Certain costs of maintaining air navigation facilities, formerly 100% financed from the general fund, are to be reimbursed to the Operations appropriation from the Airport and airway trust fund. The programs funded are limited to the direct costs of flight checking and maintaining air navigation facilities. The expected level of 1980 trust fund receipts will permit a partial payment of these costs as well as the costs of airport development, airway facilities investment, and research programs without drawing on accumulated prior year balances.

The administration will propose legislation to increase significantly the level of trust funds allocated to cover operations and maintenance expenses of the Federal Aviation Administration. During the 1981-85 time period, $8 billion will be proposed for these operational and maintenance activities.

FEDERAL HIGHWAY ADMINISTRATION

Title 23 U.S.C. ("Highways") and other supporting legislation provide authority for the various programs of the Federal Highway Administration designed to improve highways throughout the Nation.

In summary, the 1980 budget contemplates $8,553.9 million in obligations and $7,230.0 million in outlays. The following table compares 1980 program level (obligations) with those of prior years (in millions of dollars). The budget increases largely result from enactment of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1978.

The motor carrier safety mission is to reduce the risk of accidents in truck and bus highway safety transportation by regulation of motor carriers engaged in interstate commerce. In 1980, efforts will be made to implement fully the revised hazardous materials regulatory program, increase noise control, and provide knowledge to improve safety regulation of interstate trucks and buses, consistent with the Government-wide effort of regulatory reform. A $3 million motor carrier safety demonstration program will be continued in 1980. This program provides assistance to selected States for upgrading their enforcement efforts. An increase is proposed for additional Federal enforcement action through the hiring of 45 additional full-time and part-time personnel.

This appropriation provides grant assistance for projects initiated pursuant to the provisions of the Highway Beautification Act of 1965, together with the Federal-Aid Highway Acts of 1968 and 1970, as amended. Activities funded include junkyard screening and removal, control of commercial advertising along highways, and program administration.

A recent General Accounting Office report indicates that "In light of the problems and limited progress by most States in removing nonconforming signs, it appears that the objectives of the Highway Beautification Act will not be accomplished in the near future." Enactment of the new Surface Transportation Assistance Act has created further problems for the beautification program. The requirement for just compensation for billboard removal is extended to signs that are removed pursuant to local ordinances, thus interjecting Federal requirements into an area that is not its proper province. Electronic signs that previously were not permitted will now be allowed. Last, it is the expressed congressional intent that the Department adopt a more compliant attitude to State-requested exemptions from billboard removal policies.

In light of these developments, the Department is launching a comprehensive review of the outdoor advertising program to determine how and if the program can be successfully continued. Pending completion of this study, no additional funding is proposed for the program.

The United States, in cooperation with the Republic of Panama and the Government of Columbia, is participating in the construction of approximately 250 miles of highway through the Darien Gap—an incomplete link in the Inter-American Highway. The Congress rejected requests for funds in both 1978 and 1979.

No appropriation is being requested for 1980.

Grants are authorized by 23 U.S.C. 215(a) and section 104(a)(11) of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1978 to assist the territorial governments of the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa and the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas Islands in the improvement of their highway systems. Assistance is provided for an arterial highway system, and necessary interisland connectors, as designated by each governor and approved by the Secretary of Transportation.

Under the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1978, the four governments are now also eligible for funding from the hazard elimination and highway-related safety grants programs. A program level of $6.6 million (including the safety programs) is anticipated in 1980, approximately the same as in 1979, for the territorial highways program.

Select projects are authorized for the purpose of protecting, eliminating, relocating, or otherwise modifying ground-level rail-highway crossings.

1. Railroad-highway crossings.—This program provides for demonstration projects in 19 cities. The planned program levels in 1979 and 1980 will utilize all unobligated balances of appropriated funds and will allow for completion of preliminary engineering on most projects as well as some right-of-way acquisition and construction. Unobligated balances of $20 million are expected to be available for programing in 1980.

2. Rail crossings.—This program provides for demonstration projects along the route of the Northeast corridor rail line between Washington, D.C., and Boston, Mass., and in and around Greenwood, S.C. 1980 funding required for this program is provided under the Northeast corridor improvement program administered by the Federal Railroad Administration through authorizations contained in the Surface Transportation Act of 1978.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1973 authorized the construction and reconstruction of the Great River Road by the 10 States bordering the Mississippi River. A single continuous two-lane route has been tentatively designated which will run from Lake Itasca, Minn., to Venice, La. Program levels for 1979 and 1980 will focus on preliminary engineering, environmental studies, reconstruction and rehabilitation of existing road segments, roadside rest areas, acquisition of areas of archeological, scientific, or historical importance, and necessary easements for scenic purposes.

The 1973 Federal-Aid Highway Act authorized $58.67 million for the reconstruction of the Alaska Highway from the Alaskan border to Haines Junction, Canada, and the Haines Cutoff Highway from Haines Junction to the south Alaskan border. Total program costs are now estimated to be about $180 million. No appropriation is being requested for 1980 because the benefits from construction of the highway accrue primarily to one State—Alaska.

The Federal-Aid Highway Amendments of 1974 and the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1976 authorized three programs for the improvement of roads off the Federal-aid highway system.

1. Off-system roads.—The Federal-Aid Highway Amendments of 1974 provided for construction, reconstruction, and improvement of roads not on the Federal-aid highway system. This program was superseded by the Safer off-system roads program.

2. Safer off-system roads.—This program is for construction, reconstruction, and improvement of any off-system road, and is to include correction of safety hazards, replacement of bridges, and elimination of high-hazard locations and roadside obstacles.

3. Off-system railway-highway crossings.—This program is for the elimination of hazards of railroad-highway crossings on roads other than those on any Federal-aid highway system. Projects include crossing separation, relocation, and/or installation of gates or flashing lights.

No funds are being sought for this account in 1980 for several reasons. First, increased Federal highway funding assistance is provided in other accounts. This is shown by the fact that the total highway program level is proposed to increase from $7.6 billion in 1978, to $8.1 billion in 1979, to $8.6 billion in 1980, and the Federal matching share for many programs has been increased from 70% to 75%. Second, Federal assistance for construction of off-system roads is included in several other FHWA appropriations. For example, in the Federal-aid highway account, funds for Pavement Marking, Railway-Highway Crossings, and Bridge Replacement and Rehabilitation may be used off-system.

The Federal-Aid Highway Amendments of 1974 authorized a program to construct or reconstruct access highways to public recreation areas on lakes in order to accommodate present and projected traffic density.

The appropriation received for 1979 will fully fund the 19 projects authorized by the Congress. Therefore, no new budget authority is requested for 1980. Funds for additional projects of this nature are available in the Federal-aid highways program which is national in scope and available to all States on an equitable basis. $8.5 million of unobligated balances are anticipated to be available for programming in 1980.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1976 authorized $100 million for the construction and reconstruction of any public highway bridge across any Federal public works project where there has been a substantial change in the requirements and cost of such highway or bridge since the public works project was authorized, and where such increased costs would work an undue hardship upon any one State. A program level of $14 million is planned for 1980, utilizing the entire $100 million authorized and thereby completing the program.

Financial assistance is made available to States for construction and improvements on the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways and for urban and rural transportation programs. The Federal Government pays 90% of the costs for interstate projects. The Federal share of most other Federal-aid projects was 70%, but the 1978 Highway Act increased it to 75%. The Federal share of project costs is higher than 75% in those States with large areas of public domain.

1. Interstate system.—As of September 30, 1978, 39,135 miles of the 42,500-mile system were open to traffic. In addition to assistance for construction and improvement of Interstate segments, provision is made for resurfacing, restoring, and rehabilitating older parts of the system. At State and local option, authorizations for nonessential segments deleted from the system may be utilized for improvements on bus and rail transportation systems or on other highway systems. The Federal-aid Highway Act of 1978 changed the period of fund availability to 2 years at which time unobligated balances will become discretionary for the purpose of accelerating the construction of the Interstate System.

2. Rural and small urban area transportation programs.—Provides financial assistance to States for highway construction, reconstruction, and related planning and research on the primary, secondary, and urban systems in rural and small urban areas (with populations of 50,000 or less). A portion of the financial assistance will be for projects to resurface, restore, and rehabilitate primary and secondary highways. Assistance is also provided for forest and public lands highways.

3. Urbanized area transportation programs.—Provides financial assistance to States for highway construction, reconstruction, and related planning and research on the urban system in urbanized areas (with populations of more than 50,000). Financial assistance may also be utilized for bus and other mass transportation related facilities.

4. Bridge program.—Provides financial assistance to States for projects designed to replace or rehabilitate structurally deficient bridges which are hazardous to the safety of motorists.

5. Construction safety programs.—Provides financial assistance to States for safety improvements to the highway systems. Programs that may be pursued include: (1) a safety improvement program (which includes projects for eliminating hazards and roadside obstacles), (2) pavement marking demonstration projects, and (3) rail-highway crossings.

6. Administration and research.—Provides for executive and general administrative and research expenses of Federal-aid highways. These funds are expended under the Limitation on general operating expenses.

7. Other.—Provides for emergency relief and bridges over Federal dams.

Allowable net obligations under the Federal-aid highways obligation limitation will be approximately $8.6 billion for both 1979 and 1980, including the highway emergency relief program (see "General Provisions"). Nevertheless, consistent with experience of the past 3 years, it is likely that States will again fall short of obligating all the funds allowed within the limitation. Obligations of $7.6 billion are estimated for 1979 and $8.4 billion for 1980—$1.0 billion and $0.2 billion short of the obligation limitation, respectively. However, all authorized funds are being apportioned to the States and may be obligated, without Federal constraints, to the levels authorized within the annual limitations.

1. Program direction and coordination.—(a) Provides overall direction and coordination of the highway transportation program; (b) provides legal services for all programs; (c) develops and administers programs for continuing audit of claims against Federal funds and a thorough investigation of alleged irregularities; (d) plans and directs public affairs programs; and (e) develops, recommends policies and standards, and reassures compliance with the civil rights and equal opportunity procedures within the Federal Highway Administration and by recipients of grants-in-aid administered by the Federal Highway Administration.

2. General program support.—(a) Formulates policy, multiyear and long-range plans and goals for highway programs and develops data and analyses for current and long-range programming; (b) conducts direct and contract research and development relating to traffic operations, new construction techniques, and the social and environmental aspects of highways; (c) provides administrative support services for all elements of the Federal Highway Administration; and (d) provides on-the-job training for employees of the Federal Highway Administration and training opportunities for highway-related personnel.

3. Highway programs.—(a) Provides engineering guidance to Federal and State agencies and to foreign governments, and conducts a program to encourage use of modern traffic engineering procedures to increase the vehicle-carrying capacity of existing highways and urban streets; (b) assists States, other Federal agencies, and certain foreign countries in right-of-way acquisition and develops procedures for highway location selection and consideration of environmental impacts; and (c) finances construction skill training programs for disadvantaged workers hired by contractors on federally aided highway projects.

4. Field operations.—(a) Provides staff advisory and support services in field offices of the Federal Highway Administration, and (b) provides program and engineering supervision of the several highway programs through 9 regional and 52 division offices.

Major new elements of this program in 1980 include: (1) an additional $5.6 million for completion of an expanded surface transportation research and development facility at Langley, Va.; (2) an additional $1.0 million for skill training of minorities for employment in the highway construction industry; and (3) an additional $1.0 million for a program to reduce "red tape" in interstate trucking.

Consistent with Government-wide efforts to trim Federal employment, FHWA employment attributable to this account will decrease from 3,839 work-years in 1979 to 3,769 work-years in 1980.

The Highway Safety Act of 1970 authorized grants to States and communities for implementing and maintaining highway-related safety standards. Funding was one-third Federal funds and two-thirds highway trust funds. The Highway Safety Act of 1975 and the Highway Safety Act of 1978 provided additional authorizations which were entirely trust funded and extended grant eligibility to Indian reservations and the four U.S. territories. Funds for the territories are included in the Territorial Highways account.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1970 authorized $65 million for the reconstruction of the federally owned section of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway to six lanes. Following reconstruction, the highway will be transferred to the State of Maryland and placed on the Federal-aid primary system.

The 1979 program level of $1.8 million will complete environmental and preliminary design studies and begin some right-of-way acquisition. The projects are

This account reimburses certain parent accounts financed from general funds of the Treasury for the Highway trust fund portion of costs in carrying out the following programs:

1. National scenic and recreational highway.—The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1973 authorized the construction and reconstruction of the Great River Road by the 10 States bordering the Mississippi River. A single continuous route has been tentatively designated which will run from Lake Itasca in Minnesota to Venice, La. The requested appropriation of $8.5 million, combined with 1979 unobligated balances, will provide for a $37.5 million program in 1980.

2. Railroad-highway crossings demonstration projects.—Various legislation authorized demonstration projects in 19 cities for the purpose of protecting or eliminating certain public ground-level rail-highway crossings, relocating railroad lines from central areas, and the construction of overpasses and underpasses.

3. Rail crossings—demonstration projects.—The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1970 authorized two demonstration projects. One project is to eliminate public ground-level rail-highway crossings along the route of the Northeast corridor high-speed rail line between Washington, D.C., and Boston, Mass. The other project is to eliminate or protect certain rail-highway crossings in the vicinity of Greenwood, S.C., and to relocate rail lines bisecting the town proper.

4. Rural highway public transportation demonstration program.—The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1973 authorized demonstration projects for encouraging the development, improvement, and use of public mass transit systems operating vehicles within rural areas.

This appropriation, established in 1975, seeks to identify, correct, and evaluate those critical elements that contribute to loss of life, disabling injuries, and property damage on American highways. The emphasis of research is to provide workable and timely solutions to a set of critical safety problems. A program level of $9.5 million is planned for 1980 to meet the increasing demands for solutions to urgent safety problems such as traffic management in construction and maintenance zones and new longer range initiatives in safety hardware, driver aids, and measuring system performance.

Funds appropriated for this account are transferred to the General operating expenses limitation where the program is administered in conjunction with other research and development programs of the Federal Highway Administration.

The Federal-Aid Highway Amendments of 1974 authorized 70% Federal grant assistance for reconstruction or replacement of 37 two-lane bridges on the Overseas Highway. This 110-mile highway is the ground transportation link between Key West and Key Largo in the State of Florida.

By agreement with the State of Florida, the 1979 appropriation of $87.1 million completes funding for this program.

It is estimated that all $30 million appropriated through 1978 will be obligated by the end of that year, and no further funding is requested. Activities authorized through this account are also authorized expenses within the Federal-aid highways account.

3. Intermodal urban demonstration project.—Section 124 of the Federal-Aid Highway Amendments of 1974 authorized not to exceed $53 million for a demonstration project for construction of a high-density urban highway intermodal transportation connection between Franklin Avenue and 59th Street South, in Minneapolis, Minn.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1968 authorized $300 million for the establishment of a right-of-way revolving fund. This fund is utilized to make cash advances to the States for the purpose of purchasing right-of-way parcels in advance of highway construction and thereby preventing the inflation of land prices from causing a significant increase in construction costs.

The initial legislation for this program required the States to construct the highway and reimburse the revolving fund within seven years from the date of the advance. The 1973 Highway Act extended the required time limit on construction to 10 years and the 1976 Highway Act extended the time limit indefinitely, if deemed necessary by the Secretary.

In 1980, obligations will be made to the extent of States reimbursements to the revolving fund.

1. Rulemaking programs.—Covers rulemaking activity relative to the promulgation of Federal motor vehicle safety standards for new and used motor vehicles, tires, and equipment; automotive fuel economy standards required by the Energy Policy and Conservation Act; and programs requiring economic bumpers withstanding low-speed collisions, automobile ratings, diagnostic inspection, and odometer regulation.

2. Enforcement programs.—Provides for the enforcement of programs described under the rulemaking activity, including manufacturer compliance with motor vehicle safety and automotive fuel economy standards, investigation of safety related motor vehicle defects, and surveillance of odometer tampering.

3. Highway safety programs.—This activity provides for headquarters and field staff to assist the States in the conduct of their highway safety programs through program guidance, technical assistance and evaluation. Demonstration projects are conducted to show effectiveness of new techniques in operational environments and attain widespread acceptance and adoption of these new techniques and countermeasures. Training courses and materials are developed for use in the States.

4. Research and analysis.—This activity provides for research and development in support of all NHTSA programs, including the collection and analysis of data to determine the relationship between motor vehicle and driver performance characteristics and crashes causing death or personal injury. Provision is also made for facilities required to furnish scientific and technical bases for motor vehicle standards, and to do limited compliance testing and defects investigation. The 1980 budget includes funds to continue the development of a national accident data collection program to improve problem identification, rulemaking support, and program evaluation activities.

5. General administration.—This activity provides for overall executive direction, coordination, and implementation of agency programs, except for mission-oriented support activities which are included in the respective program areas. Basic administrative and support requirements for all safety programs are also provided in this category.

Under the State and community highway safety program, Federal grants are provided to assist the States and their political subdivisions in the establishment and improvement of their highway safety programs. A total of $175 million is planned for this highway safety program in 1980, compared to $172 million for 1979.

1. Basic grants program.—Allocation of grants is determined on the basis of statutory formula. Incorporated programs include driver licensing, motor vehicle registration, traffic records, police traffic services, driver education and schoolbus driver training. Individual States are utilizing this funding in areas which have the greatest potential for achieving safety improvements and reducing traffic fatalities and accidents at the State and local level. Activities are centered largely in efforts that will: control the drinking driver; increase the intensity of traffic law enforcement; improve the quality and availability of emergency medical services; and improve program management. Total obligations for all encompassed activities, including Federal grant administration, are estimated at $135 million for 1980.

2. Special programs.—Again in 1980 it is proposed that funds be specifically dedicated to programs of special importance, such as enforcement of the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit, based on criteria established by the Secretary. It is estimated that $40 million will be obligated for 55 mile-per-hour enforcement in 1980.

In 1980, productivity increases are anticipated in legal services programs with emphasis on reducing the backlog of safety violations and increasing the amount of fines collected.

2. Administration.—Provides for salaries and related expenses associated with day-to-day operations of the Federal Railroad Administration. The Office of Administration includes the Offices of Personnel and Training,

1. Federal enforcement.—Provides for salaries and related expenses of safety field operations and is designed to motivate the railroads to comply with Federal safety laws and regulations to reduce the number of railroad related accidents/incidents. Monitoring of the railroads is accomplished through the use of Federal inspectors. Locomotive and car inspections will remain at approximately the same level as in 1979; track and hazardous material inspections will increase slightly.

2. Automated track inspection program.—Enhances the Federal enforcement effort by providing inspection of track and associated components through the use of automated track inspection vehicles. In 1980 these vehicles will monitor track geometry and rail flaws on about 76,000 miles of track.

3. Safety regulations and program administration.—Includes salaries and related expenses of safety headquarters personnel together with data gathering and dissemination and planning and evaluation activities. The ongoing responsibility of this program is to develop and subsequently issue new or revised standards, procedures, and regulations as necessary to provide a safer railroad operating and working environment.

4. Grants-in-aid for railroad safety.—Assists States in paying salaries and expenses incurred for State safety inspectors authorized under section 206 of the Railroad Safety Act of 1970. In 1980, 100 State inspectors will aid the Federal Railroad Administration in enforcement of Federal safety standards.

1. Track, equipment and personnel safety.—The objective of this program is to plan and conduct research that will ultimately improve the safety of train operations and other activities related to railroad vehicles.

2. Railroad operational improvements.—This program is utilized to identify and evaluate improvements in the area of freight operations. Specific areas addressed include service reliability, fuel efficiencies, labor/management relations, and classification yard problems.

3. Improved passenger systems.—Functions of this program include evaluation of train technology; development of performance requirements for intercity passenger equipment and components; updating and advancement of technology for wayside electrification and vehicle traction; and conducting of limited studies of advanced, nonconventional systems in high pay-off areas.

4. Transportation test center.—This is a research and development facility, located at Pueblo, Colo. The center is operated in support of the Department of Transportation and other government agencies and is available to elements of private industry on a reimbursable basis.

5. Policy support.—This office is responsible for development of policies that assist railroads, labor and shippers in identifying and overcoming various problems. Through data collection, special studies and regulatory analysis, the Federal Railroad Administration can identify and keep abreast of problems confronting the industry, develop effective programs and policies responsive to national transportation needs, and monitor the implementation of legislation.

The State rail assistance program, is designed to provide financing assistance to States for rail planning and for: (1) rail service continuation payments; (2) the cost of purchasing a line of railroad or other rail properties for future rail service; (3) rehabilitating rail properties, and (4) providing substitute or alternate mode service in a manner less expensive than continuing rail service.

A Minority Business Resource Center is operated to assist minority business firms, entrepreneurs, and venture groups in securing contracts and subcontracts arising out of the restructuring and revitalization of the Nation's railroads.

The other administration and special projects program provides for the necessary salaries and related expenses of the Federal Railroad Administration in support of Federal assistance programs, in this account as well as in the Railroad rehabilitation and improvement financing account, grants to the National Railroad Passenger Corp. and the State grant portion of the Railroad safety appropriation; and for allocation positions to the Federal Highway Administration for audit services and Urban Mass Transportation Administration for rapid transit railroad interface.

Improvements to the Northeast corridor include improvements to the right-of-way, associated facilities, and installation of the necessary equipment for improved operations. Major rehabilitation efforts in 1980 include route realignment, track structure, bridges, electrification, signaling, service facilities, and stations.

2. System engineering/program management and administration.—This program includes system engineering which provides for system modeling, standards, design and requirements criteria; and program management and administration which provides overall program planning, scheduling, monitoring, supervision, inspection, and evaluation including the salaries of FRA and Federal Highway Administration personnel assigned to the project.

3. Public grade crossing elimination.—This program is funded under the authority of a separate authorization in the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1978, to modify or eliminate hazards of railway-highway crossings on public roads.

The National Railroad Passenger Corporation (Amtrak) is a private corporation. Federal assistance is provided through the Department of Transportation in the following manner:

1. Operating grants.—In 1980, funding is required to meet operating losses anticipated on the reduced Amtrak route structure proposed in the Department's final report to Congress pursuant to section 4 of the Amtrak Improvement Act of 1978. The proposed route structure will reduce the number of long haul routes and place greater emphasis on trains with higher average ridership. In 1979, an operating supplemental of $90 million is requested to operate the current system as required.

2. Labor protection and capital grants.—This program provides for labor protection costs associated with proposed route discontinuances; increased capital investment to permit equipment purchase or modification (both cars and locomotives); station construction and modification; and track installation and maintenance facilities consistent with the needs of the modified system. In 1979, a capital supplemental of $29 million is requested to acquire additional motive power for the northeast corridor.

3. Debt transactions.—This program provides for continuation of the systematic retirement of Amtrak's section 602 loans, reducing the availability of guaranteed loans to $825 million, and for the final installment of the Northeast corridor purchase.

The program was terminated in 1974. On October 1, 1978, the unexpended balance was returned to the general fund of the Treasury.

The Alaska Railroad is operated by the Federal Government under the act of March 12, 1914 (38 Stat. 305), as a public enterprise activity of the Federal Railroad Administration.

