Serviceman's Family Protection Plan which is no longer available. It also guarantees minimum annual incomes to current widows of deceased members.

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

The appropriations under this title finance the day-to-day costs, except military personnel costs, of operating and maintaining the Armed Forces, including the reserve components, and related support activities of the Department of Defense. These funds include amounts for pay of civilians, contract services for maintenance of equipment and facilities, fuel, supplies, and repair parts for weapons and equipment. Financial requirements for these appropriations are influenced by a variety of factors, the principal of which are force levels, such as the number of aircraft squadrons or Army or Marine Corps divisions, military strength and deployments, rates of operational activity, number of installations, and quantity and complexity of major equipment (aircraft, ships, missiles, tanks, etc.) in operation.

ACTIVE FORCES

Funds to operate the active forces and their support are contained in five operation and maintenance appropriations: One for each of the four services and one for Defense agencies. The programs covered under this heading are described below:

1. Strategic forces.—Strategic offensive forces include more than 450 manned B-52 and FB-111 bombers and 1,054 ICBM's operated by the Air Force as well as the Navy's submarine missile fleet which deploys 656 Polaris and Poseidon missiles. Estimates for 1975 reflect increased deployment of Minuteman III missiles and conversion of additional submarines from Polaris to the more advanced Poseidon ballistic missile.

Strategic defensive forces consist of anti-aircraft and anti-missile units of the Army, interceptor fighter aircraft of the Air Force, and various warning, command, and control systems operated by the Air Force.

2. General purpose forces.—These forces of the four military services operate under the control of the various unified and specified commands. They consist of the tactical air forces of the Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps, the ground forces and supporting aircraft elements of the Army and Marine Corps, and Navy combatant and support ships. Among these forces are those deployed to eastern Asia, the western Pacific, and to Europe in support of NATO commitments; the fleets operating in the Pacific, the Atlantic, and the Mediterranean; and active forces based in the United States.

Our tactical air forces consist of the Air Force tactical air wings, Navy land and carrier-based antisubmarine and attack air wings, and Marine air wings. The missions performed by these forces include maintaining air superiority, interdiction bombing, close air support, anti-submarine patrol, reconnaissance, intratheater airlift, combat crew, readiness air group and transition training and special operations. During 1975 the F-4 Phantom jet fighter will continue to be the workhorse for all three services. The Navy and Marine Corps will proceed to deploy the F-14 to replace some F-4's in the air superiority/fleet air defense role; the F-15 will be introduced into the Air Force arsenal in 1975 and will provide for transfer of F-4 and A-7 weapon systems to the reserves. Flight training simulator use will be emphasized to partially offset flight hour reductions resulting from the energy crisis.

Army land forces consist of infantry, mechanized, armored, airborne, and airmobile divisions as well as force elements needed to support these divisions during the initial stages of combat, along with a limited number of units required for sustained combat support. During 1975, emphasis will continue to be placed on increasing combat readiness. Combat to support ratios will be improved by the activation of additional combat units from the conversion and/or deactivation of support units as well as the use of spaces freed by reductions in headquarters and support activities. Additional combat units will be modernized with the latest equipments and weapons for the conduct of land warfare.

Marine Corps land forces, composed of marine amphibious forces including a combination of combat and service support organizations and variety of supporting units, are designed to conduct amphibious assault operations and other missions with the close support of marine aviation. The Marine Corps objective in 1975 continues to be the training and maintenance of the Fleet Marine Forces at a high level of combat readiness for service with the Fleet, ashore or for other duties as national security may require.

Naval forces include aircraft carriers, submarines, amphibious forces, antisubmarine forces, and anti-air warfare forces. Five nuclear submarines and one nuclear powered guided missile frigate will be introduced into the fleet in 1975, bringing to one-third the proportion of warships that are nuclear propelled. Seven other ships will also become operational including the first three of the 963 class destroyer, a new type of amphibious assault ship (LHA), and two of a new class of patrol hydrofoil (PHM). The addition of these modern vessels will permit further inactivation of overage and obsolete vessels. Three attack carriers (CVA's) will be configured in 1975 for multipurpose operations (CV's) for a total of six so configured. An increased effort in ship maintenance will enhance the readiness of these forces in 1975.

3. Intelligence and communications.—This program comprises the centrally directed Defense intelligence and security function, the major portion of the consolidated telecommunications program (CTP), the National Military Command System, and other special activities which are related to and support the missions of the combat forces in the strategic, general purpose, and airlift/sealift programs. Included in the CTP portion are the Defense Communications System (DCS) common user transmission and switching systems as well as non-DCS communications. Funds to support intelligence, security, and communications activities are contained in the various appropriations of each of the military services, and, in the case of the Defense Communications Agency, Defense Nuclear Agency, Defense Intelligence Agency, Defense Mapping Agency, Defense Investigative Service, and National Security Agency, in the Defense agencies appropriation. Included among the special activities are Navy oceanographic and weather programs and Air Force weather, air rescue and recovery, and air traffic control and landing system programs.

