

APPENDIX

THE
UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT
FISCAL YEAR 1977

THE BUDGET DOCUMENTS

Data and analyses relating to the budget for 1977 are published in four documents:

The Budget of the United States Government, 1977 contains the information that most users of the budget would normally need, including the Budget Message of the President. The Budget presents an overview of the President's budget proposals and includes explanations of spending programs and estimated receipts. This document also contains a description of the budget system and various summary tables on the budget as a whole. (Price $3.45.)

The Budget of the United States Government, 1977—Appendix contains detailed information on the various appropriations and funds which comprise the budget.

The Appendix contains more detailed information than any of the other budget documents. It includes for each agency: the proposed text of appropriation language, budget schedules for each account, explanations of the work to be performed and the funds needed, proposed general provisions applicable to the appropriations of entire agencies or groups of agencies, and schedules of permanent positions. Supplementals, budget amendments, and rescissions for the current year and new legislative proposals are presented separately. Information is also provided on certain activities, whose outlays are not part of the budget totals. (Price $19.20.)

Special Analyses, Budget of the United States Government, 1977 contains 17 special analyses that are designed to highlight specified program areas or provide other significant presentations of Federal budget data.

This document includes analytical information about: Government finances and operations as a whole and how they affect the economy; Government-wide program and financial information for Federal education, training and employment, health, income security, civil rights, and crime reduction programs; trends and developments in the areas of Federal aid to State and local governments, research and development, and environmental protection. (Price $2.70.)

The United States Budget in Brief, 1977 provides a more concise, less technical overview of the 1977 Budget than the above volumes. Summary and historical tables on the Federal budget and debt are also provided, together with graphic displays. (Price $1.15.)

EXPLANATION OF ESTIMATES

Part I contains various tables and certain schedules in support of the budget, explanatory statements of the work to be performed and the money needed, and the text of the language proposed for enactment by Congress on each item for which congressional action in an appropriation bill is required. It also contains the text of general provisions proposed for enactment by the Congress, which apply to entire agencies or groups of agencies.

ARRANGEMENT

The chapters of Part I reflect the branches of Government, and the major departments and agencies of the executive branch. For the latter, most smaller agencies are grouped in one chapter—"Other independent agencies."

Within each chapter there are three main sections. The first section covers programs authorized by existing legislation (including items for which extension or renewal of existing legislation is requested). This section is organized by major subordinate organizations within the agency (usually bureaus). For each bureau, Federal funds, covering the funds owned by the Government, precede trust funds, covering moneys which are held by the Government in accounts established by law or by trust agreement. Generally, accounts with new budget authority in 1977 will precede those without such an entry.

The second major section of each chapter covers the legislative program which reflects the budget estimates for proposed new legislation. This section is also arranged by bureau or other major subordinate organization. The proposals are applicable to Federal funds unless otherwise indicated.

The third section of each chapter includes the general provisions of appropriation language which are applicable to the agency in that chapter, and are in addition to the specific language pertaining to individual appropriation items. General provisions which apply to specified groups of agencies are placed in the chapter covering the first agency which appears in the respective appropriation act. The general provisions which are Government-wide in scope (identified "Departments, Agencies, and Corporations"), normally contained in the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government Appropriation Act, are placed at the end of the Executive Office of the President chapter.

An explanation of the types of funds included in the budget may be found in Part 6 of the compact volume—The Budget of the United States Government, 1977.

FORM OF DETAILED MATERIAL

APPROPRIATION LANGUAGE

The language proposed for inclusion in the 1977 appropriation acts is printed following the account title. The language of the 1976 (and transition quarter) appropriation acts, printed in roman type, is used as a base. Italic type indicates proposed new language. Brackets enclose material which is proposed for omission. (When an appropriation has not been enacted at the time the budget is submitted, the language relates only to 1977 and is italicized with no brackets shown). An illustration of proposed appropriation language for 1977 follows:

ADMINISTRATIVE AND OPERATING EXPENSES

For administrative and operating expenses, [$11,940,000]
$12,000,000.

[For "Administrative and Operating Expenses" for the period July 1, 1976, through September 30, 1976, $2,985,000.] (7 U.S.C. 1501-1520; 31 U.S.C. 841, 846-852, 866-868c, 869; Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1976.)

Enacted supplemental appropriations for 1976 are shown as bracketed separate paragraphs following the paragraph of language proposed for 1977. Enacted appropriations for the transition quarter (July 1, 1976, through September 30, 1976) appear in brackets in a separate paragraph (or paragraphs—if transition quarter supplementals have been enacted) immediately following the appropriation language paragraph for 1977.

At the end of the final language paragraph, and printed in italics within parentheses, are citations to any relevant authorizing legislation and to the appropriation act from which the basic text of the 1977 language is taken. In addition, citations to enacted supplemental appropriations are included.

BASIS FOR SCHEDULES

The 1975 column of this budget generally presents the actual transactions and balances for that year, as recorded in agency accounts.

The amounts for 1976 and the transition quarter include new budget authority actually made available by the Congress or pending before the Congress.

As of the time of transmittal of this budget (January 1976) the regular appropriation bills for Defense; Labor-Health, Education, and Welfare; Foreign Assistance; and the District of Columbia have not been enacted. The projects and activities covered by these bills were authorized to receive continuing appropriations through the period July 1, 1975, through March 31, 1976. The amounts shown in the 1976 and transition quarter columns generally reflect the President's requests for those periods; the Defense amounts reflect the conference report adopted by the House and pending before the Senate. In some of the accounts covered by the Labor-Health, Education, and Welfare and Foreign Assistance bills, amendments to pending 1976 and transition quarter requests are also included in the regular program and financing schedules. An explanation and any necessary appropriation language is included in Part III.

The regular schedules also include those supplemental appropriation requests that are needed to meet the increased costs of statutory and wage-board pay raises. When the regular appropriation has been enacted, requests—either pending before the Congress or included in this budget—for supplemental appropriations other than for pay, are covered by brief program and financing schedules in Part III. For those supplemental estimates that are being transmitted for consideration with the 1977 budget (amendments to unenacted 1976 appropriations, pay supplementals identified in the regular schedules in Part I, and separate schedules in Part III headed: "Supplemental now requested"), the proposed appropriation language is also included in Part III. In addition, requests pending before the Congress to rescind enacted budget authority are identified in brief program and financing schedules in Part III. Appropriation language for these rescissions was included in the respective special messages transmitted to the Congress in accordance with the Impoundment Control Act of 1974.

The 1977 column of the regular schedules includes proposed appropriations for recommended extension or renewal of expiring laws. However, amounts for proposed new legislation are shown in separate schedules, generally under the legislative program section of each chapter. Appropriation language is included with the regular schedules, but not with the separate schedules.

Where the required data are available in the accounting systems, budgets are presented in terms of costs. Detailed operating cost figures for each activity or object are the value of goods and services consumed in carrying out the program. In the case of capital outlay programs, costs shown are the value of assets acquired.

Total obligations are always shown; activities and objects are reflected on an obligation basis where cost data are not available. Obligations refer to orders placed, contracts awarded, loan agreements made, and recurring services (such as rent, utilities, and personal services) received during the year, regardless of the time of payment.

For a few Government corporations, the detail and the totals of their budget presentations are on the basis of accrued expenditures.

SCHEDULE OF PROGRAM AND FINANCING

This schedule consists of three parts. In the "Program by activities" section, costs or obligations are classified by purpose, program, type of activity, or project for 1975, 1976, the transition quarter, and 1977. This classification is developed for each appropriation or fund, and is not uniform on a Government-wide basis. Similarly, the identification of capital outlay is not handled uniformly. Where it is of significance, capital outlay is shown by activity. Otherwise, the total for each year is disclosed by footnote.

Where budgets are presented in terms of costs, the relation of costs to obligations is summarized in an entry "Change in selected resources."

In certain cases, this schedule is expanded to include additional columns that provide a more informative presentation. This is done, for example, in some construction or procurement programs to show related cost data; for certain Defense items, to identify the total obligations programmed; and for programs financed at a preobligation stage (such as commitments in some loan programs).

The "Financing" section shows the sources of funds, budget authority, and other means of financing the program, and the disposition of unobligated amounts not used during the year.

The section on "Relation of obligations to outlays" shows obligations net of receipts and other offsets, obligated balances at the start and end of the year, and other items which affect the relation of obligations to outlays.

The account identification code, found at the head of the program and financing schedule, facilitates computer processing of budgetary information. The last three digits of this code represent the functional category to which this account is classified. Functional classification permits presentation of budget outlays according to the major purposes to be served, rather than the organization administering the program or the account under which the funds are made available. For example, the 351 on the above schedule represents Farm income regulation—a subfunction within major function 350; Agriculture. In those few cases where the outlays from an account are split between two or more categories, a functional code of 999 is used. The individual functional categories are identified with each appropriation or fund account in the Budget Accounts Listing in Part 7 of the budget.

NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The work planned and services proposed to be carried out are described briefly in a narrative statement for each appropriation or fund. Where practicable, the narrative statement presents accomplishments in relation to financial requirements, and available measures of program and performance.

SCHEDULE OF OBJECT CLASSIFICATION AND PERSONNEL SUMMARY

There is shown for each account a classification of obligations, costs, or accrued expenditures according to the following uniform list of object classifications:

10 PERSONAL SERVICES AND BENEFITS	26 Supplies and materials
11 Personnel compensation	30 ACQUISITION OF CAPITAL ASSETS
12 Personnel benefits	31 Equipment
13 Benefits for former personnel	32 Lands and structures

22 Transportation of things	41 Grants, subsidies, and contributions
23 Rent, communications, and utilities	42 Insurance claims and indemnities
24 Printing and reproduction	43 Interest and dividends
25 Other services	44 Refunds

These object classes reflect the nature of the things or services purchased, regardless of the purpose of the program for which they are used. Data according to this classification are illustrated in the following schedule:

99.0 Total obligations	12,002	12,000	3,110	12,000

Several of the object classes are broken down into sub-classes—personnel compensation, for example, is shown separately for permanent positions, for positions other than permanent, and for certain other payments.

Generally, a personnel summary follows the object classification schedule, as illustrated:

Personnel Summary
	1975 act.	1976 est.	TQ est.	1977 est.
Total number of permanent positions	575	580		580
Full-time equivalent of other positions	87	25		17
Average paid employment	627	570		566
Average GS grade	7.81	8.27		8.40
Average GS salary	$14,064	$15,468		$15,919

Permanent positions are those that are established or occupied for a year or more. The nature of the position governs. Thus a permanent position may be occupied by an employee whose appointment is either temporary or permanent in nature. These positions may be full-time (full workweek) or part-time (less than a full workweek).

Average grades and salaries are computed arithmetically. Thus the average salary can fall outside the salary range of the average grade.

STATEMENT OF REVENUE AND EXPENSE

For many revolving funds there is a statement of revenue and expense that shows the resulting net income or loss for the year. This statement is usually on a full accrual basis including provision for depreciation, for losses on receivables, etc.

Revenue and Expense (in thousands of dollars)
	1975 act.	1976 est.	TQ est.	1977 est.

Net nonoperating income	2,869	5,426	1,516	7,038
Net income for the period	11,053	15,634	4,280	20,144

STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL CONDITION

For each fund showing a revenue and expense statement, there is also presented a balance sheet for assets, liabilities, and equity of the Government at the close of each year. This balance sheet excludes balances of appropriations and borrowing authorizations which have not yet been paid into the revolving fund. Because the balance sheet is on an accrual basis, the "Liabilities" section does not reflect obligations incurred for which the liability has not accrued. Nor does the "Assets" section reflect unfilled customer orders received, even though such orders are a basis for obligation in the case of intragovernmental revolving funds. The "Government equity" section therefore, shows obligations (which have not yet become accrued liabilities), the unobligated balance, unfilled customer orders on hand (where relevant), and invested capital and earnings.

The last section of the balance sheet is an "Analysis of Changes in Government Equity." This section sets forth for paid-in capital and retained income, as appropriate, the beginning balance, transactions (changes) during the year, and the balance at the end of the year.

BUDGETS NOT SUBJECT TO REVIEW

The presentations herein for the Legislative Branch, the Judiciary, the Comptroller of the Currency in the Treasury Department, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Milk Market Orders Assessment Fund of the Department of Agriculture, the Farm Credit Administration, and most of the annexed budgets have been included, without review, in the amounts submitted by the agencies.

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN BUDGET TABLES AND APPENDIX TABLES

INTRAGOVERNMENTAL TRANSACTIONS

The consolidation of Government-administered funds in the compact budget volume may cause duplication in the totals. This occurs when the payment from one of the fund groups (Federal or trust) is credited to a receipt account in the other, or when a payment from a Government agency excluded from the budget totals (annexed budgets) is credited to a budgetary receipt account and appropriated therefrom. In order to avoid duplication, intragovernmental transactions (i.e., intrabudgetary transactions and receipts from Federal agencies outside the budget totals) are deducted from the aggregates of both budget authority and outlays.

PROPRIETARY RECEIPTS FROM THE PUBLIC

The compact budget volume generally offsets against outlays for each agency and function the receipts from the public which are market-oriented or are mainly payments for goods and services, regardless of the fund structure. The Appendix continues the conventional practice of offsetting in the individual schedules only those amounts received that are earmarked by law for use in revolving funds, or as reimbursements to appropriations or other funds.

[ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISION]

[The third paragraph under the heading "Office of the Architect of the Capitol" and the sub-heading "Salaries" in the Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1960 (73 Stat. 407), as amended by section 214(p) of Public Law 90-206 (81 Stat. 638), is amended by striking out "one position" under the appropriation "Capitol Buildings" and inserting in lieu thereof "two positions" under the appropriation "Capitol Buildings".] (Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1976.)

[ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISION]

[SEC. 501. (a) Whenever—

(1) the law of any State provides for the collection of an income tax by imposing upon employers generally the duty of withholding sums from the compensation of employees and remitting such sums to the authorities of such State; and

(2) such duty to withhold is imposed generally with respect to the compensation of employees who are residents of such State; then the Architect of the Capitol is authorized, in accordance with the provisions of this section, to enter into an agreement with the appropriate official of that State to provide for the withholding and remittance of sums for individuals—

(A) employed by the Office of the Architect of the Capitol, the United States Botanic Garden, or the Senate Restaurant; and

(B) who request the Architect to make such withholdings for remittance to that State.

(b) Any agreement entered into under subsection (a) of this section shall not require the Architect to remit such sums more often than once each calendar quarter.

(c)(1) An individual employed by the Office of the Architect of the Capitol, the United States Botanic Garden, or the Senate Restaurant may request the Architect to withhold sums from his pay for remittance to the appropriate authorities of the State that he designates. Amounts of withholdings shall be made in accordance with those provisions of the law of that State which apply generally to withholding by employers.

(2) An individual may have in effect at any time only one request for withholdings, and he may not have more than two such requests in effect with respect to different States during any one calendar year. The request for withholdings is effective on the first day of the first pay period commencing on or after the day on which the request is received in the Office of the Architect, the Botanic Garden Office, or the Senate Restaurant Accounting Office except that—

(A) when the Architect first enters into an agreement with a State, a request for withholdings shall be effective on such date as the Architect may determine; and

(B) when an individual first receives an appointment, the request shall be effective on the day of appointment, if the individual makes the request at the time of appointment.

(3) An individual may change the State designated by him for the purposes of having withholdings made and request that the withholdings be remitted in accordance with such change, and he may also revoke his request for withholdings. Any change in the State designated or revocation is effective on the first day of the first pay period commencing on or after the day on which the request for change or the revocation is received in the appropriate office.

(4) The Architect is authorized to issue rules and regulations he considers appropriate in carrying out this subsection.

(d) The Architect may enter into agreements under subsection (a) of this section at such time or times as he considers appropriate.

(e) This section imposes no duty, burden, or requirement upon the United States, or any officer or employee of the United States, except as specifically provided in this section. Nothing in this section shall be deemed to consent to the application of any provision of law which has the effect of subjecting the United States, or any officer or employee of the United States to any penalty or liability by reason of the provisions of this section.

(f) For the purposes of this section, "State" means any of the States of the United States. (Legislative Branch Appropriation Act, 1976.)

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

The Library of Congress, established in 1800, is not only the library of the Congress itself, but is also the principal general library of the Government of the United States. Its collections are comprehensive and varied, and include outstanding collections of books, periodicals, newspapers, documents of the national governments of the world, literature in the oriental languages, et cetera, and manuscripts, maps, music, motion picture films, sound recordings, prints, and photographs. In addition to maintenance of the collections and the rendering of the general and basic services connected therewith, including the Congressional Research Service, certain specialized functions are performed: registration of copyrights, catalog card distribution, and the service of the books in raised characters and talking books to the blind. In terms of these broad fields of activity comparative obligations (including only those chargeable to annual appropriations) for 1975 and estimated for 1976, transition quarter and 1977 are (in thousands of dollars):

The Library's first obligation is to the Congress; the second, to other agencies of the Government; and the third, to other libraries, scholars, investigators, and the general public.

In addition to funds appropriated annually by Congress, there are also available a number of gift and trust funds, and working funds.

Estimates for the physical equipment, maintenance, and operation of those Library buildings located on Capitol Hill are carried under the request of the Architect of the Capitol.

1. Acquisition of library materials.—The Library's collections are developed in accordance with established acquisition policies: materials are obtained by purchase, gift, exchange, copyright deposit, transfer and official deposit; and materials are selected for addition to the permanent collections. The objective for 1977 is continued improvement in acquisition coverage and procedures. The collections totaled 70,537,778 items as of June 30, 1975, and consisted of 17,454,995 books and pamphlets; 31,722,263 manuscript pieces and 21,360,520 maps, pieces of music, reels of microfilm, photographs, and other miscellaneous items. In fiscal year 1975, 1,259,704 items were added to the permanent collections and 417,222 items were withdrawn. 2. Organization of the collections.—Library materials are cataloged for ready retrieval and are classified for systematic arrangement on the shelves of the collection. Card catalogs are maintained. Issues of serial publications are identified and recorded. Cataloging data is converted to machine readable form for use by the Library of Congress, other libraries, and cataloging service agencies. Systems of subject headings and classification are continuously developed for the Library's needs and for the nationwide library community.

Objectives in these activities for 1977 are to continue reductions in backlogs of cataloging and catalog maintenance operations and to continue the development of the machine readable cataloging data base.

Selected performance data for 1975 and estimates for 1976 and 1977—not including processing activities performed by the Reference Department and Law Library—are as follows:

3. Reader and reference services.—Books and other library materials are provided internally and outside the Library, reference and bibliographic assistance is rendered, and custody of the collections is maintained. The objective of this activity for 1977 is to continue to organize more material for use, to make it available to readers more readily, and to improve reference, bibliographic, and circulation services. The workload in major activities is expected to increase in 1976 and 1977 as follows:

Description	1975 act.	1976 est.	TQ est.	1977 est.

4. National program for acquisitions and cataloging.—The national program for acquisitions and cataloging—NPAC—is designed to acquire, catalog, and disseminate cataloging data on a timely basis for all current monographic works of research value in order to meet the needs of American libraries. The success of the program can be measured by the significant increase in the number of books cataloged: from 125,515 new titles in 1966 (first full year of NPAC funding) to 238,877 new titles in 1975. The availability and sharing of the current cataloging copy has resulted in substantial savings by libraries across the Nation well beyond the cost of the program.

The objectives of this activity in 1977 are the continuation of the basic program at its 1976 level, providing necessary catalog copy automatically and rapidly to college, university, and other research libraries which now rely primarily upon the Library of Congress for such cataloging. New program objectives in 1977 include completion of NPAC shared cataloging coverage of Europe where possible and the intensification of acquisition coverage of Latin American and Asian imprints.

5. Preservation of Library materials.—Library materials are preserved in their original format by being bound or rebound, or by a variety of conservation/restoration techniques. Materials are also preserved by converting them to a more durable form through such means as the microfilming of books and newspapers, by conversion of nitrate film to a safety base film, and by the conversion of deteriorating sound recordings to polyester tape. In addition, the Library conducts basic research into the many unsolved preservation problems encountered in dealing with millions of deteriorating books and other materials in the Library of Congress collections as well as in the other research libraries of the Nation.

6. General administration.—This activity supports the executive staff of the Office of the Librarian, and the Administrative Department, except for preservation of the collections activities. Included are funds for equipment rentals, staff for personnel and fiscal management, procurement, protective services, rental of space off Capitol Hill, and duplicating services.

The Copyright Office is responsible for recording copyright claims, assignments, and renewals, for supplying copyright information to the public, for collecting and accounting for copyright fees, and for printing complete and indexed catalogs for each class of copyright entries. The Office is conducted for the most part on a self-sustaining basis. The amount requested is substantially counterbalanced by fees received for services rendered and the value of books and other library materials deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act and transferred to the Library of Congress. The income and obligations for 1975 and estimates for 1976 and 1977 are as follows:

Income:

The effort described under each of the activities are predicated on an estimated 442,400 copyright registrations during 1977, an estimated 421,300 during 1976, and actual registration of 401,274 during 1975.

1. Receiving and accounting for applications, fees, and correspondence.—Materials received by the Copyright Office are assembled and routed; accounts are maintained for all moneys received; records relating to the registration of copyrights are filed; and materials are deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act. Performance data for 1975 and estimates for 1976 and 1977 are as follows:

	1975 act.	1976 est.	TQ est.	1977 est.
Registrations.....	401,274	421,300	105,325	442,400
Mail received and dispatched.....	915,426	961,000	240,250	1,009,000

2. Examining copyright applications.—All applications and deposits are examined before issuance of registration certificates or recordings of documents to determine whether the provisions of the Copyright Act have been satisfied. Performance data are as follows:

	1975 act.	1976 est.	TQ est.	1977 est.
Cases and documents examined.....	432,820	454,500	113,700	477,200

Letters written.....	60,479	63,500	15,900	66,700

3. Indexing and cataloging materials received.—The Register of Copyrights is required to print complete and indexed catalogs of all items registered. The catalog entries prepared by the Copyright Office are made available in part to the Library for its general operations. There were 460,218 items on hand and received during 1975, of which 426,134 were cataloged, leaving a balance at the end of the year of 34,084. It is estimated that for 1976 and 1977 the number of items to be cataloged will be 447,500 and 470,000 respectively.

4. Reference services.—The Copyright Office makes available to the public, information concerning the provisions of the Copyright Act, including procedures, policies, and rulings; information concerning registrations is furnished on a fee basis. Obtaining compliance with registration requirements is also part of this activity. Performance data are as follows:

	1975 act.	1976 est.	TQ est.	1977 est.
Titles searched.....	125,346	129,000	32,300	135,500
Letters and search reports written.....	38,637	39,800	10,000	41,000

5. Printing the catalog of copyright entries and bulletins of decisions.—Catalogs for each class of copyright entries and bulletins of copyright decisions are printed and made available to the public.

6. Microfilming the copyright records.—The original mission of this activity, to make a preservation microfilm copy of certain important early copyright records, will be completed in fiscal 1976. A permanent effort to accomplish the preservation microfilming of other important copyright records such as U.S. District Court Records of Copyright from 1790 to 1870 and to microfilm current copyright applications is to be established and conducted under this activity.

1. Policy analysis and research.—The Congressional Research Service provides analytical and consultative services to the Members and committees of Congress, assisting them in the analysis, appraisal, and evaluation of legislative issues and proposals, and of recommendations submitted to the Congress by the executive branch. Research services are also provided to assist Congress with its oversight, representative, and other responsibilities. Support comes in the form of background studies, in-depth policy analyses, consultations and briefings, legal research, assistance with committee hearings, and related data and materials. Lists of subjects and policy areas that a committee might profitably pursue are periodically made available to each congressional committee. These services are directed toward assisting Members and committees in determining the advisability of enacting legislative proposals, in estimating the probable results of such proposals and of alternatives to them, and in evaluating methods for accomplishing the results sought.

2. Documentation and status of legislation.—The Service periodically prepares and publishes for distribution to Members and committees the Digest of Public General Bills and Resolutions, which includes summaries of all public bills and resolutions introduced in Congress, the status of bills receiving action, and various pertinent indexes. The Service also makes available current and periodic reports that provide background and status information on major legislative issues before the Congress. Upon request, the Service provides Members and committees with legislative history memoranda on bills for which hearings have been announced, and compiles and makes available to each committee reports on legislatively authorized programs and activities within that committee's jurisdiction that are scheduled to terminate during the current Congress.

3. Information and reference services.—The Congressional Research Service provides extensive information and reference assistance to Members and committees. Reference files, containing clippings, pamphlets, and documents, and automated information services are maintained for rapid information retrieval. Lists of selected reports, prepared by CRS staff on legislative issues, are regularly distributed to congressional offices. To provide faster responses and in-person services, the Service also maintains reference centers in congressional office buildings and the Congressional Reading Room.

The Cataloging Distribution Service Division sells copies of the Library's printed catalog cards, cataloging data in machine-readable form, book catalogs, and technical publications. It maintains a stock of over 100 million catalog cards representing approximately 559,000 titles which are frequently ordered. From this stock are supplied 90% of the cards which are sold. A master file containing a single, reproducible copy of each of the cards representing the approximately 6 million titles which the Library has cataloged since 1898 is also maintained. Requests for cards for any of the 5,441,000 less frequently ordered titles are satisfied by duplicating (through offset, photographic, or electrostatic means) the copy of the card kept in master file. The Cataloging Distribution Service Division carries on its books, accounts for 32,694 subscribers, about 22,000 of which are active accounts in any given year. In 1975, 67% of the net obligations was recovered in the form of receipts from card and publications sales. Receipts of $7,116,424 were deposited in miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury in 1975. The objectives for 1977 are: (1) Meeting the continuing demand for catalog cards and maintaining a reasonable level of service and economy; (2) the continued development of the "National Union Catalog" as the country's major bibliographic and locational tool; (3) the development of other technical publications; (4) the use of new technology to improve service; and (5) to increase efficiency and reduce costs.

1. Supplying cards for the Library of Congress.—The number of cards supplied to the Library of Congress in 1975 was 35,295,117; estimated for 1976, 35 million; and estimated for 1977, 35 million.

2. Supplying cards for other libraries.—The number of cards sold in 1975 was 44,860,670; sales for 1976 and 1977 are estimated at about the same, or a slightly lower, level.

3. Preparation, printing, and distribution of publications related to cataloging.—These publications are an integral part of the cataloging activities of the Library of Congress and include the Classification Schedules, lists of Subject Headings, Cataloging Service bulletins, and similar publications.

This appropriation is used to acquire library materials, both current and noncurrent, in all subject fields except those in the field of law, clinical medicine, or technical agriculture. Materials acquired by purchase constitute an exceedingly important part of the Library's acquisitions. Although they generally amount to only a limited portion of the total number of pieces received annually, they are materials which are not generally or readily available to the Library of Congress from any other source and thus must be purchased to ensure completeness of the collections. The objectives for 1977 are: (1) To continue procurement of important research materials to insure the continuous and comprehensive development of the Library's collections thereby maintaining their national preeminence; (2) to continue the purchase of important foreign commercial books, newspapers, and periodicals; (3) to continue the extensive procurement of essential research materials from areas critical to the U.S. foreign relations, particularly from Eastern Europe, Asia, and Latin America; (4) to continue to strengthen the Library's current acquisitions in the rapidly expanding fields of science and technology; (5) to acquire highly selected, important, noncurrent materials needed to provide better service to Congress; and (6) to increase the usefulness to current research of the subject collections.

This appropriation constitutes the only means of acquiring law books published in the regular domestic trade (except for copyright deposits) and many foreign law books published in countries throughout the world. The legal publications acquired by purchase constitute the most important part of the law library's acquisitions, although a substantial part of the annual receipts is received by means other than purchase. The special objectives for 1977 are: (1) To continue the procurement of certain current domestic and foreign legal materials where the expeditious receipt and filing of current supplements and revisions is necessary because receipt through exchange and gift operations is irregular; (2) to improve the current and retrospective coverage of important Hispanic, African, Middle Eastern, and South Asian sources; (3) to continue the procurement of both current and noncurrent materials needed to strengthen the law library's already comprehensive holdings of critical areas in Eastern Europe, Asia, and Africa; (4) to continue the acquisition of microforms and photoduplicates of important research items, especially those from critical areas, which are no longer obtainable in the original; and (5) for replacement of hard-bound copies.

The Division for the Blind and Physically Handicapped is responsible for administering a national program to provide reading material for the blind and physically handicapped of the United States and its outlying areas. It has two closely related operations.

1. Procurement and distribution.—It procures books in embossed characters, talking books with their associated reproducers, and catalogs and publications of material available. The books are distributed through 54 regional libraries and 95 other cooperating libraries which assume responsibility for their custody and circulation. The reproducers are distributed through 62 State agencies and libraries. The maintenance and procurement of these books are shown in the following table:

2. Reader services.—During the past 5-year period, 1971-75, the number of blind and physically handicapped readers throughout the country has grown from over 254,000 to over 475,000 and circulation from approximately 6,886,000 units (volumes, containers, and reels) to about 12,262,000. The number of readers and circulation are expected to continue to increase in 1976 and 1977 at the same rate as in the past 5 years. A combined total of nearly 42,400 requests for interlibrary loan and inquiries concerning library and related services available to the blind and to other physically handicapped persons were received in 1975. Individuals throughout the Nation who are interested in transcribing or proofreading braille are trained, and those qualified are certified. During 1975 over 460 individuals were certified, and it is anticipated that this level will continue during 1976 and 1977. In addition, books are tape recorded by volunteers throughout the country. The division provides guidance and direction to the cooperating libraries throughout the country. The division maintains the national collections of braille and recorded books to supplement titles deposited in libraries across the country and to furnish direct service to Americans living abroad. In addition, music materials are provided directly to readers throughout the country.

Objectives for 1977 are: (1) to provide sound reproducer equipment to meet readers' needs at the most economical cost; (2) to implement the transition from books on discs to books on cassettes and on flexible discs, and of magazines from hard records to flexible discs; (3) to expand library service to physically handicapped persons who have normal eyesight but cannot handle regular books; (4) to provide braille on a basis which more closely meets the needs of individual readers; (5) to identify specific needs of blind and physically handicapped persons for music materials and to expand the collection of braille scores and texts, and of large print and recorded materials to meet those needs; and (6) to provide appropriate internal and network administrative support, such as the development of a reference and information system and development of a significant volunteer support program.

The Oliver Wendell Holmes Devise Fund was established by 69 Stat. 533 to: (1) prepare a history of the Supreme Court of the United States, and if deemed advisable, (2) to finance an annual lecture or series of lectures, and (3) publish a memorial volume of Justice Holmes' writings. The principal and interest on the fund are available for these purposes. The current program is devoted primarily to the preparation of the history of the Supreme Court, of which the first two volumes were published by the Macmillan Co. in fiscal year 1972. A third volume was published in August 1974, and two additional volumes are in the process of being prepared. An annual lecture series is also financed by this fund and reprints of the lectures are distributed to law schools and libraries throughout the country.

1. Acquisition of library materials.—During 1975, this included the procurement of manuscripts, Hispanic materials, fine prints, rare books and other library materials for the Library of Congress, and the acquisition and distribution of Government documents for the Library of Congress and cooperating libraries. The Library expects the activities to continue in 1976 and 1977.