Budget program.—The major activity of the rail line operation program is transportation service; the principal supporting activities are maintenance of way and structures and maintenance of equipment. Lease of real properties, riverboats, and related facilities round out the other operating programs.

Financing.—To the extent possible, programs are financed by revenues earned from freight and passenger services and other services incidental thereto. It is estimated that freight tonnages will continue at reduced levels through 1979 and 1980. This decline is due in part to reduced petroleum product freight haulage, as the result of a new oil products refinery coming on-stream in Fairbanks. Also, there is a projected plateau in general business levels in Alaska until such time as other energy resources are developed; that is, natural gas and coal. Appropriated funds will be used to maintain equipment and facilities at a level needed for safe and efficient operations.

Section 509 of the Railroad Revitalization and Regulatory Reform Act of 1976, as amended, authorized the Secretary of Treasury to purchase fund anticipation notes from the Secretary of Transportation. The Secretary of Transportation used these funds to purchase redeemable preference shares from railroads to provide for capital needs to preserve rail freight services. Funds will be provided to railroads with the highest priority on projects effecting mergers and consolidations. Under the provisions of the act, repayments on the shares will not commence earlier than 6 years after purchase by the United States. This authorization expires September 30, 1979. Section 511 of Public Law 94-210, as amended, also authorizes obligation guarantee authority, for meeting the long-term needs of the railroads. Railroads utilize this funding mechanism to finance major new facilities and rehabilitation or consolidation of current facilities. The appropriation language provides for standby authority to issue notes in the event of default, up to the cumulative level of loans anticipated to be guaranteed through 1980.

This fund was established to finance all capital and operating assistance grants, contracts, and loan activities authorized by the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964, as amended. This fund was extended until 1982 by the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1978. That act also authorized several new funding categories such as intercity bus terminal construction and special rail transit grants. The administration intends to fund such activities through the existing urban discretionary and formula grant programs which have adequate flexibility and funding to accommodate worthy projects.

Urban discretionary grants.—Provides grants to State and local agencies for mass transportation investments. Such investments may include construction of new fixed guideway systems; extensions to existing guideway systems; major bus fleet expansions; capital grants for emergency repairs to transit facilities resulting from natural disasters; deployment of new technology; innovative transit demonstrations projects; and technical planning assistance. For 1980, $1.3 billion is planned for this activity with 260 projects. Under the administration's Urban Initiative, $200 million of these funds in 1980 will be used for joint development and related projects which link transportation facilities and encourage private economic development. For the first time, as an aid to local planning, an advance appropriation is requested for this activity for 1981.

Urban formula grants.—Provides for grants to urbanized areas or parts thereof on the basis of a formula for the payment of operating expenses; the construction, acquisition, and improvement of facilities and equipment; for routine capital projects such as the replacement of buses; the modernization of existing systems, and for commuter rail and other fixed guideway systems. For 1980, $1.3 billion is planned for this activity with 385 projects.

Nonurban formula grants.—Provides formula grants for nonurbanized areas. These funds provide for transit grants (for areas other than urbanized areas) on the basis of a formula. Both payment of operating expenses and capital expenses are eligible. For 1980, $75.0 million is planned for this activity with 50 grants.

Research and training.—Provides for grants and contracts for the purposes of developing, testing, and demonstrating new facilities, equipment, techniques, and methods (operations and managerial), and improving mass transportation services; grants to public bodies to provide for advanced training for personnel in the mass transportation field; and grants are awarded to public and private, nonprofit institutions to assist in establishing or continuing programs which combine professional training and research in the field of mass transportation. For 1980, $66.6 million is planned for this activity with 321 projects.

Administrative expenses.—Provides for the administrative costs of the Urban Mass Transportation Administration. For 1980, $21.0 million is planned for this activity.

Interstate transfer grants.—Grants under this activity are authorized by the 1973 Highway Act, whereby States and localities may withdraw previously approved interstate segments and apply the authorized funds to substitute transit or highway projects. For 1980, $700 million is planned for this activity with 20 projects. The Washington, D.C., area will receive up to $275 million in 1979, 1980, and 1981 from this activity. For the first time, as an aid to local planning, an advance appropriation is requested for this activity for 1981.

The continuing overall goal of the Saint Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation is to keep the St. Lawrence Seaway system a safe, reliable, and efficient transportation artery. The Corporation is continuing to interface with a multitude of diverse interests that share the common goal of expanding commerce on the Great Lakes/St. Lawrence Seaway system. In 1980, the Corporation will continue to operate and maintain the U.S. part of the seaway and pursue programs to increase the efficiency of the system by continuing efforts to: (1) extend the navigation season; (2) work closely with current and potential seaway shippers, Great Lakes ports, and other organizations; (3) encourage increased use of the seaway system; and (4) maintain and improve our lock facilities and lock approach channels. The winter lock maintenance program will be continued. The Saint Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation's 1980 budget reflects these objectives:

1. Administrative expenses (limitation).—This program provides for management and administration of the Corporation, and includes finance, legal, civil rights, procurement, personnel administration, and other related support services.

2. Operations.—This program provides for operation of all facilities and for planning and development activities. Operations are conducted on a 24-hour day, 7-day week basis throughout the navigation season with maintenance functions being performed throughout the year. Some major maintenance items are necessarily deferred to the nonnavigation season when both operations and maintenance forces are utilized for their accomplishment.

Replacements and improvements.—This program provides for capital investments such as purchase and installation of visibility measurement equipment, navigation aid replacement and construction, ice control improvements, season extension projects, and building, plant, and equipment replacements. The Corporation will maintain an unobligated balance as a reserve to ensure funding of necessary maintenance, replacements, and improvements in years when revenues do not reach expected budgeted levels.

The Corporation estimates its revenues for 1980 to reach $10.6 million which it proposes to apply as follows: (a) $6.8 million to pay operating expenses consisting of administrative expenses of $1.4 million (subject to limitation) and $5.4 million for operations; (b) $1.8 million to pay estimated capital outlay costs for season extension projects, facility improvements, and replacements of equipment; and (c) $2.0 million for the scheduled redemption of the Corporation's revenue bonds issued to the U.S. Treasury. No capital impairment has occurred through the end of the past year nor is any anticipated in the budget year.

The mission of the Research and Special Programs Administration is to serve as a research, analytical, and technical development arm of the Department for long-range and multimodal research and development, as well as to conduct special programs. Particular emphasis is given to pipeline safety, transportation of hazardous cargo by all modes of transportation, safety, security, facilitation of domestic and international commerce, and intermodal research and development activities including programs within the university community. Responsibilities of the administration are carried out under the following activities:

1. Operations.—This activity provides for the Administration's salaries and expenses as well as for central supervisory and management functions including a management information system necessary for overall planning and direction of the Administration; management and execution of transportation programs involving passenger and cargo security, facilitation services, national emergency plans/preparedness, management of the Transportation Safety Institute; and for the conduct of hazardous materials and pipeline safety regulatory and enforcement programs.

2. Research and development.—This activity provides for research and development to complement research programs of the operating administrations, to stimulate industry efforts to advance transportation technology, to develop multimodal and intermodal systems and technology, to encourage university research, and to support the hazardous materials and pipeline safety regulatory programs.

3. Grants.—This activity provides for grants-in-aid to State agencies of up to 50% of the actual costs for conducting a gas pipeline safety program as authorized by the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968.

The fund was established to facilitate the operations of the Transportation Systems Center (TSC) in Cambridge, Mass. The Center serves as the multimodal research, analysis, and development resource for, and is funded by, the Research and Special Programs Administration, Office of the Secretary, and operating administrations. Legislation will be proposed to establish a working capital fund to finance this activity beginning in 1980. The intragovernmental revolving fund will then permit the programs of the Center to be presented in a manner similar to other such activities elsewhere in the Government. TSC's planned projects for 1980 may be grouped into the following departmental research and development objectives:

Modernize regulation and legislation.—TSC is analyzing Federal regulation of transportation, to support policy decisions regarding alternatives under consideration by the Department. Social, economic, technical, and operational interrelationships are assessed in this work. Modern planning techniques, crossmodal impacts, and impacts of regulations on systems designs are included in these projects.

Increase efficiency and service.—Improvements increasing the effectiveness and efficiency of transportation systems are a mainstay of TSC work. TSC assesses present operating systems, designs new hardware and operational improvements, and may oversee their implementation and evaluation. Improvements may be new components, software, or operating techniques. TSC's work supports each of the Department's operating administrations and is based on TSC's knowledge of the state of the art in the transportation sciences.

Improve safety and security.—TSC research supports the mandates to the operating administrations to improve the safety and security of the transportation system. TSC is working on safer transport of hazardous materials, vehicle crashworthiness, rapid track inspection techniques, and safety-oriented air traffic control equipment. Risk and accident analysis, mechanics and materials investigations, and systems engineering studies also are part of this work.

Lessen unfavorable environmental impacts.—TSC is measuring transportation-produced noise and finding ways to reduce it or make it less burdensome to the public. Noise studies are underway in the air, marine, urban, automotive, and highway areas. Air pollution studies also are underway for most modes such as a study concerning the emissions from diesel engines. Assessments, modeling and simulations, measurement techniques, and hardware development support these activities.

Minimize adverse impacts of energy constraints.—Principal TSC work in this area concerns technology and methods leading to the development of more fuel efficient motor vehicles. TSC research concerns stimulation of innovation in the motor vehicle industry and assessment of new technologies and techniques such as regulatory action and economic incentives to reduce fuel consumption. TSC research also focuses on Federal energy policies impacts assessments and transport of alternative energy sources.

Increase knowledge base.—TSC collects, organizes, analyzes, and disseminates transportation information. This process has been formalized by the establishment in 1978 of the Center for the Management of Transportation Information which is a primary DOT activity for the sharing of data with State and local governments and, as appropriate, with private industry.

Sections 507(a) and 509 of the Railroad Revitalization and Regulatory Reform Act of 1976, as amended, authorize the Secretary of Transportation to issue fund anticipation notes. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to purchase fund anticipation notes to the extent of appropriated funds from the Secretary of Transportation, who in turn will use these funds to purchase redeemable preference shares from railroads to provide for capital needs critical for preserving rail freight service.

Consistent with the normal treatment of debt transactions in the budget, and to avoid doublecounting, these amounts are not included in the budget totals. Budget authority (borrowing authority) in identical amounts is reflected in the Department of Transportation under the account heading, "Railroad rehabilitation and improvement financing funds", Federal Railroad Administration.

The bank is also authorized to raise capital through the public or private sale of its bonds, debentures, notes, and other evidences of indebtedness, but will not do so in the first 2 years of operation.

Class A stock purchased by the Secretary of the Treasury on behalf of the United States will be redeemed and retired as soon as practicable, but in any case beginning not later than October 1, 1990.

Additional information on the operations of the National Consumer Cooperative Bank is shown in the "Other Independent Agencies" chapter.

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to deal in gold and foreign exchange and other instruments of credit and securities as he deems necessary, consistent with U.S. obligations in the International Monetary Fund, regarding orderly exchange arrangements. An Exchange Stabilization Fund, with a capital of $200 million is authorized by law for this purpose (31 U.S.C. 822a). All earnings and interest accruing to this fund are available for the purposes thereof. Transactions in special drawing rights (SDR's) and U.S. holdings of SDR's are administered by the fund.

The principal sources of the fund's income have been the handling charges imposed on purchases and sales of gold for the account of the fund, profits on foreign exchange transactions, and interest on investments held by the fund, including interest earned on fund holdings of U.S. Government securities.

Due to the impracticability of forecasting fund transactions in gold, foreign currency, and foreign investment, projections are not provided for those items. Actual data will be provided for 1979 in the 1981 budget, upon resolution of various technical problems relating to the inclusion of this data in the Federal budget. At that time, a statement of the fund's financial condition will also be presented in the budget. However, as an offset to actual data and projections made in the budget for interest paid on U.S. Government securities, data for the interest income on fund holdings of U.S. Government securities is provided for 1978 and projected for 1979 and 1980. Holdings of U.S. Government securities amounted to $1,763 million on September 30, 1978. The interest earnings on these securities is estimated to increase these holdings to $1,930 million in 1979 and $2,100 million in 1980. As required by Public Law 95-612, upon the availability of appropriated funds to meet the administrative expenses of the Treasury Department's international affairs functions, the fund no longer will be used to meet administrative expenses.

Detailed information on the activities and financial condition of the fund during 1978 can be found in tables ESF-1 and ESF-2 of the Treasury Bulletin (May, July, and October 1978 and January 1979) as well as the forthcoming Annual Report for the Exchange Stabilization Fund for the year ended September 30, 1978. Net operating losses of the fund from its inception through September 30, 1978, totaled $322 million. These losses are largely attributable to foreign exchange operations, beginning in November 1976, in connection with the redemption of Swiss-franc denominated U.S. Treasury securities held by the Swiss National Bank and outstanding since August 1971 (exchange losses on these transactions totaled $743 million in 1978). For a discussion of the Swiss franc liabilities, see Annual Report for the Exchange Stabilization Fund for the year ended September 30, 1977.

This trust fund was established by the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act of 1972 and renewed under Public Law 94-488, the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Amendments of 1976, to provide general revenue sharing payments to States and localities to supplement revenue sources. Payments to the States and localities are made at least quarterly. It is anticipated that the fourth quarter payment for each year will continue to be paid within the first 5 days of the succeeding year, as provided by law.

One-third of the funds appropriated is allocated to the States and two-thirds are allocated to local jurisdictions to carry out general purpose governmental functions. At present 39,146 units of general purpose government are eligible to receive revenue sharing funds: the 50 States and the District of Columbia, 3,108 counties, 18,838 cities, 16,817 towns and townships, and 332 Indian tribes and Alaskan native villages.

Distribution formulas seek to measure a government's size, its need, and its effort to meet its need. State and local jurisdictions are allowed, particularly under the renewal legislation, to use the funds for any purposes which constitute legal purposes for use of their own locally generated revenues.

This appropriation provides for the costs of adapting the former Glynco Naval Air Station, near Brunswick, Ga., for the permanent location of the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center. Because of the flexible nature of facilities, the campus-like training center will be able to accommodate in excess of 1,300 resident students. The total estimated cost to this appropriation for the facilities, equipment, and services will be $40.2 million. The Center conducts recruit, advanced, specialized, and refresher training for enforcement personnel of the Center's participating Federal agencies.

An additional $5.7 million has been appropriated and expended for the construction of a special training, semienclosed firing range and motorcade training area at Beltsville, Md.—the original site for the FLETC. These facilities have been completed and are operated presently by the U.S. Secret Service for its specialized training programs and firearms requalification for other Federal agencies.

1. Disbursement and claims—(a) Payments.—Payments are made through 11 regional offices for Federal civilian agencies, except the U.S. Postal Service, the U.S. marshals, and certain Government corporations. These disbursing services are provided through the issuance of checks, letters of credit, and electronic funds transfer (EFT) payments. Savings bonds are also issued for employees under the payroll savings plan.

The total checks, savings bonds, and electronic funds transfer payments and productivity relating to this function carried out by the Division of Disbursement follow:

(b) Check claims settlement.—This function provides for the adjudication and settlement of claims against the United States resulting from situations in which Government checks have been forged, lost, stolen, destroyed, or mutilated. It receives moneys from banks, endorsers, and other parties having liability to the United States through fraudulent or otherwise improper negotiation of Government checks.

Approximately 50% of the requests for stop payment on Government checks result in actual paid check claims acted upon by the Division of Check Claims.

2. Government-wide accounting.—This activity includes maintaining a system of central accounting and reporting; disclosing the monetary assets and liabilities of the U.S. Treasury; and providing for the integration of Treasury cash and funding operations with the financial operations of disbursing and collecting officers of all Federal agencies. Periodic reports are prepared under this function to show budget results, other financial operations, and the financial status of the Government.

In addition, this function includes the check payment and reconciliation operation with volume and related productivity as follows:

It provides guidance to the system for advancing Federal funds under various grant programs and other programs through letters of credit; designates and supervises banks as Government depositories; controls U.S. foreign currency transactions to afford the best currency availability to the Government; and settles claims for the redemption of mutilated currency.

Savings generated through this activity for the Treasury as a whole are as follows:

(c) Treasury tax and loan operations.—This activity segment provides primarily for compensation to commercial banks through the Federal Reserve Banks for services rendered in maintaining the Treasury tax and loan accounts and provides support to the Federal Reserve Banks for their day-to-day operations concerning the accounts. This activity is the result of legislation which allows Treasury to earn a return on its tax and loan account balances. In essence, the banks pay interest on the Treasury tax and loan funds deposited with them and are reimbursed for their services.

Public Law 94-12, approved March 29, 1975, provided for a special payment to recipients of benefits under certain retirement and survivor benefit programs.

In accordance with the law, the Secretary of the Treasury made a one-time special payment of $50 to each individual who, for March 1975, was entitled to monthly insurance benefits under title II of the Social Security Act, to monthly pension or annuity benefits under the Railroad Retirement Acts, or to supplemental security income benefits. An individual was entitled to only one special payment, even though he may have been entitled to benefits under two or more of the above-mentioned programs.

These payments were not social security benefits in any sense but were intended to provide to the aged, blind, and disabled a payment comparable in nature to the tax rebates which the law provided to those who were working.

cial endorsees in case of checks drawn on the U.S. Treasury which have been paid on forged endorsements.

To reduce hardships sustained by payees of Government checks that have been stolen and forged, settlement is made in advance of the receipt of funds from the endorsers of the checks through reclamation procedure by this office. Benefits from these early settlements are shared by claimants and the Government in that the claimants are more quickly restored financially to their proper position and the Government is spared the necessity of much unproductive correspondence. If the U.S. Treasury is unable to recover funds, the revolving account sustains the loss.

The fund was established by Public Law 94-143 to provide short-term loans to New York City during periods when the city's outlays exceed income. Loans were authorized through June 30, 1978; the outstanding balance could not exceed $2.3 billion and all loans made in a New York City fiscal year had to be repaid during that fiscal year. All income from loans and investments was covered directly into the general fund miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury.

On June 30, 1978, the fund expired and the account was closed.

Amendments to the Fishermen's Protective Act of 1967 (Public Law 92-569) created a Fishermen's protective fund to reimburse owners of vessels for the amounts of fines, fees, and other direct charges which were paid by the owners to a foreign country to secure the release of their vessels and crews.

Prior to the creation of the Fishermen's protective fund, the Secretary of State certified to the Secretary of the Treasury the amounts due vessel owners. These certified amounts due vessel owners were held by the Secretary of the Treasury until a request was received for their submission for a supplemental appropriation. As a result, vessel owners were not reimbursed for the amounts due them until the supplemental appropriation had been enacted. The Fishermen's protective fund greatly reduces the time required to make payment to the vessel owner. The Secretary of the Treasury can now make payment within 48 hours of receipt of the certification from the Secretary of State.

Under Public Law 95-194, loans may be made to owners of fishing vessels under certain conditions when it is claimed that fishing gear may have been lost or damaged by actions of foreign nations. The Department of Commerce certifies such claims and they will be paid by the Department of the Treasury from funds from this account.

The U.S. Customs Service's fundamental authority is contained in the provisions of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended. In addition, the Customs Service participates in the administration and enforcement of some 400 other provisions of laws and regulations of 40 other agencies which govern international traffic and trade. The Customs Service mission is multifaceted and requires that the Service:

Control, regulate, and facilitate the movement of carriers, persons, and commodities between the United States and other nations.

Assess, collect, and protect the revenue accruing to the United States from duties, taxes, and fees incident to international traffic and trade.

Protect the American consumer and the environment against the introduction of hazardous and noxious products into the United States, and protect American industry and the American worker against unfair competition from foreign manufacturers and producers.

Detect, interdict, and/or investigate smuggling and other illegal practices designed to gain illicit entry into the United States of prohibited articles, narcotics, drugs, and other contraband; fraudulent activities calculated to avoid the payment of duties, taxes, and fees, or to evade the legal requirements of international traffic and trade; and illegal international trafficking in arms, munitions, and currency.

1. Inspection and control.—In enforcing the provisions of the Tariff Act and related laws, the inspection and control activity must: (a) accommodate the demands of expanding passenger and cargo workloads, while maintaining the appropriate enforcement level; (b) open new ports of entry or expand service at existing ports to meet the needs of the traveling and importing public, and growing international trade; (c) tailor the conduct of mission responsibilities to achieve maximum utilization of Customs resources with minimum disruption of international trade and travel patterns.

The permeability of U.S. borders; the mobility of traffickers; and the prerogative of traffickers to choose time, place and mode of smuggling dictate that this activity maintain a high degree of mobility in order to meet the smuggling threat where and when it appears.

4. Investigations.—Functions as the external investigative arm of the Customs Service in conducting civil, criminal, and fact-finding investigations relating to violations of Customs and related laws.

<sup>1</sup> Balances of selected resources are identified on the statement of financial condition.<sup>2</sup> Includes a surcharge for financing capital improvements and working capital needs totaling $7,505 thousand in 1978; $8,131 thousand in 1979; and $7,445 thousand in 1980.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing designs, manufactures, and supplies most of the major evidences of a financial character issued by the United States. It is the sole source of Federal Reserve notes, various public debt instruments, as well as most of the minor evidences of a financial character issued by the United States, such as postage and internal revenue stamps. The Bureau executes certain printings for various territories administered by the United States, particularly postage and revenue stamps.

The anticipated work volume is based on estimates of requirements submitted by agencies served. The program comprises the following activities:

1. Engraving and printing—(a) Currency.—Total deliveries of currency for 1979 and 1980 are estimated to be 4.0 and 4.2 billion notes. During 1978, the Bureau delivered 3.3 billion Federal Reserve notes.

(b) Stamps.—This category of work is comprised mainly of postal and internal revenue stamps. The projected requirements for 1979 and 1980 are 26.6 and 26.7 billion stamps, respectively. In 1978, the Bureau delivered 31 billion stamps.

(c) Food coupons.—Production of the program is the joint responsibility of the Bureau and the private sector. The Bureau maintains the administrative functions and responsibilities for controlling the food coupon program. Production was 2.3 billion coupons in 1978 and is expected to approximate 1.6 billion coupons in 1979.

(d) Securities.—This program encompasses the production of a wide variety of bonds, notes, and debentures for the Bureau of Public Debt and certain other agencies of the Government.

(e) Commissions, certificates, et cetera.—This program represents a small portion of the Bureau's total workload.

2. Space utilized by other agencies.—Charges are made to other agencies for services provided for space they occupy in the Bureau's buildings.

3. Other direct charges for miscellaneous services.—Charges for a wide variety of miscellaneous services performed by Bureau personnel are made to the agencies concerned on an actual cost basis.

Bureau operations during 1978 resulted in a profit of $1,203 thousand. In accordance with the provisions of 31 U.S.C. 181, $1,159 thousand of this profit will be retained to offset accumulated losses of prior years. The balance of $44 thousand will be returned to the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

2. Processing deposits and issues of monetary metals and coins.—This activity includes disbursements of coins: moving, shipping, storing, and verifying bullion and coin, receipt of gold and silver bullion for exchange and settlement of international balances; and counting and classifying uncurrent coins returned to the Mints for recoinage. Total coins shipped in 1978 was 13.4 billion; estimates for 1979 and 1980 are 13.2 billion and 15.2 billion respectively.