4. Airlift and sealift.—This provides air, land, and sea transportation services for all the Armed Forces in peacetime as well as quick reaction strategic mobility and logistical support in wartime. The major commands in this program are the Military Airlift Command of the Air Force, the Military Sealift Command of the Navy, and the Military Traffic Management and Terminal Service of the Army, all of which are industrially funded operations whose costs are reimbursed by the users. The operation and maintenance appropriations directly provide for certain administrative and base service support expenses for each of these industrially funded activities.

7. Central supply and maintenance.—This program includes funds for specialized supply and maintenance activities. It provides resources for the determination of inventory levels, procurement (excluding acquisition costs), storage, distribution, depot-level maintenance and transportation of military materiel. These functions are managed by the military services and conducted at various locations worldwide such as supply depots and centers, inventory control points, and repair facilities as well as through commercial contractors.

In addition, the Defense Supply Agency provides common supply and service support to the military services within the continental United States and manages bulk petroleum worldwide. The Defense Supply Agency also manages Defense-owned idle industrial plant equipment, the Defense surplus property disposal program, and the Defense portion of the Federal catalog program. It is also responsible for providing contract administration services including enforcement of the equal employment provisions of Executive Order 11246, as amended, administration and supervision of Department of Defense material utilization program, and coordinated procurement programs. Requirements for the Defense Supply Agency are included under Operation and maintenance, Defense Agencies.

8. Training, medical, and other general personnel activities.—In 1975, the military services plan on acquiring some 400,000 new accessions into the active forces. In view of the all volunteer environment now in effect, this will necessitate a strong effort by the recruiting organizations of each service to attract new personnel. These new accessions must then be trained in basic military skills, in many occupational skills, and in career fields. Training requirements are also influenced by the total strength of the services, and by the introduction of new equipment and weapons. Most training is conducted at service-operated facilities, such as training centers for the training of new recruits, at technical schools which afford training in specific military occupational skills, and at pilot training bases. Education of prospective officers is accomplished by the three service academies and by Reserve Officer Training Corps units at universities and colleges.

The services operate 204 hospitals to provide medical care for active and retired military personnel and for dependents. In addition, this program finances a medical program at civilian medical facilities for personnel in areas where service hospitals are not accessible.

9. Administration and associated activities.—This program includes the costs of departmental administration, major field command headquarters, and general support activities such as finance and audit. Reimbursement to the General Services Administration for space occupied, required by Public Law 92-313, is included in this program for the first time in 1975.

PROCUREMENT

The procurement appropriations of the Department of Defense finance the acquisition of capital equipment such as aircraft, missiles, ships, combat and support vehicles, weapons, torpedoes, and communication equipment; air, ground, and ship munitions; major items for support of the capital equipment when it is in use; the industrial facilities necessary to produce that equipment; and major modification of equipment in inventory where modernization can be achieved without buying new equipment. The capital equipment financed by these appropriations is principally procured from private contractors or produced in Government arsenals, shipyards, and plants.

The 1975 program accelerates the production of modern equipment, weapons, and munitions in support of higher levels of readiness for United States and allied forces. The equipment necessary to support conventional as well as strategic warfare missions of our armed services will be augmented and modernized. Significant increases in our military capability will be achieved through improvements in the firepower of ground forces, the introduction of the most modern fighter and attack aircraft into the tactical air forces, improved sea control systems, and improved strategic systems.

Direct budget programs are estimated as follows (in millions of dollars):

	1973 actual	1974 estimate	1975 estimate
Aircraft	5,728.3	6,524.0	6,796.7
Missiles	3,106.3	2,767.0	2,766.6

Total	18,574.3	18,652.6	19,866.6

The appropriations for procurement of aircraft, missiles, ships, weapons, torpedoes, and combat vehicles are dependent upon the enactment of authorizing legislation.

This appropriation finances the acquisition of tactical and utility airplanes and helicopters, including associated electronics communications and armament; modification of inservice aircraft; ground support equipment; and centrally managed high dollar value depot reparable assemblies, components and repair parts such as spare engines, transmissions, gear boxes, and major components. It also provides for funding related first destination transportation and production base support.

The 1975 program provides increased mobility through procurement of UH-1 and CH-47 utility and medium transport helicopters, and increased antiarmor firepower through the modification of inservice attack helicopters and the procurement of new equipment with TOW missile launching capability.

This appropriation finances the acquisition of ammunition, modification of inservice stocks, and the related production base support including expansion, maintenance, and modernization of industrial facilities and equipment.

The 1975 program provides for worldwide consumption and losses to inventory through the 1975 funded delivery period; provides for NATO requirements; assures meeting pipeline and consumption requirements for supported allies; maintains an active production base in 1975; and protects base continuity in the 1977-78 time frame. This year's program includes funds for over 60 different types of ammunition and provides the sixth increment of a multi-year effort to rehabilitate and improve the Army's industrial base.

This appropriation provides for the construction of new ships and the conversion of existing ships, including all hull, mechanical and electrical equipment, electronics, guns, torpedo and missile launching systems, and communication systems. It also provides for the procurement of long-leadtime items for ships for which authorization will be required in the 1976 and later year programs.

The 1975 program continues the Navy's long-range modernization and replacement program designed to provide the fleet with modern balanced forces which can effectively respond to a wide variety of challenges in supporting our national policies.