2. Reader and reference services.—These services during 1975 included the preparation of bibliographies, indexes, digests, and checklists; lectures, surveys of bibliographic services; poetry readings; musical concerts; furtherance of musical research, composition, performance and appreciation; and providing photostats, photographs, microfilm, and other forms of photoduplication, and sound recordings of folksongs, and poetry to other Government agencies, libraries and other institutions, and to the general public; and distribution of recordings of the Library's literary programs and concerts to radio stations for public service broadcasts. The Library expects these activities to continue in fiscal years 1976 and 1977.

3. Organization and control of the collections.—In February 1967, the Library of Congress began the largest single bibliographical project in its history, the publication of the pre-1956 "National Union Catalog." It is expected that the project will be completed in 10 years, and that the published catalog will comprise 600 volumes. Over 400 volumes have been published. The preparation of the 19th full edition of the "Dewey Decimal Classification," begun during 1972, continues.

The Office of the Superintendent of Documents operates under a separate appropriation which provides all of the funds for: (1) the compilation of catalogs and indexes of Government publications; (2) the distribution of Government publications to designated depository libraries; and (3) the mailing for Members of Congress and other Government agencies of certain Government publications, as authorized by law. It also provides part of the funding for (4) the sale of Government publications in accordance with section 1708 of title 44 of the U.S. Code and (5) the sale of certain other Government publications in accordance with various other authorities. These five functions are related to the publication activity of other agencies and to the demands of the public, Members of Congress, and depository libraries. Consequently, Documents can exercise little control over the volume of work which it may be called upon to perform. A description of these five functions follows:

1. General sales of publications.—Selected Government publications are placed on sale to the public in accordance with section 1708 of title 44 of the U.S. Code. This section states, in part, the following:

“The price at which additional copies of Government publications are offered for sale to the public by the Superintendent of Documents shall be based on the cost as determined by the Public Printer plus 50% * * *. Surplus receipts from sales shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of miscellaneous receipts.”

2. Special sales of publications.—Certain publications are placed on sale to the public wherein the price of the publication is not established in accordance with section 1708, title 44, but in accordance with various other authorities such as 44 U.S.C. 906, 44 U.S.C. 910, and 44 U.S.C. 1504.

3. Distribution for other agencies and Members of Congress.—The Office of Superintendent of Documents maintains mailing lists and mails, at the request of Government agencies and Members of Congress, certain publications specified by public law.

4. Depository library distribution.—As required, Government publications are supplied to libraries which are designated as depositories for Government publications.

5. Cataloging and indexing.—The Office of Superintendent of Documents is charged with preparing catalogs and indexes of all publications issued by the Federal Government. The principal publication is the “Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications.”

The sale of publications to the public is divided into two programs. One program covers primarily the sale of those publications which by section 1708 of title 44 are offered for sale to the public by the Superintendent of Documents at a price based upon the cost as determined by the Public Printer plus 50 percent. The other program covers the sale of the Congressional Record, Federal Register, Presidential Papers, et cetera at prices which are set in accordance with other sections of the United States Code. Surplus receipts from sales are deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of miscellaneous receipts.

The U.S. Court of Claims has jurisdiction over all cases involving claims against the United States (except in pension suits) instituted upon constitutional grounds or under Federal law or regulations, all claims arising out of any contract with the Federal Government and its agencies, and claims for the refund of taxes. It also has general jurisdiction to hear and determine claims for damages other than tort actions, provided the claimants would have the right to sue in law or equity if the United States were not immune to such suits. It has jurisdiction in suits against the United States by contractors dissatisfied with the findings and decisions of contracting agencies under terminated war contracts and jurisdiction concurrent with that of the courts of appeals to review district court decisions in cases involving tort actions. It has exclusive jurisdiction to review the decisions of the Indian Claims Commission on appeal from the Commission. It also has jurisdiction in special act cases referred to the court by the Congress, and the commissioners of the court have jurisdiction to render reports to the Congress on claims set forth in bills referred to the chief commissioner by either House of Congress.

The district courts of the United States are constituted courts of bankruptcy, vested with original jurisdiction at law and in equity in proceedings brought under the bankruptcy statutes. This jurisdiction primarily is exercised through referees appointed by the several district courts.

Their salaries and office expenses are paid from this appropriation including compensation and benefits of clerical employees which are payable upon authorization of the Director of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts.

This appropriation is derived from a special fund in the Treasury to which are deposited payments of fees and charges by parties to the proceedings.

This program establishes a framework of joint Federal and State efforts to provide the basic facilities essential to economic growth in Appalachia. Program investments made in the Appalachian Region are concentrated in areas with significant potential for future growth. The States, acting through the Appalachian Regional Commission, are responsible for recommending local and State projects within their borders for assistance under this program.

1. Appalachian Development Highway System.—Section 201 of the Appalachian Regional Development Act authorizes construction of an Appalachian Development Highway System including local access roads. This system is designed to improve the accessibility of Appalachia; to reduce highway transportation costs to and within Appalachia; and to provide the highway transportation facilities necessary to accelerate the overall development of Appalachia. The program is funded through contract authority available in the fiscal year preceding the year of authority. The budget for 1977 provides $185 million to fully liquidate obligations through that period.

The status of the system of roads including mileage prefunded by the State follows:

	1975 act.	1976 est.	TQ est.	1977 est.
Development system miles (cumulative):

2. Area development programs.—Funds are provided for a single allocation to each of the Appalachian States for implementing programs of area development. The programs consist of projects aimed primarily at providing the basic facilities essential to the region's growth and economic development, particularly in the areas of health, education, and community facilities.

During 1977 continued emphasis will be placed on conducting area development activities within the several geographic subregions of Appalachia by an allocation system permitting greater State flexibility in the amount and kind of projects undertaken. These projects will be of the following types, with the project mix depending upon the State plans adopted within the context of the sub-regional development strategies: health and child development; community facilities and housing; vocational and other education; energy and enterprise; natural resources and environment; and rural transportation. Workload data for comparable programs in the previous years follow:

(a) Health and child development.—Grants are made for the construction, equipping, and operation of multi-county demonstration health facilities including hospitals, regional health diagnostic or treatment centers, and other facilities. In addition, grant support is provided for primary care and child development programs throughout the region. Cumulative approved projects are:

(b) Vocational and other education facilities.—Grants are made to States and local districts within the Appalachian region for the construction and equipment of vocational education facilities, and in limited cases, for operations and demonstration projects. Supplementary grants are also provided for community colleges, libraries, ETV, and NDEA. These facilities are key elements for the training and upgrading of potential and existing labor force entrants in skills required in commercial and other vocations. Projects approved on a cumulative basis, including those aided by supplementary grants, are as follows:

	1975 actual	Cumulative
Vocational education construction and equipment.....	83	672
Vocational education operations and demonstration, new.....	15	115

(c) Other community facilities.—Grants are made for the construction and equipping of other community facilities such as water and sewer systems, sewage treatment facilities, airports, recreation facilities, et cetera, to meet the basic needs of local areas and assist in providing economic development opportunities. Grants may be supplementary to other Federal grants or, when sufficient Federal funds are unavailable, be provided entirely by this program. The total Federal contribution may not exceed 80%. Workload data, by type of project, follows (amounts in millions of dollars):

(d) Natural resources and environment.—This program consists largely of grants for the sealing and filling of voids in abandoned coal mines, the extinguishment and control of underground and outcrop mine fires, and the reclamation and rehabilitation of strip and surface mine areas, including waste banks, on public land in those areas where the potential for economic growth exists in Appalachia. States or local sponsors must bear 25% of the project cost. Approved projects on a cumulative basis are:

(e) Other programs.—During 1976 limited programs of grants to stimulate energy related enterprise development and assist in meeting rural transportation problems of the region will be initiated.

3. Research and local development district program.—Appalachian planning assistance is provided through grants to multicounty local development districts and for research and demonstration projects. Grants are made for up to 75% of the administrative expenses of local development districts. Other planning and technical assistance is provided for (a) programs which improve the base for economic growth, (b) programs which will attract industrial development within the region, (c) programs which will improve the health, education, and skills of the people, and (d) programs which conserve, maintain, and improve natural resources.

This program provides for several ways of assisting the region in obtaining a larger share of housing for low- and moderate-income families. The Commission is authorized to make technical assistance grants for the organization of State housing corporations and local nonprofit groups to encourage such housing construction.

This program also provides authority to make loans for up to 80% of the preliminary cost of planning housing projects and obtaining Federal or State housing assistance. Eligible loan costs include preliminary site engineering and architectural fees, site options, and construction loan fees and legal costs.

Grants may be made for site development costs and offsite improvements such as sewer and water line extensions where necessary for economic feasibility of the housing project. Grants for such purposes may not exceed ten percent of the project cost.

In 1977 technical and site development grants will be funded from the Appalachian regional development program appropriations. Funds have been transferred from the "Appalachian regional development" appropriation to this revolving fund for the following workload:

Most of the military items furnished under this program are produced in the United States. Orders are placed through the U.S. military services, which are reimbursed from this account when the items are delivered.

An appropriation of $279 million is proposed in 1977. Beginning July 1, 1976, administrative expenses including personnel costs of military personnel of the military assistance advisory groups and military missions previously funded by the military departments will be paid out of the military assistance appropriation. The administrative costs related to foreign military training and the liquidation of foreign military sales fund are also included in this account.

Military training for foreign military personnel prior to 1976 was funded by the military assistance appropriation. A separate training account was proposed in 1976 to underscore the importance of this form of contact between the defense establishments in foreign countries and U.S. military departments. Education and training of members of foreign armed forces is an effective way to create good will while at the same time improving the defensive abilities of their countries. Training is conducted in both the United States and abroad. An appropriation of $30.9 million is proposed for 1977.

The administrative expenses related to this program will be funded from the military assistance appropriation.

This appropriation provides funds to finance credit sales of defense articles and services to foreign countries and international organizations. Two types of financing arrangements are used: (1) direct U.S. Government credit; and (2) commercial credit and Federal Financing Bank loan agreements guaranteed by the Government. Funding required for guarantee of commercial credit is 10% of the principal amount of the credit.

An appropriation of $840 million is requested for 1977 to finance a credit sales program of $2,059.6 million of which $1.0 billion is for Israel. Of the $2,059.6 million program, $1,355 million will be privately financed and $135.5 million of the appropriation will be set aside as a guarantee reserve for this private credit. The balance of $704.5 million will be used for direct U.S. Government credit, including $500 million for Israel. Authority is sought to forgive repayment of up to the full amount of the direct credit for Israel.

As authorized by sections 21 and 22 of the Foreign Military Sales Act, as amended, this trust fund is used to facilitate sales of defense articles and services. Orders placed by foreign governments through the trust fund can be combined with procurement for our own Armed Forces. The resultant savings are shared by both the United States and foreign governments.

Defense articles from Department of Defense stocks are sold for U.S. dollars to eligible countries and international organizations if they agree to pay in advance or, as authorized by the President, within 120 days after delivery. Defense articles and defense services may also be procured by the Department of Defense for foreign purchasers if the purchasers agree to pay the full amount of the procurement contract, which assures the Government against any loss on the contract.

New sales orders (budget authority) are estimated at $9.8 billion in 1976 and $8.9 billion in 1977. Receipts of the trust fund (line 60) are projected to be $6.5 billion in 1976 and $7.2 billion in 1977. The net impact of the trust fund on the budget in outlay terms is the difference between trust fund outlays (line 90) and receipts (line 60). This net amount is estimated to be -$600 million in 1976 and -$200 million in 1977.

The United States, along with many other countries, provides funds to promote international monetary stability through the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and to finance development lending and technical assistance through the international development lending institutions.

Each of these institutions is an international organization, whose capital is subscribed and contributed by member governments. The lending institutions make ordinary capital loans to developing member countries with funds generated from members' purchases of paid-in capital stock and with funds borrowed on world capital markets. The borrowings are backed by members' subscriptions to callable capital, which would be drawn on for cash disbursements only in the unlikely event that funds would be required to meet an institution's obligations. Concessional financing is provided primarily from contributions of members made specifically for this purpose.

Ordinary capital loans have long-term maturities and near-market interest rates. Special fund loans (including all International Development Association credits) have longer maturities and low, sometimes even nominal, interest rates. In general, they are provided to the poorest developing countries.

1. Investment in International Development Association.—The International Development Association (IDA) was established in 1960 to provide development financing on concessional terms. As of June 30, 1975, the U.S. share of the $7,213 million in total contributions was $2,500 million.

On August 14, 1974, legislation authorizing a U.S. contribution of $1,500 million, as part of a $4,500 million multidonor fourth replenishment of IDA resources, was signed into law. As the second of four installments on this contribution, an appropriation of $375 million is requested for 1977.

2. Investment in Inter-American Development Bank.—The Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) promotes economic development in Latin American and Caribbean countries through loans and technical assistance. Twenty-four Western Hemisphere countries, including the United States and Canada, are members of the Bank. The entry of 12 nonregional donor countries is expected in 1976. Approximately 49.7% of IDB lending has come from the Bank's ordinary capital resources and 50.3% from the Fund for Special Operations, the IDB's soft loan window.

Authorizing legislation for the replenishment of the IDB's ordinary and special resources for the period 1976-79 is before the Congress. Upon enactment of this legislation, appropriations for 1977 will be requested. These are detailed in the section on legislative programs.

3. Investment in Asian Development Bank.—The Asian Development Bank (ADB) was established in 1966 to foster economic growth in Asia by extending loans and technical assistance to the developing member countries of the region.

Ordinary capital.—On December 22, 1974, legislation authorizing a U.S. contribution of $361.9 million, as part of a $1,550 million multidonor replenishment of the ADB's ordinary resources, was signed into law. An appropriation of $120.6 million ($24.1 million for paid-in and $96.5 million for callable capital) is requested in 1977 for the third and final installment by the United States of the subscription.

As of June 30, 1975, the current dollar value of the U.S. quota in the IMF was $8,283 million, reflecting an increase of $201 million arising from the decrease in the value of the dollar in terms of the Special Drawing Right (SDR), the IMF's unit of account. In June 1974 the IMF adopted the SDR "currency basket" method of valuation in which the value of the dollar and other currencies in terms of the SDR varies from day to day as a result of fluctuations in market exchange rates within the group of 16 currencies that comprise the currency basket. Thus, during the past fiscal year, the United States incurred increased obligations to the IMF under the maintenance of value provisions equal to the decreased value of the dollars held by the IMF in terms of the SDR currency basket. As monetary transactions, the increase in the current dollar value of the U.S. quota, and other transactions with the IMF, represent exchanges of assets and do not have a budgetary impact.

The United States has been engaged in international monetary negotiations involving an increase in IMF quotas and a series of important amendments to the IMF Articles of Agreement. The Bretton Woods Agreement, as amended, requires congressional authorization for any change in the U.S. quota and for acceptance of any amendment of the Articles. When the negotiations are concluded, appropriate legislation will be submitted to the Congress. As a monetary transaction, any increase in the U.S. quota will not have a budgetary impact.

Public Law 87-490, approved June 19, 1962, authorized an appropriation, to remain available until expended, of $2 billion for U.S. participation in a 10-nation, $6 billion arrangement providing, under specified conditions, for loans by the participants to the IMF when needed to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary system. The appropriation for these arrangements, known as the General Arrangements to Borrow (GAB), was obtained on October 24, 1962.

The GAB has been drawn on by the IMF on six occasions in the total amount of $2,155 million. The United States has not yet participated in the loans extended under the GAB because the IMF's holdings of dollars have been adequate.

The executive directors of the IMF renewed the GAB on October 23, 1974, for a period of 5 years, beginning October 24, 1975. The U.S. commitment to lend up to $2 billion to the IMF under the GAB will continue during the renewal period.

<sup>2</sup> Section 6 of Public Law 93-559, the Foreign Assistance Act of 1974, amended section 203 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 to provide that after 1975 dollar receipts from loans will no longer be available for making loans under the act; such receipts will be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

<sup>4</sup> Of the amount shown for 1975, $211,892 thousand is from the Alliance for Progress—Development loan account which is shown as merged with the Development Loans—Revolving Fund beginning in 1974.

Development loans are made to friendly developing countries in order to promote their economic growth. These loans are repayable in U.S. dollars at an interest rate of not less than 3% per annum. Loan repayments are to begin not later than 10 years following the date on which the funds are lent. During the initial 10-year period the rates of interest are not to be lower than 2% per annum.

Beginning in 1974 budget authority for both loans and grants for development assistance has been included in the schedule Functional development assistance program.

1. Investment in International Finance Corporation (IFC).—The International Finance Corporation was established in 1956 to further economic development by encouraging the growth of productive private enterprises through loans and equity investments. It is affiliated with the World Bank. As of June 30, 1975, the U.S. share of the $107 million in total subscriptions was $35 million.

It is expected that legislation to authorize a U.S. contribution to a replenishment of IFC capital of up to $500 million will be requested. The requested U.S. subscription will be up to $125 million, to be paid in several yearly installments. An appropriation request for the first installment of up to $41.7 million will be transmitted upon approval of authorizing legislation.

2. Investment in Inter-American Development Bank (IDB)—Ordinary capital.—As of June 30, 1975, the total subscribed ordinary capital of the IDB was $5,965 million of which $983 million was paid-in. The U.S. share is $2,409 million, including $362 million paid-in.

Given current and projected lending levels, a further replenishment of IDB resources is required for the 1976-79 period. Authorizing legislation for the U.S. share of $1,650 million of which $120 million is to be paid-in, and $1,530 million callable capital, is presently pending in the Congress. When authorizing legislation is approved, an appropriation of $240 million ($40 million in paid-in capital and $200 million in callable capital) will be requested for 1976, and an appropriation for the second tranche of ordinary capital of $240 million, of which $40 million would be paid-in capital, will be requested in 1977.

Fund for Special Operations (FSO).—Contributions to the Fund for Special Operations as of June 30, 1975, totaled $3,945 million, of which the U.S. share equaled $2,715 million. Legislation is presently pending in the Congress, authorizing U.S. contributions of $600 million to the FSO replenishment. Upon passage of the legislation authorizing U.S. contributions, an appropriation request for $200 million will be transmitted for 1977, as the first of three annual installments.

3. Investment in Asian Development Bank—Asian Development Fund (ADF).—Legislation will be submitted that would authorize an additional U.S. contribution to the ADF. Although the specific level of our share is still to be determined, it is anticipated that the U.S. contribution will be paid in three installments, for which the first appropriation of $50 million is proposed for later transmittal in 1977.

4. Investment in African Development Fund (AFDF).—Legislation to authorize U.S. membership in the AFDF is pending in Congress. The Administration is also requesting authorization for a contribution of $15 million. If the legislation is approved, an appropriation of $15 million will be sought in 1976, to be contributed in three equal annual installments beginning in 1976.

Note.—Excludes $96 thousand in 1977 for activities transferred to the Department of State. Comparable amounts for 1975 ($95 thousand), 1976 ($95 thousand), TQ ($24 thousand) are included above.

The Service conducts research to provide the means for a safer, more economical, and more abundant supply of agricultural products for the Nation. The Service uses coordinated, interdisciplinary approaches to perform basic and applied research in the fields of livestock; plants; soil-water-and-air resources; and marketing, use and effects of agricultural products. The programs financed from this appropriation are described below.

1. Research on animal production.—Research is conducted to improve livestock productivity (including poultry) through improved breeding, feeding, and management practices and to develop methods for controlling diseases, parasites, and insect pests affecting them. The increase requested for 1977 would provide for fundamental research to improve reproduction efficiency, feed utilization, and management practices for livestock and poultry; and reduce losses from animal diseases, parasites, and other pests, and for support costs related to ongoing work.

2. Research on plant production.—Research is conducted to improve plant productivity (including ornamentals, trees, turf, tropical, and subtropical crops) through improved varieties of food, feed, fiber, and other plants; develop new crop resources; and improve crop production practices, including methods to control plant disease, nematodes, insects, and weeds. The increase requested for 1977 would provide for fundamental research to improve crop production practices, including technologies to meet climatic variables; improve production, use, and quality of forages and grazing lands; reduce the genetic vulnerability of crops; improve yields and quality of crops through nitrogen fixation, photosynthesis, and cell biology; improve pest management technology; and for tropical and subtropical agricultural research; and for support costs related to ongoing fundamental research.

3. Research on the use and improvement of soil, air, and water.—Research is conducted to improve the management of natural resources, including investigations to improve soil and water management, irrigation and conservation practices, and to determine the relation of soil types and water to plant, animal, and human nutrition. The research includes studies on hydrologic problems of agricultural watersheds, and on agricultural pollution problems. The increase requested for 1977 would provide for research for long-term crop and livestock production and for support costs related to ongoing fundamental research.

4. Research on marketing, use and effects of agricultural products.—Research is conducted to develop new and improved foods, feeds, fabrics and industrial products and processes for agricultural commodities for domestic and foreign markets; on the processing, transportation, storage, wholesaling, and retailing of products; on human nutritional requirements, and the composition and nutritive value of food as needed by consumers and by Federal, State, and local agencies administering food and nutrition programs. Research is also conducted on problems of human health and safety, including means to insure the safety of food and feed supplies; to control insect pests of man and his belongings; to reduce the hazards to human life resulting from pesticide residues, tobacco, and other causes; on consumer services; and on improved rural housing. A $2,000 thousand decrease is requested in 1977 to reflect the increased capability of industry and commodity groups to fund research in this area.

5. Construction of facilities.—The 1977 estimates provide for a decrease of $18,520 thousand to eliminate non-recurring amounts provided for construction of facilities in 1976.

6. Contingencies.—Beginning in 1962, $1 million is available to meet urgent needs that develop unexpectedly during the year when such needs cannot be met by redirection of resources from other projects.

7. Support services to other USDA agencies.—Effective July 1, 1974 the Agricultural Research Service is responsible for providing management support services to the National Agricultural Library and Cooperative State Research Service. These services include budgetary, personnel, and administrative functions which were previously provided by the Office of Management Services.

Foreign currencies which the Treasury Department determines to be excess to the normal requirements of the United States are used for expenses of carrying out programs of the Department of Agriculture under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended. Research which is important to American agriculture and supplements our domestic programs is carried on through agreements negotiated with institutions and organizations in foreign countries. For example, research is conducted on exotic insect pests and diseases of plants and animals which cannot be done in the United States. Specialized projects provide for the translation and dissemination of foreign language scientific publications. The increase proposed in 1977 would be used to purchase foreign currencies in those countries determined to be excess to the normal requirements of the United States to expand overseas research of value to U.S. agriculture. Total estimated cost in U.S. dollars (charged to regular appropriations) for program direction and supervision of projects in 1977 is $725 thousand.

The major objectives of the Service are (1) to inspect meat and poultry products intended for human consumption to make sure they are wholesome and labeled according to law, and (2) to protect the animal and plant resources of the Nation from destructive pests and diseases.

1. Meat and poultry inspection.—Federal inspection is required for all meat, poultry, and processed products moving in interstate and foreign commerce. All meat and poultry moving in intrastate commerce must be federally inspected or inspected by States with inspection systems meeting Federal standards. Activities include inspection of animals, carcasses, meat and poultry products at various stages of handling and processing, and regulation of labeling. The Federal program also provides financial and technical assistance to States for maintaining the quality of their inspection programs. Extensive laboratory analyses are conducted for detection of chemical residues, antibiotics, and other additives.

The increases in the 1977 estimates provide for assumption of intrastate inspection responsibilities from States unable to maintain an inspection system at least equal to Federal.

The volume of inspections and examinations is indicated by examples given in the following table:

MEAT AND POULTRY INSPECTION

Cooperative agreements with States:
Meat	40	35	35
Poultry	31	28	28

2. Plant disease and pest control.—Programs are designed to keep out of this country, by inspection at ports of entry, those insects, plant diseases, nematodes, and other pests which would be harmful to agriculture. Cooperative programs are conducted to eradicate or prevent the spread to uninfested areas of certain plant pests which are established in this country. The 1977 estimates propose an increase for national plant pest and disease detection and elimination of the burrowing nematode, Japanese beetle, and white-fringed beetle programs. An increase is also provided to begin a trial boll weevil eradication program in Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina.

3. Animal disease and pest control.—Programs are conducted to keep communicable diseases of foreign origin from entering this country and to prevent the spread of disease through interstate shipments of livestock or distribution of impure or impotent veterinary biologics. In cooperation with States, other programs are directed at the control and eradication of livestock diseases present in this country. The animal welfare program is concerned with the humane care and handling of approximately 40 million warmblooded animals. The 1977 estimates propose increases for brucellosis eradication, screwworm eradication, and import-export inspection. Also included is a net decrease in funds needed to repay Commodity Credit Corporation for advances made to combat emergency disease outbreaks.

4. Construction of facilities.—The 1977 estimates propose an increase for construction of an animal import center, Stewart Airport, at Newburgh, N.Y., to replace the Clifton, N.J., quarantine station. In the fiscal year 1970 Appropriation Act, $1.5 million was appropriated for replacement of the Clifton station.

5. Contingencies.—Of the total annual amounts provided under this appropriation, $2.5 million is apportioned for use pursuant to section 3679 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, for the control of outbreaks of insects, plant diseases, and animal diseases to the extent necessary to meet emergency conditions.

Reimbursement program.—Reimbursements include amounts for overtime work performed in meat and poultry processing plants, and overtime and travel performed in connection with import-export inspection services and cooperative programs with other Federal agencies.

Public Law 88-592, approved September 12, 1964, authorized the sale of the Animal Quarantine Station, at Clifton, N.J., to the city of Clifton and application of the proceeds of sale to the planning and construction costs of a new station in the New York-New Jersey port and airport area. A sales contract between the Department and the city of Clifton was executed on December 16, 1966, at the appraised value of $527 thousand. Of that, $100 thousand was paid to the Department upon execution of the contract. An additional $100 thousand will be paid to the Department upon publication of bids for construction of the new quarantine station. A total of $6 thousand has been spent by the Department on survey and related costs associated with obtaining a new site. An additional $1.5 million was appropriated in 1970 for construction of the new station. The Department has recently found an acceptable site at Stewart Airport, Newburgh, N.Y. The lease, which was drafted for approval by both parties, was signed September 5, 1975, and selection of an architect and engineer to perform design and planning functions is now in final process.

1. Payments to agricultural experiment stations under the Hatch Act, and for penalty mail.—Funds under the Hatch Act are allocated to agricultural experiment stations of the land-grant colleges in the 50 States, District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands, for agricultural research including investigations and experiments to promote a permanent and efficient agricultural industry and improvements in the rural home and rural community. The increase requested for fiscal year 1977 will provide for significant new fundamental research ultimately aimed at increasing the efficiency of agricultural production.

Some funds for penalty mailings for State agricultural experiment station directors are provided under this appropriation.

2. Grants for cooperative forestry research.—These funds are allocated to land-grant colleges or agricultural experiment stations in the 50 States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands, and other State-supported colleges and universities offering graduate training in the sciences basic to forestry and having a forestry school. The act requires that the Federal funds paid to each institution be matched by funds from non-Federal sources for forestry research.

3. Contracts and grants for scientific research.—These funds are for the support of grants on specific research problems at nonprofit institutions of higher education or nonprofit organizations whose primary purpose is the conduct of such research. Every competitive research proposal selected for funding must be evaluated and classified as outstanding and appropriate to the needs of the designated problem area. A portion of the specific grant funds is utilized to support research on special problems of joint concern to the USDA and to the States. A decrease is proposed for research on environmental quality, food and nutrition, beef and pork production, genetic vulnerability, and forage, pasture, and range research. The balance of the specific grant funds is earmarked for the land-grant colleges of 1890 and Tuskegee Institute. The increase requested for fiscal year 1977 will provide for increased research at the land-grant colleges of 1890 and Tuskegee Institute.

5. Funds for rural development research.—No funding is proposed for 1977 since authorization for appropriation of funds under title V of the Rural Development Act of 1972 has expired.

6. Federal administration.—A coordinating and review staff is maintained to examine research projects and assist State institutions and Federal agencies. The reimbursable program includes the Current Research Information System which provides information on the research projects, status of the research and fund resources for research programs of the State agricultural experiment stations, and other eligible institutions.

The primary function of the nationwide system of cooperative extension work is out-of-school applied education in agriculture, home economics, community development, 4-H youth programs, and related subjects. This educational work takes research results, technological advancements, and program facts of the Department of Agriculture, the State agricultural colleges and experiment stations, and incorporates them into a program for action. Cooperative Extension Service interprets, disseminates, and encourages practical use of knowledge. It transmits information from researchers to people.

1. Payments to States.—Funds appropriated under the Smith-Lever Act for payments to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands are distributed primarily on the basis of population and to a degree on basis of special problems and needs. Funds are used primarily for the employment of State, area and county extension workers who work with individuals, families, community organizations, marketing concerns, and others by providing advice and assistance in the application of improved methods for production, marketing, nutrition, family living, and community development. Work with youth is accomplished largely through the 4-H program. Extension agents are paid from Federal, State, and county sources. The employer's contribution to the retirement fund as required by Public Law 854 is provided by this Federal appropriation. Funds also provide for Federal payment to the Bureau of Employees' Compensation Fund. Funds for the cost of penalty mailings for State extension directors and cooperative extension agents are also provided.

A net decrease of $10,408,840 is proposed for this item. This consists of increases of $1,988,160 for the 1862 land-grant institutions; $77 thousand for the 1890 land-grant institutions and Tuskegee Institute; and $136 thousand for employer retirement costs. These increases are to bolster high priority extension education work. Offsetting decreases consist of proposed reductions in funds for the expanded food and nutrition education program ($10,170 thousand), and rural development activities under section 3(d) of the Smith-Lever Act ($1 million) and title V of the Rural Development Act of 1972, ($1,440 thousand). No changes are proposed for other earmarked funds in support of expanded extension education for Pest management, Farm safety and the District of Columbia extension programs.

2. Federal administration and coordination.—The Extension Service provides leadership and assistance to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, and the District of Columbia in developing extension programs, improving teaching methods, efficient use of available resources, evaluation of programs, and administrative services. An increase of $22,840 will be used primarily for special projects to initiate programs, and establish and finance pilot projects in selected areas. Other increases of $228 thousand will be used for increased Federal salary costs that became effective in October 1975 and $13 thousand for increased GSA space rental costs for the Washington, D.C., office complex.

The National Agricultural Library, in cooperation with the Library of Congress and the National Library of Medicine, provides coverage and servicing of worldwide publications in the agricultural, chemical, and biological sciences. It serves all of the Department programs in the Washington metropolitan area, as well as the field installations throughout the country. It has the added responsibility of service to the land-grant universities, and the world agricultural science community.

The Library's primary purpose is to acquire, preserve, and disseminate an exhaustive collection of reliable information in all phases of the agricultural and allied sciences: Botany, chemistry, animal industry and veterinary medicine, biology including marine biology, agricultural engineering, rural development and sociology, forestry, entomology, food and nutrition, agricultural ecology, oceanography, soils and fertilizers, and the marketing, transportation, and other economic aspects of agricultural products. NAL also maintains, in cooperation with the Office of General Counsel, a central law library and 17 field legal libraries. One of the important functions of the Law Library is to provide histories of all laws pertaining to the work of the Department.

Information contained in the agricultural literature is disseminated through on-line computer networks, printed bibliographies, personal reference services, loans and photocopies to agricultural colleges, research institutions, Government agencies, agricultural associations, industry, individual scientists, farmers, and the general public in every part of the world.

USDA, Federal, public, private, and international demands for the services of NAL continue to grow. The proposed budget increases will continue to be concentrated on the continuance of the Library's basic objectives, but major breakthroughs can be expected in the NAL role as coordinator of the world's agricultural information resources.