3. Protection of monetary metals and coins.—Protection of the Government's holdings of gold and silver bullion and coin is maintained by armed guards and modern protective devices.

4. Refining gold and silver bullion.—Gold and silver bullion are refined at the New York Assay Office. Preliminary determinations indicate that these operations may be more effectively performed by the private sector. The 1980 Budget includes money to phase-out these operations; however, the final decision awaits additional study results.

The appropriation provides funds to acquire suitable sites, design and construction of buildings, furnishing and equipment necessary for operations and for repairs and improvements to facilities of the Bureau of the Mint as authorized by 31 U.S.C. 291-294. In 1972 an appropriation of $1,500 thousand was made for the purchase of suitable site for the Denver Mint. The $2 million appropriated for 1973 was for the initial design services. Because of delays in obtaining title to the site, no appropriation was requested in 1974, and the appropriation requested in 1975 was deferred to 1976. Title to the selected site was taken by GSA in September 1975.

In 1976 an appropriation of $3,350 thousand was authorized, including $850 thousand for additional design services and $2,500 thousand for site development. No budget authority was requested for the transition quarter, July 1 through September 30, 1976. The years 1978 and 1979 did not provide obligational authority for the Construction of mint facilities.

In 1980, in lieu of constructing a new mint, funds will be used for the rehabilitation of offsite surplus Federal facilities to be used for coining operations and for improvements to existing mint facilities.

As provided by law, there will be instances wherein the earned income tax credit will exceed the amount of tax liability owed, resulting in a payment to the tax filer. The Revenue Adjustment Act of 1975 (Public Law 94-164) originally authorized this credit. The 1979 and 1980 estimates reflect the changes of the Revenue Act of 1978 (Public Law 95-600) which made permanent the earned income credit.

This revolving fund was established pursuant to section 112(a) of the Federal Tax Lien Act of 1966, solely to serve as the source of financing the redemption of real property by the United States. In collecting delinquent taxes, situations arise where it is to the Government's advantage to buy property on which it has a lien when the property is sold at a foreclosure sale brought by the holder of a lien which is superior to the Government's. The advantage arises when the property is worth substantially more than the first lienholder's equity but is being sold for an amount that barely covers that equity, thereby leaving no proceeds to apply against delinquent taxes. Under these circumstances, if the Government buys the property and subsequently puts it up for sale under more advantageous conditions, it is possible to realize sufficient profit on the transaction to fully or partially collect the amount of taxes due. The revolving fund is reimbursed from the proceeds of the sale in an amount equal to the amount expended from the fund for the redemption. The balance of the proceeds are applied against the amount of the tax, interest, penalties, and additions thereto, and for the costs of sale. The remainder, if any, would revert to the parties legally entitled to it.

The income of the Comptroller of the Currency is derived principally from assessments paid by national banks and interest on investments in U.S. Government obligations. In accordance with 12 U.S.C. 481 assessments paid by national banks are not construed to be Government funds. No funds derived from taxes or Federal appropriations are allocated to or used by the bureau in any of its operations.

The Administrator of National Banks charters new banking institutions only after investigation and due consideration. Supervision of existing national banks is aided by the required submission of periodic reports and detailed, onsite examinations, the latter conducted by a staff of approximately 2,200 national bank examiners. At the present time there are approximately 4,600 national banks with 17,000 operating branches and total assets of $828 billion. As a result of the reports submitted and the examinations conducted, the bureau determines the financial condition of individual national banks and the system as a whole, the soundness of operations and compliance with applicable laws and regulations.

In addition, the Comptroller considers applications for mergers in which the resulting bank will be a national bank, and applications from banks to establish branches. The Comptroller of the Currency promulgates rules and regulations for the guidance of national banks, bank directors, et cetera, and publishes them as manuals so that they are readily available to the interested parties.

NOTES

Excludes $3,280 thousand in 1980 for activities transferred to: Abatement and control, $2,500 thousand; Agency and regional management, $780 thousand. Comparable amounts for 1978 ($3,156 thousand), and 1979 ($3,311 thousand) are included above.

Excludes $27 thousand in 1979 and $31 thousand in 1980 for activities transferred to Salaries and expenses, Employment Standards Administration, Department of Labor. A comparable amount for 1978 ($25 thousand) is included above.

EPA's research and development efforts are conducted through grants, contracts, and agreements with universities, industries, other private commercial firms, non-profit organizations, State and local governments, and Federal agencies as well as through research and development at EPA's laboratories and field locations.

These efforts are oriented toward producing the scientific knowledge and the tools for regulating, preventing, and abating pollution and are specifically directed to the problems of air and water pollution control, drinking water and radiation protection, solid and toxic waste management, toxics and pesticides control, noise abatement, and energy related environmental research and development programs. Activities encompass research on the effects of pollutants on man, animals, aquatic life, plants, materials, and the general environment; research on the processes, such as dispersion, that affect pollution; the development of new and improved sampling and analytical methods and instruments for measuring pollutants; the development and demonstration of new and improved technology for preventing and controlling pollution and recovery of materials from wastes; and insuring environmental protection necessary to facilitate the use of domestic energy supplies (with particular emphasis on coal) and the concurrent development of appropriate control technologies for emerging energy systems to minimize control cost and environmental impact. Overall management and support is included.

NOTES

Includes $2,500 thousand in 1980 for activities previously financed from Research and development; comparable amounts for 1978 ($2,500 thousand) and 1979 ($2,500 thousand) are excluded above. Excludes $697 thousand in 1979 and $795 in 1980 for activities transferred to Salaries and expenses, Employment Standards Administration, Department of Labor. A comparable amount for 1978 ($641 thousand) is included above.

EPA is responsible for major Federal environmental pollution abatement and control programs which involve the development of environmental standards; monitoring and surveillance of pollution conditions; grant support for State and local water quality pollution control planning; direct Federal pollution control planning; grant support for State, regional, and local pollution control programs; technical assistance to pollution control agencies and organizations; and assistance to Federal agencies in complying with environmental standards and insuring that their activities have minimum environmental impact. Overall management and support resources are included.

Air quality.—The air program encompasses activities related to the development of control strategies and control programs, and the implementation of such programs to achieve air quality standards. This objective is accomplished in two basic ways: (1) State and local actions are encouraged by the provision of assistance in all areas of technical and policy matters; and (2) direct Federal action is taken in cases of State or local failure to fulfill the requirements of the Clean Air Act.

Support of State and local programs and the development of Federal air pollution emissions standards are the highest priorities of the Federal air pollution control and abatement programs. Emissions standards developed include new source performance standards (NSPS), national emission standards for hazardous air pollutants (NESH APS) and motor vehicle emissions standards. The motor vehicle program also includes certification and testing to insure that prototype vehicles meet Federal emissions and fuel economy standards.

Major accomplishments in the air programs are as follows:

The Administration has integrated the Department of Transportation's transportation planning process with the Environmental Protection Agency's air quality planning requirements to insure adequate planning to meet air quality health standards in regions where these standards are not now being met. Funding to continue this program will be available from the planning funds of the Department of Transportation.

Water quality.—The water quality program encompasses the following major activities: (1) developing effluent standards for industrial dischargers, (2) managing the municipal wastewater facilities construction grant program, (3) assisting State and local agencies in developing water quality management programs, (4) assisting the States in implementing their water pollution control programs including implementation of delegated Federal responsibilities, (5) responding to major oil and hazardous materials spills, and (6) implementing numerous other provisions of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act and the Marine Protection, Research and Sanctuaries Act. Major accomplishments projected for 1980 as compared to 1979 and 1978 are as follows:

Total.....	68.2	86.4	104.7
Inland spills requiring on-scene coordinator to monitor.....	805	840	930

Safe drinking water.—The safe drinking water program encompasses: (1) developing and promulgating national drinking water standards, (2) assisting the States in assuming primary responsibility for monitoring and enforcing compliance with the national standards, (3) assuming Federal responsibility for monitoring and enforcing compliance with the national standards where the States fail to assume responsibility, (4) developing and promulgating regulations for controlling underground injection of wastes, (5) assisting States in assuming primary responsibility for implementing these regulations, (6) assuming Federal responsibility for implementing these regulations where the States fail to assume such responsibility, (7) determining areas that have an aquifer which is the sole or principal source of drinking water, and (8) carrying out other provisions of the Safe Drinking Water Act. Principal accomplishments planned for 1980 as compared to 1979 and 1978 are:

	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Number of States or other jurisdictions assuming primary responsibility for implementing standards.....	40	50	54
Number of States or other jurisdictions for which EPA must assume primary responsibility for implementing standards.....	17	7	3

Number of States assuming primary enforcement responsibility for their U.I.C. program.....			10
Number of aquifers designated as sole or principle sources of drinking water.....	4	8	14

Pesticides.—The pesticides program has primary responsibility for implementing the requirements of the 1972 Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act as amended and the lead role in the design and implementation of EPA's pesticide strategy. Supplies are controlled to keep hazardous chemicals off the market and to prevent unreasonable adverse effects to man or the environment. This will be accomplished in 1980 through registration of an estimated 8,200 new products and amendments and the processing of 37 actions which are necessary to the proper assessment of the health and safety of suspect compounds. The reregistration process allows the Agency to make a rebuttable presumption against registration of pesticides which appear to cause unreasonable adverse effects to human health or the environment. The initiation of generic standard building will be directed to completion of the review and validation of scientific data for 40 chemicals used as active ingredients and 160 common formulations of those chemicals. In addition, control will be exercised through the process of classification of pesticide products for restricted or general use as well as pesticide residue tolerance-setting, resulting from an estimated 260 tolerance petitions.

Radiation.—The radiation program endeavors to eliminate unnecessary health and environmental effects by limiting exposures to radiation from releases of radionuclides to the environment; from medical and occupational uses of radiation; and from nonionizing radiation sources.

In 1980, the program will complete listing significant pollutants and sources required by the Clean Air Act and will develop and promulgate appropriate standards and regulations. Activities related to the development of environmentally sound solutions to radioactive waste disposal problems including disposal of uranium mill tailings, other low level wastes, waste resulting from decommissioning and decontaminating facilities, and transuranic wastes will be expanded and accelerated to bring EPA's schedule in line with the time requirements of other Federal agencies.

Solid waste.—The Resource Conservation and Recovery Act of 1976 (RCRA) establishes two broad goals in solid waste management: (1) to assure that all solid and hazardous wastes are managed in a manner that will protect public health and the environment, and (2) to conserve natural resources directly and through the management, reuse, or recovery of solid and hazardous wastes. To accomplish these goals, RCRA authorizes a national program of hazardous waste regulation and enforcement; control of land disposal practices; comprehensive solid waste management planning; solid waste research and demonstrations; and financial and technical assistance to support State and local implementation of these programs.

The EPA strategy for implementing RCRA places highest priority on controlling waste disposal through hazardous waste regulation, land disposal, and development of State programs. State assumption of RCRA authorities will be encouraged through Federal financial and technical assistance, regulations, guidelines, and public support. Major accomplishments of the solid waste program projected for 1980 as compared to 1979 and 1978 are:

Toxic substances.—The toxic substances program includes activities relating to the identification and control of risks to human health and the environment posed by chemical substances. These activities in 1980 will include the establishment of regulations to obtain testing data and other information on about 50 chemicals or groups of chemicals, completion of indepth risk assessments on 6 chemicals, and initiation of in-depth assessments on approximately 10 additional substances, and development of control strategies and regulations on 7 chemical substances.

Noise.—The noise program's major activities to reduce the detrimental health and welfare effects of noise include: the development of regulations controlling noise emissions, the provision of technical assistance to strengthen State and local noise programs, and the coordination of noise reduction and research activities throughout the Federal Government.

Notes.—Excludes $79 thousand in 1979 and $90 thousand in 1980 for activities transferred to Salaries and Expenses, Employment Standards Administration, Department of Labor. A comparable amount for 1978 ($73 thousand) is included above.

EPA's enforcement responsibilities are in the areas of air and water pollution control, drinking water, pesticides, solid waste, toxic substances, and noise control. Much of the effort is in support of or in cooperation with State and local enforcement programs, such as the enforcement of air quality standards, navigable and interstate water quality standards, and issuance of pollution discharge permits. Enforcement includes such actions as notices of violation, abatement orders, enforcement conferences, civil and criminal court actions, and, in the case of pesticides, recalls, and seizures. Overall management and support resources are included.

Air enforcement.—The mobile source enforcement program, operating under the Clean Air Act, is directed primarily toward achieving compliance with vehicle emission standards, fuel regulations and mobile source related aspects of State implementation plans promulgated by EPA under the Clean Air Act. Emphasis in 1980 will be on a continuation of efforts to insure that new vehicles meet emission standards at the time of sale and a major new in-use program to prevent tampering and improper use of leaded gasoline.

The purpose of the stationary air enforcement program is to assure compliance with requirements of the Clean Air Act as amended related to stationary sources of air pollution. In 1980, the emphasis of the program will be continuation of the major source enforcement effort, further implementation of the noncompliance penalty program established by the CAA amendments of 1977, assisting States in maintaining strong programs to insure compliance by major sources, and delegating the noncompliance penalty program under section 120 to as many States as possible. The program will also focus on expanded enforcement responsibilities in the new source and national emission standards for hazardous air pollutants programs.

Water quality enforcement.—The purpose of the water quality enforcement program is to assure compliance with requirements of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act. In 1980, the emphasis of the program will be to take enforcement actions against the remaining violators of the July 1, 1977 deadline of the act. For permit issuance, the program will emphasize reissuance of second-round National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permits to incorporate toxics limitations. In addition, other activities of the water quality enforcement program will include compliance monitoring by conducting sampling and evaluation inspections; resolution of adjudicatory hearings; pre-enforcement and technical enforcement evaluations of self-monitoring reports; and assessment of administrative civil penalties.

Safe drinking water enforcement.—The safe drinking water enforcement program is responsible for assuring compliance with the Safe Drinking Water Act. In 1980 the program will issue 10 variances and exemptions, initiate 25 enforcement actions and overview 6 public water supply State primary programs.

Pesticide enforcement.—The pesticides enforcement program is responsible for assuring compliance with Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act. In 1980 the program will continue to emphasize the use of Federal-State cooperative enforcement grants-in-aid, user compliance with label directions, and industry compliance with registration, classification, and labeling requirements. Under terms of grants-in-aid, the States will conduct activities contributing to user and industry compliance, including use and re-entry inspections at application sites, producer establishment inspections, marketplace inspections, and the initiation of enforcement actions when violations are detected. EPA activities will include investigations of alleged laboratory data fraud, enforcement of Federal applicator certification programs, and import surveillance.

To support compliance with the act, program highlights include issuing 200 facility permits; reviewing 41 State plans for adequacy of enforcement; performing 160 hazardous waste facility inspections; issuing 190 notices of violation; and assessing 70 civil penalties in response to RCRA subtitle C violations.

Toxic substances enforcement.—The toxic substances enforcement program is responsible for the enforcement of the Toxic Substances Control Act of 1976. To support compliance with the act the program will inspect 600 facilities subject to section 6, chemical control requirements; inspect 40 facilities subject to section 4, chemical testing and section 5, new chemical notice requirements; initiate 90 court actions and civil penalties in response to section 4, 5, and 6 violations; and conduct 29 investigations in response to toxic substance emergencies.

Noise enforcement.—The noise enforcement program is directed toward enforcing noise standards promulgated pursuant to the Noise Control Act of 1972. In 1980, the program's activities will include reviewing production verification reports, monitoring production verification tests, monitoring selective enforcement audit tests, conducting inspections of manufacturer records, and conducting noise testing site comparison studies.

The 1980 President's budget requests $3,800 million for the municipal wastewater facilities construction grants program. These funds, in addition to over $4,500 million available from prior year appropriations, will provide more than $8,300 million for obligation in 1980. These funds will assist in meeting water quality requirements by focusing Federal funding on the most critical water quality improvements.

The municipal wastewater facilities construction grants program provides 75% Federal financial assistance to municipal, intermunicipal, State, and interstate agencies to construct wastewater treatment and appurtenant facilities to comply with effluent standards required by the Clean Water Act of 1977. Major accomplishments in 1980 as compared to 1979 and 1978 are:

Number of active projects .....	11,387	11,100	10,700

Much of the increased workload in 1980 will be managed by the Corps of Engineers working under an inter-agency agreement with the Environmental Protection Agency and by State agencies that agree to manage the program under the provisions of section 205(g) of the Clean Water Act of 1977.

The Federal buildings fund finances the activities of the Public Buildings Service which provides space and services for Federal agencies in a relationship similar to that of landlord and tenant. The following table details composition of the Federal buildings fund space inventory (leased and Government owned) and the employees housed in that space:

	1979 estimated		1980 estimated
	Square feet (in thousands)	Employees housed	Square feet (in thousands)	Employees housed

Total.....	283,900	876,000	286,200	895,000

The fund, established in 1975, replaces direct appropriations by using income derived from rent assessments (standard level user charges—SLUC) which approximate commercial rates for comparable space and services. SLUC income was $1,350 million in 1978 and is estimated at $1,430 million for 1979 and $1,511 million for 1980.

* The 1979 resource requirements include $11,644 thousand requested to fund the October 1978 classified pay increase in real property operations and program direction and wage-board increases in real property operations.

* The 1980 resource requirements include $17,622 thousand for the cost of the October 1978 classified pay increase in real property operations and program direction and wage-board increases in real property operations.

Note.—A 1979 program supplemental for a $7,000 thousand increase for rental of space to be offset by a $7,000 thousand decrease in purchase contract payments is being requested.

The Federal buildings fund direct program consists of the following activities:

1. Construction and acquisition of facilities.—Space is acquired through direct federally financed construction of facilities, the extension and conversion of existing buildings, and direct purchasing of existing facilities. All costs directly attributable to Federal buildings fund construction projects for site acquisition, design, management and inspection, and construction are financed under this activity. The total cost of new commitments for direct federally financed construction is estimated at $114 million in 1979 and $16 million in 1980.

2. Alterations and major repairs.—Alterations and major repairs of public buildings are funded under this activity. Cost effectiveness, overall appearance, state of repair, and operating efficiency are the principal criteria used in establishing priorities of work required with primary consideration given to repairs to prevent deterioration and damage to the buildings, their support systems, and necessary operating equipment.

3. Purchase contract payments.—Payments are made for liabilities incurred for facilities acquired under purchase contract authority. Purchase contract authority, which provided for private investment capital financing of public buildings, expired at the end of 1975. The periodic payments on the purchase contracts cover principal, interest, taxes, and other requirements.

4. Rental of space.—Space is acquired through the leasing of either existing buildings, including space occupied by Federal agencies in U.S. Postal Service facilities, or facilities to be built with private capital for lease to the Government. Rental of existing commercial and Postal Service buildings is estimated to provide 93 million square feet in 1979 and 95 million square feet in 1980.

5. Real property operations.—Operations are provided for Government-owned and leased facilities, including cleaning, utilities and fuel, protection, maintenance, other miscellaneous services such as moving as a result of space adjustments, moving of agencies into newly acquired space, evaluation of new materials and equipment, and field supervision of the foregoing services. The 1980 direct program compares with the 1979 program as follows (estimated square feet and expenses in millions):

	1979		1980
	Square feet	Expenses	Square feet	Expenses
Cleaning.....	183	$162	186	$163
Utilities.....	214	153	217	157
Maintenance and minor repairs.....	184	85	187	90
Protection.....	209	47	212	48
Other operations.....	284	35	286	40
Total.....		482		498

6. Program direction.—Overall general management is accomplished, including long- and short-range planning, and administration of all programs which are the responsibility of the Public Buildings Service. In addition, this activity finances the costs of management and administration of each of the individual direct activities of the Federal buildings fund.

Other programs.—When requested by Federal agencies, the Public Buildings Service provides building services such as tenant alterations, cleaning and other operations, and protection services which are in excess of those services provided under the standard level user charge.

Note.—The property management and personal property disposal activities have been transferred to Federal Property Resources Activities in the General Services Administration.

This appropriation provides for Government-wide management of supplies and personal property, transportation and public utilities services, and operating the worldwide supply system.

1. Supply distribution.—A national supply distribution system of wholesale distribution facilities is managed and operated through which commercial-type commodities are received, stored, and issued on a worldwide basis to Federal agencies. Supplies are shipped by the wholesale operation to customer agencies from GSA supply distribution facilities located in each of the 10 GSA regions. The sales estimate for 1980 is $766 million.

2. Procurement.—Contracting responsibility for commercial-type items required by Federal agencies and other authorized users of the Federal Supply Service system is provided in this area. In addition to contracting and purchasing, the Procurement activity selects commodities for inclusion in the stores, nonstores, and Federal supply schedules programs by determining the methods of supply that are most economical and effective. Total procurement volume in 1978 was $3.4 billion, and is estimated to be $3.6 billion in 1979 and $3.9 billion in 1980. This office is responsible for the inventory management program of the Federal Supply Service. Inventory levels available for issue to customer agencies are projected at $231 million for 1979 and $224 million for 1980 with a stockturn of 3.2 in 1979 and 1980.

3. Standards and quality control.—Timely delivery of commodities of specified quality is assured by inspection and surveillance at contractors' plants or GSA supply facilities by laboratory tests and analyses prior to acceptance, and by contract administration assistance. Qualitative requirements for commodities are reflected in Federal specifications and Federal standards for use in procurement. In 1980, the standardization program will consist of the promulgation of 2,520 Federal specifications and standards actions.

4. Transportation and public utilities.—Assistance is provided to civilian Federal agencies for improving transportation practices and passenger travel management. It develops guidelines and procedures; negotiates reasonable rates with carriers; performs audits on all Federal transportation documents; and provides procurement assistance, rates, and routing, and related transportation services. It develops Government-wide policies and procedures to improve the overall efficiency of the Government-owned motor vehicle fleet and assists the various Federal agencies with motor equipment management. Also, it negotiates with public utility companies on behalf of executive agencies and provides technical assistance in connection with regulatory proceedings concerning transportation and public utilities.

5. Customer service and support.—Planning, direction, and coordination is necessary to insure effective logistics support to all Federal agencies. This activity is responsible for determining the adequacy of the support programs and for monitoring responsiveness to agency requirements. Continued emphasis will be placed on the customer liaison and customer market research program to increase the scope of supply and procurement support rendered by the Federal Supply Service to other Federal agencies.

This activity also manages and operates programs for processing and control of agency requisitions, commodity management, and logistics data systems.

Administrative, office and maintenance supplies, and standard forms are provided to Federal agencies through self-service retail facilities located wherever there is a concentration of Federal activities. Sales through these self-service stores were $67 million in 1978 and are estimated to remain level.

6. Property management.—Transferred to Federal Property Resources Service in 1979.

7. Personal property disposal.—Transferred to Federal Property Resources Service in 1979.

8. Service direction.—Management and direction, both departmental and in the field, is provided for all Federal Supply Service programs. In addition, this activity finances, on a centralized basis, all costs for postage, intercity telephone and payments to the Federal buildings fund.