1. Fleet ballistic missile ships.—Funds are requested in this activity to convert three ballistic missile submarines from the Polaris to the Poseidon missile capability to improve our sea-based ballistic missile weapons system. The activity also includes two Trident class ballistic missile firing submarines capable of firing a larger undersea strategic missile. Long-leadtime equipment will also be procured for future Trident submarines.

2. Other warships.—The 1975 request includes the first sea control ship. This ship will significantly enhance our antisubmarine warfare capability. The request also includes three high-performance, high-speed nuclear powered attack submarines and seven DD-963 class destroyers. The DD-963 destroyers will stress standardization, automation, and improved reliability and maintainability to minimize life cycle costs. A DLGN-38 class nuclear powered frigate is included in this budget to improve the anti-air-warfare capability of the fleet. Advance procurement funds are included for a future DLGN.

4. Mine warfare and patrol ships.—This activity includes funds for four patrol hydrofoil ships and seven patrol frigates. These ships while being somewhat smaller than previous warships will be effective high-firepower additions to the fleet.

5. Auxiliaries and craft.—This activity includes a destroyer tender, the first of a new class of fleet oiler and the first of a new class of fleet tug. These ships are required in order to modernize the aging support fleet. Funds are also included in this budget activity for a floating drydock for nuclear submarines, ship waste barges, craft, outfitting material, post delivery, and escalation.

Some of the support for in-house organizations such as the Naval Research Laboratory and for some of the Federal contract research centers is also provided here. In addition to the amounts directly provided for in this activity, applied research is supported in industry by certain allowable indirect costs which may be permitted under contracts funded by both the research, development, test, and evaluation and procurement appropriations.

2. Aircraft and related equipment.—This activity funds research, development, test, and evaluation related to airframes, engines, avionics, and other installed aircraft equipment, as well as applied research in supporting aeronautical technologies. It also funds the development of major aircraft systems.

Programs receiving major increases in 1975 include the Air Force B-1 advanced strategic bomber and the EF-111A electronic warfare support aircraft; the Navy CH-53E helicopter; and the Army advanced attack helicopter. The Air Force will initiate development of a new strategic tanker/cruise missile carrier, and the Navy will initiate development of a prototype fighter.

Continuing in development are the Army UTTAS logistic helicopter, the heavy lift helicopter and the Air Force A-10 close air support aircraft. The Navy will continue prototype development of V/STOL aircraft and the Air Force will proceed to engineering development of a new air combat fighter. Development of the Air Force F-15 air superiority fighter and the Navy F-14 interceptor aircraft nears completion.

This activity also funds research and development efforts at centers such as the Air Force Flight Dynamics Laboratory in Dayton, Ohio, the Naval Air Development Center in Johnsville, Pa., and the Army Air Mobility Centers in Virginia, Ohio, California, and Missouri.

3. Missiles and related equipment.—This activity provides for research, development, test, and evaluation of strategic and tactical missile systems. Strategic missile development related to civil defense responsibilities of the Department of Defense are carried in the separate title, Civil Defense.

The total 1975 budget plan for Defense research, development, test, and evaluation appropriations includes a $989 million increase from the current 1974 plan, reaching a total of $9,322 million. The specific activities included in the 1975 budget plan are discussed below under each budget activity. The budget plans and estimated obligations under appropriations in this title for the Army, Navy, Air Force, Defense agencies, and Director of Test and Evaluation, are summarized as follows (in thousands of dollars):

programs that increase in 1975 include the Trident missile and the strategic cruise missile. Technology related to advanced intercontinental ballistic missiles also increases. This includes effort on improved Minuteman guidance and on a new higher yield ballistic reentry vehicle. Major effort continues on Site Defense of Minuteman prototype development and on antiballistic missile technology. The Safeguard antiballistic missile system completes development funding in 1975.

Army tactical forward area air defense systems will increase in 1975. Effort on the Army SAM-D air defense missile system will emphasize proof of concept testing. Development of the Navy AEGIS fleet defense missile system will continue. The Navy Condor, Sparrow and improved Sidewinder air-to-air missiles near completion.

In addition to funding contracts with industry in missile research and development program, this activity is a major source of financial support for the operation of certain test and evaluation facilities such as the White Sands Missile Range, the Navy Weapons Center at China Lake, and the research and development programs at the Army's Redstone Arsenal.

4. Military Astronautics and related equipment.—Funded under this activity are programs directed toward the improvement of space technology for military purposes and the development of space vehicles for specific military missions. There will be increased effort on technology related to warning and assessment of missile attacks, and on a communications satellite system. Development will continue on the NAVSTAR global positioning system. There will be increased planning effort directed toward using the NASA space shuttle for launching military space payloads. In addition to contractual effort related to space systems and technology, this activity also includes funds for the Aerospace Corporation.

5. Ships, small craft, and related equipment.—This activity provides for applied research, development, test and evaluation of ship structures and equipment, including propulsion, communications, navigation, and surveillance systems directly affecting ship operations. It includes the design, prototype fabrication, and performance evaluation of new types of ships, sonars, countermeasure devices, marine gas turbines, and nuclear propulsion plants.