The Economic Management Support Center (EMSC) provides consolidated and centralized management support services to several agencies of the Department. It was established pursuant to Secretary's Memorandum No. 1836, dated January 9, 1974, to provide management support services to the agencies of the Department under the jurisdiction of the Director of Agricultural Economics. The objectives are to improve the timeliness and effectiveness of program operations of serviced agencies through improved utilization of management manpower and techniques, increased specialization of professional skills, and more extensive use of timesaving equipment.

The consolidated management support functions include budget, finance liaison, personnel and related programs, administrative services, and general management assistance. The organizational structure of EMSC is based upon these functions with operating divisions providing the services for the following agencies: the Statistical Reporting Service, Economic Research Service, Farmer Cooperative Service, and the Economic Management Support Center.

Note.—Includes $53 thousand in 1977 for activities transferred from the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service; comparable amounts for 1976, $53 thousand; and TQ, $14 thousand; are included above.

The mission of the Statistical Reporting Service is to administer the Department's program of collecting and publishing national and State agricultural statistics.

Data developed by the Service on food and agriculture are essential to farmers, processors, and handlers in making production and marketing decisions and to legislators and administrators in developing and administering agricultural programs. Data provided by the Service are basic to economic research and analysis, consumer programs, and other agricultural research.

1. Crop and livestock estimates.—The Service provides the official national estimates of acreage, yield, and production of crops; stocks and value of farm commodities; and numbers and inventory value of livestock items. Data on approximately 150 crops and livestock products are covered in some 550 reports issued each year. Data collected and published on prices paid and received by farmers are basic to computation of parity prices.

The work of the Service is conducted through 44 State offices serving the 50 States; most of these offices are operated as joint State and Federal services. Cooperative arrangements with State agencies provide much additional State and county data; Federal funds are not available for collection and publication of these data.

A comparison of activities in 1974 and 1975, including work performed under cooperative arrangements, follows:

	1974 actual	1975 actual
Separate mailings of inquiry forms average per field office.....	349	351
Total questionnaires handled:
Number distributed.....	8,269,661	8,266,957
Number of returns tabulated.....	2,286,872	2,348,580
Number of enumerative and objective survey contacts (measurements and interviews).....	240,000	270,258
Number of official reports issued, all offices.....	9,656	10,199
Copies of reports distributed.....	11,206,426	10,354,263
Copies of publications distributed.....	1,984,000	1,795,540
Special requests for information answered by field offices.....	93,217	87,243

The adjustments requested in fiscal year 1977 include: (1) an increase of $1,868 thousand to continue developing a list of farm operators which can be sampled efficiently to acquire statistical information with a prespecified precision; (2) an increase of $310 thousand for improvement of price statistics; (3) an increase of $297 thousand for the annualization of pay costs; (4) an increase of $43 thousand for GSA space costs; and (5) a decrease of $241 thousand for three programs. This decrease includes a modification of the white corn and mink surveys and elimination of the floriculture surveys.

2. Statistical research and service.—Departmental clearance and review.—This work includes the review, coordination, and monitoring of data gathering surveys conducted by the Department. This involves (1) the review of all proposed statistical forms and survey plans requiring Office of Management and Budget clearance in accordance with the Federal Reports Act of 1942, and (2) coordination of all interdepartment and intradepartment programs for the improvement of agricultural statistics and related data.

Improvement of crop and livestock estimates.—This research is devoted primarily to improving statistical methods and techniques for producing agricultural statistics with a high degree of accuracy at a minimum cost. This work is in support of the Service's long-range program for improving crop and livestock estimates, and is directed toward developing better sampling, yield forecasting, and survey techniques for the Agency. Current research activities include compiling and maintaining lists of farms; developing new sampling techniques combining lists of farms with area sampling frames; constructing mathematical models for forecasting crop yields from objective counts and measurements of plant characteristics; and reducing reporting and other nonsampling errors by improving questionnaire design, and by devising better field, editing, and processing procedures. These research studies are tested by pilot surveys under actual operating conditions, and then, if proven, placed into operation.

A comparison of activities for 1974 and 1975 follows:

	1974 actual	1975 actual
Statistical forms-reports (Federal Reports Act): Departmental clearance and review for submission to Office of Management and Budget.....	465	425
Improvement of crop and livestock estimating methods: Number of research projects.....	9	25

The increases requested in fiscal year 1977 include: (1) $3 thousand for GSA space costs; and (2) $17 thousand for the annualization of pay costs.

The Department's responsibilities in the agricultural phases of the U.S. foreign development assistance programs are administered by the Economic Research Service. This includes direction of the Department's activities under agreement with the Agency for International Development (AID), Peace Corps, and other development assistance organizations, particularly agricultural technical assistance and training programs. The Service participates with AID in the planning of agricultural development policy, in formulating technical assistance projects, and in the review and evaluation of agricultural assistance efforts. In performing these functions, the Service works closely with other U.S. and international organizations to help them utilize the scientific and institutional competence of American agriculture in carrying out development assistance programs.

The Department's foreign technical assistance has heretofore been mainly funded by AID. During the past few years, however, the Department has entered into direct agreements with foreign governments and increasingly with various international organizations.

The program is aimed at assuring fair play in the marketing of livestock, meat, and poultry. Its principal purpose is to maintain effective competition for livestock, meat, and poultry, so as to bring to farmers and ranchers the true market value of their livestock and poultry. Consumers and members of the livestock, poultry, and meat industries are also protected against unfair business practices in the marketing of meat and poultry, and from restrictions on competition which could unduly increase meat and poultry prices.

Farmer Cooperative Service conducts studies relating to cooperatives engaged in the marketing of farm products, purchasing of production supplies and supplying related business services. Its total effort is devoted to preserving the family farm through the cooperative effort. The Agency program is directed toward providing technical assistance to cooperatives and research to improve cooperative performance. It has several major thrusts to help make family farmers' cooperative businesses competitive and efficient.

Technical assistance is provided in response to problems that may come to FCS from farmers directly or through the management of boards of directors of cooperatives composed of hundreds and in some instances thousands of farmers. Help is given on the formation of new cooperatives, the merits of merging cooperative organizations, changes in business organizations and future growth or development, and the development of more viable relationships between cooperatives and other businesses and institutions. The full range of organization and management problems confronting cooperatives is covered by the FCS technical assistance program.

Applied research is conducted to give farmers relevant and expert assistance pertaining to their cooperatives. Studies concentrate on financial, organizational, legal, social, and economic aspects of cooperative activity.

Statistical data are collected to detect changes in structure, operations, and growth trends. Data help identify and support applied research and technical assistance activities.

The Agency serves as a central storehouse of data about farmer cooperatives in the United States. This information is communicated to the farmer or member through a variety of publications.

FCS efforts center on providing immediate response and leadership for more effective and efficient cooperative operations in the changing economic environment in which the family farmer operates.

The adjustments requested in fiscal year 1977 are an increase of $5 thousand for increased costs for GSA space, and the annualization of pay cost increase effective in fiscal year 1976 of $30 thousand.

(a) The Service maintains a worldwide agricultural intelligence and reporting service that enables American agriculture to carry out its production, policies, and programs in the context of world developments. Pertinent agricultural and economic data of foreign production and markets, and information on foreign agricultural policies are continuously analyzed and reported.

(b) The Service helps to develop foreign markets for U.S. farm products through continuous efforts to remove international trade barriers that inhibit export sales and through effective market promotion under special export programs.

1. International trade.—The Service directs and coordinates Department responsibilities in international trade agreement programs and negotiations, under the authority of the Trade Expansion Act. It identifies and strives to reduce foreign trade barriers to U.S. agricultural exports. Developments in foreign trade policies are examined and their effect on agricultural trade and operations are reported with recommendations as to courses of action.

The Service recommends Department positions and participates in negotiations on trade agreements and international commodity agreements. It reviews and reports trade regulations of countries (primarily those signatory to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) as to how such regulations affect the movement of U.S. farm products in world trade.

The Service administers a program of import controls, in accordance with section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, on foreign farm products which would render ineffective or materially interfere with Department programs relating to agricultural commodities. It is also responsible for administering import controls established under the 1964 Meat Import Act and section 204 of the Trade Expansion Act.

2. Agricultural attachés.—The Service maintains agricultural attachés at 64 foreign posts to assist in the development of markets abroad for U.S. agricultural commodities. They work closely with numerous U.S. agricultural trade groups and maintain contacts with foreign governments to promote greater market accessibility for U.S. farm products. They carry out a comprehensive schedule of reporting foreign agricultural production marketing and trade policy developments to keep U.S. agriculture, industry, and Government currently informed.

3. Foreign marketing.—Public Law 480 program.—The Service conducts programs which facilitate the sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on a long-term credit basis and for the donation of agricultural commodities to foreign governments, inter-governmental and voluntary agencies and the world food programs in some 100 countries. These programs are authorized by titles I and II of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended.

Commercial credit and barter programs.—The Service conducts the CCC export credit sales program under authority of the Corporation's charter authority and section 4 of the Food for Peace Act (7 U.S.C. 1707a). This is a commercial program under which U.S. agricultural commodities from private stocks are financed for export up to a maximum credit period of 3 years. For all transactions there is required an irrevocable letter of credit from an acceptable foreign or U.S. bank assuring payment in dollars, with interest rates comparable to private U.S. commercial rates. The Service also has the authority to conduct, under the CCC Charter Act, and the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, barter transactions which use agricultural exports to generate the funds to pay for goods and services which U.S. Government agencies would otherwise buy abroad with dollars. Exports are restricted to areas where they will help maintain or increase the U.S. share of markets, thereby benefiting the balance of payments. The agricultural commodities may be from private stocks or from those acquired by CCC in its price support operations and purchased by private exporters for unrestricted use. The barter program was temporarily suspended at the end of fiscal year 1973.

Commodity exports.—The Service administers programs to facilitate and expand the commercial export sales of privately owned and Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) owned agricultural commodities, and develops pricing policies and export payment rates for applicable commodities. The Service also carries out the domestic operations to implement the Wheat Trade Convention of the International Wheat Agreement. These programs are authorized by the CCC Charter Act, and the Agricultural Act of 1949, 1964, and 1970, as amended.

Market development.—The Service administers programs concerned with the development of foreign markets for agricultural products of the United States, and coordinates interagency participation and action essential to administration of these programs. These functions involve:

Providing foreign tradesmen with services that are necessary to build and maintain markets for U.S. agricultural products.

Developing a system of worldwide promotional programs, on a commodity-by-commodity basis, in cooperation with national organizations of producers, processors, and exporters, and providing overall guidance to these organizations in carrying out cooperative programs.

Developing, operating, and evaluating a worldwide system of multicommodity promotional programs utilizing trade fairs, trade centers and point-of-purchase campaigns to expand overseas markets.

Reviewing foreign marketing plans; providing technical assistance in their design; developing procedures and controlling budgets and funds essential to their implementation; and evaluating programs implemented.

Cooperating with State and local organizations in programs designed to provide technical assistance to U.S. agricultural export firms and to stimulate participation of new U.S. "cooperator" groups in promotional projects.

Developing and guiding a systematic review of foreign markets on a country-by-country basis to find new market opportunities for U.S. agricultural products and to develop long-range promotional plans for such markets.

Export sales reporting.—The Service reports on export sales of wheat, wheat flour, feed grains, oilseeds, cotton, cotton products, and other commodities. Exporters are required by section 812 of the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973 to furnish to the Secretary of Agriculture information about these commodities, including specifically: (a) type, class, and quantity of the commodity to be exported; (b) the marketing year of shipment; and (c) destination, if known. The Service tabulates the information provided on a weekly basis and prepares summaries for release to the public, as well as other reports designed to provide an objective basis for evaluation of export activity.

4. Foreign commodity analysis.—Information essential to foreign marketing of specific U.S. farm commodities and to domestic planning is obtained, analyzed, and made available to U.S. farm and trade groups and to Government. Selected agricultural commodities and/or foreign geographic areas of key importance are analyzed from a competitive standpoint with the ultimate objective to develop markets for U.S. agricultural products. The program area maintains a supporting role by providing statistical data and analyzed information to other action program areas of the Foreign Agricultural Service. Assistance is given to American exporters and foreign importers to bring them together under conditions favorable to trade.

As the lead agency for the Large Area Crop Inventory Experiment (LACIE), the Service cooperates with ASCS, ERS, and SRS to execute those aspects of the program which devolve upon the Department of Agriculture. The program is conducted under authority of the act of August 28, 1954 (7 U.S.C. 1761), and the act of March 4, 1909, as amended by the act of March 4, 1917. The USDA works with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) in this joint technical effort which is designed to establish the utility and cost effectiveness of using earth resources satellite, meteorological, and climatological data to determine crop classification, field yields, acreages, and production. The Service's principal duties are administrative and analytical in a program which is specifically oriented toward developing a data handling, processing, and analysis approach which combines inputs from two satellites, ground meteorological networks, and standard historical and conventional agricultural data bases.

Market development projects.—Foreign currencies generated by the sale of agricultural commodities under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, as well as foreign currencies acquired by the United States from other sources, are used by the Foreign Agricultural Service to develop new foreign markets and expand existing markets for U.S. agricultural commodities, including cotton, dairy products and poultry, fruits and vegetables, grain and feed, livestock and livestock products, oilseeds and products, and tobacco.

The type of market development projects being carried out include sales promotion campaigns, trade fairs and exhibits, nutrition demonstrations, and market analyses. In 1977 it is planned that the unobligated balance brought forward in this appropriation will be used to purchase those currencies necessary to carry out the program in excess-currency countries. Dollar funds for use in other countries are included in the appropriation Foreign Agricultural Service.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS AND SPECIAL EXPORT PROGRAMS

Facilities and funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation may by law be used in carrying out programs for exporting agricultural commodities. The laws also authorize appropriations to be made to cover costs of such programs. When funds become available, advances are made to the Corporation for estimated costs. If the amounts appropriated are greater than actual needs, the excess is used to reduce future appropriation requests. If appropriations are less than actual needs, other Corporation funds may be used temporarily to finance the balance of authorized costs.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Included in this category are the following activities carried out under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, Public Law 480, 83d Congress, as amended: Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I); sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms (title I); and commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad (title II).

1. Sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies and for dollars on credit terms are made under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (Public Law 480), as amended (7 U.S.C. 1701-1710).

The Corporation finances all sales made pursuant to agreements concluded under title I. Sales are made to friendly countries—as defined in section 103(d) of the act—and must not displace expected commercial sales for cash dollars (secs. 103 (c) and (n)).

No agreements may be entered into after December 31, 1977 (sec. 409), and agreements may not be made under title I in any calendar year which call for an appropriation to reimburse the Corporation in excess of $1.9 billion, plus unused prior years' authorizations. No sales of agricultural commodities shall be made to North Vietnam unless authorized by act of Congress enacted after July 1, 1973.

Whenever practicable, terms of agreements must require payment at time of delivery of not less than 5% of the purchase price in dollars or in currencies convertible to dollars. These initial payments are applied against costs to reduce appropriation requests. On credit agreements under title I, the President is authorized to require payment upon delivery in dollars or foreign currencies of amounts needed for payment of U.S. obligations and certain other purposes.

In accordance with the act, a progressive shift from foreign currency sales to dollar credit sales was completed by December 31, 1971. To the extent that transition from foreign currency sales to dollar credit sales is not possible, transition to convertible foreign currency credit sales is authorized on terms which permit conversion to dollars at the exchange rate applicable to the sales agreement.

Factors determining availability of commodities for disposition under Public Law 480 are productive capacity, domestic requirements, farm and consumer price levels, anticipated commercial exports, and adequate carryover. No commodity is available for disposition under the act if the disposition thereof would reduce the domestic supply below that needed to meet domestic requirements, adequate carryover, and anticipated exports for dollars.

In the case of sales agreements entered into under title I of the act, the Corporation will finance ocean freight charges only to the extent of the differential between U.S.-flag rates and foreign-flag rates when U.S.-flag vessels are required to be used and will not finance any portion of the ocean freight in any other case.

(a) Sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I).—Sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies were made to countries unable to expand commercial purchases because of a lack of dollar exchange. Foreign currencies received in payment are deposited to the account of the U.S. Treasury and can be used only as stated in section 104. The dollar value of such deposits through June 30, 1975, amounted to $12.9 billion.

Uses fall into two groups—those of benefit to the foreign country, mainly loans and grants to promote economic development and to support common defense, and those of benefit to the United States. The latter includes, among others, expenses of the U.S. Government abroad, agricultural market development, educational exchange, construction of military family housing, and sales of foreign currency to U.S. citizens and tourists. With respect to use of foreign currencies for common defense purposes, new agreements providing for this use may not be signed after July 1, 1974, in accordance with section 40 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1973, unless such agreement is specifically authorized by legislation enacted after such date (Public Law 93-189).

Certain uses of foreign currencies, including foreign currency loan repayments, for U.S. uses, and certain foreign currency grants, are subject to the appropriation process. Sales agreements specify particular uses, and in those entered into after December 31, 1964, at least 20% of the foreign currencies are required to be subject to the appropriation process, with certain exceptions. Such uses reduce dollar outflow and the deficit in the balance of payments of the United States. The Corporation is reimbursed for the dollar value of currencies so used. Proceeds from sales of foreign currencies and from dollar repayments of foreign currency loans are applied as a reduction in appropriation requests.

Section 509 of Public Law 86-500, approved June 8, 1960 (7 U.S.C. 1704b note) provides that at least 75% of the total cost of foreign military housing projects (unless otherwise specified) shall be paid from foreign currencies acquired under title I. Pursuant to 10 U.S.C. 2681(b), as amended, the estimate reflects transfer to the Corporation of $6 million each year to liquidate amounts due. Of this amount, $2 million will be applied to the French housing barter transaction and the remaining $4 million will be applied against other amounts due, with a balance of $15 million remaining unpaid as of June 30, 1977.

Program costs incurred after December 31, 1971, represent financing of shipments made under agreements signed prior to January 1, 1972.

(b) Sales of agricultural commodities for dollars or convertible foreign currencies on credit terms (title I).—Sales of U.S. agricultural commodities under long-term dollar credit terms are also authorized.

Agreements are made with friendly countries or with United States and foreign private trade. They may provide for delivery in annual installments for not more than 10 years from the date of the agreement subject to the availability of the commodity.

Payments are in dollars with interest at rates not less than the minimum required by section 201 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, for loans made under that section. Payments are made in reasonable annual amounts over periods of not to exceed 20 years from the date of last delivery in each calendar year under the agreement, except that the first annual payment may be deferred for a period of not more than 2 years after such date of last delivery. Interest is computed from the date of such last delivery. As payments are received each year, they are applied against current costs to reduce the appropriation request. Private trade agreements must provide for projects to establish improved storage or marketing facilities or otherwise encourage private economic enterprise in friendly countries.

Credit terms for convertible foreign currency credit sales are to be no less favorable to the United States than those for development loans made under section 201 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, which authorized loans to be made on the basis of payment in 40 years with a 10-year grace period. Dollar payments, when received, will also be applied to reduce appropriation requests.

Total agreements made since inception to June 30, 1975, amount to $5,328.0 million cost value, including ocean freight for shipment on U.S. ships. Major commodities are wheat, cotton, oils, rice, and feed grains. Payments for the period amount to $995.3 million, of which $671.6 million was applied to principal and $323.7 million to interest.

2. Commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad (title II).—Available agricultural commodities are furnished to meet famine or other urgent or emergency relief needs. Also, commodities are furnished to promote economic and community development in friendly developing countries, to combat malnutrition, and for needy people, and nonprofit school lunch and preschool feeding programs. They are furnished through friendly governments and private or public agencies, including inter-governmental organizations such as the World Food Program. The Food for Peace Act, in amending title II, expressed the sense of Congress that other advanced nations should be encouraged to make increased contributions for the purpose of combating world hunger and malnutrition, and that to achieve this objective, the United States should work to expand the United Nations World Food Program.

The Agency for International Development is responsible for administering title II programs. However, the Corporation makes available the commodities or products requested for disposition under title II. Such commodities or products are made available from the Corporation's stocks of commodities or products acquired under its support program or are purchased at market prices when this is determined to be in the best interest of the Government.

The Corporation is authorized to pay, with respect to commodities made available, the costs of acquisitions, packaging, processing, enrichment, preservation, fortification, transportation, handling, and other incidental costs incurred up to the time of delivery to U.S. ports and ocean freight charges and general average contributions arising out of ocean transport.

Approximately $7½ million each year may be used to buy foreign currencies accruing under title I of this act to meet costs (other than personnel and administrative costs of cooperating sponsors, distributing agencies, and recipient agencies) directed to community and other self-help activities designed to alleviate the causes for the need for such aid.

Through December 31, 1975, appropriations totaling $8,500 million were authorized. No programs of assistance can be entered into after December 31, 1977, and none shall be undertaken under this title during any calendar year which call for an appropriation of more than $600 million to reimburse the Corporation for costs incurred, including its investment, plus any amount by which programs of assistance undertaken under this title in the preceding calendar year have called or will call for appropriations in amounts less than authorized during the preceding year. Any incidental sales proceeds and proceeds from loss, damage, and other claims are applied against Commodity Credit Corporation costs to reflect a reduction in appropriation requests. No donations of agricultural commodities shall be made to North Vietnam unless authorized by act of Congress enacted after July 1, 1973.

SPECIAL EXPORT PROGRAM

In addition to the foreign assistance programs described, the Commodity Credit Corporation conducted a special export program for bartered materials for the supplemental stockpile (7 U.S.C. 1856). This program was closed out in 1971. Barter activities are now limited to barter for offshore procurement for other government agencies on a reimbursable basis.

Effective at the beginning of fiscal year 1974, Barter program contract negotiations were suspended. Commodity shipments for 1975 represent completion of shipments under contracts made prior to the suspension.

This account includes funds to cover expenses of programs administered by, and functions assigned to, the Service. The funds consist of direct appropriation, transfers from the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC), and miscellaneous advances from other sources. This is a consolidated account for administrative expenses of National, Commodity, State and county offices.

The commodity office in Prairie Village plays an important role in administering support programs and the field operations stemming from producer loan and purchase agreements, inventory management, and merchandising activities.

The State committees are in general charge of all programs carried out in their respective States. Within the framework of national policy, they determine the policies to be followed and direct the adaptation of national programs to the State.

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation elected county committees are responsible for the local administration of programs. They make local program decisions and policies and appoint a county executive director who directs the office staff in handling the day-to-day detailed administrative work.

The programs and activities carried out by this Service include: Agricultural conservation program; emergency conservation measures; Water Bank Act program; Appalachian Region conservation program; conservation reserve program; feed grain, wheat, and cotton programs; cropland conversion program; cropland adjustment program; dairy and beekeeper indemnity programs; Wool Act program; and commodity support and related programs including acreage allotment and marketing quota programs.

The activities carried out by the Service fall within three major categories:

1. Program formulation and appraisal.—The supply adjustment, conservation, and commodity support programs, and the management and merchandising of commodities acquired under the support program, have a tremendous impact on the national and (to a lesser extent) the international economy. This activity provides for constant review of the effectiveness of these programs. It also provides for the analysis of data to formulate more effective programs.

2. Operation of supply adjustment, conservation, and support programs.—This activity includes all functions dealing with the administration of programs carried out through the farmer committee system, including (a) developing program regulations and procedures; (b) holding meetings with employees and producers to discuss new programs or changes in existing programs; (c) collecting and compiling basic data for individual farms; (d) establishing individual farm allotments, bases and yields; (e) notifying producers of allotments, productivity indexes, and payment rates; (f) determining farm marketing allocations; (g) handling appeals; (h) conducting referendums and certifying results; (i) checking compliance with acreage allotments; (j) developing pooling agreements under which several farmers work jointly to solve a common conservation problem which cannot be solved by individual action; (k) issuing marketing cards so that production from the allotted acreage can be marketed without penalty; (l) processing producer requests for conservation cost-sharing; (m) processing commodity loan documents and issuing sight drafts; and (n) making appraisals for disaster payments.

3. Inventory management and merchandising.—This activity includes: (a) overall management of CCC-owned commodities; (b) selling commodities; (c) donating commodities; and (d) accounting for loans and commodities. The total value of all commodities owned by CCC on June 30, 1975, was about $416.1 million.

The number of programs and the volume of work performed by the Service have been decreasing at a considerable rate over the last several years. Total man-years used by the Service have decreased from 21,343 in fiscal year 1971 to 14,013 in fiscal year 1975. The Sugar Act of 1948, as amended, which expired December 31, 1974, provided for making payments for the 1974 and previous crops. Under this program, payments were made to supplement the income of domestic producers of cane and beets. Payments required compliance with specified conditions of employment, production and price. Payments were also made for abandonment of planted acreage and crop deficiencies on harvested acreage due to natural calamities. Funds to cover program payments for the 1974 crop year were included in the appropriation for the fiscal year 1975. The majority of payments for this crop were made in fiscal year 1975. The remaining payments, for which funds are available, will be made in fiscal year 1976.

Following are preliminary production figures, thousands of short tons, raw value, for the 1974 crop, on which payments were based:

The primary objectives are: (1) to encourage farmers and ranchers to carry out long-term conservation measures that emphasize enduring conservation benefits, (2) to achieve desirable land-use adjustments, and (3) to provide community benefits and the general improvement of the total environment through a combination of economically sound public and private investments.

The authorizing legislation allows cost-sharing with farmers and ranchers on both an annual and long-term basis. The program emphasis has been on meeting some of the more pressing farm related conservation and environmental problems in rural areas, on practices for long-range protection of the environment, and on practices that provide substantial benefits to the public at the least possible cost.

The program is administered in each county by the ASC county committee, with review and approval by State ASCS committees and in consultation with other agencies. The committees select the approved cost-sharing practices best suited to meet the needs of their area.

Loans from Commodity Credit Corporation were used to make advance payments to vendors for the 1975 program during 1975. These payments are for conservation materials and services furnished to farmers and ranchers prior to the time funds are appropriated each year. Repayment is made from balances of prior year appropriations or from new funds appropriated.

The purpose of this program is to preserve the wetlands of the Nation. The program was authorized by the Water Bank Act, approved December 19, 1970.

The Secretary of Agriculture enters into agreements with landowners and operators for the conservation of specified wetlands. The agreements are for 10 years with provision for renewal for additional periods. During the period of the agreement, the landowner agrees not to drain, burn, fill, or otherwise destroy the wetland character of such areas, nor to use such areas for agricultural purposes, as determined by the Secretary. The Secretary makes annual payments to the owner or operator at a rate to be determined.

The Secretary carries out the program in harmony with wetlands programs administered by the Secretary of the Interior and utilizes the technical and related services of appropriate State, Federal, and private conservation agencies to assure proper coordination.

The cropland adjustment program was authorized by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965 which expired with the 1970 crop year. Under this program, agreements for periods of 5 and up to 10 years were approved only in 1966 and 1967. The last of these agreements will expire in 1977.

This program assisted farmers to divert cropland from the production of surplus crops to other uses that promoted the development and conservation of our soil, water, forest, wildlife, and recreational resources. In return for diverting cropland, producers received adjustment payments. They also were eligible to receive cost-sharing assistance for establishing approved land-treatment measures.

Under the public access provision of the program, additional incentive payments are made to producers who entered into agreements to permit free public access to land designated under the cropland adjustment program agreement, for hunting, trapping, fishing, and hiking.

Under the program's Greenspan provision, funds were also made available to Federal, State, or local governmental agencies for use in acquiring cropland for permanent conversion to specified public benefit uses, primarily for open spaces and recreational facilities. Cost shares could also be paid to such agencies for establishing approved land-treatment measures consistent with the conditions and costs under agreements entered into with producers.

No funds are requested for 1977 since payments to be made in that year will have been obligated from funds made available in the transition quarter.

This appropriation provides special funds for sharing the cost of emergency measures to deal with cases of severe damage to farm and rangelands resulting from natural disasters. The criteria under which assistance may be made available are set forth in the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590 (h)).

Assistance is made available to treat new conservation problems which (1) if not treated will impair or endanger the land, (2) materially affect the productive capacity of the land, (3) represent damage which is unusual in character and, except for wind erosion, is not the type which would recur frequently in the same area, and (4) will be so costly to rehabilitate that Federal assistance is or will be required to return the land to productive agricultural use.

Under the 1975 program, cost-sharing assistance is being provided to treat farmlands damaged by flood and tornadoes. As of August 31, 1975, assistance was being provided in 24 States.

Under this program the Department makes indemnification payments to dairy farmers, manufacturers of dairy products, and beekeepers.

This program began in 1964 and was limited (until the passage of the Agricultural Act of 1970) to payments to dairy farmers, who were directed to remove their milk from commercial markets because it contained residues of chemicals registered and approved for use by the Federal Government.

The Agricultural Act of 1970 authorized indemnification payments, beginning with the date of its enactment (November 30, 1970), to manufacturers of dairy products who have been directed to remove their products because they contained residues of chemicals registered and approved for use by the Federal Government.

The Agricultural Act of 1970 also authorized payments to beekeepers who, through no fault of their own, suffered losses of honey bees after January 1, 1967, as a result of utilization of economic poisons near or adjacent to the property on which the beehives of such beekeepers were located.

The Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973 extended the authority for making indemnity payments to dairy farmers and to manufacturers of dairy products to June 30, 1977, and to beekeepers to December 31, 1977. That act also authorized indemnity payments on dairy cows producing contaminated milk. However, to date no payments have been made on dairy cows.

Long-range agreements were approved with farmers and ranchers from 1963 to 1967 to make changes from their past cropping systems and land uses to other income-producing, public benefit uses.

The agreements, not to exceed 10 years, provided for payments, the furnishing of materials and services, and other assistance to farmers. In return, farmers changed the land-use and installed and maintained conservation practices. Adjustment payments were authorized to be made either upon approval of the agreement or on an annual installment basis. Land treatment practice payments were made after the practice was installed.

The law placed a limit of $10 million on payments made in a calendar year under signed agreements.

No new agreements have been made since 1967. The last agreements under the program will expire in fiscal year 1976.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, a wholly-owned Government Corporation, was created on February 16, 1938 (7. U.S.C. 1501-1520), to carry out the provisions of the Federal Crop Insurance Act. The purpose of this Act is to promote the national welfare by improving the economic stability of agriculture through a sound system of crop insurance, and to provide the means for the research and experience helpful in devising and establishing such insurance.

Crop insurance offered to agricultural producers by the Corporation provides protection from losses caused by natural hazards, such as insect and wildlife damage, plant diseases, fire, drought, flood, wind, and other weather conditions. It does not indemnify producers for losses resulting from negligence or failure to observe good farming practices.

The crop insurance programs are developed and analyzed in the Washington headquarters office, and are administered in 14 regional offices. Sales and servicing of contracts at the county level is performed by private agents under contractual agreements with the Corporation and by Corporation employees hired on a permanent, part-time or WAE (when actually employed) basis. Detailed administrative and program accounting and statistical functions are performed by the National Service Office in Kansas City, Mo., as well as the underwriting and actuarial analysis work.

Budget program.—The program for fiscal year 1977 will provide crop insurance protection to farmers amounting to approximately $1.6 billion on the following commodities: apples, barley, beans, citrus, combined crop, corn, cotton, flax, grain sorghum, grapes, oats, peaches, peanuts, peas, raisins, rice, soybeans, sugar beets, sugarcane, tobacco, tomatoes, and wheat.