This fund finances, on a reimbursable basis, a national supply depot system and a system of ordering supplies for direct delivery to agencies. Supplies or services are sold from the fund at cost to other agencies and the District of Columbia. Related operating expenses are provided under the appropriation Federal Supply Service, operating expenses.

Also financed by the fund and reimbursed by using agencies are the operations of interagency motor vehicle pools, the rehabilitation and repair of furniture and equipment, and the redistribution of materials no longer needed overseas.

Budget program.—This estimate provides for supplies and services to military and civilian agencies and provides for the operation of the credit return program.

1. Supply operations—(a) Stores, regular.—Stock of common-use commodities are purchased in volume and stored in supply depots for sale to Government agencies. Sales were $830.7 million in 1978, and are estimated to be $867.2 million in 1979, and $833.3 million in 1980.

(b) Stores, direct delivery.—Orders for stores-type items, if sufficiently large and delivery time is not a factor, are placed with the commercial source of supply for delivery directly to the customer. Sales were $34.8 million in 1978, and are estimated to be $37.6 million in 1979 and $46.0 million in 1980.

(c) Nonstores items.—Definite quantity requirements of commodities which are not susceptible to economical stocking in supply depots are purchased for direct shipment to using agencies. Sales were $553.3 million in 1978, and are estimated to be $550.3 million in 1979 and $580.0 million in 1980.

2. Export operations.—Stores and nonstores items are shipped to overseas customers. Receipts to the fund cover packing, transportation costs, and other reimbursable services. Sales were $22.8 million in 1978, and are estimated to be $19.0 million in 1979, and $18.0 million in 1980.

3. Property management and disposal operations.—Furniture and equipment repair services provided through commercial sources wherever feasible and economical were $0.8 million in 1978 and are estimated to be $1.0 million in 1979 and 1980. Receipts to the fund covering redistribution costs of materials no longer required overseas were $0.3 million in 1978, and are estimated to be $0.6 million in 1979, and $0.5 million in 1980.

4. Motor pools.—Services are provided through a system of interagency motor pools. Sales were $150.8 million in 1978, and are estimated to be $169.1 million in 1979, and $201.4 million in 1980. Vehicle mileage in interagency motor pools was 943 million in 1978 and is estimated to be 980 million in 1979 and 1,021 million for 1980.

5. Administrative equipment.—Administrative equipment is purchased and charged on an accrual basis to the using activities. Receipts were $3.0 million in 1978, and are estimated to be $3.6 million in 1979 and 1980.

Other revenue and expense.—Gain or losses on equipment disposals, adjustments between fiscal years, inventory writeoffs, and discounts are applied against operating costs.

Operating results and financial condition.—Investment of the U.S. Government at the end of 1980 is estimated at $481.2 million consisting of $282.8 million direct appropriations, $198.6 million donated assets, with $0.2 million deducted for long-term leave liability.

Any operating surplus, as determined by the General Accounting Office audit, must be returned to the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

This fund was authorized by Public Law 87-847, approved October 23, 1962. It finances, on a reimbursable basis, a telecommunications system for the Federal Government which is a major operating component of the national communications system.

Expenses payable from the fund include personal services, procurement by lease or purchase of equipment and operating facilities (including cryptographic devices), and other costs necessary to operate the system. These expenses are reimbursed from appropriations and funds of any agency or organization for telecommunications services and facilities made available to them.

The initial capital of $9 million appropriated in 1963 was increased by $20 million appropriated in 1977. This capital may be increased by donation of supplies and equipment.

Budget program.—The estimate provides for a continued increase in the volume and quality of communications services provided to executive agencies of the Government. To provide for competitive procurement of telecommunications facilities and services, an additional $5 million in appropriated capital is requested. Total sales for 1978 were $377.2 million and are estimated at $414.2 million in 1979, and $447.2 million in 1980.

1. Voice program.—Provides for a telephonic system which enables personnel in each Federal agency to communicate directly with any other agency in the Nation. The system provides day-to-day services and incorporates features which would be necessary in emergency situations. In addition, this program finances reimbursable services in support of other agencies dedicated requirements. Total sales for 1978 were $327.8 million and are estimated at $361.8 million in 1979 and $390.0 million in 1980. Intercity Federal Telecommunications System calls were 197 million in 1978 and are estimated at 214 million in 1979, and 230 million in 1980.

2. Record program.—Provides a common unified records communications system to satisfy record communications requirements of the Federal civil agencies by providing machine-to-machine service for transmission of data by teletypewriter, facsimile, and other transmission media while at the same time providing message processing capability required for peak-period traffic loads, time zone differences, machine code and language translation, and processing of multiple address messages. Total sales for this program are projected to increase from $31.2 million in 1978 to $31.8 million in 1979 and $35.8 million in 1980.

3. Circuit procurement program.—Provides for centralized procurement of circuits and related equipment for civil agencies to obtain the benefits of multiple tariff offerings of commercial carriers, while at the same time permitting each agency to maintain operational control over its own circuits. Sales are projected to increase from $12.9 million in 1978 to $13.4 million in 1979 and $14.1 million in 1980.

4. Special program.—Provides for an effective communications security program for civil agencies including GSA in keeping with the objectives of the U.S. communications security plan, and a consolidated program of procurement and maintenance of equipment to implement such security plans. This program provides assurances for the continuity of the Federal telecommunications system in the event that portions of the system are disabled or destroyed. In addition, this program provides telecommunications support to the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration in the emergency and major disaster programs. Total sales for 1978 were $5.4 million and are estimated at $7.3 million in 1979 and $7.3 million in 1980.

Operating results and financial condition.—At the end of 1978, the net investment in the fund is $28.7 million, composed of $29.0 million appropriated, $0.2 million donated assets capitalized, less $0.5 million unfunded leave liability. Following the close of each fiscal year any surplus earnings, after making provision for

The Automatic data processing fund was authorized by Public Law 89-306, to coordinate and provide for the economic and efficient purchase, lease and maintenance of automatic data processing equipment by Federal agencies.

The fund finances on a reimbursable basis a Government-wide automatic data processing operation, including the procurement by lease, purchase, transfer, or otherwise of ADP equipment, maintenance of equipment, procurement and/or development of software programs with Government-wide application, and operation of service centers and related functions.

Budget program.—The estimate provides for a continued increase in revenue during 1979 and 1980. Sales are estimated to increase from $72.4 million in 1978 to $124.4 million in 1979 and to $151.6 million in 1980.

1. Data processing.—This activity finances the operation of a data processing program which provides ADP services on a Government-wide basis. These ADP services consist of local and remote computer processing, including teleprocessing services contracts; project manager, and consultant services; computer performance evaluation and simulation; computer systems conversion support; general purpose software; and a full range of commercially acquired data processing services, including programmer analyst services. This program also provides for financing of joint-use ADP facilities operated by two or more agencies under GSA policy guidance. In addition, this program provides financing for Federal data processing centers established to be operated by GSA or by delegation of authority from GSA to be operated by other agencies under GSA policy guidance.

It is estimated that revenue from data processing programs and other related operations will increase from $59.2 million in 1978 to $106.1 million in 1979 and to $134.8 million in 1980.

2. Lease program.—This program finances the purchase and multiyear lease of ADP equipment and software from manufacturers for subsequent lease to Federal agencies at costs substantially below commercial annual lease prices. Purchases are made by the fund when special discounts with time limitations and other arrangements become available and agencies are unable to take advantage of these cost reduction opportunities due to budget cycle limitations. In addition to purchase, this program acquires excess Government-owned ADP equipment where there is a known user or the equipment has a high potential for reutilization, capitalizes it at fair market value, and leases it to Federal agencies at a cost substantially below all other least cost alternatives available to the using agency.

It is estimated that revenue from the lease program will increase from $13.2 million in 1978 to $18.3 million in 1979 and decrease to $16.8 million in 1980.

Operating results and financial condition.—At the end of 1978, the net investment of the fund is $42.6 million, composed of $30.0 million appropriated, $10.4 million donated assets capitalized, $1.7 million revaluation of equipment capitalized at fair market value, and $0.5 million reserve for unanticipated discontinuance of equipment. Following the close of each fiscal year any surplus earnings after making provision for prior year losses are deposited in miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury.

This appropriation provides for utilization and disposal of excess and surplus real and personal property and rehabilitation of personal property in 1980.

The estimate for 1980 provides for the appraisal of real and personal property, and continuing emphasis on reuse of existing real and personal property and the rehabilitation of personal property to extend its useful life.

1. Property management.—In 1980, all stockpile related activities will be funded under Stockpile operations, Federal Property Resources Service.

2. Real property.—This activity promotes maximum utilization of real property by Federal agencies, and the transfer among agencies of excess real property. It provides for the disposal of surplus real property by sale, exchange, lease, permit, assignment, or transfer as well as the protection and maintenance of excess and surplus property pending its disposition. It also provides for the appraisal of excess and surplus property, necessary environmental and cultural analyses, disposition and predisposition reuse planning, real property utilization surveys, and compliance inspections of properties conveyed for local public benefit.

(a) Utilization and disposal.—In 1980 it is estimated that total dispositions will have a value of approximately $200 million. This includes utilization transfers valued at $25 million, public benefit disposals valued at $125 million, and sales of $50 million. Proceeds are estimated at $60 million, including $30 million for deposit to the Land and Water Conservation Fund and $30 million for deposit to other funds such as Defense Family Housing and Postal Service. The number of surveys to be conducted by GSA is estimated at 200 in 1980.

(b) Appraisal.—The total number of appraisals estimated for 1980 is 425.

(c) Protection and maintenance.—In 1980 it is estimated that protection and maintenance costs will reach $1,400 thousand.

3. Personal property disposal.—This activity manages and operates the Government-wide excess Federal personal property program including the utilization, donation, rehabilitation, and sale of property. This embraces the personal property for public benefit purposes; sale of surplus and exchange/sale of personal property (except DOD property); and rehabilitation of personal property owned by the Government to extend its useful life.

4. Stockpile acquisition and disposal.—All stockpile related activities will be funded under Stockpile operations, Federal Property Resources Service in 1980.

5. Service direction.—This activity provides for the management and direction, both departmental and in the field, of programs for real and personal property disposal.

The Government-owned William Langer Jewel Bearing Plant at Rolla, N. Dak., is the only facility of its kind in the United States which has the capability to produce all types of jewel bearings in quantity. The plant was established by the Department of Defense in 1953 and turned over to GSA in 1957. On January 1, 1970, financing of the operation was placed under a revolving fund, which was authorized by Public Law 90-469, approved August 8, 1968.

The plant produces jewel bearings for sale at fixed prices to Government agencies, and their contractors and subcontractors for national defense purposes, and to GSA for the national stockpile. Mandatory source provisions are contained in the Federal Procurement Regulations and Armed Services Procurement Regulations in support of this operation. These provisions require Government agencies and their contractors to procure and use jewel-bearings manufactured at the William Langer Jewel Bearing Plant under certain specified conditions.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration, which observed its 20th anniversary on October 1, 1978, conducts the civilian aeronautics and space activities of the United States for peaceful purposes. The agency's goals are to maintain the Nation's leadership in space and aeronautics research and technology and in the utilization and exploration of space. The objectives of its activities are to: extend knowledge of the Earth, its environment, the solar system, and the universe; expand the practical applications of space technology; develop, operate, and improve manned and unmanned space vehicles; improve the civil and military usefulness of U.S. aeronautical vehicles and reduce their environmental effects and energy consumption; disseminate pertinent findings to potential users; and promote international cooperation in peaceful activities in space. The 1980 program provides for continued progress toward these goals at a pace consistent with fiscal constraints.

This appropriation provides for the following research and development activities of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration:

1. Space transportation systems.—The goal is to improve the effectiveness of the transportation systems and associated support required to increase the benefits from the uses of space and to decrease the cost of space operations. The objectives now focus on development of the reusable Earth-to-orbit space shuttle vehicle and establishment of a national fleet of orbiters to meet the needs of U.S. and international users of space; creation of a capability for space transportation system (STS) operations, including U.S. participation with the European Space Agency on the spacelab, which will be flown in the shuttle; provision for STS operations, including operational flight hardware and consumables, crew training, payload integration, and launch, flight, recovery, and refurbishment activities. Also included are studies and advanced development to establish a basis for exploiting the STS capabilities; and expendable launch vehicle supporting activities necessary for automated missions until the transition to the space transportation system is completed.

(a) Space shuttle.—The space shuttle, the first reusable Earth-to-orbit vehicle, is the cornerstone of the space transportation system that will open up a new era in Earth resources observations, scientific exploration, national security, and research and technology advances. The reusable shuttle has unique capabilities that are not available with today's expendable launch vehicles. These capabilities include retrieval of satellites, experiments, and equipment from orbit for reuse; maintenance and repair of satellites in orbit; reuse of space laboratories; and rescue missions. The shuttle system will increase the versatility and productivity of space operations for all users—NASA, DOD, other Government agencies, universities, commercial firms, and international organizations.

Space shuttle development is proceeding toward the targets of first orbital flight in late 1979 and initial operational capability in 1981. Accomplishments in 1978 included successful completion of the orbiter Enterprise's approach and landing test series; progress on the full-scale ground vibration testing of the Enterprise combined with the external tank and twin solid rocket boosters, and testing of the orbiter structural test article; successful completion of the first phase of the main engine propulsion testing; and achievement of consecutive tests of a main engine for the full time required to place the shuttle into Earth orbit. The second orbiter, plus external tank and solid rocket booster hardware, is nearing completion leading to delivery to the Kennedy Space Center in the first part of 1979 in preparation for the first orbital flight. Because the pace of progress during 1978 was slower than planned due to additional work required and technical problems encountered as the fabrication and test efforts intensified, the development and production schedules were revised to rebalance the overall program.

The 1980 program is based on the availability of a supplemental appropriation in 1979 to support the first orbital flight and to carry out the shuttle development, test, and evaluation efforts as efficiently as possible. During 1979, the tempo of ground test and checkout activity will continue to intensify and, unless unforeseen problems occur, the first orbital flight test will be achieved. Emphasis in 1980 will focus on the initial orbital flight test missions to demonstrate the system's capabilities, modification of the structural test article to achieve full orbital flight capability, and fabrication of the third and fourth orbiters.

(b) Space flight operations.—The objective is to facilitate the utilization of space transportation system capabilities and to reduce the cost of space operations. Principal areas of activity include the NASA development efforts, other than the space shuttle, related to the establishment of a space transportation system operations capability; development, test, and mission support at NASA centers; space transportation system operations requirements; and advanced programs study and evaluation efforts. The 1980 program provides for continuation of these support efforts on a plan consistent with the rephrasing of the shuttle development and space transportation system (STS) operations.

The STS operations capability development activities are required to facilitate the transition to space transportation system operations and to capitalize on the capabilities provided by this system. Principal areas of activity include NASA development efforts related to the spacelab, and the upper stages to place satellites in higher altitude orbits; standard, reusable ground and flight payload support equipment; reconfiguration of the Mission Control Center; and payload and operations support. Definition and verification of methods for increasing the thrust of the shuttle system to meet mission requirements will also be conducted.

The spacelab, a joint effort with the European Space Agency (ESA), will be carried in the cargo bay of the shuttle orbiter and will provide domestic and international users with a multipurpose, reusable space laboratory. ESA is funding the development, production, and delivery of the first spacelab and associated ground support equipment; NASA is providing for development of auxiliary flight and ground support equipment and procurement of additional sets of flight hardware and ground support equipment necessary to meet its mission requirements. The upper stages, which consist of the inertial upper stage being developed by DOD and the spinning solid upper stage being developed by industry, are required for high energy Earth orbit and planetary missions. During 1980, NASA activities will continue in support of its current operational mission requirements.

Reconfiguration of the Mission Control Center, Houston, is also proceeding in support of the space transportation system requirements. The 1980 efforts include systems integration and testing of the capability for simultaneous support of two orbiters. In addition, progress will continue on payload and operations support activities, including activation of the payload operations control center, integration of orbital flight test payloads, and mission planning and analyses.

Space transportation system operations activities in 1980 will focus on continued fabrication, assembly, and checkout of the external tanks, the replacement parts for solid rocket boosters, and the upper stages required for the initial operational missions. Long leadtime hardware components will also be procured. In addition, flight mission planning and operational systems analyses will be conducted.

Advanced programs activities will emphasize continued study, definition, and supporting advanced development for future potential missions. Included are continuation of studies and evaluation work on the 25-kW power systems and other efforts to capitalize on the space transportation system's capabilities.

(c) Expendable launch vehicle (ELV) development and support.—This effort provides ELV engineering, reliability, and launch support services required for NASA's currently approved automated spacecraft missions. This support is required until the transition to STS operations is completed.

2. Scientific investigations in space.—The goal is to extend our knowledge of the evolution and dynamics of life processes, the solar system, and the universe. Scientific investigations in space provide for systematic study of the Earth and its space environment, the Sun, the planets, interplanetary space, other stars and galaxies, and the interactions among these bodies. The results of these investigations increase our understanding of the fundamental laws of the universe, including the forces affecting the environment and life on Earth.

(a) Physics and astronomy.—The objective is to expand our knowledge of the Earth's space environment, the Sun, and other stars and celestial bodies. Research is being conducted to investigate the Earth's upper atmosphere and ionosphere, the magnetosphere, and the interplanetary medium, as well as the interrelationships among these areas and the processes that control them. Space-based investigations of cosmic ray, X-ray, gamma ray, ultraviolet, infrared, and radio emissions, which cannot be detected by ground-based observatories because of the obscuring effects of the Earth's atmosphere, provide unique opportunities to study the Sun and other celestial bodies. The results from these programs range from discovery of the Earth's radiation belts to detection of phenomena such as pulsars, quasars, black holes, and neutron stars.

Accomplishments in 1978 included the successful launches of the second high energy astronomy observatory (HEAO) to explore previously inaccessible regions of the electromagnetic spectrum, international Sun-Earth explorers to study the interactions between solar winds and the Earth's space environment, and an international ultraviolet explorer to investigate this spectral region of stars and planets. During 1979, highlights will include launches of a third HEAO to follow up on observations of powerful energy sources, and a solar maximum mission to take advantage of the opportunity to study solar flares and related phenomena during a period of peak activity.

Development will continue on the 2.4 meter, high resolution space telescope, which will increase by several hundredfold the portion of the universe accessible for observation and open up a new era in astrophysics; the solar polar mission, a cooperative venture with the European Space Agency, which will focus on the first detailed observations of the Sun's polar regions and increase our understanding of the influence of solar activity on the Earth's weather patterns; and a series of experiments which will be conducted on spacelab missions. Work will also continue on definition and development of explorer missions, including the infrared astronomy satellite, a cooperative effort with the Netherlands and the United Kingdom; the dynamics explorer; and the solar mesospheric explorer for research on the interaction between the Sun and the Earth's ozone and related chemistry.

(b) Planetary exploration.—The objective is to increase scientific knowledge about the origin and evolution of our solar system and of life processes, and to apply the results of these investigations to a better understanding of our own planet. The program provides for systematic studies of the planets and their satellites, meteoroids, asteroids, comets, and the particles and fields of interplanetary space. These activities are accomplished by using automated space flight missions, supported by laboratory and theoretical research, instrument development, and ground-based observations.

Since the advent of planetary exploration some 16 years ago with the first Mariner launch to Venus in 1962, the United States has achieved 15 automated missions to the planets. Reconnaissance missions to Mercury, Venus, Mars, and Jupiter were successfully conducted. Pioneer 10 is now escaping the solar system, and Pioneer 11 is en route to a rendezvous with Saturn in September 1979. The early flyby missions of Mars, followed by an orbiter in 1971, paved the way for the highly successful Viking orbiter and lander missions. These achievements are revolutionizing previous theories of the solar system and advancing our understanding of the Earth's evolution and environment.

The 1980 activities provide for orderly progress in the systematic exploration of the solar system. Emphasis will be on capitalizing on the returns from past and ongoing missions.

Detailed exploration of the inner planets began in 1974 with Mariner 10's first closeup views of Mercury and Venus. In 1978, two Pioneer missions were launched to conduct further studies of Venus: the orbiter mission to provide coverage of the planet's characteristics and environment; the multiprobe mission to obtain the first detailed measurements of the dense Venusian atmosphere. With respect to Mars, Viking operations will be concluded. Analysis of the valuable scientific data from the Viking missions will continue.

Exploration of the outer planets began with Pioneer 10's flyby of Jupiter and continued with Pioneer 11's encounter of Jupiter in 1974. In 1977, two Voyager missions were launched to expand our knowledge of Jupiter and Saturn. The Jupiter encounters will occur in March and July of 1979, respectively, and the Saturn encounters in November 1980 and August 1981, respectively. These spacecraft will also make initial scientific measurements of several satellites of the two giant planets, and an option exists to target one spacecraft to Uranus. In addition, development will continue on the Galileo mission, which is planned for launch in 1982. This mission will provide the first indepth studies of Jupiter's atmosphere and long-term observations of its characteristics and satellites.

(c) Life sciences.—This program will continue in 1980 to provide for the research and technology necessary to meet the goals of insuring human health, safety, well-being, and effective performance in space flight; utilizing space technology and the space environment to advance knowledge and applications in Earth medicine and biology; and understanding the origin and distribution of life in the universe.

3. Space and terrestrial applications.—The goal is to develop, demonstrate, and transfer space technology and related capabilities which can be effectively applied to down-to-earth needs.

(a) Space applications.—The objective is to expand the practical applications and benefits of space technology by conducting a carefully coordinated, logically phased set of research and development activities that demonstrate the applications of space-related technology to Earth benefits. The 1980 program provides for continued progress toward this objective in the areas of remote sensing, materials processing, and communications. The research and development activities involve active and increasing participation by current and future users of these capabilities, within the Government, in industry, and in the academic community.

Earth resources identification and monitoring by means of remote sensing has demonstrated new capabilities to provide useful data in such areas as agricultural assessments, water resources management, coastal zone monitoring, improved mapping, land use and surface mine monitoring, forestry and range resources inventory, and mineral and petroleum exploration. Remote sensing activities feature continuing operations of Landsat-3, which is providing data in both the visible and infrared bands of the energy spectrum. Development will continue on Landsat-D, which will carry a second generation, higher resolution remote sensing instrument, called the thematic mapper, and the flight proven multispectral scanner. Launch of Landsat-D in 1981 is expected to expand and enhance the uses of remote sensing data in a number of beneficial applications. The Landsat remote sensing capabilities are being supplemented by experimental use of data from the heat capacity mapping mission launched in 1978. Measurements from this satellite are being applied to thermal inertia mapping and rock-type identification, with the potential for substantial contributions in oil and mineral exploration. Joint activities with users, including the public sector, will be conducted to demonstrate and evaluate specific applications of remote sensing data in a wide variety of areas. In 1980, a joint activity will be initiated in agriculture research with the Departments of Agriculture and Commerce and other agencies. The objective is to develop the application of aerospace technology to crop production estimation, especially in foreign areas; and for quantitative early warning capabilities; and for related efforts.

Comprehensive planning, covering technical, programmatic, and institutional arrangements for possible future integrated remote sensing systems will be studied in 1980. In addition, studies will be initiated, as a joint effort with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the Department of Defense, on the use of remote sensing from space for application to oceanographic programs.