Development will continue on a prototype surface effects ship, on amphibious assault craft, and on hydrofoil craft. The Trident submarine will continue full-scale development and a new program will be initiated to develop a new small strategic submarine. This activity funds much of the effort at the Naval Ship Research and Development Center.

6. Ordnance, combat vehicles, and related equipment.—This activity provides for the research, development, test, and evaluation of improved artillery, guns, rocket launchers, mortars, small arms, mines, grenades, torpedoes, nuclear and chemical munitions, and conventional air-launched weapons, as well as for the exploration and evaluation of new fuzes, propellants, explosives, detonators, dispensers, and armor.

Development of the new Army main battle tank will increase in 1975. There will also be expanded effort on improved mine systems for both the Army and Navy, on improved air delivered weapons, and on prototype laser weapons. Continuing in development are improved guns for the Air Force A-10 close air support aircraft, and for air superiority aircraft. Also continuing in development are the Army mechanized infantry combat vehicle, the armored reconnaissance scout vehicle, and the vehicle mounted Bushmaster rapid fire weapon system.

This activity provides principal support for research and development activities at several Army centers.

7. Other equipment.—This activity provides for research, development, test, and evaluation of equipment not separately funded under other activities. Examples of programs funded here are electronic warfare devices, chemical and biological agent detection and protective equipment, antisubmarine warfare surveillance systems, intelligence and reconnaissance equipment, and defense suppression projects. Programs in support of improved logistics, facilities design, and training are provided in this activity.

There will be increases in 1974 for the Air Force Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS) and the Advanced Airborne Command Post. Effort on the development of air defense suppression systems will increase. This activity also funds much of the support at the Electromagnetic Compatibility Analysis Center, and the Army Desert Test Center.

8. Programwide management and support.—For the Army, this activity provides support for programwide activities and technical information efforts not distributed directly to other budget activities. For the Navy, this activity funds similar programwide support effort as well as test and evaluation programs such as the USS Hip Pocket. For the Air Force, this activity provides for certain costs of central administration both for the Air Force Systems Command and several large test and evaluation centers.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

The direct military construction programs for the Armed Forces, both Active and Reserve, shown in the individual schedules of this title are summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM
	1973 actual	1974 estimate	1975 estimate
Active forces-----	1,324,248	1,647,118	1,924,800
Reserve forces-----	122,599	128,800	169,500
Interservice activities-----	17,304	45,469	55,900
Total-----	1,464,151	1,821,387	2,150,200

Most of the appropriations required for the military construction accounts are dependent upon the enactment of authorizing legislation. The details of this legislation have been completed and are being submitted to the Congress for early consideration.

1. Major construction.—This category provides for the acquisition of land and for construction of military projects as authorized in currently effective military construction acts and the new authorization referred to above. These authorizations include construction projects as defined in Department of Defense Directive 7040.2 where the estimated cost of such construction generally exceeds $50 thousand per project. Under this category the major activities proposed for 1975 are as follows:

Strategic forces.—Provision has been made to upgrade existing facilities and provide for personnel support for strategic warfare systems. Funds also have been provided to continue to support the Trident weapons system.

General purpose forces.—Projects in this category support general combat forces including their command organizations, the logistics organizations organic to these forces, and the related support units, including medical, which are deployed as constituent parts of military forces and field organizations. The 1975 funding reflects continuing increased emphasis on service attractiveness, particularly improved health services and bachelor housing facilities.

Specialized activities.—Funds are provided for the continued support of the joint defense effort of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Funding for abatement of air and water pollution at defense installations is continued to assure that actions to correct violations of Federal, State, and local air and water quality standards have been taken or are underway. Funds are included for initiation of radiological clean-up of Eniwetok Atoll.

Research and development.—The 1975 program includes facilities required in support of programs to advance knowledge and technology in such areas as weapons systems, communications, electronics, and medicine. These programs emphasize reliability, effectiveness, security, and safety, as well as improved capability.

Reserve components.—The increased funding programed for facilities required for the training of the National Guard and the other Reserve forces reflects the importance placed on these activities being identified as the primary source of augmentation of Active forces in future emergencies.

Logistics.—Funding for the modernization and replacement of aircraft, ship and ground equipment maintenance, overhaul and repair facilities needed to satisfy deficiencies in current operations is increased over the level provided in recent years to meet new requirements resulting from technological advances.

Personnel support.—A major portion of the 1975 program will provide funds for improved housing, medical, and community support for lower grade enlisted personnel and junior grade officers to encourage their retention in the service and the development of an all-volunteer force. Upgrading of existing facilities with the application of improved standards has been provided in addition to new construction.

2. Minor construction.—Provision is made for construction of permanent and temporary projects that are not otherwise authorized by law but which are determined to be urgently required and do not exceed $300 thousand per project for the Active forces and $50 thousand per project for the Reserve component projects. An Active force project may be accomplished without determination of urgency if the savings in maintenance and operations cost are estimated to exceed the cost of the project within 3 years after project completion. Maintenance and operations funds may be used where the estimated cost of an Active force project is $50 thousand or less. Continuing authorization is available for this purpose under the provisions of 10 U.S.C. 2674.

