THE BUDGET OF THE
UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

FISCAL YEAR

THE BUDGET DOCUMENTS

Data and analyses relating to the budget for 1980 are published in four documents:

The Budget of the United States Government, 1980 contains the information that most users of the budget would normally need, including the Budget Message of the President. The Budget presents an overview of the President's budget proposals and includes explanations of spending programs in terms of national needs, agency missions, and basic programs, and an analysis of estimated receipts, including a discussion of the President's tax program. This document also contains a description of the budget system and various summary tables on the budget as a whole. (Price $4.25.)

The Budget of the United States Government, 1980—Appendix contains detailed information on the various appropriations and funds that comprise the budget. The Appendix contains more detailed information than any of the other budget documents. It includes for each agency: the proposed text of appropriation language, budget schedules for each account, explanations of the work to be performed and the funds needed, proposed general provisions applicable to the appropriations of entire agencies or groups of agencies, and schedules of permanent positions. Supplementals and rescission proposals for the current year and new legislative proposals are presented separately. Information is also provided on certain activities whose outlays are not part of the budget totals. (Price $12.00.)

Special Analyses, Budget of the United States Government, 1980 contains 12 special analyses that are designed to highlight specified program areas or provide other significant presentations of Federal budget data. This document includes analytical information about: alternative views of the budget, i.e., current services and national income accounts; economic and financial analyses of the budget covering Government finances and operations as a whole, and Government-wide program and financial information for Federal civil rights, environment, and research and development programs. (Price $3.25.)

The United States Budget in Brief, 1980 provides a more concise, less technical overview of the 1980 Budget than the above volumes. Summary and historical tables on the Federal budget and debt are also provided, together with graphic displays. (Price $2.00.)

Each of these documents is for sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. (Paper covers only.)

EXPLANATION OF ESTIMATES

Part I contains various tables and certain schedules in support of the budget, explanatory statements of the work to be performed and the money needed, and the text of the language proposed for enactment by Congress on each item for which congressional action in an appropriation bill is required. It also contains the text of general provisions, proposed for enactment by the Congress, that apply to entire agencies or groups of agencies.

ARRANGEMENT

The chapters of Part I reflect the branches of Government, and the major departments and agencies of the executive branch. Most of the smaller agencies in the executive branch are grouped in one chapter—"Other independent agencies."

Within each chapter there are three main sections. The first section covers programs authorized by existing legislation (including items for which extension or renewal of authorizing legislation is requested). This section is organized by major subordinate organizations within the agency (usually bureaus) or by major program area. For each bureau or major program area, Federal funds, covering the funds that are not set aside in "trust," precede trust funds, covering moneys that are held by the Government in accounts established by law or by trust agreement for specific purposes. Generally, accounts with new budget authority in 1980 will precede those without such an entry.

The second major section of each chapter covers the legislative program, which reflects the budget estimates for proposed new legislation. Requests for appropriations to finance these legislative proposals will be transmitted later. This section is also arranged by bureau or other major subordinate organization. The proposals are applicable to Federal funds unless otherwise indicated.

The third section of each chapter includes the general provisions of appropriation language that are applicable to the agency in that chapter, and are in addition to the specific language pertaining to individual appropriation items. General provisions that apply to specified groups of agencies are placed in the chapter covering the first agency that appears in the respective appropriation act. The general provisions that are Government-wide in scope (identified "Departments, Agencies, and Corporations"), normally contained in the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government Appropriation Act, are placed at the end of the Executive Office of the President chapter.

An explanation of the types of funds included in the budget may be found in Part 7 of the compact volume—The Budget of the United States Government, 1980.

FORM OF DETAILED MATERIAL

APPROPRIATION LANGUAGE

The language proposed for inclusion in the 1980 appropriation acts is printed following the account title. The language of the 1979 appropriation acts, printed in roman type, is used as a base. Brackets enclose material that is proposed for omission; italic type indicates proposed new language. (When an appropriation has not been enacted at the time the budget is submitted, the language relates only to 1980 and is italicized, with no brackets shown. In a few cases, the language from unenacted 1979 appropriation bills, printed in roman type, is used as a base. In such cases, the language is followed by an explanatory note. An illustration of proposed appropriation language for 1980 follows:

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the Bureau of Economic Analysis, [$13,475,000] the Office of Federal Statistical Policy and Standards, the Office of Industrial Economics, and the Office of Economic Affairs, $16,875,000. (15 U.S.C. 171, 175, 1512, 1516; 22 U.S.C. 286f, 3101-3108; 31 U.S.C. 18b; Department of Government Appropriation Act, 1979.)

At the end of the final language paragraph, and printed in italics within parentheses, are citations to any relevant authorizing legislation and to the appropriation act from which the basic text of the 1980 language is taken.

BASIS FOR SCHEDULES

The 1978 column of this budget generally presents the actual transactions and balances for that year, as recorded in agency accounts.

For 1979, the regular schedules include enacted appropriations and also identify the amounts for supplemental appropriations needed to meet the increased costs of statutory and wage-board pay raises. When the annual appropriation has not been enacted, the regular schedules will include the amounts provided under the authority of a continuing resolution. Requests for supplemental appropriations to meet increased 1979 program costs (where costs other than for statutory pay raises are involved), or to finance proposed program expansions in 1979, are included in Part III. Also included in Part III is the proposed appropriation language for both pay and program supplemental requests.

The 1980 column of the regular schedules includes proposed appropriations for recommended extension or renewal of expiring laws. However, amounts for proposed new legislation are shown in separate schedules, generally under the legislative program section of each chapter. Appropriation language is included with the regular schedules, but not with the separate schedules for proposed legislation.

Where the required data are available in the agency accounting systems, budgets are presented in terms of applied costs. For operating programs, costs represent the value of resources consumed or used. For procurement and manufacturing programs, costs represent the value of materiel received or produced. For capital investment programs, costs for public works cover the value of work put in place, and costs for loan activities represent assets acquired. In the case of appropriations for programs that are essentially operating in nature, equipment is normally shown as a program cost (capital investment) when it is placed into use. If depreciation costs are provided in the accounting system, such costs may also be included in the program by activities section of the program and financing schedules with ap-appropriate deductions made to avoid duplication in the schedule totals. Funded and unfunded costs may be included in costs reported in the program and financing schedules.

Total obligations are always shown; activities and objects are reflected on an obligation basis where cost data are not available. Obligations refer to orders placed, contracts awarded, loan agreements made, and recurring services (such as rent, utilities, and personal services) received during the year, regardless of the time of payment.

SCHEDULE OF PROGRAM AND FINANCING

This schedule consists of three parts. In the "Program by activities" section, costs or obligations are classified by purpose, program, type of activity, or project for 1978, 1979, and 1980. This classification is developed for each appropriation or fund, and is not uniform on a Government-wide basis. Where it is of significance, capital investment is shown by activity. Otherwise, the total for each year is disclosed by footnote.

Where amounts for activities are presented in terms of costs, the adjustment from costs to obligations is summarized in an entry "Change in selected resources."

In certain cases, this schedule is expanded to include additional columns that provide a more informative presentation. This is done, for example, in some construction or procurement programs to show related cost data; for certain Defense items, to identify the total obligations programmed; and for programs financed at a pre-obligation stage (such as commitments in some loan programs).

The "Financing" section shows the sources of funds, budget authority, and other means of financing the activities covered by the account, and the disposition of unobligated amounts not used during the year.

The section on "Relation of obligations to outlays" shows obligations net of offsetting collections, obligated balances at the start and end of the year, and other items that affect the relation of obligations to outlays.

The account identification code, found at the head of the program and financing schedule, facilitates computer processing of budgetary information. The last three digits of this code represent the functional category to which the account is classified. Functional classification permits presentation of budget authority and outlays in terms of national needs and agency missions, rather than the organization administering the program or the account under which these funds are made available. For example, the 376 on the above schedule represents Other advancement and regulation of commerce—a subfunction within major function 370, Commerce and housing credit. When the outlays from an account are split between two or more subfunctions within a single major function, the code of the major function is used. In those few cases where the outlays from an account are split between two or more functions, a code of 999 is used. A detailed discussion of how Federal programs are addressed to each identified national need is included in Part 5 of the budget. The individual functional categories are identified with each appropriation or fund account in the Budget Accounts Listing in Part 8 of the budget.

NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Narrative statements present briefly the objectives of the program and the work to be financed. Where practicable, measures of expected performance are presented and the relationship of expected performance to the financial estimates is described.

SCHEDULE OF OBJECT CLASSIFICATION AND PERSONNEL SUMMARY

There is shown for each account a schedule of obligations or costs, according to the following uniform list of object classifications:

10 PERSONAL SERVICES AND BENEFITS	25 Other services
11 Personnel compensation	26 Supplies and materials
12 Personnel benefits	30 ACQUISITION OF CAPITAL ASSETS

These object classes reflect the nature of the things or services purchased, regardless of the purpose of the program for which they are used. Data according to this classification are illustrated in the following schedule:

Several of the object classes are divided into subclasses—personnel compensation, for example, is shown separately for permanent positions, for positions other than permanent, and for certain other payments.

Generally, a personnel summary follows the object classification schedule, as illustrated:

Personnel Summary
Direct:

Average GS salary.....	$19,528	$19,513	$20,321

Permanent positions are those that are established or occupied for a year or more. The nature of the position governs. Thus, a permanent position may be occupied by an employee whose appointment is either temporary or permanent in nature. These positions may be full-time (full workweek) or part-time (less than a full workweek).

Average grades and salaries are computed arithmetically. Thus, the average salary can fall outside the salary range of the average grade.

BUSINESS-TYPE BUDGET STATEMENTS

Generally, business-type budget statements are presented for activities specifically required by the Government Corporation Control Act or similar legislation to submit such budgets, and for most other revolving and trust revolving funds. For these activities, largely financed by sales revenues, statements of revenue and expense and of financial condition are presented on an accrual basis. These statements are designed to supplement the schedule of program and financing, which is presented on an applied cost or obligation basis.

STATEMENT OF REVENUE AND EXPENSE

For many revolving funds there is a statement of revenue and expense that shows the resulting net income or loss for the year. This statement usually includes accrued revenue (e.g., revenue earned in advance of collections) and accrued expenditures (e.g., depreciation), whether funded or unfunded.

Net income for the year.....	28,887	34,124	43,771

STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL CONDITION

The statement of financial condition shows assets, liabilities, and equity of the Government at the close of each year. Because the statement is on an accrual basis, the "Assets" section does not reflect unfilled customer orders received, even though such orders are a basis for obligation in the case of intragovernmental revolving funds. Nor does the "Liabilities" section reflect obligations incurred for which the liability has not accrued (e.g., undelivered orders). The "Government equity" section, therefore, shows obligations that have not yet become accrued liabilities, the unobligated balance, unfilled customer orders on hand (where relevant), and invested capital and earnings.

The last section of the balance sheet is an "Analysis of Changes in Government Equity." This section sets forth for paid-in capital and retained income, as appropriate, the beginning balance, transactions (changes) during the year, and the balance at the end of the year.

STATUS OF LOAN GUARANTEES

Guaranteed loans are any loans or securities on which payment of part or all of the principal or interest will be made by the United States Government in event of default or other claims. For each appropriation or fund with loan guarantee activity, a schedule showing the position with respect to limitation on loan guarantees (where the amount of loan guarantees is limited by law) and cumulative balance of guarantees outstanding is displayed immediately following the Schedule of Program and Financing. Loan guarantee commitments represent agreements to guarantee or insure loans contingent upon the prospective borrower fulfilling specified conditions. Loan guarantee and loan guarantee commitment amounts represent only the part of loans fully guaranteed. In cases where less than the full amount of loans are guaranteed, an addendum to the schedule will reflect the full principal amount of loan guarantees outstanding.

BUDGETS NOT SUBJECT TO REVIEW

In accordance with law, the presentations for the Legislative Branch, the Judiciary, the Comptroller of the Currency in the Treasury Department, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Milk Market Orders Assessment Fund of the Department of Agriculture, the Farm Credit Administration, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and the International Trade Commission have been included, without review, in the amounts submitted by the agencies.

The budgets of the privately owned Government-sponsored enterprises, presented in Part VI, are not subject to review; they are included for information purposes in the amounts submitted by the respective enterprises.

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN BUDGET TABLES AND APPENDIX TABLES

INTRAGOVERNMENTAL TRANSACTIONS

The consolidation of Government-administered funds in the compact budget volume may cause duplication in the totals. This occurs when the payment from one of the fund groups (Federal or trust) is credited to a receipt account in the other fund group, or when a payment from a Government agency excluded from the budget totals (off-budget Federal entities) is credited to a budgetary receipt account and appropriated therefrom. In order to avoid double counting in the budget totals, intragovernmental transactions (i.e., intrabudgetary transactions and receipts from off-budget Federal entities) are deducted from the aggregates of both budget authority and outlays.

PROPRIETARY RECEIPTS FROM THE PUBLIC

The individual schedules in the Appendix include as offsets only those amounts collected that are earmarked by law for use in revolving funds, or as credits to appropriations or other funds. In addition to showing outlays that are net of collections credited to individual accounts, the compact budget volume generally offsets against budget authority and outlays for each agency and function the collections from the public that are market-oriented or are mainly payments for goods and services, regardless of the fund structure.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

The Library of Congress, established in 1800, is not only the library of the Congress itself, but is also the principal general library of the Government of the United States. Its collections are comprehensive and varied, and include outstanding collections of books, periodicals, newspapers, documents of the national governments of the world, literature in the Oriental languages, et cetera, and manuscripts, maps, music, motion picture films, sound recordings, prints, and photographs. In addition to maintenance of the collections and the rendering of the general and basic services connected therewith, including the Congressional Research Service, certain specialized functions are performed: registration of copyrights, catalog card distribution, and the service of the books in raised characters and talking books to the blind and physically handicapped. In terms of these broad fields of activity, comparative obligations (including only those chargeable to annual appropriations) for 1978 and estimated for 1979 and 1980 are, as follows:

The Library's first obligation is to the Congress; the second, to other agencies of the Government; and the third, to other libraries, scholars, investigators, and the general public.

In addition to funds appropriated annually by Congress, there are also available a number of gift and trust funds and working funds.

Estimates for the physical equipment, maintenance, and operation of those Library buildings located on Capitol Hill are carried under the request of the Architect of the Capitol.

1. Purchase of books and library materials.—The Library's collections are developed through purchase, gift, exchange, copyright deposit, and transfer and official deposit; and materials are selected for addition to the permanent collections. The objective for 1980 is continued improvement in acquisition coverage and procedures. The collections totaled 74,387,574 items as of September 30, 1978, and consisted of 18,638,633 books and pamphlets; 32,757,981 manuscript pieces and 22,991,500 maps, pieces of music, reels of microfilm, photographs and other miscellaneous items. In 1978, 918,235 items were added to the permanent collections and 94,950 items were withdrawn. Pieces received from various sources in 1978 and estimates for 1979 and 1980 are as follows:

(a) Purchase of books for the general collections.—Library materials, both current and noncurrent, in all subject fields except in the fields of law, clinical medicine, or technical agriculture are purchased. Although materials acquired through purchase generally amount to only a limited portion of the total number of pieces received annually, they are materials which are not generally or readily available to the Library of Congress from any other source and thus must be purchased to insure completeness of the collections. The National Program for Acquisitions and Cataloging is designed to acquire, catalog, and disseminate cataloging data on a timely basis for all current monographic works of research value to meet the needs of American libraries. Purchases of monographs under this program are included under this heading. The objectives for 1980 are to: (1) continue procurement of important research materials to insure the continuous and comprehensive development of the Library's collections thereby maintaining their national preeminence; (2) continue the purchase of important foreign commercial books, newspapers, and periodicals; (3) continue the extensive procurement of essential research materials from areas critical to the U.S. foreign relations, particularly from Eastern Europe, Asia, and Latin America; (4) continue to strengthen the Library's current acquisitions in the rapidly expanding fields of science and technology; (5) acquire highly selective, important, noncurrent materials needed to provide better service to Congress; (6) increase the usefulness to current research of the subject collections; and (7) extend the coverage of European materials and the intensification of coverage in Latin America.

(b) Purchase of books for the Law Library.—Law books published in the regular domestic trade (except for copyright deposits) and many foreign and international law books published in countries throughout the world are purchased. The legal publications acquired by purchase constitute the most important part of the Law Library's acquisition, although a substantial part of the annual receipts is received by means other than purchase. The special objectives for 1980 are to: (1) continue the procurement of certain current domestic and foreign legal materials where the expeditious receipt and filing of current supplements, revisions, and other upkeep services is essential; (2) improve the current and retrospective coverage of important Hispanic, African, Middle Eastern, and South Asian sources; (3) continue the procurement of both current and noncurrent materials needed to strengthen the Law Library's already comprehensive holdings of critical areas in Eastern Europe, Asia, and Africa; (4) continue the acquisition of reprints, microforms, and photoduplicates of important research items, especially those from critical areas, which are no longer obtainable in the original; and (5) replace hard-bound copies of monographs and serials.

2. Preparation of books and library materials for use.—Library materials are cataloged for ready retrieval and are classified for systematic arrangement on the shelves of the collection. Card catalogs are maintained. Issues of serial publications are identified and recorded. Cataloging data is converted to machine-readable form for use by the Library of Congress, other libraries, and cataloging service agencies. Systems of subject headings and classification are continuously developed for the Library's needs and for the nationwide library community. The National Program for Acquisitions and Cataloging is designed to acquire, catalog, and disseminate cataloging data on a timely basis for all current monographic works of research value to meet the needs of American libraries. Preparation of books and library materials for use under this program are included under this heading.

Objectives in these activities for 1980 are to continue reductions in backlogs of cataloging and catalog management operations, to continue the development of the machine-readable cataloging data base, and to extend coverage of NPAC shared cataloging coverage of European materials and the intensification of coverage in Latin America.

Selected performance data for 1978 and estimates for 1979 and 1980 (not including processing activities performed by Research Services Department and the Law Library) are as follows:

Description	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Titles cataloged for printed cards .....	235,381	245,000	245,000
Titles classified and subject headed .....	227,674	235,000	235,000

Cards received by the National Union Catalog .....	4,961,420	5,000,000	5,000,000

3. Cataloging distribution service.—The Cataloging Distribution Service sells copies of the Library's printed catalog cards, cataloging data in machine-readable form, book catalogs, and technical publications. It maintains an inventory of over 1 million MARC (Machine Readable Cataloging) records which are used in a new demand printing system to produce catalog cards for the Library's needs and sales to outside organizations and individuals. A master file containing a single, reproducible copy of each of the cards representing more than 6,000,000 titles which the Library has cataloged since 1898 is also maintained. Requests for cards for any of these titles are satisfied by duplicating (through offset, or electrostatic means) the master copy of the card kept on file. Receipts of $6,988,689 were credited to this appropriation in 1978 in accordance with 2 U.S.C. 150 as amended by section 405 of Public Law 95-94, dated August 5, 1977. The objectives for 1980 are to: (1) meet the continuing demand for cataloging data and maintain a reasonable level of service and economy; (2) continue development of the National Union Catalog as the country's major bibliographic and locational tool; (3) develop other technical publications; (4) use new technology to improve service; and (5) increase efficiency and reduce cost.

(a) Catalog services for the Library of Congress.—The number of cards supplied to the Library of Congress in fiscal 1978 was 30,719,609; estimated for 1979, 30,000,000; and estimated for 1980, 30,000,000.

(b) Sale of catalog services to other institutions.—The preparation, printing, and distribution of publications related to cataloging are an integral part of the cataloging activities of the Library of Congress and include Classification Schedules, lists of Subject Headings, Catalog Service bulletins, and similar publications. Other publications include the National Union Catalog, a cumulative author list, which is issued monthly and cumulated quarterly and annually; Films and Other Materials for Projection (quarterly with an annual cumulation); Music; Books on Music and Sound Recordings (semiannual with annual cumulation); Register of Additional Locations; Monographic Series; Subject Cataloging; and New Serial Titles.

4. Research and reader services.—Books and other library materials are provided internally and outside the Library, reference and bibliographic assistance is rendered, and custody of the collections is maintained. The objective of this activity for 1980 is to continue to organize more material for use, to make it available to readers more readily, and to improve reference, bibliographic, and circulation services. The workload in major activities is expected to increase in 1979 and 1980 as follows:

5. Automated systems support.—Automation planning, computer applications development and user support functions, and management of the central data processing facility of the Library of Congress are responsibilities of the Automated Systems Office. The Technical Staff assigned to the office of the Director coordinate the overall Library systems design, the data administration functions, and general technical standards.

The Office of the Assistant Director for Systems Engineering and Operation provides assessments of alternative computer equipment, develops mid-range and long-range computer equipment plans, provides technical assistance to the development of computer networks involving data communications facilities, and performs the engineering planning for computer installation in the James Madison Memorial Building. Staff provides for the maintenance of computer programs operating in the production environment, prepares standards and technical documentation to guide operators, analysts, and programmers in effective use of available resources, and furnishes user organizations with a single central point of assistance with respect to all systems accepted for production. The Computer Service Center operates the Library's central computer facilities. It operates on a 7-day multishift schedule to support batch processing activities for the Library and online terminal and telecommunications services, including users in the U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives who access the Library's computerized data bases.

The Office of the Assistant Director for Systems Development provides computer applications development support throughout the Library; designs and develops generalized programs systems and software statements applicable to many library services; develops data base management systems; produces general systems translation and updating programs; and reviews commercial program products for applicability within the Library. It designs and develops specific software systems and programs to satisfy individual requirements in all the Library missions. The office establishes standards of programming and program performance and inspects and tests programs under development for acceptance into the LC central computer system.

The Network Development Office plans and coordinates the exchange of bibliographic and locational information among major library cooperatives and central and research facilities. The objectives for 1980 are to: (1) continue progress toward the goal of a fully automated machine-readable cataloging service; (2) expand automated data processing service to Congress; (3) develop new computer applications while improving reliability and performance of existing programs; and (4) expand computer power to provide additional disk and other mass storage devices, increase the number of terminals, and accommodate the use of outside data bases.

6. Preservation of library materials.—Library materials are preserved in their original format by being bound or rebound, or by a variety of conservation/restoration techniques. Materials are also preserved by converting them to a more durable form through such means as the microfilming of books and newspapers, by conversion of nitrate film to a safety base film, and by the conversion of deteriorating sound recordings to polyester tape. In addition, the Library conducts basic research into the many unsolved preservation problems encountered in dealing with millions of deteriorating books and other materials in the Library of Congress collections as well as in the other research libraries of the Nation.

7. Central support services.—This activity supports the executive staff of the Office of the Librarian; exhibit, information, and publication activities; personnel, financial, procurement, and buildings management; and other centralized services. It also included rental of space off Capitol Hill and duplicating services.

8. American Folklife Center.—Public Law 94-201 established the American Folklife Center in the Library of Congress "to preserve and present American folk-life." The Center receives policy direction from a board of trustees composed of individuals from private life as well as representatives of Federal agencies.

The Center is charged with a broad variety of functions involving research, documentation, publication, dissemination, training, and development of programming involving American folk cultural traditions. It serves as a coordinating body with agencies and institutions concerned with folklife in the public and private sectors, including the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Smithsonian Institution, and other Federal and State agencies. The program of the Center also gives focus to other activities of the Library of Congress in this area.

9. Madison Building occupancy related expenses.—The James Madison Memorial Building (JMMB) is scheduled for initial occupancy in fiscal year 1979 with movement of staff and collections into the building according to a sequenced schedule extending over a period of 12 to 15 months. The protection of the facility and staff assigned to it, the maintenance and cleaning of occupied interior space and the exterior public area, the transfer of staff and collections to the JMMB from other areas, and the communications support including mail, telephone, and messenger services are included in this program.

The Copyright Office is responsible for recording copyright claims, assignments, and renewals, for supplying copyright information to the public, for collecting and accounting for copyright fees, and for printing complete and indexed catalogs for each class of copyright entries. The Office is conducted for the most part on a self-sustaining basis. The amount requested is substantially counterbalanced by fees received for services rendered and the value of books and other library materials deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act and transferred to the Library of Congress. The income and obligations for 1978, and estimates for 1979 and 1980 are as follows:

The effort described under each of the activities are predicated on an estimated 493,500 copyright registrations during 1980, an estimated 470,000 during 1979, and registrations of 367,000 during 1978.

The general revision of the Copyright Law, title 17 of the U.S. Code, was signed by the President in October 1976 to be effective January 1, 1978. The purpose of the legislation is to bring the law into line with the sweeping advances in fields of technology that are closely related to copyright. These include cable television; satellite communications; instructional broadcasting and other automated devices for teaching; public broadcasting; computers and automated information networks; video-tapes; tape cassettes, disc recording and cartridges; and the whole range of devices for reprographic reproduction, notably photocopying and microforms. The effects of the new law on Copyright Office policies and procedures will be manifold. Under the royalty provisions the Office will be responsible for the issuance of annual licenses for jukeboxes and the collection of royalties for the performance of copyrighted works on cable television. The legislation also provides for a substantial expansion in the kinds of materials which will be registered, a change in the term of copyright to life of the author plus 50 years and an increase in the fee schedule.

1. Receiving and accounting for applications, fees, and correspondence.—Materials received by the Copyright Office are assembled and routed; accounts are maintained for all moneys received; records relating to the registration of copyrights are filed; and materials are deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act. Performance data for 1978 and estimates for 1979 and 1980 are as follows:

	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Registrations.....	367,000	470,000	493,500
Mail received and dispatched.....	1,549,143	1,500,000	1,575,000

2. Examining copyright applications.—All applications and deposits are examined before issuance of registration certificates or recordings of documents to determine whether the provisions of the Copyright Act have been satisfied. Performance data are as follows:

	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Cases and documents examined.....	437,000	500,000	513,500
Registrations and recordation of documents.....	367,000	470,000	493,500

3. Indexing and cataloging materials received.—The Register of Copyrights is required to print complete and indexed catalogs of all items registered. The catalog entries prepared by the Copyright Office are made available in part to the Library for its general operations. There were 402,002 items on hand and received during 1978, of which 367,590 were cataloged, leaving a balance at the end of the year of 34,412. It is estimated that for 1979 and 1980, the number of items to be cataloged will be 470,000 and 490,000, respectively.

4. Reference service.—The Copyright Office makes available to the public information concerning the provisions of the Copyright Act, including procedures, policies, and rulings. Information concerning registrations is furnished on a fee basis. Obtaining compliance with registration requirements is also part of this activity. Performance data are as follows:

Titles searched.....	131,503	138,100	145,000
Letters and search reports written.....	90,571	96,100	100,900

5. Printing the catalog of copyright entries and bulletins of decisions.—Catalogs for each class of copyright entries and bulletins of copyright decisions are printed and made available to the public.

6. Records management.—The Records Management Division is responsible for storing and maintaining records related to the copyright registrations process. Performance data are as follows:

	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Catalog cards filed.....	1,400,000	1,680,000	1,800,000
Deposit copies filed.....	230,000	273,000	312,000
Copyright applications filed and certificates issued...	366,964	470,000	493,500

7. General supervision and legal services.—The work of the Copyright Office includes legal supervision and research into the present copyright law and international copyright relations. It also involves a study of improvement of the domestic law and our international copyright relations.

8. Licensing Division.—The Licensing Division was created in October 1977 to handle the responsibilities of the Copyright Office under sections 111 and 116 of the Copyright Law. The annual registrations under the above sections are as follows:

The National Commission on New Technological Uses of Copyrighted Works was created to compile and study data on (1) the reproduction and use of copyrighted works by various forms of machine reproduction, and (2) the creation of new works by the use of automated systems or machine reproduction. The Commission was charged with making recommendations as to changes in copyright law to further protect the rights of copyright owners and to assure access to copyrighted works. The Commission originally was to submit its final report on December 31, 1977, and to terminate at the end of February 1978. Public Law 95-146, October 28, 1977, extended the due date for the report to July 31, 1978, with a new termination date of September 30, 1978. Its activities in August and September 1978 were limited to administratively arranging this termination.

1. Policy analysis and research.—The Congressional Research Service provides objective, nonpartisan analytical and consultative services to the Members and committees of Congress, assisting them in the analysis, appraisal, and evaluation of any subject matter of legislative concern, including recommendations submitted to the Congress by the executive branch. Research services are also provided to assist Congress with its oversight, representative, and other responsibilities. Support comes in the form of background studies, in-depth policy analyses, consultations and briefings, legal research, continuous liaison with committees, outside contracts, assistance with committee hearings, public policy seminars for Members and congressional staff, and related data and materials. Lists of subjects and policy areas that a committee might profitably pursue are periodically made available to each congressional committee. These services are directed toward assisting Members and committees in determining the advisability of enacting legislative proposals, in estimating the probable results of such proposals and of alternatives to them, and in evaluating methods for accomplishing the results sought. As provided by statute, the Service prepares decennial revised editions of the Constitution of the United States—Analysis and Interpretation, as well as cumulative supplements at 2-year intervals, prepares compendiums for the annual national high school and college debate topics, and provides assistance to the Congressional Budget Office and the Office of Technology Assessment.

2. Documentation and status of legislation.—The Service periodically prepares and publishes for distribution to Members and committees the Digest of Public General Bills and Resolutions, which includes summaries of all public bills and resolutions introduced in Congress, the status of bills receiving action, and various pertinent indexes. The Service compiles factual descriptions of House bills and resolutions which are forwarded for publication in the Congressional Record. The Service also makes available current and periodic reports that provide background and status information on major legislative issues before the Congress. Upon request, the Service provides Members and committees with legislative history memorandums on bills for which hearings have been announced, and compiles and makes available to each committee reports on legislatively authorized programs and activities within that committee's jurisdiction that are scheduled to terminate during the current Congress.

3. Information and reference services.—The Congressional Research Service provides extensive information and reference assistance to Members and committees. Reference files containing clippings, pamphlets, and documents and automated information services are maintained for rapid information retrieval. Lists of selected reports, prepared by CRS staff on legislative issues, are regularly distributed to congressional offices. To provide faster responses and in-person services, the Service also maintains reference centers in congressional office buildings and the Congressional Reading Room.

The National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped (NLS) is responsible for administering a national program to provide reading material for blind and physically handicapped residents of the United States and its outlying areas and for U.S. citizens residing abroad.

1. Direct service to users.—During the past 5-year period, 1974-78, the number of blind and physically handicapped readers throughout the country has grown from over 405,000 to over 640,000, and circulation from approximately 11,223,000 units (volumes, containers, and reels) to about 14,627,000. The number of readers and circulation are expected to continue to increase in 1979 and 1980 at approximately the same rate as in the past 5 years. To serve these users NLS procures books in embossed characters, recorded books with their associated reproducers and catalogs and publications of material available. The books and reproducers are distributed through 56 regional libraries and over 118 other cooperating libraries and agencies which assume responsibility for their custody and circulation. Music materials are circulated directly from NLS. Direct service is also furnished Americans living abroad. Multistate centers function as decentralized materials-support units working under contract with NLS. The scope of the procurement activities is shown in the following table:

2. Support services.—A variety of professional, technical, and clerical functions are performed by NLS's staff. A combined total of 21,100 requests for interlibrary loan searches or information concerning library and related services available to the blind and to other physically handicapped persons were received in 1978, and over 5,500 copyright permissions were cleared. Training is provided individuals throughout the nation interested in transcribing or proofreading braille, and during fiscal 1978 over 430 individuals were certified. NLS maintains the national collections of braille and recorded books to supplement titles deposited in libraries across the country. Books are transcribed in braille and tape recorded by volunteers throughout the country.

Bibliographic records are being recataloged to assure consistency with the National Union Catalog. Efforts to improve the quality of service at a reasonable cost are directed through a research, development, testing, and evaluation program. Trips are made to monitor contracts, provide guidance to the cooperating libraries, interact at professional associations, and respond to other administrative requirements. The following table reflects the scope of some support activities:

Objectives for 1980.—Based on an average growth in readership during the latest 5-year period for which verified statistics are available, a 12% increase in users is anticipated in 1980. To provide for this increase the budget objectives are as follows: to provide sound reproducer equipment to meet reader requirements; to produce braille and recorded books in a variety to meet minimum reader requirements; to implement appropriate quality control standards for all aspects of material and service provisions; to reduce duplication of effort through encouragement of programs in other libraries and agencies and through effective exchange of materials and information; and to provide support to existing network libraries serving blind and physically handicapped readers and to arrange with such other nonprofit libraries, agencies, or organizations to serve as local or regional centers in the national network.