The following table indicates the scope of the insurance operations planned for 1976 and 1977, as compared with 1975. Amounts in the 1975 column are actual, and pertain to the 1974 crop year. The 1976 column pertains to the 1975 crop year, and the 1977 column pertains to the 1976 crop year.

Financing.—Capital stock of $100 million is authorized to be subscribed by the United States. As of June 30, 1975, the Secretary of the Treasury held receipts for $60 million of authorized stock, leaving $40 million unissued.

Funds from the issuance of capital stock provide working capital for the Corporation. Receipts which are for deposit to this fund come mainly from premiums paid by farmers for crop insurance indemnity costs. The principal payments from this fund are for indemnities to insured farmers the direct cost of adjusting crop losses, and a part of the administrative and operating expenses. However, the direct cost of loss adjustment and the administrative and operating expenses paid from the fund are not provided for in the premium rates (section 508(b) of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended).

The annual appropriation for the major portion of the administrative and operating expenses of the Corporation is presented earlier in the budget.

It is estimated that gross income of $73.6 million from operations will provide adequate operating funds for fiscal year 1977, unless heavy losses occur early in the fiscal year.

Operating results and financial condition.—As of June 30, 1975 the Corporation reflected a deficit of $15.2 million which is a change of minus $18.5 million over the surplus of the year before. This resulted from increased indemnities over premiums for crop year 1974 to cover expenses paid from the fund. Crop year 1974 premiums of $54.0 million were lower than indemnities by $9.2 million, resulting in a loss ratio of 1.17.

A 0.80 loss ratio is estimated for crop year 1975. Premiums of $73.6 million are estimated to exceed indemnities by $14.7 million. For the crop years 1948 through 1974, premium income ($798.3 million) exceeded indemnity costs ($736.9 million) by $61.4 million; the loss ratio for the period was 0.92. Premium income exceeded indemnity costs in 15 of the 27 years.

The following table summarizes the insurance operations by commodities for 1975, 1976, and 1977:

The Corporation was created to stabilize, support, and protect farm income and prices, help maintain balanced and adequate supplies of agricultural commodities, their products, foods, feeds, and fibers, and help in their orderly distribution (15 U.S.C. 714-714p). It may also make available materials and facilities required in connection with the production and marketing of agricultural commodities. In addition to its basic functions, it is used to administer and, in some cases, temporarily finance numerous special activities.

The Corporation's capital stock of $100 million is held by the United States. Up to $14.5 billion may be borrowed to finance operations.

Budget assumptions.—The following general assumptions form the basis for the Corporation's 1976 and 1977 budget estimates: (a) Production and national income will rise both in 1976 and 1977 from the present level; (b) generally, exports of agricultural commodities in 1977 will be slightly lower than 1976 levels; (c) yields for the 1976 crops are based on recent averages adjusted for trend; (d) acreage allotments and marketing quotas will be in effect for the 1976 crops of peanuts, rice, and certain kinds of tobacco (flue-cured tobacco will be on an acreage-poundage program and burley tobacco will be on a poundage allotment); (e) no set-aside program for cotton, feed grains, and wheat will be in operation. Payments on these commodities will be based on an established or target price if the price received by farmers is below such price.

It is difficult to forecast with accuracy, requirements for the year ending September 30, 1977. Complex and unpredictable factors are involved such as weather, other factors which affect the volume of production of crops not yet planted, feed and food needs here and overseas, and available dollar exchange.

The estimates for the transition period and future-year projections are based on these same general assumptions, including a continuation of provisions of the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973.

PROGRAMS OF THE CORPORATION

The basic functions of the corporation include the following programs for which appropriations are made for net realized losses sustained (in thousands of dollars):

Total.....	3,109,828	829,271	1,100,363

Support.—The Corporation, through loans, purchases, payments, and other means, provides support of agricultural commodities to producers. This is done mainly under the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act (15 U.S.C. 714 et seq.) and the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.) as amended by the Agricultural Act of 1970 (84 Stat. 1358) and the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973 (87 Stat. 221).

Support is mandatory for the basic commodities—corn, cotton, wheat, rice, peanuts, and tobacco. The Agricultural Act of 1949 also requires support of the following nonbasic commodities: Tung nuts, honey, milk, barley, oats, rye, and grain sorghum. The National Wool Act of 1954, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1781-87), requires support for wool and mohair. Support for other nonbasic commodities is discretionary. The support program may also include operations to remove and dispose of surplus agricultural commodities in order to stabilize prices at levels not in excess of those permissible by law.

The principal methods of providing support are loans to and purchases from producers. With limited exceptions, loans made on commodities are nonrecourse. The commodities serve as collateral for the loan and on maturity the producer may deliver or forfeit such collateral to satisfy his obligation without further payment.

Direct purchases are also made from processors as well as producers, depending on the commodity involved. Also, special purchases are made under certain laws for the removal of surpluses, for example: the act of August 19, 1958, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431 note), and section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431).

For feed grains and wheat, producers may receive payments in addition to loans and purchases. For upland and extra-long staple cotton, producers may receive payments in addition to loans. Producers of feed grains, wheat, and upland cotton must comply with acreage set-aside provisions (hereinafter described), if in effect, in order to be eligible for loans, purchases and payments. Also, the total amount of payments which a person is entitled to receive under one or more of the annual programs for 1974 through 1977 crops of the commodities shall not exceed $20,000.

Public Law 93-86 (Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973) established target prices for three major commodities—wheat, feed grains, and upland cotton; set minimum loan rates for wheat and feed grains; and established the loan level for upland cotton at 90% of the average world price for American cotton for the preceding 3 years subject to adjustment to reflect current average world price if the loan level so calculated is above then current average world prices for American cotton. Government payments for each of the three commodities are required when the established price for the commodity exceeds the national average market price or the loan rate, whichever is higher. For the 1976 and 1977 crops, the established prices for these commodities will be adjusted in relation to the costs of production. In addition, the act provides for making disaster payments to producers who are prevented from planting feed grains, wheat, or upland cotton because of a natural disaster or condition beyond the control of the producers or who, because of such a disaster or condition, harvest less than a specified quantity.

In support operations, normal trade facilities are used to the maximum extent practicable. Cooperatives and financial institutions are used in lending activities. Commercial facilities are used to a great extent for storage.

Besides the Charter Act and laws mentioned above, many other laws are applicable to the disposition through sales, donations, and barter of commodities acquired under the support program. For accounting purposes, the Corporation credits to the support program proceeds of commodities sold from its stocks, including those disposed of through special activities.

Commodity export.—The Corporation promotes the export of agricultural commodities and products through sales, barter, payments, and other operations. Other than in barter for stockpiling purposes, such commodities and products may be those held in private trade channels as well as those acquired by the Corporation. This program is carried out under the authority contained in the Corporation's charter, particularly section 5 (d) and (f), and in accordance with specific statutes where applicable. Export sales for foreign currencies or on long-term credit are financed by the Corporation under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, although such sales of commodities owned by the Corporation may also be made under its charter authority.

The activities described below are illustrative of those conducted under this program during 1976.

When necessary to encourage export movement from free-market supplies, as well as from its own stocks, the Corporation makes payments on exports of agricultural commodities. The rate of payment generally is the difference between the prevailing world export sales price and the domestic market price. The export payment program for wheat, rice and tobacco was discontinued during 1972 and 1973. Some 1972 and older crop tobacco export contracts are still subject to payment. It is expected that final payments on these contracts will be made during the current fiscal year.

To help develop or expand foreign markets, the Corporation may furnish farm commodities and products for samples or exhibits at international trade fairs and for use abroad in testing consumer acceptance and commercial market potentials.

To maximize exports of agricultural commodities, including products thereof, the Corporation conducts an export credit sales program under which it finances, for a period of not to exceed 3 years, commercial export credit sales by exporters of agricultural commodities obtained either from Corporation inventories or from private stocks. These commercial transactions are financed under the Corporation's charter authority and section 4 of the Food for Peace Act (7 U.S.C. 1707a) and are to be distinguished from the long-term credit contracts involving foreign assistance authorized by the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended. Section 4 of the Food for Peace Act authorized appropriations to reimburse the Corporation annually for its actual costs incurred or to be incurred under this program. However, no appropriation has been requested for this program.

Commodities available for barter were ultimately limited to cotton and tobacco. After June 1973, no further invitations to bid on barter contracts were issued.

Storage facilities.—The Corporation conducts a program to provide storage adequate to fulfill its program needs. This program is conducted pursuant to sections 4 (h) and (m), and 5 (a) and (b) of the charter.

The Corporation has authority to buy bins (in storage-short areas) and equipment for the care and storage of commodities owned by the Corporation or under its control. This authority to purchase bins has not been exercised since 1956. The Corporation makes loans for the purchase, building, or expanding of facilities for storage and care of commodities on the farm and sells, to producers and others, bins needed for the storage of agricultural commodities. Bins sold by the Corporation may be those acquired for resale for such storage or those which are no longer required by the Corporation for the storage of its own commodities. Public Law 89-758 permitted the sale of grain storage facilities no longer needed for such program use to public and private non-profit agencies and organizations. In 1957, the storage capacity totaled 990 million bushels. The Corporation sold the last of CCC-owned bins in August of 1975. The Corporation may also provide storage use guarantees to encourage building of commercial storage and undertake other operations necessary to provide storage adequate to carry out the Corporation's programs.

Section 805 of the Agricultural Act of 1970 authorized the Secretary to make or guarantee loans for construction of farm storage facilities for baled hay from diverted or set-aside acreage. This program was conducted through the ASCS county committees and financed with capital funds of the Corporation.

Supply and foreign purchase.—The Corporation procures from domestic and foreign sources food, agricultural commodities, and products and related materials to supply the needs of Federal agencies, foreign governments, and private and international relief agencies. It similarly procures or aids in the procurement of such foods, commodities, products, and material for sale to meet domestic requirements during periods of short supply or during such other times as will stabilize prices or facilitate distribution. Through purchases, loans, sales, or other means the Corporation may also make available materials and facilities needed for the production and marketing of agricultural commodities. This program is conducted under section 5 (b) and (c) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act.

Purchases for other Federal agencies of commodities not in the Corporation's support stocks has been the main activity. Purchases of limited quantities of breeder, foundation, and registered seeds of improved varieties of grasses and legumes are made through production contracts in order to assure supplies thereof for farmers. No foreign purchases have been made in recent years.

Section 4 of the Act of July 16, 1943 (15 U.S.C. 713a-9), requires that the Corporation be fully repaid from funds of such agencies for services performed, losses sustained, operating costs incurred, or commodities bought or delivered to or on behalf of any other Federal agency. Operations not subject to section 4 may involve losses if such are necessary to the accomplishment of the objectives of the particular operation.

Set-aside program.—The Agricultural Act of 1970, as amended by the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973, authorizes the Secretary to conduct, through the Corporation, set-aside programs on the 1971 through 1977 crops of wheat, feed grains, and upland cotton if he determines that otherwise the total supply of agricultural commodities will likely be excessive. If a set-aside is in effect for any such commodity, producers must, as a condition of eligibility for loans, purchases, and payments on such commodity, set-aside and devote to approved conservation uses specified acreages of cropland and otherwise comply with program requirements. Participants in a set-aside program are eligible for a small additional payment for permitting public access to set-aside acreage. The Secretary has announced that there will be no set-aside for the 1976 crops of wheat, feed grains, and upland cotton.

Land diversion payments.—To assist in adjusting the acreage of commodities to desirable goals, the Secretary is authorized by the Agricultural Act of 1970, as amended, to make land diversion payments, through the Corporation, to producers who devote to approved conservation uses acreages of cropland in addition to those required to be so devoted under the set-aside programs.

Cotton research and promotion.—Under section 610 of the Agricultural Act of 1970, as amended, the Corporation, through the Cotton Board, and upon approval of the Secretary, is authorized to enter into agreements for cotton market development, research, and sales promotion programs, programs to aid in the development of new and additional markets, marketing facilities and uses for cotton and cotton products, and programs to facilitate the utilization and commercial application of cotton research findings. Each year the amount available for such programs shall be $10 million. For each of the 1972 through 1977 crops, an additional amount, not exceeding $10 million may be used by the Secretary for such programs from funds available for payments on 1972 through 1977 crop cotton. However, beginning with the 1974 fiscal year, the appropriation acts have limited yearly expenditures to $3 million for research provided that certain other requirements listed in the act are met.

Disaster reserve.—Under section 813 of the Agricultural Act of 1970, as amended by the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973, the Secretary shall establish, maintain, and dispose of a separate reserve of inventories of not to exceed 75 million bushels of wheat, feed grains, and soybeans for the purpose of alleviating distress caused by a natural disaster. The Secretary shall acquire such commodities through the price support program; 25 million bushels of oats held by the Commodity Credit Corporation was designated as a disaster reserve as of July 1, 1975. In order to rotate, distribute, and locate reserves, such reserve may be sold at equivalent prices. The Secretary may use the Commodity Credit Corporation and shall utilize usual and customary channels, facilities, and arrangements of trade and commerce to the maximum extent possible. Appropriations are authorized for sums necessary to carry out the purposes of this section. However, none has been requested since costs are included in the CCC appropriation reimbursement for net realized losses.

Administrative expenses.—Administrative expenses are for the services of: The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, the Agricultural Marketing Service, the Foreign Agricultural Service, Office of the Sales Manager and other agencies within and outside of the Department engaged in the Corporation's activities such as the General Accounting Office for audit and the General Services Administration for space. Estimates for 1977 include a limitation of $40.7 million on administrative expenses, including a reserve of not less than 7% for contingencies.

The requested authorization excludes administrative expenses in connection with the wool and mohair program under the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended, which are included with the cost of this program under special activities.

Nonadministrative expenses.—Expenses for acquisition, operation, maintenance, improvement, or disposition of property which the Corporation owns or in which it has an interest have been treated as program rather than administrative expenses. Such expenses include inspection, classing, and grading work performed on a fee basis by Federal employees or Federal- or State-licensed inspectors; work performed on a contract or fee basis by Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation county committees relating to CCC programs; and special services performed by other Federal agencies within and outside of this Department.

Most of these general nonadministrative expenses, including storage and handling, transportation, inspection, classing, and grading and resale payments, are included in program costs, in the entry entitled "Storage, transportation, and other costs not included above," in the program and financing schedule. The item "Nonadministrative expense," which appears in the schedule, covers part of the expenses of county offices for work related to programs of the Corporation, other Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service expenses offset by revenue, custodian and agency expense of the Federal Reserve banks and lending agencies, and miscellaneous costs.

The Corporation receives reimbursements for grain requisitioned pursuant to Public Law 87-152 (7 U.S.C. 447-449) by the States from Corporation stocks to feed resident wildlife threatened with starvation, through the appropriation Reimbursement for Net Realized Losses. The Corporation also obtains recovery through this appropriation for the funds transferred to the Agricultural Research Service pursuant to the Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act of 1964, for cost of production research and other related research designed to reduce surplus commodities held by the Corporation.

SPECIAL ACTIVITIES

These activities are carried out under authority of section 5(g) of the Corporation's Charter Act and specific statutory authorizations or directives with respect thereto which are currently in effect or which may subsequently be enacted.

A summary of such current activities not included under other designated activities is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Item:	1977 estimate
	Gross obligations	Outlays (reimbursable)
(1) Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies.....	-----	89,500
(2) Sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms.....	899,900	699,000

(6) Surplus grain for migratory birds.....	-----	-----
(7) Loans for conservation purposes.....	-----	-----
Total.....	1,322,640	1,032,200

The Corporation receives appropriations or reimbursement for cost of these activities as described under each.

To the extent that sufficient appropriations are not provided in advance, expenditures under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, are made by the Corporation subject to reimbursement from subsequent appropriations authorized for such purpose.

Activities currently being carried out are as follows (see foreign assistance programs for details of items (1)-(3)):

(1) Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I, Public Law 480).

(2) Sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms (title I, Public Law 480).

(3) Commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad (title II, Public Law 480).

(4) National Wool Act.—Under the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended by the Agricultural Act of 1970 and the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973, support of prices of wool and mohair is mandatory. The Corporation makes payments to producers in order to bring the national average price received by all producers up to the support price required under the act.

Total payments made under the National Wool Act cannot at any time exceed an amount equal to 70% of the accumulated totals, as of the same date, of the gross receipts from import duties collected on and after January 1, 1953, on wool and wool manufactures. Actual or estimated payments compared with this limitation are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Funds of the Corporation are used to carry on this program. For the purpose of reimbursing the Corporation, section 705 of the act appropriates each fiscal year an amount equal to amounts expended by the Corporation during the preceding year and to amounts expended in prior fiscal years not previously reimbursed, but not to exceed an amount equal to 70% of the gross receipts from duties collected on wool and wool manufactures during the calendar year preceding the fiscal year.

Estimated costs and appropriations to the Corporation are indicated in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

(5) Grain for migratory waterfowl feed.—To prevent damage of crops by migratory waterfowl, the Corporation is directed to furnish to the Secretary of the Interior (7 U.S.C. 442-445) such grain acquired through support operations and certified by the Corporation as available for such purposes or in such condition as to be undesirable for human consumption, as the Secretary of the Interior shall requisition. This appropriation item is included under that Department to reimburse CCC.

(6) Surplus grain for migratory birds.—Under Public Law 87-152, approved August 17, 1961 (7 U.S.C. 448) the Secretary of the Interior may requisition grain of the Corporation to feed starving migratory birds. This appropriation item is included under that Department to reimburse CCC.

(7) Loans for conservation purposes.—Under section 391(c) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1391(c)), the Corporation advances funds to the Secretary in amounts not to exceed $50 million annually to purchase conservation materials and services. Repayments of the loans plus interest are made from balances of prior appropriations or from new funds appropriated for the agricultural conservation program.

FINANCING

Borrowing authority.—The Corporation has an authorized capital stock of $100 million held by the United States and authority to borrow up to $14.5 billion.

Funds are borrowed from Treasury and may also be borrowed from private lending agencies and others. The corporation reserves a sufficient amount of its borrowing authority to purchase at any time all notes and other obligations evidencing loans made by such agencies and others. All bonds, notes, debentures, and similar obligations issued by the corporation are subject to approval by the Secretary of the Treasury as required by the act of March 8, 1938 (15 U.S.C. 713a-4).

Interest on borrowings from the Treasury (and on capital stock) is paid at a rate based upon the average interest rate of all outstanding marketable obligations (of comparable maturity date) of the United States as of the preceding month. Interest is also paid on other notes and obligations at a rate prescribed by Commodity Credit Corporation and approved by the Secretary of Treasury.

The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1966, made provision for terminating interest after June 30, 1964, on the portion of the Corporation's borrowings from the Treasury equal to the unreimbursed realized losses recorded on the books of the Corporation after June 30 of the fiscal year in which such losses are realized.

The computation of the transfer from interest-bearing to non-interest-bearing capital is (in thousands of dollars):

Item:	1975 act.	1976 est.	TQ est.	1977 est.
Realized deficit not previously reimbursed, start of year.....	7,008,466	3,648,652	1,519,756	1,627,012
Less appropriations for year.....	4,069,412	2,750,000	-----	898,652
Total non-interest-bearing, end of year.....	2,939,054	898,652	1,519,756	728,360

On the basis of the budgetary assumptions, the estimated requirements indicate no need for an increase in borrowing authority. Since there are so many uncontrollable factors involving crops which have not even been planted, it must be recognized that estimates are highly tentative.

POSITION WITH RESPECT TO BORROWING AUTHORITY, END OF YEAR

Item:	[In thousands of dollars]
	1975 act.	1976 est.	TQ est.	1977 est.
Statutory borrowing authority.....	14,500,000	14,500,000	14,500,000	14,500,000
Deduct:
Borrowings from Treasury.....	5,046,370	3,998,878	4,438,194	4,179,314
Total statutory borrowing authority in use.....	5,046,370	3,998,878	4,438,194	4,179,314
Net statutory borrowing authority available.....	9,453,630	10,501,122	10,061,806	10,320,686

Note.—A sufficient amount of the borrowing authority is required to be reserved to cover obligations to purchase notes or other obligations and accrued interest thereon, evidencing loans made by lending agencies and others. Such obligations, however, as well as accounts payable, accrued liabilities and other outstanding obligations not reflected on this table, do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowings from the Treasury.

Contract authority.—Support and other programs required by statute may result in the Corporation incurring obligations in excess of available funds and borrowing authority. Such obligations are liquidated from subsequent appropriations and other funds which may become available to the Corporation. Any increase in obligations in excess of available fund resources is reported as contract authority in the year involved; a decrease is reported as the application of appropriations and other funds to liquidate the authority. The budget reflects none in 1976 and 1977. It is estimated that unobligated balances of authority to spend public debt receipts will amount to $10,055 million at the end of 1976, $9,471 million at the end of the transition quarter, and $9,471 million at the end of 1977.

Appropriations.—Under section 2 of Public Law 87-155 (15 U.S.C. 713a-11), annual appropriations are authorized for each fiscal year to reimburse the Corporation for net realized losses incurred as of the close of each year.

The realized losses for 1975 subject to reimbursement were $709.6 million, and the prior cumulative losses not yet appropriated for were $189.1 million. An appropriation of $898.7 million would provide sufficient funds for the operations described for 1977. It would also leave a desirable operating margin to assure flexibility of operations in view of the volume of transactions handled and the uncertainties of future years under the escalation provisions of the farm legislation.

The special activities are financed as indicated in the program description above. In addition to certain reimbursements from other agencies, appropriations are made for the National Wool Act (see above) and for foreign assistance and special export programs (see that heading on p. 124).

Deficit.—The net realized losses of the Corporation have previously been reimbursed as follows (in thousands of dollars):

The Rural Electrification Administration was organized to carry into effect the loan programs authorized by the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, as amended. The Administration conducts two capital investment programs: (1) The rural electrification program, to provide electric service to farms and other rural establishments; and (2) the rural telephone program, to furnish and improve telephone service in rural areas.

Public Law 93-32, approved May 11, 1973, amended the Rural Electrification Act by establishing the Rural Electrification and Telephone Revolving Fund (RETRF), with initial assets amounting to about $7.8 billion. This act also removed budget authority and outlays of the RETRF from the budget totals of the U.S. Government. Schedules showing the activity of the RETRF are included in part IV, Annexed Budgets.

There is available $455,634,525 in unobligated funds carried over from the 1973 authorization, $366,466 thousand for electric loans and $89,168,525 for telephone loans. Since the needs of the REA electric and telephone borrowers for 2% loans are expected to be met through insured loans from the RETRF, the Department currently has no plans to use these funds in 1976 or in the transition quarter. However, legislation has been proposed which would transfer this unobligated balance of the budget authority to borrow from the Treasury to the RETRF in 1977.

The Rural Electrification Administration makes insured loans and guarantees loans made by other qualified lenders to electric and telephone borrowers for the purpose of extending and improving electric and telephone service in rural areas. The Rural Electrification and Telephone Revolving Fund, established by Public Law 93-32, approved May 11, 1973, is the source for financing the insured loans, while the Federal Financing Bank is the primary source for the loan guarantee financing. In the electric program, most of the insured loans are made concurrently with supplemental financing provided by the National Rural Utilities Cooperative Finance Corporation (CFC) or some other supplemental financing source. In the telephone program, supplemental financing is provided primarily through the Rural Telephone Bank. The Bank utilizes the employees and facilities of REA and the Office of the General Counsel on a part-time basis without cost to the Bank.

In order to protect the Government's loan security on outstanding loans made to borrowers, to assure that construction and operation of the electric and telephone systems conform to approved industry standards, and that the systems will provide continuous and reliable service while facilitating the most effective use of limited and available resources in achieving the program's objectives, REA furnishes business management and technical assistance on a regular basis, as well as upon special request, to its borrowers. This assistance is provided primarily through personal visits to the borrowers by field personnel. In addition to the field staff, REA maintains personnel in the Washington office who have expertise in the electric or telephone areas and who are available for assistance to the borrowers.

An increase of $156 thousand is proposed in the budget for the electrification program and $144 thousand for the telephone program to strengthen the loan review and borrower services provided in connection with the guaranteed loan program.

acquisition of land, buildings, plants, equipment, access streets and roads, parking areas, utility extensions, necessary water supply and waste disposal facilities, refinancing, services and fees. Such financial assistance may be made in connection with business and industrial loans made under the Rural Development Insurance Fund. No program is planned for the transition quarter and fiscal year 1977 since other assistance including 5% direct Federal loans is available for these purposes.

Assistance not to exceed 90% of the total development cost is authorized for new structures (including basic household furnishings) and sites, and for rehabilitation, alteration, conversion or improvement of dwellings, dining halls, community rooms or buildings and infirmaries used by domestic farm laborers.

Mutual and self-help housing.—This assistance was authorized by section 1005 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 (Public Law 90-448). These grants are especially designed to aid the development of comprehensive plans to permit an expansion of mutual and self-help housing programs under which groups of families build their own homes by mutually exchanging labor. No program is planned for fiscal year 1976, the transition quarter, as well as fiscal year 1977, since the grants plus the subsidy cost of the associated loans have resulted in high unit costs to the Government without corresponding benefits to those aided.

Self-help housing land development fund.—The Self-help housing land development fund was authorized by section 1005 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 (Public Law 90-448). It is used as a revolving fund for making loans to public or private nonprofit organizations for the acquisition and development of land as building sites to be subdivided and sold to eligible families, nonprofit organizations and cooperatives.

In 1975, 2 loans were obligated for $234 thousand. No program is planned for 1976, the transition quarter, and 1977 since the subsidy costs of the associated loans together with the self-help housing technical assistance grants have resulted in high unit costs to the Government without corresponding benefits to those aided.

Rural housing insurance fund.—This fund was established in 1965 (Public Law 89-117) pursuant to section 517 of title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended. Initial capitalization of the fund at $100 million was provided by the Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1966.

Public Law 91-152, approved December 24, 1969, provided that the rural housing direct loan account be abolished and that the assets and liabilities of, and authorizations applicable to, the direct loan account be transferred to this fund.

This fund is used to insure or guarantee rural housing loans, loans for rural rental and cooperative housing, farm labor housing loans, and rural housing site loans. Individual home ownership loans are made to persons of low or moderate incomes and the other type loans are made to individuals or organizations if their need for necessary housing cannot be met with financial assistance from other sources. The insured rural housing loans currently made by the Farmers Home Administration bear interest at 9% for multi-family housing and 8¾% for single family housing with provision for interest credits being granted on insured loans, under certain circumstances which reduce the effective interest rate charged the borrower to as low as 1%.

Home repair loans for very low income owner-occupants are made from amounts available in this fund. Repair and improvement loans, not in excess of $5 thousand are made to these very-low-income families, who are owners of farms or nonfarm rural property, to repair or improve their dwellings in order to make them safe and sanitary and to remove health hazards to the families or the community. These loans are made at 1% interest and are repayable in not more than 20 years.

Individual home ownership loans are made to farm owners, owners of other real estate in rural areas, others who are or will become rural residents, and long-term leaseholders. Loans are repayable in not more than 33 years. Loans are made to enable eligible applicants to construct, improve, alter, repair, or replace dwellings and essential farm service buildings, and may include funds to buy a house and building site. Loans are limited to rural areas which include towns, villages, or other rural places of not more than 10,000 population, which are not part of an urban area.

The Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 provides that loans may also be made in areas with a population in excess of 10,000 but less than 20,000 if such an area is not included within a standard metropolitan statistical area and has a serious lack of mortgage credit as determined by the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

RHIF funds are being targeted to provide greater emphasis on assisting these rural residents who are most in need of improved housing. Consequently, a substantial portion of the subsidized housing programs will be utilized for the purchase and repair of existing housing units to make more lower cost housing available to lower income rural residents who presently occupy substandard housing.

The following table shows actual fiscal year 1975 and estimated fiscal year 1976, transition quarter, and fiscal year 1977 program levels and units.

broadened its farm ownership loan policies so that private or cooperative lenders and the agency can make loans to the same borrowers on the same security.

Loans bearing interest at a rate based on the average rate paid by the U.S. Treasury on obligations with a similar maturity period. The rate for fiscal year 1976 is 8½%. Loans may be scheduled for payment over periods from 1 to 7 years depending on loan purposes. In some situations, they may be renewed for not more than 5 additional years. Loans are secured by crop and chattel liens and, when necessary, by real estate mortgages. Other reliable agricultural credit sources are encouraged to furnish as much as possible of the essential needs of loan applicants with the balance being supplied with an operating loan from the Farmers Home Administration.

Emergency loans are made to established eligible farmers, ranchers, and aquaculture operators for actual losses at 5% interest and annual operating expenses, major adjustments and other essential needs arising from natural disasters at a market rate of interest as established on January 1 and July 1 of each year by the Secretary. Actual loss loans are made for physical losses to repair, restore or replace damaged or destroyed farm property and supplies, and for production losses to compensate for loss of income based on reduced production of crops, livestock and livestock products resulting from the disaster. Repayment terms vary according to the purpose of the loan and the projected reasonable repayment ability of the borrower. The appropriation language makes funds available in such amounts as may be necessary to meet the needs resulting from natural disasters.

2. Grazing loans are made to organizations primarily composed of farmers, ranchers, certain Indian tribes, and other rural residents to provide seasonal grazing for livestock belonging to members of the associations. Membership in an association permits a farmer or rancher to graze his livestock on association pasture for the grazing season and return them to his base unit for the balance of the year. Such a plan provides a farmer or rancher an opportunity to increase the size of his operations. These loans are made at a 5% interest rate for 40 years or less.

RURAL DEVELOPMENT INSURANCE FUND—Continued

The Rural development insurance fund was established on October 1, 1972, pursuant to section 309A of the Rural Development Act of 1972 (Public Law 92-419), approved August 30, 1972, which also provided for transfer of the assets and liabilities of the Agricultural credit insurance fund applicable to loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities to this fund.

The fund is used to insure or guarantee loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities, development of rural business, community facilities, pollution abatement, and economic improvement in rural areas.

Water and waste disposal development loans and essential community facility loans may be made to organizations including certain Indian tribes and corporations not operated for profit and public and quasi-public agencies. Water and waste disposal development loans are made for the development, storage, treatment, purification, or distribution of water or the collection, treatment, or disposal of waste in rural areas. Community facility loans are made to construct, enlarge, extend or otherwise improve community facilities providing essential service to rural residents. Such facilities include those providing or supporting overall community development such as fire and rescue services, transportation, traffic control, and community, social, cultural and recreational benefits. Loans are made for facilities which primarily serve farmers, ranchers, farm tenants, farm laborers and other rural residents of open country and rural towns and villages of not more than 10,000 population, which are not part of an urban area. These loans are repayable in not more than 40 years and bear interest not in excess of 5%.

Industrial development loans are made to public, private, or cooperative organizations organized for profit or nonprofit, to certain Indian tribes, or to individuals. These loans are made for purposes of improving, developing, or financing business, industry, and employment and improving the economic and environmental climate in rural areas. Such purposes include financing business and industrial acquisition, construction, conversion, enlargement, repair or modernization; financing the purchase and development of land, easements, rights-of-way, buildings, equipment, facilities, leases, machinery, supplies, and materials; and payment of startup costs and supplying working capital. Industrial development loans may be made in any area that is not within the outer boundary of any city having a population of 50,000 or more and its immediately adjacent urbanized and urbanizing areas with a population density of more than 100 persons per square mile. Special consideration for such loans is given to areas other than cities having a population of more than 25,000. These loans are repayable in not more than 30 years. The interest rate for guaranteed loans is determined by the lender and the borrower. The interest rate for loans made by Farmers Home Administration to private entrepreneurs is computed on the cost of Treasury borrowing plus an increment to cover administrative costs; loans to public bodies borrowing to install community facilities necessary for community development are made at 5%.