3. Planning.—This provides for necessary planning of military construction projects, including design, standards, criteria, studies, appraisals, and other related activities. Authorization for requisite planning activities is provided by 31 U.S.C. 723.

4. Supporting activities.—Provision is made for activities such as the defense access road program and minor land acquisition. These activities are authorized under the provisions of 23 U.S.C. 210 and 10 U.S.C. 2672, respectively.

tion. An appropriation of $1,342.3 million is requested for 1975, of which $403.9 million is for construction of new housing, construction of mobile home facilities, improvement of existing housing and related projects, and $938.4 million is for the operation and maintenance of family housing and related facilities, for leasing of family housing, for payments required on the indebtedness assumed to acquire Capehart and Wherry housing, and to build surplus commodity housing in foreign countries and for authorized payments of servicemen's mortgage insurance premiums.

This fund finances a program for reducing the losses of military personnel and civilian employees incident to disposition of their one- or two-family dwellings when military installations are closed or when reductions in the scope of operations are ordered. Eligible personnel may be reimbursed for certain losses resulting from the sale of their dwellings located at or near such installations, or the Department of Defense may acquire such property. Proceeds from sale or rental of such property are deposited in this fund. The following business-type statements reflect operations of the program which started in 1968.

This fund represents advances received for goods or services furnished foreign governments and private parties (31 U.S.C. 643). Authorized individuals and organizations requesting goods or services are required to advance amounts to cover the estimated cost to this fund. Changes in the Navy accounting system will permit the discontinuation of this fund in 1975.

Intragovernmental funds:

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE STOCK FUNDS

By authority of 10 U.S.C. 2208, the Department of Defense stock funds finance the acquisition of inventories of consumable materials and supplies (items which are uneconomical to repair) for resale to the military services and other authorized customers. These inventories are stocked and sold at defense activities worldwide. The stock funds also finance inventories of consumable material for use in case of mobilization.

Budget program.—Obligations increase in 1974 and 1975 as inventory approaches balance with required stock levels. Year-end inventories are estimated as shown below (in millions of dollars):

Financing the budget program.—Funds for financing the budget program are usually derived from sales to customers. During 1973, reductions of inventory levels and sales of inventory capitalized without cost generated an excess working capital balance of $694 million which was transferred to other appropriations. In 1974, an additional excess $125 million is programmed for transfer. Expenditures in 1975 are projected to increase by $1,007 million from 1974 resulting from significant price increases in materials purchased. Yearly expenditures are estimated as shown below (in millions of dollars):

	Gross expenditures
	1973 actual	1974 estimate	1975 estimate
Army stock fund.....	2,653	3,119	3,179

Defense stock fund.....	2,213	4,056	4,611
Total DOD stock funds.....	9,896	13,018	14,025

DOD stock funds are authorized to incur obligations in anticipation of future years sales (10 U.S.C. 2210(b)). This is necessary because the procurement leadtime on material is greater than the time required to fill and collect for customer orders. Pursuant to this authority, contract authority of $1,009 million was available at the end of 1973, increasing to $1,042 million in 1975.

Operating results and financial condition.—Net losses of $124 million and $113 million are forecast for 1974 and 1975 respectively. These losses result largely from disposal and donation of excess and surplus inventory.

Investment (equity) of the U.S. Government at the end of 1975 is estimated at $8,970 million; including $20,391 million in inventory and other assets capitalized less $7,031 million in working capital transferred out and a cumulative operating deficit of $4,390 million.

Budget program.—Estimated total costs of goods and services produced in 1975 are projected to increase by $293 million, reflecting an increase in support requirements. Year end totals are shown in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

	1973 actual	1974 estimate	1975 estimate
Army industrial fund.....	1,417,490	1,712,795	1,758,987
Navy industrial fund.....	4,855,992	4,854,493	4,931,075
Marine Corps industrial fund.....	20,514	22,187	22,212
Air Force industrial fund.....	2,136,043	2,240,134	2,386,333
Defense industrial fund.....	396,731	415,850	439,844
Total.....	8,826,770	9,245,459	9,538,451

The U.S. Army activities financed through the Army industrial fund include depot supply and maintenance activities, research activities, arsenals, the U.S. Army Missile Command and the Eastern and Western areas of the Military Traffic Management and Terminal Service. The Deseret test center will be discontinued as an Army industrial fund research activity after 1974. The large increase in production costs from 1973 reflects the expansion of the fund to include depot supply operations and an acceleration in depot maintenance operations to reduce accumulated backlogs.

The Navy industrial fund finances a wide variety of activities including aircraft rework facilities, ordnance stations, research laboratories, shipyards, strategic systems project offices, printing plants, public work centers and the Military Sealift Command. Hunters Point Naval Shipyard and Quonset Point Naval Air Rework Facility will be disestablished in 1974 and Boston Naval Shipyard will be closed in 1975. Production costs are higher in 1975 as a result of increased funding for research activities and for the Military Sealift Command.

The Marine Corps industrial fund finances maintenance depots engaged in repairing or overhauling Marine Corps equipment and providing technical engineering support. The cost of operations is projected to remain relatively level over the three year period.