Under authority originally granted in section 104(n) of Public Law 85-931 (new section 104(b)(5) of the Food for Peace Act of 1966) the Librarian of Congress may use foreign currencies to provide information of technical, scientific, cultural, or educational significance to the United States through the collection of foreign library materials and the distribution of copies thereof to libraries and research centers in the United States. The program is being carried on in four countries in 1979: Egypt, India, Nepal, and Pakistan. Of the total amount requested in 1980, $3,495,500 will be paid in foreign currencies, while $406,500 will provide U.S. dollar support.

1. Acquisition of books and other library materials.—Based upon the requirements of other Federal agencies and certain research libraries in the United States, publications and other library materials will be purchased in multiple copies from four countries and distributed to selected libraries and research centers in the United States, including the Library of Congress.

2. Program support (U.S. dollars).—U.S. dollars are required to pay certain expenses which cannot be paid by foreign currencies, such as salaries of the coordinating staff at the Library of Congress, shared administrative support provided by the Department of State, travel in some instances, and equipment and supplies which cannot be procured abroad.

The Oliver Wendell Holmes devise fund and the permanent committee for the Oliver Wendell Holmes devise to administer it were created by an act of Congress, approved August 5, 1955 (69 Stat. 533). The Committee consists of four members appointed by the President and the Librarian of Congress, who is chairman. The Committee was (1) to have prepared a history of the Supreme Court of the United States, and, if deemed advisable, (2) to finance an annual lecture or series of lectures, and (3) to publish a memorial volume of Justice Holmes' writings. The principal and interest on the fund are available for these purposes.

The current program is devoted primarily to the preparation of a History of the Supreme Court of the United States, of which the first two volumes were published by the Macmillan Co. in 1972. A third volume was published in August 1974, and additional volumes are nearing completion. At a recent meeting, the permanent committee appointed a co-editor for the history and adopted a 4-year timetable for its completion. The annual lecture series financed by this fund has been discontinued at least temporarily, because the Committee felt it desirable to conserve remaining funds.

This schedule covers (1) funds received as gifts for immediate expenditure and receipts from the sale of recordings and photoduplication materials financed from capital originally received as gifts, (2) income from investments held by or for the Library of Congress Trust Fund Board, and (3) interest paid by the Treasury on the principal funds deposited therewith as described under "Library of Congress Trust Fund, Principal Accounts," at a rate which is 0.25 percentage points less than a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average market yield on outstanding long-term marketable obligations of the United States, adjusted to the nearest one-eighth of 1% or the rate of 4% per annum, whichever is higher (2 U.S.C. 156-160; 31 U.S.C. 725s; 37 Stat. 319; Public Law 94-289; Public Law 94-290).

1. Acquisition of library materials.—During 1978, this included the procurement of manuscripts, Hispanic materials, fine prints, rare books and other library materials for the Library of Congress, and the acquisition and distribution of Government documents for the Library of Congress and cooperating libraries. The Library expects these activities to continue in fiscal years 1979 and 1980.

2. Reader and reference services.—These services during 1978 included the preparation of bibliographies, indexes, digests, and checklists; lectures, surveys of bibliographic services; poetry readings; musical concerts; furtherance of musical research, composition, performance and appreciation; and providing photostats, photographs, microfilm, and other forms of photoduplication, and sound recordings of folksongs, and poetry to other Government agencies, libraries and other institutions, and to the general public; and distribution of recordings of the Library's literary programs and concerts to radio stations for public service broadcasts. The Library expects these activities to continue in fiscal years 1979 and 1980.

3. Organization and control of the collections.—In February 1967, the Library of Congress began the largest single bibliographical project in its history, the publication of the pre-1956 National Union Catalog. It is expected that the project will be completed in fiscal year 1979, and that the published catalog will comprise over 600 volumes. Over 500 volumes have been published. The preparation of the 19th full edition of the Dewey Decimal Classification, begun during 1972, continues.

This schedule includes three principal accounts—permanent loan, public debt securities, and bequest of Gertrude M. Hubbard.

Both the permanent loan and the Hubbard funds represent gifts or bequests in cash, which have been deposited with the Treasurer of the United States, the interest upon which is available to the Librarian for the purposes specified in each case. Public Laws 94-289 and 94-290 (signed May 22, 1976) provide interest at "a rate which is the higher of the rate of 4 per centum per annum or a rate which is 0.25 percentage points less than a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average market yield on outstanding long-term marketable obligations of the United States, adjusted to the nearest one-eighth of 1 per centum". The public debt securities funds represent gifts or bequests in cash which have been invested in public debt securities of the United States in order to obtain a better return on the principal.

As of September 30, 1978, the principal in the permanent loan account, which shall not exceed the sum of $10 million (2 U.S.C. 158; 31 U.S.C. 725s; Public Law 87-522), was distributed as follows:

Music activities.....	$2,562,812
American history.....	26,630
Poetry and literature.....	958,167
Miscellaneous purposes.....	619,379
Total permanent loan principal.....	$4,166,988

During 1975, the Library removed some of the principal from the permanent loan and invested that principal in long-term U.S. public debt securities which mature on May 15, 1999, and are paying interest at a rate of 8.5%. As of September 30, 1978, the principal in the public debt securities was distributed as follows:

Music activities.....	$148,142
Fine arts.....	396,558
American history.....	307,040
Hispanic activities.....	211,315
Poetry and literature.....	50,073
Miscellaneous purposes.....	297,985
Total public debt securities principal.....	$1,411,113

The additional principal sum of $20 thousand, representing the bequest of Gertrude M. Hubbard, is for the purchase of engravings and etchings (37 Stat. 319). Public Law 94-290 (May 22, 1976) changed the interest rate on this account from the fixed 4% rate to the floating rate described above.

The Library also has available to it, through the Trust Fund Board, income from principal amounts which are managed for the Board as trust funds by private financial institutions. As of September 30, 1978, the estimated principal in these trust funds was distributed as follows:

Music activities .....	$988,000
Hispanic activities .....	591,000
Poetry and literature .....	591,000
Total principal.....	$2,170,000

The Office of the Superintendent of Documents operates under a separate appropriation which provides funds for: (1) part of the cost of the sale of certain Government publications priced in accordance with various authorities other than section 1708 of title 44 U.S. Code. General sales program costs are funded primarily from sales receipts as provided in section 1708 of title 44 of the U.S. Code; (2) the mailing for Members of Congress and other Government agencies of certain Government publications, as authorized by law; (3) the distribution of Government publications to designated depository libraries; and (4) the compilation of catalogs and indexes of Government publications. These four functions are related to the publication activity of other agencies and to the demands of the public, Members of Congress, and depository libraries. Consequently, Documents can exercise little control over the volume of work which it may be called upon to perform. A description of these four functions follows:

1. Special sales of publications.—Certain publications are placed on sale to the public wherein the price of the publication is not established in accordance with section 1708, title 44, but in accordance with various other authorities such as 44 U.S.C. 906, 44 U.S.C. 910, and 44 U.S.C. 1504.

2. Distribution for other Government agencies and Members of Congress.—The Office of Superintendent of Documents maintains mailing lists and mails, at the request of Government agencies and Members of Congress, certain publications specified by public law.

3. Depository library distribution.—As required, Government publications are supplied to libraries which are designated as depositories for Government publications.

4. Cataloging and indexing.—The Office of Superintendent of Documents is charged with preparing catalogs and indexes of all publications issued by the Federal Government. The principal publication is the "Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications."

The Government Printing Office executes orders for printing, binding, and blankbook work, placed by Congress and the various agencies of the Federal Government, and furnishes on order, blank paper, inks, and similar supplies. The Government Printing Office also sells publications to the public through its General and Special sales programs.

All such work is financed through the Government Printing Office revolving fund (44 U.S.C. 309). The fund is reimbursed by the customer agencies, receipts from sales of publications to the general public, and, except for the excess of receipts over costs associated with the sale of publications to the public, net operating income is retained for reuse by the fund.

The sale of publications to the public is divided into two programs. The general sales program covers primarily the sale of those publications which by section 1708 of title 44 are offered for sale to the public by the Superintendent of Documents. Effective with fiscal year 1978, the funding of the expenses of this program is primarily from the sales receipts. The special sales program covers the sale of the Congressional Record, Federal Register, Presidential Papers, et cetera, at prices which are set in accordance with other sections of the United States Code.

The U.S. Tax Court hears and decides cases involving Federal income, estate and gift tax deficiencies and renders declaratory judgments regarding the qualification or continuing qualification (including revocations of rulings on the exemptions) of retirement plans under the provisions of Public Law 93-406, known as the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

The Tax Court has also been given jurisdiction under Public Law 94-455 (Tax Reform Act of 1976) to render declaratory judgments with respect to (1) exempt organization status determinations pursuant to section 501(c)(3), Internal Revenue Code and (2) determinations made pursuant to section 367 (transfers of property from the United States). Under the Revenue Act of 1978, the Court was given jurisdiction to enter declaratory judgments on the tax treatment of interest on proposed issues of government obligations. In addition, the court has jurisdiction over actions to restrain disclosure and to obtain additional disclosure with respect to public inspection of written determinations issued by the Internal Revenue Service, and actions to compel the disclosure of the identity of third-party contacts relating to written determinations made by the Internal Revenue Service.

For 1980, the court proposes a trial program of 341 weeks consisting of 244 weeks of regular trial sessions and 97 weeks of small tax case sessions. Trials are held in approximately 116 cities throughout the United States.

The actual and estimated work volume of the court is presented in the following tabulation:

The Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe was created to monitor compliance with that code of conduct, particularly in regard to what is called "Basket Three" of the Final Act, the Provisions on Cooperation in Humanitarian and Other Fields. The law establishing the Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe also mandated it to monitor and encourage U.S. Government and private activities designed to expand East-West trade and the exchange of people and ideas. The Commission will receive semiannual reports from the President on the signatories' compliance with the Final Act and on U.S. activities in trade and cultural/humanitarian exchange and it will itself make advisory reports to the Congress on the progress of implementation.

The Commission is made up of six Senators, six Members of the House of Representatives and one Commissioner each from the Department of State, Defense, and Commerce.

The Court of Customs and Patent Appeals has jurisdiction of appeals from all final judgments or orders of the U.S. Customs Court. The Court may, in its discretion, permit an appeal to be taken from an order authorizing an evidentiary hearing in a foreign country, issued by the chief judge of the Customs Court or from an interlocutory order of a judge of the U.S. Customs Court when said judge includes in the order a statement that a controlling question of law is involved as to which there is substantial ground for difference of opinion and an immediate appeal may materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation.

The court has jurisdiction of appeals from decisions of U.S. Patent and Trademark Office tribunals as to patent applications and interferences and as to trademark applications and interference, cancellation, concurrent use, and opposition proceedings.

The court also has jurisdiction to review, by appeal on question of law only, the findings of the U.S. International Trade Commission as to unfair practices in import trade.

The jurisdiction of the court includes appeals under section 71 of the Plant Variety Protection Act of 1970.

The court has jurisdiction to review, by appeals on questions of law only, findings of the Secretary of Commerce under headnote 6 to schedule 8, part 4, of the "Tariff Schedules of the United States" relating to importation of scientific instruments or apparatus.

A summary of the business of the court for 1977 and 1978 follows:

The U.S. Customs Court with offices in New York City has exclusive jurisdiction, throughout the United States and its possessions, embracing 46 customs collection districts and 286 ports of entry into which merchandise is imported, over civil actions arising under the tariff laws, the internal revenue law relating to imported merchandise, the several customs simplification acts, the proclamations of the President issued under reciprocal trade agreements, and other proclamations imposing taxes and/or quotas on imported goods, et cetera. Trials may be held at any port or any place within the jurisdiction of the United States, as designated by the chief judge. Cases before the court are tried under the legal procedure provided for in title 28, United States Code, entitled "Judiciary and Judicial Procedure." The court tries cases without a jury, making findings of fact, and applies the law, both statutory and general, including constitutional issues. The Government is represented before the court by an Assistant Attorney General of the United States and a staff of special trial attorneys.

The U.S. Court of Claims has jurisdiction over all cases involving claims against the United States (except in pension suits) instituted upon constitutional grounds or under Federal law or regulations, all claims arising out of any contract with the Federal Government and its agencies, and claims for the refund of taxes. It also has general jurisdiction to hear and determine claims for damages other than tort actions, provided the claimants would have the right to sue in law or equity if the United States were not immune to such suits. It has jurisdiction in suits against the United States by contractors dissatisfied with the findings and decisions of contracting agencies under terminated war contracts and jurisdiction concurrent with that of the courts of appeals to review district court decisions in cases involving tort actions. It has exclusive jurisdiction to review the decisions of the Indian Claims Commission on appeal from the Commission. It also has jurisdiction in special act cases referred to the court by the Congress, and the commissioners of the court have jurisdiction to render reports to the Congress on claims set forth in bills referred to the chief commissioner by either House of Congress.

The Council on Wage and Price Stability, established by the President, was authorized by the Council on Wage and Price Stability Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-378) amended by Public Law 94-78 and Public Law 95-121).

Phase II of the President's anti-inflation program was begun in 1979, and is to continue in 1980. The program consists of voluntary wage and price guidelines which are designed to lower the rate of inflation without causing undesirable disturbances in the economy.

The Council's responsibilities include monitoring private sector wage and price action along with governmental actions which affect the economy, and identifying areas where compliance is not being achieved. Based on the Council's findings, the President may take appropriate action to bring the parties into compliance, including Federal contracting and procurement sanctions.

The Council will also conduct special analyses; hold public hearings on inflation; review and appraise various policies and practices of the Federal Government contributing to inflation; and make recommendations to increase productivity and reduce inflationary pressures.

This appropriation establishes a framework of joint Federal and State efforts to provide the basic facilities essential to economic growth in Appalachia. Program investments made in the Appalachian region are concentrated in areas with significant potential for future growth. The States, acting through the Appalachian Regional Commission, are responsible for recommending local and State projects within their borders for assistance under this program. Authorizing legislation to extend and to improve the program will be proposed.

1. Appalachian Development Highway System.—Section 201 of the Appalachian Regional Development Act authorizes construction of the Appalachian Development Highway System including local access roads. This system is designed to improve the accessibility of Appalachia; to reduce highway transportation costs to and within Appalachia; and to provide the highway transportation facilities necessary to accelerate the overall development of Appalachia. The budget for 1980 provides $224 million for the program.

The cumulative status of the system of roads, including mileage prefunded by the States, follows:

2. Area development programs.—Funds are provided for a single allocation to each of the Appalachian States for implementing programs of area development. The programs consist of projects aimed primarily at providing the basic facilities essential to the region's growth and economic development, particularly in the areas of health, education, and community development facilities. Appropriations for 1980 are $1 million under 1979 for this program (primarily representing a technical financial adjustment).

During 1980 continued emphasis will be placed on conducting area development activities by an allocation system permitting a high degree of State flexibility in the kind of projects undertaken. These projects will be of the following types with approximate workload for approved projects as follows:

(a) Health and child development.—Grants are made for the construction, equipping, and operations of multi-county demonstration health facilities, including hospitals, regional health diagnostic or treatment centers, and other facilities. In addition, grant support is provided for primary care and child development programs throughout the region. 1978 obligations were $28,848 thousand.

(b) Vocational and other education facilities and operations.—Grants are made to States and local districts within the Appalachian region for the construction and equipment of vocational education facilities, and in limited cases, for operations and demonstration projects. Supplementary grants are also provided for community colleges, libraries, and educational television projects. These facilities are key elements for the training and upgrading of potential and existing labor force entrants in skills required in commercial and other vocations. Grants are administered through the Office of Education. 1978 obligations were $22,698 thousand.

(c) Community development and housing facilities.—Grants are made for the construction and equipping of development facilities such as water and sewer systems, sewage treatment facilities, recreation facilities, industrial sites and housing, et cetera, to meet the basic needs of local areas and assist in providing economic development opportunities. Grants may be supplementary to other Federal grants or when sufficient Federal funds are unavailable be provided entirely by this program. The total Federal contribution may not exceed 80%. 1978 obligations were $45,621 thousand.

ment and control of underground and outcrop mine fires, and the reclamation and rehabilitation of strip and surface mine areas, including waste banks, on public land in those areas of Appalachia where the potential for economic growth exists. States or local sponsors must bear 25% of the project cost. 1978 obligations were $1,429 thousand.

(e) Other programs.—Limited programs of grants to stimulate energy related enterprise development and craft centers and assist in meeting rural transportation problems of the region and, beginning in 1978, provide technical assistance to States are provided. 1978 obligations were $8,507 thousand.

3. Research and local development district program.—Appalachian planning assistance is provided through grants to multicounty local development districts and for research and technical assistance projects. Grants are made for up to 75% of the administrative expenses of local development districts. Other planning and technical assistance is provided for (a) programs which improve the base for economic growth, (b) programs which will attract industrial development within the region, (c) programs which will improve the health, education, and skills of the people, and (d) programs which conserve, maintain, and improve natural resources. The funding reduction shown below is a consequence of technical financing changes. The program level for local development districts will actually increase by about $300 thousand in 1980.

Supplementary assistance is provided to individuals, businesses, and State and local governments in the event of a Presidentially declared emergency or major disaster. Additionally, funds may be made available directly to a State, or to Federal agencies as reimbursement for expenditures in disaster relief work performed under this authority. Pursuant to reorganization Plan No. 3 of 1978, responsibility for administration of the disaster relief program has been delegated to the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), effective in 1979.

This appropriation provides funds to finance credit sales of defense articles and services to foreign countries and international organizations. Two types of financing arrangements are authorized under the Arms Export Control Act: (1) direct U.S. Government loans administered by the Department of Defense (section 23 of the act), and (2) commercial credit and Federal Financing Bank loan agreements guaranteed by the U.S. Government (section 24). To finance loan guarantees, an appropriation equal to 10% of the principal amount is needed. Direct loans, which require appropriations equal to the face value of the loan, are offered only when there is a legal requirement that repayment be forgiven or special conditions make a guarantee inappropriate.

An appropriation of $656.3 million is requested for 1980 to finance a credit sales program of $2,063.0 million; $1,563.0 million will be financed by the Federal Financing Bank and $156.3 million of this appropriation will be set aside as a guarantee reserve for these loans. The balance of the appropriation, $500.0 million, will be used for direct loans by the Department of Defense. Administrative expenses related to this program are paid from the grant military assistance account and reimbursed from receipts from foreign governments collected in the foreign military sales trust fund.

This trust fund was established to facilitate government-to-government sales of defense articles and services as authorized by sections 21 and 22 of the Arms Export Control Act, including those sales financed with foreign military sales credits in accordance with section 23 of that act. Orders placed by foreign governments through this trust fund can be combined with procurement for our own military departments. The resultant savings are shared by both the United States and foreign governments.

The net impact of foreign military sales on the budget is reflected below (in billions of dollars):

U.S. membership in the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD) was authorized by the Bretton Woods Agreements Act of July 31, 1945.

A selective capital increase of $8.4 billion, increasing the authorized capital of the IBRD to $41 billion, was approved by the Board of Governors in 1977. The U.S. share of the selective capital increase of $1,569 million, of which 10 percent would be paid-in capital, was authorized in Public Law 95-118, and represents an 18.7% share of the increase, compared with the outstanding 25.3% U.S. share of the IBRD capital stock. Appropriation of a first tranche of $523 million was sought in 1978, of which $380 million was appropriated. Appropriation of $666 million was sought in 1979 of which $163 million ($16.3 million paid-in capital and $146.7 million callable capital) was appropriated.

Appropriation of the third tranche of $523 million will be sought in 1980, together with the $503 million requested, but not appropriated, in 1979, for a total request of $1,026 million (of which $102.6 million represents paid-in capital).

The International Development Association (IDA) is the member of the World Bank Group which provides development financing on concessional terms. Pursuant to authorization in the International Development Association Act (Public Law 86-565), enacted June 30, 1960, the United States joined the Association in August 1960.

Fourth replenishment.—In 1974, a U.S. contribution of $1,500 million in four equal installments was authorized by the Congress as part of a $4,500 million replenishment (Public Law 93-373). Appropriation of both the third and fourth installments, totaling $750 million, was sought in 1979, of which $458 million was appropriated. The remaining $292 million is being sought in 1980.

Fifth replenishment.—A fifth replenishment of the resources of the IDA of $7,638 million was approved by the Board of Governors in 1977. Authorization for the U.S. share of $2,400 million, to be paid in three equal installments beginning in 1978, was obtained in Public Law 95-118. The first and second installments of $800 million were appropriated in 1978 and 1979, respectively; the third tranche of $800 million is being sought in 1980.

Authorization has been obtained in Public Law 95-118 for a $111.5 million U.S. share of a $540 million replenishment to the resources of the IFC. In 1978 and 1979, a total of $78 million was appropriated. In 1980, the remaining $33 million of the present replenishment is being sought.

The Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) promotes economic development in Latin America and Caribbean countries through loans and technical assistance. Pursuant to the Inter-American Development Bank Act (Public Law 86-147), enacted August 7, 1959, the United States joined the Bank in December 1959.

Capital resources.—International negotiations have recently been completed for an $8,000 million increase in the capital of the IDB, of which the U.S. share would be $2,749 million, or 34.5%, of which $206 million or 7.5% represents paid-in capital and the remainder ($2,543 million) callable capital.

Authorizing legislation will be sought for a U.S. subscription of $2,749 million to the capital resources of the IDB. Subject to this amount being authorized, appropriation is sought in 1980 for $687.3 million (of which $51.5 million will represent paid-in capital) as the first of four equal installments to this planned increase in the IDB's capital resources.

Fund for special operations (FSO).—Authorizing legislation (Public Law 94-302) was approved in 1976 for a U.S. contribution of $600 million, to be contributed in three tranches, to the current replenishment of the FSO. In 1977, $160 million was appropriated and in 1978, $114.7 million was appropriated from requests totaling $200 million in each year. In 1979, the remaining $325.3 million was requested, of which $175 million was appropriated. The remaining $150.3 million is being sought in 1980.

International negotiations have recently been completed for a $1,750 million replenishment of the FSO's resources. The U.S. share of this increase would be $700 million, or 40%. Authorizing legislation will be sought for a $700 million U.S. subscription to this replenishment of the resources of the FSO. Subject to this amount being authorized, appropriation is sought in 1980 for $175 million, representing the first of four equal annual installments.

The total request for the FSO in 1980 is, therefore, $325.3 million, which represents the final $150.3 million not appropriated for the current replenishment, and the first installment of $175 million to the new replenishment.

The Asian Development Bank (ADB) was established in 1966 to foster economic growth in Asia by extending loans and technical assistance to the developing member countries of the region. Pursuant to authorization in the Asian Development Bank Act (Public Law 89-369), enacted March 16, 1966, the United States joined the Bank in August 1966.

Ordinary capital (OC).—A $4,960 million replenishment increasing the Bank's resources was approved by the ADB Board of Governors in 1977, and a U.S. contribution of $814.3 million, of which 10% would be paid-in capital, was authorized in Public Law 95-118. Appropriations of $203.6 million (with $20.4 million representing paid-in capital) were sought in 1978, of which $168 million was appropriated (of the latter amount, $16.8 million represented paid-in capital). In 1979, $239.2 million was sought, of which $194.5 million ($19.4 million paid-in capital and $175 million callable capital) was appropriated. In 1980, the third tranche of $203.6 million and the $44.6 million not appropriated in 1979 are being sought, for a total request of $248.2 million, of which 10% represents paid-in capital.

Asian development fund (ADF).—The ADF is the concessional lending window of the ADB. Authorization has been obtained for a U.S. contribution of $180 million to an $809 million replenishment to the ADF (Public Law 95-118). Appropriation of $49.5 million was obtained in 1978 and $70.5 million in 1979. In 1980, the third and final $60 million tranche of the first replenishment of the resources of the ADF is being sought.

In addition, international agreement has been reached for a second replenishment of the resources of the ADF totaling over $2,000 million. Authorizing legislation will be sought for a U.S. contribution of $445 million, representing 22.25% of the $2,000 million in regular contributions to the replenishment. Subject to authorizing legislation being obtained, the United States also seeks appropriation in 1980 for $111.25 million, as the first of four equal annual contributions to this second replenishment of the ADF.

The total request for 1980 for the first and second replenishments to the ADF amounts to $171.25 million.

The African Development Fund (AFDF), a special fund associated with the African Development Bank (AFDB), was established on June 30, 1973. The purpose of the AFDF is to complement the operations of the AFDB by providing concessional financing for high priority development projects in the poorest African countries.

U.S. membership in the AFDF was approved on May 31, 1976 (Public Law 94-302), with an authorized contribution of $25 million. The United States formally joined the AFDF in November 1976 with a contribution of $15 million, and the final $10 million was appropriated in 1978. In 1979, $25 million, which had been authorized in Public Law 95-118, was sought and appropriated as a U.S. contribution to the first replenishment of AFDF resources.

International agreement has been reached for a second replenishment of the resources of the AFDF in the amount of $777 million, of which $700 has been pledged. Authorizing legislation will be sought for a U.S. contribution of $125 million, representing between 16% and 18% of the final replenishment total. Subject to authorizing legislation being obtained, an appropriation of $41.7 million is sought in 1980, as the first of three installments by the United States.

The program, consolidated into a single worldwide authority in 1978, extends guarantees to assist developing countries in formulating and executing sound housing and community development policies that meet the needs of lower income groups. Activities to be carried out will emphasize: (1) sites and services and core housing projects providing homesites and shelter for poor families; (2) slum upgrading projects designed to conserve and improve existing shelter; (3) low-income shelter projects designed for demonstration or institution building purposes; and (4) project-related community facilities and services.

The Foreign Assistance Act of 1969 established the Inter-American Foundation. Financing was initially provided through the transfer of $50 million from the Agency for International Development. With this initial transfer soon to be fully obligated, budget authority is now being requested annually. Additional funds, $12-$16 million equivalent in 1980, are available under an agreement allowing access to the local currencies of the Social progress trust fund administered by the Inter-American Development Bank, and the Foundation is authorized to obtain additional private funding.

The most important characteristics of the program include responsiveness to Latin American and Caribbean initiatives and support for social change processes with a direct impact on the lives of people at the lowest economic levels.

Section 608 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 created a revolving fund to provide for more effective use of U.S. Government-owned excess property in foreign assistance programs by authorizing such property to be acquired and rehabilitated in advance of specifically known requirements for country programs.

Many types of excess property which AID needs, such as tractors, construction and roadbuilding equipment, machinery, and machine tools, are acquired through this fund. All operating expenses of the program are covered from U.S. dollar fee income.

The purpose of the Supplementary financing facility is to augment temporarily the ability of the IMF to assist member countries with balance-of-payments problems, thereby allowing these countries time to implement required policy measures without resort to abrupt and harmful restrictions on trade and payments. Major industrial and oil-exporting countries have joined in agreeing to make available an amount equal to 8,542 million special drawing rights (approximately $10.9 billion) to the Supplementary financing facility in order to provide a prompt and substantial temporary increase in the fund's resources. The international monetary reserves of the United States are correspondingly increased by the amount of the U.S. resources transferred to the facility, and could be drawn on by the United States in case of need.

As of September 30, 1978, the current dollar value of the U.S. quota in the IMF of Special Drawing Rights (SDR), the IMF's unit of account, was $10,767 million, reflecting an increase of $2,971 million from the 1977 level. In April 1, 1978, an increase in the U.S. quota became effective, pursuant to Public Law 94-564 approved on October 19, 1976, on which the United States paid an increased subscription of $2,110 million. Also, during the past fiscal year, the United States incurred increased obligations to the IMF equal to the decreased value of the dollars held by the IMF in terms of the SDR.

During 1978, the members of the IMF reached a consensus on a 50% increase in IMF quotas for a 5-year period. It is expected that proposed legislation to authorize U.S. consent to the quota increase will be submitted during calendar year 1979.

The General Arrangements to Borrow (GAB) were established in 1962 by 10 industrial countries, including the United States, as a means of supplementing the IMF's resources when needed to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary system.

Each participant undertakes to provide specific amounts of its currency to help finance drawings from the IMF by another GAB participant. As of September 30, 1978, total commitments under the GAB amounted to the equivalent of about $8,886 million. U.S. participation in the GAB of $2 billion was authorized and appropriated in 1962.

During 1978, no calls were made under the GAB, while the equivalent of approximately $115 million was repaid by the IMF to GAB lenders. The United States was repaid approximately $30 million.

Section 201(13) of the Naval Petroleum Reserves Production Act of 1976 (Public Law 94-258) established the naval petroleum reserves special account to be credited with collections arising from the operation of the naval petroleum reserves. Subject to appropriation, these collections were available for three energy-related programs: continued exploration, development, and operation of the naval petroleum reserves (Department of the Navy); exploration of the national petroleum reserve in Alaska (Department of the Interior); and the strategic petroleum reserve (Federal Energy Administration). Accordingly, the amounts appropriated in 1977 were allocated by the President to these agencies as reflected above.

In 1978, the Congress provided general fund appropriations directly to the agencies and directed transfer of the estimated collections to miscellaneous receipts. Consistent with the 1978 appropriations action, legislation has been proposed to amend section 201(13) of the act to provide that all collections in 1979 and future years from the sale of petroleum from the naval petroleum reserve be deposited directly into miscellaneous receipts of the general fund.

The naval petroleum reserves and strategic petroleum storage programs were transferred to the Department of Energy pursuant to the Department of Energy Organization Act (Public Law 95-91) and Executive Order 12009, effective October 1, 1977, and are funded from general fund appropriations in the Energy account. The exploration of the national petroleum reserve in Alaska program is funded as a separate appropriation under Geologic Survey (Department of the Interior).

[AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH SERVICE]
SCIENCE AND EDUCATION ADMINISTRATION

The Science and Education Administration (SEA) was created to provide overall planning, support, and coordination for food and agricultural science and education programs. It conducts and supports research across the broad range of food and agricultural sciences. It communicates and demonstrates the results of this research to farmers, processors, consumers, and other groups. It provides facts and expertise in support of the policy and regulatory functions of the Department of Agriculture and other Government agencies. It makes use of library and computer information systems to assist the public, researchers, and educators. It responds to International food and agriculture needs through research and education. It helps identify priority problems for scientists to study, and initiates special projects to solve these problems. The objectives and missions are oriented toward improving research, extension, technical information and higher education efficiencies as follows:

Comparable amounts for 1978 ($127 thousand) and 1979 ($174 thousand) are included above.

1. Research on animal production.—Research is conducted to improve livestock productivity (including poultry) through improved breeding, feeding, and management practices, and to develop methods for controlling diseases, parasites, and insect pests affecting them. In fiscal year 1980 increased emphasis will be placed on research to reduce agriculture's dependence on fossil fuels.

2. Research on plant production.—Research is conducted to improve plant productivity through improved varieties of food, feed, fiber, and other plants; develop new crop resources; and improve crop production practices, including methods to control plant diseases, nematodes, insects, and weeds. New initiatives proposed in 1980 include Integrated Pest Management (IPM) programs and energy research for agricultural needs.

3. Research on the use and improvement of soil, air, and water.—Research is conducted to improve the management of natural resources, including investigations to improve soil and water management, irrigation, and conservation practices; to protect natural resources from harmful effects of soil, air, and water pollutants and to minimize certain agricultural pollution problems; and to determine the relation of soil types and water to plant, animal, and human nutrition. New initiatives included in 1980 will provide for basic research on infiltration run off and soil-water storage.

4. Processing, storage, distribution, food safety, and consumer services research.—Research is conducted to develop new and improved foods, feeds, fabrics, and industrial products and processes for agricultural commodities for domestic and foreign markets, including ways to minimize processing wastes as well as the processing, transportation, storage, wholesaling, and retailing of products.

Research is also conducted on problems of human health and safety, including means to insure the safety of food and feed supplies; control insect pests of man and his belongings; reduce the hazards to human life resulting from pesticide residues and other causes; and on consumer services. Increases in fiscal year 1980 will place emphasis on basic research and food safety.