This fund consists of repayments on loans made by FmHA under delegation of authority from the Office of Economic Opportunity which has since been superseded by the Community Services Administration. No new loans have been made since the middle of 1971.

That loan program which was intended to improve the income of low income rural residents and rural cooperatives was discontinued because it was determined to be ineffective. The FmHA continues to service these loans which amounted to $27 million outstanding on June 30, 1975.

The Headstart, Economic Opportunity, and Community Partnership Act of 1974, transferred the remainder of the funds provided for in part A of title III of the Economic Opportunity Act to the Community Services Administration.

Combinations of needed soil and water conservation practices are planned together and in relation to each other so as to have well-balanced conservation programs in each district. The Service aids land users, groups, units of government and other policy and decision-makers marshal the facts and consider the potentials and alternatives before they embark on courses of action. Both vegetative and structural measures are installed in accordance with the needs of the land for protection, treatment, and resource improvement. Plans reflect the decisions of the land users, community groups, and units of government as to how they will use and treat the land and water resources.

Technicians of the Soil Conservation Service explain the various soil conditions, develop alternative uses and treatments, help to evaluate the costs and returns of conservation work, and furnish assistance in applying the needed treatments.

The technical services provided through conservation operations are instrumental in encouraging farmers, ranchers, and others to establish conservation practices. For each dollar used to provide technical assistance, the individual landowner or user invests over $2 in conservation work.

The national land inventory and monitoring program will provide soil, water, and related resource data for land conservation, use and development, for guidance of community development to achieve a balanced rural-urban

This program provides for cooperation between the Federal Government and States and their political subdivisions in installing works of improvement to (1) reduce damage from floodwater, sediment, and erosion, (2) for the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water, and (3) the conservation and proper utilization of land. Loans are available through the Agriculture credit insurance fund of the Farmers Home Administration to sponsoring local organizations to help them finance their share of the costs of certain works of improvement.

Watershed operations authorized by Public Law 534.—The Department cooperates with conservation districts and other local organizations in planning and installing works of improvement for flood prevention in 11 watersheds authorized by the Flood Control Act of 1944. The Federal Government shares the cost of works of improvement for flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife development.

The Department furnishes technical and, in certain instances, financial assistance to landowners to accelerate planning and installation of land treatment measures for runoff retardation, sediment control, and water management. Sponsoring local organizations must furnish all land easements and rights-of-way, water rights, all costs of works of improvement for nonagricultural water management measures (except for those related to fish and wildlife development and recreation), and operate and maintain all completed works of improvement.

Within the 11 authorized projects, 400 subwatershed areas have been identified for planning purposes. Installation progress in these subwatersheds is as follows:

Emergency operations.—This program authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to undertake such emergency measures for runoff retardation and soil erosion prevention as may be needed to safeguard life and property from floods and the products of erosion on any watershed whenever natural elements or force causes a sudden impairment of that watershed. An emergency is considered to exist when a watershed is suddenly impaired by flood, fire, wind, earthquake, or other natural cause and consequently life and property are endangered by floodwater, erosion, or sediment discharge. The emergency area need not be declared a national disaster area to be eligible for emergency watershed protection. Emergency watershed protection is applicable to small-scale, localized disasters as well as large-scale disasters. Where applicable, State environmental, natural resource, fish and game, and other agencies participate in planning and coordinating emergency work.

Emergency operations on non-Federal land is sponsored by State or local organizations. As a condition to receiving assistance the sponsoring organization must provide needed land rights, water rights, and permits and accept responsibility for operation and maintenance, if required, all without cost to the emergency operation funds. The Forest Service does this work on lands it administers and

This program provides cost-sharing assistance and technical services to participating landowners or operators in the Great Plains area in the development and installation of long-term conservation plans and practices for their land. It is a voluntary program which complements other conservation programs of the Department in 469 designated counties of 10 Great Plains States. Contracts with individual landowners range in time from 3 to 10 years.

Plans of conservation operations are made for each farm or ranch as a basis for cost-sharing certain practices. The fundamental purposes of this program are to achieve needed land-use adjustments, conservation treatments, and economic stability of each operating unit. The planned work is installed under contract according to specific time schedules.

Program regulations provide that cost-share rates offered in any contract shall not exceed 80% of the cost of installing eligible practices within the designated county. The rates vary among States and practices due to differences in conservation and program needs. Cost-sharing for irrigation practices in any one contract shall not exceed $7,500. There is also a cost-sharing limitation of $30,000 for any contract.

Each participant who signs a Great Plains program contract is responsible for implementing his plan of operations; and the Department is committed to furnish the necessary technical help needed for design, layout, and other services. Cooperating landowners and operators are encouraged to make use of other available assistance under local, State, and Federal programs as a means of further improving their land and water resources.

As of June 30, 1975, there was a backlog of 5,232 un-serviced applications and about 15,320 active contracts on hand. Cooperating landowners or operators finance the entire cost of installing recurring management-type practices and pay a specified part of the cost-shared practices installed on their land.

Funds for new contracts and corresponding cost-share programming and contract administration work are proposed to be eliminated. This proposal is part of the President's overall proposal to cut taxes with an accompanying limitation on Federal expenditures.

<sup>1</sup> Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are from State, county, municipal, and private organizations for soil and water conservation work rendered under cooperative agreements (16 U.S.C. 590a-590f) and from proceeds of sale of personal property (40 U.S.C. 481(c)).

The Department cooperates with other Federal agencies, states, local units of government, groups and individuals in developing and carrying out programs and plans for resource conservation and development and shares in the cost of installing planned R.C.&D. measures, when justified as a public need. Loans are provided to qualified local sponsoring organizations when needed to help them finance their share of the cost of certain measures which are in the public interest. R.C.&D. measures contribute to the development, protection and management of natural resources, improvement in the economy, and quality of the environment.

Technical assistance is provided in each project area approved for resource conservation and development program assistance to help sponsoring organizations prepare overall project plans for resource conservation and development. The initial phase of project plan development will have been finished and operations begun in 158 areas by June 30, 1976. Project plans will be completed in 26 areas during 1976 and 10 will be completed during 1977. The 10 project plans completed will bring the number of areas authorized for operations by June 30, 1977, to 168.

Each project authorized for operation is provided technical and financial assistance to help local units of government plan and install community-type conservation measures; and, to assist in the preparation of plans for resource development and economic improvement within project areas. Financial contributions, loans, and other Federal assistance are used to help carry out measures specified in project plans.

Loans are made to qualified local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of installing the measures. Funds will be available for loans from the Agricultural credit insurance fund of the Farmers Home Administration.

The main workload factors in 1977 include:

(a) Assistance to local sponsors in developing suitable plans.

(b) Operations in 168 project areas for which initial project plans will have been completed.

(c) Acceleration of R.C.&D. measures installation expected to be made possible by additional State and local funds, and through the use of Resource Conservation and Development program technical and financial assistance for eligible erosion and sediment control, flood prevention, farm irrigation, land drainage, water quality management, soil and water management for control of agriculture related pollutants, and public water-based recreation and fish and wildlife measures.

commodities for distribution to eligible outlets. Distribution is conducted by the Food and Nutrition Service.

For 1975 and 1976 this activity was financed under the section 32 appropriation.

5. Marketing agreements and orders are requested by producers and handlers. Hearings and investigations are conducted and proposed agreements and orders are voted upon by eligible producers or handlers.

Marketing agreements and orders help to stabilize prices, and benefit producers and consumers by establishing and maintaining orderly marketing conditions. Administration at the local level is financed by assessment upon handlers. On June 30, 1975, there were in effect 61 orders for milk, 48 agreements and orders for tree fruits, nuts, and vegetables, and 1 order for shade-grown tobacco. The expenses of advisory committees established to advise the Secretary, public hearings, referendums to determine producer sentiment, and other developmental work as authorized by the Agricultural Act of 1961 are also financed under this activity.

For 1975 and 1976 this activity was financed under the section 32 appropriation.

Note.—Excludes $245,419 thousand in 1977 for activities transferred to: Food and Nutrition Service, $237,368 thousand; Marketing Services, $8,051 thousand.

Under section 32 of the act of August 24, 1935, as amended (7 U.S.C. 612c), 30% of customs receipts collected during each calendar year are automatically appropriated for expanding outlets for nonbasic commodities. An amount equal to 30% of receipts collected on fishery products is transferred to the Department of Commerce to encourage the distribution of such products.

The use of section 32 program funds during 1976 and 1977 will be contingent upon marketing conditions. If surpluses not now foreseen should develop, steps will be taken to use available funds transferred to other accounts for removal or diversion as conditions might warrant.

Funds under this appropriation will be transferred to the Food and Nutrition Service, and the Agricultural Marketing Service, effective in fiscal year 1977. Nearly $600 million will be dedicated to commodity distribution activities under section 6 of the National School Lunch and other authorities specified in the Institutional nutrition support appropriation. The commodity program operating expenses for AMS and the marketing agreements and orders functions are being transferred to the Marketing services appropriation.

1. Commodity program payments currently consist of three types: (a) Direct purchases donated to schools, the elderly, summer camps, child care centers, nonprofit institutions serving needy persons, persons certified by welfare as eligible for relief, and disaster victims; (b) financial assistance to States enable State distributing agencies to improve the distribution system supplying commodities to needy families; and (c) other: Food and Nutrition Service purchases of farina for the special package, supplemental food program. During the past 2 years, assistance under these programs was given to the following commodity groups (in millions of dollars):

2. Cash payments to States were initiated in 1969 to meet the urgent need for providing additional foods to needy children who have been determined to be suffering from general and continued hunger. The funds provided are channeled through the child-feeding programs authorized by the School Lunch and Child Nutrition Acts.

3. Supplemental food programs were initiated in 1969 to meet the urgent need for providing additional foods to needy children and adults who have been determined to be suffering from general and continued hunger. The Department developed a distribution system to provide special food packages for infants, and expectant and new mothers. These packages are being distributed in both food stamp and commodity donation areas.

Funds have also been used for conducting a food certificate program designed to increase the food purchasing power of expectant and new mothers and infants through the issuance of certificates to be exchanged at their local grocery for certain food items.

An additional supplemental food program provides cash grants to health departments or comparable State agencies to make special foods available to women, infants, and children.

4. Cash payments in lieu of commodities.—The availability of commodities as donations to the school lunch and child nutrition programs may be less than the amounts needed to meet the requirements of Public Law 94-105. Cash payments would then be made to the schools to purchase locally the additional commodities needed.

5. Commodity program operating expenses occurred mainly in connection with purchasing and distributing section 32 and Commodity Credit Corporation commodities to eligible outlets.

6. Marketing agreements and orders are requested by producers and handlers. Hearings and investigations are

The institutional nutrition support appropriation includes six of the programs formerly known as the child nutrition programs, and the elderly feeding program. The new designation of institutional nutrition support maintains the identity of the original child nutrition programs and the elderly feeding program; but restricts coverage to include meals provided in institutions which, by law, must be reimbursed on a performance basis. The child nutrition portion of the institutional nutrition support programs has been expanded and made more complex and costly, by the passage of six laws in as many years. Most recently, Public Law 94-105, enacted October 7, 1975, placed new requirements on the child nutrition programs by redefining the term "school" to include previously excluded institutions, extending meal variety and in some cases reimbursement rates, and mandating the service of reduced price meals. The activities under the heading institutional nutrition support are:

- 1. Meal assistance for children (family income above 195% of the poverty guideline).—Includes paid meals under the regular school lunch program (section 4); the school breakfast program; the child care food program; and the associated commodity assistance for these meals furnished pursuant to sections 6, 32, and 416 authorities.
- 2. Reduced price meals for children (family income above the poverty guideline up to 195%).—Includes the reduced price meals under the regular school lunch program (section 4); the special cash assistance program (section 11); the school breakfast program; the child care food program; and the associated commodity assistance for these reduced price meals furnished pursuant to sections 6, 32, and 416 authorities.
- 3. Free meals for children (below the poverty guideline and others).—Includes the free meals under the regular school lunch program (section 4); the special cash assistance program (section 11); the school breakfast program; the child care food program; the summer feeding program including State administrative expenses; and the associated commodity assistance for these free meals pursuant to sections 6, 32, and 416 authorities. Meals are served free to all children participating in the summer feeding program regardless of their family income.
- 4. Elderly feeding.—Provides commodity support for meals served under the Older Americans Act of 1965, as amended.

Participation in the institutional nutrition support programs under the former activity structures and the current activity structures are as follows:

School lunch and special assistance programs.—Assistance in the form of both funds and food is provided to the States for serving lunches to school children. The program provides meal reimbursement on a meals served basis for all lunches served to school children regardless of their families' income and provides additional assistance for meals served free or at a reduced price to children from poor families or near poor families. States must match the Federal cash grant for paid lunches from sources within the State at a 3-to-1 ratio and 8% of the matching funds must come from State appropriated funds. In 1975 sources within the State contributed $2.1 billion to this program, most of which came from children's payments.

The program during the peak month of November in fiscal year 1975 provided lunches daily to about 56.6% of the approximately 41.3 million children in daily attendance. A daily average of approximately 9.8 million children were served 1.6 billion free or reduced price lunches in fiscal year 1975. The funding for fiscal 1976 should provide lunches for a daily average of 10.1 million needy children in schools and approximately 400,000 children in institutions this school year.

School breakfast program.—Public Law 94-105 permanently authorized the breakfast program. Federal support to the States is determined by the number of breakfasts served. In circumstances of severe need, financial assistance may be authorized for up to 100% of the additional assistance needed. The program provides for paid, free, and reduced price breakfasts.

Public Law 94-105, enacted October 7, 1975, separated the nonschool food program into two distinct programs—the summer food program and the child care food program.

Summer food program.—This program is designed to reach school-age children during the summer months who come from areas of economic need although the children do not necessarily have to come from low-income families. Institutions where one-third of the children are needy qualify for the program. Meals must be served free to all children. Recent legislation increases the number of children and groups eligible to participate and permits greater variety in the types of meals to be served. Funds are distributed on a performance basis.

Child care food program.—Preschool children receive year-round food assistance in child day-care centers under this program. Food service programs in Head Start centers are subsidized by this program. Public Law 94-105 provides for extensive changes in the year-round program that will increase reimbursement rates and increase the number of children and the types of institutions eligible. This program provides for paid, free, and reduced price meals.

Commodity procurement program.—This program provides commodities to schools, and supplements the school breakfast child care and summer feeding programs.

Commodities acquired under programs that strengthen markets, income, and supply are made available to schools and child-care institutions.

During fiscal year 1975, $432 million worth of agricultural commodities were supplied.

The special nutrition supplements appropriations re-groups several existing programs into the following new activity structure:

1. Commodities in lieu of food stamps.—This activity was formerly carried out with commodities made available through section 32 surplus removal, section 416 price support, and the direct appropriation of the food donations program.

In fiscal year 1975, $37.5 million in commodities were provided to an average of 330,000 recipients per month. In fiscal year 1976, the average participation continued to decline as recipients continued to transfer to the food stamp program.

In fiscal year 1977, the transfer of recipients to the food stamp program will be completed. Approximately $4.9 million is proposed for this final stage of the food distribution program on Indian reservations.

2. Developmental nutrition supplementation includes: (a) Supplemental feeding program (special package) formerly supported with commodities from section 32, section 416, and the food donations appropriation; (b) the pilot food certificate program; and (c) the special supplemental food program (WIC). These programs all provide supplemental foods for women, infants, and children.

The supplemental feeding program (special package) makes additional foods available to needy women, infants, and children who have been determined to be suffering from general and continued hunger. These packages are being distributed in both food stamp and commodity donation areas. In fiscal year 1975, approximately $17.4 million of commodities were provided to an average of 132,000 participants per month. Participation at yearend peaked at 140,056 consisting of 25,599 infants, 86,686 children, and 27,771 women. The current estimate for fiscal year 1976 anticipates an average caseload of 140,000 per month and will cost about $21.5 million. In fiscal year 1977, the budget assumes that where possible, participants will transfer to the WIC program where medical oversight is available to pregnant and lactating women and children.

The pilot food certificate program operated in limited areas during fiscal year 1975. A total of 7,955 women and children received $668 thousand in food certificates which could be used at retail outlets to purchase milk and baby cereals.

In fiscal year 1976, participation is estimated to average 8,600 participants with a cost of $750,000. In fiscal year 1977, the budget assumes that participants will elect to enter the WIC program which operates similar delivery systems and where medical oversight and higher benefits are available.

The special supplemental food program (WIC) is authorized in section 17 of the Child Nutrition Act of 1966, as amended, and is available to pregnant or lactating women, infants and young children who are determined by competent professionals to be nutritional risks because of inadequate nutrition and inadequate income.

In most areas, a voucher system makes it possible for participants to purchase the food items at their neighborhood grocery. In other areas, home delivery of the specified items is made.

3. Projects support includes: Food service equipment grants authorized under the Child Nutrition Act of 1966; State administrative expenses authorized under the Child Nutrition Act of 1966; nutritional training and surveys; grants for nutrition education; financial assistance under direct distribution to families and cash assistance under the food donations program.

The Food and Nutrition Service administers the food stamp, institutional nutrition support, and special nutrition supplements programs. Food Program Administration provides for the overall administration of these programs. Among the activities performed are formulation of policies, promulgation of regulations, program development, enforcement of regulations, administrative reviews, management and technical assistance to State agencies and participating schools, program outreach, retailer-wholesaler compliance reviews, certification and issuance enforcement, the protection of civil rights as they relate to the programs, allocation of funds and commodities, and other activities in support of the Agency's programs. To accomplish this 2,709 staff-years of effort will be required in 1977.

1. Forest land management.—(a) National forest protection and management.—The 155 national forests and 19 units of national grasslands are managed under multiple use and sustained yield principles. The natural resources of outdoor recreation, range, timber, watershed, and wildlife are utilized in a planned combination that will best meet the needs of the Nation without impairing productivity of the land and that will be environmentally acceptable. The management and utilization principles were recognized in the Multiple Use-Sustained Yield Act of June 12, 1960 (74 Stat. 215). Work programs and budget estimates are related to demands for national forest resources through 1977 and in consideration of projected demands through the year 2020. Funds appropriated under Cooperative range improvements are merged with this appropriation for obligational purposes.

(b) Fighting forest fires.—Provides for employment of additional manpower and other facilities for forest fire emergencies and emergency rehabilitation of burned areas which cannot be met under National forest protection and management. Costs above estimates for the current and budget years are authorized from advances from other Forest Service appropriations. A supplemental appropriation for fighting forest fires is anticipated for 1976 and the transition quarter.

(c) Forest insect and disease control.—Activities to suppress and control destructive insects, diseases, and air pollutants that threaten all forest and related resource lands. This work is carried on jointly with Federal, State, and private landowners and includes prevention, detection, biological evaluation, and suppression. Sound environmentally acceptable forest pest management practices are used to help fill the needs of an ever-increasing population for fiber, water, recreation, wildlife habitat, esthetics, and a healthful environment.

(d) Cooperative law enforcement.—Public Law 92-82 authorizes the cooperation with any State or political subdivision thereof in the enforcement of State or local laws on lands of the National Forest System.

2. Forest research.—Research is conducted at eight regional forest experiment stations, the Forest Products Laboratory, and the Institute of Tropical Forestry.

(a) Forest and range management.—Research provides land managers and owners with a sound basis for management of timber, forage, wildlife, recreation, and watershed lands. Studies are conducted to maintain a sustained yield of products; improve forage and habitat for livestock and wildlife without damage to soil, watershed, or other values; assure maximum regular flow of usable water, and reduce floods and sedimentation; improve methods for developing and managing recreation resources; provide technology needed to make it possible to surface-mine areas as needed to meet mineral and energy needs with minimum impacts on productivity and esthetic value of the lands; and provide management methods for all uses that will insure environmental protection.

(b) Forest protection.—Research is conducted to develop measures for the protection of forests from damage by fire, insects, and diseases. Forest fire and atmospheric science research provides improved methods of preventing fires, predicting fire danger, and preparing for and combating fire by combinations of ground and aerial methods. Insect and disease research develops direct controls, cultural measures, and biological agents to combat forest pests.

(c) Forest products and engineering.—Studies are conducted to develop new and improved forest products, to reduce and utilize waste, and to use low-quality wood and less desirable species. Research is also conducted to advance the efficiency of forestry operations, and to develop and evaluate equipment for such operations as harvesting, planting, timber stand improvement, and protection of forests.

(d) Forest resource economics.—Investigations are conducted to inventory and appraise the condition of forest lands, volume and quality of standing timber, ownership of timber resources, annual growth and depletion, and the potential need for timber products. Economic studies are made of forest crop production, resource productivity, and the marketing potentials of forest products.

3. State and private forestry cooperation.—Cooperates and shares responsibilities with State and other public and private agencies in guiding the protection, management, and use of non-Federal forests and related lands and resources. Specific activities include technical and financial assistance, resource protection, resource planning, and other actions designed to optimize a sustained flow of benefits and products from these lands.

(a) Forest fire control.—Assistance is furnished all States, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, and Guam in preventing and suppressing forest fires on private and local public lands by financial aid, coordination, training, development, and procurement of equipment, and a nationwide fire prevention campaign. About 91% of the 690 million acres of non-Federal forest ownership planned for protection is now covered. The financial assistance provided through this program merely supplements State funds. It will be reduced in fiscal year 1977 and phased out in fiscal year 1978. Of the total expenditures under this program, 84.8% is contributed by States and counties, 0.6% by private owners, and 14.6% by the Federal Government.

(b) Forest tree planting.—Financial and technical assistance is provided to the States, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, and Guam for the production, acquisition, and distribution of over one-half of the Nation's tree planting stock for forest and windbarrier planting on non-Federal lands. More than 50 million acres of nonstocked, poorly stocked, or open lands need to be reforested.

(c) Forest management and processing.—In cooperation with all States, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, and Guam, technical assistance is given to woodland owners in applying multiple use management to their forest holdings, and to operators of forest products manufacturing plants in improving their manufacturing and processing techniques to extend supplies of timber, range, water, wildlife habitat, recreation, and esthetic values.

(d) General forestry assistance.—Technical management assistance is provided usually by Federal personnel and also through other arrangements to State, community, private, and other Federal agencies, forest industries, colleges, and landowners. This program also provides forest products utilization assistance to wood-using industries and loggers, technical assistance for State land use planning, nonpoint pollution control, endangered species protection, and for wild and scenic river studies on State and private lands.

The Working capital fund was established by the act of August 3, 1956 (16 U.S.C. 579b), as amended by the act of October 23, 1962 (16 U.S.C. 579b). It is a self-sustaining revolving fund which provides services to national forests, experiment stations, and when necessary, to other Federal agencies, and as provided by law, to State and private agencies and persons who cooperate with the Forest Service in fire control and other authorized programs.

The forestry related supply and support services provided by the Working capital fund in fiscal year 1975 included:

Equipment service which owns, operates, maintains, replaces, and repairs common use motor driven and similar equipment. This equipment is rented to administrative units, i.e., national forests, experiment stations, and other units, and in some cases to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of operation, repair and maintenance, management, and depreciation. The rates also include an increment which provides additional cash which, when added to depreciation earnings and the residual value of equipment, provides sufficient funds to replace the equipment.

Aircraft service which operates, maintains, and repairs Forest Service owned aircraft used in fire surveillance and suppression and in other Forest Service programs. The aircraft are rented to national forests, experiment stations, and in some cases to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of depreciation, operation, maintenance, repair, and improvements in the airworthiness of the aircraft. Aircraft replacement costs are financed from either appropriated funds or the Forest Service Working capital fund, or a combination of both.

Supply service which operates the following common services:

Central supply which procures, stores, and issues grass seed to national forests, experiment stations, and others at prices which recover costs.

Photo reproduction laboratories which store, reproduce, and supply aerial photographs, aerial maps, and other photographs of national forest lands. The photographic reproductions are sold to national forests, experiment stations, and others at cost.

Sign shops which manufacture and supply special signs for the national forests for use in regulating traffic and as information to the public and other users of the national forests. The signs are sold to national forests and experiment stations at cost.

Subsistence which prepares and serves meals to Forest Service crews working in areas where adequate public restaurant facilities are not available.

Cribbing which manufactures special concrete structural material used in embankments for erosion control purposes along access roads in the national forests. This material is sold to national forests at prices which recover costs.

Nurseries which operate forest tree nurseries and cold storage facilities for storage of tree and seed stock and a seed extractory. Tree seed is procured, cleaned, bagged, and stored in refrigerated facilities. Tree and seed stock is sold to national forests, States, and other Federal agencies at cost.

Legislation is proposed to provide block grants to States to feed needy children. This would establish comprehensive authority in lieu of the present complex, fragmented, and overlapping programs. States would have substantial flexibility in the design and delivery of feeding programs which would be geared to local preferences and conditions.

The activities of this appropriation provide for the collection, compilation, and publication of a broad range of current statistics dealing with economic, demographic, and social data.

1. Current economic statistics programs.—(a) Business statistics.—Monthly surveys provide current retail sales data by kind of business and major geographic areas. In addition, for major retail business categories, national data are published on weekly sales, end-of-month inventories, and accounts receivable. Annual estimates are made for retail purchases, inventories, and sales-inventory ratios. Surveys also provide (1) monthly national estimates of receipts of selected service industries, and (2) sales and inventories of merchant wholesalers. Estimates are made quarterly of green coffee roastings and inventories and periodically on canned food stocks.

The 1977 estimate provides for improving the accuracy and reliability of measures of current business inventories by conducting an annual benchmark survey of inventories held by wholesalers.

(b) Construction statistics.—Monthly reports are published for housing starts, residential and nonresidential construction authorized by building permits, and the value of new construction put in place.

Quarterly reports are provided on expenditures for residential alterations and repairs, and quarterly price indexes are compiled for new single-family houses sold. An annual report is published on permits issued for demolition of residential structures.

(c) Manufacturing statistics.—Statistics are provided monthly on manufacturers' shipments, inventories, and orders for total manufacturing for about 38 industry categories, and quarterly on sales and inventory expectations. An annual survey of manufactures produces statistics on important measures of factory operations such as employment, value added, and investment. Monthly, quarterly, and annual commodity surveys are conducted of production, shipments, orders, and materials consumed for important industries and products.

The 1977 request provides for improvements in inventory data on the manufacturing sector needed for the national income accounts and for other analyses of current economic data.

(d) General economic statistics.—This subactivity includes the industrial directory and related programs which provide uniform classification data and other general economic statistics. The industrial directory lists all U.S. business firms and their establishments, and is designed to provide Federal statistical programs with a common frame for obtaining and interpreting economic data. An annual county business pattern report provides data on nonfarm employees and payrolls by detailed kind of business and by county. Data are provided on industrial mergers, acquisitions and disposals; and industry and commodity classification and coding programs are developed, maintained, revised and evaluated.

(e) Foreign trade statistics.—Monthly, cumulative-to-date, and annual reports are published on the quantity, shipping weight, and dollar value of imports and exports, by mode of transportation, detailed commodity category, customs district, and country of origin or destination.

The 1977 request provides for responsibilities under the Trade Act of 1974 including the development of a program to monitor imports for an early warning mechanism needed for the adjustment assistance provision of the Act; the compilation of import data to identify articles to be duty-free from developing countries; and the establishment of comparability in classification for imports, exports, and domestic production.

(f) State and local government statistics.—Reports are published annually regarding the revenue, expenditures, indebtedness and debt transactions, financial assets, employment, and payrolls of State and local governments.

Quarterly information on the national level is furnished regarding State and local tax revenue by type of tax and governmental level. Technical consultation and assistance are provided to State and local government officials, and catalogs are published detailing the statistical publications and data available which would be of use to State and local government officials. Statistics regarding the construction expenditures of State and local governments are provided monthly.

(g) Agriculture statistics.—Information on cotton ginnings and production, as required by statute, is compiled and published. Statistical services are provided regarding the information from the census of agriculture.

2. Current demographic statistics programs.—(a) Population statistics.—This subactivity provides annual estimates of the population of the United States, each of the States, counties, SMSA's, congressional districts, and other governmental units. It also includes current estimates of the number of households, the farm population, school enrollment and educational levels, individual and family income, population mobility, size of families, voting registration and other characteristics of the population.

(b) Housing statistics.—National and regional quarterly estimates are provided for housing vacancy rates. The program also provides vacancy rates for broad classes of rental and homeowner portions of the housing market and produces information on selected characteristics of the occupied housing inventory. In addition, current annual estimates of the housing inventory are developed.

3. Other programs and publications.—(a) Statistical Abstract and supplements.—The Annual Statistical Abstract, issued annually, summarizes government and private statistics of the industrial, social, political, and economic activities of the United States.

The 1977 request provides for monthly chart books on domestic developments to provide policy makers and the public with the latest social, demographic, and economic information.

(b) General research.—Research is conducted on survey methods and techniques, including sample surveys methods and theory, questionnaire design, response errors, equipment design and utilization, computer editing and administrative control, operations, and analytical techniques including techniques of geographic analysis for the purpose of increasing accuracy, output, and usefulness of statistical data per unit of cost.

Note.—Excludes $67 thousand in 1976, $20 thousand in TQ, and $80 thousand in 1977 for activities transferred to General Administration, Salaries, and expenses. Comparable amounts for 1975 ($80 thousand) and 1976 ($13 thousand) are included above.

This appropriation provides for comprehensive and detailed information in several major economic and demographic areas once or twice each decade. It also funds geographic support activities required by the various censuses, the acquisition of large-scale data processing equipment and other major periodic activities which may be authorized.

1. Economic statistics programs.—(c) 1977 economic censuses.—The economic censuses supply statistics, as provided for in 13 U.S.C. 131, on the volume of production, trade, and characteristics of the Nation's industrial and business enterprises. Economic censuses covering manufactures, mineral industries, retail, wholesale and service trades, construction, and transportation, are taken every 5th year covering years ending in 2 and 7.

The 1977 estimate provides for the design, preparation, and printing of the report forms, updating reference materials, preparing mailing lists, writing and testing computer programs, and completing the procedures for the collection and processing of the data.

(d) 1977 census of governments.—This census collects and compiles statistics from State and local governments on such items as taxes, tax valuations, governmental receipts, expenditures, indebtedness, and employees of States, counties, cities, and other governmental units. This census is taken, as specified by 13 U.S.C. 161, every 5th year for years ending in 2 and 7.

The budget provides for expanded collection of data on taxable property values (publication of data for approximately 2,000 assessing jurisdictions), completion of planning for finance and employment phases, beginning of finance data collection and the completion of data collection in the governmental organization area.

(e) 1974 census of agriculture.—A census of agriculture is required every 5th year, covering years ending in 4 and 9, by 13 U.S.C. 142. The census provides measures concerning the agricultural economy of each State and county.

Activities of this census will be completed in 1977, including the review, tabulation, and publication of State reports, and census evaluation. In addition, statistics descriptive of corporations involved in agricultural activities will be published.