The activities financed under the Air Force industrial fund include printing plants, laundries, depot maintenance activities, and the Military Airlift Command. During 1973 two laundry activities were removed from the fund, with an additional eight facilities closed at the beginning of 1974. Higher in-house operating costs, increased contractual services costs and the rise in price of aviation fuel all contribute to the increase in the costs of goods and services produced during the estimate period.

The Defense industrial fund finances the Defense Clothing and Textile Supply Center and leased communications procured by the Defense Commercial Communications Office. An increase in the costs of goods and services produced in 1975 results from the commercial leasing of satellite services prior to the implementation of a new government satellite system.

1. Operation and maintenance.—A total of 3,050 interments are projected for 1975. There will be 574 developed acres in 1975 to be maintained.

2. Construction and 3. Headstone procurement.—Complete responsibility for these activities has been transferred to the Veterans Administration.

4. Administration.—This activity provides for the management of the two cemeteries.

5. Special construction, Arlington National Cemetery.—Improvements to roads and the electrical distribution system will be made in 1975.

1. Surveys.—Navigation and flood control studies are made to determine the need and economic justification for proposed water and related land resource developments. Beach erosion control studies are undertaken to determine the need for shore protection and remedial measures at specific localities. Funds are provided in 1975 to continue 181 studies. Three new studies will be undertaken, placing major emphasis on the solution of urgent urban area water problems.

Comprehensive river basin studies provide for broad consideration of water and related land resource needs of river basins. They are coordinated with the related river basin planning efforts of the Departments of the Interior and Agriculture and other concerned agencies.

Work will be continued in 1975 on the following comprehensive basin studies:

- |  |  |
|--|--|
| 1. Hawaii framework                          | 5. Pacific Northwest River Basins                          |
| 2. Long Island Sound Region, Conn. and N.Y.  | Idaho, Mont., Ore., and Wash.                              |
| 3. Maumee River Basin, Ohio, Ind., and Mich. | 6. Platte River Basin, Nebr.                               |
| 4. Minneapolis-St. Paul Metro Area, Minn.    | 7. Southeastern New England Region, Mass., Conn., and R.I. |

In addition, funds are provided for preparation of authorization reports on the following:

- |   |  |
|---|--|
| 1. Big Muddy River Basin, Ill.                          | 5. Susquehanna River Basin, N.Y., Pa., and Md. |

| 4. Puget Sound Region, Wash.                            |  |

Special studies are made to resolve unique or especially complex water resources problems. Funds are requested to continue six special studies.

Funds are provided to restudy one authorized project now carried in a deferred category.

Funds also are provided, in accordance with the Flood Control Act of 1970, to review the operation of completed projects constructed by the Corps of Engineers when found advisable due to significantly changed physical or economic conditions and recommendations are made to Congress for desirable modifications.

Surveys are made in coordination with Federal, State, and local agencies and interests. They give appropriate consideration to present and future requirements for all beneficial uses of water and related land resources, including navigation, flood control, water supply, irrigation, water quality control, power, recreation, and fish and wildlife conservation.

2. Collection and study of basic data.—Funds are transferred to the Geological Survey for installation, operation, and maintenance of stream gaging stations; to the National Weather Service for hydrometeorological studies; and to the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife for preauthorization studies of the effects of proposed projects upon fish and wildlife. The Corps of Engineers participates on a number of engineering and control boards that study and control international streams mutually affecting the United States and Canada. Information about the flood hazard, advice, and assistance are furnished to the States and local governmental agencies, upon their request, and to other Federal agencies for guidance in the management of flood plain areas to assure the best and safest use of such areas. General hydrologic and related studies are made to assist in optimizing the design, construction, and operation of projects. Scientific and technical information centers prepare and distribute literature to scientists and engineers to improve their knowledge of new developments in their fields

3. Research and development.—These studies are conducted to improve procedures for analyzing engineering data; to improve procedures used in formulating plans for water resources development and management; to refine design techniques; and to develop better materials and practices for the construction, operation, and maintenance of water resources facilities. The current program of studies comprises investigations in the areas of: Materials, primarily soils, rock, concrete, and material interactions; coastal engineering, including wave mechanics, coastal processes, coastal construction, and inlets and estuaries; flood control and navigation, including harbors, waterways, locks and dams, improvement of operation and maintenance techniques, and hydrologic engineering; environmental quality, including environmental impact and water quality; and planning methodology, including advanced planning and planning alternatives.

1 Advance engineering and design only.

The requested appropriation of $928 million is a decrease of $54 million from the appropriation for 1974, and a decrease of $276 million compared with the appropriation for 1973. About 64% of the requested appropriation will be applied to 54 major projects in amounts of $5 million or more each.

1. Advance engineering and design.—Design studies establish project features and cost estimates required for preparation of contract plans. The funds requested will bring designs and plans for a limited number of high priority projects to the stage where they will be ready for construction, and will permit continuation or initiation of planning on other needed projects.

2. Navigation projects.—This activity includes construction of locks, dams, and canals, and improvement of channels and harbors by dredging and by construction of breakwaters, jetties, and dikes. Provision is also made for construction of small navigation projects not requiring specific congressional authority.