5. Research on human nutrition.—Research is conducted on human nutritional requirements and the composition and nutritive value of food as needed by consumers and to aid Federal, State, and local agencies administering food and nutrition programs. Requested in 1980 are additional funds to provide for research on nutrition to improve the dietary and nutritional status of mankind.

6. Repair and maintenance of facilities.—Funds for use to restore, upgrade, and maintain Federal facilities to meet OSHA and EPA requirements and provide suitable workspace for inhouse research programs. Prior year obligations appear in the various research activities.

7. Contingencies.—$1 million will be available to meet urgent needs that develop unexpectedly during the year when such needs cannot be met by redirection of resources from other projects. Prior year obligations appear in the various research activities.

8. and 9. Competitive research grants and construction of facilities.—Amounts in 1980 reflect costs from unexpended balances. They do not represent additional funding request for these items.

Foreign currencies which the Treasury Department determines to be excess to the normal requirements of the United States are used for expenses of carrying out programs of the Department of Agriculture under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended. Research which is important to American agriculture and supplements our domestic programs is carried on through agreements negotiated with institutions and organizations in foreign countries. For example, research is conducted on exotic insect pests and diseases of plants and animals which cannot be done in the United States. Specialized projects provide for the translation and dissemination of foreign language scientific publications. Total estimated cost in U.S. dollars (charged to regular appropriations) for program direction and supervision of projects in 1980 is $575 thousand.

1. Payments under the Hatch Act.—Funds under the Hatch Act are allocated to agricultural experiment stations of the land-grant colleges in the 50 States, District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands, for agricultural research including investigations and experiments to promote a permanent and efficient agricultural industry and improvements in the rural home and rural community. Increased program emphasis on research on integrated pest management and nonpoint pollution and water quality is proposed in 1980.

2. Cooperative forestry research.—These funds are allocated to land-grant colleges or agricultural experiment stations in the 50 States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands, and other State-supported colleges and universities offering graduate training in the sciences basic to forestry and having a forestry school. Increased program emphasis on nonpoint pollution and water quality research is proposed in 1980.

3. Payments to 1890 colleges and Tuskegee Institute.—Funds support planning, coordinating and conducting agricultural research at the 1890 land-grant colleges including Tuskegee Institute. The eligible institutions plan and conduct agricultural research in cooperation with each other and such agencies, institutions, and individuals as may contribute to the solution of agricultural problems.

4. Special research grants.—These funds support basic and applied research in the areas of pest management, pesticide clearance, pesticide impact assessment, soil erosion, food and agriculture policies, genetic vulnerability, animal health and energy research.

5. Competitive research grants.—This program emphasizes basic research critical to food production and human nutrition. In fiscal year 1980 it is proposed that $21 million be provided for grants to study serious problems relating to crop productivity and $9 million be provided for human nutrition research.

6. Rural development.—Funds appropriated under title V of the Rural Development Act of 1972 are allocated to land-grant colleges and universities of the 50 States and Puerto Rico, to conduct pilot research programs in support of the development of rural areas.

7. Animal health and disease research.—Funds support livestock and poultry disease research in colleges of veterinary medicine and in eligible agricultural experiment stations. Distribution is by formula based on the relative importance of livestock and poultry production in the States and the capacity of eligible institutions to conduct this research. Research on specified national and regional problems of joint USDA-State concern also is conducted as agreed upon between the USDA and specific eligible institutions.

8. Federal administration (direct appropriation).—A coordinating and review staff is maintained to examine research projects and assist State institutions and Federal agencies.

The primary function of the nationwide system of cooperative extension work is out-of-school applied education in agriculture, home economics, community development, 4-H youth programs, and related subjects. This educational work takes research results, technological advancements, and program facts of the Department of Agriculture, the State agricultural colleges and experiment stations, and incorporates them into a program for action. Cooperative Extension Service interprets, disseminates, and encourages practical use of knowledge. It transmits information from researchers to people.

1. Payments to States.—Funds appropriated under the Smith-Lever Act for payments to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands are distributed primarily on the basis of population and to a degree on basis of special problems and needs. Funds are used primarily for the employment of State, area, and county extension workers who work with individuals, families, community organizations, marketing concerns, and others by providing advice and assistance in the application of improved methods for production, marketing, nutrition, family living, and community development. Work with youth is accomplished largely through the 4-H program.

Increased program emphasis in the areas of integrated pest management, solar energy demonstration, and nonpoint source pollution are proposed in 1980.

2. Education grants.—Funds are proposed to initiate a competitive education grant program to assist universities with predominantly minority enrollments and would support the development of the agricultural education programs of these schools.

3. Federal administration and coordination.—The Extension Service provides leadership and assistance to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, and the District of Columbia in developing extension programs, improving teaching methods, efficient use of available resources, evaluation of programs, and administrative services.

The Technical Information Systems (TIS) in cooperation with the Library of Congress and the National Library of Medicine, provides coverage and servicing of worldwide publications in the agricultural, chemical, and biological sciences. It serves all of the Department programs in the Washington metropolitan area, as well as the field installations throughout the country. It has the added responsibility of service to the land-grant universities, and the world agricultural science community.

The primary purpose of TIS is to acquire, preserve, and disseminate an exhaustive collection of reliable information in all phases of the agricultural and allied sciences. TIS also maintains, in cooperation with the Office of General Counsel, a central law library and 17 field legal libraries.

The Technical Information Systems provide a variety of information products and services to users in all areas of agriculture on a national and international level to help meet the broad-based information needs of the agricultural communities. This is accomplished through three major activities: (1) The administration of a unique collection of books, journals, and other information materials about food and agriculture to assure accessibility to their contents; (2) the development and maintenance of cooperative efforts in the library and related information areas, with other Federal agencies and with educational institutions in each State; (3) an active program of information dissemination. Three primary groups of users have been identified: (1) USDA scientists and other researchers, agricultural scientists at land-grant universities and other institutions of higher learning and in State agricultural agencies; (2) Federal and State administrators and managers; and (3) farmers, farm-supporting institutions, and the rural and urban consuming public. New attention, emphasis, and priority is being given to the third segment. The consolidation of all scientific, technical, and sociological information systems into a single unit and the merging of the research and information components of USDA into a single administration will allow for the design and development of more comprehensive and efficient information systems.

The Economics, Statistics, and Cooperatives Service was established by Secretary's memorandum No. 1927 dated October 5, 1977, and supplement No. 1 to that memorandum dated December 19, 1977, by consolidation of the Economic Research Service, Statistical Reporting Service, Farmer Cooperative Service, and the Economic Management Support Center. The fiscal year 1978 for Statistical Reporting Service and Economic Research Service are shown elsewhere in this Appendix. Fiscal year 1978 for Farmer Cooperative Service and Economic Management Support Center are shown in the Economics, Statistics, and Cooperatives Service schedules.

The three major missions of the Service are: (1) to formulate, develop, and administer programs of economic research, analysis, and information related to food, agriculture, and rural resources and communities, (2) to formulate, develop, and administer programs of collecting and publishing statistics related to food, agriculture, and rural resources and communities, and (3) to formulate, develop, and administer research technical assistance programs on financial, organization, management, legal, social, and economic aspects of agriculturally related cooperatives. Data developed by the Service on food and agriculture are essential to farmers, processors, and handlers in making production, and marketing decisions and to legislators and other public officials in developing and administering agricultural programs. The activities of the Service comprise four main areas:

1. Economic analysis and research.—This activity includes the development of short-term forecasts and long-range projections of resource use, production and distribution of food and fiber for both probable and possible future events. The Service also evaluates the performance of the food and fiber sector in meeting the needs and wants of consumers and overall goals of society concerning such matters as resource ownership and use, income and income distribution, and quality of life. Current information is maintained on the principal social and economic factors affecting life in nonmetropolitan areas and alternative public and private actions which have impact on these areas are identified and evaluated.

The increases under this activity requested in fiscal year 1980 are for: (1) water quality, conservation and management; (2) the role of small farms in agriculture and rural America; and, (3) food safety, quality and nutrition policy.

2. Crop and livestock estimates.—The Service provides the official National and State estimates of acreage, yield, and production of crops, stocks and value of farm commodities, and numbers of inventory values of livestock items. Data on approximately 150 crops and livestock products are covered in some 500 reports issued each year. Data collected and published on prices paid and received by farmers are basic to computation of parity prices.

The work under this activity is conducted through 44 State offices serving the 50 States; most of these offices are operated as joint State and Federal services. Cooperative arrangements with State agencies provide much additional State and county data; Federal funds are not available for collection and publication of these data.

A comparison of activities in 1977 and 1978, including work performed under cooperative arrangements, follows:

	1977 actual	1978 actual
Separate mailings of inquiry forms, average per field office	350	345
Total questionnaires handled:
Number distributed.....	7,310,800	5,049,092
Number of returns tabulated.....	3,150,300	2,932,014
Number of official reports issued, all offices.....	9,140	9,042
Copies of reports distributed.....	9,512,000	9,105,645
Copies of publications distributed.....	1,380,000	1,246,078

	1977 actual	1978 actual
Special requests for information answered by field offices.....	75,000	78,383

The increase requested under this activity in fiscal year 1980 is for improvement of price statistics.

3. Statistical research and service—Departmental clearance and review.—The work of the Service under this activity is to review, coordinate, and monitor data gathering surveys conducted by the Department. This involves: (1) the review of all proposed statistical forms and survey plans requiring Office of Management and Budget clearance in accordance with the Federal Reports Act of 1942, and (2) coordination of all interdepartment and intradepartment programs for the improvement of agricultural statistics and related data.

Improvement of crop and livestock estimates.—This research is devoted primarily to improving statistical methods and techniques for producing agricultural statistics with a high degree of accuracy at a minimum cost. This work is in support of the Service's long-range program for improving crop and livestock estimates, and is directed toward developing better sampling, yield forecasting, and survey techniques for the agency. Current research activities include compiling and maintaining lists of farms; developing new sampling techniques combining list frame(s) with an area sampling frame(s); constructing mathematical models for forecasting crop yields from objective counts and measurements of plant characteristics; and reducing reporting and other non-sampling errors by improving questionnaire design, and by devising better field editing and processing procedures. These research studies are tested by pilot surveys under actual operating conditions, and then, if proven, placed into operation. A comparison of activities for 1977 and 1978 follows:

Statistical forms—reports (Federal Reports Act):
Departmental clearance and review for submission to Office of Management and Budget.....	317	310
Improvement of crop and livestock estimating methods:
Number of research projects.....	4	10

The increases under this activity requested in fiscal year 1980 are for: (1) remote sensing; and, (2) improvement of weather-crop yield models.

4. Research and technical assistance for agricultural cooperatives.—Technical assistance is provided in response to problems that may come to the Economics, Statistics, and Cooperatives Service from farmers directly or through the management of boards of directors of cooperatives composed of hundreds, and, in some instances, thousands of farmers. Help is given on the formation of new cooperatives, the merits of merging cooperative organizations, changes in business organizations and future growth or development, and the development of more viable relationships between cooperatives and other businesses and institutions. The full range of organization and management problems confronting cooperatives is covered by the Economics, Statistics, and Cooperatives Service technical assistance program.

Applied research is conducted to give farmers relevant and expert assistance pertaining to their cooperatives. Studies concentrate on financial, organizational, legal, social, and economic aspects of cooperative activity.

Statistical data are collected to detect changes in structure, operations, and growth trends. The data helps identify and support applied research and technical assistance activities.

The agency serves as a central source of information of data about farmers' cooperatives in the United States. This information is communicated to the farmer or member through a variety of publications.

The Economics, Statistics, and Cooperatives Service efforts center on providing immediate response and leadership for more effective and efficient cooperative operations in the changing economic environment in which the family farmer operates.

The increase under this activity requested in fiscal year 1980 is to provide technical assistance to small farmers.

The World Food and Agricultural Outlook and Situation Board (WFAOSB) was established by Secretary's memorandum No. 1920 dated June 3, 1977, as authorized by reorganization plan No. 2 of 1953, to provide a single focal point for the Nation's economic intelligence related to domestic and international food and agriculture.

The objectives of the WFAOSB program are to improve the consistency, objectivity, and reliability of outlook and situation material being disseminated to the public and to integrate and coordinate USDA domestic and international economic information assistance.

The WFAOSB carries out these objectives through daily market surveillance and special analyses of international and domestic agricultural developments, direct participation in the planning of research programs supporting outlook and situation activities, and coordination of all departmental activities relating to weather and climate and remote sensing.

The Foreign Agricultural Service mission is to help American farmers and traders take maximum advantage of increased opportunities to sell U.S. agricultural commodities abroad and to help increase U.S. farm income.

Four functional objectives comprise the Foreign Agricultural Service mission: (1) Achieving maximum market access for American farm exports, (2) providing information assisting U.S. agriculture's adjustment to short-term changes in world supply and demand, (3) expanding long-term foreign commercial markets for U.S. agricultural products, and (4) safeguarding American farmers and farm programs against unfair or injurious import competition.

Accordingly, the Service collects, analyzes, and disseminates global agricultural economic intelligence to: (1) Provide the U.S. agricultural industry information allowing it to anticipate world demand for U.S. farm products, (2) provide U.S. Government decisionmakers information with which to formulate policies safeguarding the U.S. agricultural community's interests, and (3) permit maximum production efficiency by American farmers.

The Service also helps develop long-term foreign outlets for U.S. farm exports by: (1) Providing consolidated trade services and marketing expertise, (2) stimulating interest in exporting farm-grown products, (3) improving and coordinating market development techniques, (4) sharing financial risks inherent in market exploration, (5) lending official Government representation essential to conducting business abroad, and (6) achieving and retaining maximum access to foreign markets.

Activities are conducted within three program areas to achieve the four functional objectives:

1. Agricultural attachés.—The Service maintains agricultural attachés at 70 foreign posts to assist overseas development of markets for U.S. farm commodities. Attachés work closely with numerous U.S. agricultural trade groups and maintain significant contacts with foreign governments and traders to promote market access for U.S. farm products. Attachés also file annually about 4,000 comprehensive reports regarding foreign agricultural production, supply, demand, marketing and trade policy developments to keep U.S. agriculture, industry, and Government currently informed.

2. Commodity analysis and services.—The analysis and services program forges a linkage between the attachés and the agency's analytical/informational and market development planning/services functions that serve the U.S. agricultural community and Government decisionmakers. The analysis and timely release of periodicals on world commodity conditions allow U.S. farm and trade groups to have ready access to information that can be used as reliable sources to assess short-term changes in world agricultural supply conditions by commodity. Contributing to this availability of commodity information is the Crop Condition Assessment Office which, through modern satellites, and meteorological and communications technology, provides an early distress warning and condition assessment capability for field crops in selected major crop producing countries. With further application testing, this remote sensing activity will constitute an increasingly versatile complement to the field reports of the attachés and provide the commodity analyst with additional indicators of crop conditions.

The Service directs and coordinates Department responsibilities in international trade agreement programs and negotiations under the authority of the Trade Expansion Act. It identifies and strives to reduce foreign trade barriers to U.S. agricultural exports. The agency examines foreign trade policies and assesses their impact on market access for U.S. farm products and recommends U.S. export action alternatives.

The analyses of world commodity conditions provide the information necessary to develop export marketing strategies that can be used not only by the Department to gain market access but to enhance the long term market development plans for major U.S. commodities.

The Service administers a program of import controls (in accordance with section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act) on foreign farm products which would render ineffective or materially interfere with Department commodity programs. It is also responsible for administering import controls established under the 1964 Meat Import Act and section 204 of the Trade Expansion Act.

3. Market development activities.—This activity provides funding support to about 45 commodity associations (cooperators) and 3 regional groups representing 37 State departments of agriculture that, under FAS guidance and supervision, conduct an extensive worldwide market development program on behalf of the U.S. farm sector. In addition, FAS develops and operates a worldwide system of multicommodity promotional programs utilizing product exhibits, trade teams, trade services, market information programs, and trade referral services to expand overseas markets. To increase the effectiveness of USDA export promotion efforts a U.S. agricultural trade office was opened in May in London, England. The Agricultural Trade Act of 1978 authorized the establishment of between 6 and 25 of these offices.

Program changes for fiscal year 1980.—The fiscal year 1980 budget represents a net increase of $962 thousand from fiscal year 1979. An increase of $1,077 thousand is requested for the agricultural attaché program to offset inflation and thereby maintain current operations and to shift the funding of attaché post operations in Egypt, India, and Pakistan from the Special foreign currency appropriation to direct appropriations. An increase of $409 thousand is also sought for annualization of fiscal year 1979 pay costs. These increases are partially offset by a decrease of $259 thousand in travel costs and $265 thousand for attaché post reductions in Lebanon and Italy and for reduced economic indicator activities.

The type of market development projects being carried out include trade servicing, sales teams, trade fairs and exhibits, feed demonstrations, and market analyses and research. In fiscal year 1980 it is planned that the unobligated balance brought forward in this appropriation will be used to purchase those currencies necessary to carry out the program in excess currency countries. The Office of International Cooperation and Development (formerly International Development Staff) was established by Secretary's memorandum No. 1947, dated May 1, 1978. The mission of the Office of International Cooperation and Development (OICD) is to coordinate, plan, and direct the Department's efforts in international development and technical cooperation in food and agriculture, as well as coordination of international organization affairs and scientific exchange programs for the Department. An important dimension of this mission is to coordinate the activities of USDA in conjunction with other Government agencies, land grant universities, international organizations, and other institutions. This includes direction of the Department's activities under agreements with the Agency for International Development (AID), Peace Corps, and other development assistance organizations, particularly agricultural technical assistance and training programs. The Office participates in the planning of agricultural development policy, in formulating technical assistance projects, and in the review and evaluation of agricultural assistance efforts. The Office also coordinates the Department's international scientific and technical activities and is responsible for improved coordination with other Government agencies, land grant universities, international organizations, and other institutions, and provides greater Departmental emphasis on increasing the scientific exchanges with other countries. In performing these functions, the Office works closely with other U.S. and international organizations to assist them in utilizing the scientific and institutional competence of American agriculture in carrying out development assistance programs, and the development and maintenance of effective relationships with international and U.S. organizations in planning and carrying out Department activities designed to support the U.S. commitment to alleviating malnutrition throughout the world.

The Department's foreign technical assistance portion of the OICD responsibility has heretofore been mainly funded by AID. During the past few years, however, the Department has entered into direct agreements with foreign governments and increasingly with international organizations.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Facilities and funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation may by law be used in carrying out programs for exporting agricultural commodities.

Included in this category are the following activities carried out under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, Public Law 480, 83d Congress, as amended: Financing sales of agricultural commodities for dollars or for convertible foreign currency on credit terms (titles I and III); and supplying agricultural commodities for dispositions abroad (title II).

Factors determining availability of commodities for disposition under Public Law 480 are productive capacity, domestic requirements, farm and consumer price levels, anticipated commercial exports, and adequate carryover. No commodity is available for disposition under the act if the disposition thereof would reduce the domestic supply below that needed to meet domestic requirements, adequate carryover, and anticipated exports for dollars, unless the Secretary determines that some part of the supply should be used for urgent humanitarian purposes. No commodities may be made available except upon a determination that adequate storage facilities are available in the recipient country at the time of exportation, to prevent spoilage or waste and that the distribution will not be a substantial disincentive to the recipient country's domestic production.

In determining the reimbursement due the Corporation, commodities supplied from the Corporation's inventory, which were acquired under a domestic price support program, are valued at the export market price at the time of delivery.

No agreements to finance sales under the authority of title I or programs of assistance under title II shall be entered into after December 31, 1981, and no agreements to finance sales of agricultural commodities under the authority of title I or donations under title II shall be made to North Vietnam, unless by an act of Congress authorizing such assistance, enacted after July 1, 1973.

The laws also authorize appropriations to be made to cover costs of such programs. When funds become available, advances are made to the Corporation for estimated costs. If the amounts appropriated are greater than actual needs, the excess is used to reduce future appropriation requests. If funds appropriated plus carryover balances for title II are less than actual needs, Corporation funds not in excess of such limitations as may be provided in appropriation acts may be used temporarily to finance the balance of authorized costs.

* The program amount for fiscal year 1979 includes $58,726 thousand of 1978 program commitments which were not financed in that year. Shipments will be completed in early 1979 for these commitments, and financed from 1978 carryover balances or from incoming receipts in 1979, and no additional appropriation is necessary. The Administration is requesting an increase in the program level from the currently authorized $840,274 thousand to $899,000 thousand (see Part III of this appendix for additional information).

1. Financing the sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies and for dollars on credit terms (titles I and III).—The Corporation finances all sales made pursuant to agreements concluded under title I, and may serve as the purchasing or shipping agent, or both, if the purchaser so requests. Sales are made to friendly countries—as defined in section 103(d) of the act—and must not displace expected commercial sales for cash dollars (secs. 103 (c) and (n)).

No agreement may be made to finance the sale of agricultural commodities to the government of any country which engages in a consistent pattern of gross violations of internationally recognized human rights or other flagrant denial of the right to life, liberty, and personal security unless the use of the commodities themselves or proceeds from their sale will be used for specific projects or programs which the President determines would directly benefit the needy people of that country. The agreement shall require a report of such uses to the President within 6 months after the date of the delivery of the commodities to that country.

Agreements may not be made under title I in any calendar year which call for an appropriation to reimburse the Corporation in excess of $1.9 billion, plus unused prior years' authorizations.

Whenever practicable, terms of agreements must require payment at time of delivery of not less than 5% of the purchase price in dollars or in currencies convertible to dollars. These initial payments are applied against costs to reduce appropriation requests. Also, payment upon delivery in dollars or foreign currencies, to the extent that such currency is needed for payment of U.S. obligations and certain other purposes, may be required.

At least 50% of the gross tonnage of commodities shipped under the authority of title I is required to be transported on U.S. flag vessels in accordance with the Cargo Preference Act. When U.S. flag vessels are required to be used, the Corporation will finance the ocean freight charges to the extent of the differential between U.S. flag rates and foreign flag rates. In addition, in the case of commodities shipped under a title III food for development program to a country on the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development list of relatively least developed countries, CCC is authorized to pay freight from U.S. ports to designated ports of entry abroad or to designated points of entry abroad in the case of landlocked countries.

(a) Financing sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I).—Agreements for sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies were made until December 31, 1971, to countries unable to expand commercial purchases because of a lack of dollar exchange.

Certain U.S. uses of foreign currencies, including foreign currency loan repayments, and certain foreign currency grants, are subject to the appropriation process. The Corporation is reimbursed for the dollar value of currencies so used. Proceeds from sales of foreign currencies and from dollar repayments of foreign currency loans are applied as a reduction in appropriation requests.

Section 509 of Public Law 86-500, approved June 8, 1960 (7 U.S.C. 1704b note) provides that at least 75% of the total cost of foreign military housing projects (unless otherwise specified) shall be paid from foreign currencies acquired under title I. Pursuant to 10 U.S.C.

2681(b), as amended, the estimate reflects transfer to the Corporation of $6 million each year to liquidate amounts due. The unliquidated balance is estimated at $3,263 thousand at the end of 1980.

(b) Financing sales of agricultural commodities for dollars or convertible foreign currencies on credit terms (title I).—Agreements for the financing of sales of U.S. agricultural commodities for dollars or convertible foreign currencies on credit terms are made with friendly countries and on dollar credit terms with United States and foreign private trade. They may provide for delivery in annual installments for not more than 10 years from the date of the agreement subject to the availability of the commodity. However, as a matter of practice, supply periods of agreements rarely extend beyond 2 years.

In negotiating the agreements, emphasis shall be placed on using the proceeds from the sale of commodities for purposes which directly benefit the poorest people of participating countries and which improve their capacity to participate in the development of their countries.

Countries meeting the poverty criterion established for International Development Association financing and which are unable to produce or commercially purchase sufficient food for their immediate requirements are to receive not less than 75% of the food aid commodities allocated and agreed to be delivered in each fiscal year under title I financing agreements, unless the President certifies that such food assistance to other countries is required for humanitarian purposes or the required 75% allocation could not be used effectively to carry out humanitarian or development purposes of title I.

Credit terms are to be no less favorable than those required by sections 122 and 122(b) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, for loans made under those sections.

As payments are received each year, they are applied against current costs to reduce appropriation requests.

Dollar credit repayments are made in reasonable annual amounts over periods of not to exceed 20 years from the date of last delivery in each calendar year under the agreement, except that the first annual principal payment may be deferred for a period of not more than 2 years after such date of last delivery. Convertible foreign currency repayments permit repayment of up to 40 years with deferment of principal payments of up to 10 years.

The estimates under title I include the cost of financing title I sales of commodities for which there have been concluded food for development programs under title III of the act. When a food for development program has been agreed upon with a country, CCC is authorized to furnish credit under title I for the purchase by such country of available commodities to be delivered for periods from 1 to 5 years. Funds accruing from the local sale of the commodities which are used by such country for approved development projects are applied against the title I repayment obligations of such country under the title I agreement. In the case of a country on the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development list of relatively least developed countries, and to the extent provided in a food for development program agreement, disbursement of local currencies for approved development projects in a fiscal year which are in excess of the amount of the annual repayment obligation for that fiscal year may be applied as payments on amounts due under other title I agreements entered into by such country. Food for development programs entered into under title III shall be 10% for fiscal year 1979, and 15% for fiscal year 1980 and succeeding fiscal years, of the aggregate value of all agreements entered into under title I for the corresponding fiscal year, unless waived by the President because of an insufficient number of qualifying projects. Reasons for the waiver must be reported to Congress.

Total title I agreements made since inception to September 30, 1978, amount to $8,022 million cost value, including ocean freight for shipment on U.S. ships. Major commodities are wheat, cotton, oils, rice, and feed grains. Payments received during the period amount to $1,676.3 million, of which $1,092.4 million was applied to principal and $583.9 million to interest.

2. Commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad (title II).—Under title II, agricultural commodities are furnished to developing countries to meet famine or other emergency relief needs as well as to promote economic and community development and to combat malnutrition. They are furnished through friendly governments, private voluntary agencies, foreign nonprofit voluntary agencies if no such U.S. agency is available, and intergovernmental organizations such as the United Nations World Food Program. The Food for Peace Act, in amending title II, expressed the sense of Congress that other advanced nations should be encouraged to make increased contributions for the purpose of combating world hunger and malnutrition, and that to achieve this objective, the United States should work to expand the World Food Program.

A minimum of 1.6 million metric tons of agricultural commodities shall be distributed in each of the fiscal years 1978 through 1980, of which not less than 1.3 million metric tons shall be through nonprofit voluntary agencies and the World Food Program, unless the President determines and so reports to Congress that such quantity cannot be used effectively for intended purposes or that such a quantity is not available. These minimum tonnages increase to 1.65 million and 1.35 million, respectively, in 1981; and 1.7 million and 1.4 million, respectively, in 1982 and each fiscal year thereafter.

Assistance to needy persons shall be directed, where practicable, toward community and other self-help activities designed to alleviate the causes of need for such assistance. To assure effective use of food commodities made available, indigenous workers shall be employed, to the extent feasible, to provide nutritional information and conduct food distribution programs in the most remote villages. To the extent feasible, priority in food distribution shall be given to those suffering malnutrition by giving priority, within food programs for preschool children, to the malnourished children, and to the countries' poorest regions.

The Agency for International Development is responsible for administering title II programs. However, the Corporation makes available the commodities or products requested for disposition under title II. Such commodities or products are made available from the Corporation's stocks of commodities or products acquired under its support program or are purchased from private stocks.

The Corporation is authorized to pay, with respect to commodities made available, the costs of acquisition, packaging, processing, enrichment, preservation, fortification, transportation, handling, and other incidental costs incurred up to the time of delivery to U.S. ports. The Corporation also pays ocean freight charges, and transportation to points of entry other than ports in the case of landlocked countries, where carriers to a specific country are unavailable, where ports cannot be used effectively, or where a substantial savings in costs or time can be obtained, and ocean freight charges and general average contributions arising from ocean transport.

Up to $7.5 million each year may be used to buy foreign currencies accruing under title I of this act to meet costs directed to community and other self-help activities designed to alleviate the causes for the need for such aid. Such costs may not include personnel and administrative costs of cooperating sponsors, distributing agencies and recipient agencies.

Through December 31, 1978, appropriations totaling $10,600 million were authorized. No programs of assistance shall be undertaken under this title during any calendar year which call for an appropriation of more than $750 million to reimburse the Corporation. This limitation applies to costs incurred, including its investment in commodities (but only on the basis of export market price of commodities acquired under a price support program), plus any amount by which programs of assistance undertaken under this title in the preceding calendar year have called or will call for appropriations in amounts less than authorized during the preceding year. Any incidental sales proceeds and proceeds from loss, damage, and other claims are applied against costs to reflect a reduction in appropriation requests.

This account includes funds to cover expenses of programs administered by, and functions assigned to, the Service. The funds consist of direct appropriation, transfers from the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC), and miscellaneous advances from other sources. This is a consolidated account for administrative expenses of national, commodity, State, and county offices.

The Kansas City Commodity Office and Management Field Office play an important role in administering support programs and the field operations stemming from producer loan and purchase agreements, inventory management, and merchandising activities.

The State committees are in general charge of all programs carried out in their respective States. Within the framework of national policy, they determine the policies to be followed and direct the adaptation of national programs to the State.

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation elected county committees are responsible for the local administration of programs. They make local program decisions and policies and appoint a county executive director who directs the office staff in handling the day-to-day detailed administrative work.

The programs and activities carried out by this Service include: Agricultural Conservation Program; Emergency Conservation Program; Water Bank Program; Forestry Incentives Program; Appalachian Region Conservation Program; feed grain, wheat, and cotton programs; Dairy and Beekeeper Indemnity Programs; Wool Act Program; and commodity support and related programs including acreage allotment and marketing quota programs.

The activities carried out by the Service fall within three major categories:

1. Program formulation and appraisal.—The supply adjustment, conservation, and commodity support programs, and the management and merchandising of commodities acquired under the support program, have a tremendous impact on the national and (to a lesser extent) the international economy. This activity provides for constant review of the effectiveness of these programs. It also provides for the analysis of data to formulate more effective programs.

2. Operation of supply adjustment, conservation, and price support programs.—This activity includes all functions dealing with the administration of programs carried out through the farmer committee system, including: (a) developing program regulations and procedures; (b) holding meetings with employees and producers to discuss new programs or changes in existing programs; (c) collecting and compiling basic data for individual farms; (d) establishing individual farm normal crop acreages, allotments, and yields; (e) notifying producers of established normal crop acreages, allotments, and yields; (f) determining farm marketing allocations; (g) handling appeals; (h) conducting referendums and certifying results; (i) accepting farmer certifications and checking compliance; (j) developing pooling agreements under which several farmers work jointly to solve a common conservation problem which cannot be solved by individual action; (k) issuing marketing cards so that production from the allotted acreage can be marketed without penalty; (l) processing producer requests for conservation cost-sharing; (m) processing commodity loan documents and issuing sight drafts; (n) making appraisals for disaster payments; and (o) processing deficiency payments and issuing sight drafts.

3. Inventory management and merchandising.—This activity includes: (a) overall management of CCC-owned commodities; (b) selling commodities; (c) donating commodities; and (d) accounting for loans and commodities. The total value of all commodities owned by CCC on September 30, 1978, was about $1,029 million.

The primary objectives of the program are: (1) to help assure a continued supply of food and fiber necessary for a strong and healthy economy and people, (2) to facilitate sound resource management systems through soil and water conservation, (3) to control erosion and sedimentation from agricultural land, (4) to control pollution from animal wastes, (5) to encourage voluntary compliance by agricultural producers with State and Federal requirements to solve point and nonpoint sources of pollution, (6) to improve water quality, (7) to help achieve national priorities in the National Environmental Policy Act and (8) to help achieve national priorities in the Federal Water Pollution Control Act.