(f) 1978 census of agriculture.—Legislation is pending to amend section 142 of title 13, U.S.C. to reschedule the reference year of the census of agriculture from 1979 to 1978 and thereafter to years ending in 2 and 7, to coincide with the economic censuses. The transition to concurrent years for the agriculture and economic censuses would provide improvements in the national economic accounts. In addition to the regular data collected in the census, the proposal would schedule the censuses of irrigation and drainage in 1978 and 1987 and every 10 years thereafter.

2. Demographic statistics programs.—(b) Intercensal demographic estimates.—This program provides for the development and preparation of updated population and per capita income estimates as required by the Department of the Treasury for the equitable allocation of funds under the General Revenue Sharing Act. Administrative records, including birth and death data as well as income and place of residence information from Internal Revenue Service files, are utilized to generate the estimates for approximately 38,500 general purpose governmental units. In addition to their use of revenue sharing, these estimates serve the same general purpose needs as other population data which enter into other Federal and State fund allocations, facilities and services planning, and legislative decisions.

(c) 1980 decennial census.—The decennial census of population and housing, which is required by title 13, U.S.C. 141, involves the enumeration of the total population of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, Canal Zone, and other areas of U.S. sovereignty or jurisdiction.

The 1977 budget provides for such elements as determination of the content of the census, pretest activities, data-processing systems analysis and construction, development of sampling and evaluation procedures, and a program of geographical joint statistical activities. Agreements and contracts will be undertaken that also involve local area participation in the development of the basic 1980 geographic coding framework.

(d) Registration and voting survey.—This survey is required by the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 1973b), as amended in 1975 by Public Law 94-73. Biennial surveys are to be conducted in every State or political subdivision determined to fall under the requirements of the Act.

The 1977 request provides for the data collection, processing, quality control, review and release of the data.

3. Periodic programs geographic support.—This program provides for the maintenance of a continuing program to fulfill the geographic requirements of the various periodic censuses and large-scale surveys and involves accurate identification of both political and statistical areas, preparation of maps, and maintenance of geographic base files.

4. Data processing equipment.—This program provides for leasing of selected electronic data processing equipment to update existing computer systems.

Capital outlay.—1. Large scale data processing equipment.—The 1977 request provides for the purchase of additional electronic equipment needed to modernize the data processing installation of the Bureau of the Census.

2. Other capital outlay.—This provides for the acquisition of office furniture, machines, and other miscellaneous equipment necessary to conduct periodic censuses and surveys.

As an extension of its primary mission, the Bureau of the Census provides statistical data and analyses to other Federal agencies as well as utilizing its technical capabilities to provide various statistical, analytical, training, and data processing services. Such work or services are provided to the extent that there is no interference with the conduct of the regular work financed from funds appropriated to the Census Bureau and that they are consistent with the Bureau's public duties and obligations.

Major changes from 1976 to 1977 include increases for an additional expansion of the Current Population Survey conducted for the Department of Labor, and the Travel and Transportation Survey conducted for the Department of Transportation. However, the increases are offset by reductions in such areas as the survey of income and education and the survey of institutionalized persons being conducted for the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

The Bureau of the Census performs special statistical work and data analyses, at cost, when the services are consistent with the Bureau's duties, have been determined to be in the public interest, and the statistics furnished will not identify individuals or particular organizations. Census is authorized to perform these services under 13 U.S.C. 8.

On a continuing basis, Census furnishes age and citizenship data to individuals for their use in qualifying for social security, old-age benefits, retirement, passport, court litigation, insurance settlements, etc. Special censuses are conducted for States, counties, cities, towns, or other political divisions requiring an up-to-date count of their population. Census also periodically performs statistical work and data analyses for State and local governments, universities, trade associations, and individuals upon request.

The programs of the Economic Development Administration are designed to reduce the incidence of substantial and persistent unemployment in economically distressed areas throughout the Nation. They also improve the ability of State and local officials to resolve problems of economic adjustment and development by assisting in planning, coordination, and implementation activities at all levels of government. Assistance will also be provided to help firms and communities adversely affected by import competition. The agency's ability to meet its objectives has been strengthened by revisions of its authorizing legislation which give State and local officials broad discretion in designing economic adjustment programs tailored to their particular needs. Obligations by program are (in thousands of dollars):

EDA strives to meet these objectives through the use of a broad range of program tools including the following:

1. Public works and business development.—a. Public works grants.—Provide funds for the construction or expansion of public works projects which improve a community's capacity for economic growth through the development of a structure conducive to the location of industrial and commercial enterprises. Public works projects are funded through the award of direct grants, supplementary grants, and bonus grants, or through a combination of these tools.

b. Public works loans.—Are made in association with public works grants to help communities which are not able to obtain their share of the required project funding from other sources.

c. Business loans and guarantees.—Finance business development projects including long-term low-interest loans for fixed assets to businesses willing to establish or expand operations in the Nation's economically distressed areas. In addition, the act authorizes direct working capital loans, working capital guarantees, guarantees of fixed asset loans made by private institutions, and guarantees of lease payments for buildings and equipment.

2. Planning, technical assistance, and research.—a. Planning assistance.—Encourages and supports local development organizations by providing professional planning help and related services. Since its inception, EDA has been making grants under the authority of section 301 which cover the administrative costs of employing a professional full-time staff to work for these organizations in carrying out their planning and development programs. The funds requested will also enable EDA to fund the section 302 planning grants which were initiated in 1975. These include economic development planning grants to States and to other political subdivisions, including cities, and grants to enable districts to obtain short-term professional assistance.

b. Technical assistance.—Will continue to support those projects which, (1) provide appropriate, specific responses to accomplish particular economic development actions such as management and operational technical assistance to help assure the success of grant and loan projects, and (2) support institutional and demonstration projects that directly benefit a number of local and regional economic development groups and organizations. Feasibility studies and other site-related projects will also be funded.

c. Development research.—Assists in the development of improved agency and other public programs and policies of regional development.

3. Regional assistance.—Includes the Title V Regional Commission programs which were financed from the Development facilities and Planning, technical assistance and research appropriations prior to 1971.

4. Grants to States.—Is a program initiated in 1975 and authorized by section 304 of the act, which enables States to supplement grants or to make new grants or loans consistent with the authority of titles I, II, and IV of the act. Funds approved under this new program are distributed among the States based on the percentage of title I funds received by each State since the beginning of EDA. This new program is carried out in consonance with the plans developed under section 302 of the act. In 1977, EDA will continue to approve projects which will be funded from amounts allocated to the States in 1975 and 1976.

5. Economic adjustment.—Is a program initiated in 1975 to provide adjustment and recovery assistance to help State and local areas resolve problems related to actual or threatened long-term unemployment or low income. Assistance may be provided to facilitate community adjustments to changes such as natural disasters or the closing of a major employer in the area. Assistance may also be available under this program for communities adversely impacted by international trade. Grants are made to eligible recipients, who utilize funds directly or redistribute them. Funds can be used directly for public facilities, public services, business development, planning, research or technical assistance, or redistributed through grants, loans, or loan guarantees.

The Trade Expansion Act of 1962 authorized trade adjustment assistance to firms injured or threatened with injury by increased imports when the increase was due to a trade agreement entered into by the United States. Administration of this program was formerly assigned to the Domestic and International Business Administration. The original Act has been superseded by the Trade Act of 1974 which revises the assistance programs. The Economic Development Administration has responsibility for the implementation of the new programs.

Activities in this account will center around the care and preservation of collateral and honoring guarantees made in prior years.

The Regional Action Planning Commissions are authorized by title V of the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965, as amended, to assist in the solution of problems of economic dislocation or lag on a multistate regional basis rather than a locality by locality basis. Seven regional commissions, Coastal Plains, Four Corners, New England, Old West, Ozarks, Pacific Northwest, and Upper Great Lakes, encompass all or part of 31 States. Each Commission is composed of the Governors of member States of the region and a Federal cochairman appointed by the President. They are assisted by a commission staff which is supported by the Federal Government and the member States. The program is a Federal-State partnership which jointly plans and executes development programs to help overcome economic lag and regional problems such as energy, transportation, and resource use.

1. Development programs.—During their initial years, the Commissions concentrated on developing broad comprehensive economic development plans. This focus was later expanded to include technical assistance and supplemental grants-in-aid. The 1977 development funds will continue the planning process, technical assistance and supplemental grant programs and a support program carried on by the Department of Commerce.

2. Administrative expenses.—This activity provides for staff costs of the Commissions, the Federal cochairmen, and the Special Assistant to the Secretary for Regional Economic Coordination. The administrative expenses of all the Commissions are financed 50% by the Federal Government and 50% by the respective member States.

The activities of the Domestic and International Business Administration of the Department of Commerce seek to strengthen the economy of the United States by promoting the growth and competitive position of U.S. industry and products in domestic and international markets in a manner consistent with national security and economic policy.

1. International economic policy and research.—This program provides U.S. Government with economic analyses, policy recommendations and negotiating strategies for the successful implementation of international economic policies. The program's role in the development of U.S. international commercial policy is focused principally on promoting U.S. international commerce to insure commercial interest in the development of trade and investment policies. The 1977 request reflects the elimination of the competitive assessment program.

2. Domestic business and industry affairs.—Provides reports, analyses, and studies on basic economic conditions and the pending problems facing the Nation's major manufacturing, service, and trade sectors. The program recommends and promotes policies to improve domestic business practices and assists business and industry in utilizing Government services and assuring that environmental factors affecting them are adequately considered. The 1977 request reflects a deemphasis on information packaging and special publications.

DOMESTIC AND INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION—CON.

3. Resources and import programs.—Assists industry in resolving the growing import competition and resources availability problems associated with adequate supplies of raw materials, and the protection of equitable opportunities to compete in world trading markets. DIBA also administers certain statutory functions relating to imports, basic commodities, and foreign trade zones.

4. International trade development.—Encourages and assists U.S. businesses to export by conducting market research and trade promotion events overseas, such as trade fairs, trade center shows, trade missions, seminars, and department store promotions of U.S. consumer goods in both developed and emergent markets; by assisting U.S. companies to compete for foreign capital projects and product purchases; and by providing foreign marketing information and “early warnings” of overseas sales leads. Increased resources will provide for the establishment of a trade center in Sao Paulo, Brazil. The 1977 request reflects the elimination of the commercial presence fairs, the closing of two developed market trade centers which are of lower priority than other export promotion activities, and a reduction in the scope of activities at the Frankfurt Trade Center for which other events in the German market will be substituted.

5. East-West trade.—Implements the National program to expand the U.S. trade with the centrally planned markets of the U.S.S.R., Eastern Europe, and the People's Republic of China, and to maintain and normalize commercial and economic relationships with these countries.

6. Export administration.—Administers the Export Administration Act of 1969, as amended, to assure that the National security is not compromised by items exported, that foreign policy objectives are furthered, that the domestic economy is protected from the excessive drain of scarce materials and commodities, that the inflationary impact of foreign demand is reduced, and that restrictions on access to foreign supplies that have or may cause a serious domestic inflationary impact, have caused or may cause a serious domestic shortage, or have been imposed for purposes of influencing the foreign policy of the United States are removed.

7. Field operations.—Serves as the Department's principal medium of contact with the local business communities for planning, arranging and participating in the delivery of the Department's business related programs; delivers information and services to businesses and “multiplier” agencies on the international and domestic programs of the Department such as energy conservation, productivity measurement, and export promotion. In addition, the activity publishes the “Commerce Business Daily” in accordance with Public Law 87-305.

8. Industrial defense mobilization.—Supports the Defense Production Act of 1950, to assure timely delivery of defense requirements for materials, construction, and research and development; an adequate supply of strategic and critical materials; and maximum readiness of the industrial resources of the United States to meet any future national emergency.

9. Administration.—Provides comprehensive administrative management services, such as budgeting, accounting, personnel, general office services, and public affairs, essential to all program elements in the achievement of their goals and objectives. The 1977 request reflects the elimination of the formal management intern program.

The Office of Minority Business Enterprise (OMBE) was established under Executive Order 11458 of March 5, 1969, and began operating that year. On October 13, 1971, Executive Order 11625 was issued which prescribed additional arrangements for developing and coordinating a national program for minority business enterprise. The substantive provisions of Executive Order 11458 of March 5, 1969, are carried over and expanded in Executive Order 11625.

In its role of encouraging minority business enterprise leadership, the Office of Minority Business Enterprise, seeks to create improved national conditions within which the minority people of the United States will have an equal opportunity to participate in the American business system.

1. Community investment.—Through this activity, OMBE provides funds to establish and assist several kinds of community-based business development organizations to help minorities create new businesses and expand existing ones. Approximately 195 community-based business development organizations will be in operation during 1976 and 185 during 1977.

2. Private investment.—OMBE funds private organizations, such as Business Resource Centers (BRCs), to assist minority firms by providing specialized services and by encouraging voluntary assistance for these firms. This assistance includes greater access to capital, markets, business opportunities, management skills and technical assistance. Approximately 52 organizations will be under this activity in 1976 and 47 during 1977.

3. Government investment.—OMBE funds State OMBEs which are similar to the national OMBE program. This is an effort to utilize the capabilities, knowledge and resources of the State governments to enhance minority business development. State OMBEs will be operating in approximately 17 locations during 1976 and 1977.

4. Business management development.—This activity was terminated by OMBE in 1975 and 1976 in the belief that minority business education will be coordinated more effectively by HEW's Office of Education which provides planning, direction, and funding through the Minority Enterprise Interagency Task Force for Education and Training.

5. Experiment and demonstration.—In this activity, research, training, study, experiment and demonstration projects are undertaken to develop data required by OMBE, to identify programmatic gaps in the minority enterprise effort, and to develop and test ways of filling these gaps and/or of generally improving the minority business program. Approximately 11 organizations will be funded in 1976 and 1977 to carry out these functions.

6. Program development and management.—Through this activity, OMBE provides for the central management, administration and direction of the OMBE program. Funds requested in 1977 provide support for 230 permanent positions, including the headquarters and national office in Washington and six regional offices.

1. Promotion of travel to the United States.—Direct promotion programs are being concentrated in the six foreign countries with the greatest potential for producing tourism revenue for the United States. Emphasis will be on developing economical package tours to make the United States more competitive as a destination, and on supporting U.S.-bound tours with consumer advertising, public information, and travel trade training programs. The projected visitor arrivals and earnings for 1977 are estimated at 17.8 million arrivals and $6.3 billion in foreign exchange earnings. Of the total visitor arrivals and earnings projected for 1977, it is estimated that 600,000 arrivals and $296 million in earnings can be identified as being related to USTS program efforts.

2. Tourist services and facilities.—Emphasis is on developing reception and service facilities for the substantial influx of foreign visitors expected during the bicentennial era. The objective for 1977 is to continue receptionist programs at major gateways.

3. Industry and State programs.—U.S. industry, States, and cities will be encouraged to participate in promoting travel to the United States through a program designed to provide them with essential market information and basic data, and through a matching grant program to assist States and cities with up to half the cost of worthwhile, locally developed programs. USTS will also work with industry to establish incentive travel programs to the United States from American-owned businesses abroad, to increase foreign attendance at U.S. trade shows, and to convince international associations to select the United States as their convention site. This activity also included funds in 1976 and the transition quarter relevant to tourism by U.S. citizens within the United States.

4. Executive direction.—This activity provides management direction and centralized overhead support to USTS operating programs.

This appropriation provides for the research, development, support of operating programs, and acquisition of facilities needed to fulfill the basic responsibilities of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

1. Mapping, charting, and surveying services.—This activity provides for the systematic collection, processing, and analyses of data required for charting the Nation's coastal and Great Lakes regions; production of aeronautical charts for safe and efficient commercial and general aviation use of the national airspace system; and basic geodetic surveys. A decrease for 1977 will result from the closing of the Lake Survey Center.

2. Ship support services.—This activity provides for operation and logistical support of the NOAA ships and management of the marine centers.

3. Ocean fisheries and living marine resources.—This activity provides for continued consumer availability of safe fishery products, viable commercial and marine sports fishing, and conservation of endangered species, by protecting, developing, and managing our living marine resources, including the seal herd of the Pribilof Islands. The increases for 1977 will provide for the expansion of marine resource monitoring, assessment and prediction programs; a stronger program for marine mammals protection; and expansion of data on recreational fishing. Also administrative support to the Federal Ship Financing Fund has been transferred to that fund.

4. Marine ecosystems analysis and ocean dumping.—This activity provides critical environmental information for the effective management of the marine environment and its resources. The 1977 Budget provides for an increase to evaluate deepwater dumpsites. A reduction in 1977 for the New York Bight project is requested.

5. Marine technology.—This activity provides for development, testing, evaluation, and calibration of oceanographic instruments for use by Federal agencies, State and local governments, and private industry. The 1977 increase provides for establishing a marine minerals program.

6. Sea grant.—The sea grant program carries out the provisions of the National Sea Grant College and Program Act of 1966 by making matching fund grants to public and private universities, institutes, and industries to seek solutions to problems related to management and use of marine resources, and transfer of new technology to marine users.

7. Basic environmental services.—This activity provides the fundamental networks of observations, communications systems, analyses and predictions, and maintenance that are essential for all forecasts and warnings. The 1977 request will provide an increase for expanded communications computer capability.

8. Environmental satellite services.—This activity provides for the operation of a national environmental satellite system using satellites in polar orbits for observations of global cloud patterns and vertical profiles of temperature and moisture, and satellites in geosynchronous orbits to provide near-continuous observations of North and South America and surrounding oceans. Increases for 1977 will provide for continuation of the third generation polar orbiting spacecraft; GOES data collection system support; continuation of GOES spacecraft procurement; and continued development and application of data from NASA's SEASAT-A spacecraft.

9. Public forecast and warning services.—This activity provides weather services to the general public; hurricane and tornado warnings, and river and flood forecasts and warnings to all segments of the population, industry, and Government; weather and sea predictions for marine interests; and research to improve these services. The request for 1977 provides funds to reimburse the Department of Defense for hurricane reconnaissance. The 1977 request also reflects a reduction in the cost of weather wire services and in public weather observation and other services because of greater productivity.

10. Specialized environmental services.—This activity provides environmental services for the support of aviation operations nationwide and agricultural operations in selected areas; weather services to help protect the Nation's forests and range lands from fires, and to support clean air operations by Government and industry; and information on the sun's activities and conditions in near-space for use by the Nation's space program, by telecommunications agencies and industries, and by electric power distributors.

11. Environmental data and information services.—This activity provides the public, industry, and all levels of government with basic data and products on the atmosphere, oceans, solid earth, the sun, and nearspace. A series of standard products meet many user needs and special analyses are prepared in response to requirements such as determinations of locations for powerplants and superports, and stresses on offshore drilling rigs; and energy allocation decisions.

12. Global monitoring of climatic change.—This activity represents the United States' part of a United Nations-sponsored worldwide program to monitor carefully the long-term changes taking place in the earth's atmosphere, assess the effects of these changes on weather and climate and predict the changes that will occur in global weather and climate.

13. Weather modification.—This research activity examines the feasibility of modifying hurricanes and other severe storms to reduce their intensity. In addition, this activity supports research into means of increasing rainfall from tropical cumulus clouds and provides the instrumented aircraft that support all NOAA research programs. The 1977 increase will provide for additional aircraft operations.

14. International projects.—This activity includes two major programs involving international participation, the Global Atmospheric Research Program (GARP) and the International Field Year for the Great Lakes (IFYGL). The two major active experiments in GARP are the GARP Atlantic Tropical Experiment, in which 13 nations concluded a highly successful observational phase in the summer of 1974 as a basis for the present analysis phase, and the first GARP global experiment, whose observing period is planned for 1978/79. IFYGL is a joint United States-Canadian project now engaged in analysis of Field Year data which it has already measured on hydrological, physical, chemical, and biological processes in Lake Ontario and its drainage basin.

15. Retired pay, commissioned officers.—This activity provides for the retirement pay of NOAA commissioned officers and payment of survivors of retired officers under the Retired Servicemen's Family Protection Plan and the Survivor's Benefit Plan.

This appropriation provides for administration, management, beneficial use, protection, and development of the land and water resources of the Nation's coastal zone, by providing grants to States for the planning and management of their coastal areas consistent with the Coastal Zone Management Act.

1. Program development grants.—These grants, made under section 305 of the act, permit correction of existing inadequate arrangements for planning and regulating land and water uses in the coastal zone by developing comprehensive coastal zone management programs. Grants have ranged in value from about $80 thousand to $1,200 thousand. A decrease of $2,800 thousand is being made in 1977 because 14 States have completed their program development programs and are eligible for section 306 grants.

2. Program administration grants.—These grants, made under section 306 of the act, are for conducting ongoing activities related to carrying out State responsibilities, such as land and water use regulation, monitoring, and enforcement, which are contained in the approved management program. It is expected that eight States will have development programs approved and will receive initial program administration grants in 1976. These States will require second year grants in 1977. Six other States and territories are scheduled for the completion and approval of their development programs and will require initial funding during 1977. An increase of $5,150 thousand will provide grants for these six additional States.

3. Estuarine sanctuaries.—These grants, made under section 312 of the act, provide for the acquisition, development and operation of estuarine sanctuaries for the purpose of creating natural field laboratories in which studies can be made of the processes occurring within coastal estuaries. For 1974, the first year for which funds were appropriated, $4,000 thousand was made available for estuarine sanctuaries. One grant was awarded in 1974 for $824 thousand, two grants totaling $1,825 thousand were awarded in 1975, and the remaining $1,351 thousand will be awarded in 1976. An additional $3,000 thousand is requested in 1977 to assist States and territories in establishing a national system of estuarine sanctuaries for research and educational purposes.

4. Program management.—Provides the necessary assistance to State and territorial governments to develop and implement coastal zone management programs and coordinates Federal activities that impact coastal zone management programs.

An amount equal to 30% of the gross receipts from customs duties on imported fishery products is appropriated for marine resources research, assessment, and management. These funds supplement moneys appropriated to the Operations, research, and facilities appropriation. The funds are planned to be spent for promoting, developing, and increasing domestically produced fishery products by conducting technological, biological, and related research and educational programs, including appropriate executive and administrative support costs.

This program provides for loans to vessel operators who, because of the high risk associated with some commercial fishing, could not obtain commercial loans at reasonable rates for financing or refinancing the cost of purchasing or constructing, equipping, maintaining, repairing, or operating new or used commercial fishing vessels or gear. A moratorium on applications for this program was declared in February 1973, due to the need to establish new regulations that would restrict loans in over-harvested fisheries and to increase the fund balance through repayments.

The Fish and Wildlife Act of 1956, as amended (16 U.S.C. 742c) authorized $20 million to establish this program. To date only $13 million of this amount has been appropriated. Funds for new loans are derived from repayment of principal and interest payments on outstanding loans.

Under the Offshore Shrimp Fisheries Act of 1973 (Public Law 93-242), the United States provided $600 thousand to compensate the Republic of Brazil for enforcement and surveillance services for 1972, 1973, and 1974. The source of these funds was a combination of appropriated funds and receipts from the fishermen who fish off the coast of Brazil. The Governments of the United States and Brazil have ratified a revised agreement specifying compensation to the Republic of Brazil of $361 thousand per year for calendar year 1975 and 1976, reflecting additional Brazilian costs for fuel and other enforcement expenses.

This fund provides for payment to vessel owners and crews to compensate for certain financial losses sustained as a result of foreign seizures of American fishing vessels found within 200 miles of their coasts. Seizures in previous years were 46 in 1973, 1 in 1974, and 7 in 1975. Funds in this account are derived from Federal appropriations and fees from vessel owners (22 U.S.C. 1977).

NATIONAL FIRE PREVENTION AND CONTROL ADMINISTRATION—CON.

OPERATIONS, RESEARCH, AND ADMINISTRATION—CONTINUED

1. Education and training.—(a) National Academy for Fire Prevention and Control.—This subactivity provides training and educational programs to bolster existing State and local programs. Through this subactivity, the Administration will provide curriculum assistance and materials, and develop new courses as needed. Program increases in 1977 will provide funding to develop and deliver training programs to an estimated 2,000 fire service personnel.

(b) Public education.—This subactivity seeks to reduce fire incidence and fire related deaths and injuries through the development and dissemination of effective fire prevention education programs. In 1977 research and testing will be undertaken to determine the most effective means of conducting fire prevention education.

2. National fire data center.—This activity supports efforts to assemble, analyze, and disseminate data on fire losses. Such information can be used to identify causes of the most significant fire losses, establish priorities for R. & D. efforts, and measure the effects of new mandatory standards, test methods, and building codes in reducing fire losses. The fire data center will collect, analyze, and disseminate fire incidence statistics from six States in 1976 and from an additional six States in 1977.

3. Research and development.—This activity performs and supports fire research with the aim of providing scientific and technical knowledge applicable to the prevention of fires. It includes the funding for the fire research center (FRC) at the National Bureau of Standards, fire safety grants, master planning activities, and a fire technology program.

4. General administration.—This activity provides for the executive direction and administrative support of the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration.

The Office administers laws governing the granting of patents for inventions and the registration of trademarks. The purpose of the patent laws is to stimulate science and technology and their commercialization by providing incentives for making inventions, disclosing them to the public, and providing the necessary stimulus for investment. The purpose of trademarks is to help protect business investment and prevent deception of consumers.

Receipts deposited in the general treasury from fees were $27.8 million in 1975. In 1976, they are estimated to be $29.0 million, and in 1977, $28.6 million. Legislation to increase patent fees, which would generate additional income, has been proposed.

Activities of the Office fall into three areas:
 1. Examination of patent applications.—Applications are examined to determine whether or not the inventor is entitled to a patent for the claimed invention. Examination of patent applications also includes the performance of quasi-judicial functions in appeal and interference proceedings. Progress is being made toward the long-standing goal of reducing average pendency to 18 months for patent applications (from receipt to issue or abandonment), while improving the quality of patent examination. A summary of patent application workload and performance data is reflected below:

2. Examination of trademark applications.—Applications are examined to determine whether the statutory criteria for the Federal registration of the trademark or service mark have been met. Where the criteria are met a registration is issued to the applicant. Examination of trademark applications also includes inter partes proceedings involving oppositions, cancellations, and interferences. The Office is attempting to lower the average pendency of trademark applications to 3 months (from receipt to first action).

3. Collection, assembly, and dissemination of technical and legal patent and trademark information.—Specifications and drawings of successful applications are printed, and issued patents and registered trademarks are published weekly. In addition, this activity includes preparation and issuance of patent grants, furnishing copies of records, maintenance of public search room and scientific library facilities, and recording instruments conveying ownership of patent and trademark rights.

Note.—Excludes $1,100 thousand in 1977, $275 thousand in TQ, and $1,100 thousand in 1976 for activities transferred to National Fire Prevention and Control Administration, Operations, research and administration. Comparable amounts for 1975 ($1,200 thousand) are included above.

1. National Bureau of Standards.—The National Bureau of Standards is the Federal Government's lead agency for the development and maintenance of a system of measurements required to support the Nation's economy. The NBS Organic Act, subsequent legislation, and related delegations authorize the Bureau to address measurement problems which arise in the operations of Government agencies, commerce, industrial organizations, and scientific institutions.

NBS efforts are organized into the following six program activities:

(a) Provide a national system for physical measurement.—The purpose of this activity is to provide the basis for a complete, consistent, and accurate national system of physical measurements such as time, mass, length, temperature, illumination, and ionizing radiation, and for coordinating that system with measurement systems of other nations.

(b) Provide services to improve use of materials.—The purpose of this activity is to provide services that result in the more efficient and safe use of all types of materials by industry, Government, and the general public. These services are provided by developing and disseminating information on standard measurement and test methods and standard specifications for those properties of materials that determine performance in use, such as strength, resistance to corrosion, electrical conductivity, and durability. In addition, environmental pollution measurement efforts are included in this activity.

(c) Provide services to improve the application of technology.—The purpose of this activity is to provide engineering measurements and standards for building research, product performance and safety, weights and measures procedures and regulations, electronic technology, and radiation safety. Voluntary engineering product standards are also developed to facilitate national and international trade.

(d) Experimental technology incentives program.—The purpose of this program is to find ways to stimulate technological change. Experiments are conducted through contracts with industry and universities and by cooperative efforts with other agencies. The 1977 program level will provide for evaluation of the results of this program to date.

(e) Improve the application of computer technology.—This activity includes efforts in computer science and technology and mathematical services.

The NBS computer science and technology program promotes the effective application and use of computer and automation technologies to increase productivity and enhance management efficiency. The program enables Government agencies to conduct their operations more efficiently and economically, improves the quality of public services, and protects the privacy rights of individuals in the collection, processing, and use of confidential personal data in computer-based information systems.

The mathematical supporting services area provides advisory services and technical support in methods of mathematics, statistics, data analysis, operations research, numerical analysis, and scientific computation for NBS.

(f) Capital outlays.—Capital outlays finance the construction of buildings and special facilities, the procurement of large items of equipment, increase in the capital of the NBS Working capital fund for the purchase of general laboratory equipment, and miscellaneous improvements and modifications to the physical plant to meet the requirements of the Bureau's scientific programs.

2. National Technical Information Service.—The National Technical Information Service collects and distributes scientific, technological, business, and demographic information generated by the Federal Government.

The 1977 level includes additional net recovery from the sale of products and services and an increase to purchase capital equipment to enhance productivity.

3. Office of Telecommunications.—This activity provides for research and development intended to increase the market for U.S. telecommunications products and services, both in the United States and abroad, and to increase the efficiency of the use of national telecommunications resources.

The Working capital fund finances from advances and reimbursements all operations of the National Bureau of Standards except major construction projects and the foreign currency program. Amounts reported include investments in equipment and inventories, and research, development, and services performed for other Government agencies and the public. Programs of direct appropriations and trust funds are covered in the schedules for those accounts. The principal of the fund, as of June 30, 1975, consisted of $17 million in capital provided by appropriations, and $141 million in net donated assets. Retained earnings at the end of each year are transferred to Treasury the year following.

The ship construction program is intended to help improve the international competitive position of the U.S. shipbuilding industry through payment of current differences in price between domestic and foreign construction of equivalent ships. This enables U.S. shipyards to construct ships for U.S. citizens at prices which are comparable to the prices which would be paid for the same construction in a foreign shipyard. At the same time, the program aids in the maintenance of a strong U.S.-flag fleet for the foreign trade by providing support for the replacement of overage U.S.-flag ships engaged in the foreign trade, and by requiring U.S. registry of subsidized ships. As of June 30, 1975, over 200 of the 260 ships engaged in the U.S. foreign trade had been constructed with the support of this program.

The program also encourages shipyard and industry improvements to increase U.S. competitiveness by supporting greater shipyard/shipowner coordination for subsidized contracts, supporting series production of standardized ship types, and by providing encouragement for shipyard investments in capital improvements. Each of these factors helps to accomplish increased productivity and cost savings in U.S. shipyards.

A slowdown in demand for merchant ship construction in 1975 and 1976 has resulted in estimated funding availability (unobligated balances) of $247 million in 1977. Consequently, no 1977 budget authority is requested. The 1977 obligations increase, based on an anticipated gradual growth of ship construction demand, will help sustain future shipyard employment levels. The program will be developed from applications received from the industry and the precise mix of ships to be constructed will be a product of many factors including foreign trade requirements, national defense needs, operator preferences, and latest cost estimates.

The Merchant Marine Act of 1936, as amended, provides that operating subsidies shall be paid to qualified operators of U.S.-flag vessels in order to promote the maintenance of a U.S. Merchant Marine capable of providing essential ocean-shipping services. Subsidies are designed to achieve a parity between certain American and foreign ship operating costs.