With the funds requested, work will be continued in 1975 on 14 lock, dam, and canal projects and on 33 channel and harbor projects, of which 9 will be completed. Construction will be initiated on the following:

CHANNEL AND HARBOR PROJECTS

1. Tampa Harbor (main channel), Fla.
2. Calcasieu River at Devils Elbow, La.
3. Frenchboro Harbor, Maine
4. Morehead City Harbor, N.C.

3. Beach erosion control projects.—The Federal Government assists in the construction of works for the restoration and protection against erosion by waves and currents of the shores of the United States and its possessions. Existing law provides for Federal payment of 50% of the cost of beach erosion control works for the protection of non-Federal publicly owned or publicly used shores, and up to 70% of the cost of protection of State and other publicly owned shore parks and conservation areas that meet certain criteria. The construction of small beach erosion control projects not requiring specific congressional authority will be financed from funds appropriated in prior years.

Funds are requested for seven beach erosion projects. Four are for continuing construction and three are for reimbursements to local interests.

4. Flood control projects.—This activity includes local protection projects and reservoirs for flood control and other purposes, such as water supply, but without power installations. Local protection projects consist of channel improvements, levees, and floodwalls. Provision is made for emergency bank protection. The construction of small flood control projects not requiring specific congressional authority, and snagging and clearing work on navigable streams and tributaries when such work is necessary, will be financed from funds appropriated in prior years.

With the funds requested, work will be continued on 64 local protection projects, of which 5 will be completed with 1975 funds; and on 73 reservoir projects, of which 6 will be completed. Construction will be initiated on the following:

LOCAL PROTECTION PROJECTS

- 1. Kaneohe-Kailua, Hawaii
- 2. Bettendorf, Iowa

RESERVOIR PROJECT

- 1. Lakeview Lake, Tex.

5. Multiple-purpose projects, including power.—Work will be continued on 33 multiple-purpose projects with power installations, of which 5 will be completed.

6. Recreation facilities at completed projects.—A total of $25 million is included: $20 million for projects to be developed under a policy requiring local cost-sharing comparable to that now required for the recreation features of all new projects, and $5 million to remedy sanitary deficiencies.

7. Land acquisition fund.—This fund, established in 1971, permits the acquisition of lands required for authorized Federal projects in those cases where delay creates an extreme hardship on owners or causes an unusual escalation of project land costs. This activity will be continued in 1975 with available funds.

8. Small authorized projects.—Activities in 1975 will be financed from funds appropriated in prior years.

9. Fish and wildlife studies.—This program provides for detailed studies and reports by the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife to determine the effects on fish and wildlife resources of water-control projects of the Corps of Engineers.

10. Rehabilitation.—Rehabilitation work is undertaken on existing projects that have deteriorated to the extent that their usefulness has been impaired. Work will be continued on one navigation project, John Hollis Bankhead Lock and Dam, Ala., (lock replacement), and will start on one multiple-purpose project, Wolf Creek Dam, Lake Cumberland, Ky.

11. Aquatic plant control.—This program is for the control and progressive eradication of water hyacinths, alligator-weed, Eurasian watermilfoil, and other obnoxious aquatic plant growths from navigable waters, tributaries, connecting channels, and other allied waters of the United States, in the interest of navigation, flood control, drainage, agriculture, fish and wildlife conservation, public health, and related purposes. The authority includes research to develop the most effective and economic control measures.

The Corps of Engineers—Civil is responsible for the flood control program for the lower Mississippi Valley from Cape Girardeau, Mo., to the Gulf of Mexico, including the main alluvial stream, the basins of the St. Francis and White, lower Arkansas, Yazoo, Tensas, and Atchafalaya Rivers, and Bayou La Fourche, and the alluvial lands around Lake Pontchartrain. The adopted plan calls for raising and strengthening about 1,600 miles of existing levees along the main river, for enlarging or constructing some 1,700 miles of levees on tributaries and in side basins, for channel improvement by bank stabilization from Head of Passes, La., to Cairo, Ill., and by dredging a navigation channel 12 feet deep and 300 feet wide from Baton Rouge, La., to Cairo, Ill., and for five flood detention reservoirs on minor tributaries.

1. General investigations.—Eleven studies will be continued, of which four will be completed with 1975 funds. Basic data subsequently used in planning and designing projects are collected.

2. Advance engineering and design.—Funds are requested to continue planning on two features.

3. Construction.—The total cost of flood control and related improvements in the lower Mississippi River and its alluvial valley is estimated at $4,597 million, of which $1,933 million has been appropriated through 1974. The funds requested will be applied to continuation of 12 features.

4. Maintenance.—Provision is made for operation and maintenance of major features of the project.

The Panama Canal Company is a wholly owned Government corporation whose primary purpose is maintaining and operating the interoceanic canal at the Isthmus of Panama, together with its essential supporting operations.