Cost sharing continues to be authorized for long-term agreements. Because of a declining interest in long-term agreements, the standard 3-10 year agreement has been modified, and, also, a shorter term agreement of 3-5 years will be offered with renewal benefits to extend the agreement up to 10 years if needed. On the shorter term agreements, the conservation plan of operation (CPO) may apply only to a portion of the farm rather than the entire farm. Since the Great Plains Conservation Program will be replaced by the Agricultural Conservation Program in 1980, the same type of long-term agreements available in the rest of the Nation will be available in the Great Plains areas as well.

The program is administered in each county by the ASC county committee, with review and approval by State ASCS committees and the Secretary, and in consultation with other agencies. For the 1979 ACP, national practices and practice guidelines were provided to the States and counties for selection. States are to select the needed practices and the counties are to select from the State list. Other practices may be added by the counties if they are needed, but the practices must meet criteria for special practices set up in the national program and be approved by the State committees and the Secretary.

The 1979 program is expected to serve 6 million acres and reduce soil loss by approximately 21 million tons. For the 1980 program, at the appropriation level of $125 million, 4.4 million acres are projected to be served by pollution abatement and water conservation measures with a soil loss reduction through the application of soil conservation measures of approximately 15 million tons.

Since funding of this program in fiscal year 1979 is on a no-year appropriation basis as authorized in the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977, CCC loans will not be necessary in fiscal year 1979 and future years.

The objectives of the Water Bank Program are to conserve, preserve, maintain, and improve the Nation's wetlands, increase waterfowl habitat in migratory waterfowl nesting and breeding areas in the United States, and secure recreational and environmental benefits for the Nation. The program was authorized by the Water Bank Act, approved December 19, 1970.

The Secretary of Agriculture, through designated ASCS county offices, uses program funds to enter into 10-year agreements with landowners and operators for the conservation of specified wetlands. Provisions exist to renew agreements for additional periods. The Secretary, through ASCS county offices, makes annual payments on agreements.

Under this program, agreements for periods of 5 and up to 10 years were approved only in 1966 and 1967. The last of these agreements expired in fiscal year 1977. This program was authorized by the Agricultural Credit Act of 1978 (16 U.S.C. 2201-2205). The appropriation provides special funds for sharing the cost of emergency measures to deal with cases of severe damage to farm and rangelands resulting from natural disasters.

Assistance is made available to treat new conservation problems which (1) if not treated will impair or endanger the land, (2) materially affect the productive capacity of the land, (3) represent damage which is unusual in character and, except for wind erosion, is not the type which would recur frequently in the same area, and (4) will be so costly to rehabilitate that Federal assistance is or will be required to return the land to productive agricultural use. Also, assistance is available for measures to provide for or conserve water to be used for agricultural purposes during periods of severe drought as determined by the Secretary.

Under the fiscal year 1978 program, cost-sharing assistance was provided to treat farmlands damaged by floods, tornadoes, hurricanes, and drought. Assistance was provided in 43 States, Puerto Rico, and Virgin Islands.

DAIRY AND BEEKEEPER INDEMNITY PROGRAMS

For necessary expenses involved in making indemnity payments to dairy farmers for milk or cows producing such milk and manufacturers of dairy products who have been directed to remove their milk or dairy products from commercial markets because it contained residues of chemicals registered and approved for use by the Federal Government, and in making indemnity payments for milk, or cows producing such milk, at a fair market value to any dairy farmer who is directed to remove his milk from commercial markets because of (1) the presence of products of nuclear radiation or fallout if such contamination is not due to the fault of the farmer, or (2) residues of chemicals or toxic substances not included under the first sentence of the Act of August 13, 1968, as amended (7 U.S.C. 450j), if such chemicals or toxic substances were not used in a manner contrary to applicable regulations or labeling instructions provided at the time of use and the contamination is not due to the fault of the farmer, [and to beekeepers who through no fault of their own have suffered losses as a result of the use of economic poisons which had been registered and approved for use by the Federal Government, $3,240,000]

$400,000: Provided, That none of the funds contained in this Act shall be used to make indemnity payments to any farmer whose milk was removed from commercial markets as a result of his willful failure to follow procedures prescribed by the Federal Government. (7 U.S.C. 135b note, 450j-1; Public Law 95-113; Public Law 95-448, making appropriations for Agriculture, Rural Development, and Related Agencies, 1979.)

Under this program indemnification payments are made to dairy farmers, manufacturers of dairy products, and beekeepers.

The dairy indemnity program was authorized under 78 Stat. 508 in 1964, and has been extended through September 30, 1981, by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 (91 Stat. 913). Payments are made to farmers who are directed to remove their milk from commercial markets because the milk contains residues of chemicals which have been registered and approved for use by the Federal Government, of other chemicals, of nuclear radiation, or of nuclear fallout. The authority also provides that indemnification may be paid for cows producing such milk.

The Agricultural Act of 1970 (84 Stat. 1382) broadened the indemnification authority to include manufacturers of dairy products whose products become contaminated with residues of chemicals which have been registered and approved for use by the Federal Government.

Beekeeper indemnity payments were authorized by the Agricultural Act of 1970 (84 Stat. 1382) to beekeepers who, through no fault of their own, suffered loss from economic poisons which had been registered and approved by the Federal Government. This program has been extended through September 30, 1981, but no funds are requested for fiscal year 1980.

This program was authorized by the Cooperative Forestry Assistance Act of 1978 (16 U.S.C. 2101). The objectives of the program are to bring private nonindustrial forest land under intensified management, to increase timber production, to assure adequate supplies of timber products, and to enhance other forest resources.

The Forestry incentives program shares up to 75% of the cost of tree planting and timberstand improvement. The percentage cost-shared depends on the rate set in a particular State and county by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee, after consulting with the State forester. The program is available in designated counties based on a Forest Service survey of total eligible private timberland available for production of timber products. The program is administered by ASCS with technical assistance from Forest Service.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, a wholly owned Government corporation, was created on February 16, 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1501-1520), to carry out the provisions of the Federal Crop Insurance Act. The purpose of this act is to promote the national welfare by improving the economic stability of agriculture through a sound system of crop insurance, and to provide the means for the research and experience helpful in devising and establishing such insurance.

Crop insurance offered to agricultural producers by the Corporation provides protection from losses caused by natural hazards, such as insect and wildlife damage, plant diseases, fire, drought, flood, wind, and other weather conditions. It does not indemnify producers for losses resulting from negligence or failure to observe good farming practices.

The crop insurance programs are developed and analyzed in the Washington headquarters office and are administered in 16 regional offices. Sales and servicing of contracts at the county level is performed by private agents under contractual agreements with the Corporation and by Corporation employees hired on a permanent, part-time or WAE (when actually employed) basis. Detailed administrative and program accounting and statistical functions, as well as the underwriting and actuarial analysis work, are performed in Kansas City, Mo.

Budget program.—The program for fiscal year 1980 will provide crop insurance protection to farmers amounting to approximately $2.3 billion on the following commodities: Apples, barley, beans, citrus, combined crop, corn, cotton, flax, forage, grain sorghum, grapes, oats, peaches, peanuts, peas, potatoes, raisins, rice, soybeans, sugar beets, sugarcane, sunflowers, sweet corn, tobacco, tomatoes, and wheat.

The following table compares the scope of the insurance operations planned for 1979 and 1980, as compared with 1978. Amounts in the 1978 column are actual, and pertain to the 1977 crop year. The 1979 column pertains to the 1978 crop year, and the 1980 column pertains to the 1979 crop year.

Financing.—The Corporation is authorized under the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended, $200 million in capital stock which has been totally subscribed and issued.

Funds from the issuance of capital stock provide working capital for the Corporation. Receipts which are for deposit to this fund come mainly from premiums paid by farmers for crop insurance indemnity costs. The principal payments from this fund are for indemnities to insured farmers, the direct cost of adjusting crop losses, and a part of the administrative and operating expenses. However, the direct cost of loss adjustment and the administrative and operating expenses paid from the fund are not provided for in the premium rates (section 508(b) of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended).

It is estimated that gross income of $109 million from operations will provide adequate operating funds for fiscal year 1980, unless heavy losses occur early in the fiscal year.

The annual appropriation for a portion of the administrative and operating expenses of the Corporation is presented earlier in the budget.

Operating results and financial condition.—As of September 30, 1978, the Corporation reflected a deficit of $151.9 million which is a change of minus $66.2 million over the deficit of the year before. This resulted from heavy indemnity payments, administrative and operating expenses, loss adjustment costs and other expenses paid from the fund. Crop year 1977 premiums of $101.8 million were lower than indemnities by $47.3 million, resulting in a loss ratio of 1.46.

For crop years 1948 through 1977, indemnities ($1,091.7 million) exceeded premium income ($1,064.7 million) by $27.0 million; the loss ratio for the period was 1.03. Indemnity costs exceeded premiums in 14 of the 30 years.

The following table summarizes the insurance operations by commodities for 1978, 1979, and 1980.

The Corporation was created to stabilize, support, and protect farm income and prices, to help maintain balanced and adequate supplies of agricultural commodities, their products, foods, feeds, and fibers, and to help in their orderly distribution (15 U.S.C. 714-714p). It may make available materials and facilities required in connection with the production and marketing of agricultural commodities and may be used to administer and to temporarily finance numerous special activities.

The Corporation's capital stock of $100 million is held by the United States. Under present law, up to $20 billion may be borrowed from the U.S. Treasury to finance operations.

Budget assumptions.—The following general assumptions form the basis for the Corporation's 1979 and 1980 budget estimates: (a) Production and national income will rise both in 1979 and 1980 from the present level; (b) generally, exports of agricultural commodities in 1980 will be slightly higher than 1979 levels; (c) yields for the 1979 crops are based on recent averages adjusted for trend; (d) acreage allotments and marketing quotas will be in effect for the 1979 crops of peanuts, ELS cotton, and certain kinds of tobacco; (e) acreage allotments but no marketing quotas will be in effect for rice; (f) a set-aside program for the 1979 crops of feed grains and wheat will be in operation. Deficiency payments on these commodities will be based on an established or target price if the higher of the market price received by farmers or the loan rate is below such price; and (g) a voluntary diversion program will be in effect for the 1979 crops of corn and grain sorghum.

It is difficult to forecast with accuracy requirements for the year ending September 30, 1980, since the projections are subject to complex and unpredictable factors such as weather, other factors which affect the volume of production of crops not yet planted, feed and food needs here and overseas, and available dollar exchange.

A point estimate is required for presentation in the budget; however, due to the significant impact of changes in worldwide weather and production, a range of estimates should be considered when evaluating the commodity program projections. Because of this, the Department has prepared range estimates to reflect the possible effects of changing worldwide conditions affecting commodity programs. These ranges will be released separately by the Department.

Support and related programs.—The Corporation provides price support to producers for agricultural commodities through loans, purchases, payments, and other means. This is done mainly under the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act (15 U.S.C. 714 et seq.) and the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.), as amended by the Agricultural Act of 1970 (84 Stat. 1358), the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973 (87 Stat. 221), the Rice Production Act of 1975 (90 Stat. 181), and the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 (91 Stat. 913).

Support is mandatory for the basic commodities—corn, cotton, wheat, rice, peanuts, and tobacco. The Agricultural Act of 1949 also requires support of the following nonbasic commodities: honey, milk, barley, oats, rye, and grain sorghum. The National Wool Act of 1954, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1781–87), requires support for wool and mohair. The Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 requires support of the 1977 and 1978 crops of sugar beets and sugarcane and the 1978–81 crops of soybeans. Support for other nonbasic commodities is discretionary. The support program may also include operations to remove and dispose of surplus agricultural commodities in order to stabilize prices at levels not in excess of those permissible by law.

The principal methods of providing support are loans to and purchases from producers. With limited exceptions, loans made on commodities are nonrecourse. The commodities serve as collateral for the loan and on maturity the producer may deliver or forfeit such collateral to satisfy his obligation without further payment.

Direct purchases are also made from processors as well as producers, depending on the commodity involved. Also, special purchases are made under certain laws for the removal of surpluses; for example, the act of August 19, 1958, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431 note), and section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431).

For feed grains, rice, wheat, and upland cotton, producers may receive support through Government payments in addition to Commodity Credit Corporation loans and purchases. For extra-long staple cotton, producers may receive payments in addition to loans. Producers of feed grains, rice, wheat, and upland cotton must comply with acreage set-aside provisions (hereinafter described), if in effect, in order to be eligible for loans, purchases, and payments. Producers with interests in more than one farm may receive program benefits on participating farms provided that the normal crop acreage is not exceeded on nonparticipating farms planting set-aside crops. The total amount of payments which a person is entitled to receive under one or more of the annual programs for feed grains, wheat, and upland cotton for the 1978 crops of these commodities shall not exceed $40 thousand and for the 1979 crops shall not exceed $45 thousand. For rice producers, the limitation is $52,250 for the 1978 crop year and $50 thousand for the 1979 crop year. The combined payment limitation for feed grains, wheat, upland cotton, and rice for the 1980 and 1981 crops shall be $50 thousand.

The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, and as further amended by the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973, and the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977, established target prices for three major commodities—wheat, feed grains, and upland cotton; set minimum loan rates for wheat and feed grains; and established the loan level for upland cotton. Government payments for each of the three commodities are required when the target price for the commodity exceeds the national average market price or the loan rate, whichever is higher. For the 1978 and 1979 crops, the target price for wheat is $3.40 per bushel. The 1978 and 1979 crop target prices for corn are $2.10 and $2.20 per bushel, respectively. The target prices for grain sorghum and, if designated by the Secretary, barley and oats, are established at a level which is fair and reasonable in relation to the target prices established for corn. The 1978 crop target price for upland cotton is 52 cents per pound. The 1979 crop target price for upland cotton will be adjusted from the previous year on the basis of the change in the 2-year moving average of variable, machinery ownership, and general farm overhead costs, but shall not be less than 51 cents per pound. The target prices for these commodities will be adjusted annually beyond 1979 to reflect cost of production changes. However, whenever a set-aside is in effect for one or more of these commodities, the Secretary may, under provisions of Public Law 95–279 (92 Stat. 240), increase the target price for any such commodity to compensate producers for participation in such set-aside. When necessary to maintain domestic and export markets, loan rates for wheat and feed grains may be adjusted downward depending on the relationship of the market price to the loan rate. If the yearly national average price of wheat and corn is within 105% of the loan rate, the following year's loan rate could be decreased up to 10%, but never below the minimum loan level. If the loan rate is adjusted downward, the target price shall be adjusted upward to compensate for any farm income loss which could result from the lowered loan level. In addition, the 1949 act, as amended, provides for making disaster payments for 1978 and 1979 crops to producers who are prevented from planting feed grains, wheat, or upland cotton because of a natural disaster or condition beyond the control of the producers or who, because of such a disaster or condition, harvest less than a specified quantity. Disaster payments for these commodities are based on acreage planted for harvest, or intended to be planted.

The Rice Production Act of 1975 and the 1949 act, as amended, and as further amended by the 1977 act, established a target price for rice. Government payments are required to be made to cooperators when the target price for rice exceeds the national average market price or the loan rate, whichever is higher. The 1978 crop target price for rice is $8.53 per hundredweight. For the 1979 crop, the target price for rice will be adjusted from the previous year on the basis of the change in the 2-year moving average of variable, machinery ownership, and general farm overhead costs, but may be increased whenever a set-aside is in effect under provisions of Public Law 95–334 (92 Stat. 434). The loan rate may be adjusted downward, in order to maintain domestic and export markets, but never below the minimum loan level. In addition, the act provides for making disaster payments for the 1978 and 1979 crops to producers who are prevented from planting rice or other nonconserving crop because of a natural disaster or condition beyond the control of the producers or who, because of such a disaster or condition, harvest less than a specified quantity within producer allotments.

Disaster payments for the 1978 and 1979 crops of wheat, feed grains, rice, and upland cotton are exempt from any payment limitation under provisions of the 1977 act.

A new peanut program was established for the 1978-81 crops providing for a two-price system for peanuts. For production of peanuts under poundage quotas, minimum support rates are specified, subject to increases on the basis of the index of prices paid by farmers and other factors. For production of additional peanuts up to the acreage allotment, the Secretary may set lower support rates taking into consideration demand for peanut oil and meal, expected prices for other vegetable oils, and foreign demand for peanuts.

A loan or purchase program was authorized under the 1977 act for the 1977 and 1978 crops of sugar beets and sugarcane at a level between 52.5% and 65% of parity. The Secretary issued regulations for a 1977 crop sugar loan program effective November 8, 1977. An interim price support payment program, which was effective September 15, 1977, was carried out with respect to sugar marketed or committed for future delivery prior to implementation of the 1977 crop loan program on November 8, 1977. Regulations governing the 1978 crop loan program were issued by the Secretary on June 2, 1978.

In support operations, normal trade facilities are used to the maximum extent practicable. Cooperatives and financial institutions are used in lending activities.

Besides the charter act and laws mentioned above, many other laws are applicable to the disposition through sales and donations of commodities acquired under the support program.

For accounting purposes, the Corporation credits to the support program proceeds of commodities sold from its stocks, including those disposed of through special activities.

Commodity export.—The Corporation promotes the export of agricultural commodities and products through sales, payments, extension of credit, assumption of certain risks, and conduct of other operations with respect to the exportation of commodities. Such commodities and products may be those held in private trade channels as well as those acquired by the Corporation. These programs are carried out under the authority contained in the Corporation's charter, particularly section 5(d) and (f), and in accordance with specific statutes where applicable. Export sales on long-term credit are financed by the Corporation under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (Public Law 480), as amended, although such sales of commodities owned by the Corporation may also be made under its charter authority.

The activities described below are illustrative of those conducted under this program during 1979.

The Corporation conducts a short-term export credit sales program to maximize exports of agricultural commodities and products under which it finances, for a period of not to exceed 3 years, commercial export credit sales by exporters of agricultural commodities obtained either from Corporation inventories or from private stocks. These commercial transactions are financed under the Corporation's charter authority and section 4(a) of the Food for Peace Act, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1707a) and are to be distinguished from the long-term credit contracts involving foreign assistance authorized by the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended. The Corporation may finance export credit sales to the People's Republic of China.

Beginning in fiscal year 1979, CCC is also authorized under section 4(b) of the Food for Peace Act of 1966, as amended by the Agricultural Trade Act of 1978, to finance commercial export sales of U.S. agricultural commodities out of CCC and private stocks on credit terms in excess of 3 years but not more than 10 years to develop, expand, or maintain a foreign market on a long-term basis or otherwise improve the capability of the importing nation to purchase and use U.S. agricultural commodities on a long-term basis. Costs of freight from the United States to designated points of entry for sales of breeding animals are to be financed. Repayment is to be in dollars with interest at a rate equal, to the extent practicable, to that charged under the Corporation's short-term export credit sales program. The provisions of the cargo preference laws do not apply to these sales.

In order to develop new market opportunities and maintain and expand existing markets for U.S. agricultural commodities, section 201 of the Agricultural Trade Act of 1978 authorizes the Corporation to provide financing to exporters of U.S. agricultural commodities who provide buyers deferred payment terms of not to exceed 3 years. These sales are to be made only to (a) those nations that are eligible for financing under the Corporation's short-term export credit sales program and (b) the People's Republic of China. Repayment shall be made by the exporter with interest at the short-term credit sales program rates. A performance guarantee may be required from the exporter.

Under its noncommercial risk assurance program, CCC guarantees, for a fee, payments due U.S. exporters under deferred payment sales contracts (up to 36 months) from defaults due to noncommercial risks. The risk to CCC extends from date of export to the end of the deferred payment period covered in the export sales contract and covers only that portion of the payments agreed to in the assurance agreements. Rates for such agreements shall be determined by the length of the deferred payment period, the degree of risk assumed by CCC, and other factors which are believed to be pertinent. The assurance proceeds are assignable only to U.S. banks or financial institutions.

To help develop or expand foreign markets, the Corporation may furnish farm commodities and products for samples or exhibits at international trade fairs and for use abroad in testing consumer acceptance and commercial market potentials.

Storage facilities.—The Corporation conducts a program to provide storage adequate to fulfill its program needs. The program is conducted pursuant to sections 4(h) and (m), and 5(a) and (b) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act, as amended by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977.

Although the Corporation has authority to buy bins (in storage-short areas) and equipment for the care and storage of commodities owned by the Corporation or under its control, this authority to purchase bins has not been exercised since 1956. The Corporation makes secured loans of up to $50 thousand for the purchase, construction, or remodeling of facilities for storage and care of dry or high moisture commodities on the farm. Such loans are repayable over a period not to exceed 10 years. The Corporation may also guarantee the placement of its inventories to encourage the building of commercial storage, and undertake other operations necessary to provide storage adequate to carry out the Corporation's programs.

Supply and foreign purchase.—The Corporation procures from domestic and foreign sources food, agricultural commodities, and products and related materials to supply the needs of Federal agencies, foreign governments, and private and international relief agencies such as CARE, Church World Services, Catholic Relief, et cetera. It similarly procures or aids in the procurement of such foods, commodities, products, and material for sale to meet domestic requirements during periods of short supply or to stabilize prices or facilitate distribution. Through purchases, loans, sales, or other means the Corporation may also make available materials and facilities needed for the production and marketing of agricultural commodities. This program is conducted under section 5(b) and (c) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act.

Purchases for other Federal agencies of commodities not in the Corporation's stocks has been the main activity. Purchases of limited quantities of breeder, foundation, and registered seeds of improved varieties of grasses and legumes are made through production contracts in order to assure supplies thereof for farmers. No foreign purchases have been made in recent years.

Section 4 of the act of July 16, 1943 (15 U.S.C. 713a-9), requires that the Corporation be fully repaid from funds of other agencies for services performed, losses sustained, operating costs incurred, or commodities bought or delivered to or on behalf of any other Federal agency. Operations not subject to section 4 may involve losses if such are necessary to the accomplishment of the objectives of the particular operation.

Set-aside program.—The Agricultural Act of 1970 (as amended by the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973) and the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 authorize the Secretary to conduct, through the Corporation, set-aside programs on the 1971 through 1981 crops of wheat, feed grains, and upland cotton if he determines that otherwise the total supply of agricultural commodities will likely be excessive. The Rice Production Act of 1975 and the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 provide authority for a set-aside program for the 1976 through 1981 crops of rice.

There were no set-aside programs for the 1974 through 1977 crops of wheat, feed grains, and upland cotton, nor for the 1977 crop of rice. A 20% set-aside program was in effect for the 1978 crop of wheat, and a 10% set-aside program was in effect for the 1978 crops of corn, grain sorghum, and barley. A 20% set-aside program will again be in effect for the 1979 crop of wheat, a 20% set-aside for 1979 crop barley, and a 10% set-aside for the 1979 crops of corn and grain sorghum.

If a set-aside is in effect for any such commodity, producers must, as a condition of eligibility for loans, purchases, and payments on such commodity, set-aside and devote to approved conservation uses an acreage of cropland equal to a specified percentage and otherwise comply with program requirements. Participants in a set-aside program are eligible for a small additional payment for permitting public access to set-aside acreage.

Land diversion payments.—To assist in adjusting the acreage of commodities to desirable goals, the Secretary is authorized by the Agricultural Act of 1970, as amended, to make land diversion payments, through the Corporation, to producers who devote to approved conservation uses acreages of cropland in addition to those required to be so devoted under the set-aside programs. Voluntary diversion programs were in effect for the 1978 crops of corn, grain sorghum, barley, and upland cotton. Diversion programs will also be in effect for each of the 1979 crops of corn and sorghum.

Wheat certificate program.—The Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 continues the suspension, through May 31, 1982, of the requirement of section 379d of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, for processors to purchase domestic wheat marketing certificates equivalent to the bushel quantity of wheat used to manufacture food products.

Grain reserves.—A producer-owned food grain reserve program for wheat and rice which provides 3-year extended loans to producers was announced in April 1977. This program was later expanded to include feed grains. Producers receive annual storage payments under the contract. Program provisions establish when interest is charged and various market price levels at which storage payments cease, and loans are called. Reserve goals are 11 million metric tons of wheat and up to 20 million metric tons of feed grains. These planned reserves may be adjusted when an international emergency food reserve, discussed below, is established.

The President is encouraged in the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 to enter into negotiations with other nations to develop an international system of emergency food reserves to provide for humanitarian food relief needs. Under an international agreement providing for an emergency food reserve, the United States would be expected to establish a reserve of grain. To the extent authorized by enabling legislation, quantities of grain would be placed in the reserve as needed to carry out U.S. obligations under such international agreement.

Disaster reserve.—Under section 813 of the Agriculture Act of 1970, as amended by the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973, and the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977, the Secretary shall establish, maintain, and dispose of a separate reserve of inventories of not to exceed 75 million bushels of wheat, feed grains, and soybeans for the purpose of alleviating distress caused by a natural disaster. The Secretary shall acquire such commodities through the price support program. When no wheat, feed grains, or soybeans are available through the price support program at locations where they may be economically utilized, the Secretary is authorized to purchase such commodities as well as hay or livestock forages through CCC facilities as are needed. In order to rotate, distribute, and locate reserves, such reserves may be sold at equivalent prices. The Secretary may use the Commodity Credit Corporation and shall utilize usual and customary channels, facilities, and arrangements of trade and commerce to the maximum extent possible. Appropriations are authorized for sums necessary to carry out the purposes of this section. Any costs for this activity are included in the CCC appropriation reimbursement for net realized losses.

Emergency feed program.—The Secretary is authorized in section 1105 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 to implement a program to assist producers in preserving and maintaining livestock in case of a natural disaster. The eligible livestock owner is reimbursed for up to 50% of the cost of feed purchased. A program was implemented in fiscal year 1978.

Special grazing and hay program.—The Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 provides that for the 1978–81 crops, a producer may designate up to 40% or 50 acres of his acreage, whichever is greater, which he intends to plant to wheat, feed grains, or upland cotton for harvest, to be planted to wheat (or another commodity other than corn or grain sorghum) and used for grazing or for hay. The Secretary shall pay the producer for participating in the program but the producer shall not be eligible for any other payment or price support on the designated acreage. A special grazing and hay program was in effect for the 1978 crop of wheat.

Pilot research funding for industrial hydrocarbons.—The Secretary is directed in section 1420 of the 1977 act to formulate and carry out a research and marketing program for the production of industrial hydrocarbons and alcohol from agricultural commodities and forestry products. Commodity Credit Corporation shall guarantee loans of up to $15 million each for not more than four pilot projects, for up to 20 years. In order to insure a dependable supply of agricultural commodities for such pilot projects, the Secretary is authorized to enter into long-term contracts, not to exceed 5 years, to supply agricultural commodities at mutually agreed upon prices, either from Commodity Credit Corporation stocks or through purchases. Evaluation of 30 project proposals received is underway and approval of up to 4 pilot projects will be made during fiscal year 1979. For any approvals, CCC will guarantee up to $15 million in private sector financing.

Administrative expenses.—The Corporation carries out its functions through utilization of employees and facilities of other Government agencies. Administrative expenses are incurred for the services of: the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, the Agricultural Marketing Service, Office of the General Sales Manager, and other agencies of the Department engaged in the Corporation's activities; the General Accounting Office for audit; and the General Services Administration for space. Estimates for 1980 include a limitation of $50.4 million on administrative expenses, including a reserve of not less than 7% for contingencies.

The requested authorization does not include administrative expenses in connection with the wool and mohair program under the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended, because they are included with the cost of this program under special activities.

Nonadministrative expenses.—Expenses for acquisition, operation, maintenance, improvement, or disposition of property which the Corporation owns or in which it has an interest have been treated as program expenses rather than administrative expenses. Such program expenses include inspection, classing, and grading work performed on a fee basis by Federal employees or Federal- or State-licensed inspectors; work relating to CCC programs performed on a contract or fee basis by Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service; and special services performed by other Federal agencies within and outside this Department.

Most of these general nonadministrative expenses, including storage and handling, transportation, inspection, classing, and grading and producer storage payments, are included in program costs. They are shown in the program and financing schedule in the entry entitled "Storage, transportation, and other costs not included above," and "Producer storage payments." The item "Nonadministrative expense," in the schedule, covers part of the expenses of ASCS county offices for work related to programs of the Corporation, other Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service expenses offset by revenue, custodian, and agency expense of the Federal Reserve banks and lending agencies, and miscellaneous costs.

The Corporation receives reimbursement for grain requisitioned pursuant to Public Law 87-152 (7 U.S.C. 447-449) by the States from Corporation stocks to feed resident wildlife threatened with starvation, through the appropriation reimbursement for net realized losses.

SPECIAL ACTIVITIES

These activities are carried out under authority of section 5(g) of the Corporation's charter act and specific statutory authorizations or directives with respect thereto which are currently in effect or which may subsequently be enacted.

A summary of such current activities not included under other designated activities is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Item	1980 estimate
	Gross obligations	Outlays (reimbursable)
(1) Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies .....		—110,000
(2) Sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms .....	843,000	547,200
(3) Commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad .....	556,000	556,000
(4) National Wool Act .....	42,559	42,559
Total .....	1,441,559	1,035,759

The Corporation receives appropriations or reimbursement for cost of these activities as described under each.

To the extent that sufficient appropriations are not provided in advance, expenditures under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, are made by the Corporation subject to reimbursement from subsequent appropriations authorized for such purpose.

Activities currently being carried out are as follows (see Foreign Assistance programs for details of items (1)–(3)):

(1) Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I, Public Law 480).

(2) Sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms (title I, Public Law 480).

(3) Commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad (title II, Public Law 480).

(4) National Wool Act.—Under the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended and as further amended by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977, support of prices of wool and mohair is mandatory. The Corporation makes payments to producers in order to bring the national average price received by all producers up to the support price required under the act.

Total payments made under the National Wool Act cannot at any time exceed an amount equal to 70% of the accumulated totals, as of the same date, of the gross receipts from import duties collected on and after January 1, 1953, on wool and wool manufactures. Actual or estimated payments compared with this limitation are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Item	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate

Balance of limitation available for payments in succeeding marketing years.....	865,970	962,841	1,063,726

Funds of the Corporation are used to carry on this program. For the purpose of reimbursing the Corporation, section 705 of the act appropriates each fiscal year an amount equal to amounts expended by the Corporation during the preceding year and to amounts expended in prior fiscal years not previously reimbursed, but not to exceed an amount equal to 70% of the gross receipts from duties collected on wool and wool manufactures during the calendar year preceding the fiscal year.

(5) Grain for migratory waterfowl feed.—To prevent damage of crops by migratory waterfowl, the Corporation is directed to furnish to the Secretary of the Interior (7 U.S.C. 442-445) such grain acquired through support operations and certified by the Corporation as available for such purposes or in such condition as to be undesirable for human consumption, as the Secretary of the Interior shall requisition. When used, this appropriation item is included under that department to reimburse CCC.

(6) Surplus grain for migratory birds.—Under Public Law 87-152, approved August 17, 1961 (7 U.S.C. 448) the Secretary of the Interior may requisition grain of the Corporation to feed starving migratory birds. When used, this appropriation item is included under that department to reimburse CCC.

(7) Loans for conservation purposes.—Under section 391(c) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1391(c)), the Corporation advances funds to the Secretary in amounts not to exceed $50 million annually to purchase conservation materials and services. Repayments of the loans plus interest are made from balances of prior appropriations or from new funds appropriated for the agricultural conservation program.

FINANCING

Borrowing authority.—The Corporation has an authorized capital stock of $100 million held by the United States and authority to borrow up to $14.5 billion. Effective with fiscal year 1979, the corporation has authority to borrow up to $20 billion.

Funds are borrowed from Treasury and may also be borrowed from private lending agencies and others. The Corporation reserves a sufficient amount of its borrowing authority to purchase at any time all notes and other obligations evidencing loans made by such agencies and others. All bonds, notes, debentures, and similar obligations issued by the Corporation are subject to approval by the Secretary of the Treasury as required by the act of March 8, 1938 (15 U.S.C. 713a-4).

Interest on borrowings from the Treasury (and on capital stock) is paid at a rate based upon the average interest rate of all outstanding marketable obligations (of comparable maturity date) of the United States as of the preceding month. Interest is also paid on other notes and obligations at a rate prescribed by the Commodity Credit Corporation and approved by the Secretary of Treasury.

The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1966, made provision for terminating interest after June 30, 1964, on the portion of the Corporation's borrowings from the Treasury equal to the unreimbursed realized losses recorded on the books of the Corporation after the end of the fiscal year in which such losses are realized.