Remote sensing will also be applied to magnetic field measurement with the launch of Magsat in 1979. This satellite will provide data for use by the U.S. Geological Survey to update and improve worldwide magnetic anomaly maps which will be used in long-term planning of mineral and hydrocarbon exploration. Space technology is also used in studies of tectonic plate movements and stresses which contribute to our understanding of earthquakes. These activities will continue in 1980.

In the area of atmospheric and ocean conditions, NASA is involved with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and others in research and development activities directed toward near-term improvements in weather prediction, pollution monitoring, and ocean condition forecasting, as well as in longer term efforts directed toward major improvements in these areas and toward a much better understanding of climatic trends. Upper atmospheric research is progressing toward the goal of understanding the Earth's atmosphere well enough to assess the physical effects resulting from natural and man-caused events, such as the release of fluorocarbons in the atmosphere. Three satellites were successfully launched in 1978: Nimbus-G, an experimental air and water pollution monitoring satellite; Tiros-N, the prototype for an advanced meteorological satellite system; and Seasat-A, an experimental satellite for observing and monitoring ocean conditions. The stratospheric aerosol and gas experiment mission to measure atmospheric constituents is scheduled for launch in 1979. Research and development activities in weather forecasting will include severe storm research and participation in a major global atmospheric research program experiment. Climate research activities will be continued in 1980 in cooperation with other Federal agencies, and development will continue on an Earth radiation budget satellite system. This satellite system is designed to measure variations in the energy exchange between the Earth's atmosphere and space and other atmospheric factors important to climate research. Research and development will be pursued in environmental quality monitoring and in oceanographic areas related to the remote sensing capabilities of spaceborne systems. Work will be in progress in 1980 on atmospheric experiments to be conducted on spacelab missions, including a halogen occultation experiment to demonstrate improved capabilities to monitor pollution of the upper atmosphere.

Materials processing research and development activities are designed to exploit the unique characteristics of the space environment to achieve results which are not possible or economically practical on Earth. Experiments are being conducted in laboratories and with sounding rockets to build on the results of tests conducted on previous space flights and to prepare for experiments to be conducted on early spacelab missions. Development of experiments to be conducted on these missions will continue in 1980.

In communications, research efforts will focus on advanced technology for communications satellite systems, with significantly improved capabilities, to maintain U.S. leadership in this field, and on providing technical support and consultation to other Government agencies. Technical consultation activities include support of the Nation's participation in the World Administrative Radio Conference, which will reallocate worldwide usage of radio frequencies for communications activities. Search and rescue development effort is progressing toward a first flight on an NOAA spacecraft in 1982. This program is being carried out in cooperation with Canada and France and with the support of the Departments of Transportation, Defense, and Commerce. The satellite will demonstrate improved capabilities for detecting and locating distress signals from aircraft and marine vessels.

(b) Technology utilization.—This program is designed to accelerate the transfer to the nonaerospace industry, as well as State and local governments, technology generated by NASA and NASA contractors. During 1980, NASA will continue its efforts to assure widespread dissemination of new technology through a variety of established mechanisms: publications; industrial applications centers; computer software management and information centers; State technical assistance centers; application teams; and applications engineering projects.

4. Space research and technology.—The goal is to help assure U.S. leadership in space by providing an advanced technology base to meet current and future program needs. The objective is to conduct the research and technology activities necessary to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of space systems and operations and to decrease their cost.

The 1980 program provides for continuation of the generic research and technology base activities necessary for technology advances in the key discipline areas. The 1980 activities also support continued progress in ongoing systems technology and experimental efforts. These efforts include continuation of the second phase of the NASA end-to-end data system leading to a major increase in efficiency over current systems; work on technology for space structures, materials, and propulsion; and experiments to be conducted on the shuttle missions.

5. Aeronautical research and technology.—The goal is to help assure U.S. leadership in aeronautics by providing a sound technology base to meet current and future program needs. The objectives are to conduct the research and technology activities necessary for increasing the safety, efficiency, and economy of air transportation systems, while decreasing their energy consumption and environmental effects; to support the Department of Defense in maintaining the superiority of the Nation's military aircraft; and to maintain a strong competitive position of the United States in the international aviation marketplace.

The 1980 program supports these objectives by emphasizing the critical technology needs identified by internal and external assessments, including NASA, other Federal agencies, industry, advisory groups, and other users of technology. The thrust of the 1980 program will support continued progress in technology aimed at improving aircraft energy efficiency, reducing noise and pollution, improving safety and terminal area operations, and advancing long- and short-haul air transportation concepts. The aircraft energy efficiency efforts involve broad-based technology activities on engine systems and components, transport aircraft configurations, composite structures, and laminar flow control. These activities are moving toward the objective of providing the technology advances leading to a major reduction in aircraft fuel consumption.

General aviation activities will focus on the reduction of noise and emissions, crashworthiness and advanced low-cost avionics systems. In vertical takeoff and landing technology, broad-based research for future civil and military aircraft applications will proceed. Supersonic cruise research will continue to establish a focused technology base in the areas of propulsion, aerodynamics, structures, and controls. Research and technology efforts will also proceed in support of the military in the area of high performance aircraft.

6. Energy technology—The objective is to assure that the national energy programs benefit from the expertise NASA has gained in developing aeronautics and space technology. This program seeks to identify and evaluate NASA's aerospace technologies and capabilities that have energy applications, and to provide support to Government agencies engaged in national energy programs.

7. Supporting activity—The objective is to provide general support necessary for the attainment of NASA missions.

(a) Tracking and data acquisition—This program provides tracking and data acquisition support to the entire NASA flight program, including automated missions to the planets and in Earth orbit, manned missions, sounding rockets, and aerodynamic test flights.

This appropriation provides funding for the payment of compensation and pension benefits to veterans and survivors who satisfy certain requirements as set forth in title 38, United States Code. Other benefits which are related to, but not readily combined with either the compensation or pension programs, are also funded by this appropriation.

This appropriation's funding requirements for 1980, including additional funding for proposed legislation, are estimated to be $11,700.2 million, an increase of $993.5 million.

1. Compensation.—Compensation is payable as either a disability benefit or a survivorship benefit. Criteria for entitlement are based on a veteran's disabilities incurred in or aggravated by active military service, death while on active duty, or death resulting from service-connected disabilities.

Veteran compensation cases will decrease slightly to an estimated 2,257,308 average cases during 1980. Survivor cases are projected to decline by 1,626 to an estimated 359,230 during 1980.

The "Veterans Disability Compensation and Survivors Benefits Act of 1978" increased both disability compensation for disabled veterans and dependency indemnity compensation (DIC) rates for surviving spouses and children by approximately 7.3% effective October 1, 1978. Legislation is being proposed to provide a 7.8% cost-of-living increase for veterans, and DIC surviving spouses and children, effective October 1, 1979.

2. Pensions.—As with compensation, pension may be paid to a veteran or his survivor(s). Veteran's entitlement is based on active duty service of a specific length (normally 90 days or more) during a designated war period; disabilities considered permanent and total; and countable income below established levels. There is no disability requirement for survivor cases.

Veteran pension cases are projected to increase by 2,230 in 1980 to an estimated caseload of 1,024,700. Survivor pension cases will increase by 2,800 during the same period.

The "Veterans and Survivors' Pension Improvement Act of 1978," effective January 1, 1979, reformed the pension program and provides automatic annual cost of living increases comparable to annual social security increases for those pensioners in the improved program and to parents receiving dependency and indemnity compensation. The first increase will be made in July 1979 with increases each July thereafter.

3. Burial benefits.—Provides for the payment of a burial allowance up to $1,100 when a veteran dies as the result of a service-connected disability, the payment of a plot allowance of $150 when an eligible veteran is not buried in a national cemetery or other cemetery under the jurisdiction of the United States, and the provision of a headstone or marker for the grave of a veteran. Other burial benefits paid from this appropriation include an allowance of $300 to assist the families of non-service-connected deceased veterans to pay burial and funeral expenses; transportation costs where death occurs under VA care; provision of a flag for a casket; and transportation of the body of a service-connected deceased veteran to a national cemetery.

4. All other.—These payments cover miscellaneous benefits which are not readily combined with any of the preceding categories. They include payments for: retired officers, adjusted service and dependents pay, special allowance dependents, invalid lifts and other devices, veterans mortgage life insurance, veterans clothing allowance, death gratuities, veterans group life insurance, and since 1977, soldiers and sailors civil relief.

This appropriation finances the education, training, and rehabilitation of veterans and servicepersons who served since February 1, 1955 (post-Korean conflict veterans and post-Vietnam era veterans). It also finances educational assistance allowances for eligible dependents of those veterans: (a) who died from service-connected causes or have a total and permanent rated service-connected disability, and (b) servicepersons who were captured or missing in action.

A combination of fewer beneficiaries remaining and proposed legislation reduces the 1980 funding estimates $167.8 million below 1979.

1. Education and training.—The number of post-Korean conflict veterans and servicepersons in training is expected to decrease in 1980 to a level of 945,300. This decrease in trainees is attributable in part to more veterans reaching their delimiting date, termination of the post-Korean GI bill benefits for persons entering the military after December 31, 1976, and proposed legislation that would eliminate flight and correspondence training after September 30, 1979. Legislation is also proposed which would grant a 2-year extension of the delimiting period for Vietnam era veterans in on-the-job training and also to these veterans in vocational technical training or high school if they do not possess a high school diploma or its equivalent.

Public Law 94-502 instituted the post-Vietnam era GI bill effective January 1, 1977. In 1980, 11,400 veterans are expected to train under this program.

The number of sons and daughters receiving educational assistance is expected to decrease to a level of 77,270 in 1980, while the number of wives and widows will decrease to 21,130. Proposed legislation would eliminate correspondence training after September 30, 1979.

The following table provides a comparison of trainees and costs for the four types of trainees mentioned above.

2. Special assistance to disabled veterans.—Disabled veterans requiring vocational rehabilitation receive assistance to cover the costs of subsistence, tuition, books, supplies, and equipment. The number of trainees will decrease to 28,800 in 1980. Legislation is proposed to implement certain recommendations of a study of the vocational rehabilitation program mandated by Public Law 95-202. These enhancements to the program will result in an additional 500 trainees in 1980. In addition, other recommendations of the study are being initiated administratively in 1979.

Specially adapted housing grants are provided to certain severely disabled veterans. The number of grants is expected to decrease to 840 in 1980 as the effects of Public Law 95-117 which expanded eligibility begin to lessen. The Veterans Housing Benefits Act of 1978 raised the maximum grant from $25,000 to $30,000, effective October 1, 1978.

An allowance is provided to certain disabled veterans and certain persons on active duty toward the purchase price of new automobiles, adaptive equipment, and the maintenance and replacement of such equipment. Auto grants are expected to decrease to 940 in 1980 while adaptive equipment cases will decrease to 10,515. The Veterans Disability Compensation and Survivors Benefit Act of 1978 raised the maximum auto grant from $3,300 to $3,800 effective October 1, 1978.

The Veterans insurance and indemnities appropriation is made up of the former appropriations for Military and naval insurance, applicable to World War I veterans, the National service life insurance, applicable to certain World War II veterans, and the Servicemen's indemnities, applicable to Korean conflict veterans. The appropriation also provides supplemental funds for the Service-disabled veterans insurance fund. Financing is mainly by congressional appropriation, and by a small amount of premiums.

1. Military and naval insurance.—Payments are made to the U.S. Government life insurance fund as a reimbursement for claims traceable to extra hazards of military service. Payments are made also to policyholders and beneficiaries for claims on war-risk insurance issued to servicemen and veterans of World War I.

2. National service life insurance.—Payments are made to the National service life insurance fund as a reimbursement for costs of the following: (a) disability and death claims traceable to the extra hazards of service; (b) gratuitous insurance granted to certain persons who were unable to make application for national service life insurance; and (c) death claims on policies under waiver of premiums while the insured was on active duty.

Payments are made also to policyholders and beneficiaries on nonparticipating national service life insurance policies issued to World War II veterans with service-connected disabilities and on worthy exceptional cases that would not have been covered under the law in effect at the time of death.

The general decline in the policies in force is indicated in the following table (dollars in thousands):

3. Payments to service-disabled veterans insurance fund.— Payments are made to the Service-disabled veterans insurance fund to supplement the premium and other receipts of the fund in amounts necessary to pay claims on insurance policies issued to veterans with service-connected disabilities.

Financing.— Operations are financed by appropriation funding and a small amount of premiums.

The Veterans Administration is committed to providing the highest quality medical care to eligible veteran beneficiaries. To this end, the VA will operate the largest medical care delivery system in the country, with 172 hospitals, 16 domiciliaries, 95 nursing homes, and 228 outpatient clinics in 1980. In addition to these facilities, patients are cared for in contract Federal and community hospitals, in community nursing homes run with VA support, and in State-run domiciliaries, nursing homes and hospitals. This system will treat over 1.3 million patients in 1980, and over 18.1 million outpatient medical and dental visits will be made to VA and community facilities.

In 1980, a continued priority for VA health care will be meeting the needs of veterans with service-connected disabilities and of aging veterans. To do so, the Veterans Administration will continue its efforts to increase the flexibility of the medical care delivery system by providing treatment through the mode and program most suited to the patient's need. The use of outpatient and ambulatory care programs will obviate the need for some hospital admissions and use of community living arrangements such as home-based care, foster home care, et cetera, and will permit increased outplacement of hospitalized veterans with a corresponding reduction in length of stay. Arrangements will be continued and improved to provide for hospital and medical care, in the private sector, for certain dependents and survivors of veterans, as authorized by law.

Specific increases are requested in 1980 for (1) workload increase for new VA Nursing Homes, (2) operational requirements of new facilities, (3) noncontrollable payroll increases, and (4) increased usage of drugs, utilities, communications, provisions, prosthetics, medical and dental supplies, and operating supplies. Offsetting these increases, in part are workload decreases for existing VA hospitals and domiciliaries.

1. Medical research.—This program is comprised of institutional and special research and is designed to utilize the unique capability of the Veterans Administration medical system in answering questions which can only be answered by a large number of patients under a single management. Examples of some projects included under institutional research are: Alcohol and cirrhosis of the liver; aging; schizophrenia; spinal cord injury; impact of psychotherapeutic drugs; and anticoagulant therapy in pulmonary embolism. Certain cooperative studies included under special research are: Surgical treatment of angina pectoris; cancer chemotherapy; and relative potency and side-effect liability of new and marketed analgesics and sedatives.

2. Rehabilitative research.—This is a research program to develop and test prosthetic, orthopedic, and sensory aids and adaptive equipment for the purpose of improving the care and rehabilitation of disabled eligible veterans, including amputees, paraplegics, and the blind.

3. Health services research.—This program provides support for health services projects at VA medical centers for improving the effectiveness and economy of delivery of health services and improving the accessibility of services to veterans.

This appropriation provides for the administration of nonmedical veterans benefits through the Department of Veterans Benefits; operation and maintenance of 107 national cemeteries by the Department of Memorial Affairs; data processing operations and communications systems through the Office of Data Management and Telecommunications; and top management direction and support through agency-level staff offices.

Amounts requested for 1980 are $51.1 million less than the total 1979 estimate including supplemental requirements. Reductions result primarily from CP&E Target System savings (over 900 average employment) and the non-recurrence of 1979 Target Development costs.

1. General administration.—This activity contains the executive direction of the agency and several top level supporting offices. In addition, it covers the Board of Veterans Appeals which decides all cases of appeals to the Administrator on claims involving benefits under veterans legislation.

2. Data management.—This activity manages all computer operations and provides technical support and assistance in the development of new computer and communications systems.

3. Veterans benefits.—This activity determines eligibility and adjudicates all claims for compensation, pensions, educational assistance, housing loan assistance, and insurance awards. A summary of program objectives and anticipated workload is included in the following paragraphs:

(b) Veterans services.—The mission of this service is to provide information, advice, and assistance concerning the availability and procurement of benefits under the law to all veterans, their dependents, and survivors.

Telephone actions.....	23,097	21,800	21,800
Field examinations.....	106	108	110

(c) Compensation, pension, and education.—This activity provides timely and efficient service to veterans and their dependents related to compensation, pension, and education benefits under the various laws enacted by Congress. Compensation and pension workloads are expected to increase slightly, and the number of trainees is expected to decrease as reflected in the following table:

	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate

(d) Loan guaranty.—This program mission is to provide a viable form of credit assistance whereby housing credit needs of veterans and servicemen may be satisfied by private capital on more liberal terms than generally available to nonveterans. Added responsibilities associated with the Housing Act of 1974 and the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act of 1974 produce a continued high level of loan activity. Key workloads are listed below:

Loan originations.....	382	379	377
Property acquisitions.....	16	18	19

4. Memorial affairs.—Effective September 1, 1973, the Veterans Administration became responsible for administering the National Cemetery System. Cemeterial operations include overall program administration, maintenance of grounds and equipment, and headstone procurement and assignment. Key workload forecasts are as follows:

To assist eligible veterans to obtain credit for the purchase or construction of homes, the Veterans Administration guarantees loans made by private lenders. The total number of guaranteed or insured loans closed is expected to be 376,400 in 1979 and 380,150 in 1980, bringing the total amount of guaranteed loans outstanding by the end of 1980 to $99.5 billion. The Loan guaranty revolving fund provides for expenses and revenues of property and loan transactions resulting from settlement of guaranty claims.

Budget program.—1. Real property acquisitions.—Private lenders who have acquired property as a result of foreclosure on defaulted guaranteed or insured loans may elect to convey that property to the Veterans Administration. The table below reflects this activity and excludes the amount of indebtedness established against the veteran:

	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Number of property acquisitions processed .....	13,032	15,200	16,253

Total cost (in thousands) .....	$314,880	$376,960	$423,391

2. Property improvements.—After conveyance of the property to the Veterans Administration, capital expenditures are often necessary to place the property in salable condition. The following table summarizes these expenditures:

	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Number of properties acquired .....	15,499	18,225	19,268

Total cost (in thousands) .....	$25,469	$30,618	$34,104

3. Claims processed.—These payments are made to lenders in accordance with the Veterans Administration guaranty contract and represent the difference between the amount owed by the veteran on a defaulted loan and the value of the foreclosed property (as established by Veterans Administration). These payments are in addition to property acquisition costs shown in 1, above. The following table reflects this activity:

4. Repurchase of loans sold, net.—Pursuant to Veterans Administration Regulation 4600, dated March 22, 1962, the Administrator may sell (with full recourse) loans which have been created incident to the sale of Veterans Administration acquired property. If the loans go into default, the Administrator may repurchase them. The following table reflects this activity:

Average cost per repurchase .....	$17,993	$18,492	$19,447
Total cost (in thousands) .....	$43,633	$39,000	$42,958

5. Cash advances—Vendee loans.—Cash expenditures are not involved in the establishment of vendee loans or installment contracts. However, it is often necessary to subsequently advance cash on behalf of the borrower in order to protect the interest of the Government.

	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Total cost (in thousands) .....	$4,618	$3,000	$3,000

6. Loans acquired.—Guaranteed or insured loans in a default status may be purchased by the Administrator to avoid foreclosure when temporary forbearance will allow the veteran borrowers to cure the default. The following table reflects this activity:

9. Discount on sale of loans.—Represents the discount expense to the revolving fund incident to the sale of vendee accounts. Discounts occur when the contract rate of interest does not afford a yield commensurate with the market.

Total cost (in thousands) .....	$8,231	$5,000	$13,995

10. Interest expense on participation certificates.—Represents the amount of interest the trustee is required to pay holders of participation certificates in respect to which vendee accounts have been set aside pursuant to 38 U.S.C. 1820(c). To the extent this expense exceeds the amount of interest collections on an equal amount of loans pledged to the trustee, participation sales insufficiencies result.

Financing of participation sales insufficiencies is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Financing.—Normal revenue and receipts consist principally of interest income, cash proceeds from the sale of real property acquired as a result of foreclosure on guaranteed or insured loans, and repayments on mortgages made incident to such sales. It is estimated that $269.4 million in 1979 and $267.0 million in 1980 will be received from these sources. Also, an estimated $155.0 million in vendee loans will be sold in 1979 and $408.8 million in vendee loans will be sold in 1980.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development—Independent Agencies Appropriation Act, 1978 (Public Law 94-378) provided that the unobligated balances including retained earnings of the Direct loan revolving fund shall be available for transfer to the Loan guaranty revolving fund. $100 million was transferred in 1978; $300 million is anticipated for 1979; and no transfers are planned for 1980.

<sup>2</sup> Full principal amount outstanding for 1978, $6,420 thousand; for 1979, $5,711 thousand; and for 1980, $5,071 thousand.

Direct loans are made to veterans to purchase, construct, or improve homes, to purchase farms on which there are farm residences to be occupied by the veterans as their homes; or to construct, alter, repair, or improve farm dwellings to be occupied by the veterans as their homes.

Such loans are made only in rural areas, small cities, and towns where private credit for the making of guaranteed loans is and has been generally unavailable. The maximum term is 30 years and the maximum loan amount was increased from $25 to $33 thousand effective October 1, 1976, pursuant to Public Law 94-324. The interest rate is the same as the rate allowable for guaranteed loans.

Budget program—1. Direct loans to veterans.—Under existing legislation, there is no terminal date on the authority to make direct loans. The Veterans Housing Act of 1970 revived the expired unused loan entitlement of World War II and Korean conflict veterans and provided that direct lending authority and veterans eligibility would be open-ended until their entitlement is used.

2. Cash advances and repurchases, vendee loans.—Cash expenditures are not involved in the establishment of vendee loans or installment contracts. However, it is often necessary subsequently to advance cash on behalf of the borrower in order to protect the interest of the Government. These advances are added to unpaid loan balances. In addition, vendee loans sold with full recourse may be repurchased if they go into default.

3. Property improvements.—Properties are acquired by foreclosures on, or the voluntary conveyance of, title to properties securing loans owned by the Veterans Administration. Capital expenditures are often necessary to put the property in salable condition. The following table summarizes these expenditures:

4. Interest on borrowings.—Interest expense is accrued monthly. These accruals are computed on the interest bearing capital of the fund and adjusted for the unexpended balance of the fund.

5. Property management and selling expense.—Property management expense includes local real estate taxes, services performed by management brokers, and maintenance of the property in salable condition; sales expense includes brokers' fees and advertising costs incident to the sale of property owned by the Veterans Administration. This cost averages approximately 5% of the selling price. Operating expenses generally include a variety of miscellaneous expenses paid by the Government incident to closing and liquidating loans.

6. Interest expense on participation certificates.—Represents the amount of interest the trustee is required to pay holders of participation certificates in respect to which direct loans have been set aside. To the extent this expense exceeds the amount of interest collections on an equal amount of loans pledged to the trustee, participation sales insufficiencies result.

Financing of participation sales insufficiencies is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

7. Discount on sale of loans.—Represents the discount absorbed by VA incident to the sale of direct loans. Discounts occur when the contract rate of interest does not afford a yield commensurate with the market.

Financing.—Normal revenue and receipts consist principally of interest income and repayments on direct loans made to veterans. It is estimated that $126.7 million in 1979 and $117.6 million in 1980 will be received from these sources. In addition, $145.2 million will be realized from the sale of direct loans in 1980, while none will be sold in 1979.