1. Passenger/combo ships.—Largely due to the competitive advantage of transoceanic airline service and rising passenger ship operating costs, passenger ship operators are finding it generally unprofitable to continue such service. Two subsidized U.S.-flag passenger and four combination passenger-cargo ships remain employed.

2. General cargo ships.—Subsidies provided to U.S.-flag general cargo liner ships have been a significant factor in enabling U.S. ships to carry 29.4% of the total general cargo tonnage in U.S. foreign commerce in 1974, a 14% increase of the tonnage carried in 1973. Replacement of many older ships with faster more productive ships has offset the decline in the number and tonnage capacity of the U.S. fleet. The full impact of newly constructed or converted ships under the Federal ship construction program is beginning to take effect and U.S.-flag trade penetration is expected to increase further in the years ahead.

3. Bulk carrier ships.—U.S.-flag participation in carriage of bulk cargoes has been low in recent years. As a result of the Merchant Marine Act of 1970, new ore-bulk-oil carriers and tankers are beginning to enter subsidized service. The volume and percentage of bulk cargoes in U.S. foreign trade represents a substantial portion of total U.S. foreign trade and emphasis will continue to be placed on assuring that, when required, assistance will be given to insure that U.S.-flag bulk ship operators will be able to provide essential bulk services.

In addition to aiding the operation of newly constructed bulk ships, subsidy assistance is provided to the bulk fleet in the carriage of grain purchases by the Soviet Union. This assistance is expected to enable U.S.-flag ships to achieve a minimum 33% share of all grain shipments to the Soviet Union during fiscal years 1976 and 1977.

The overall U.S.-flag fleet carried $22.1 billion in value of cargo passing through U.S. ports in 1974, compared with a $15.9 billion in 1973.

The 1977 budget authority increases primarily result from additional subsidized ship-years and higher average subsidy per ship-year. The increases are partially offset by decreases resulting from estimated lower volume grain shipments to the Soviet Union and hence lower subsidy to U.S. tankers engaged in that trade.

A summary of operations under the program excluding special Soviet Union grain carriage follows:

The objective of the research and development program is to provide the technological base to initiate projects that contribute to a more efficient and productive shipbuilding and ship operating industry in the United States. In 1977, important projects are planned to implement this overall objective with efforts related to: improving productivity and decreasing costs in shipbuilding methods; improvement in advanced ship machinery; improved shipboard automation equipment and systems; computerized management and control systems; and a satellite system for navigation/communication. The R. & D. program efforts are aimed at making the U.S. shipbuilding industry more competitive with foreign shipbuilding yards by increasing productivity through automated procedures, improved shipyard equipment and facilities; and to make the U.S. ship operating industry more competitive in the world market by improved operating systems and equipment, and computerized management systems.

In 1977, the R. & D. program is planned to be conducted in four major program areas as follows:

1. Advanced ship development.—Efforts are aimed at improving the productivity of U.S. shipyards to make U.S. production costs more competitive with foreign shipyards costs. In addition, efforts are directed toward new and improved types of ship machinery that will result in lower capital acquisition and installation costs, improved performance related to energy savings, and greater safety and vessel productivity. These efforts result in benefits to the Government by reducing ship construction subsidies.

2. Advanced ship operations.—This program is directed to improving the operation of U.S.-flag merchant ships by: developing advanced management control techniques over vessel operations and cargo movements; developing and promoting the application of computerized and mechanized procedures to automate ship operations and to increase ship safety; and enhancing the speed, quality, and reliability of navigation and communication systems. Also included in this program are activities related to coordinated efforts with the Department of Defense to make U.S. commercial ships more adaptable to serving military needs in time of emergency. Efforts to increase port productivity and expedite intermodal cargo movement are also a part of this program.

3. Maritime research.—The aims of this program are related to maintaining the research facilities that in turn will provide for systems and hardware development to improve U.S. ships, equipment, and port facilities and to reduce the need for subsidies to the industry for ship construction and operation.

4. Advanced maritime technology.—In this program advanced concepts and requirements are investigated in order to develop programs geared to achieving goals in advanced ship development and advanced ship operation areas. Basic research originates in this program and becomes the foundation for further analyses and project formulation.

This appropriation finances costs incurred by headquarters and field staffs in the administration and direction of the various programs established to fulfill Maritime Administration responsibilities as well as the total cost of officer training at the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy and Federal financial support to State marine schools.

1. Development of waterborne transportation systems.—This activity provides for direct technical and administrative costs of developing and maintaining cost-competitive U.S. merchant ships in sufficient quantity to meet national maritime objectives, including evaluation of current programs and development of alternatives, and programs to achieve stability and improve efficiency in the U.S. shipbuilding industry with an objective of reducing the difference between domestic and foreign shipyard productivity.

2. National security support capability.—This activity provides for developing and maintaining U.S. merchant ship capability to serve as naval and military transport auxiliaries in times of war and national emergency in the National Defense Reserve Fleet; for developing and maintaining national and international preparedness plans providing for continuity of operations under various emergency conditions; and to maintain an adequate shipbuilding and repair mobilization base.

3. Merchant Marine Academy.—This activity provides for operating the Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, New York in accordance with the Merchant Marine Act, 1936. The objective of the Academy is to instruct and prepare selected personnel for service as officers in the merchant marine. The requested program level supports continuation of the facilities modernization program including the initiation of major alterations and modernization of one of the principal academic buildings.

4. State marine schools.—This activity implements the Maritime Academy Act of 1958 (Public Law 85-672) by providing assistance to States in the operation and maintenance of maritime academies or colleges for the training of merchant marine officers by providing grants to the State schools, providing subsistence payments in support of cadets, and by furnishing vessels to be used as training ships.

5. Use of waterborne transportation systems.—This activity provides for direct technical and administrative costs of promoting the effective development and utilization of merchant ships and ship systems designed to further the foreign and domestic waterborne commerce of the United States with the objectives of increasing U.S.-flag participation in U.S. foreign trade, and reducing or eliminating operating subsidies when no longer required to sustain a viable shipping operation.

6. General administration.—This activity provides for administrative support costs that are not directly assignable to other entity programs. Functions which cannot

The Merchant Marine Act of 1936, as amended, established the Federal ship financing fund to assist the development of the U.S. Merchant Marine by insuring construction loans and mortgages on U.S.-flag vessels built in the United States. The fund is authorized to insure aggregate outstanding balances of up to $7 billion. The maximum amount of aggregate obligations guaranteed by the Federal ship financing fund was raised from $5 billion to the present level of $7 billion pursuant to Public Law 94-127 of November 13, 1975.

The estimated level of new commitments to guarantee construction loans and mortgages, and the estimated aggregate level of guarantees in force and commitments outstanding is shown in the following table:

The Federal ship financing fund has been a key element in generating the current high level of shipbuilding activity in the United States.

Budget program.—Beginning in 1974, administrative expenses incurred in the operation of the Federal ship financing fund were paid from income to the fund. Costs are anticipated at $2,800 thousand in 1976, $700 thousand in the transition quarter, and $3,025 thousand in 1977. Advances to operators of $3,500 thousand are planned in 1976, $800 thousand in the transition quarter, and $3,500 thousand in 1977 in order to forestall possible defaults on insured mortgages.

Financing.—The fund receives income from insurance premiums on construction loans and mortgages, fees and interest on U.S. Government securities and mortgages held directly. The payment of administrative expenses is to be made from this income, while payments for advances to operators, redemption of defaulted loans and mortgages are paid from income, equity, and borrowing from the Treasury Department. No borrowings are anticipated in 1977.

The Maritime Administration is authorized to reactivate, operate, deactivate, charter merchant vessels, and operate experimental vessels under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Commerce. These operations are financed by the Vessel operations revolving fund. In addition, the fund is available to finance the necessary expenses to protect, maintain, preserve, acquire, and use vessels involved in mortgage-foreclosure or forfeiture proceedings instituted by the United States.

Budget program.—As of June 30, 1975, there are approximately seven claims in process of settlement which resulted from operation of Government-owned ships and General Agency Agreements in the Vietnam sealift. The 1977 program anticipates the final settlement of these claims.

Financing.—Expenses are financed by charter hire revenue, reimbursements from Federal agencies, and insurance underwriters.

The Maritime Administration is authorized to insure against loss or damage by marine war risks when it is found commercial insurance cannot be obtained on reasonable terms and conditions. This insurance includes war risk hull and disbursements interim insurance, war risk protection and indemnity interim insurance, second seamen's war risk interim insurance, and war risk builder's risk prelaunching and postlaunching insurance and a contingent war risk cargo insurance standby program. Authority to underwrite insurance has been authorized to September 7, 1975. Legislation to continue this program is currently being considered by Congress.

Budget program.—As of June 30, 1975, insurance outstanding covered 2,640 vessels in operation and under construction in domestic yards. In the event of an outbreak of a general war, the insurance exposure would approximate $25 billion.

In addition, Maritime Administration provides second seamen's war risk insurance covering the crews of 56 vessels under contract to or chartered by the Military Sealift Command.

Financing.—The Secretary of Commerce established the War risk insurance revolving fund. It receives income from binder fees, insurance premiums, interest from investments and claim reimbursements from other Federal agencies. Underwriting agents' fees and expenses, appraisal contractors' fees, and insurance claims are paid from this income. While additional appropriations for the program are authorized, none are requested for 1977.

These appropriations provide for the pay and allowance of officers, enlisted personnel, cadets, and midshipmen; the subsistence of enlisted personnel; permanent change of station travel; and other military personnel costs. Changes in financial requirements are primarily related to military personnel strengths in support of the military programs. The number of active duty military personnel provided for are shown in the following tables:

Reserve officer candidates.—The Reserve Officers' Training Corps program provides training for Reserve and Regular officer candidates who have enrolled in the course while attending a collegiate institution at which an ROTC unit has been established. College graduates who satisfactorily complete the advanced course of the program are commissioned and are ordinarily ordered to active duty for a minimum period of 2 years.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps Vitalization Act of 1964, as amended, authorizes a limited number of scholarships for 4-year ROTC students on a competitive basis. Successful candidates for the scholarships are required to serve a minimum period of 4 years on active duty upon graduation and appointment as a commissioned officer. There will be about 5,500 scholarship recipients in the Army, about 5,900 in the Navy, and about 4,175 in the Air Force in 1977.

The Armed Forces health professions scholarship program provides a source of commissioned officers for the various health professions. Student enrollment in 1977 will be about 1,791 in the Army and 1,575 each for the Navy and Air Force.

The Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force provide training for students who elect to enroll in ROTC training at the secondary level of education, and are programed to have 650, 223, 52, and 275 units, respectively, in operation in 1977.

This estimate includes funds for the pay of all personnel on the military retired lists of the Department of Defense. The estimate represents the consolidated requirements of the military departments for: (a) payments to retired officers and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force; (b) retainer pay of enlisted personnel of the fleet reserve of the Navy and Marine Corps; and (c) survivors' benefits. The primary gains to the retired rolls can be attributed to the greater number of individuals attaining eligibility for retirement after 20 or more years of active military service. The following tabulation shows the average number of personnel on the rolls during 1975 compared with estimated numbers for 1976, TQ, and 1977.

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

The appropriations under this title finance the day-to-day costs, except military personnel costs, of operating and maintaining the Armed Forces, including the Reserve components, and related support activities of the Department of Defense. These funds include amounts for pay of civilians, contract services for maintenance of equipment and facilities, fuel, supplies, and repair parts for weapons and equipment. Financial requirements for these appropriations are influenced by a variety of factors, the principal of which are force levels, such as the number of aircraft squadrons or Army or Marine Corps divisions, military strength and deployments, rates of operational activity, number of installations, and quantity and complexity of major equipment (aircraft, ships, missiles, tanks, etc.) in operation.

ACTIVE FORCES

Funds to operate the Active Forces and their support are contained in five operation and maintenance appropriations: one for each of the four services and one for Defense agencies. The programs covered under this heading are described below:

1. Strategic forces.—Strategic offensive forces include more than 400 manned B-52 and FB-111 bombers and 1,054 ICBMs operated by the Air Force as well as the Navy's submarine missile fleet, which deploys 656 Polaris and Poseidon missiles. Estimates for 1977 reflect continued conversion of additional submarines from Polaris to the more advanced Poseidon ballistic missile.

Strategic defensive forces consist of anti-aircraft and antimissile units of the Army, interceptor fighter aircraft of the Air Force, and various warning, command, and control systems operated by the Air Force.

2. General purpose forces.—These forces of the four military services operate under the control of the various unified and specified commands. They consist of the tactical air forces of the Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps, the ground forces and supporting aircraft elements of the Army and Marine Corps, and Navy combatant and support ships. Among these forces are those deployed to eastern Asia, the western Pacific, and to Europe in support of NATO commitments; the fleets operating in the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans and the Mediterranean; and active forces based in the United States.

Our tactical air forces consist of the Air Force tactical air wings, Navy land- and carrier-based antisubmarine and attack air wings, and Marine air wings. The missions performed by these forces include maintaining air superiority, interdiction bombing, close air support, antisubmarine patrol, reconnaissance, combat crew, readiness air group, and transition training and special operations. During 1977, the F-4 Phantom jet fighter will continue to be the major aircraft for all three services. The Navy will continue to deploy the F-14 to partially replace F-4s in the air superiority fleet air defense role; increased production of the F-15 and A-10 into the Air Force arsenal in 1977 will provide for transfer of F-4 and A-7 weapon systems to the Reserves. The Air Force will reach its desired number of tactical air crews through a reduction in support spaces. In 1976, tactical airlift was placed under control of the Military Airlift Command. Flight training simulator programs will be continued to provide for improved training of air crews and to reduce energy consumption.

Army land forces consist of infantry, mechanized, armored, airborne, and airmobile divisions as well as force elements needed to support these divisions during the initial stages of combat, along with a limited number of units required for sustained combat support. During 1977, combat-to-support ratios will continue to be improved by the activation of two additional active brigades from the conversion of support spaces to combat. Emphasis will continue to be placed on increasing combat readiness. Additional combat units will be modernized with the latest equipments and weapons for the conduct of land warfare.

Marine Corps land forces, composed of marine amphibious forces, including a combination of combat and service support organizations and a variety of supporting units, are designed to conduct amphibious assault operations and other missions with the close support of Marine aviation. The Marine Corps' prime objective in 1977 will be combined air-ground training and the maintenance of the Fleet Marine Forces at a high level of combat readiness for service with the Fleet, ashore or for other duties as national security may require.

Naval forces include aircraft carriers, submarines, amphibious forces, antisubmarine forces, and anti-air warfare forces. One nuclear aircraft carrier (CVN), five nuclear submarines (SSN), and one nuclear powered guided missile cruiser (CGN) will be introduced into the fleet in 1977. Eight other ships will also become operational, including five of the 963 class destroyers, two amphibious assault ships (LHA), and the first of a new class of guided missile frigates (FFG). The addition of these modern vessels will permit continued inactivation of overage and obsolete vessels. Two attack carriers (CVAs) will be configured in 1977 for multipurpose operations (CVs) for a total of nine so configured.

3. Intelligence and communications.—This program comprises the centrally directed Defense intelligence and security function, the major portion of the consolidated telecommunications program (CTP), the National Military Command System, and other special activities which are related to and support the missions of the combat forces in the strategic, general purpose, and airlift/sealift programs. Included in the CTP portion are the Defense Communications System (DCS) common user transmission and switching systems as well as non-DCS communications. Funds to support intelligence, security, and communications activities are contained in the various appropriations of each of the military services, and, in the case of the Defense Communications Agency, Defense Nuclear Agency, Defense Intelligence Agency, Defense Mapping Agency, Defense Investigative Service, and National Security Agency, in the Defense agencies appropriation. Included among the special activities are Navy oceanographic and weather programs and Air Force weather, air rescue and recovery, and air traffic control and landing system programs.

4. Airlift and sealift.—This provides air, land, and sea transportation services for all the Armed Forces in peacetime as well as quick reaction strategic mobility and logistical support in wartime. The major commands in this program are the Military Airlift Command of the Air Force, the Military Sealift Command of the Navy, and the Military Traffic Management Command of the Army, all of which are industrially funded operations whose costs are reimbursed by the users. The operation and maintenance appropriations directly provide for certain administrative and base service support expenses for each of these industrially funded activities.

7. Central supply maintenance.—This program includes funds for specialized supply and maintenance activities. It provides resources for the determination of inventory levels, procurement (excluding acquisition costs), storage, distribution, depot-level maintenance, and transportation of military materiel. These functions are managed by the military services and conducted at various locations worldwide such as supply depots and centers, inventory control points, and repair facilities as well as through commercial contractors.

In addition, the Defense Supply Agency provides common supply and services support to the military services within the continental United States and manages bulk petroleum worldwide. The Defense Supply Agency also manages Defense-owned idle industrial plant equipment, the Defense surplus property disposal program, and the Defense portion of the Federal catalog program. It is also responsible for providing contract administration services, including enforcement of the equal employment provisions of Executive Order 11246, as amended, administration and supervision of Department of Defense materiel utilization program, and coordinated procurement programs. Requirements for the Defense Supply Agency are included under Operation and maintenance, Defense agencies.

8. Training, medical, and other general personnel activities.—In 1977 the military services plan on acquiring approximately 400,000 new accessions into the Active Forces. Continued success of the All-Volunteer Force will necessitate a strong effort by the recruiting organizations of each service to attract the new personnel required. These new accessions must then be trained in basic military skills, in many occupational skills, and in career fields. Training requirements are also influenced by the total strength of the services, and by the introduction of new equipment and weapons. Most training is conducted at service-operated facilities, such as training centers for the training of new recruits, at technical schools which afford training in specific military occupational skills, and at pilot training bases. Education of prospective officers is accomplished primarily by the three service academies and by Reserve Officer Training Corps units at universities and colleges.

The services operate 180 hospitals to provide medical care for active and retired military personnel and for dependents. In addition, this program finances a medical program at civilian medical facilities for personnel in areas where service hospitals are not accessible.

9. Administration and associated activities.—This program includes the costs of departmental administration, major field command headquarters, and general support activities such as finance and audit. Reimbursement to the General Services Administration for space occupied, required by Public Law 92-313, is also included in this program.

10. Support of other nations.—This program includes military assistance missions, advisory groups for foreign nations, and the U.S. share of NATO, SEATO, and CENTO costs, plus support of U.S. organizations related to these international military headquarters.

These funds include amounts to pay for necessary drilling operations and exploration of reserves No. 1 in California, No. 3 in Wyoming, and No. 4 in Alaska as well as the three oil shale reserves in Colorado and Utah, and development of reserve No. 1 and the three oil shale reserves.

Legislation has been proposed which would substitute appropriations from receipts generated by the pumping of petroleum from reserve No. 1, Elk Hills, Calif., in lieu of appropriations from the general fund. The proposed appropriations are reflected in schedules under Funds appropriated to the President.

PROCUREMENT

The procurement appropriations of the Department of Defense finance the acquisition of large dollar value combat, combat support, and training equipment including aircraft, missiles, ships, tanks, and other vehicles, guns of all sizes, torpedoes, and communications equipment; air, ground, and ship munitions; major items for support of equipment when it is in use; industrial facilities necessary to produce that equipment; and major modifications of on-hand equipment where increased capability can be achieved without buying new equipment. The equipment financed by these appropriations is bought primarily from private contractors or, when necessary, produced in Government arsenals, shipyards, and plants.

The 1977 programs provide for continuing production of current systems and initial procurement of some new systems to maintain the military forces necessary for national security and U.S. foreign policy objectives. Significant Air Force programs include initial production of the B-1 aircraft to modernize our long-range bomber capability. The F-15 air superiority fighter and the A-10 ground attack aircraft will both be introduced into the operational inventory in 1977, and production of the F-16 light weight air combat fighter will be initiated. For the Army, increased production of tanks, anti-armor helicopters, armored personnel carriers, and artillery systems is planned, providing for conversion of two divisions to armored/mechanized and raising overall inventory levels of equipment. New Army systems include the Stinger shoulder-fired anti-aircraft missile and the UTAS utility helicopter. Modernization of our naval forces in 1977 includes continued procurement of the F-14 fighter, the Trident strategic missile submarine, nuclear attack submarines, and purchase of the first ship equipped with the Aegis air-defense missile system. Advance funding for a missile-equipped nuclear strike cruiser is also provided.

The dollar amount for ships in the 1977 estimates includes $1.6 billion which will cover cost increases to 1975 and prior year programs.

Direct budget programs are estimated as follows (in millions of dollars):

This appropriation finances the acquisition of nuclear and conventional ammunition, modification of on-hand inventories, and related production base support including maintenance, expansion, and modernization of ammunition production facilities and equipment. The 1977 direct program provides for worldwide training consumption and losses to inventory through the 1977 funded delivery period; provides stocks of conventional ammunition in support of U.S. requirements for NATO and other contingencies; and initiates major procurement of a new tank round, improved conventional munitions, and artillery delivered mine systems. This year's program includes funds for over 40 different types of ammunition and provides the ninth increment of a multiyear effort to modernize and rehabilitate the Army's ammunition production industrial base.

This appropriation finances the construction of new ships and the conversion of existing ships, including all hull, mechanical, and electrical equipment, electronics, guns, torpedo and missile launching systems, and communications systems. The 1977 program provides for the procurement of long leadtime items for ships for which authorization will be required in 1978 and later years.

The 1977 program continues the Navy's long-range modernization and replacement program designed to provide the fleet with modern, balanced forces which can effectively respond to a wide variety of mission requirements in support of national policies.

1. Fleet ballistic missile ships.—Funds requested in this activity are for one Trident class ballistic missile submarine and for long leadtime equipment for future Trident submarines.

2. Other warships.—The 1977 request includes three high-speed nuclear-powered attack submarines and the first of a new class of guided missile destroyers equipped with the Aegis air defense system. Advance procurement funds are also included for future nuclear attack submarines and for the first of a class of nuclear-powered guided missile strike cruisers, which will be requested in 1978.

4. Mine warfare and patrol ships.—This activity requests funds for eight guided missile frigates, formerly designated patrol frigates, continuing a long-range program of procurement of this type of ship.

5. Auxiliaries, craft, and prior year program costs.—Funds in this activity will procure a destroyer tender, a submarine tender, and a fleet oiler. Funds are also included for landing craft, service craft, outfitting, and post delivery. About $1.6 billion is requested in this budget activity for cost growth and escalation requirements relating to 1975 and prior year shipbuilding programs.

1. Military sciences.—This activity supports research of potential military application in the physical, mathematical, environmental, engineering, biomedical, and behavioral sciences. This research provides a basis for the development of future systems and improved military operations.

2. Aircraft and related equipment.—This activity funds research, development, test, and evaluation related to airframes, engines, avionics, and other installed aircraft equipment, as well as applied research in supporting aeronautical technologies. It also funds the development of major aircraft systems.

The major Air Force development programs are the F-16 air combat fighter, and the B-1 advanced strategic bomber. In addition the AMST tactical transport prototypes will complete flight evaluation.

The F-18 air combat fighter is the major Navy aircraft development program. Also, the Navy is continuing several programs which explore and apply V/STOL aircraft technology.

Two helicopter programs, the UTTAS tactical transport and the advanced attack helicopter are continued by the Army.

Funding in this activity supports research and development efforts at centers such as the Air Force Flight Dynamics Laboratory in Dayton, Ohio, the Naval Air Development Center in Johnsville, Pa., and the Army air mobility centers in Virginia, Ohio, California, and Missouri.

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

Programs in this title fund the development, test, and evaluation of new and improved weapon systems and related equipment carried out by the Army, Navy, Air Force, Defense agencies, and Director of Test and Evaluation. They also provide for scientific research supporting defense functions and operations. Work is performed by industrial contractors, Government laboratories, universities, and nonprofit organizations. Research and development programs are as a rule funded so that each year's resources support one year's increment of the total program cost. Funds required for research and development related to civil defense responsibilities of the Department of Defense are carried in the separate title, Civil Defense.

The total 1977 budget plan for Defense research, development, test, and evaluation appropriations includes a $1,414,230 thousand increase from the current 1976 plan, reaching a total of $10,942,300 thousand. The specific activities included in the 1977 budget plan are discussed below under each budget activity. The budget plans and estimated obligations under appropriations in this title are summarized as follows (in thousands of dollars):

3. Missiles and related equipment.—This activity provides for research, development, test, and evaluation of strategic and tactical missile systems.

Major missile development efforts in 1977 for strategic offensive forces include the initiation of full-scale development of both the air launched and the sea launched long-range cruise missiles. Development work continues on the Trident submarine launched ballistic missile and the Air Force M-X intercontinental ballistic missile for possible mobile or fixed-silo deployment. Efforts to increase the yield and improve the accuracy of ballistic missiles, and to enhance advanced ballistic missile reentry technology continue in 1977. The funding of ballistic missile defense technology programs is also maintained. In addition to contractual effort related to space systems and technology, this activity includes funds for the Aerospace Corporation.

In the tactical area, the SAM-D air defense system will move to full scale development, and work will continue on adapting the French/German Roland short-range air defense system. Development of the Navy Aegis fleet defense missile system will continue, with testing taking place at the land-based test site at Moorestown, N.J.

The Army Pershing II program will be continued to provide a more accurate theater nuclear strike missile.

Efforts to define a new air-to-air missile system for joint use by the Air Force and Navy will include extensive field testing of the competing concepts.

In addition to funding contracts with industry in missile research and development programs, this activity is a major source of financial support for the operation of certain test and evaluation facilities such as the White Sands Missile Range, the Navy Weapons Center at China Lake, and the research and development programs at the Army Redstone Arsenal.

4. Military astronautics and related equipment.—Funded under this activity are programs directed toward the improvement of space technology for military purposes and the development of space vehicles for specific military missions. There will be increased effort on technology related to warning and assessment of missile attacks, and on a communications satellite system. Development efforts will be continued on the NAVSTAR global positioning system. Funding for military applications of the NASA space shuttle will be increased.

5. Ships, small craft, and related equipment.—This activity provides for applied research, development, test, and evaluation of ship structures and equipment, including propulsion, communications, navigation, and surveillance systems directly affecting ship operations. It includes the design, prototype fabrication, and performance evaluation of new types of ships, detection, targeting and countermeasure devices, and propulsion plants.

A major development effort will continue on surface effect ships in 1977. Funding levels will increase for submarine silencing, improved sonars and advanced propulsion systems. Acoustic search sensors, and new-type guns and projectiles will also receive augmented funding. Trident submarine funding will continue to decline as the research and development phase nears completion. This activity funds much of the effort at the Naval Ship Research and Development Center.

6. Ordnance, combat vehicles, and related equipment.—This activity provides for the research, development, test, and evaluation of improved artillery, guns, mortars, small arms, mines, grenades, torpedoes, nuclear and chemical munitions, and conventional air-launched weapons, as well as for the exploration and evaluation of new fuzes, propellants, explosives, detonators, dispensers, and armor. The new Army XM-1 tank will undergo full-scale development in 1977. In order to move toward greater NATO standardization, the Army will test and evaluate the German Leopard II tank before making a final selection of the new Army tank. Other new weapon systems under development include the cannon launched guided projectile, improved air delivered munitions, and the new Army mechanized infantry combat vehicle. In addition, all three services are continuing to explore the combat potential of the high energy laser. This activity provides principal support for research and development activities at several Army centers.

7. Other equipment.—This activity provides for research, development, test, and evaluation of equipment not separately funded under other activities. Examples of programs funded here are electronic warfare devices, chemical and biological agent detection and protective equipment, antisubmarine warfare surveillance systems, intelligence and reconnaissance equipment, and defense suppression projects. Programs in support of improved logistics, facilities design, and training are provided in this activity. Development will continue on air defense suppression systems. This activity also funds much of the support at the Electromagnetic Compatibility Analysis Center.

8. Programwide management and support.—For the Army, this activity provides support for programwide activities and technical information efforts not distributed directly to other budget activities. For the Navy, this activity funds similar programs. For the Air Force, this activity provides for certain costs of central administration both for the Air Force Systems Command and several large test and evaluation centers.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

The direct military construction programs for the Armed Forces, both Active and Reserve, shown in the individual schedules of this title are summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM
	1975 act.	1976 est.	TQ est.	1977 est.
Active forces.....	1,594,908	2,143,526	68,300	2,051,000
Reserve forces.....	176,240	230,400	6,400	148,600
Interservice activities.....	21,760	44,018	1,000	88,100
Total.....	1,792,908	2,417,944	75,700	2,287,700

Most of the appropriations required for the military construction accounts are dependent upon the enactment of authorizing legislation. The details of this legislation have been completed and are being submitted to the Congress for early consideration.

1. Major construction.—This category provides for the acquisition of land and for construction of military projects as authorized in currently effective military construction acts and the new authorization referred to above.

These authorizations include construction projects as defined in Department of Defense Directive 7040.2 where the estimated cost of such construction generally exceeds $75 thousand per project. Under this category the major activities proposed for 1977 are as follows:

Strategic forces.—Provision has been made to upgrade existing facilities and provide for personnel support for strategic warfare systems. Funds also have been provided to continue to support the Trident weapons system.

General purpose forces.—Projects in this category support general combat forces including their command organizations, the logistics organizations organic to these forces, and the related support units, including medical, which are deployed as constituent parts of military forces and field organizations. The funding levels reflect emphasis on service attractiveness, particularly improved health services and bachelor housing facilities.

Specialized activities.—Funds are provided for the continued support of the joint defense effort of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Funding for abatement of air and water pollution at defense installations is continued to assure that actions to correct violations of Federal, State, and local air and water quality standards have been taken or are underway. Funds are also included for radiologic cleanup of Enewetak Atoll as authorized by Congress in a prior annual program.

Research and development.—The 1977 program includes aeropropulsion systems test facility and other facilities in support of programs to advance knowledge and technology in such areas as weapons systems, communications, electronics, and medicine. These programs emphasize the search for improved capabilities in the Armed Forces.

Reserve components.—The funding levels programed for facilities required for the training of the National Guard and the other Reserve forces reflects the importance placed on these activities being identified as the primary source of augmentation of Active forces in future emergencies.

Logistics.—Funding for construction of facilities to provide physical security of tactical aircraft and nuclear weapons worldwide, as well as alterations to facilitate energy conservation, is increased over the level provided in recent years.

Personnel support.—Funds are provided for improved housing, medical, and community support for lower grade enlisted personnel and junior grade officers to encourage their retention in the service and the development of an All-Volunteer Force. Upgrading of existing facilities with the application of improved standards has been provided in addition to new construction.

2. Minor construction.—Provision is made for construction of permanent and temporary projects that are not otherwise authorized by law but which are determined to be urgently required and do not exceed $400 thousand per project for the Active forces and $50 thousand per project for the Reserve component projects. An Active force project may be accomplished without determination of urgency if the savings in maintenance and operations cost are estimated to exceed the cost of the project within 3 years after project completion. Maintenance and operations funds may be used where the estimated cost of an Active force project is $75 thousand or less without determination of urgency. The minor construction program will continue at the same relative level as in prior years.

3. Planning.—This provides for necessary planning of military construction projects, including design, standards, criteria, studies, appraisals, and other related activities.

4. Supporting activities.—Provision is made for activities such as the defense access road program and minor land acquisition.