The computation of the transfer from interest-bearing to non-interest-bearing capital is (in thousands of dollars):

Item	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Realized deficit not previously reimbursed, start of year.....	1,515,242	4,047,089	6,713,190
Less appropriations for year.....	524,342	990,900	3,056,189
Total non-interest-bearing, end of year.....	990,900	3,056,189	3,657,001

On the basis of the budgetary assumptions, the estimated requirements indicate no need for an increase in borrowing authority. Since there are so many uncontrollable factors involving crops which have not even been planted, it must be recognized that estimates are highly tentative.

POSITION WITH RESPECT TO BORROWING AUTHORITY, END OF YEAR

Item	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Statutory borrowing authority.....	14,500,000	20,000,000	20,000,000

Total statutory borrowing authority in use.....	11,261,307	15,252,802	14,976,723
Net statutory borrowing authority available.....	3,238,693	4,747,198	5,023,277

Note.—A sufficient amount of the borrowing authority is required to be reserved to cover obligations to purchase notes or other obligations and accrued interest thereon, evidencing loans made by lending agencies and others. Such obligations, however, as well as accounts payable, accrued liabilities and other outstanding obligations not reflected on this table, do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowings from the Treasury.

Contract authority.—Support and other programs required by statute may result in the Corporation incurring obligations in excess of available funds and borrowing authority. Such obligations are liquidated from subsequent appropriations and other funds which may become available to the Corporation. Any increase in obligations in excess of available fund resources is reported as contract authority in the year involved; a decrease is reported as the application of appropriations and other funds to liquidate the authority. The budget reflects none in 1979 and 1980. It is estimated that unobligated balances of authority to borrow will amount to $1,698 million at the end of 1979 and $781 million at the end of 1980.

Appropriations.—Under section 2 of Public Law 87-155 (15 U.S.C. 713a-11), annual appropriations are authorized for each fiscal year to reimburse the Corporation for net realized losses incurred as of the close of each year.

The realized losses for 1978 subject to reimbursement were $3,056.2 million, and the prior cumulative losses not yet appropriated for were $4,047.1 million at September 30. An appropriation of $3,056.2 million in fiscal year 1980 would fully reimburse the Corporation for its unreimbursed realized losses through September 30, 1978.

The special activities are financed as indicated in the program descriptions above. In addition to certain reimbursements from other agencies, appropriations are made for the National Wool Act (see above) and for foreign assistance programs.

Deficit.—The net realized losses of the Corporation have previously been reimbursed as follows (in thousands of dollars):

The Rural Electrification Administration, under authority of the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, as amended, makes insured loans and guarantees loans made by other qualified lenders to rural electric and telephone borrowers for the purpose of extending and improving electric and telephone service in rural areas. The Rural Electrification and Telephone Revolving Fund, established by Public Law 93-32, approved May 11, 1973, is the source of financing for the insured loans, while the Federal Financing Bank is the primary source for the loan guarantee financing. In the electric program most of the insured loans are made concurrently with supplemental financing provided by the National Rural Utilities Cooperative Finance Corporation (CFC) or some other supplemental financing source. In the telephone program supplemental financing is provided primarily through the Rural Telephone Bank. The Bank utilizes the employees and facilities of REA and the Office of the General Counsel on a part-time basis without cost to the Bank.

In addition, in order to protect the Government's loan security on over $27 billion of outstanding loans and guarantees made to borrowers, to assure that construction and operation of the electric and telephone systems conform to approved standards, and that the systems continue to provide reliable service at the lowest possible cost to the consumer, REA furnishes business management and technical assistance on a regular basis, as well as upon special request, to its borrowers. This objective is carried out through regulations, personal visits to the borrowers, and by training. REA has personnel in the Washington office and a field staff who have expertise in the electric or telephone industry and who are available to assist borrowers in specialized areas.

Rural water and waste disposal grants.—This grant program is authorized by subtitle A of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act, as amended. Development grants are authorized to be made to associations, including nonprofit corporations, public and quasi-public agencies, and certain Indian tribes to finance specific projects for the development, storage, treatment, purification, or distribution of water or the collection, treatment, or disposal of waste in rural areas. The amount of any development grant may not exceed 75% of the eligible development cost of the project.

The major objective of the Rural water and waste disposal grant program is to provide assistance for basic human amenities, alleviate health hazards and promote Rural development planning grants.—Grants are authorized by section 306(a)(11) of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act, as amended. These grants were funded, as amended for the first time in fiscal year 1978. They may be made to public bodies or such other agencies as the Secretary may select to prepare comprehensive plans for rural development.

The major objective of the Rural development planning grant program is to achieve a more efficient coordination, application, and targeting of Federal and non-Federal rural development policy management activities, which would also promote the orderly growth of rural areas.

In an effort to restrain Federal outlays, no funds are requested in fiscal year 1980 for the Rural development planning grant program since funds for this purpose are available from other sources such as the Department of Housing and Urban Development block grant program.

The Self-help housing land development fund was authorized by section 1005 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 (Public Law 90-448). The fund provides qualified public or private nonprofit organizations with financing for the acquisition and development of building sites for homes to be constructed by the self-help method.

In 1978, four loans for $1.2 million were obligated. It is planned that four loans for $1 million will be made in 1979 and that four loans for $1 million will be made in 1980. These loans will provide 156 sites in 1980 for construction of decent, safe, and sanitary housing by the self-help method for low-income rural families.

Note.—The total budget authority in this schedule that is attributable to the obligations and disbursements made for housing subsidies under the rural rental assistance program and the home ownership assistance program estimated over the life of the agreements are as follows: rural rental assistance, 1978, $348,843 thousand; 1979, $425,500 thousand; 1980, $393,000 thousand; home ownership assistance, 1980, $984,960 thousand.

Rural housing insurance fund.—This fund was established in 1965 (Public Law 89-117) pursuant to section 517 of title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended. Initial capitalization of the fund at $100 million was provided by the Supplemental Appropriations Act of 1966. Public Law 91-152 abolished the rural housing direct loan account and transferred its assets, liabilities and authorizations to the fund.

This fund may be used to insure or guarantee rural housing loans, loans for rural rental and cooperative housing, farm labor housing loans, and rural housing site loans. Beginning in fiscal year 1978, rental assistance payments were also made from the fund, and a special home ownership assistance program (HOAP) is scheduled for implementation in fiscal year 1979. Loan programs are limited to rural areas which include towns, villages, and other places of not more than 10,000 population, which are not part of an urban area, and areas with a population in excess of 10,000 but less than 20,000, if such area is not included in a standard metropolitan statistical area and has a serious lack of mortgage credit for low- and moderate-income borrowers.

The objective of the RHIF housing loan program is to provide necessary housing for low- and moderate-income rural residents if their needs cannot be met with financial assistance from other sources. Under the Housing and Community Development Act of 1977, at least 60% of the amount of loans made for home ownership and rental purposes must be used to benefit persons of low income. With the implementation in 1978 of the rental assistance program, scheduled implementation of HOAP in 1979, and the continued use of HUD section 8 assistance, FmHA will be able to serve the whole range of lower income families, which conforms to the objective of providing service to those people who have the greatest need.

In fiscal year 1979, the Department plans to implement a targeted housing strategy that will give high priority to providing housing assistance to families with the greatest need. This targeting strategy was a result of a comprehensive study of rural housing program needs, goals, and past accomplishments conducted at the request of the President by a task force under USDA leadership with the Department of Housing and Urban Development and Office of Management and Budget participation.

This proposed budget continues the study's targeting strategy which has a goal of maximizing housing assistance to families with the lowest incomes while holding assistance to other income classes close to recent levels. Priority will be given to assisting low-income families who occupy inadequate housing and/or have excessive rent burdens. The strategy utilizes several new programs, which required new legislation. The special home ownership assistance program was proposed and enacted to serve very low-income families where it is a more cost effective alternative than FmHA's other very low income housing assistance programs (rental assistance, and repair loans and grants). A Federal subsidy recovery program was proposed so that subsidy costs of current and proposed programs may be partially or totally recovered when a family sells its house and the proceeds of the sale are sufficient to repay the principal and interest on the mortgage, sales commission, and an incentive payment to the borrower. The remainder may be recovered by the Government to the extent that subsidies have been granted during the life of the loan, with any proceeds above these amounts retained by the borrower.

Very low-income housing repair loans.—Home repair loans for very low-income owner-occupants are made from amounts available in this fund. These loans, which may not exceed $5 thousand, are made to families and individuals to repair their dwellings in order to make them safe and sanitary and remove health hazards to the families or the community. The loans are made at 1% interest for a term of not more than 20 years.

Low- to moderate-income housing loans.—Individual home ownership loans are made to low- and moderate-income individuals and families who are unable to obtain home ownership financing from conventional sources on terms they reasonably can be expected to meet. Loans may be made to eligible applicants to construct, improve, alter, repair, or replace dwellings, and may include funds to purchase a house and building site. These loans currently bear interest at 8.75% with provisions for interest credits which may reduce the effective interest rate to as low as 1% and are repayable in not more than 33 years.

Home ownership assistance.—Under section 502 certain low-income borrowers may receive additional subsidies when interest credit alone is not sufficient to enable the borrowers to afford modest housing. The additional subsidies would allow the borrowers to contribute 25% of their adjusted incomes toward the basic shelter cost components of principal, interest, taxes, insurance, utilities, and maintenance, and the Government would contribute the balance.

Above moderate-income housing loans.—Individual home ownership loans made by local lenders to eligible above moderate-income rural residents may be guaranteed by FmHA to enable the individual to obtain modest housing when credit cannot be obtained elsewhere without FmHA's guarantee of the loan. The interest rate on the loan is at a rate negotiated by the borrower and the lender.

Rural rental housing loans.—Rural rental and cooperative housing loans are made to individuals, corporations, partnerships and public bodies with the objective of providing low-rent housing for low- to moderate-income persons and the elderly. This program is being operated in tandem with the HUD section 8 rental assistance program and the FmHA rental assistance program.

Rental assistance.—The objective of the rental assistance program is to reduce rents paid by low-income families living in FmHA financed rental projects and farm labor housing projects. Under this program, low-income tenants pay no more than 25% of their adjusted monthly income for rent. Payments from the fund are made to the project owner to make up the difference between the tenant's payment and the approved rental rate established for the unit.

Rural housing site loans.—Site development loans are made for the purchase and development of land to be subdivided into building sites and sold on a nonprofit basis to low- and moderate-income families or to organizations for rental or cooperative housing.

The following table shows preliminary fiscal year 1978 and estimated fiscal year 1979, and fiscal year 1980 program levels and units.

The Agricultural credit insurance fund is used to insure or guarantee farm ownership, soil and water, recreation, farm operating, and emergency loans to individuals, as well as the following types of loans to associations: Irrigation and drainage, grazing, Indian land acquisition, watershed protection, flood prevention, and resource conservation and development.

Loans may be made by the fund from available receipts or Treasury borrowings. Loans made by the fund are held in a pool as security for certificates of beneficial ownership which are sold primarily to the Federal Financing Bank. FmHA is also authorized to provide financial assistance to borrowers by guaranteeing loans made by private lenders having a contract of guarantee from FmHA as approved by the Secretary of Agriculture.

AGRICULTURAL CREDIT INSURANCE FUND—Continued

Public Law 92-419, approved August 30, 1972, abolished the Farmers Home Administration Direct loan account and the Emergency credit revolving fund and provided for transfer of the assets and liabilities of, and authorizations applicable to, these accounts to the Agricultural credit insurance fund. It also provided for transfer from the Agricultural credit insurance fund to the Rural development insurance fund of the assets and liabilities of the Agricultural credit insurance fund applicable to loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities.

The following loans are financed through this fund.

The FmHA and private or cooperative lenders can make loans to the same borrowers on the same security. Loans are made for 40 years or less. An insured loan may not exceed $200 thousand and a guaranteed loan may not exceed $300 thousand. The borrower is charged not more than the cost of money interest rate for insured loans except for low-income, limited resource borrowers who may be charged interest at a rate not more than 5%. Up to $100 million of the loan authorization for this program may be made to limited resource farmers. The interest rate for guaranteed loans is negotiated by the lender and the borrower.

The Emergency Livestock Credit Act, Public Law 93-357, approved July 25, 1974, authorized the making of guaranteed loans to provide temporary financing to livestock producers and feeders. The FmHA guarantees loans made by banks or other legally organized lenders to farmers and ranchers in order that they may continue their normal farming or ranching operations. The basic law (Public Law 93-357) was amended by enactment of Public Law 94-35 on June 16, 1975. Public Law 94-35 provided for a reduction in the amount of guarantees outstanding to $1.5 billion ($2.0 billion under Public Law 93-357) and extended the statutory period for guaranteeing loans to December 31, 1976. Public Law 94-517, approved October 15, 1976, extended the program until September 30, 1978.

It was further amended by enactment of Public Law 95-334, approved August 4, 1978, which extends the statutory period, before the program expires, to September 30, 1979.

This will enable them to continue their normal farming or ranching operations during the economic emergency which has caused a lack of agricultural credit due to national or areawide economic stress such as a general tightening of agricultural credit or an unfavorable relationship between production costs and prices received for agricultural commodities.

The total principal balance outstanding at any time on an economic emergency loan will not exceed $400 thousand. Borrowers indebted to FmHA for a farm ownership loan, operating loan, or a soil and water loan may be considered for an economic emergency loan provided the total outstanding principal indebtedness to FmHA will not exceed $650 thousand. Emergency disaster and emergency livestock loans will not be considered in determining the $650 thousand loan limitation on economic emergency loans.

Loans for operating purposes will be scheduled for repayment for up to 7 years although if unusual conditions exist, this period may be extended but for not more than 20 years. Loans for real estate purposes will be repaid in a period not to exceed 40 years. The interest rate charged for insured loans will be at the cost of money. The guaranteed loan interest rate will be negotiated between the lender and the borrower.

EMERGENCY (DISASTER) LOANS—OBLIGATIONS

[Dollars in millions]

	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Number of loans .....	89,119	14,240	13,440
Amount of loans .....	$3,411.8	$578.0	$578.0

Emergency loans are made available in designated counties where property damage and/or severe production losses have occurred as a direct result of a natural disaster and where agricultural credit cannot be obtained by private cooperatives or other responsible sources. For non-loss situations, emergency loans are made to established eligible farmers, ranchers, and aquaculture operators at a market rate of interest as established periodically by the Secretary for annual operating expenses, major adjustments and other essential needs arising from natural disasters.

Actual loss loans are made for physical losses to repair, restore, or replace damaged or destroyed farm property and supplies, and for production losses to compensate for loss of income based on reduced production of crops, livestock, and livestock products resulting from the disaster. Repayment terms vary according to the purposes of the loan and the projected reasonable repayment ability of the borrower. Loans for actual losses to crops, livestock, supplies, and equipment may be scheduled for repayment for up to 7 years. These loans may be renewed for up to 5 years. Under some conditions a longer repayment period may be authorized, but not to exceed 20 years. Generally, real estate will be needed as security when more than 7 years is authorized. Real estate loans will be scheduled for repayment for up to 40 years. Annual operating expenses usually will be scheduled for repayment each year when the principal income from the year's operations is received. The appropriation language makes funds available in such amounts as may be necessary to meet the needs resulting from natural disasters.

The interest rate is 3% on emergency loans for actual losses caused by disasters occurring between July 1, 1976, and September 30, 1978. The maximum loan for these losses is $250,000. The interest rate on loans for actual losses occurring on and after October 1, 1978 is 5%. Loans may be made to cover the actual dollar amount of losses suffered after September 30, 1978.

Estimates for fiscal years 1979 and 1980 are subject to minor shifts among real estate type loans.

The Rural development insurance fund was established on October 1, 1972, pursuant to section 116 of the Rural Development Act of 1972 (Public Law 92-419), approved August 30, 1972, which also provided for transfer of the assets and liabilities of the Agricultural credit insurance fund applicable to loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities to this fund.

The fund is used to insure or guarantee loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities, community facilities, and industrial development in rural areas.

The objective of the water and waste disposal loan program is to assist eligible borrowers (communities and others) to provide assistance for basic human amenities, alleviate health hazards and promote the orderly growth of rural areas by meeting the need for new and improved rural water and waste disposal systems and meet National clean water standards. The objective of the community facility loan program is to assist rural communities to meet National or State standards for health care and public safety and to encourage business and industrial expansion.

Water and waste disposal development loans and essential community facility loans may be made to organizations including certain Indian tribes, corporations not operated for profit, and public and quasi-public agencies. Water and waste disposal development loans are made for the development, storage, treatment, purification, or distribution of water and or the collection, treatment, or disposal of waste in rural areas. Community facility loans are made to construct, enlarge, extend, or otherwise improve community facilities providing essential service to rural residents. Such facilities include those providing or supporting overall community development such as fire and rescue services, transportation, traffic control, and community, social, cultural, and recreational benefits. Loans are made for facilities which primarily serve farmers, ranchers, farm tenants, farm laborers, and other rural residents of open country and rural towns and villages of not more than 10,000 population, which are not part of an urban area. These loans are repayable in not more than 40 years and bear interest not in excess of 5%.

The objective of the industrial development loan program is to facilitate the development or improvement of business and industry in rural areas, to stimulate economic growth, to create employment opportunities, and to improve the environmental climate.

The industrial development loans may be made to a cooperative, corporation, partnership, trust, or other legal entity organized and operated on a profit or non-profit basis; Indian tribe; municipality, county or other political subdivision of a State; or an individual. Loans are made for the purposes of financing business and industrial acquisition, construction, conversion, enlargement, repair or modernization; financing the purchase and development of land, easements, rights-of-way, buildings, equipment, facilities, leases, machinery, supplies, and materials; and payment of startup costs and supplying working capital.

Industrial development loans may be made in any area that is not within the outer boundary of any city having a population of 50,000 or more and its immediately adjacent urbanized and urbanizing areas with a population density of more than 100 persons per square mile. Special consideration for such loans is given to areas having a population of less than 25,000. These loans are repayable in three separate maturities not exceeding 30 years. The interest rate for guaranteed loans is determined by the lender and the borrower. The interest rate for loans made by Farmers Home

Administration to private entrepreneurs is computed on the cost of Treasury borrowing plus an increment to cover administrative costs; loans to public bodies borrowing to install community facilities necessary for community development are made at 5%.

Assistance is provided through conservation districts to land users and decisionmakers, including individual landowners and operators, community groups, units of government, Indian tribes, and others mainly in the following:

(a) Technical assistance and the transfer of technology for the planning of conservation programs and installation of needed conservation measures and practices on the land, including design, layout, installation services, and consultation on those practices and measures provided for in resource conservation plans;

(b) Technical assistance on special national soil, water, and related resource problems such as land-use planning, mine spoil restoration, control of erosion, sedimentation, agricultural related pollutants, and protection and enhancement of the environment;

(c) Soil surveys and investigations, with interpretations and publications, that provide physical land facts needed for program development, resource conservation planning, installation of planned practices, and for use by other Federal, State, and local agencies;

(d) Water supply forecasts prepared from snow surveys in Western States that are useful in making efficient seasonal use of water for irrigation, flood control, fish and wildlife, recreation, power generation, municipal and industrial water supply, and water quality management;

(e) The selection and evaluation of plant materials through field trials to determine their suitability for erosion control, conservation, and other environmental improvements;

(f) Technical assistance to participants in the agricultural conservation cost-share program in establishing specified enduring practices and measures;

(g) Technical services to participants in other programs involving land-use adjustments and soil and water conservation;

(h) Technical assistance in the planning and application of soil and water conservation practices for which loans are made by the Farmers Home Administration;

(i) Technical assistance to rural development committees;

(j) A program of national land inventory and monitoring; and

(k) A program to appraise and develop USDA soil, water, and related resource conservation programs.

Conservation operations technical assistance program emphasizes in 1979 (including assistance on Indian tribal lands, agricultural waste management, critically eroded lands, and water quality planning assistance), are continued in 1980. Additional emphasis for 1980 will be placed on new surface mine areas, conversion of marginal cropland to pasture and hayland, and water conservation and management.

Combinations of needed soil and water conservation practices are planned in relation to each other to achieve well-balanced conservation programs in each district. The Service aids land users, units of government, and other policy and decisionmakers assemble relevant information and consider the potentials and alternatives before they make long-term decisions. Both vegetative and structural measures are installed in accordance with the needs of the land for protection, treatment, and resource improvement. Plans reflect the decisions of the land users, community groups, and units of government concerning the use and treatment of land and water resources.

Technicians of the Soil Conservation Service explain the various soil conditions, develop alternative uses and treatments, help to evaluate the costs and returns of conservation work, and furnish assistance in applying the needed treatments.

The technical services provided through conservation operations are instrumental in encouraging farmers, ranchers, and others to establish conservation practices. For each dollar used to provide technical assistance, the individual landowner or user invests over $2 in conservation work.

The national inventory and monitoring program provides soil, water, and related resource data for land conservation, use, and development, for guidance of community development to achieve a balanced rural-urban growth, for identification of prime agriculture producing areas that should be protected, for evaluating land-use changes and trends, and for use in protecting the quality of the environment.

Resource appraisal and program development is carried out to ensure that programs administered by the Secretary of Agriculture for the conservation of soil, water, and related resources shall respond to the Nation's long-term needs. The Resource Conservation Act of 1978 provides for a report to the public and Congress at 5-year intervals beginning January 1980.

<sup>1</sup> The $22.5 million unobligated balance is to fund technical assistance in the ensuing years of the full-funded projects. Technical assistance is obligated on an annual basis.

Section 35 of the Clean Water Act of December 27, 1977, authorizes and directs the Secretary of Agriculture, with the concurrence of the Environmental Protection Agency Administrator, and acting through the Soil Conservation Service and other designated USDA agencies, to establish and administer a water quality program. This program provides technical assistance and long-term cost-sharing contracts with owners and operators of rural land for installation of measures needed to control nonpoint source pollution for improved water quality.

The program provides for treatment of critical areas or sources of nonpoint pollutants on a project basis through a combined Federal, State, and locally administered rural clean water program (RCWP). RCWP provides cost-sharing and technical assistance for application of best management practices to improve water quality through contracts between landowners and operators and the identified rural clean water administering agencies. USDA, where practicable, will enter into grant agreements with soil conservation districts, State soil and water conservation agency, or State water quality agencies to administer all or a part of this program.

River basin surveys.—The Department participates in cooperative surveys and investigations in river basins primarily with State water resource agencies, but also with other interested Federal and local entities. Priority is given to studies which: (a) solve nonpoint source pollution problems, including salinity; (b) protect important farm and wetlands; and (c) improve irrigation efficiencies and conservation of water.

The Department also is represented on the Water Resources Council which was formed in accordance with section 101, Public Law 89-80, Water Resources Planning Act, to coordinate water and related land resource activities of Federal departments and agencies. USDA costs related to WRC interagency river basin studies (level B) are financed by reimbursable agreement.

Flood plain management assistance.—Through this cooperative program, SCS assists local governments in carrying out flood hazard studies and provides technical assistance for the development of a flood plain management program. These detailed technical studies delineate flood-prone areas and floodways on maps for local use in implementing programs to reduce hazards to life and property from flooding.

SCS performs flood insurance studies for the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Federal Insurance Administration (FIA) on a reimbursable basis. Currently, the SCS has 146 flood insurance studies underway. HUD reimburses SCS for full cost of study work.

Interagency coordination and program formulation.—The Department maintains representation on six river basin commissions, three river basin interagency committees, and the Water Resources Council. These serve as points of contact in coordinating representatives of this Department and other Federal Departments and agencies and the States in these basin areas. Department representatives keep concerned parties informed of the activities of the member agencies and facilitate interagency coordination.

The Department makes surveys of proposed small watershed projects, and work plans are prepared in cooperation with local sponsors. These plans outline the soil and water management problems in the watershed, the steps that have been or are authorized to be taken to alleviate these problems, the proposed works of improvement to be installed, the estimated benefits and costs, cost sharing, and operation and maintenance arrangements, and other facts necessary to justify Federal participation in project development. In order to utilize available resources to complete work in process, no new planning starts will be initiated in 1980.

This program provides for cooperation between the Federal Government and States and their political subdivisions in installing works of improvement to (1) reduce damage from floodwater, sediment, and erosion, (2) for the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water, and (3) the conservation and proper utilization of land. Loans are available through the Agricultural credit insurance fund of the Farmers Home Administration to local organizations to help them finance their share of the costs to certain works of improvement.

Watershed operations authorized by Public Law 534.—The Department cooperates with soil conservation districts and other local organizations in planning and installing works of improvement for flood prevention in 11 watersheds authorized by the Flood Control Act of 1944. The Federal Government shares the cost of works of improvement for flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife development.

The Department furnishes technical and, in certain instances, financial assistance to landowners to accelerate planning and installation of land treatment measures for runoff retardation, sediment control, and water management. Local sponsoring organizations must furnish all land easements and rights-of-way, water rights, all costs of works of improvement for nonagricultural water management measures (except for those related to fish and wildlife development and recreation) and operate and maintain all completed works of improvement.

Within the 11 authorized projects, 400 subwatershed areas have been identified for planning purposes. Installation progress in these subwatersheds is as follows:

Emergency watershed protection operations.—This program authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to undertake such emergency measures for runoff retardation and soil erosion prevention as may be needed to safeguard life and property from floods and the products of erosion on any watershed whenever natural elements or force causes a sudden impairment of that watershed. An emergency is considered to exist when a watershed is suddenly impaired by flood, fire, wind, earthquake, or other natural cause and consequently life and property are endangered by floodwater, erosion, or sediment discharge. The emergency area need not be declared a national disaster area to be eligible for emergency watershed protection. Emergency watershed protection is applicable to small scale, localized disasters as well as large scale disasters. State environmental, natural resource, fish and game, and other agencies participate in planning and coordinating emergency work.

Emergency operations on non-Federal land are sponsored by State or local organizations. Emergency operations supplement other Federal, State, and local resources committed to alleviate the hazard. Conditions essential to funding assistance are that a watershed impairment must have occurred suddenly as a result of a natural element or force and there exists a threat to life or property from floods or the products of erosion. Sponsoring organization must provide needed land rights, water rights, and permits and accept responsibility for operation and maintenance, if required, all without cost to the emergency operation funds. The Forest Service does this work on lands it administers and on lands adjacent to Forest Service land which they administer under formal agreement. Funds are made available to the Forest Service from this appropriation.

Small watershed operations authorized by Public Law 566.—The Department provides technical and financial assistance to local organizations to install measures for watershed protection, flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife enhancement.

Watershed work plans are prepared by sponsoring local organizations with the Department's assistance or through State and local resources. After work plans are approved by the Department or Congress (projects where the estimated Federal contribution will exceed $1 million require congressional approval), technical services and financial assistance are provided for specific works of improvements.

Land treatment and engineering services are provided to approved projects in advance of construction. During the preconstruction state, surveys, and investigations are made and detailed designs, specifications, and engineering cost estimates are prepared for structural measures, land rights areas are identified, and the technical services are furnished for accelerating planning and application of land treatment measures.

On non-Federal lands, local sponsoring organizations must acquire water rights and furnish land, easements, and rights-of-way for all structural measures, except up to 50% of the cost of land rights allocated to public fish and wildlife and recreational developments may be paid from Public Law 566 funds. Local sponsoring organizations have the option of contracting for construction work or may request SCS to do the contracting for them. Local sponsoring organizations must operate and maintain completed works of improvement and in the case of multiple-purpose structures, bear a share of the construction costs. On Federal lands, Federal agencies do this work on lands they administer with appropriate contributions made by local people who receive benefits.

Ten fully funded new construction starts will be initiated in 1980, and ongoing construction will be continued.

The following tabulation shows the status of Public Law 566 projects.

Loan services.—Loans are made to local sponsoring organizations to finance the local cost of installing works of improvement in Public Law 534 and approved Public Law 566 watershed projects. Repayment with interest is required within 50 years after the principal benefits of improvements first become available. Loans are made from funds available for this purpose from the Agricultural credit insurance fund of the Farmers Home Administration. Loan services related to processing and making loans are financed from this appropriation.

This program provides cost-share and technical services to participating landowners or operators in the Great Plains area in the development and installation of long-term conservation plans and practices for their land under contracts entered into in prior years. It is a voluntary program which complements other conservation programs of the Department in 469 designated counties of 10 Great Plains States. Contracts with individual landowners range in time from 3 to 10 years.

Plans of conservation operations are made for each farm or ranch as a basis for cost sharing on approved practices. The fundamental purposes of this program are to achieve needed land use adjustments, conservation treatments, and economic stability of each operating unit. The planned work is installed under contract according to specific time schedules.

<sup>1</sup>A coordinated departmental long-term cost-sharing program is proposed in fiscal year 1980 in the budget for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. Within that proposal, $15 million is included for long-term contracts in the Great Plains States.

As of September 30, 1978, there were about 14,000 active contracts on hand. Cooperating landowners or operators finance the entire cost of installing recurring management-type practices and pay a specified part of the cost-shared practices installed on their land.

Program regulations provide that cost-share rates offered in any contract shall not exceed 80% of the cost of installing eligible practices within the designated county. The rates vary among States and practices due to differences in conservation and program needs. Cost sharing for irrigation practices in any one contract shall not exceed $7,500 or one-fourth of the total Federal obligation. There is a cost-sharing limitation of $25 thousand for any contract.

Each participant who signs a Great Plains program contract is responsible for implementing his plan of operations; and the Department is committed to furnish the necessary technical help needed for design, layout, and other services. Cooperating landowners and operators are encouraged to make use of other available assistance under local, State, and Federal programs as a means of further improving their land and water resources.

Under this appropriation, no new contracts will be entered into in fiscal year 1980.

This program provides for the Department to assist States, local units of government, groups and individuals in developing area plans for resource conservation and development.

Resource conservation and development areas are provided technical and financial assistance to help States and local units of government prepare plans for resource development and economic improvement and to plan and install community-type conservation projects or measures. Financial contributions, loans, and other Federal assistance are used to help carry out measures specified in R.C. & D. area plans.

No new R.C. & D. area authorizations or measure plans will be initiated in 1980. Funds will be used to complete work in process.

Loans are made to qualified local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of installing the measures. Funds will be available for loans from the Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund of the Farmers Home Administration.

The following tabulation shows the status of R.C. & D. areas authorized to receive technical and financial assistance and loan services:

The major objectives of the Service are to protect the animal and plant resources of the Nation from destructive pests and diseases.

1. Plant disease and pest control.—Through inspections at ports of entry, insects, plant diseases, nematodes, and animal pests and diseases harmful to agriculture are prevented from entering this country. Cooperative programs with the States are conducted to prevent the spread of and/or to eradicate certain plant pests already established in this country. The 1980 estimates propose an increase for a biocontrol program, reductions in boll weevil high plains, Mexican fruit fly, miscellaneous plant diseases and pests, Japanese beetle, gypsy moth and pink bollworm programs. The 1980 budget estimates propose no funding for the imported fire ant, noxious weed, pesticide impact assessment, range caterpillar, fruit fly in Hawaii and sugarcane root borer programs.

Selected examples of the level of activities for plant pest control programs follow:

	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Acres treated (thousands):
Boll weevil (high plains).....	1,258	577	600

Parasites released (thousands): Citrus blackfly.....	379	400	450
Total acres released from quarantine through eradication: Witchweed.....	5,000	3,000	3,000

Vessels (thousands).....	65	66	67

2. Animal disease and pest control.—Programs are conducted to keep communicable diseases of foreign origin from entering this country and to prevent the spread of diseases through interstate shipments of livestock or distribution of impure or impotent veterinary biologics. In cooperation with States, other programs are directed at the control and eradication of livestock diseases present in this country. Foreign animal diseases, should they enter this country, are rapidly diagnosed and outbreaks which are of economic significance and for which the Secretary of Agriculture declares a national emergency are controlled and eradicated. The animal care programs regulate the humane care and handling of approximately 40 million warmblooded commercial (pet) and laboratory animals, restricts animal fighting ventures and prohibits the soring of horses. Part of the program includes the exportation of healthy and sound livestock in a humane manner. The 1980 estimates propose an increase for diagnostic assistance, and decreases in animal welfare, cattle ticks, contagious equine metritis, emergency programs, import-export, miscellaneous animal diseases, pseudorabies, scabies eradication, screwworm, and tuberculosis and elimination of the poultry diseases program. Also included are funds needed to repay the Commodity Credit Corporation for advances made to combat emergency disease outbreaks.