The Veterans Canteen Service was established by Congress in 1946 to furnish at reasonable prices merchandise and services necessary to the comfort and well-being of veterans in hospitals and domiciliaries operated by the Veterans Administration (38 U.S.C. 4201-08).

Budget program.—Sales are expected to be $145,793 thousand in 1979 and $157,427 thousand in 1980.

Financing.—No appropriation by the Congress will be required for the operation of the Veterans Canteen Service during 1980. Operations will be financed from current revenues. The Congress originally appropriated a total of $4,965 thousand to establish and operate the Service.

Operating results and financial condition.—Operating revenue is expected to be sufficient to cover operating expenses. Retained earnings are required for necessary working capital, therefore, no funds are available for payment to the Treasury during 1979.

This fund finances the payment of claims on nonparticipating life insurance policies issued and currently open for new issues to veterans having service-connected disabilities. The program provides insurance coverage for service-disabled veterans at standard rates. As a result, premium payments do not cover operating and capital reserve requirements. Annual deficits are met by transfers from the Veterans insurance and indemnities appropriation. Administrative expenses are paid from the General operating expenses appropriation.

Operating costs.—(1) Death claims.—Represents payments to designated beneficiaries.

(2) All other.—This category represents payments to policyholders who surrender their policies for their cash value and hold endowment policies which have matured.

Capital investment.—A policyholder may borrow up to 94% of the value of his policy. This activity increases with the increased number of policyholders.

The general increase in the activity of this fund is indicated in the following table (dollars in thousands):

	1977 actual	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Number of policies.....	167,044	181,823	182,500	186,600
Insurance in force.....	$1,508,707	$1,642,902	$1,648,000	$1,685,000

Financing.—Operations are financed from premiums and other receipts. Additional funds are derived from the Veterans insurance and indemnities appropriation, instead of direct appropriations to this fund. It is estimated that the payment will be $2.3 million in 1979 and $2.5 million in 1980.

Operating results and financial condition.—Since premium and other receipts are insufficient to cover operations, the fund continues to project liabilities in excess of assets. The deficit is expected to reach an estimated $150.6 million by September 30, 1980.

This fund pays claims and administration costs on nonparticipating life insurance policies issued during the period May 1, 1965, through May 2, 1966, under three life insurance programs: (1) service-disabled standard insurance, (2) service-disabled rated insurance, and (3) nonservice disabled insurance established by the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940, as amended (38 U.S.C. 725(b)(c)), availing disabled World War II and Korean conflict veterans an opportunity to acquire life insurance coverage who were no longer eligible for other Government insurance because of delimiting dates.

Budget program—1. Death claims.—Represents payments to designated beneficiaries.

2. All other.—This category represents payments to the General operating expense appropriation for the administrative costs of processing claims and maintaining the accounts, and those policyholders who: (a) surrender their policies for cash value; (b) hold endowment policies which have matured; and (c) have purchased total disability income coverage and subsequently become disabled.

3. Policy loans made.—A policyholder may borrow up to 94% of the cash value of his policy.

The following table reflects the decrease in the number of policies and the amount of insurance in force (dollars in thousands):

This fund finances the payment of group life insurance premiums to private insurance companies under the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance Act of 1965 (38 U.S.C. sec. 765-776) as amended and any expenses incurred by the Veterans Administration in administration of the act.

Budget program—1. Premium payments.—This item represents the payment of premiums to private insurance companies. The decrease in payments during 1979 and 1980 is consistent with the estimated decrease in the number of members, and reduction in premium rates.

2. Payment to General operating expenses appropriation.—This item represents payment for administrative costs incident to the program. A minimal increase in requirements is forecast.

This revolving fund, established pursuant to the Veterans Omnibus Health Care Act of 1976, Public Law 94-581, approved October 21, 1976, provides a mechanism for the furnishing of rehabilitative services to certain veteran beneficiaries who are receiving medical care and treatment from the Veterans Administration.

Funds to operate the various rehabilitative activities and provide for the therapeutic work for remuneration for patients and members in Veterans Administration health care facilities are derived from contractual arrangements with private industry or nonprofit entities. This is a self-sustaining fund and therefore no appropriation is required to support these activities.

Under the provisions of 38 U.S.C. 5011, the Supply fund finances on a reimbursable basis the cost of warehouse inventories at depots and field stations and selected items of equipment procured centrally. It also finances, on the same basis, items and services to other Federal agencies who either request or are assigned to the Veterans Administration for support.

Budget program.—The fund provides financial support for: (1) Maintenance of depot and field station inventories; (2) maintenance and operation of three supply depots; (3) a publications depot including printing services to VA installations on a centralized basis; (4) operation of a service and reclamation program operating out of the supply depots; (5) centralized periodical procurement and library cataloging; and (6) a marketing center or central buying office.

The publications and reproduction program provides printing service and distribution of printed matter to VA installations. Printed matter is acquired in accordance with the rules of the Joint Committee on Printing from the Government Printing Office, the General Services Administration, a VA-operated plant, and from commercial sources.

The marketing center is responsible for determining the levels of inventories to be carried at depots and acquiring stock to maintain such levels. It is also responsible for the central contracting of items not available from other Government sources for VA installations and other Government agencies as may be determined economical or advisable.

The Supply fund does not finance costs for the operation and administration of supply activities at field stations. These costs are charged directly to applicable appropriations.

Financing.—Costs of supplies, equipment, and services acquired through the Supply fund and Supply fund operating costs are recovered through reimbursements from the VA appropriations and other Government agencies receiving goods and services.

Operating results and financial conditions.—The fund operated at a loss of $259 thousand in 1978 and carried forward a loss of $134 thousand from prior years. During the past 10 years and transition quarter the fund has shown a loss of $357 thousand on a total of $2.3 billion cost of goods sold in the same period. Recovery of prior years losses is anticipated in 1979.

This fund was established in 1940 as the financing mechanism for the World War II servicemen's and veterans' insurance program authorized by the National Servicemen's Life Insurance Act of 1940 (72 Stat. 1154). Over 22 million policies have been issued under this program. Since issuance of new policies ended in 1951, the insurance in force is estimated to decrease in 1980 by $256 million, representing a decrease of 91,000 policies. Activity of the fund reflects a rising claim, but declining loan workload. The trend in the number and amount of policies in force is shown as follows (in thousands of dollars):

This fund is operated on a commercial basis to the extent possible consistent with law. Administrative expenses are charged to the General operating expenses account.

The income of the fund is derived from premium receipts, interest on investments, and payments which are made to the fund from the Veterans insurance and indemnities appropriation for claims: (1) resulting from extra hazards of the veterans' service, and (2) arising on certain policies held by personnel on active duty.

Assets of the fund, which are largely invested in special Treasury interest-bearing securities and in policy loans, are expected to increase from $8,935 million as of September 30, 1978, to $9,393 million as of September 30, 1980. The actuarial estimate of policy obligations as of September 30, 1978, totals $8,818 million, leaving a balance of $117 million for contingency reserves.

This fund finances the payment of claims on life insurance policies issued before January 31, 1957, to veterans who served in the Armed Forces subsequent to April 1, 1951 (38 U.S.C., section 723). No new policies can be issued and the number of policies in force are expected to decline by 16,000 in 1979 and 13,500 in 1980. Policyholders may elect to purchase total disability income coverage with the payment of additional premiums.

Budget program—1. Death claims.—Represents payments to designated beneficiaries.

2. Cash surrenders.—A policyholder may terminate his insurance by cashing in his policy for its cash value.

3. Dividends.—Public Law 93-289, enacted May 24, 1974, provides for policyholders to participate in the distribution of annual dividends.

4. All other.—Classified in this category are payments to policyholders who: (a) hold endowment policies which have matured; (b) have purchased total disability income coverage and subsequently become disabled; and (c) are paid interest on dividend credits and deposits.

The following table reflects the decrease in the number of policies and the amounts of insurance in force (in thousands of dollars):

	1977 actual	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Number of policies.....	577,579	566,985	551,000	537,500
Insurance in force.....	$5,060,952	$4,986,431	$4,846,000	$4,740,000

Financing.—Payments from this fund are financed primarily from premium receipts and interest on investments.

Operating results and financial condition.—Favorable mortality experience on insurance written against this fund has kept death claim payments well below the amount of premium and interest receipts, thereby producing an annual increase in the retained earnings of the fund. The retained earnings have, since the inception of the program, been reduced by payments of a special dividend and subsidy payments to the Veterans insurance and indemnities appropriation and the Veterans reopened insurance fund. Excess earnings of the fund are now distributed to the policyholders in the form of an annual dividend.

Legislation will be proposed that would eliminate authorization for veterans, servicepersons and dependents to receive assistance for flight and correspondence training effective October 1, 1979. Legislation is also proposed which would grant a two year extension of the delimiting period for Vietnam era veterans in on-the-job training and also to these veterans in vocational technical training or high school if they do not possess a high school diploma or its equivalent. Legislation is further proposed that would enhance the vocational rehabilitation program by enacting certain recommendations of a study of the program mandated by Public Law 95-202.

Enactment of these legislative items will decrease budget authority by $0.6 million in 1980 as follows:

This legislation is estimated to increase 1980 budget authority by $9,945 thousand.

Legislation will be proposed to provide treatment of psychiatric, drug and alcohol dependent patients in psychiatric residential treatment centers, therapeutic communities, or halfway houses. This legislation is estimated to increase 1980 budget authority by $2,439 thousand.

Legislation will be proposed to amend section 613 of title 38, United States Code by adding subsection (c) providing that individuals who were killed or died in service are considered veterans for the purposes of benefits provided under this section. Legislation will be proposed to amend section III, chapter 1, title 38, United States Code, to limit the payment for reimbursement for travel expenses of beneficiaries provided medical care for non-service-connected disabilities. This legislation is estimated to save $39,134 thousand in 1980.

Legislation will be proposed to eliminate the provision of over-the-counter outpatient drugs, medicines and supplies to all veterans suffering from a non-service-connected disease or disability, except those veterans who are in receipt of non-service-connected pension, who are 65 years of age or over, permanently housebound or in need of regular aid and attendance, or, are receiving hospital-based home care. This legislation is estimated to save $18,344 thousand in 1980.

Legislation will be proposed to amend section 612(b) to remove authority to provide class II dental treatment. This legislation is estimated to save $39,527 thousand in 1980.

OTHER INDEPENDENT AGENCIES

ACTION

ACTION, the Federal agency for volunteer service, brings together a number of volunteer programs including the Peace Corps, Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA), Foster Grandparent, and Retired Senior Volunteer Program.

Funds for ACTION are requested in two appropriations: (1) Operating expenses, domestic programs; and (2) Operating expenses, international programs (Peace Corps). International programs.—This appropriation finances the Peace Corps and other international programs of ACTION. Major elements which will be funded are the recruitment and training of applicants, volunteer operations overseas, promotion of international voluntary efforts, cooperation with third party volunteer organizations and the management and staff required to support the volunteers.

1. Peace Corps training.—Each volunteer is given intensive training which is designed to develop language abilities, provide a knowledge of the country of assignment and further develop required job skills. Trainees will receive pre-service training both in the United States and overseas and specialized skills training for improving primary and secondary skills needed in basic human needs projects.

2. Peace Corps volunteers.—In 1980, some 6,000 volunteers will be serving in approximately 65 countries throughout the world. Volunteer assignments are concentrated in seven basic areas of human needs: health and nutrition, food and water, knowledge and skills, economic development and income, energy and conservation, community services, and housing. In 1980, the greatest numbers of volunteers will be serving in health, agricultural, and educational programs.

3. Special international volunteer programs.—In 1980 ACTION will continue its encouragement of international voluntary efforts through a new program to strengthen Third World countries' voluntary service programs, through participation in and technical assistance to international voluntary organizations, and through the development of appropriate technology manuals.

4. Program support.—This activity includes salaries, travel, rents and other costs associated with staff operations in the United States and abroad. It also includes a share of ACTION agencywide costs, such as recruitment; medical services; policy and planning; auditing; legal counsel and similar functions.

This appropriation finances the Federal share of volunteer programs within the United States and its territories.

1. Volunteers in service to America.—The VISTA program provides full-time volunteers to assist low-income communities working on the problems of poverty. In 1980, VISTA will continue efforts begun in 1979 to assist people to organize self-help projects through grassroots community efforts which alleviate the effects of poverty on their most basic human needs. The major areas of effort will be community development, enhancement of rural programs, and improvement of technical assistance to volunteers. The national student volunteer program will continue to provide opportunities for high school and college students to learn as they perform service to their communities. Particular emphasis in 1980 will be placed on models which provide service-learning opportunities to underachievers.

2. Older American volunteer programs.—These programs provide opportunities for Americans, age 60 and over, to volunteer their services to the community by working with the emotionally disturbed, the mentally and physically retarded, the infirm, and the isolated elderly. In 1980, the senior companion program will continue to emphasize keeping people out of institutions such as nursing homes and State mental hospitals. The retired senior volunteer program will maintain the same volunteer level placing special emphasis on increasing the proportion of male and minority participants. The foster grandparent program will continue to develop project models to aid in the deinstitutionalization of children and to serve those remaining in institutions. In 1980, the stipend levels for volunteers will be increased and emphasis will be placed on project and volunteer support.

3. Urban volunteer programs.—In 1980, this program will continue efforts to mobilize communities to increase their capacity to improve neighborhood services; provide part-time volunteers to counsel and advocate services for those on fixed incomes; and provide seed-moneys to neighborhood groups.

4. Citizen participation and volunteer demonstration programs.—These programs will work to stimulate citizen participation in voluntary projects aimed at meeting basic human needs through technical assistance and model demonstration programs with State, local, and private nonprofit organizations. Research on the concept of a national youth service will be completed during 1980.

5. Program support.—Costs of program direction and administration both at headquarters and at the regional and State offices are financed by this activity. Agencywide programs and staff services are also included.

The Conference, established pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 571, et seq., is authorized on a permanent basis to assist the President, the Congress, the administrative agencies, and executive departments in improving existing administrative procedure, including achievement of needed regulatory reform. It is responsible for conducting studies of the efficiency, adequacy, and fairness of present procedures by which the Federal administrative agencies and executive departments determine the rights, privileges, and obligations of private persons. On the basis of such studies the Conference issues formal recommendations for improvements and then encourages implementation of the recommendations through appropriate agency, congressional, or judicial action.

In addition to its research activities, the Conference also arranges for the interchange among administrative agencies of information useful in improving administrative procedures; collects, tabulates, analyzes, and publishes statistics from administrative agencies to identify and correct delays and other problems in the administrative process; and, on an ongoing basis, furnishes assistance and advice on matters of administrative procedure to the agencies, Congress, and others.

The Advisory Committee on Federal Pay was appointed in accordance with the Federal Pay Comparability Act of 1970. The Committee assists the President in carrying out the policy of comparability in pay between major Federal statutory pay systems and private enterprise. The Committee reviews the annual report of the President's pay agent and considers the recommendations of representatives of Federal employees and other officials of the Federal Government. The Committee then prepares for the President an independent report with its findings and recommendations.

The Committee meets jointly throughout the year with the President's pay agent and the Federal Employees Pay Council in an attempt to reach early resolution of issues between them and thus to improve labor relations in the Federal Service and to reduce the number of decisions regarding white-collar pay that must be reached in a crisis atmosphere. It provides advisory opinions on unresolved issues.

The Committee is charged with an ongoing review of the way in which Federal compensation derives from, and is dependent upon, the forces at work in the private sector, considering the impact of both Federal and private sector pay on the national economy and making periodic reports to the President on changes which should be proposed in Federal compensation policies and practices.

The Agency advises the President and the Secretary of State on arms control and disarmament policy and its implementation, and participates in negotiations with other countries looking toward international agreements to control, reduce, or eliminate arms. Among the activities to which ACDA resources will be devoted in 1980 are support of the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks with the Soviet Union and other arms control negotiations, support of the nuclear safeguards program of the International Atomic Energy Agency and external research relating to the development of alternative nuclear fuel cycles consistent with the President's nonproliferation objectives, and activities relating to arms transfer reviews and the preparation of arms control impact analyses of weapons systems.

The Agency's external research in these areas is conducted through contracts with nongovernmental research organizations and reimbursable agreements with other U.S. Government agencies.

The Board regulates the economic aspects of domestic and international air carrier operations. In 1980 the Board will emphasize actions designed to move commercial air transportation toward a system governed primarily by competitive market forces in order to provide travelers and shippers the benefits of such a system. Congress through passage of the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978 on October 24, 1978, has ratified and further defined the Board's efforts to deregulate the air transportation industry.

1. Domestic competition, operating authority and pricing.—This program involves the following basic activities: scheduled service, supplemental and charter services, pricing and tariffs, and competition maintenance. The Board's 1980 program is designed to provide a timely increase in the range of air transport services and price options offered consumers through a more competitive airline system that assures that carrier practices do not become predatory or anticompetitive and encourages freer entry into and exit from markets, increased pricing flexibility and flexibility in operating authority.

2. Economic research, analysis and information.—This program covers three major activities: economic research and analysis, regulatory information, and management information. In 1980 the main thrust of this program will be to provide the Board with a basic analytical capability to support its pro-competitive economic policies and decisions, and to provide information systems necessary to manage the changing regulatory and management environment.

3. International negotiations, operating authority and pricing.—This program includes scheduled and charter services and pricing and tariffs activities. In 1980 this program will seek to support U.S. policy by providing the greatest possible benefits to the consumer through the maintenance and extension of competition in international air transportation. The Board's success will be determined by the speed and results of its aggressive negotiating strategies based on a systems planning approach, and by convincing other nations of the mutual benefits to be obtained from liberalized competitive exchanges in routes, charters, and fares.

4. Consumer protection, assistance and information.—This program involves three primary activities: consumer protection, consumer complaints, and consumer information and education. For 1980, the principal direction of this program will be toward increasing efforts to insure that the interests of consumers are considered in the Board's regulatory proceedings, and to encourage and maintain effective measures to inform, assist and protect consumers in their dealings with the air transport industry.

5. Community assistance and subsidy.—This program consists of two basic activities: community assistance, and the provision of subsidy to communities. In 1980 this program will increase efforts to assist communities to obtain and/or maintain adequate air services by relying primarily on increased competition. Specifically, air service problems will be pinpointed and the affected communities will be provided technical assistance in finding substitute air service. When air service simply cannot be provided on an economic basis, subsidy payments may be provided. The subsidy program will be modified to better match subsidy payments to community needs.

The Civil Aeronautics Board fixes rates of subsidy compensation under section 406 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, as amended, to promote the development of air transportation required for the commerce of the United States, the Postal Service, and the national defense. The Board makes payments to subsidy-eligible certificated air carriers who have demonstrated a statutory need therefor. Subsidy is provided to cover the carrier's operating loss incurred under honest, economical, and efficient management and to provide it an opportunity to earn a fair return (after taxes) on investment used and useful in the air transportation services.

Of the 62 certificated U.S. domestic and international air carriers, only 6 local service carriers, 2 regional carriers and 3 Alaskan carriers are currently receiving subsidy under section 406 of the act. Two new small community/small equipment carriers were certificated as a result of the Board's decision in the Arizona service investigation in late 1978.

Amendments to section 406 enacted in the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978 provide that subsidy under this section will terminate after January 1, 1986.

The Airline Deregulation Act of 1978, through its addition of section 419 to the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, has given the Board responsibility for administering a second subsidy program. This new authority requires that the Board guarantee, with subsidy if necessary, a minimum level of service to every community certificated as of October 24, 1978. In addition, other communities may be designated eligible if the Board so decides.

All air carriers—certificated and noncertificated—are eligible to apply for the subsidy. Exactly how many communities and carriers will benefit from this program is difficult to predict at this time. In the States and territories exclusive of Alaska something on the order of 60 communities is a best estimate of the number of communities to be eventually subsidized after the trunk and local service carriers have revamped their systems in response to the deregulated environment. In Alaska the number of subsidized points has the potential to go over 100 but it is unlikely that number would be reached. Subsidy per community in Alaska would, in most instances, be less than the lower 48 States since far fewer frequencies and smaller aircraft would be required.

The Civil Service Commission was abolished pursuant to the Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1978. The related appropriation language and amounts formerly included in this chapter are reflected with the successor accounts in the Office of Personnel Management, the Merit System Protection Board, the Federal Labor Relations Authority, and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) administers the Commodity Exchange Act of 1936, as amended. The purpose of the CFTC is to further the economic utility of the futures markets by encouraging their efficiency, assuring their integrity, and protecting participants against abusive trade practices, fraud, and deceit. The object is to enable the markets to better serve their designated function in providing a price discovery mechanism and as a means of offsetting price risk. In properly serving these functions, the futures markets contribute toward better planning, more efficient distribution and consumption, and more economical marketing. In these ways they serve the public interest.

Enforcement of the act during 1978 included regulation of 66 active futures contracts trading 40 commodities on 11 exchanges. Total volume of futures trading in all commodities reached 51.6 million contracts. These figures represent increases of about 31.0% for volume in 1977.

Market surveillance.—Responsibilities under this program include daily surveillance of the market activity of large individual traders and fundamental economic market factors to ensure orderly markets. The longer term activities of surveillance concentrate on the review of contract terms and conditions to insure conformity with current cash marketing conditions and adequate deliverable supplies. The program is responsible for the publication of market data, the enforcement of Federal limits, and the monitoring of exchange limits on speculative positions.

Research and education.—The objectives of this program are to systemically investigate the functioning of markets and market users; to develop better tools to assist in detecting and preventing price distortions; and to develop and disseminate educational and statistical materials regarding futures trading.

Registration, audits, and contract markets.—Responsibilities under this program are: To prevent misuse of customers' funds by Futures Commission merchants; to assure that the rules and practices of the contract markets are in compliance with the provisions of the Commodity Exchange Act and the rules of the Commission; and to review and approve applications from individuals and firms for registration under the provisions of the act.

Enforcement.—The enforcement program involves investigations of alleged or apparent violations of the act or the regulations, including suspected price manipulation and cornering, cheating, fraud and deceit, noncompetitive and other illegal trading practices, and the mishandling of customers' funds and accounts. Such investigations often develop evidence warranting the prompt institution and prosecution of administrative and/or Federal court proceedings to sanction offenders, prevent or stop violations, and deter others from violating the act.

The 1974 amendments to the act provide for the handling of customer's reparation claims for damages against persons registered with the Commission. Some customer complaints against registrants are referred to them for response to the customers' allegations.

A "matter" is every complaint, however received, alleging facts which, if true, would constitute a violation of the Act or Regulations.

A "case" is any matter that goes into litigation. Thus, a case is opened with the filing of a complaint either in district court or in an administrative proceeding.

Executive direction and centralized support.—The purpose of this program is to maintain the overall policy development and executive direction of the CFTC programs through the offices of the chairman, commissioners, general counsel, and executive director, as defined in the act, and all centralized administrative support. The hearings and appeals subprogram provide adjudicatory hearings. Direct policy expertise is provided in the areas of policy analysis, policy planning and evaluation, governmental operations, and public information. General administrative support is maintained at both headquarters and the regional offices.