The administration of the Company is integrated with that of the Canal Zone Government, an independent agency initially financed by appropriations. The Governor of the Canal Zone is ex officio president of the Company. The Company is expected to be self-sustaining and is required to reimburse the U.S. Treasury for the net cost of the Canal Zone Government, the cost of interest on the net direct investment of the United States in the Company, and for annuity payments made by the United States to the Republic of Panama pursuant to the treaty of 1903, as amended in 1936.

The Company held negotiable U.S. Government securities and Republic of Panama securities in the face amount of $4.2 million at June 30, 1973, which were deposited by customers and Panamanian insurance firms to guarantee contract performance and payment of tolls and other charges. In addition, the Company held on behalf of the Canal Zone Government negotiable securities in the face amount of $0.7 million to guarantee payment of possible judgments against insurance companies operating in the Canal Zone.

Effective May 9, 1969, the Company entered into a 25-year contract with Instituto de Recursos Hidraulicos y Electricacion, an autonomous agency of the Republic of Panama, for the purchase of electric power to be produced by that agency. Effective September 1, 1972, by mutual agreement, the contract was suspended for a period of 3 years. As of June 30, 1973, the Company's total minimum liability over the remaining period of the contract amounted to about $32 million.

Under provisions of a lease agreement with U.S. Army Forces Southern Command, the Company is also liable for an indefinite period in the amount of $0.9 million a year for minimum annual usage of electrical energy produced by the power barges Sturgis and Weber.

NOTES

Includes $4,284 thousand in 1975 for activities previously financed from other accounts. Comparable amounts for 1973 and 1974 are $4,100 thousand.

Includes $116,500 thousand in 1974 and 1975 for activities previously financed from other accounts. Comparable amount for 1973 is $116,500 thousand.

Excludes $18,890 thousand in 1975 for activities transferred to other accounts. Comparable amounts for 1973 ($15,414 thousand), 1974 ($18,801 thousand), are included above.

Excludes $634 thousand in 1974 and 1975 for activities transferred to other accounts.

Comparable amounts for 1973 ($603 thousand) are included above.

This appropriation includes activities which support the provision of personal health care services directly to Federal beneficiaries or indirectly through project and formula grants. This is accomplished through the following activities:

1. Community health services.—Community health centers project grants are a means of upgrading and expanding ambulatory health services, primarily in medically underserved areas.

In addition, there are 39 family health centers located in 31 States and the District of Columbia serving 105,000 people.

Comprehensive health grants to States are made to State health authorities to assist the States in establishing and maintaining adequate public health services in accord with priorities and goals established by the States.

The maternal and child health program has as its major goal the provision of health services to mothers and children, especially in rural and urban poverty areas. In 1975 approximately 520,000 women will receive prenatal and postpartum care in maternity clinics. Training grants are made for training personnel for health care and related services for mothers and children. Research grants are awarded to improve maternal and child health or crippled children's services and to study the effectiveness of such programs.

The family planning program supports project grants and contracts for family planning information and services.

The migrant health program provides access to primary health care services for migrant agricultural laborers and seasonal farmworkers and their families in order to improve and maintain the level of their health relative to that of the general population. In 1975, 355,000 persons are expected to receive services.

The Health Maintenance Organizations program is designed to promote the orderly development and expansion of HMO's through technical and financial assistance to demonstrate the value of this health care option. Grants and contracts will be available only to public or nonprofit HMO's.

The National Health Service Corps provides health professionals to communities which have been designated as critical health manpower shortage areas. In 1975, the program will support approximately 531 health professionals in about 245 communities, an increase of 45 communities over the 1974 level.

1. Research.—(a) Cause and prevention research.—Research is conducted on ways to reduce the effectiveness of external agents for producing cancer, to minimize the risk of cancer development in individuals, to prevent transformation of normal cells to cancer cells, and to prevent the progression of the disease and its spread from primary sites.

(b) Detection and diagnosis research.—Research is conducted to develop the means to detect the presence, extent, and probable course of existing cancers; to assess the risk of developing cancer in groups and in individuals, including the development and clinical testing of sensitive detection and diagnosis procedures and epidemiological studies.

(c) Treatment research.—Research is conducted to develop the means to cure cancer patients and to control the progress of cancers. The range of research is from surgery, radiation, chemotherapy, immunotherapy, and combination therapies, to research on new sources of chemical agents for use in cancer treatment, to the refinement of patient followup to determine the most beneficial kinds of treatment.

(d) Cancer biology.—Cancer biology studies cover a broad range of basic research in cancer that is not identified with any one of the other research activities.

2. Resource development.—(a) Cancer centers support.—Exploratory projects and core grants are provided to cancer centers. Research conducted at centers is supported from the applicable research efforts in cause and prevention, detection and diagnosis, treatment, and cancer biology. Exploratory projects are designed to determine the feasibility of establishing cancer centers and to support planning efforts. Core grants support the administration, common services and collaborative activities of cancer centers.

(b) Research manpower development.—This activity supports research training and education in scientific fields related to cancer research.

(c) Construction.—In 1975 construction funds will be used only for modernization and renovation of existing space for cancer laboratory and clinical research purposes.

3. Cancer control.—This activity is to bridge the gap between discovery of effective research findings and their application in the practice of medicine and public health by supporting specialized demonstration activities, including education and training programs.