The level of activities for the major control programs on animal diseases and pests is as follows:

3. Construction of facilities.—Construction of a Veterinary Biologics Laboratory at Ames, Iowa, was completed in fiscal year 1978. Construction is expected to begin in fiscal year 1979 on the Stewart Animal Import Center which replaces the animal quarantine station at Clifton, N.J., and to be completed on an international animal quarantine station at Fleming Key, Fla. Funds for these projects were appropriated in previous fiscal years. In 1980, the Department expects to construct a biocontrol facility at Mission, Tex.

4. Contingencies.—Of the total annual amounts provided under this appropriation, $2.5 million is apportioned for use pursuant to section 3679 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, for the control of outbreaks of insects, plant diseases, and animal diseases to the extent necessary to meet emergency conditions.

5. Reimbursement program.—Reimbursements include amounts for overtime and travel performed in connection with import-export inspection services and cooperative programs with other Federal agencies.

Public Law 85-592, approved September 12, 1964, authorized the sale of the Animal Quarantine Station at Clifton, N.J., to the city of Clifton, and the application of the proceeds of the sale to the planning and construction costs of a new station in the New York-New Jersey port and airport area. A sales contract between the Department and the city of Clifton was executed December 16, 1966, at the appraised value of $527 thousand. At that time, $100 thousand was paid to the Department and upon award for the architectural and engineering services for the new quarantine station at Stewart Airport, Newburgh, N.Y., the Department received an additional $100 thousand. The remaining $327 thousand was paid to the Department at the time of issuance of invitations to bid on the construction contract in the summer of 1978. In fiscal year 1970, $1.5 million was appropriated for construction of the new facility and in 1976, the Department received an additional $3.8 million. These funds were appropriated to the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service account and are described there.

The Federal Grain Inspection Service (FGIS) was established on November 20, 1976. The mission of the Agency is to carry out and administer the provisions of the U.S. Grain Standards Act (7 U.S.C. 71 et seq.), as amended, provide U.S. grain standards, and provide an improved National grain inspection and weighing system. The law requires obligations associated with the activities of the Washington, D.C.-based office, as well as Federal supervision of the field-based inspection and weighing system, to be financed from appropriated funds.

This authority incorporates the following services: A continuing research and development program for the purpose of developing methods to improve the accuracy and uniformity in grading grain; monitoring, in foreign ports, grain officially inspected and weighed under the act; the development, establishment, and monitoring for adequacy of official grading standards for grain; regulatory activities to include delegation, designation, and licensing of State and private agencies and their employees to perform inspection and weighing services, and investigations of official agency conflicts of interest; Federal program management and administration activities within the Service's Washington office; and Federal supervision of the field-based national grain inspection and weighing system. The agency also has responsibility for standardization of rice and grain-related products which are covered by the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946 (7 U.S.C. 1621-1627), as amended.

The U.S. Grain Standards Act of 1976 (Public Law 94-582), established the "Federal Grain Inspection Service" to provide a revised and expanded national grain inspection system, and to develop a new weighing system. The law provided for all field-based costs associated with this national system to be fee supported except to the extent that financing not available from fees may be derived from appropriations. The Grain Standards Act was amended in 1977 (7 U.S.C. 71 et seq.)

to provide appropriated funds for all Federal supervision of the field-based inspection and weighing system.

The revolving fund activities include: Official grain inspection and weighing at export ports; original inspection and weighing of the U.S. grain exported through Canada; Federal appeals of original grain inspections; and registration of grain firms operating in the grain trade. The agency also has responsibility for grading services for rice and grain-related products which are covered by the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946, as amended. All field and Washington costs for this AMA grading service are financed from fees.

Funds for strengthening markets, income, and supply (sec. 32) .....	$4,077	$4,858

These activities assist producers and handlers of agricultural commodities by providing a variety of marketing and regulatory services. These services continue to expand and become more complex as the volume of agricultural commodities increases, as a greater number of new processed commodities are developed, and as the agricultural market structure undergoes extensive changes. Marketing changes include increased concentration in food retailing, direct buying, decentralization of processing, growth of interregional competition, vertical integration, and contract farming. The individual activities include:

1. Market news service.—This service provides current information on supply, movement, contractual agreements, and prices at specific markets for practically all agricultural commodities. The marketing of agricultural products is characterized by a series of decision points through which commodity flows concentrate and transactions take place. Market news provides American farmers at these decision points with timely, accurate, and unbiased information pertinent to market conditions. Thus, on a day-to-day basis, the American farmer is in a position to make the informed decisions on where and when to sell, and at what price.

Market news information is collected by Federal and State reporters. Market information is disseminated primarily by radio, television, and mimeographed reports. The volume of work performed is indicated by examples given in the following table:

2. Inspection, grading, classing, and standardization.—Nationally uniform standards of quality for non-food agricultural products and livestock are established and applied to specific lots of products to: Promote confidence between buyers and sellers; reduce hazards in marketing due to misunderstandings and disputes arising from the use of nonstandard descriptions; encourage better preparation of uniform quality products for market; and furnish consumers with more definite information on the quality of products they buy. The standards are applied by or under the supervision of Federal employees at the request of any interested party.

3. Regulatory activities.—These include the administration of regulatory laws such as the U.S. Warehouse and Federal Seed Acts to assure fair play in the marketplace, to protect producers and handlers of agricultural commodities from financial loss due to careless or fraudulent marketing practices, and to preserve free and open competition in the marketing of farm products. Assistance is also provided to farmers and others in obtaining and maintaining equitable and reasonable transportation rates and services on farm products and supplies. The research and promotion programs are designed to improve the competitive position and expand markets for cotton, beef, eggs, wheat, and wool and mohair. The service also administers the Plant Variety Protection Act, and the Export Fruit Acts.

The volume of work performed is indicated by examples given in the following table:

4. Market supervision and assistance.—Market supervision is provided through administration of the Agricultural Fair Practices Act and the Capper-Volstead Act. These acts protect producers against discriminatory practices by handlers and permit producers to engage in cooperative efforts while insuring that such cooperatives do not engage in practices which monopolize or restrain trade. Market assistance is provided through the wholesale market development program which aids in the distribution, storage, transportation, and marketing of agricultural products and by the food marketing alert program which informs the trade when commodities are in short or abundant supply.

5. Marketing agreements and orders.—Marketing agreements and orders are requested by producers and handlers. Hearings and investigations are conducted and proposed agreements and orders are voted upon by eligible producers or handlers.

Marketing agreements and orders help to stabilize prices, and benefit producers and consumers by establishing and maintaining orderly marketing conditions. Administration at the local level is financed by assessment upon handlers. On September 30, 1978, there were in effect 47 orders for milk and 46 agreements and orders for tree fruits, nuts, and vegetables. The expenses of advisory committees established to advise the Secretary, public hearings, referendums to determine producer sentiment, and other developmental work as authorized by the Agricultural Act of 1961 are also financed under this activity.

For 1978 and 1979 this activity was financed under the section 32 appropriation.

6. Administration of Packers and Stockyards Act.—This program is aimed at assuring fair play in the marketing of livestock, meat, and poultry. Its principal purpose is to maintain effective competition for livestock, meat, and poultry, so as to bring to farmers and ranchers the true market value of their livestock and poultry. Consumers and members of the livestock, poultry, and meat industries are also protected against unfair business practices in the marketing of meat and poultry, and from restrictions on competition which would unduly increase meat and poultry prices.

Under this activity, marketing specialists have worked with farmers, marketing firms, and agencies in solving marketing problems and in utilizing marketing research results.

This program has covered such projects as: Methods of maintaining and improving the quality of products; ways of reducing marketing costs; expanding outlets for surplus products; collecting and disseminating special State and local market information and statistics; and improving the organizational structure of the marketing system.

Federal funds have not been included for this program for 1980. It is proposed that State marketing bureaus, or equivalent, and private marketing resources perform this function from 1980 onward.

<sup>1</sup>The administrative fund totals are comprised of 47 separate independent order accounts in fiscal year 1978. The Marketing Service fund totals are comprised of 36 separate independent order accounts in fiscal year 1978.

The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, as amended—under certain conditions—to issue Federal milk marketing orders establishing minimum prices which handlers are required to pay for milk purchased from producers.

Market administrators are responsible for carrying out locally the terms of specific marketing orders. Their operating expenses, partly financed by assessments on regulated handlers and partly by deductions from producers, are reported in these schedules. These funds are collected locally, deposited in local banks, and disbursed directly by the market administrator.

Each milk order is administered locally by a market administrator who is appointed by the Secretary. His staff is employed directly by the market administrator.

The activities conducted in the local office are concerned primarily with monthly computations and public announcement of class and uniform blend prices, associated butterfat differentials, examination of handlers' records and facilities to verify their reports and payments to producers, and in checking weights and tests of producers' milk.

The expenses of each local office are met from an administrative fund and a marketing service fund which are prescribed in each order. The administrative fund is derived from prorated handler assessments. The marketing service fund of the individual order provides for the expense of disseminating market information to producers who are not members of a qualified cooperative. It also provides for the verification of the weights, sampling, and testing of milk from these producers. The cost of these services is borne by such producers.

The maximum rates for administrative assessment and for marketing services are set forth in each order and adjustments below these rates are made from time to time upon recommendations by the market administrator and upon approval of the Agricultural Marketing Service to provide reserves at about a 6-month operating level. Upon termination of any order, the statute provides for distributing the proceeds from net assets pro rata to contributing handlers or producers as the case may be.

Milk sold by regulated handlers supplied over 157 million persons in calendar year 1977.

The following table gives an indication of the role of Federal orders on the marketing of milk over the past few years:

The Food Safety and Quality Service (FSQS) was established in March 1977 by order of the Secretary pursuant to the Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1953. Formerly diffused responsibilities for food safety, wholesomeness and quality were consolidated within FSQS by merging segments of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service and the Agricultural Marketing Service.

The main objectives of this new agency are: (1) to serve as the Department's focal point for prevention of certain food related illnesses; (2) to assure consumers that the foods they eat are safe, wholesome, nutritious, and accurately, as well as informatively, labeled by inspecting, certifying, standardizing, and grading certain agricultural commodities intended for human consumption; (3) to assist both the public and commodity producers by purchasing surplus agricultural goods for use in domestic feeding programs; and (4) to establish a uniform government food purchase specification system. These objectives are carried out under four major activities.

1. Meat and poultry inspection.—Provides continuous inplant inspection of all domestic plants preparing meat and poultry products for sale or distribution in commerce; reviews inspection systems in foreign establishments preparing meat or poultry products for export to the United States; and provides technical and financial assistance to States maintaining meat and poultry inspection programs similar to Federal inspection.

2. Commodity purchase services.—Administrative support necessary for the purchase of commodities for distribution under USDA food distribution programs to eligible outlets and to provide price assistance to producers by removing surplus agricultural commodities from regular market channels.

3. Egg products inspection.—Provides continuous inplant inspection of all plants manufacturing liquid, frozen, or dried egg products; conducts quarterly inspection of egg handlers and hatcheries to ensure the proper disposition of restricted eggs; and controls the importation of egg products to make certain that imported products are produced under an inspection system equivalent to the American system.

4. Voluntary commodity inspection and grading program.—Nationally uniform standards of quality are established and applied to specific agricultural products to facilitate efficient and effective wholesale transactions, to encourage production and preparation of uniform quality products for market, and to furnish consumers with better information on the quality of products they buy. The standards are applied by or under the supervision of Federal or Federal-State employees upon request and for a fee. In addition, the government-wide food quality assurance portion of the program establishes a uniform Federal food specification system to determine which characteristics should be required in foods purchased by the Government.

<sup>1</sup> This figure includes $737,920 thousand contingent upon enactment of additional authorizing legislation to modify the existing appropriation authorization, establish error-rate liability and provide State option for monthly retrospective accounting and periodic income reporting.

The food stamp program helps increase the food purchasing power of eligible households by enabling them to purchase food through retail stores with food stamp coupons. Participating households receive food stamps based on household size and income.

Matching for State administration.—State welfare agencies are responsible for certification of eligible households and for issuing the correct amount of food stamps. State administrative costs associated with the program are shared by the States and the Federal Government on a 50/50 basis. The new Food Stamp Act provides that the rate for State agencies who reduce quality control error rates below 5% be increased from 50% to 60%, and that State agencies be reimbursed for not less than 75% of the total cost of food stamp investigations and prosecutions.

Payments to distributing agencies assist them in meeting the expenses incurred in the food donations program on Indian reservations.

Other program costs.—Other program costs include printing and transporting coupons to authorized State agencies, processing and destruction of redeemed coupons by Federal Reserve banks and other costs. The requirements for reporting employment inquiries are being determined. Funding will be made available as soon as the requirements are set.

The program was originally designed to encourage the consumption of milk by children in non-profit schools of high school grade and under, child care centers, summer camps and similar institutions. The school lunch and other child nutrition programs encourage the consumption of milk by providing meals which include milk. In 1980, the school lunch and other child nutrition programs will spend $640 million for milk.

Funds will be provided to State agencies to partially reimburse participating institutions for the cost of milk consumed where milk is not already subsidized through other child nutrition programs. Reimbursement may be made for the full cost of milk served free to children qualifying as eligible under the Secretary's guidelines.

The rate for milk served to paying children is adjusted each school year to reflect changes in the Producer Price Index for Fresh Processed Milk.

Under Public Law 95-627, the service of free milk is at the option of the local education agency involved.

The child nutrition programs are authorized by the National School Lunch Act and the Child Nutrition Act of 1966. The activities include:

1. Cash payments to States.—The programs are operated under an agreement entered into by the State agencies and the Department. Funds are advanced to State agencies for reimbursing participating schools and child care institutions. Sponsors make application to the State agencies, and if accepted, are reimbursed on a per-meal basis in accordance with the terms of their agreement and rates prescribed by law.

(a) School lunch program.—Federal cash assistance is provided to the States for service of lunches to all school children, regardless of family income. States must match some of the Federal cash grant from sources within the State.

(b) Special assistance.—Additional Federal cash assistance is provided to the States for serving lunches free or at a reduced price to needy children. In 1978, the program served a total of 1.9 billion lunches to an average of 11.7 million participating children. Reduced-price lunches made up 12% of the total.

(c) School breakfast program.—Federal reimbursement to the States is based on the number of breakfasts served free, at a reduced price, or to paying children. Certain schools, designated as especially needy, receive higher rates of reimbursement.

(d) Equipment assistance program.—States are provided with grants-in-aid for institutions in low-income areas. Funds, apportioned by formula, are for the purchase of food service equipment. Forty percent of the amount is reserved for use in institutions which are without food service or which plan to initiate a lunch or breakfast program.

(e) State administrative expenses.—The funds may be used for State employee salaries, benefits, support services, program audits and office equipment.

(f) Summer food program.—Meals served free to children in poor areas during the summer months are supported on a performance basis by Federal cash payments to State agencies. Local administrative expenses are reimbursed at negotiated rates, and State administrative expenses are related to the previous year's cash payments to the State.

(g) Child care food program.—Preschool children receive year-round food assistance in child care centers under this program. Food service in family day care homes and Headstart centers is subsidized.

2. Commodity procurement.—Commodities are provided to schools for the lunch and breakfast programs, and to institutions in the child care and summer feeding programs. Commodities are also acquired for these programs under programs that strengthen markets, income, and supply (section 32).

3. Nutrition studies and education.—In fiscal year 1979, $1 million was appropriated for demonstration projects in nutrition education. Demonstrations will be funded through the nutrition studies and education activity in 1980. Grants to States for nutrition education are also funded.

A large scale nationwide program of audits and strict enforcement of regulations may result in reduced reimbursements of $60 million in 1980.

The special supplemental food program (WIC) is now authorized through September 30, 1982, while the commodity supplemental food program is authorized through September 30, 1981.

Funds for fiscal year 1979 will provide food to 1,586,000 WIC recipients at a monthly average cost of $23.00, plus a State and local administrative cost of $5.76, for a total monthly average cost of $28.76 per recipient.

The WIC program in fiscal year 1980 will reach 2,063,000 recipients. The total monthly cost per recipient is estimated at $30.18, with $24.14 for the food package and $6.04 for State and local administrative costs. Participation in the commodity supplemental food program will average 105,000 persons a month, and the cost per person per month will increase to $17.06. Per person cost increases in both programs are due to an anticipated increase in the cost of food.

1. Forest research.—Research is conducted and disseminated through eight regional forest experiment stations, the Forest Products Laboratory, and the Institute of Tropical Forestry both in-house and through extramural programs.

(a) Land and resource protection research—Forest protection.—Research is conducted to develop measures for the protection of forests from damage by fire, insects, and diseases and provide technology to reduce surface mining impacts on productivity and esthetic values of the lands. Forest fire and atmospheric science research provides improved methods of preventing fires, predicting fire danger, and preparing for and combating fire by combinations of ground and aerial methods. Insect and disease research develops direct controls, cultural measures, and biological agents to combat forest pests.

Forest resource economics.—Investigations are conducted to inventory and appraise the condition of forest lands, volume and quality of standing timber, ownership of timber resources, annual growth and depletion, and the potential need for timber products. Economic studies are made of forest crop production, resource productivity, and the supply and demand effects on the prices of forest products.

(b) Renewable resource management and utilization research—Forest and range management.—Research provides land managers and owners with a sound basis for management of timber, forage, wildlife, recreation, and watershed lands. Studies are conducted to maintain a sustained yield of products; improve forage and habitat for livestock and wildlife without damage to soil, watershed, or other values; assure maximum regular flow of usable water, and reduce floods, sedimentation, and erosion; improve methods for developing and managing recreation resources; and provide management methods for all uses that will insure environmental protection.

Forest products and engineering.—Studies are conducted to develop new and improved forest products, to reduce and utilize waste and to use low quality wood and less desirable species to extend available fiber supply for energy, construction, and petrochemical substitutes. Research is also conducted to advance the efficiency of forestry operations, and to develop and evaluate equipment for such operations as harvesting, planting, timber stand improvement, and protection of forests in an environmentally acceptable manner.

2. State and private forestry.—Cooperative forestry assistance is provided to the 50 States, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific to promote the protection and management of non-Federal forest lands.

(a) Cooperative land and resource protection—Forest insect and disease management.—Activities prevent and suppress destructive insects, diseases, and air pollutants that threaten trees and forest and wood products, stored wood, and wood in use directly on the National Forest System and through technical and financial assistance to others, on non-Federal lands.

Rural fire protection and control.—Technical and financial assistance has been provided to States for the prevention, control, suppression, and prescribed use of fires on rural lands and in rural communities. No funding is proposed for 1980 since the objectives of the program have been accomplished.

(b) Cooperative renewable resource management and utilization—Rural forestry assistance.—Technical and financial assistance is provided to States in planning, managing, improving, and utilizing forest resources on non-Federal lands.

Assistance is also provided to improve, procure, produce, and distribute tree seeds and trees and to implement measures on non-Federal forest lands designed to increase the quantity and improve the quality of trees and other vegetation, fish and wildlife habitat, and water yield.

Urban forestry assistance.—Technical and financial assistance which has been provided to States for planning urban forestry programs is not proposed to be funded in 1980.

Assistance in management, planning, and technology implementation.—Technical and financial assistance is provided States for the development of more efficient State organizations, and to insure that data regarding-State and private forest lands are available for and effectively presented in State and Federal natural resources planning. Activities also include cooperation with State and other public and private agencies in a program of technology implementation.

(c) General forestry assistance.—Activities are of a multiprogram nature to accomplish highly specialized forestry assistance not available through other Forest Service programs. The Pinchot Institute contributes to the accomplishment of programs of the Forest Service and other conservation agencies through research, training, and conferences to improve technology transfer, environmental education, rural and urban forestry, and policy formulation.

FIRESCOPE is a cooperative effort with the State of California and local agencies in southern California providing a research, development, and application program designed to increase the effectiveness of fire protection agencies involved in multi-jurisdictional fires or other emergency situations.

Also included are activities to implement special projects or demonstration programs of a multiprogram nature. A current project involves an interagency agreement between the Forest Service and the Extension Service for a Dutch elm disease control and Dutch elm utilization program. None of these activities are proposed to be funded in 1980.

3. National Forest System.—The 154 national forests and 19 units of national grasslands are managed under multiple use and sustained yield principles. The natural resources of outdoor recreation, range, timber, watershed, and wildlife are utilized in a planned combination that will best meet the needs of the Nation, without impairing productivity of the land and, that will be environmentally acceptable. These management and utilization principles were recognized in the Multiple Use-Sustained Yield Act of June 12, 1960 (74 Stat. 215). Work programs and budget estimates are related to meeting the increased demands for specific National Forest resource needs through 1980 and for long-term objectives to the year 2020. Increases are provided in the budget to further attainment of these program objectives.

(a) Land and resource protection.—Provides for the protection and/or maintenance of National Forest System users, resources, lands, and facilities, including roads and trails, and for administration of the program of acquiring through exchange those lands within National Forest boundaries that meet the criteria for inclusion in the National Forest System. Of the revenue received annually from National Forest activities 10% is available under the permanent appropriation Roads and trails for States, for maintenance within the States from which proceeds are derived. Such amounts may be merged with this activity for obligational purposes.

The Working capital fund was established by the act of August 3, 1956 (16 U.S.C. 579b), as amended by the act of October 23, 1962 (16 U.S.C. 579b). It is a self-sustaining revolving fund which provides services to national forests, experiment stations, and when necessary, to other Federal agencies, and as provided by law, to State and private agencies and persons who cooperate with the Forest Service in fire control and other authorized programs.

The forestry related supply and support services provided by the Working capital fund in fiscal year 1978 included:

Equipment service which owns, operates, maintains, replaces, and repairs common use motor driven and similar equipment. This equipment is rented to administrative units, that is, national forests, experiment stations, and other units, and in some cases to the other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of operation, repair and maintenance, management, and depreciation. The rates also include an increment which provides additional cash which, when added to depreciation earnings and the residual value of equipment, provides sufficient funds to replace the equipment.

Aircraft service which operates, maintains, and repairs Forest Service owned aircraft used in fire surveillance and suppression and in other Forest Service programs. The aircraft are rented to national forests, experiment stations, and in some cases to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of depreciation, operation, maintenance, repair, and improvements in the airworthiness of the aircraft. Aircraft replacement costs are financed from either appropriated funds or the Forest Service Working capital fund, or a combination of both.

Supply service which operates the following common services:

Central supply which procures, stores, and issues grass seed to national forests, experiment stations, and others at prices which recover costs.

Photo reproduction laboratories which store, reproduce, and supply aerial photographs, aerial maps, and other photographs of national forest lands. The photographic reproductions are sold to national forests, experiment stations, and others at cost.

Sign shops which manufacture and supply special signs for the national forests for use in regulating traffic and as information to the public and other users of the national forests. The signs are sold to national forests and experiment stations at cost.

Subsistence which prepares and serves meals to Forest Service crews working in areas where adequate public restaurant facilities are not available.

Nurseries which operate forest tree nurseries and cold storage facilities for storage of tree and seed stock and a seed extractory. Tree seed is procured, cleaned, bagged, and stored in refrigerated facilities. Tree and seed stock is sold to national forests, States, and other Federal agencies at cost.

Legislation has been proposed which would authorize a farm production protection program offering insurance on a nationwide basis as a replacement for existing Federal crop insurance programs, disaster payments and some Small Business Administration and Farmers Home Administration loan program. In addition, the legislation provides for a transfer of the assets, funds, appropriations, property, records and policyholders of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation to the Commodity Credit Corporation at such times as the Secretary of Agriculture shall direct. Therefore, the Corporation would phase out the use of $13,557 thousand for administrative and operating expenses payable from premium income and $12,000 thousand by direct appropriation beginning with fiscal year 1980.

(b) School breakfast program.—There would be similar modifications for eligibility for free and reduced-price breakfasts.

(c) Summer food program.—Private sponsors employing private food vendors would generally be excluded from the program to reduce the potential for fraud and abuse.

This appropriation funds legislatively mandated censuses and surveys of major economic and demographic areas once or twice each decade and other major periodic activities that may be authorized.

1. Economic statistics programs—(a) Economic censuses.—The economic censuses cover manufactures, mineral industries, retail and wholesale trades and service industries, construction, and transportation every 5th year, covering calendar years ending in 2 and 7.

The 1980 budget provides for the completion of the 1977 censuses. Activities include final review, release of data, and evaluation of procedures and operations for the basic censuses, the Surveys of Minority-Owned Business Enterprises and Businesses Owned by Women, and programs and surveys that supplement the censuses. The request also provides for the start of planning activities associated with the 1982 censuses.

(b) Census of governments.—This census collects State and local government data including taxes, tax valuations, governmental receipts, expenditures, indebtedness, and number of employees. This census is taken every 5th year for calendar years ending in 2 and 7.

The 1980 budget provides for the start of planning for the 1982 census. Activities will concentrate on identifying the most pressing needs for data and developing efficient procedures and arrangements for gathering and presenting these data.

(c) Census of agriculture.—This census covers the agricultural sector of the economy for 1978 and thereafter for calendar years ending in 2 and 7. In addition to the regular census program, this activity includes the censuses of irrigation and drainage, which are collected for 1978 and will be collected at ten year intervals thereafter beginning in 1987.

The 1980 budget provides for the preparation of a publication of final census volumes for the 1978 census; the initiation of data collection and processing for the follow-up surveys; the beginning of data collection for the 1979 Census of American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas and the Trust Territories of the Pacific; and completion of data collection, processing, and publications for the 1978 Census of Irrigation and Drainage. The request also provides for initial planning for the 1982 census.

2. Demographic statistics programs—(a) Intercensal demographic estimates.—This program provides for updated population and per capita income estimates for approximately 38,500 general purpose governmental units for equitable allocation of funds under the General Revenue Sharing Act.

(b) Decennial census.—The decennial census of population and housing involves the enumeration of the total population of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, Canal Zone, and other areas of U.S. sovereignty or jurisdiction.

The 1980 budget provides for the peak year activity of the 1980 census. The preparatory work for the census will be completed. A large number of procedures and methodologies will be included to focus on improvement of population coverage, especially for minority groups. The enumeration will be completed and preliminary population and housing figures will be prepared and released on the basis of field summarizations. Computer processing will be initiated to tabulate the final official counts that the Bureau is required, by law, to complete by specified dates in 1980.

(c) Decennial contingency.—A total of $19 million has been provided as a special reserve for use only if unforeseen circumstances arise during the data collection phase of the 1980 decennial census that would cause field costs to exceed the current estimate. A similar provision was established for the 1970 decennial census.

(e) Mid-decade census.—A census of population is required by law on April 1, 1985, and every 10 years thereafter.

The 1980 budget provides for a continuation of limited planning for the 1985 census including the preparation of a preliminary key date schedule, the conduct of meetings to determine data needs, a review of decennial census methodologies for possible improvements, and initial planning of a series of pretests to assist in identifying the best alternatives for question wording, field collection techniques, and processing methodologies.

3. Periodic programs geographic support.—This activity provides for fulfilling the geographic requirements of the various periodic censuses and large-scale surveys and involves accurate identification of both political and statistical areas, preparation of maps, and maintenance of geographic base files.

4. Data processing equipment.—This program provides for leasing of selected electronic data processing equipment to update existing computer systems.

Capital outlay—1. Large-scale data processing equipment.—The 1980 budget provides for the purchase of additional electronic equipment needed to modernize the data processing installation of the Bureau of the Census.

2. Other capital investment.—This provides for the acquisition of office furniture, machines, and other miscellaneous equipment necessary to conduct periodic censuses and surveys.

The Bureau of the Census performs statistical work and analysis, at cost, when it is determined to be in the public interest and the statistics furnished will not identify individuals or particular organizations.

On a continuing basis, the Bureau furnishes age and citizenship data to individuals for their use in qualifying for social security, old-age benefits, retirement, passports, court litigation, insurance settlements, and other social services. Special censuses are conducted for States, counties, cities, towns, or other political divisions requiring an up-to-date count of their population. The Bureau also periodically performs statistical work and data analysis for State and local governments, universities, trade associations, and individuals upon request.

1. Bureau of Economic Analysis (BEA).—The objective of BEA is to provide a clear picture of the state of the economy through the preparation, development, and interpretation of the economic accounts of the United States. The principal programs are:

(a) National economic accounts.—The national income and product accounts, summarized by the gross national product (GNP), provide an up-to-date overall view of national production, its distribution, and its use as shown by the interrelated receipts and expenditures of producers, consumers, investors, government, and the foreign customers of the United States. The inter-industry accounts consist of the preparation, development, and analysis of input-output tables. The regional accounts provide detail on economic activity by region, State, Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area, and county.

(b) Analysis of business trends.—This work includes surveys of business investment, econometric models of the U.S. economy, estimates of the costs and unit rates of emission for pollution abatement, GNP-related measures to help evaluate national well-being, a system of business cycle indicators, and analyses of the business situation.

(c) International economic accounts.—The balance of payments accounts provide a comprehensive and detailed view of economic transactions between the United States and foreign countries. The international investment accounts consist of the preparation, development, and analysis of estimates of U.S. direct investment abroad and foreign direct investment in the United States. The 1980 request provides an increase of $152 thousand for processing the increased workload of the benchmark surveys within the time requirements of the International Investment Survey Act of 1976, Public Law 94-472.

(d) General administration.—General administration provides for the executive direction of BEA to ensure the proper performance of its functions. It also includes the administrative management functions, comprised of budget, management and systems analysis, and other administrative services.

2. Office of Federal Statistical Policy and Standards.—The objective of the Office of Federal Statistical Policy and Standards is to assure the integrity, accuracy, and timeliness of Federal statistics. The Office is responsible for the development and coordination of statistical policy and the development and implementation of statistical standards and guidelines.

3. Office of Industrial Economics.—The objective of the Office of Industrial Economics is to conduct analyses and research on a broad range of sectoral and industrial economic questions. The Office is responsible for developing the industrial data needed to perform its own analyses and research as required by other agencies in the formulation of their policy decisions.

4. Office of Economic Affairs.—The objective of the Office of Economic Affairs is to support the policy advice function of the Chief Economist for the Department through the analysis and interpretation of macroeconomic conditions and policy issues. The Office is responsible for (1) monitoring, interpreting, and preparing forecasts of current business conditions; (2) advising the Chief Economist on the economic impact of proposed legislation and proposed departmental and other Federal agency regulations; and (3) preparing speeches, reports, and articles on a wide range of economic matters.

Reimbursable.—ESA, upon request by other Federal agencies, provides economic and statistical data and analysis on a reimbursable payment basis. Significant activities include provision of State and county money income estimates for the Bureau of the Census and development of Defense price deflators for the Department of Defense.

Includes $1,900 thousand in 1980 for activities previously financed from: Local public works program, Economic Development Administration 1978, $14,987 thousands; 1979, $11,915 thousand.

Excludes $255 thousand in 1979 and $727 thousand in 1980 for activities transferred to General Administration, Salaries and expenses. Comparable amounts for 1978 ($727 thousand) and 1979 ($472 thousand) are included above.

Salaries and related administrative costs of operating the programs of the Economic Development Administration are financed by this appropriation.

1. Economic development assistance programs.—This program covers the expenses of administering the agency's economic development assistance programs.

Administrative support activities are carried out by headquarters staff and each of nine regional offices. Direct project activities include preapplication development, application processing and project monitoring, as well as general support functions, such as legal, environmental and civil rights activities. The increase in resources for 1980 will enable EDA to complete the staffing of three new regional offices, administer the new energy impact assistance program and provide improved project monitoring in all program areas.

2. Local public works.—This program provides funds for the monitoring and evaluation of projects funded under the local public works program.

These funds have been carried in a separate appropriation in previous years; however, since management of this program is closely related to that of EDA's regular programs, all administrative requirements are carried in a single account in 1980.