This fund finances a program for reducing the losses of military personnel and civilian employees incident to disposition of their one- or two-family dwellings when military installations are closed or when reductions in the scope of operations are ordered. Eligible personnel may be reimbursed for certain losses resulting from the sale of their dwellings located at or near such installations, or the Department of Defense may acquire such property. Proceeds from sale or rental of such property are deposited in this fund. The following business-type statements reflect operations of the program which started in 1968.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE STOCK FUNDS

By authority of 10 U.S.C. 2208, the Department of Defense stock funds finance the acquisition of inventories of consumable materials and supplies (items which are uneconomical to repair) for resale to the military services and other authorized customers. These inventories are stocked and sold at designated Defense activities worldwide. The stock funds also finance inventories of consumable material for use in case of mobilization.

Budget program.—The increase in obligations in 1976 and 1977 results from an increase in product cost and extended procurement leadtime. The value of inventories reflects an increase due to these levels and the inclusion of an additional surcharge in 1976 and 1977 for price stabilization. Yearend inventories are estimated as shown below (in millions of dollars):

Financing the budget program.—Funds for financing the budget program are usually derived from sales to customers. A 1976 appropriation is requested to increase operating cash balances and to build up war reserve assets. An appropriation of $358 million in 1977 is requested to finance additional buildup in war reserve assets. Expenditures in 1977 are projected to increase by $1,447 million from 1976 as a result of continuing price increases in materials purchased. Yearly expenditures are estimated as shown below (in millions of dollars):

	Gross expenditures

Total Department of Defense stock funds.....	15,697	16,747	4,055	18,194

Department of Defense stock funds are authorized to incur obligations in anticipation of future years' sales (10 U.S.C. 2210(b)). This is necessary because the procurement leadtime for material acquisition is greater than the time required to fill and collect customer orders. Pursuant to this authority, contract authority of $2,298 million was available at the end of 1975, decreasing to $1,484 million in 1977.

Operating results and financial conditions.—Net gains of $405 million for 1976 and $386 million for 1977 are projected.

Investment (equity) of the U.S. Government at the end of 1977 is estimated at $12,086 million; including $18,381 million in inventory and other assets capitalized, less $4,504 million in working capital transferred out and a cumulative operating deficit of $1,791 million.

INDUSTRIAL FUNDS

Department of Defense industrial funds finance activities performing industrial- or commercial-type functions on a reimbursable basis (10 U.S.C. 2208). These programs are supported by orders received at the activities from a variety of service accounts whose funds provide the working capital for their completion. Industrial fund activities are then reimbursed by customers through progress payments for the full production costs. Government investment as of September 30, 1977, is estimated at $537.7 million.

Budget program.—In 1976 and 1977, the services will be implementing a program to stabilize and fix rates charged to customers at all industrial fund activities. Estimated total costs of goods and services produced in 1977 are projected to increase by $0.6 million, primarily as a result of providing customers with realistic cost estimates for labor and materials. Yearend totals are shown in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

TOTAL PRODUCTION COSTS

The U.S. Army activities financed through the Army industrial fund include depot supply and maintenance operations, research and development, arsenals, and technical engineering, the U.S. Army Missile Command and the eastern and western areas of the Military Traffic Management Command. More efficient overall depot maintenance and supply operations are reflected in the 1977 budget as a result of savings from the reorganization of the depot system in 1976. The increase in cost of goods and services produced in 1977 reflects a continued expanded depot maintenance program for the Army to reduce accumulated backlogs.

The Navy industrial fund finances a variety of activities, including aircraft maintenance facilities, ordnance stations, research laboratories, shipyards, strategic systems project offices, printing plants, public works centers, and the Military Sealift Command. Workload at the industrially funded facilities is projected to slightly increase between 1976 and 1977.

The Marine Corps industrial fund finances maintenance depots engaged in repairing or overhauling Marine Corps equipment and providing technical engineering support. The increase in costs and services in 1977 continues the effort begun in 1976 to accelerate the depot maintenance programs to reduce backlogs and to increase services being provided to customers.

The activities financed under the Air Force industrial fund include printing plants, laundries, depot maintenance activities, and the Military Airlift Command. The increase in the costs of goods and services produced in 1977 results from higher inhouse operating costs, increased contractual service costs, and the rise in price of aviation fuel.

The Defense industrial fund finances the Defense Clothing and Textile Supply Center and leased communications procured by the Defense Commercial Communications Office. The cost of operations is projected to remain relatively level between 1976 and 1977.

SEC. 107. None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used to begin construction of new bases inside the continental United States for which specific appropriations have not been made.

SEC. 108. No part of the funds provided in this Act shall be used for purchase of land or land easements in excess of 100 per centum of the value as determined by the Corps of Engineers or the Naval Facilities Engineering Command, except: (a) where there is a determination of value by a Federal court, or (b) purchases negotiated by the Attorney General or his designee, or (c) where the estimated value is less than $25,000, or (d) as otherwise determined by the Secretary of Defense to be in the public interest.

1. Surveys.—Navigation and flood control studies are made to determine the need and economic justification for proposed water and related land resource developments. Beach erosion control studies are undertaken to determine the need for shore protection and remedial measures at specific localities. Funds are provided in 1977 to continue 207 studies. Four new studies will be undertaken, with major emphasis on solving urban area water problems.

Comprehensive river basin studies provide for broad consideration of water and related land resource needs of river basins. They are coordinated with the related river basin planning efforts of the Departments of the Interior and Agriculture and other concerned agencies.

In addition, funds are provided for preparation of authorization reports on the following:

1. Connecticut River Basin, Conn., Mass., N.H., and Vt.

2. Kanawha River Basin, W. Va., N.C., and Va.
3. Puget Sound and Adjacent Waters, Wash.
4. Red River below Denison Dam, Ark., La., Okla., and Tex.
5. Susquehanna River Basin, N.Y., Md., and Pa.
6. Wabash River Basin, Ind. and Ill.
7. White River Basin, Ark. and Mo.
8. Willamette River Basin, Oreg.

Special studies are made to resolve unique or complex water resource problems. Funds are requested to continue seven special studies.

Funds are provided to restudy Monoosnoc Brook local protection and Monoosnoc Lake, Mass., now carried in a deferred category.

The Flood Control Act of 1970 provides funds to review the operation of completed projects constructed by the Corps of Engineers when significant changes in physical or economic conditions occur. Funds are provided to review 14 completed projects.

Funds are provided, in accordance with section 12, Water Resources Development Act of 1974, to continue studies of projects requiring a detailed review prior to making decisions regarding recommendations for deauthorization.

Surveys are made in coordination with Federal, State, and local agencies and interests. They give appropriate consideration to present and future requirements for all beneficial uses of water and related land resources, including navigation, flood control, water supply, irrigation, water quality control, power, recreation, and fish and wildlife conservation.

2. Collection and study of basic data.—Funds are transferred to the U.S. Geological Survey for installation, operation, and maintenance of stream gaging stations; to the National Weather Service for hydrometeorological studies; and to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service for preauthorization studies of the effects of proposed projects upon fish and wildlife. The Corps of Engineers participates on a number of engineering and control boards that study and control international streams mutually affecting the United States and Canada. Information about the flood hazard, advice, and assistance are furnished to the States and local governmental agencies upon their request, and to other Federal agencies for guidance in the management of flood plain areas to assure the best and safest use of such areas. General hydrologic and related studies are made to assist in optimizing the design, construction, and operation of projects. Scientific and technical information centers prepare and distribute literature to scientists and engineers to improve their knowledge of new developments in their fields.

3. Research and development.—These studies are conducted to: improve procedures for collecting and analyzing engineering, socioeconomic, and environmental data; improve procedures used in formulating plans for water resources development and management; refine design techniques; and develop better materials and practices for the construction, operation, and maintenance of water resources facilities. The current program of studies comprise investigations in the areas of: materials, primarily soils, rock, concrete, and material interactions; coastal engineering; flood control and navigation, including waterways, locks and dams, improvement of operation and maintenance techniques, hydrology of cold regions, and ice engineering; environmental quality, including environmental impact, reservoir water quality, and wastewater management; and water resources planning studies, including policy formulation studies, planning methodologies, and analytical techniques for water resources management.

The requested appropriation for 1977 of $1.266 million is an increase of $39 million from the appropriation for 1976, and an increase of $300 million compared with the appropriation for 1975. About 76% of the requested appropriation will be applied to 68 major projects in amounts of $5 million or more each.

1. Advance engineering and design.—Design studies establish project features and cost estimates required for preparation of contract plans. The funds requested will bring designs and plans for a limited number of high priority projects to the state where they will be ready for construction, and will permit continuation or initiation of planning on other needed projects.

2. Navigation projects.—This activity includes construction of locks, dams, and canals, and improvement of channels and harbors by dredging and by construction of breakwaters, jetties, and dikes. The construction of small navigation projects not requiring specific congressional authority will be financed from funds appropriated in prior years.

With the funds requested, work will be continued in 1977 on 12 lock, dam, and canal projects, of which one will be completed, and on 26 channel and harbor projects, of which 9 will be completed.

3. Beach erosion control projects.—The Federal Government assists in the construction of works for the restoration and protection against erosion by waves and currents of the shores of the United States and its possessions. The construction of small beach erosion control projects not requiring specific congressional authority will be financed from funds appropriated in prior years.

Funds are requested for eight beach erosion control projects. Six are for continuing construction, one will be completed, and one is a reimbursement project.

4. Flood control projects.—This activity includes local protection projects and reservoirs for flood control and other purposes, such as water supply, but without power installations. Local protection projects consist of channel improvements, levees, and floodwalls. The construction of small flood control projects not requiring specific congressional authority, emergency streambank and shoreline protection, and small snagging and clearing work on navigable streams and tributaries will be financed from funds appropriated in prior years.

With the funds requested, work will be continued on 75 local protection projects, of which 14 will be completed with 1977 funds; and on 69 reservoir projects, of which 7 will be completed.

5. Multiple-purpose power projects.—Work will be continued on 28 multiple-purpose projects with power installations, of which 3 will be completed with the funds requested.

6. Rehabilitation.—Rehabilitation work is undertaken on existing projects that have deteriorated to the extent that their usefulness has been impaired. Work will be continued on three projects.

7. Recreation facilities at completed projects.—A total of $22 million is included: $17 million for projects to be developed under a policy requiring local cost-sharing comparable to that now required for the recreation features of all new projects, and $5 million to remedy sanitary deficiencies.

8. Land acquisition fund.—This fund, established in 1971, permits the acquisition of lands required for authorized Federal projects in those cases where delay creates an extreme hardship on owners or causes an unusual escalation of project land costs. Funds were provided in prior years for this activity.

9. Small authorized projects.—Funds were provided in prior years for this activity.

10. Streambank erosion control evaluation and demonstration.—Funds were provided in prior years to conduct a national streambank erosion prevention and control demonstration program.

11. Shoreline erosion control demonstration.—Funds were provided in prior years to conduct a national shoreline erosion control and demonstration program.

12. Fish and wildlife studies.—This program provides for detailed studies and reports by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to determine the effects on fish and wildlife resources of water-control projects of the Corps of Engineers.

13. Aquatic plant control.—This program is for the control and progressive eradication of water hyacinths, alligator weed, Eurasian watermilfoil, and other obnoxious aquatic plant growths from navigable waters, tributaries, connecting channels, and other allied waters of the United States, in the interest of navigation, flood control, drainage, agriculture, fish and wildlife conservation, public health, and related purposes. The authority includes research to develop the most effective and economic control measures.

14. Employees compensation.—Funds are provided, in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 785, to equal costs paid from the Employees' compensation fund on account of injuries or death of employees or persons under the jurisdiction of the Corps of Engineers civil functions.

The Corps of Engineers—Civil is responsible for the flood control program for the lower Mississippi Valley from Cape Girardeau, Mo., to the Gulf of Mexico, including the main alluvial stream, the basins of the St. Francis and White, lower Arkansas, Yazoo, Tensas, and Atchafalaya Rivers, and Bayou La Fourche, and the alluvial lands around Lake Pontchartrain. The adopted plan calls for raising and strengthening about 1,600 miles of existing levees along the main river, for enlarging or constructing some 1,700 miles of levees on tributaries and in side basins, for channel improvement by bank stabilization from Head of Passes, La., to Cairo, Ill., and by dredging a navigation channel 12 feet deep and 300 feet wide from Baton Rouge, La., to Cairo, Ill., and for five flood-detention reservoirs on minor tributaries.

- 1. General investigations.—Thirteen studies will be continued, of which three will be completed with 1977 funds. Basic data subsequently used in planning and designing projects are collected.
- 2. Advance engineering and design.—Funds are requested to continue planning on five features.
- 3. Construction.—The total cost of flood control and related improvements in the lower Mississippi River and its alluvial valley is estimated at $5,714 million, of which $2,297 million has been appropriated through 1976. The funds requested will be applied to continuation of 14 features.
- 4. Maintenance.—Provision is made for operation and maintenance of major features of the project.

The fund provides for the acquisition, operations and maintenance of plant and equipment used in civil works functions, for temporary financing of services chargeable to civil appropriations and for furnishing facilities and services for military functions of the Department of the Army, other governmental and private persons (33 U.S.C. 576).

Budget program—operating costs.—Operating costs will increase about 10% in 1977.

Land and Structures.—The 1977 program includes: $7.99 million for the design, rehabilitation, and construction of structures for use by Coastal Engineering Research Center, Cold Regions Laboratory, San Francisco District, Savannah District, and the Waterways Experiment Station.

Dredges—The 1977 program includes $6.14 million for the design and rehabilitation of the Corps of Engineers hopper dredges as follows: $1.67 million for continuation of repowering and rehabilitation of the hopper dredge Pacific; $2.5 million for continuation of the conversion of the Comber's auxiliary electrical system from d.c. to a.c.; $1.97 million for rehabilitation and modification of hopper dredges Biddle, Comber, Essayons, Goethals, Langfitt, and Markham.

Other floating plant.—The 1977 program includes $11.95 million for the design, rehabilitation, and construction of major items of floating plant for use by various corps districts.

Land-based equipment.—The 1977 program includes $4.5 million to purchase ADP equipment.

Tools, office furniture, and equipment.—The 1977 program includes $2.28 million for a variety of relatively small tools, office furniture, and equipment.

Operating results and financial condition.—Unreserved earnings in 1975 amount to $5.8 million and are expected to decrease to about $4.1 million by 1977. Capital (Government equity) of the fund amounted to $226.7 million at June 30, 1975, and is limited to $255 million by the Public Works for Water and Power Development and Energy Research Appropriation Bill, 1976. In 1975, capital was increased by net earnings of $20.8 million. Increases in 1976, transition quarter, and 1977 are principally due to earnings reserved for plant replacement which are wholly invested in assets. Capital of the fund is expected to reach $248.5 million at the end of 1976; $255.3 million at the end of 1976 transition quarter, and $280.2 million at the end of 1977. To permit operation at program levels for those years and into 1978, an increase in authorized capital to $285 million is required.

Consolidated summary of personnel.—The revolving fund is used to initially finance all payrolls of the Corps of Engineers—Civil.

The table which follows shows the distribution of personnel and salary costs to appropriations of the Corps of Engineers and to other accounts.

The administration of the Company is integrated with that of the Canal Zone Government, an independent agency initially financed by appropriations. The Governor of the Canal Zone is ex officio president of the Company. The Company is expected to be self-sustaining and is required to reimburse the U.S. Treasury for the net cost of the Canal Zone Government, the cost of interest on the net direct investment of the United States in the Company, and for annuity payments made by the United States to the Republic of Panama pursuant to the Treaty of 1903, as amended in 1936.

3. General corporate expense.—This category includes payments for the net cost of Canal Zone Government and interest expense payable to U.S. Treasury, general and administrative expenses under statutory limitation, and other general corporate expenses.

4. Financing.—The Company is authorized to obtain appropriations for its capital needs and to cover losses sustained in the conduct of its activities. In addition, under Public Law 93-607 (88 Stat. 1966), the Company may borrow from the Treasury, at interest, amounts not exceeding $40 million outstanding at any time. While the latter authorization is utilized to backstop the Company's obligations, no cash withdrawals against it are planned during 1976 or 1977. With the total borrowing authority utilized as a resource, the Company's unobligated balance at June 30, 1977, is estimated at $22.4 million.

5. Operating results and financial condition.—The net operating results are estimated at $80 thousand net income for 1976, $1,325 thousand net income for the July-September 1976 transition quarter, and a break-even situation for 1977. The tolls estimates reflect the Company's projection of toll rate increases yielding an estimated $7.1 million in the transition quarter and $29.0 million in 1977. At June 30, 1976, the Treasury balance is estimated at $39,583 thousand and at September 30, 1977, the estimate is $42,415 thousand.

1. Foods.—FDA is responsible for insuring the safety and quality of a major segment of the Nation's food and cosmetic supply. FDA reviews industry petitions and publishes tolerances for the safe use of food additives, conducts research, develops analytical methods to detect and prevent adulteration, sets standards for classes of food, and defines good industry manufacturing and sanitary practices. To ensure compliance with the foregoing, FDA inspects food and cosmetic processing plants, analyzes collected samples to verify that these products are safe and properly labeled and—when necessary—takes regulatory action to obtain compliance with the law.

2. Drugs and devices.—FDA is charged with ensuring that human and animal drugs, and medical devices are safe, effective, and properly labeled. FDA reviews research and manufacturing data to support the safety and efficacy of these products prior to marketing, evaluates literature and experience reports by industry and the medical profession, and conducts research. FDA also inspects manufacturing firms, reviews labeling, analyzes samples, and—when necessary—takes regulatory action to enforce the legal requirements.

3. Radiological products.—FDA is responsible for eliminating unnecessary exposure to electronic product radiation through research, surveillance, and voluntary and mandatory performance standards.

4. National Center for Toxicological Research.—FDA conducts research programs to study the biological effects of potentially toxic chemical substances found in man's environment.

Excludes $8,877 thousand in 1977 for activities transferred to:
 Department of Transportation..... 8,498
 General Departmental Management..... 356
 Office of the Assistant Secretary for Health..... 23
 Comparable amounts for 1975, $9,139 thousand; 1976, $8,877 thousand; and TQ, $2,219 thousand are included above.
 Includes $61 thousand in 1977 for activities previously financed from (in thousands of dollars): Indian Health Services, 1975, $61; 1976, $61; and TQ, $15.

This appropriation includes activities that provide health services to low income people and their families through categorical project and formula grant programs, and directly to certain Federal beneficiaries through the Public Health Service hospital system. For 1977, legislation will be submitted to consolidate the categorical health services programs into a consolidated State block grant program and to phase out of the direct delivery of health care through the Public Health Service hospitals. The following activities from this appropriation will be consolidated with other similar health services programs:

1. Community health services.—(a) Community health centers.—Community health centers provide primary ambulatory health care and arrange for specialty and inpatient care.

(c) Maternal and child health.—These grants provide comprehensive health care to high-risk mothers and children and to crippled children. These programs are administered by the States from grants awarded on the basis of a formula distribution.

(d) Family planning.—Services are provided to persons who desire and are in need.

(e) Migrant health.—Grants are provided to ensure the availability of primary health care services to migrants, seasonal farm workers, and their families.

4. Emergency medical service.—Grants are awarded to provide for the arrangement of personnel, facilities, and equipment for the effective and coordinated delivery of emergency health care services in appropriate geographical areas.

Other programs not to be included in the block grant:

1. Community health services.—(f) Health maintenance organizations which are designed to demonstrate the feasibility of alternative forms of health care delivery, that is, prepaid health care plans. In the revolving fund, direct loans will be sold to the Federal Financing Bank to provide funds for new loans.

(g) The National health service corps provides health professionals to communities, on a demonstration basis, where a critical health manpower shortage exists.

2. Quality assurance.—This program is designed to assure that health care services provided under the Medicare, Medicaid, Title V, and other Federal programs are medically necessary and furnished in the most economical manner consistent with recognized professional standards of care.

3. Patient care and special health services.—This program provides direct and contract health care to the 500,000 legal beneficiaries of the Public Health Service. In 1977, legislation will be submitted to Congress to close the Public Health Service hospitals or transfer them to community uses. Care in PHS clinics will continue to be provided to primary beneficiaries and persons with Hansen's disease.

In 1977, responsibility for providing health care to U.S. Coast Guard personnel will be transferred from the Public Health Service to the Department of Transportation which already has responsibility for all other Coast Guard activities. The Department of Justice will begin to assume responsibility for providing medical care to persons in Federal prisons.

The Federal employee health service provides, on request, surveys of and consultation to Federal groups and agencies on establishment or evaluation of Federal employee occupational health programs. When requested, it directly operates such programs on a reimbursable basis.

This is a public enterprise revolving fund. Direct loans will be sold to the Federal Financing Bank to provide funds for new loans and loans thus sold will be guaranteed. In 1975, $35,000,000 was appropriated to the Health Services Administration as capital to the revolving fund.

Two loans were closed during 1975 in the amount of $2,674,000. It is anticipated that 25 loans averaging $1,500,000 per loan will be made during 1976 and an additional 14 loans during 1977 for a total of $21,000,000. It is projected that loans totaling $60,000,000 will be sold to the Federal Financing Bank in 1976 and 1977—$30,000,000 will be sold in 1976, and $30,000,000 in 1977.

The Center for Disease Control (CDC) conducts activities in the prevention and control of infectious and occupational diseases. CDC also assists State and local health authorities and other health-related organizations in preventing diseases, helping to assure a safe and healthy workplace. CDC also conducts certain clinical laboratory regulatory functions and the prevention of disease importation from other countries:

1. Disease control.—This activity includes various functions concerned with the prevention and suppression of disease and illness.

(a) Project grants.—CDC supports State and local disease prevention and control programs through the award of project grants for: (1) prevention and control of venereal and other infectious diseases; (2) control of rats in urban areas; and (3) prevention of lead poisoning in children. These project grant activities would be consolidated in the proposed Financial Assistance for Health Care grant program.

(b) Disease investigation, surveillance, and control.—CDC utilizes its scientific and technical competence and facilities to undertake a wide range of preventive health activities. CDC's operations include: (1) disease surveillance through epidemiologic and laboratory investigations; (2) protection against the importation or spread of communicable diseases into the United States; (3) epidemic aid and other direct assistance to States and communities; (4) surveillance of the immunization status of the population; (5) development of new or improved standards and methods for the diagnosis, treatment, prevention, or control of diseases or preventable conditions; and (6) provision of training on a reimbursable basis to health workers engaged in prevention and control activities.

(c) Laboratory improvement.—CDC's laboratory program is concerned with upgrading the Nation's clinical and public health laboratories through the standardization and improvement of laboratory methodology.

(d) Health education.—CDC helps coordinate and consolidate the various Federal health education programs to make them more effective. CDC also develops and evaluates standards, criteria, and methodologies for improved health education of the public.

2. Occupational health.—The National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health provides the research base for Federal efforts to assure healthful and safe working conditions.

3. Buildings and facilities.—This activity funds repairs, improvements, and alterations of CDC facilities.

4. Program management.—This activity supports overall executive direction, planning, evaluation, and administrative management for CDC.

1. Research grants.—The funding of research grants is NIH's principal activity. Regular grants are awarded to individuals for health-related research projects, which are reviewed for scientific merit and relevance by discipline-oriented study groups and disease-oriented national advisory councils. Grants are also awarded to support various programs designed to enhance the capacity to conduct research, such as clinical and specialized research centers and primate research programs. In addition, NIH has awarded formula grants, called biomedical research support grants, to research institutions.

2. Training.—Fellowships are awarded to individuals under the provisions of the National Research Service Act in order to increase research manpower. The emphasis is on fellowship awards made directly to individuals. Institutional awards are proposed to be phased out.

3. Research and development contracts.—The research funded through the contract mechanism tends to be more specifically goal-oriented in nature than that supported through grants. Included are such directed activities as the development of medical devices, vaccines, and chemotherapeutic agents. An example is the $20 million Fort Detrick contract under which 750 scientists and support personnel test potential cancer-causing chemicals.

4. Intramural research and direct operations.—This activity contains the support for research conducted by NIH directly as well as the resources necessary to administer the NIH Clinical Center and the NIH National Library of Medicine. Over 6,000 scientists and support personnel are engaged in intramural research.

5. Disease control.—Activities designed to translate research findings expeditiously to patient care and treatment at the community level are funded by NIH in the heart disease and cancer area. These activities are limited in nature to demonstration; over time, such activities will phase out as the new treatment techniques are accepted.

6. Construction grants.—Construction grants support expansion of the space available for cancer-related research, primarily through alteration of existing facilities and construction of biohazard facilities.

7. Program management.—This activity includes those funds for management and program direction.

The NIH management fund was established to facilitate the conduct of NIH central operations. Fund activities are financed primarily from advances and reimbursements from the several institutes. Formulas for determining each institute's contribution reflect usage of services provided by the fund.

1. Computer services provide a central scientific research and computational resource in support of the NIH programs.

2. Research services provide centralized and collaborative engineering, scientific, and technical support for research activities.

3. Engineering services provide engineering, architectural, craft, and labor services required for all of the Institutes.

4. Clinical services provide facilities and services, other than physician care, for an integrated operation of its 517-bed facility servicing nine Institutes; developing and recommending policies and rules for the protection and welfare of patients; and conducting research in methods and techniques of hospital administration; as well as numerous other medical care services.

5. Grant review and approval provides staff support services in formulating National Institutes of Health grant and award policies and procedures relating to research and training programs; serves as a staff resource for central receipt and referral of all applications for Public Health Service research and training grant support provides for the initial scientific review of NIH research and training grant applications; collects, analyzes, and evaluates management and program data needed in the management of the extramural programs.

6. Administrative services include plant and office house-keeping and protection and security services.

Saint Elizabeths Hospital provides treatment and care for the mentally ill who are either beneficiaries of the Federal Government or residents of the District of Columbia. Programs of the hospital are financed by Federal appropriations and by reimbursements made to the hospital for services rendered principally for District residents by the District of Columbia.

Saint Elizabeths operates an inpatient and outpatient program, a security treatment facility and a community mental health center. The hospital conducts a clinical research program and multidisciplinary clinical training program for its professional and ancillary personnel.

The budget assumes that the hospital will remain under Federal control through fiscal year 1977. A proposal will be submitted to seek appropriations for Saint Elizabeths Hospital facility construction needs. The proposal will also establish a date for the transfer of the hospital's program and fiscal control to the District of Columbia.

1 Includes capital outlay as follows: 1975, $639 thousand; 1976, $795 thousand; TQ, $199 thousand; 1977, $806 thousand.

1. Health statistics.—This activity develops and maintains reliable, general purpose health statistical data collection systems, including the continued development of a national cooperative health statistics system.

2. Health planning and resources development.—Federal funds support State and area planning bodies. Health planning activities would be included in the consolidated state block grant program proposed for later transmittal.

3. Health services research.—This activity funds research into the organization, delivery, quality, and financing of health services. Intramural and extramural research will be conducted.

4. Health professions education.—Under this activity, the Federal Government will provide capitation grants of $1,500 to medical, osteopathy, and dental schools in return for agreement by the schools to meet national conditions. In addition, special project and student assistance support is included in this activity. Institutional and special project support would be funded above the 1976 overall level. New student assistance would be provided through an expanded service-connected scholarship program.

5. Health facilities construction.—Third-party reimbursement, that is, medicare and medicaid payments as well as private payors, finance medical and teaching facility depreciation. In recognition of this and a national excess of hospital beds, Federal construction subsidies are not necessary. Such activities can, however, be supported by the States, at their discretion, within the proposed $10 billion block grant.

6. Program management.—This activity supports the staff and operating expenses and contracts related to the program direction and extramural management of HRA programs.

Title VI of the Public Health Service Act established a loan guarantee and loan fund for medical facilities in the Treasury, without fiscal year limitation, to discharge responsibilities under guarantees; for payment of interest on the loans to nonprofit sponsors which are guaranteed; for direct loans to public agencies which are sold and guaranteed; for payment of interest on direct loans which are sold and guaranteed; and for repurchase of direct loans which have been sold and guaranteed. The "National Health Planning and Resources Development Act" also established a loan guarantee and loan fund which is being consolidated with the aforementioned fund.

There is a national excess of hospital beds. Moreover, there is ample financing from private sources through the bond market, estimated at $2.2 billion, in 1975, and depreciation financing is included in third-party reimbursements. For these reasons no Federal loan principal authority has been requested in 1976 and 1977. To the extent that additional public financing is necessary, such activity can be supported by the States, at their discretion, within the proposed $10 billion block grant.

The request for $31 million for interest subsidies in 1977 is required to honor the interest subsidies for loans already committed.

Title VII, part C, of Public Health Service Act established a revolving fund from which health professions schools could borrow in order to provide loans to their students. The Allied Health Professions Personnel Training Act of 1966 amended the Public Health Service Act to authorize the Federal Government to pay the difference between the interest paid by students to the schools and the interest payable by the schools to the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) and the Treasury.

In 1977, provisions are made for the following Federal payments: $129 thousand to GNMA, which represents the difference between the 5.25% interest rate earned by the student loan paper (promissory notes) and the 6.38% rate paid by GNMA on the $11,459 thousand worth of paper (participation certificates) held by the public; $602 thousand to GNMA which represents the 5.25% interest due on $11,459 thousand worth of paper held by the public; $1,155 thousand to the U.S. Treasury on the difference between the U.S. Treasury interest rate and that paid by the schools on $18,484 thousand loaned to the schools.

In addition, $841 thousand will be paid to health professions schools for loan cancellations under the Public Health Service Act, section 744(b). These loans are canceled by either the death or permanent and total disability of the borrower or the borrower's willingness to serve in an area designated by the Secretary. The new budget authority required for insufficiencies is computed as follows (in thousands):

Title VIII, part B, of the Public Health Service Act established a revolving fund from which schools of nursing could borrow in order to provide loans to their students.

The Allied Health Professions Personnel Training Act of 1966 amended the Public Health Service Act to authorize the Federal Government to pay the difference between the interest paid by students to the schools and the interest payable by the schools to the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) and the Treasury.

In 1977, provision is made for the following Federal payments: $35 thousand to GNMA, which represents the difference between the 5.25% interest rate earned by the student loan paper (promissory notes) and the 6.38% rate paid by the GNMA on the $3,110 thousand worth of paper (participation certificates) held by the public; $163 thousand to GNMA which represents the 5.25% interest due on $3,110 thousand worth of paper (participation certificates) held by the public; $622 thousand to U.S. Treasury on the difference between U.S. Treasury interest rate and that paid by the schools on $9,950 thousand loaned to the schools.

In addition, $453 thousand will be paid to schools of nursing for loan cancellations under the Public Health Service Act, section 827(b). These loans are canceled by either the death or permanent and total disability of the borrower or the borrower's willingness to serve in an area designated by the Secretary. The Scientific activities overseas (special foreign currency program) is supported entirely by foreign currencies owned by the United States abroad. These currencies are available for the Department's use in those countries where the supply of U.S.-owned currency exceeds normal U.S. Government needs for at least 2 years. For 1977, the Treasury Department has designated seven excess currency countries: Burma, the Arab Republic of Egypt, Guinea, India, Pakistan, Poland, and Tunisia. Authorization for the activities funded by the health agencies with these currencies is provided by the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, and the International Health Research Act of 1960.

The general objective of this program is to support health research in the excess currency countries that will help fulfill the research and other program needs of the six health agencies—National Institutes of Health; Health Services Administration; Health Resources Administration; Food and Drug Administration; Center for Disease Control; and Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration—while being of mutual interest to the host country, its institutions, and scientists.

The 1977 program will be carried out in part with funds appropriated but unused in prior years.