In the 1979 Budget, the Administration proposed a new direction for the Community Services Administration (CSA). That direction was to emphasize a CSA role of testing new concepts in the delivery of social services to low-income families through demonstrations and evaluations and strengthening the administrative capacity of its local delivery network of grantees (community action agencies). Due to the late enactment of CSA's 1979 reauthorization bill, the Administration's 1979 budget request was not considered by the Congress and CSA was funded on a continuing resolution. The 1980 Budget request reemphasizes the Administration's 1979 objectives for CSA by proposing 1980 increases in key programs administered by the agency.

1. Community action operations.—Most of CSA's funds support social services programs delivered to low-income persons at the local level by community action agencies. Funds from CSA pay salaries and other administrative costs of local community action agency staff and finance a variety of activities sponsored by community action agencies. In 1980, an increase of $12 million is requested in local initiative funds to strengthen the administrative capacity of community action agencies—especially the smaller ones—so that they may deliver their services more effectively and improve their accountability to CSA. Technical assistance to community action agencies is doubled from 1979 to 1980 with an emphasis on developing better managerial skills at the local grantee level. By the beginning of 1980, funding for State economic opportunity offices will be based on a 50% Federal/50% non-Federal matching requirement instead of the current 80% Federal/20% non-Federal match. This administrative change to the funding of these State offices, which are under the direction of the governors, will result in an equal sharing of the responsibility of the Federal and State governments. The community food and nutrition program was reduced for outreach efforts because of the substantial improvements made by the Department of Agriculture to promote participation of the poor in its programs (e.g., food stamps and WIC). With this stepped up activity by the Department, CSA funding of outreach worker personnel costs becomes a lower budget priority in 1980. Remaining community food and nutrition funds will be primarily used in 1980 for crisis relief, advocacy, and self-help activities. Although no funding is requested for the energy conservation services programs, its activities will be continued in 1980: weatherization of low-income families' homes will be funded by the Department of Energy; energy conservation demonstrations will be sponsored under CSA's demonstration program; and crisis relief activities will be carried out through CSA's energy crisis intervention program. Youth sports and summer recreation programs were ranked low in the zero-base analysis of CSA's budget in terms of assisting people to rise above their poverty status and achieve self-sufficiency and therefore are not recommended for continuation in 1980.

2. Energy crisis intervention.—The Administration is proposing a $40 million contingency fund similar to the one administered in 1979. The program is to be used in the event of harsh winter weather circumstances which cause extraordinary increases in energy costs to low-income families and endanger their health or survival. The 1979 crisis intervention program replaced the 1978 emergency energy assistance program, which was used primarily to pay utility companies for home heating bills.

3. Community economic development.—This demonstration program, initiated in 1968, has undergone a reexamination in the last 2 years as to its purpose and effectiveness. As a result, there has been a reemphasis on economic development objectives and establishment of a venture capital fund for the most successful grantees (community development corporations) to compete for resources. The 1980 budget proposes to continue this policy by increasing the venture capital fund by about $5 million. The most promising community development corporations will compete for these funds in an effort to demonstrate that they can become self-sufficient, economic development institutions.

4. Demonstrations.—This activity supports new approaches to addressing the problems of poverty through small scale demonstration projects. These projects are expected to deal with concerns such as rural housing, energy conservation, solarization, Indians, and family counseling services. All of these projects will be closely coordinated with other Federal agencies responsible for related operational and research and demonstration programs. The program has been increased from $6 million in 1979 to $15 million in 1980 to expand CSA's role as an innovator with regard to Federal assistance to the poor.

5. Evaluation.—Funds for evaluation of CSA programs and grantees is doubled over the 1979 level to strengthen CSA's oversight capabilities of its grantees and bring about improvements in the execution of its programs.

6. Program administration.—This activity provides supportive administration of CSA programs. The internal reorganization of CSA was completed in 1979 and is expected to result in more efficient and effective administration of CSA programs. The National Advisory Council on Economic Opportunity, which advises CSA on the operation of its programs, will be funded at $200,000.

The budget request in 1980 of $12 million establishes a new revolving loan fund to be jointly administered by the Community Services Administration and the National Credit Union Administration. These funds would be used as seed money for community development credit unions.

The credit union, before chartering, will identify community development needs such as housing, employment, and small business and devise plans directed toward growth, development, and capitalization in those areas. These efforts will be coordinated with local businesses, and Federal, State, and local programs.

The Consumer Product Safety Act of 1972 established the Consumer Product Safety Commission as an independent regulatory agency for the following purposes: (1) to protect the public against unreasonable risks of injury associated with consumer products; (2) to assist consumers in evaluating the comparative safety of consumer products; (3) to develop uniform safety standards for consumer products and to minimize conflicting State and local regulations; and (4) to promote research and investigations into the causes and prevention of product-related deaths, illnesses, and injuries.

The Commission also administers the Federal Hazardous Substances Act, the Poison Prevention Packaging Act, the Flammable Fabrics Act and the Federal Refrigerator Safety Act.

To carry out its responsibilities under these acts, the Commission has developed a set of programs which address specific product hazards. These programs are:

1. Fire and thermal burn hazards.—Activities undertaken in this program are directed toward reducing the estimated 1.6 million injuries annually resulting from burning materials, heated surfaces, and smoke inhalation.

2. Electrical hazards.—Activities conducted under this program are aimed at reducing injuries and deaths from electrical hazards and other related hazards associated with consumer products.

3. Chemical and environmental hazards/acute.—Activities in this program address the estimated annual toll of 250,000 poisonings from toxic substances found in products in and around the home.

4. Chemical and environmental hazards/chronic.—Activities in this program are aimed at reducing the exposure to chemical substances, such as carcinogens, which have delayed adverse effects (often years after initial exposure) or which cause adverse effects after long-term exposure.

5. Mechanical hazards.—Activities in these programs address injuries associated with choking, lacerations, fractures, concussions, avulsions and abrasions. These injuries are covered by three programs:

(a) The children's and recreational products program is concerned with the risks and potential risks of injury due to mechanical hazards posed by products intended for use by children (e.g., toys and baby walkers), recreational products (e.g., playground equipment and skateboards), and athletic products (e.g., football helmets).

(b) The power equipment program is concerned with injuries and hazards associated with power and manual tools (e.g., chain saws) and other house, yard and garden equipment (e.g., lawn mowers).

(c) The household structural products program is concerned with injuries and hazards associated with household structural products (e.g., cellulose home insulation, ladders, steps and stairs, architectural glazing materials, and unstable refuse bins).

Activities within each of these program areas encompass a broad spectrum from data collection and analysis through rule development to enforcement and the conduct of information and education campaigns.

The District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act (Public Law 93-198, December 24, 1973) terminated as of January 2, 1975, the District's permanent authority to borrow from the U.S. Treasury to finance its capital improvements program.

The Self-Government Act authorized the District of Columbia to issue tax-exempt general obligation bonds to finance capital improvements projects. To prevent undue disruption during the development of the District's bond issuance program, the Self-Government Act provided interim authority under which the District could borrow from the U.S. Treasury to finance capital projects for which funds had been authorized or appropriated before January 2, 1975, and to finance the District's share of the cost of the adopted regional transportation system specified in the National Capital Transportation Act of 1969 (D.C. Code, sec. 1-1441 et seq.).

Because of unanticipated delays in the development of the city's bond issuance program, the Self-Government Act has been amended by Public Law 95-131 (October 13, 1977) to extend the interim borrowing authority for all projects approved prior to October 1, 1979. The 1976 and 1977 Appropriations Acts for the District of Columbia contained language provisions authorizing Treasury loans to finance capital projects approved in those two acts.

Public Law 93-198 set a ceiling on outstanding long-term debt of the District of Columbia. Under that limitation, the District may neither issue general obligation bonds nor borrow funds from the U.S. Treasury to finance capital projects if the amount of the additional obligation thus incurred would cause debt service on outstanding long-term debt in any one year to exceed 14% of District revenues estimated to be credited to the District during the year in which the bonds were to be issued or the Treasury loans were to be drawn down.

The District of Columbia is requesting an appropriation of $159,392 thousand for capital investment loans from the U.S. Treasury for 1980. The entire amount is for the general fund. D.C. Act 1-42 (January 22, 1976) established the general fund of the District and provided that the following revenues would be deposited in the general fund: taxes, fees, charges, and miscellaneous receipts; Federal payments; loans from the U.S. Treasury and other sources; and any moneys for operating expenses not otherwise designated to be deposited in another fund of the District Government. D.C. Act 1-42 abolished the District's highway, water, sanitary sewage works, and metropolitan area sanitary sewage works funds.

Together with funds available under prior loan authorizations, the 1980 estimate of $159,392 thousand will meet the full cash requirements for capital projects during the year ending September 30, 1980. The budget estimate assumes that all capital investment expenditures from appropriated funds during the year will be financed with U.S. Treasury loans.

The following table shows the status of general fund capital investment loans authorizations on a cumulative basis:

The Emergency Loan Guarantee Act (Public Law 92-70) created an Emergency Loan Guarantee Board composed of the Secretary of the Treasury, as chairman, the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and the Chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission. The Board was given authority to guarantee, or make commitments to guarantee, loans to major business enterprises. The maximum amount for outstanding loans guaranteed was not to exceed $250 million at any time.

On September 9, 1971, the Board found that Lockheed Aircraft Corp. met the requirements of the act and approved a Government guarantee to 24 banks which might lend to Lockheed up to $250 million. The guarantee commitment to Lockheed and its lending banks required repayment of the guaranteed portion of the borrowings by December 31, 1977, unless the Board and the lending banks consent to extend the maturity date for 1 additional year, as provided for under the act.

All loans had been repaid by December 15, 1977, and the guarantee commitment has been terminated.

The Export-Import Bank of the United States was organized in 1934. Its programs are authorized under the Export-Import Bank Act of 1945, as amended. The purpose of the Bank is to aid in financing and to facilitate U.S. exports.

To accomplish its objectives, Eximbank authority and resources are used to: assume commercial and political risks that exporters or private financial institutions are unwilling or unable to undertake; overcome maturity and other limitations in private sector export financing; assist U.S. exporters to meet foreign officially sponsored export credit competition; and provide leadership and guidance in export financing to the U.S. exporting and banking communities and to foreign borrowers.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was created by the Banking Act of 1933 to provide protection for bank depositors and to foster sound banking practices. Initially deposit insurance was limited to $2,500 per depositor. This protection has been $40 thousand since November 27, 1974. In order to accomplish its varied functions in the protection of bank depositors, the Corporation is authorized to promulgate and enforce rules and regulations relating to the supervision of insured banks and to perform other regulatory and supervisory duties consistent with its responsibilities as insurer. The major portion of the Corporation's operations consists of examining State banks which are not members of the Federal Reserve System and liquidation activities attendant to insured banks which have closed.

The insurance fund is supported by an authorization to borrow up to $3 billion from the Treasury of the United States. No borrowing under this authorization has been made to date and none is anticipated in 1979 and 1980.

Income of the Corporation is derived principally from insurance assessments paid by insured banks and interest on investment in U.S. Government securities. As of September 30, 1978, the deposit insurance fund amounted to $8.6 billion. The entire fund represents the accumulated net income of the Corporation and is reserved for the protection of depositors in insured banks and for payment of administrative and insurance expenses. No funds derived from taxes or Federal appropriation are allocated to or used by the Corporation in any of its operations.

The estimates for 1979 and 1980 in these statements make no provision for losses and expenses which might occur by reason of the closing of any bank after September 30, 1978, because there is no sound basis for predicting which insured banks if any, will close after that date.

This appropriation provides for the continuation of activities previously performed by the U.S. Fire Administration under appropriations to the Department of Commerce, by the Federal Insurance Administration and Federal Disaster Assistance Administration under appropriations to the Department of Housing and Urban Development, and by the Office of Science and Technology Policy in the Executive Office of the President. It also provides for the executive direction of the new Federal Emergency Management Agency, a part of which was previously charged to appropriations of the Defense Civil Preparedness Agency and the Federal Preparedness Agency.

The account includes funding for flood studies and surveys in support of the activities of the National Flood Insurance Fund. This work was previously financed by a separate appropriation.

Amounts shown for Disaster Relief Administration reflect a basic change in the manner of funding these activities. Financing of the personnel required to administer the relief program is by direct appropriation, rather than the previous method of reimbursement from the Disaster relief account. Expenses related to response to specific disasters will continue to be charged directly to the Disaster relief account. Legislation to accommodate this change will be proposed.

The amounts shown for 1978 and 1979 were not appropriated to this account but are included on the same basis as the 1980 budget request to provide for a comparative analysis. The Federal Emergency Management Agency will be activated on March 25, 1979, in accordance with reorganization plan No. 3 of 1978. Activities of FEMA for the remainder of 1979 will be financed by transfers of funds from appropriations previously made to the component agencies and functions.

1. Insurance and hazard mitigation.—Provides funds for the following hazard mitigation and insurance functions: (a) management of the flood study program, the determination of actuarial premium rates and the development, coordination, and management of a hazards reduction program, which includes developing appropriate land uses and building standards; (b) providing communities with flood hazard boundary maps that outline flood-prone areas and flood insurance rate maps which show flood elevations and outline risk zones used for insurance purposes; (c) management of the crime insurance and riot reinsurance programs, and (d) planning and interacting directly with community leaders in assisting them in establishing preparedness programs designed to save lives and mitigate the social and economic impacts of natural disasters with primary emphasis on hurricanes, earthquakes, floods, and winter storms, together with dam safety.

2. Fire prevention and control.—Provides funds for training and education programs which will improve the ability of fire service personnel and others in reducing fire losses; fire data center which furnishes quantitative and reference information to fire services and others concerned with fire prevention and control for use in identifying major problem areas, setting priorities, obtaining possible solutions to problems, and monitoring progress made; and for improved planning, research, and technology necessary to significantly decrease fire-caused losses and to improve the cost-effectiveness of fire protection.

3. Facilities, fire academy.—Provides funds for the establishment of a National Academy for Fire Prevention and Control so as to conduct fire service education and training programs.

4. Disaster relief administration.—Funds are provided for the administrative expenses of the Federal Emergency Management Agency in coordinating the disaster relief program.

5. Flood studies and surveys.—Provides funds for studies of flood-prone communities to determine the degree of risk and establish evaluations based on the probability of flooding in a 100-year period. These evaluations make it possible for communities to enforce ordinances which will reduce the risk of flooding to actuarially predictable rates.

6. Executive direction.—Provides for the salaries, travel, and administrative expenses related to the Director of FEMA, his immediate staff and the common administrative functions, such as accounting, budget, personnel, procurement, and general counsel activities, necessary to the operation of the agency.

Guarantees are given on loans made by public or private financing institutions, including Federal Reserve banks, to facilitate performance of defense production contracts. Currently, there are no loan guarantees outstanding and none are currently planned. Therefore, earnings of $236 thousand were paid into the Treasury in 1978. Future activities in this account will be the responsibility of the Federal Emergency Management Agency as a result of reorganization plan No. 3 of 1978 which transferred the account from the Federal Preparedness Agency in GSA.

The National insurance development fund provides the funding source for two programs authorized by the Urban Property Protection and Reinsurance Act of 1968, as amended: (1) The FAIR (fair access to insurance requirements) plan/riot reinsurance program, a cooperative effort by insurance companies, State governments, and the Federal Government aimed at providing reasonable access to essential property insurance in urban areas; and (2) the Federal crime insurance program, which provides burglary and robbery insurance at affordable premium rates on properties that meet protective device requirements where such coverage is not available in the private market.

Budget program—1. Riot reinsurance claims.—The estimate of claims paid through riot and civil disorder reinsurance is expected to continue at about $1,500 thousand in 1979 and $1,000 thousand in 1980.

2. Crime insurance—(a) Insurance claims.—Claims reflect insurance payments in the program.

(b) Operating expenses.—Expenses are incurred by fiscal agents in issuing policies, settling claims, and maintaining accounting and statistical records.

3. Studies and surveys.—This includes expenses of continuing reviews of market availability of essential property insurance as well as a study of the effectiveness of FAIR plans.

4. Administrative expenses.—This represents the administrative cost of operating the programs.

Financing.—Claims and expenses are estimated to be paid from premium income and income from holdings of Government securities. Thus, it is anticipated that none of the $250 million in Treasury borrowing authority will be utilized.

Operating results.—Claims and expenses are expected to exceed premium and investment income due to losses under the crime insurance program, resulting in a decrease in the reserves of the fund.

Net losses of the crime insurance program, estimated at $14,497 thousand in 1979 and $18,561 thousand in 1980, will be funded by reserves.

The National Flood Insurance Act of 1968, as amended, authorizes the Federal Government to provide flood insurance on a national basis. Flood insurance may be sold or continued in force only in communities which enact and enforce appropriate flood plain management measures. Communities must participate in the program within 1 year of the time they are identified as flood prone in order to be eligible for flood insurance and some forms of Federal financial assistance for acquisition or construction purposes.

Under the emergency program, structures in identified flood-prone areas are eligible for limited amounts of coverage at subsidized insurance rates. Under the regular program, studies must be made of different flood risks in flood-prone areas to establish actuarial premium rates. These rates are charged for insurance on new construction. Coverage is available on virtually all types of buildings and their contents in amounts up to $245 thousand for residential and $550 thousand for other types.

In previous years, the costs of the aforementioned studies and surveys were reflected as a part of the budget for this account but were appropriated as a separate appropriation entitled "Flood Insurance." Effective with this FEMA budget, the flood studies and surveys are included as a separate budget activity classification in the new "Hazard Mitigation and Disaster Assistance" account.

Significant indicators of program size are as follows:

	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Policies in force.....	1,342,892	1,512,000	1,731,000
Insurance in force (billions of dollars).....	$45.9	$54.1	$62.2
Communities in program.....	16,097	16,194	16,322

Budget program.—1. Insurance underwriting expense.—Cost of initiating and maintaining flood insurance policies is estimated at $41,098 thousand in 1980.

2. Loss and adjustment expense.—Insured flood losses and associated loss adjustment expense is estimated at $171,504 thousand in 1980.

3. Interest expense.—Interest on Treasury borrowings needed to defray underwriting and loss expenses is estimated at $19,981 thousand in 1980.

Financing.—The Administrator is authorized to borrow up to $500 million to carry out the program. Borrowings are estimated to total $405,017 thousand by the end of 1980. The program is also financed through premium income.

Operating results.—Cumulative expenses are expected to exceed revenue and receipts from non-Federal sources by approximately $511 million by the end of 1980. The cumulative deficit is financed by charges against borrowing authorization of approximately $405 million.

Title I of the Emergency Home Finance Act of 1970 authorized the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to subsidize the interest rate charged by each of the 12 Federal home loan banks on lending to member savings and loan associations in order to stabilize the flow of funds into residential construction. The program was initiated in 1971 with an appropriation of $85 million. An additional $62.5 million was appropriated in 1972. The program was phased out in 1973.

Budget program.—The Board's budget program consists of seven activities:

1. Examination of Federal home loan banks and supervision of Federal home loan bank system.—The Board examines and supervises the operations of the 12 Federal home loan banks.

2. Chartering Federal and insuring savings and loan associations.—Federal savings and loan associations are chartered and regulated. Applications of State-chartered associations for conversion to Federal savings and loan associations and applications of Federal savings and loan associations for establishment of branch offices are also examined. In addition, an analysis and evaluation is made of insurance risk in connection with applications submitted by savings and loan associations for insurance of share accounts.

3. Executive direction and staff services.—This includes formulation of basic policy and the furnishing of staff services common to the Board and the Insurance Corporation.

4. Analysis of operations.—Analyses are made of the financial condition of member institutions, the flow of savings, and the character and volume of mortgage lending. Selective reviews are made of geographical areas and trends in the field of thrift and home mortgage finance, including the volume of activity and interest rates for all major types of mortgage lenders.

5. Administrative services.—These consist of auditing; accounting, budgeting, and financial reporting; internal budget control; and fiscal organization and management. Also included are general housekeeping and operating services, which include printing and reproduction work.

6. Acquisition and construction of a building in the District of Columbia.—The Demonstration Cities and Metropolitan Development Act of 1966 authorized the Board to acquire property and construct a building in the District of Columbia to provide quarters and facilities for the Board. Under the law, the Board is required to prepare and submit an annual budget program for the building as provided in title I of the Government Corporation Control Act.

7. Authority of the Treasury to purchase Federal home loan bank obligations.—The 12 Federal home loan banks, seek to improve the financial condition of member institutions. The banks, which are owned by the member institutions, obtain funds primarily from public issuances of consolidated obligations. Authority to borrow from the Treasury was temporarily increased from $4 billion to $6 billion by an amendment to the National Housing Act, approved October 28, 1974. The increase expired on August 10, 1975. A total of $1,574,500 thousand was borrowed in 1975 and 1976.

The amounts shown in the schedules for the activities discussed above include administrative expenses under an annual limitation and certain additional expenses not under a limitation. Administrative expenses are estimated to increase from $18.4 million in 1979 to $18.9 million in 1980.

The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation is authorized under title IV of the National Housing Act to insure savings in all Federal savings and loan associations and in State-chartered institutions of the savings and loan type which apply and qualify for insurance. The protection, which insures each saver in a member association against financial loss up to a statutory limit of $40 thousand, may be provided either through the prevention of default or the payment of insurance to savings accounts holders in the event of liquidation. Preventing default, which protects each investor regardless of the amount in his account, is accomplished by making contributions or by purchasing all or a part of an association's assets. Also, the Corporation is authorized to make loans to institutions in financial difficulty. Preventive measures are preferred by the Corporation. However, in the event liquidation is necessary, the Corporation acts as a receiver, or co-receiver upon the request of a State authority in cases involving State-chartered institutions. In addition, the Corporation, upon determination by the Board, is empowered to act, even retroactively, as sole receiver in cases involving State-chartered institutions.

The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation relies on its Department of Examinations to protect its assets against depletion from the financial failure of any insured savings and loan association. The Department's responsibility extends to all institutions insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation as well as to noninsured member institutions of the Federal home loan bank system not subject to State examination.

The Department monitors savings and loan associations through continual analysis of their operating policies and financial reports, regularly scheduled examinations, and occasional special examinations. The purpose of the monitoring process is to determine compliance with Federal Home Loan Bank Board regulations and to ascertain the quality of management and the financial soundness of the member associations. If the Department detects actual or potentially unsafe or unsound practices in insured associations, supervisory agents from the Federal home loan banks work with the association to prevent or correct poor financial or management performance. The operations of the Department are funded substantially through direct examination charges imposed on savings and loan associations.

The Department also has examination responsibilities with respect to savings and loan holding companies and their subsidiaries. In addition, the Department has assumed responsibilities pursuant to legislation in the areas of consumer credit protection, equal opportunity, and security measures.

The following table reflects the work of the Department:

Budget program.—The Insurance Corporation's budget program consists of the following activities:

1. Administrative expenses subject to limitation.—This category includes the estimated costs of executive direction and policy formulation and the examination of insured institutions in 1980. Supervisory examinations are made of Federal savings and loan associations, State-chartered associations insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, and all uninsured member institutions of the Federal home loan bank system which are not examined by the State examiners. Examinations are also made of institutions applying for insurance of accounts and for conversion from a State to a Federal charter, when required by the Board. The financial condition and operations of each insured institution are analyzed and corrective action is instituted when warranted.