The programs of the Economic Development Administration (EDA) are designed to reduce substantial and persistent unemployment in economically distressed areas and to react to economic adjustment problems that may arise abruptly. EDA provides public works grants and loans and business development loans and guarantees in particular areas to leverage private sector investments that will create new permanent jobs. EDA also provides grants for economic development planning purposes and for technical assistance and supports a range of evaluation and research activities aimed at increasing public understanding of the processes of economic growth and development. In 1980, EDA will undertake a new $150 million program of inland energy impact assistance.

Obligations by program are as follows (amounts in thousands):

Within the areas served, EDA strives to meet its program objectives through the use of a broad range of activities.

1. Public works.—Grants provide funds for the construction or expansion of community facilities conducive to the location of industrial and commercial enterprises and the creation of additional long-term employment opportunities.

Public works loans are made in association with public works grants.

2. Business development loans and guarantees.—Including long-term low-interest loans for fixed assets, finances businesses willing to establish or expand operations in the Nation's economically distressed areas. In addition, the act authorizes direct working capital loans, working capital guarantees, interest subsidies, guarantees of fixed asset loans made by private institutions, and guarantee of lease payments for buildings and equipment.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS [(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)]—Continued

3. Technical assistance.—Provides appropriate, specific management and operational technical expertise to help assure the success of grant and loan projects; supports institutional and demonstration projects that directly benefit a number of local and regional economic development groups and organizations; and supports feasibility studies and other site-related projects.

4. Planning assistance.—Encourages and supports local development organizations by providing professional planning help and related services.

5. Economic adjustment assistance.—Provides grants to help areas resolve problems related to actual or threatened long-term unemployment or low income or to adjust to a sudden and severe disruption of a local economy. Assistance may be provided to facilitate long-term community adjustments to such situations as the closing of a major employer in the area.

6. Grants to States.—Enables States to supplement grants or to make new grants or loans consistent with titles I, II, III, IV, and IX of the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965, as amended. Funds approved under this new program are distributed among the States based on the percentage of title I funds received by each State since the beginning of EDA.

7. Economic research.—Assists in the development of improved EDA programs and also provides research and information useful to others in the economic development field.

8. Program evaluation.—Assists the agency top staff in making policy and management decisions. Analyses are performed by EDA staff and through contracts.

9. Energy impact assistance.—Provides $150 million in assistance for grants to those noncoastal States, communities and tribes which are adversely affected by energy resource development. The program is designed to build State, tribal and local capacity to manage and finance rapid growth resulting from energy resource development.

in 1979. These loan guarantees will enable the firms to continue operations and to modernize plants in areas of high unemployment or threatened major layoffs. The $100 million allocated represents a 20% set-aside of funds to cover possible loan defaults and will leverage $550 million in private sector loans.

In 1979, up to an additional $75,000 thousand from the unobligated balance in the section 203 revolving fund will be utilized for new business loans and loan guarantees. This provides for total commitments of $175 million in 1978 and 1979.

The Regional Action Planning Commissions address problems of regional development. There are currently eight regional commissions which encompass all or part of 34 States; they are Coastal Plains, Four Corners, New England, Old West, Ozarks, Pacific Northwest, Southwest Border, and Upper Great Lakes. The 1980 budget provides for the addition of new Commissions to move toward a national system. Each Commission is composed of the Governors of member States and a Federal cochairman appointed by the President.

1. Development programs.—The 1980 development programs will enable the Commissions to carry out a program of planning, technical assistance, demonstration projects, and supplemental grants-in-aid.

2. Administrative expenses.—This activity provides for staff costs for the Commissions, the Federal cochairmen, and the Special Assistant to the Secretary for Regional Development. The Federal Government provides 100% of the financing for the administrative staffs of new Commissions and 50% of the costs of other Commissions, with the States in each region sharing the balance of the costs.

The activities of the Industry and Trade Administration of the Department of Commerce are directed at strengthening the economy of the United States by promoting the growth and competitive position of U.S. industry in domestic and international markets in a manner consistent with national security and economic policy. Export development programs will be expanded in 1980 as part of the President's National Export Policy. Increased funding for the new export initiatives will be partially offset by elimination of five lower priority overseas trade centers.

1. Export development.—Encourages and assists U.S. businesses to export by (1) conducting market research and overseas trade promotion events, (2) assisting U.S.

companies to compete for foreign capital projects and product purchases, and (3) providing U.S. industry with overseas sales leads.

2. East-West trade.—Expands the U.S. trade with the U.S.S.R., Eastern Europe, the People's Republic of China, and other countries with centrally planned economies.

3. Domestic business development.—Develops and conducts specific business programs for improving economic conditions in selected industries. Assists industries in resolving the problems arising from growing imports and in protecting world trading markets. Assists business and industry in utilizing Government services. Comments on legislation affecting domestic business and conducts studies and analyses on the Nation's environmental problems.

4. International economic policy and research.—Provides U.S. Government officials with international economic analyses, policy recommendations, and negotiating strategies and options which are necessary for Commerce to successfully formulate and implement national, multilateral, and bilateral programs and negotiations and meet the requirements of various legislation and executive orders.

5. Trade regulation.—Assures that export activity is consistent with the national security, foreign policy objectives, and U.S. material and commodity requirements. Enforces the law against participation in foreign boycotts. Facilitates timely availability of industrial resources for selected defense and energy projects. Administers certain statutory functions relating to imports and foreign trade zones.

6. Field operations.—Serves as the Department's principal contact with local business communities. Delivers information and services from the Department's programs to business and multiplier agencies. Publishes the Commerce Business Daily.

7. Administration.—Provides administrative management services for program units.

8. International tourism.—Collects, analyzes, and provides statistical data on international tourism. Provides policy recommendations, technical assistance, and coordination to governmental organizations involved in tourism to assure the development of balanced and consistent Federal policies to expand foreign tourism. This represents a new activity consisting of certain functions transferred from the U.S. Travel Service.

In its leadership role of coordinating the minority business development program, the Office of Minority Business Enterprise (OMBE) seeks to create improved, national conditions within which the minority people of the United States will have an equal opportunity to participate in the American business system. In 1980, increased emphasis will be placed on expanded private sector and Federal Government involvement in the promotion of minority business development.

1. Client services.—This activity provides direct, general business services to minority individuals and firms seeking business information, counseling, financial packaging assistance and assistance in identifying and exploiting business opportunities and new and/or expanded markets. In addition, this activity provides direct, specialized business assistance services to minority firms in selected growth industries, to businesses associated with large-scale, economic development projects, and to firms in need of specialized guidance in such areas as acquisition, mergers, and divestitures.

Also, professional consultant services are provided through this activity for firms in need of more sophisticated assistance than that provided by other OMBE-funded organizations or qualified volunteers.

2. Business development.—This activity provides for the indirect business assistance programs conducted by OMBE. These programs encourage minority business development by identifying and developing private markets and capital sources; decreasing minority dependence on government programs; expanding business information and business services through trade associations; promoting and supporting the mobilization of resources of Federal agencies and State and local governments at the local level; and assisting minorities in entering new and growing markets.

3. Research and development.—This activity provides for scientific research directed toward the solution of problems affecting minority business enterprise and to the collection of business/economic data needed to facilitate the solution of such problems. In addition, demonstration projects are funded to test new/alternative means of meeting the needs of minority entrepreneurs.

4. Program development and management.—This activity finances development and direction of OMBE programs, provision of administrative support for all daily operating requirements, the administration of the contract and grant programs, and coordination with other Federal agencies concerning their minority business development programs and activities. These responsibilities are carried out in the national office and OMBE's six regional offices.

This appropriation provides for the research, development, and support of operating programs, and acquisition of facilities for fulfilling the basic responsibilities of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA).

1. Mapping, charting, and surveying services.—Provides for charting the Nation's coastal regions, production of aeronautical charts for safe and efficient commercial and general aviation, and geodetic surveys. The 1980 increases provide for improving the National Tide and Water Level Observation Network and expanding the wave-monitoring program.

2. Ship support services.—Provides for operation and logistical support of NOAA ships and marine centers.

3. Ocean fisheries and living marine resources.—Provides for safe fishery products, viable commercial and marine sports fishing programs, and conservation of fisheries resources and endangered species by protecting, developing, and managing U.S. living marine resources, including the seal herd of the Pribilof Islands. The 1980 increases support programs previously funded through the Promote and develop fishery products and research pertaining to American fisheries fund; expanded sea turtle research and fisheries stock assessments; increased studies of the effects of contaminants and habitat alterations on marine and estuarine organisms; expanded ocean pulse program; increased enforcement of the Fishery Conservation and Management Act and salmon regulations; additional social and economic data for fishery management plan development and evaluation; and completion of the bowhead whale research program.

4. Marine ecosystems analysis and ocean dumping.—Provides information for management of the marine environment and its resources. The 1980 increases provide for implementing the National Ocean Pollution Research and Development and Monitoring Planning Act of 1978; and expanding long-term effects studies in the marine environment.

5. Marine technology.—Provides for development, testing, and calibration of oceanographic instruments. The 1980 increase provides for an engineering prototype of high frequency radar for ocean current and wave measurements.

6. Sea grant.—The sea grant program provides matching fund grants to public and private universities, institutes, and industries to seek solutions to problems related to management and use of marine resources, and transfer of new technology to marine users.

7. Basic environmental services.—Provides the fundamental networks of weather observations, communications systems, weather analyses and predictions, and maintenance that are essential for all forecasts and warnings. The 1980 increases provide for automated observations from coastal and offshore platforms; procurement and installation of satellite display equipment at four weather service offices; development of a prototype regional observing and forecasting system (PROFS); upgrading of NOAA's central computer facility; and continuation and acceleration of mathematical modeling of the atmosphere and the oceans. Decreases result from closing 22 unnecessary, small weather service offices.

8. Environmental satellite services.—Provides for the operation of a national environmental satellite system. The 1980 increases provide satellite data analysis, interpretation, and guidance for flash flood forecasts; operational satellite support to ocean service units; and a program to measure heat radiated and absorbed by the Earth from geostationary satellites.

9. Public forecast and warning services.—Provides weather forecast and warning services. The 1980 increases provide for a coordinated ocean services program; development of additional storm surge models; expanded efforts in hurricane modeling; a demonstration flash flood warning program in the Appalachian Region; and a national flash flood unit. Decreases result from the closing of 22 unnecessary, small weather service offices.

10. Specialized environmental services.—Provides environmental services for support of aviation and agricultural operations; fire weather services; and information about the Sun's activities and conditions in near space for use by the Nation's space program, telecommunications agencies and industries, and electric power distributors. The 1980 request provides for a joint USDA/NASA/NOAA program in remote sensing to improve crop yield forecasts. Decreases result from the closing of 22 unnecessary, small weather service offices.

11. Environmental data and information services.—Provides basic data and information products on the atmosphere, oceans, solid earth, the Sun, and near space. The 1980 increases provide for an archival and retrieval system for geostationary satellite digital data; and increased environmental data information service capabilities.

12. Global monitoring of climatic change.—This activity represents the U.S. part of a U.N.-sponsored, worldwide program to monitor the long-term changes taking place in the Earth's atmosphere and predict the changes that will occur in global weather and climate. The 1980 increase provides for atmospheric climate research on carbon dioxide in the atmosphere and the variability of solar radiation incident to the Earth.

13. Weather modification.—This research activity examines the feasibility of modifying hurricanes and other severe storms to reduce their intensity. The 1980 increase provides funding for operating NOAA's aircraft at an increased level of flight hours.

14. International projects.—This activity includes two major programs involving international participation: the global atmospheric research program (GARP), and the Great Lakes research program.

15. Retired pay, commissioned officers.—Provides for the retirement pay of NOAA commissioned officers and payment of survivors of retired officers under the retired servicemen's family protection plan and the survivor's benefit plan.

16. Executive direction and administration.—Provides for overall administrative management of NOAA.

This appropriation provides for administration, management, beneficial use, protection, and development of the land and water resources of the Nation's coastal zone, by providing grants to States for the planning and management of their coastal areas.

1. Program development grants.—These grants permit correction of existing inadequate arrangements for planning and regulating land and water uses in their coastal zone by developing comprehensive coastal zone management programs.

2. Program administration grants.—These grants are for ongoing activities related to carrying out State responsibilities, such as land and water use regulation, monitoring, and enforcement, which are contained in their approved management program. An increase in 1980 will provide grants to additional States for administration of their coastal management plans.

3. Energy impact formula grants.—These grants provide funds to meet the needs of coastal States and local units of government whose coastal zones are affected by the development and production of Outer Continental Shelf oil and gas, and coastal transportation of energy resources.

4. Estuarine sanctuaries.—These grants provide for acquisition, development, and operation of estuarine sanctuaries for the purpose of creating natural field laboratories where studies can be made of the processes occurring within coastal estuaries.

5. Marine sanctuaries.—This program supports the designation of ocean waters as marine sanctuaries for the purpose of preserving or restoring their conservation, recreational, ecological, or esthetic value. An increase in 1980 will provide for designation of additional sites.

6. Program management.—Provides assistance to State and territorial governments in developing and implementing coastal zone management programs; coordinates Federal activities that impact coastal zone management programs; and supports studies for planning and assessing ocean uses.

An amount equal to 30% of the gross receipts from customs duties on imported fishery products is appropriated (15 U.S.C. 713c-3) for marine resources research and assessment and use of fishery resources. These funds supplement direct appropriations to the Operations, research, and facilities appropriation.

In 1980, legislation will be proposed to eliminate this fund and substitute in its place, direct funding in the Operations, research and facilities appropriation to support the activities presently carried out through this account.

This program provides for loans to vessel operators who, because of the high risk associated with some commercial fishing, cannot obtain commercial loans at reasonable rates for financing or refinancing the cost of purchasing or constructing, equipping, maintaining, repairing, or operating new or used commercial fishing vessels or gear. Funds for new loans are derived from repayment of principal and interest payments on outstanding loans.

A moratorium on applications for this program was declared in February 1973 due to the need to establish new regulations that would restrict loans in overharvested fisheries and to increase the fund balance through repayments.

This fund provides for payment to vessel owners and crews to compensate for certain financial losses sustained as a result of foreign seizures of American fishing vessels found within 200 miles of their coasts. Through 1977, funds in this account were derived from Federal appropriations and fees from vessel owners. Beginning in 1978, the basic annual appropriation was discontinued, although appropriated funds can be requested if the fund's balance is depleted.

This appropriation provides Federal financial assistance to meet the needs of coastal States and their local governments impacted by Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) and certain other coastal-dependent energy activity in, or in proximity to, the coastal zone of the State.

Loans and guarantees.—This fund provides loans, guarantees, and repayment assistance. Additional capitalization for loans, guarantees, and repayment assistance is not requested in 1980 pending utilization of resources appropriated through 1978.

1. Planning grants.—These grants are for use when the siting, construction or operation of new or expanded energy facilities force affected coastal States to undertake detailed studies and plans for the economic, social, and environmental consequences of such facilities. Grants may not exceed 80% of the cost of such studies.

2. Environmental grants.—Section 308(d)(4) authorizes grants to coastal States to enable them to minimize the loss of valuable environmental or recreational resources resulting from coastal energy activity if no other funds for this purpose are available to the State concerned.

3. Program management.—This activity provides program direction and administrative support for the Coastal energy impact fund.

The Office administers laws governing the granting of patents for inventions and the registration of trademarks.

Receipts deposited in the general treasury from fees were $27.7 million in 1978 and are estimated to be $26.5 million in 1979 and 1980.

Activities of the Office fall into the following areas:

1. Examination of patent applications.—Applications are examined to determine whether or not the inventor is entitled to a patent for the claimed invention. Examination of patent applications also includes the performance of quasi-judicial functions in appeal and interference proceedings. Although one goal of the office is to maintain the average pendency for patent applications at approximately 18 months, the pendency period will increase slightly in 1979 and 1980 due to greater emphasis on improving the quality of patent review.

The following table summarizes key patent application workload and performance data:

2. Examination of trademark applications.—Applications are examined to determine whether the statutory criteria for the Federal registration of the trademark or service mark have been met. Where the criteria are met, a registration is issued to the applicant. Examination of trademark applications also includes inter partes proceedings involving oppositions, cancellations, and interferences.

4. Data and document retrieval systems.—This activity maintains subject matter search files of prior art documents so that the abundant technological information in the Office is readily accessible for use by examiners and the public. A scientific library is also maintained.

5. Patent and trademark services.—This activity provides material and services to the public. These include furnishing copies of patents and trademark registrations, providing drafting services, furnishing copies of Office records, maintaining of a public search room, and recording instruments conveying ownership of patent and trademark rights.

6. Administrative support operations.—This activity provides policy, administrative and management direction for patent and trademark organizations; handles legal matters for the Office; develops recommendations

1. National Bureau of Standards.—The National Bureau of Standards (NBS) is responsible for the development and maintenance of a system of measurements required to support the Nation's economy.

NBS efforts are organized into the following five program activities:

(a) Measurement research and standards.—This activity includes programs in the areas of fundamental physical measurements and standards, radiation measurements and standards, analytical chemical measurements and standards, materials science, and thermodynamic and molecular science. Also included in this activity is a measurement assurance program as well as applied measurement programs in nondestructive evaluation, environmental measurements, standard reference materials, standard reference data, and recycled materials. The 1980 increases will enable NBS to develop additional measurements and standards in materials durability and resource recovery; and an experimental regional measurement assurance program for dissemination of accurate and uniform measurements.

(b) Engineering standards.—This activity includes programs in the areas of engineering standards, building research, consumer product technology, electrotechnology, mechanical engineering and process technology, and field methods. Also included in this activity is a program in mathematical sciences as well as a program in fire science and engineering. The 1980 increase provides for developing new measurement techniques in electromagnetic interference.

(c) Computer sciences and technology.—This activity provides for the establishment of Government-wide automated data processing (ADP) standards.

(d) Cooperative technology.—Costs in 1980 for this activity result from the completion of a 1979 study of the desirability and feasibility of carrying out a cooperative technology program with industry, universities, and other Federal agencies.

(e) Central technical support.—This activity includes resources for a long-range planning effort, capital investments to finance the construction or improvement of buildings and special facilities, procurement of large items of equipment, and increases of the NBS Working capital fund for the purchase of general purpose equipment. The 1980 increase will continue to build basic NBS competence and provide additional capital to the Working capital fund for the manufacture of standard reference materials produced for sale.

2. National Technical Information Service.—The National Technical Information Service collects and distributes scientific, technological, business, and demographic information generated by the Federal Government and promotes and licenses government owned inventions. In 1980, this activity will include a contract with the Science Information Exchange, a nonprofit corporation formerly affiliated with the Smithsonian Institution. The SIE collects, indexes, stores, retrieves, and disseminates information about ongoing scientific research.

3. Office of Environmental Affairs.—The Office of Environmental Affairs coordinates Department of Commerce compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (Public Law 91-190) and other laws applicable to departmental activities and facilities. The office is being transferred from General Administration in 1980.

The Working capital fund finances, from advances and reimbursements, all operations of the National Bureau of Standards except major construction projects and the foreign currency program. Amounts reported include investments in equipment and inventories, and research, development and services performed for other Government agencies and the public. Programs of direct appropriations and trust funds are covered in the schedules for those accounts. The principal of the fund, as of September 30, 1978, consisted of $21 million in capital provided by appropriations, and $136 million in net donated assets. Retained earnings at the end of each year are transferred to Treasury the year following.

The National Telecommunications and Information Administration is the administration's lead agency for telecommunications and information policy, technology, and spectrum management.

1. Broadcast, cable, and special services.—Provides for the conduct of technical, economic, and other research and the development of plans and policies to the Federal Communications Commission, the Congress, and others that: (a) increase diversity, availability, and competition in broadcast, cable, mobile, and related services in response to market demands; (b) reduce needless regulatory burdens; (c) encourage the development and use of new radio and cable technologies, services, and techniques which will conserve scarce radio spectrum; and

(d) increase minority ownership of new and existing services.

2. Domestic common carrier.—Provides information and develops policies which help to resolve the basic issues of the common carrier industry structure and scope in such a way that industry, government, and the general public receive the most effective and economical service. In particular, these responsibilities include: (a) developing and advocating policies for the development of competition in telecommunication services; (b) defining policies to guide integration of traditional common carrier markets with data processing and other message communication service markets; and (c) developing and advocating ways of improving present Federal-State divisions of authority.

3. International telecommunications policy.—Assures that the interests of the United States in efficient and economical international services, the furtherance of domestic policy objectives, and international comity are embodied in: (a) the structure of the international telecommunications industry; (b) the international facilities planning process and particular facilities decisions, and (c) proposals for new services or other actions which may impact upon telecommunications policy.

4. Telecommunications applications.—Provides assistance to public service agencies in developing the technical means to improve the efficiency and cost effectiveness of their communication systems, develops policies for the future evolution of new technologies with significant public service benefits, and provides leadership in the development of the Administration's position on the future of public broadcasting. In 1980, NTIA will expand its satellite brokerage functions.

5. Information technology and policy.—Assesses the extent and effects of the growth of information technologies and services in national and international economies and activities and develops plans and policies to: (a) prevent undesirable social and economic effects of this growth (e.g., adverse effects on privacy); (b) promote government guidelines to encourage the development of competitive information industries; and (c) encourage useful applications of information technology.

6. Spectrum policy.—Provides for the development of plans and policies for more efficient spectrum use, domestically and internationally, in cooperation with the Federal Communications Commission, the Interdepartmental Radio Advisory Committees, and other nations. In particular, these responsibilities include: (a) providing for an improved framework for the sharing of Government and nongovernment spectrum so as to minimize administrative barriers to efficient spectrum use; (b) developing priority allocation systems that encourage low priority users to find nonspectrum means of operation; (c) identifying and limiting barriers or potential barriers, such as nonionizing radiation hazards, to full spectrum use; and (d) coordinating positions of the United States in international bodies that will lead to more efficient and productive spectrum use.

7. Spectrum management and planning.—Provides technical, administrative, and personnel support to NTIA and other agencies for the management of the Government's portion of the electromagnetic spectrum.

8. Technology for efficient use of spectrum.—Conducts basic and applied research on the characteristics of electromagnetic wave transmission.

9. Public telecommunications facilities.—Provides administrative support for making grants authorized by section 392 of the Public Telecommunications Financing Act of 1978. An annually updated long-range plan to accomplish program objectives (including a detailed 5-year projection of the broadcast and nonbroadcast public telecommunications facilities required to meet assessed community needs and the expenditures necessary to provide such facilities), and a summary of the program's activities in implementing such plan are to be submitted concurrently to the President and the Congress. This activity will also be responsible for preparation of a report on the activities of NTIA with respect to domestic public telecommunications, to be included in the NTIA annual report required by Congress.

The Public Telecommunications Financing Act of 1978 expands the purposes and activities of the broadcasting facilities program, authorized in 1962 by part IV of title III of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, and provides for the planning of telecommunications facilities to extend delivery of programs and the use of nonbroadcast technologies as well as broadcast technologies to extend delivery of public telecommunications services.

The public telecommunications facilities program provides for equitable geographic distribution of grants to eligible entities. Grants will be made for the planning of facilities required to extend the delivery of noncommercial, educational, informational, and cultural television and radio programs.

Matching grants (up to 75% of total eligible project costs) will also be made for eligible production, reproduction, reception, and distribution apparatus required to deliver noncommercial programs, and to strengthen the capability of existing public radio and television stations to better serve the needs of residents within their coverage area.

Not less than 75% of the appropriation will be available to extend delivery of public telecommunications services to areas not receiving such services through grants for facilities of new and existing public telecommunications entities, and preoperational expenses associated with such facilities. A substantial amount of the appropriation will be available for the expansion and development of noncommercial radio broadcast station facilities.

Under provisions of the act of 1978, special consideration will be given to applications which would increase minority and women's ownership of, operation of, and participation in public telecommunications entities. Affirmative steps will be taken to inform minorities and women of the availability of Federal assistance, and the localities where new public telecommunications facilities are needed, and to provide other assistance and information as may be needed.

The goal of the ship construction program is to provide a competitive U.S. shipbuilding industry and U.S.-flag fleet which are adequate for the commerce and the national security requirements of the United States. The program enables U.S. shipyards to construct ships for U.S. citizens at prices which are comparable to the prices which would be paid for the same construction in a foreign shipyard. The program fosters increased productivity in U.S. shipyards by supporting series production of standardized ship types and encourages shipyard investment in capital improvements.

The 1980 program will emphasize the production of ships with national defense utility and will include several ships built as part of subsidized operators' replacement obligations. Bulk cargoes represent a significant element of total U.S. foreign trade, and new emphasis is being directed toward encouraging construction of bulk ships.

The Merchant Marine Act of 1936, as amended, provides that operating subsidies shall be paid to qualified operators of U.S.-flag vessels in order to promote the maintenance of a U.S. Merchant Marine capable of providing essential ocean-shipping services. Subsidies are designed to achieve a parity between certain U.S. and foreign ship operating costs.

As a result of the Merchant Marine Act of 1970, new efforts are being directed toward revitalizing the increasingly important bulk carrying segment of the U.S.-flag fleet. Bulk cargoes represent a substantial portion of total U.S. foreign trade, and emphasis will continue to be placed on assuring that U.S.-flag bulk ship operators will be able to provide essential bulk services.

The objective of the research and development program is to develop methods, equipment, and systems to make the U.S. shipbuilding and ship operating industries more efficient, competitive, and productive.

In 1980, the research and development program will be conducted in four major program areas as follows:

1. Advanced ship development.—This program involves projects to achieve greater productivity in the building of ships and projects directed toward the development of new and improved ship machinery. Improved machinery performance is heavily oriented toward energy savings. Shipbuilding productivity improvements and new, less costly machinery benefit the Government by reducing ship construction costs and related subsidies.

2. Advanced ship operations.—In this program, projects are directed toward improving the efficiency, competitiveness, and safety of U.S.-flag ship operations through the development of advanced management operating techniques using computerized systems, improved fleet control by means of advanced navigation/communication systems, and the development of ship-board automation equipment and systems. This program also includes projects to improve cargo handling methods and equipment, improve port productivity and intermodal cargo movement, and assist port management in coordinated regional planning for better use of their port facilities.

3. Maritime research.—This program provides for research facilities operations, and investigation and simulation of new problems related to ship operations, safety, and design.

4. Advanced maritime technology.—The aim of this program is to investigate advanced technological concepts and requirements, and formulate and conduct specific systems analysis and systems development projects.

Note.—Excludes $625 thousand in 1979 and $625 thousand in 1980 for activities transferred to Department of Labor, Employment Standards Administration, Salaries and expenses. A comparable amount for 1978 ($625 thousand) is included above.

1. Development of waterborne transportation systems.—This activity provides for direct technical and administrative costs of programs for development and subsidized construction of cost-competitive U.S. merchant ships in sufficient quantity to meet national maritime objectives; programs to achieve stability and improve efficiency in the U.S. shipbuilding industry; and manpower programs related to the maritime industry.

2. National security support capability.—This activity provides for maintaining U.S. merchant ships in the National Defense Reserve Fleet for service as naval and military transport auxiliaries in time of war and national emergency and for emergency preparedness activities. The requested program level will provide for a high level of maintenance on ships that have been selectively upgraded to form the Ready Reserve Fleet.

3. Merchant Marine Academy.—This activity provides for operating the Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N.Y. The objective of the Academy is to instruct and prepare selected personnel for service as officers in the merchant marine. Approximately 250 officers will graduate in 1980. The requested program level supports continuation of the facilities modernization program including renovation of one of the principal academic buildings.

4. State marine schools.—Assistance is provided to States in the operation and maintenance of maritime academies or colleges for the training of merchant marine officers. This assistance involves grants to the State schools, subsistence payments in support of cadets, and maintenance of vessels provided for use as training ships. An estimated 530 officers will graduate from these schools in 1980.

5. Use of waterborne transportation systems.—This activity provides for the direct technical and administrative costs of promoting the effective development and use of merchant ships and ship systems to further the foreign and domestic waterborne commerce of the United States. Program objectives involve increasing U.S.-flag participation in U.S. foreign trade and reducing or eliminating operating subsidies when no longer required to sustain a viable shipping operation.

The Merchant Marine Act of 1936, as amended, established the Federal ship financing fund to assist in the development of the U.S. Merchant Marine by guaranteeing construction loans and mortgages on U.S.-flag vessels built in the United States.

The Maritime Appropriation Authorization Act for 1979 (Public Law 95-298) increased the limitation on obligations guaranteed and outstanding at any time under title XI of the Merchant Marine Act from $7 billion to $10 billion. For 1980, appropriation language is proposed to introduce an additional ceiling on this program in the form of an annual limitation on the aggregate amount of new loan guarantee commitments. This is consistent with the Administration's broader objective of introducing budget controls over Federal credit programs. The amount of the limitation proposed for 1980 of $1 billion is adequate to provide loan guarantee assistance to most potential applicants while at the same time acting as a more effective control over this program than the present $10 billion statutory limitation.

The estimated level of new commitments and guarantee construction loans and mortgages, and the estimated aggregate level of guarantees in force and commitments outstanding is shown in the following table:

Budget program.—Administrative expenses incurred in the operation of the Federal ship financing fund are paid from income to the fund. Reimbursements to the Operations and training appropriation are anticipated at $4,000 thousand in 1979, and $4,200 thousand in 1980. Advances to operators are estimated at $6,500 thousand in 1979 and $3,500 thousand in 1980 in order to forestall possible defaults on insured mortgages.

Financing.—The fund receives income from insurance premiums on construction loans and mortgages, fees, and interest on U.S. Government securities and mortgages held directly. The payment of administrative expenses is made from this income, while payments for advances to operators and redemption of defaulted loans and mortgages are paid from income, equity, and borrowing from the Treasury Department. No borrowings are anticipated in 1980.

The Maritime Administration is authorized to reactivate, operate, deactivate, and charter merchant vessels, and operate experimental vessels under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Commerce. These operations are financed by the Vessel operations revolving fund. In addition, the fund is available to finance the necessary expenses to protect, maintain, preserve, acquire, and use vessels involved in mortgage foreclosure or forfeiture proceedings instituted by the United States.

Budget program.—As of September 30, 1978, there are three claims in process of settlement which resulted from operation of Government-owned ships and general agency agreements in the Vietnam sealift. The 1980 program anticipates the annual testing of a ship in the Ready Reserve Fleet.

Financing.—Expenses are financed by charter hire revenue, reimbursements from Federal agencies, and insurance underwriters.

The Maritime Administration is authorized to insure against loss or damage by marine war risks when it is found commercial insurance cannot be obtained on reasonable terms and conditions. This insurance includes war risk hull and disbursements interim insurance, war risk protection and indemnity interim insurance, second seamen's war risk interim insurance, and war risk cargo insurance standby program. Authority to underwrite insurance has been authorized to September 30, 1979. Legislation to reauthorize this program will be proposed to the 96th Congress.

Budget program.—It is estimated that during 1980 insurance coverage will be provided for approximately 600 U.S.-flag ships, 2,500 LASH and Seabee barges, as well as a selected number of foreign-flag ships. The program also includes provision for second seamen's war risk insurance covering the crews of 18 vessels under contract with the Military Sealift Command.

Financing.—Under 46 U.S.C. 1288, the Secretary of Commerce established the War risk insurance revolving fund. It receives income from binder fees, insurance premiums, interest from investments and claim reimbursements from other Federal agencies. Underwriting agents' fees and expenses, appraisal contractors' fees, and insurance claims are paid from this income. While additional appropriations for the program are authorized, none are requested for 1980.

RESERVE FORCES

The following appropriations are for the Reserve components, which include: Army and Air National Guard; and Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force Reserves.

National Guard and Reserve personnel.—These programs provide funds for training members of the Ready Reserve as the initial and primary augmentation of the active forces during any future emergency. Most of the paid National Guard and Reserve personnel perform 48 drills and attend 2 weeks of active duty for training each year. Other personnel not requiring as intensive training receive only a period of active duty for training (usually 2 weeks) during the year. Active duty for basic training is provided for personnel enlisting in the National Guard or Reserve who have not previously received military training. Certain enlistees may drill with pay while awaiting active duty for basic training. Service schools and special tours of active duty training provide additional training for limited numbers of the Ready Reserve.

The numbers of National Guard and Reserve personnel estimated to participate in the paid training programs are summarized in the following table:

Reserve officer candidates.—The Reserve Officers' Training Corps program provides training for reserve and regular officer candidates who have enrolled in the course while attending a collegiate institution at which an ROTC unit has been established. College graduates who satisfactorily complete the advanced course of the program are commissioned and are ordinarily ordered to active duty for a minimum period of 3 years.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps Vitalization Act of 1964, as amended, authorizes a limited number of scholarships for ROTC students on a competitive basis. Successful candidates for the scholarships are required to serve a minimum period of 4 years on active duty upon graduation and appointment as a commissioned officer. There will be about 6,500 scholarship recipients in the Army, about 5,850 in the Navy, and about 6,500 in the Air Force in 1980.

The Armed Forces health professions scholarship program provides a source of commissioned officers for the various health professions. Student enrollment in 1980 will be about 1,714 in the Army, 1,575 in the Navy, and 1,575 in the Air Force.

The Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force provide training for students who elect to enroll in Junior ROTC training at the secondary level of education, and are programed to have 670, 233, 60, and 285 units, respectively, in operation in 1980.

The number of commissioned officers graduated from these programs are summarized below:

This estimate includes funds for the pay of all personnel on the military retired lists for the Department of Defense. The estimate represents the consolidated requirements of the military departments for: (a) payments to retired officers and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force; (b) retainer pay of enlisted personnel of the Fleet Reserve of the Navy and Marine Corps; and (c) survivors' benefits. The primary gains to the retired rolls can be attributed to the greater number of individuals attaining eligibility for retirement after 20 or more years of active military service. The following tabulation shows the average number of personnel on the rolls during 1978 compared with estimated numbers for 1979 and 1980.

AVERAGE NUMBER

Budget estimates for the retired pay program reflect anticipated benefit increases due to the Consumer Price Index (CPI) adjustment mechanism embodied in current law.

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

These appropriations finance the costs of operating and maintaining the Armed Forces, including the Reserve components, and related support activities of the Department of Defense, except military personnel costs. These funds include amounts for pay of civilians, contract services for maintenance of equipment and facilities, fuel, supplies, and repair parts for weapons and equipment. Financial requirements are influenced by many factors, including force levels, such as the number of aircraft squadrons or Army or Marine Corps divisions, military strength and deployments, rates of operational activity, number of installations, and quantity and complexity of major equipment (aircraft, ships, missiles, tanks, et cetera) in operation.

The 1980 budget reflects efficiencies which will offset a portion of anticipated inflation. Significant savings are expected to result from increased competition in Defense purchases and supply system efficiencies, affecting pricing and stockage policies.

ACTIVE FORCES

Funds to operate the Active Forces and their support are contained in five operation and maintenance appropriations, one for each of the four services and one for Defense agencies. The programs covered under this heading are described below:

1. Strategic forces.—Strategic offensive forces include more than 400 manned B-52 and FB-111 bombers and 1,054 ICBM's operated by the Air Force as well as the Navy's submarine missile fleet, which deploys 656 Polaris, Poseidon, and Trident missiles.

Strategic defensive forces consist of interceptor fighter aircraft and various warning, command, and control systems also operated by the Air Force.

2. General purpose forces.—These forces consist of the tactical air forces of the Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps, the ground forces and supporting aircraft elements of the Army and Marine Corps, and Navy combatant and support ships operating under control of the unified or specified commands. These forces are deployed to eastern Asia, the western Pacific, and to Europe in support of NATO commitments; the fleets operating in the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans and the Mediterranean; and active forces in the United States.

Tactical air forces consist of the Air Force tactical air wings, Navy land and carrier based antisubmarine and attack air wings, and Marine air wings. The missions of these forces include air superiority, interdiction bombing, close air support, antisubmarine patrol, reconnaissance, combat crew, readiness, and transition training and special operations. The Navy will continue to deploy the F-14 to partially replace F-4's in the air superiority fleet air defense role; continued production of the F-15, F-16, and A-10 into the Air Force arsenal in 1980 will provide for transfer of F-4 and A-7 weapon systems to the Reserve Forces. The Air Force will continue to fill out their 26-wing structure. Flight training simulator programs will be continued to provide for improved training of aircrews and to reduce energy consumption.

Army land forces consist of infantry, mechanized, armored, airborne, and airmobile divisions as well as force elements needed to support these divisions during the initial stages of combat, along with a limited number of units required for sustained combat support. Emphasis will continue to be placed on increasing combat readiness. Additional combat units will be modernized with the latest equipments and weapons for the conduct of land warfare.

Marine Corps land forces, including combat and service support organizations and supporting units, are designed to conduct amphibious assault operations and other missions with the close support of Marine aviation. The Marine Corps objective in 1980 is maintenance of the Fleet Marine Forces at a high level of combat readiness for service with the fleet, ashore or for other duties as national security may require.

Naval forces include aircraft carriers, submarines, amphibious forces, antisubmarine forces, and anti-air warfare forces. Twenty-five ships will be introduced into the fleet in 1980: one nuclear cruiser, one converted conventional cruiser, three nuclear submarines, eight 963 class destroyers, one amphibious assault ship, five guided missile frigates, two oilers, one destroyer tender, one submarine tender, and two fleet tugs. The addition of those modern vessels will permit continued inactivation of overage and obsolete vessels.

ACTIVE FORCES—Continued

3. Intelligence and communications.—This program comprises the centrally directed Defense intelligence and security function, the major portion of the consolidated telecommunications program (CTP), the National Military Command System, and other special activities which are related to and support the missions of the combat forces in the strategic, general purpose, and airlift/sealift programs. Included in the CTP portion are the Defense Communications System (DCS), common user transmission and switching systems, as well as non-DCS communications. Funds to support intelligence, security, and communications activities are contained in the various appropriations of each of the military services, and, in the case of the Defense Communications Agency, Defense Nuclear Agency, Defense Intelligence Agency, Defense Mapping Agency, Defense Investigative Service, and National Security Agency, in the Defense agencies appropriation. Included among the special activities are Navy oceanographic and weather programs and Air Force weather, air rescue and recovery, and air traffic control and landing system programs.

4. Airlift and sealift.—This program provides air, land, and sea transportation services for all the Armed Forces in peacetime as well as quick reaction strategic mobility and logistical support in wartime. The major commands in this program are the Military Airlift Command of the Air Force, the Military Sealift Command of the Navy, and the Military Traffic Management Command of the Army, all of which are primarily industrially funded operations with costs reimbursed by the users. The operation and maintenance appropriations directly provide for certain administrative and base service support expenses for each of these industrially funded activities.

7. Central supply and maintenance.—This program includes funds for specialized supply and maintenance activities. It provides resources for the determination of inventory levels, procurement of supplies, distribution, depot-level maintenance, and transportation of military materiel. These functions are managed by the military services and conducted at various locations worldwide.

In addition, the Defense Logistics Agency provides common supply and services support to the military services within the continental United States and manages bulk petroleum worldwide. The Agency also manages Defense-owned standby industrial plant equipment, the Defense surplus property disposal program, and the Defense portion of the Federal catalog program. It is also responsible for providing contract administration services, administration and supervision of Department of Defense materiel utilization programs and coordinated procurement programs.

8. Training, medical, and other general personnel activities.—In 1980 the military services plan on acquiring approximately 400,000 new accessions into the Active Forces. Continued success of the All-Volunteer Force will necessitate a strong effort by the recruiting organizations of each service to attract the new personnel required. These new accessions must then be trained in basic military skills, in many occupational skills, and in career fields. Training requirements are also influenced by the total strength of the services, and by the introduction of new equipment and weapons. Most training is conducted at service-operated facilities, such as training centers for the training of new recruits, at technical schools which afford training in specific military occupational skills, and at pilot training bases. Education of prospective officers is accomplished primarily by the three service academies and by Reserve Officer Training Corps units at universities and colleges. The services plan to operate 162 hospitals to provide medical care for active and retired military personnel and for dependents. This program finances a medical program at civilian medical facilities for personnel in areas where service hospitals are not accessible. In addition, this activity provides the resources necessary to operate the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences.

9. Administration and associated activities.—This program includes the costs of departmental administration, major field command headquarters, and general support activities such as finance and audit. Reimbursement to the General Services Administration by the Military Departments for space occupied is also included in this program.

10. Support of other nations.—This program includes military assistance missions, advisory groups for foreign nations, and the U.S. share of NATO, SEATO, and CENTO costs, plus support of U.S. organizations related to these international military headquarters.

- Department of Transportation, Federal Aviation Administration: “Operations, Federal Aviation Administration”.

PROCUREMENT

The procurement appropriations of the Department of Defense finance the acquisition of combat, combat support, and training equipment, to include: aircraft, missiles, ships, tanks, and other vehicles; guns of all sizes, torpedoes, and communications equipment; air, ground and ship munitions; industrial facilities projects; and modification of existing equipment where increased capability can be achieved without buying new equipment. The 1980 program contains a mix of both new and continuing procurement to equip the military forces necessary to meet U.S. national security objectives.

New Army systems funded in 1980 include initial procurement of the Patriot air defense missile, Infantry/Cavalry Fighting Vehicles, Copperhead guided anti-tank artillery projectile, and the General Support Rocket System. Continued weapon system procurement in 1980 includes the Roland air defense missile system, XM-1 main battle tank, Black Hawk utility helicopter, and improved conventional munitions.

Modernization of our naval forces in 1980 includes continued procurement of the F-18 air combat fighter and the F-14 fleet air defense fighter. Also included is continued procurement of the Trident strategic missile and submarine, a nuclear attack submarine, six frigates, a conventionally powered aircraft carrier, and the second ship of the new DDG-47 AEGIS destroyer class.

Significant Air Force programs include continued procurement of the KC-10A advanced tanker/cargo aircraft, F-15 and F-16 air combat fighters, A-10 close air support aircraft, TR-1 tactical reconnaissance aircraft, and the E-3A airborne warning and control system.

The 1980 budget reflects efficiencies which will offset a portion of anticipated inflation. Significant savings are expected to result from increased competition in Defense procurement both at the prime and subcontract levels. Also reflected are savings from supply system efficiencies, affecting pricing, budgeting and stockage policies.

Direct budget programs, including pending supplementals as shown in Part III, are estimated as follows (in thousands of dollars):

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

Programs in this title support the modernization of the Armed Forces through a broad range of activities. In addition to development and testing of full-scale, preproduction hardware, these programs insure that the United States and its allies maintain a distinct technological advantage over potential adversaries through development of prototype hardware, fabrication of technology-demonstration devices and support of military research and exploratory development. This work is performed by industrial contractors, Government laboratories, universities and nonprofit organizations.

Research and development programs are funded such that each year's resources normally support a 1-year increment of activity.

The budget plan for research, development, test and evaluation for 1980 totals $13.5 billion, an increase of $0.7 billion over the proposed 1979 level of $12.8 billion—the $12.3 billion program estimate shown below (in thousands of dollars) plus a supplemental request of $0.5 billion described in Part III.

The 1980 Defense R.D.T. & E. program stresses a strong technology base, a vigorous modernization of our strategic forces and continued development of a number of key tactical programs to support our commitments to our European allies through NATO.

1. Technology base.—This activity is composed of research and exploratory development of technologies which have potential applications for defense, and these efforts involve the physical, mathematical, environmental, engineering, biomedical, and behavioral sciences. The 1980 program proposes real growth of about 10% in research and about 5% in exploratory development to expand the technological lead of the United States over those nations which could pose a threat to U.S. interests.

2. Advanced technology development.—This activity supports more extensive exploration of promising systems alternatives and concepts than that provided by technology-base programs. Efforts for 1980 include programs in aeronautics and propulsion, flight simulation, biomedical sciences, materials and structures, weapons technology, electronics and directed-energy devices.

3. Strategic programs.—This activity insures long-term deterrence of nuclear attacks and threats of nuclear attacks against the United States and our allies. The major increase in funding for development of strategic programs in 1980 reflects the need to maintain the contribution of land-based missile forces to deterrence through a triad of strategic-nuclear forces. Specifically, $670 million is requested for full-scale development of the M-X missile. The sea and air elements of the strategic triad will also receive significant support. Development work will continue on the Trident submarine and Trident I missile, and $41 million is requested for a new, longer-range sea-based missile—the Trident II. Additionally, full-scale development of air-launched cruise missiles will be maintained to improve the deterrent power of U.S. strategic-bomber forces. There will be continued emphasis on space-defense programs and on programs to explore the feasibility of ballistic-missile defense. Also, improvements will be developed for missile-attack warning systems and command and control systems.

4. Tactical programs.—This activity supports the development of combat systems for the general purpose forces (land, sea and air) of the United States and its allies. Major development efforts emphasized in the 1979 R.D.T. & E. program and directed toward the improvement of our defenses against large-scale conventional and theater-nuclear attacks by the Warsaw Pact in Europe will continue. Several of these key programs will transition to production in 1980.

In the land-warfare mission area, the XM-1 tank and the Patriot air-defense-missile system will continue in development during the transition to production. The advanced attack helicopter will continue in development, and, to improve our theater-nuclear deterrence of the Warsaw Pact, the Pershing II missile will also receive major funding emphasis by the Army.

In the air-warfare mission area, the last phases of full-scale development for the F-16 and F-18 air-combat fighters will be conducted by the Air Force and the Navy. Work on an advanced beyond-visual-range air-to-air missile for these aircraft and operational F-14 and F-15 fighters will continue. Intensive work will also be maintained to develop a family of air-to-ground anti-armor weapons to defeat Warsaw Pact tank and motorized-rifle combat forces.

Navy sea control programs will advance development of systems for ocean surveillance, undersea surveillance and combat below the surface, on the surface and in the air. Major Navy programs continuing in development in this area are the LAMPS antisubmarine-warfare helicopter and the Tomahawk antiship cruise missile.

The combat-support mission area funds developments in air mobility, logistics, tactical communications, combat integration, electronic warfare, navigation and physical security. In 1980, the NAVSTAR navigation system will receive major emphasis. Also included are improvements to the Air Force airborne warning and control system (AWACS).

5. Intelligence and communications.—This activity supports improvements to Defense-wide capabilities in intelligence and worldwide communications.

6. Defensewide mission support.—This activity provides funding for support efforts, including Federal contract research centers, ranges and test facilities, and studies and analyses. Also included here is major Defense support for the Space Shuttle.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

The direct military construction programs for the Armed Forces, both Active and Reserve, shown in the individual schedules of this title are summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Active Forces.....	1,546,545	2,055,326	1,813,900
Reserve Forces.....	176,293	168,900	100,000

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM—Continued

Interservice activities.....	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
	136,795	204,132	244,300
Total.....	1,859,633	2,428,358	2,158,200

Most of the appropriations required for the military construction accounts are dependent upon the enactment of authorizing legislation. The details of this legislation have been completed and are being submitted to the Congress for early consideration.

1. Major construction.—This category provides for the acquisition of land and for construction of military projects as authorized in currently effective military construction acts and the new authorization referred to above. These authorizations include construction projects as defined in Department of Defense Directive 7040.2 where the estimated cost of such construction generally exceeds $100 thousand per project. Under this category the major activities proposed are as follows:

Strategic forces.—Provision has been made to upgrade existing facilities and provide for personnel support for strategic warfare systems. Funds also have been provided to continue to support the Trident weapons system.

General purpose forces.—Projects in this category support general combat forces including their command organizations, the logistics organizations organic to these forces, and the related support units, including medical, which are deployed as constituent parts of military forces and field organizations.

Specialized activities.—Funding for abatement of air and water pollution at defense installations is continued to assure that actions to correct violations of Federal, State, and local air and water quality standards have been taken or are underway. Funding is also provided to continue the ongoing energy conservation investment program to assure that energy saving features are included not only in new construction but, where economically practical, are added to existing facilities and utility systems.

Research and development.—This program includes facilities in support of programs to advance knowledge and technology in such areas as weapons systems, communications, electronics, and medicine. These programs emphasize the search for improved capabilities in the Armed Forces.

Personnel support.—Funds are provided for improved housing, medical, and community support facilities to encourage retention of personnel in the service and the development of an All-Volunteer Force. Upgrading of existing facilities with the application of improved standards has been provided in addition to new construction.

Reserve components.—The funding levels programmed are for facilities required for the training of National Guard and the other Reserve Forces identified as the primary source of augmentation of Active forces in future emergencies.

Interservice activities.—This category includes funds for: construction of facilities for the Defense agencies, which provide common-service support to the military departments in such areas as logistics, intelligence, mapping and nuclear technology; construction of facilities to support selected activities which do not fall under the purview of the Defense agencies, but nonetheless serve requirements of more than one military service, such as the overseas dependent school program and certain operational and research functions; and commencing in 1979, the U.S. share of the NATO infrastructure program, a collectively financed program which provides military facilities required to support the deployment and operation of NATO military forces, including U.S. forces committed to NATO. Prior to 1979, NATO Infrastructure was funded in the active forces program.

2. Minor construction.—Pursuant to authority provided under 10 U.S.C. 2674, and the annual military construction authorization acts, funding is provided for projects not otherwise authorized by law, and for which the individual project cost does not exceed $500 thousand. This program includes projects at specified locations for which the need is known, and lump sum amounts for exigent construction to provide for essential, but unforeseen construction needs which may emerge during the year.

3. Planning.—This provides for necessary planning of military construction projects, including design, standards, criteria, studies, appraisals, and other related activities.

4. Supporting activities.—Provision is made for activities such as the defense access road program and minor land acquisition.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE STOCK FUNDS

Department of Defense stock funds finance the purchase of consumable materials for resale to the military services and other authorized customers (10 U.S.C. 2208). These inventories are stocked at various Defense activities. Consumable mobilization reserve materials are also purchased through the stock funds.

Budget program.—Obligations increase in 1980 over 1979 due to projected price increases and larger procurement lead times. Increases in inventory value due to price increases, lead times, and procurement of mobilization reserve stocks will be offset in 1980 by disposal of excess stocks. Other efforts will improve pricing and inventory stockage policies, as shown below (millions of dollars):

Financing the budget program.—The budget program is financed from sales to customers. Gross expenditures in 1980 are projected to be lower than in 1979 as a result of the reduced procurement of crude oil for the Department of Energy. Estimated expenditures are shown below (in millions of dollars):

	Gross expenditures
	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Army stock fund .....	3,508	4,086	4,112
Navy stock fund .....	2,686	2,949	2,955
Marine Corps stock fund.....	222	256	254
Air Force stock fund.....	5,346	5,766	6,023
Defense stock fund.....	6,488	8,675	8,066
Total Department of Defense stock funds ...	18,250	21,732	21,410

Procurement leadtime for material acquisition is greater than the time required to fill and collect customers' orders. As a result, Department of Defense stock funds are authorized to incur obligations in anticipation of future years' sales (10 U.S.C. 2210(b)). Pursuant to this authority, contract authority of $1,976 million was available at the end of 1978, estimated to decrease to $1,850 million in 1979 and $1,737 million in 1980.

Operating results and financial conditions.—Revenue and expenses for 1979 and 1980 are projected on a break-even basis. It is estimated that by the end of 1980, investment (equity) of the U.S. Government will be $14,524 million, including $14,992 million in inventory and other assets capitalized, and a cumulative operating deficit of $468 million.

INDUSTRIAL FUNDS

Department of Defense industrial funds finance various Defense activities that perform industrial or commercial type functions on a reimbursable basis (10 U.S.C. 2208). Workload at these activities is generated by orders from various customers who provide reimbursement through progress payments for the full cost of the work performed. This enables the industrial funds to maintain the level of working capital needed for continued operations. Government investment as of September 30, 1980, is estimated at $507 million.

Budget program.—The policy of stabilizing the rates charged to customers will continue. Estimated total costs of goods and services produced in 1980 are projected to increase by $567 million, reflecting an increase in support requirements. Yearend totals are shown in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

	TOTAL PRODUCTION COSTS
	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Army industrial fund.....	2,214,917	2,353,935	2,301,751
Navy industrial fund.....	7,006,528	7,638,253	8,003,914

Total.....	12,482,609	13,722,547	14,289,411

The U.S. Army activities financed through the Army industrial fund include depot supply and maintenance operations, research and development, arsenals, and technical engineering, the U.S. Army Missile Materiel Readiness Command and the eastern and western areas of the Military Traffic Management Command. The increase in cost of goods and services produced in 1980 reflects a continued expanded depot maintenance program for the Army to reduce accumulated backlogs.

The Navy industrial fund finances a variety of activities, including aircraft maintenance facilities, ordnance stations, research laboratories, shipyards, strategic systems project offices, printing plants, public works centers, and the Military Sealift Command. Workload at the industrially funded facilities is projected to remain relatively stable in 1979 and 1980.

The Marine Corps industrial fund finances maintenance depots engaged in repairing or overhauling Marine Corps equipment and providing technical engineering support. The increase in costs and services in 1980 reflects continued emphasis to accelerate the depot maintenance programs to reduce backlogs and to increase services being provided to customers.

The activities financed under the Air Force industrial fund include printing plants, laundries, depot maintenance activities, real property maintenance facility, and the Military Airlift Command. The increase in the costs of goods and services produced in 1980 results from higher in-house operating costs, increased contractual service costs, and continued emphasis to reduce the depot maintenance backlog.

The Defense industrial fund finances the Defense Clothing and Textile Center and leased communications procured by the Defense Commercial Communications Office.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

SEC. 101. Funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for construction in prior years are hereby made available for construction authorized for each such department by the authorizations enacted into law during the [second] first session of the Ninety-[fifth] sixth Congress.

SEC. 102. None of the funds appropriated in this Act shall be expended for payments under a cost-plus-a-fixed-fee contract for work, where cost estimates exceed $25,000, to be performed within the United States, except Alaska, without the specific approval in writing of the Secretary of Defense setting forth the reasons therefor.

SEC. 103. None of the funds appropriated in this Act shall be expended for additional costs involved in expediting construction unless the Secretary of Defense certifies such costs to be necessary to protect the national interest and establishes a reasonable completion date for each project, taking into consideration the urgency of the requirement, the type and location of the project, the climatic and seasonal conditions affecting the construction, and the application of economical construction practices.

SEC. 104. None of the funds appropriated in this Act shall be used for the construction, replacement, or reactivation of any bakery, laundry, or drycleaning facility in the United States, its territories, or possessions, as to which the Secretary of Defense does not certify, in writing, giving his reasons therefor, that the services to be furnished by such facilities are not obtainable from commercial sources at reasonable rates.

SEC. 105. Funds herein appropriated to the Department of Defense for construction shall be available for hire of passenger motor vehicles.

SEC. 106. Funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for construction may be used for advances to the Federal Highway Administration, Department of Transportation, for the construction of access roads as authorized by section 210 of title 23, United States Code, when projects authorized therein are certified as important to the national defense by the Secretary of Defense.

SEC. 107. None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used to begin construction of new bases inside the continental United States for which specific appropriations have not been made.

SEC. 108. No part of the funds provided in this Act shall be used for purchase of land or land easements in excess of 100 per centum of the value as determined by the Corps of Engineers or the Naval Facilities Engineering Command, except: (a) where there is a determination of value by a Federal court, or (b) purchases negotiated by the Attorney General or his designee, or (c) where the estimated value is less than $25,000, or (d) as otherwise determined by the Secretary of Defense to be in the public interest.

SEC. 109. None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used to make payments under contracts for any project in a foreign country unless the Secretary of Defense or his designee, after consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury or his designee, certifies to the Congress that the use, by purchase from the Treasury, of currencies of such country acquired pursuant to law is not feasible for the purpose, stating the reason therefor.

SEC. 110. None of the funds appropriated in this Act shall be used to (1) acquire land, (2) provide for site preparation, or (3) install utilities for any family housing, except housing for which funds have been made available in annual military construction appropriation Acts.

1. Surveys.—(a) Navigation, flood damage prevention, and shoreline protection studies are made to determine the need, economic justification, and the environmental and social suitability of solutions to water and related land resource problems. The budget request includes funds for continuation of 167 studies, of which 36 will be completed, and an additional 18 interim reports will also be completed. Funds are also requested to initiate three new high priority studies. No funds are requested for continuation of 51 lower priority studies, which were funded in prior years.

(b) Comprehensive river basin studies provide for consideration of the water and related land resource needs of river basins. They are coordinated with the river basin planning efforts of other Federal agencies and non-Federal interests.

(c) Special studies are made to resolve unique or complex water resource problems. The following 12 special studies will continue: (1) Chesapeake Bay, (2) diversion of Lake Michigan water at Chicago, (3) Great Lakes, St. Lawrence Seaway navigation season extension, (4) Great River resource management study, (5) hydro-power resources study, (6) Lake Erie waste-water management, (7) Long Island Sound dredged material containment study, (8) Metropolitan Washington, D.C., water supply, (9) national waterway study, (10) Passamaquoddy tidal power study, (11) Tennessee-Tombigbee waterway urban study, and (12) water levels of the Great Lakes. The Carlyle-Lake Shelbyville special study will be initiated.

(d) Phase I studies, authorized only for the phase I stage of advance engineering and design, provide additional information and recommendations on plans for which the preliminary feasibility and desirability have been established, but which require additional investigation. The budget request includes funds for continuation of 23 phase I studies, of which 7 will be completed. Funds are also requested to initiate two high priority studies. No funds are requested for continuation of two lower priority studies, which were funded in prior years.

(e) Funds are requested to review the operation of four completed projects because significant changes in physical and/or economic conditions have occurred. Five studies will be continued and 20 studies initiated of authorized projects prior to submissions of requests for deauthorization. The restudy of Fort Scott Lake, Kans., and Hanalei Bay Small Boat Harbor, Hawaii, will be initiated.

(f) Coordination studies with Federal, State, and local agencies and interests give appropriate consideration to present and future requirements for all beneficial uses of water and related resources, including navigation, flood damage prevention, water supply, irrigation, water quality control, wastewater management, power, recreation, bank and shoreline protection, and fish and wildlife conservation.

Collection and study of basic data.—(a) Flood plain management services.—Funds are used to prepare and provide information on flood hazards, advice, and technical assistance requested by States, local government agencies, and by other Federal agencies for guidance in the management of flood plain areas. (b) National program of inspection of dams.—Inspection and evaluation will be made of potentially high-hazard non-Federal dams where adequate inspections have not been previously performed and to verify and update the National Inventory of Dams. Inspections were completed on 1,973 dams during 1978. In 1979 approximately 2,500 additional dams will be inspected and inspection of another 3,000 dams will be undertaken in 1980.

(c) Other programs.—Stream gaging funds are transferred to the U.S. Geological Survey for all, or part, of the cost of operation and maintenance of about 2,400 stream gaging stations which are of specific interest to the civil works mission. Precipitation studies funds are transferred to the National Weather Service for hydrometeorological studies used by the Corps in planning, design, and operation of various types of water resources projects. International waters studies comprise engineering studies on northern boundary waters, to assist the U.S. Government in meeting treaty commitments between the United States and Canada. Hydrologic studies, not chargeable to authorized projects or studies, develop information on rainfall-runoff relationships, flood frequency, snow melt, flood forecasting, analysis of past storms and floods, sedimentation, and other related hydrologic data. Four scientific and technical information centers acquire, examine, evaluate, and disseminate newly published scientific and technical information. Coastal field data collection comprises collection and evaluation of long-term statistical data on coastal conditions, including wave climate, the location and quantity of sand resources, erosion and accretion rates, and other historical data on shoreline changes and conditions. Transportation systems funds are for the operation and updating of the Corps of Engineers inland navigation systems analysis program, which is a system of models and data files used to maximize the efficient operation and use of inland waterways, and to improve the planning for their future maintenance and improvement.

3. Research and development.—These investigations are conducted to improve the Corps capability to execute the civil works program. The objectives are to maximize effectiveness, economy, and safety, with due regard for protecting and enhancing the environment. The current program includes investigations relating to: construction materials, structural engineering, electrical and mechanical engineering; coastal engineering; flood control and navigation, locks and dams, improvement of operation and maintenance techniques, hydrology of cold regions, and ice engineering; environmental quality, including environmental impact and wastewater management; water resources planning studies, including planning methodologies, analytical techniques for water resources management, recreation, and flood plain management; and testing and evaluation of earth resources satellite applications to civil works activities.

The requested appropriation is $1,775 million including $379 million for full funding of nine new construction starts and $3 million for seven advance engineering and design starts. Seven of the nine new construction starts are flood control, local protection projects. The other two consist of a harbor extension project and a reservoir with flood control and water supply storage.

1. Advance engineering and design.—Design studies establish project features and cost estimates required for preparation of contract plans. Sixty-eight projects will be funded, of which 20 will be completed.

2. Navigation projects.—This activity includes improvement of channels and harbors by dredging and construction of breakwaters, jetties, and dikes; construction of locks, dams, and canals; and mitigation of shore damages attributable to navigation projects. Work will be continued on 36 channel and harbor projects, and on 11 lock, dam, and canal projects, including resumption of construction of Locks and Dam 26, at Alton, Ill.

Work will be completed on 8 channel and harbor projects, and on 1 lock, dam, and canal project.

3. Beach erosion control projects.—The Federal Government participates in the cost of restoring and protecting shores against erosion by waves and currents. Work will continue on five projects, including reimbursement to non-Federal interests on two projects.

4. Flood control projects.—Local protection projects consist of channel improvements, levees, floodwalls, emergency streambank and shoreline protection, and small snagging and clearing work on navigable streams and tributaries. Work will be continued on 66 local protection projects, and on 42 reservoir projects. Six local protection projects and 4 reservoir projects will be completed.

5. Multiple-purpose power projects.—Construction will continue on 22 hydroelectric projects, of which 3 will be completed. In 1980, 6 power units with a generating capacity of 160 megawatts will be brought on line.

6. Rehabilitation.—Rehabilitation work is undertaken on existing projects that have deteriorated to the extent that their usefulness has been impaired. Work will be initiated on 4 projects and continued on 14 projects. Three projects will be completed.

7. Recreation facilities at completed projects.—$17 million is requested for projects to be developed under a policy requiring local cost-sharing comparable to that now required for the recreation facilities of all new projects. $9 million is requested to remedy sanitary deficiencies at completed projects.

8. Streambank erosion control evaluation and demonstration.—A national streambank erosion prevention and control demonstration program in accordance with section 32 of Public Law 93-51 is underway.

9. Shoreline erosion control demonstration.—A national shoreline erosion control demonstration program in accordance with section 54 of Public Law 93-251 is underway.

10. Aquatic plant control.—This program is for the control and progressive eradication of water hyacinths, alligator weed, Eurasian watermilfoil, and other obnoxious aquatic plants from navigable waters. The authority includes research to develop the most effective and economic control measures.

11. Employees compensation.—Reimbursement to the Employees' compensation fund, on account of injuries or death of employees or persons, in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 785.

1. Navigation projects.—Operation and maintenance will be carried out on 274 channel and harbor projects and on 34 lock and dam projects. It is estimated that 300 million cubic yards of material will be dredged.

2. Flood control projects.—249 flood control reservoirs and 21 local protection projects will be operated and maintained. In 1980, over 523 million recreation days of use are estimated at completed projects. The requested funds will provide $6 million for research to develop improved design and operational procedures to meet environmental and water quality objectives while maintaining authorized project purposes. The $8.1 million in the dam safety assurance program will provide for the study and planning to improve safety and adequacy of completed Corps dams in light of present-day engineering standards and knowledge.

3. Multiple-purpose power projects.—Seventy-one multiple-purpose projects will be operated and maintained with a scheduled capacity of approximately 19 million kilowatts. These projects will provide approximately 4% of the electrical energy produced nationally in 1980.

4. Protection of navigation.—Under laws for the protection and preservation of navigable waters including adjacent wetlands, regulations are established and permits granted for activities and structures affecting navigable waters. Approximately 20,000 applications will be processed.

This activity provides for flood emergency preparation, flood fighting and rescue operations, and repair of flood control and Federal hurricane or shore protection works. It also provides for emergency supplies of clean drinking water where the source has been contaminated and, in drought distressed areas, provision of adequate supplies of water for human and livestock consumption. Carryover funds are considered adequate to finance operations in the budget year. A supplemental request would be made in event of major emergency.