2. Payments to Federal Home Loan Bank Board for services and facilities.—The Corporation will pay 21% of the total administrative expenses of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board plus 49% of the remaining 79% in 1980 in return for services and facilities from the Board.

3. Contributions and provision for contributions to insured thrift institutions.—This item is the estimated amount needed in 1980 to prevent the default of insured institutions.

4. Refund of additional premium prepayments.—A 1962 amendment of the National Housing Act required that each insured institution pay an additional premium in the nature of a prepayment at a rate equal to 2% of the increase in savings for the previous calendar year, less an amount equal to any requirement for the purchase of Federal Home Loan Bank stock during the period. The amendment also provided for the crediting of a return on the accumulated prepayment of each insured association at a rate equal to the average rate realized by the Corporation on its own investment portfolio.

Another amendment to the National Housing Act provides for a phaseout of the secondary reserve over the first 10 minimum net reduction years occurring after December 31, 1973. In May of each year, the Corporation will reduce the amount of each insured institution's pro rata share of the secondary reserve as of the preceding December 31 by a cash refund of the difference between the pro rata share and the percentage of its beginning balance on a percentage basis prescribed in the law.

5. Other expenses.—This provides for liquidation and other expenses of the Corporation in connection with the workout of contribution agreements, the disposition of assets purchased from, and loans to insured institutions to prevent default.

Financing.—The original capital of $100 million has been completely repaid to Treasury, together with an additional $43 million in interest. The Corporation has continuing authority to borrow from the Treasury for insurance purposes, up to a limit of $750 million outstanding at any one time. No borrowing under this authorization has ever been necessary. The Corporation has additional authority to assess against each insured institution additional premiums for insurance until the amount of such premiums equals the amount of all losses and expenses of the Corporation, except that the total amount so assessed in any 1 year against any such institution shall not exceed one-eighth of 1% of the total amount of the accounts of its insured savers.

Operating results.—The Corporation is entirely self-supporting. Revenues and other receipts have been sufficient to meet all insurance losses, operating expenses, and return on capital stock, leaving a reserve for contingencies of $5,054.1 million as of September 30, 1978. Total revenues and other receipts since 1934 of $5,593.4 million have been applied as follows:

Reorganization plan No. 2 of 1978 established the Federal Labor Relations Authority as an independent entity within the executive branch. The Authority assumes the functions of the Federal Labor Relations Council and Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations (except standards of conduct for labor organizations) under Executive Order 11491, as amended, including the functions of the Civil Service Commission under sections 4(a) and 6(e) of the order.

The purpose of the Authority is to serve as a neutral party in the settlement of disputes that arise between unions, employees, and agencies on matters outlined in Executive Order 11491, as amended, and decide major policy issues, prescribe regulations, and disseminate information appropriate to the needs of agencies, labor organizations, and the public. Establishment of the Federal Labor Relations Authority gives full recognition to the role of the Federal Government as an employer.

1. Adjudication.—The Authority adjudicates labor-management disputes in the Federal sector including: appeals on negotiability issues; exceptions to arbitration awards; appropriate units for the purposes of exclusive recognition; eligibility of labor organizations for national consultation rights, unfair labor practice complaints; and whether grievances are subject to negotiated grievance procedures or to arbitration.

The workloads for the activity are reflected in the following table:

The Federal Maritime Commission administers the shipping statutes which require regulation of the domestic offshore and international waterborne commerce of the United States. In addition, the Commission has responsibility for the licensing of ocean freight forwarders; and for insuring that vessel owners or operators establish financial responsibility for water pollution, death or injury to passengers or other persons on voyages to and from U.S. ports, and indemnification of passengers for the nonperformance of transportation. Major program objectives for 1980 will continue to deal with the issue of illegal rebating and other forms of malpractice by carriers operating in the ocean trades of the United States; and achieving compliance with the statutes through an effective regulatory program.

The Service assists parties to disputes in industries affecting commerce to settle their disputes through conciliation and mediation.

1. Mediation services.—The Service assists labor and management in mediation and prevention of disputes, other than those involving rail and air transportation, whenever in its judgment such disputes threaten to cause a substantial interruption of interstate commerce or a major impairment of the national defense. Under Section 7119 of the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978, the Service also makes mediation and conciliation services available to Federal agencies and organizations representing Federal employees in the resolution of negotiation disputes. The Service closed 596 dispute mediation cases in the Federal sector in 1978 and anticipates some 750 cases in 1980. The Service provides mandatory mediation and, where necessary, impartial boards of inquiry to assist in resolving labor disputes involving private nonprofit health care institutions. During 1978, the Service closed a total of 1,313 health case assignments, and anticipates an equal number in 1980. About 87% of the 24,975 closed mediation assignments which required the services of mediators were settled without work stoppages. The workload shown below includes assignments closed in both the private and public sectors.

Mediators also participate each year in public information and educational activities such as university lectures and a variety of seminars and conferences.

3. Arbitration services.—The Service assists parties in disputes in utilizing the arbitration process for the resolution of disputes arising under or in the negotiation of collective bargaining agreements in the private and public sectors. This activity also includes the appointment of boards of inquiry to look into the facts of a dispute in the health care industry. In addition, the Service administers expedited arbitration for the U.S. Postal Service in several large areas of the country, for national agreements in construction, and for a number of multi-location contracts.

The Federal Trade Commission is charged by law with insuring that competition in the marketplace is vigorous, free, and fair. This is accomplished by eliminating threats to fair and honest competition from all sources, both public and private.

1. Maintaining competition.—The Commission's efforts to enforce the antitrust laws are aimed at reducing prices to consumers and limiting the effects of inflation, and fostering and preserving competition and the free enterprise system. The Commission examines competitive restraints imposed by the private sector or by regulatory actions that unduly restrict or limit the competitive process and adversely affect consumers, and takes action, where appropriate, to eliminate such restraints. In 1980, the Commission will focus principal antitrust attention on areas with the most direct impact on consumers: the energy, health care, food, and transportation industries. The thrust of these activities will continue to be on removing barriers to the operation of an unfettered market system and to prevent, whenever possible, price increases and limitations on supply caused by anticompetitive practices and market structure.

2. Consumer protection.—The Commission is charged with eliminating unfair or deceptive practices which preclude full and fair functioning of the marketplace. The goal of the consumer protection mission is the enhancement of consumers' ability to effectively allocate limited resources through rational marketplace decisionmaking and will accomplish this through activities in two major areas. Activities in the first area are designed to increase the amount of accurate and useful information available to consumers so that search costs will be lower and intelligent purchase decisions can be made. The second area includes activities aimed at removing marketplace distortions that create incentives for sellers to engage in abusive practices that inhibit free choice and therefore preclude full and fair functioning of the marketplace. Improved market operation will result in greater consumer welfare by reducing the amount consumers pay for goods and services and increasing product availability and reliability.

3. Economic activities.—This mission has three major functions. It collects and disseminates valuable economic data that would otherwise be unavailable, it provides analytical economic input into the Commission's consumer protection and antitrust efforts, and it engages in applied economic research concerning matters relevant to policymaking in these general areas.

New authorization legislation is needed to provide for the Commission's 1980 request of $69,021 thousand. Authorization legislation covering fiscal 1980 will be proposed.

The Harry S Truman Memorial Scholarship Act, establishes the Harry S Truman Scholarship Foundation whose Harry S Truman scholarship program is the permanent, official Federal memorial to Harry S Truman, the 33d President of the United States. The Foundation is authorized to award college scholarships of up to $5 thousand annually for 4 years to persons who demonstrate outstanding potential for and who are preparing to pursue a career in public service.

During 1977 and 1978, the Foundation conducted its second nationwide competition to select Truman scholars. One Truman scholar was selected from each State, plus the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and—considered as a single entity—Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. By the fall of 1978, the original 1977 class of Truman scholars and the 1978 class of Truman scholars received payment toward their second and first years of eligible academic expenses, respectively.

The Foundation is currently conducting its third annual competition by attempting to build on the solid base established in its first and second years.

INTERGOVERNMENTAL AGENCIES

ADVISORY COMMISSION ON INTERGOVERNMENTAL RELATIONS

The Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations is an independent, bipartisan body which attempts to identify and analyze the causes of intergovernmental conflicts, and recommends ways of strengthening and improving the American federal system. The 26-member Commission includes diverse representatives of the executive, legislative, and administrative branches of all levels of government—Federal, State, and local—as well as representatives of the general public.

The Commission and its staff examine Federal and State programs having an intergovernmental aspect. Proposed legislation is reviewed to determine its overall affect on the federal system. The Commission also identifies emerging problems of Federal-State-local relations.

The Commission makes recommendations concerning the allocation of responsibilities and revenues among the various levels of government. The recommendations and published reports growing out of the Commission's work are submitted to the executive and legislative branches of Federal, State, and local governments for appropriate action.

Continuing and annual projects of the Commission include the monitoring of the general revenue sharing effort, polling the changing public attitudes on government and taxes, surveying State and local finances, monitoring the legislation of State and local governments, cataloging Federal grants-in-aid, and providing educational and technical assistance to Federal, State, and local governments with regard to Commission recommendations.

Other projects which are nonrecurring but currently under Commission study include countercyclical aid to State and local governments; the effect of Federal and State tax and spending policies on economic growth in the States and regions; the assignment of servicing functions among and between the various levels of government; State and local pension policies and practices; and citizen participation in fiscal decisionmaking.

Contributions from State and local governments and nonprofit organizations are used to strengthen the Commission's clearinghouse, information, and policy education services to State and local governments and to improve intergovernmental coordination and relations.

In 1977, the Commission returned to seeking contributions from State and local governments. The States are responding positively and a goal of $100,000 (the same as in 1979) has been established.

(5) Serve as a focal point and coordinating unit for Appalachian programs.

It is the function of the Federal Cochairman of the Commission and his staff to coordinate the Appalachian program with all Federal agencies.

The Appalachian Regional Development Act also provides for a professional Commission staff. Employees of the Commission, under the act, are determined not to be Federal employees but are the joint employees of the Federal and State Governments.

The 1980 increase largely results because a portion of Commission staff previously financed from the Appalachian regional development programs appropriation (see Funds appropriated to the President) will be financed jointly by both Federal and State governments.

Contribution to the Commission.—The Commission was created by compact among the four States in the basin, the District of Columbia, and the Federal Government for the purpose of water pollution abatement and control. It is also responsible for the management of water and associated land resources.

The appropriation represents the Federal Government's share of the expenses of the Commission's operations. Funds also are contributed by the signatory bodies (member States and District of Columbia). The Commission also receives an Environmental Protection Agency program grant under the authority of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended. Under the amended compact law, State shares have been increased substantially to provide for an expanded program of activities, requiring an equivalent increase in the Federal contribution.

The Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority is a non-Federal agency established pursuant to an interstate compact among Maryland, Virginia, and the District of Columbia. The Authority's primary functions are to plan, develop, finance, and construct the Metro-rail rapid transit system and to operate the bus/rail transit system in the National Capital area. The rail system extends from a central distributor system in the District of Columbia into the participating jurisdictions of Maryland and Virginia.

Construction costs for the rail system are funded by a combination of bonds and grants from the local, State, and Federal governments. The National Capital Transportation Act of 1969 provided the initial Federal funding and was amended in 1972 to provide additional funding. The 1972 amendments provided for a Federal guaranty of the Authority's bonds in an amount not to exceed $1.2 billion, conversion of the Authority's bonds from a tax-exempt to a taxable security, and payment of an interest subsidy by the Federal Government to the Authority of 25% of the net interest cost.

In 1976, due to rising costs and concerns about system effectiveness, the Federal Government required that the National Capital Region complete an alternative analysis review on certain unbuilt segments of the approved Metrorail system. This thorough review has now been completed by local officials and they have prepared a financial plan for constructing a 100-mile Metro system, covering capital costs, operating costs, and debt service.

The total system cost under the plan would be at least $6.8 billion. To complete construction would require an additional $3 billion on an 80/20 Federal ($2.4 billion) to local ($600 million) sharing ratio.

Funding to date has reflected a Federal-local partnership in developing a regional transportation network in the Washington metropolitan area. Initially, a Federal authorization of $1,147 million was enacted in 1969. This was exhausted in 1978. However, under the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1973, as amended through 1978, local jurisdictions may cancel unbuilt interstate highway projects no longer necessary, whose Federal and local matching shares on an 85% Federal, 15% local sharing basis may be used to support rapid transit construction. Since 1976, interstate highway substitution funds have been used. In 1976, about $399 million of Federal grants were made available for Metro construction by canceling certain interstate highway segments in the District of Columbia. In 1977, $328 million was approved by the same process. In 1978, $275 million was appropriated for Metro work in the Washington area.

Funding for 1979 and beyond was contingent on the completion of the alternative analysis process and development of a financial plan. This, as noted above, has been completed. A budget adjustment will allow 1979 funding of $275 million for continuing construction. The 1980 and 1981 budgets of the Department of Transportation will also provide funding at $275 million per year.

Apart from the rail capital construction program is the requirement of annual interest costs on outstanding Authority bonds sold in support of the construction program. This requirement includes two components—Federal 25% bond interest subsidy and debt service assistance. The Federal Government, in accordance with Public Law 92-349, provides an annual bond interest subsidy of 25% of total net interest costs. The bond interest subsidy requirement in 1979 is $19,374 thousand for the 25% subsidy. Under the same authorization, the Federal Government provided temporary debt service on the balance of the interest due on an 80% Federal, 20% local cost sharing basis. The amount provided in 1977 was $12,243 thousand and in 1978, $29,282 thousand. In 1979 for the January 1, 1979, payment, $18,768 thousand has been provided.

With completion of alternatives analysis and a financial plan, agreement has been reached between the Federal Government and WMATA for a sharing of the debt service on the bonds (i.e., the payment of principal and interest) on a two-thirds Federal and one-third local basis. The Federal Government expects the several local jurisdictions that comprise the authority to quickly establish a sinking fund and develop appropriate funding arrangements to fully and expeditiously meet their sinking fund and interest obligations. A supplemental appropriation for 1979 in the amount of $16,102 thousand will be necessary for the Federal Government to meet its two-thirds responsibility. The 1980 requirement is $51,587 thousand for the Federal Government and $25,789 thousand for the local governments and WMATA.

The International Communication Agency conducts the international communication, educational, cultural and exchange programs of the United States. The Agency advises the President, the National Security Council, and the Secretary of State on the above areas, and assists in the development and execution of a national policy on international communications. The programs and activities of the Agency strive to tell other nations about United States government policies and American society, particularly our commitment to cultural diversity and individual liberty. At the same time Agency programs serve to inform us about the world in order to enrich our own culture and give us the understanding needed to deal effectively with problems among nations.

Agency operations are largely financed from this appropriation, and the related special foreign currency appropriation, and consist of the following major elements:

1. Overseas missions.—The Agency operates 205 posts in 126 countries. These posts administer the exchange-of-persons program and conduct informational and other cultural programs using materials prepared locally and by the media services in Washington.

2. Broadcasting service.—This Service, better known as the Voice of America, produces radio broadcasts in English and in 37 foreign languages. Programs are broadcast from transmitters at four domestic and eight overseas locations. This Service also supplies the overseas missions with recorded radio programs and scripts for placement on foreign stations.

3. Educational and cultural affairs.—This activity covers educational and cultural exchanges between the United States and approximately 150 countries, overseas cultural presentations, and support for binational centers and U.S.-operated libraries and reading rooms abroad. Specifically, it provides for the exchange of American and foreign scholars under the auspices of the Board of Foreign Scholarships; short-term visits by foreign leaders to the United States; encouragement and facilitative assistance to private organizations in similar exchange activities; cultural presentations overseas by American performing arts groups; and collections of American publications and English-teaching materials for libraries and reading rooms operated abroad by the U.S. and for binational centers. This activity also includes aid to American-sponsored elementary and secondary schools abroad.

4. Program coordination, production, and support.—This activity serves primarily to support overseas missions by coordinating program planning and by producing, acquiring, and adapting various program materials for their use. Included under this activity are presentations abroad by American specialists; motion picture and television films; editorial news and feature stories; pamphlets and periodicals; printing services, supplies, and equipment; exhibits and visual materials; and special international exhibitions, including those developed and shown in the U.S.S.R. and Eastern Europe under special cultural exchange agreements.

5. Agency direction and management.—This activity encompasses managerial staffs and centralized servicing functions for the Agency as a whole, including the Office of the Director, the Associate Directorate for Management (including the Office of Inspection and Audit), the general counsel, and other staff support.

6. Administrative support.—This activity covers payments to the Department of State for administrative services for the Agency's overseas operations and certain special support services at headquarters; to the General Services Administration for rental of space and related costs at domestic locations; and to the Department of Defense for worldwide postal services.

Since 1963 budget authority for these programs has been included in the Mutual educational and cultural exchange activities appropriation. With the organization of the International Communication Agency in 1978 budget authority for these programs was included in the new Salaries and expenses (special foreign currency program) appropriation.

2. Special international exhibitions (special foreign currency program).—This appropriation provided dollars for the purchase of foreign currencies. Since 1975 budget authority for these programs has been included in the Special international exhibitions appropriation, which was merged with the Salaries and expenses appropriations in 1979. Thus budget authority for these programs is now included in the new Salaries and expenses appropriation.

3. Preservation of ancient Nubian monuments (special foreign currency).—This appropriation provided for grants of Egyptian pounds, excess to the requirements of the United States, to UNESCO for the preservation and removal of certain temples in Egypt and the Sudan. Grants were also made to American archeological expeditions and groups doing related research in Nubia.

This fund provides for guarantees to U.S. firms of convertibility of currencies earned in the export of U.S. books, periodicals, films, and other informational media. Congressional action in connection with the Agency's 1967 appropriation called for cessation of such guarantees, and no new guarantees have been initiated. However, the revolving fund authority remains in effect.

The U.S. International Trade Commission is an independent agency created by act of Congress. The Commission's present powers and duties are provided for by the Tariff Act of 1930; the Antidumping Act, 1921, as amended; the Agricultural Adjustment Act; the Trade Expansion Act of 1962; the Trade Act of 1974; and Public Law 95-630.

The Commission conducts investigations and, where appropriate, makes determinations and recommendations in cases where: (1) serious injury to industries may warrant increases in duties, the imposition of quotas, or the provision of adjustment assistance; (2) imports of goods sold at less than fair value may injure an industry; (3) imports of agricultural products may materially interfere with certain programs of the Department of Agriculture; (4) unfair methods of competition in the importation or sale of foreign articles may tend to injure an industry or restrain and monopolize trade and commerce in the United States; or (5) foreign governments may have subsidized imports into the United States.

The Commission advises the President and the Congress as to the probable economic effect on the domestic industry and consumers of modification of duties and other barriers to trade which may be considered for inclusion in any proposed trade agreement with foreign countries.

The Commission, in cooperation with the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Commerce, establishes for statistical purposes an enumeration of articles imported into the United States and exported from the United States, and seeks to establish comparability of such statistics with statistical programs for domestic production.

The Commission also issues a publication containing U.S. tariff schedules and related matters and considers questions concerning the arrangements of such schedules and the classification of articles.

Pursuant to section 1911 of Public Law 95-630, the Commission is requested to make a report and recommendations on the impact of the activities of the Export-Import Bank on industries and employment in the United States, including an assessment of previous loans and financial guarantees.

Pursuant to section 175 of the Trade Act of 1974, the above budget estimates for the Commission are included without revision by the President.

Section 311 of the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978 imposes temporary employment limitations on the total number of civilian employees in the executive branch and provides that the President shall prescribe regulations to carry out that purpose. Consonant with that provision of law the Presidential personnel ceilings for this agency are 378 full-time permanent and 404 total employees for the ends of both 1979 and 1980. Accordingly, the President recommends that the Congress appropriate $13,900,000 in 1980 budget authority, an amount $800,000 less than the Commission's unrevised request.

The Commission's resources are divided among seven major programs:

1. Formal proceedings.—This program encompasses the operations involved in deciding all formal and certain informal proceedings filed with the Commission. It includes the regulation of rates, the granting of operating authorities, and the regulation of mergers, acquisitions, and abandonments. Also included is the generation of the necessary economic cost and financial data used in the decisionmaking process. Programmatic goals for 1980 include improving management of the case process and reviewing Commission policies, particularly in the rate area.

2. Compliance and enforcement.—This program includes the compliance and enforcement activities of the Commission designed to insure that carrier operations are in compliance with the Interstate Commerce Act and related statutes. It includes analyzing and investigating carrier operations, handling complaints with particular emphasis on those of individual consumers, and assuring that carriers are properly insured. Programmatic goals for 1980 will focus upon the prosecution of cases having major impact on the transportation industry, efforts increasing the effectiveness and relevance of consumer and small business assistance activities, and redefining and implementing the optimal organization and management structure of the Commission's field operations.

3. Financial oversight.—This program includes formulating and policing the uniform systems of accounts, compiling financial statistics, operating the Commission's Early Warning System, overseeing financial disclosures by regulated carriers, and conducting financial audits of carrier records. Programmatic goals for 1980 include reducing reporting requirements for all regulated carriers and improving the Commission's general data base to insure that policies and decisions are based in fact.

4. Tariff examination.—This program includes the examination of tariffs filed with the Commission to insure compliance with published rules and regulations, deciding requests for exceptions from normal procedures, and handling informal complaints and requests to pay reparations. Programmatic goals for 1980 center around the development of statistical techniques that will reduce the number of publications requiring an in-depth analysis, improving the consumer-oriented tariff examination program, and simplification of tariffs.

5. Planning rail service.—This program includes the long-range transportation policy planning activities of the Commission pertaining to existing rail service. It includes analysis and evaluation of reports, railroad merger proposals and acquisitions, and providing technical assistance to States for the administration of planning and subsidy programs. Programmatic goals for 1980 will continue the evaluation of the policies, plans, and programs of the Commission on the basis of an ongoing analysis of national rail transportation needs in order to foster the development of economic regulatory policies which will assure optimal utilization of all modes of transportation.

6. Rail public counsel.—This program is intended to insure that the public is informed and represented in proceedings concerning the railroad industry.

7. Non-rail public counsel.—This program is intended to insure that the public is informed and represented in proceedings concerning non-rail matters.

Note.—In accordance with the Legal Services Corporation Act, the Corporation may directly submit its budget request to the Congress. The Corporation is expected to request budget authority of $337,500 thousand in 1980.

The Legal Services Corporation was established in 1974 as a private, nonprofit corporation to provide civil legal assistance to the poor. Federal funding for legal services has expanded rapidly, growing from $71.5 million in 1975 to $270 million in 1979 for the Corporation. Other Federal programs, including title XX (Social Services) of the Social Security Act, the Older Americans Act, and General Revenue Sharing, will finance an additional $55 million in legal services in 1979. The Administration proposes increasing direct legal services grants from $235 million in 1979 to $248 million in 1980 to allow full Corporation support for about 7,000 attorneys and 3,000 paralegals in 360 local programs.

Private attorneys have committed themselves to assisting the poor through pro bono publico services. The American Bar Association Code of Professional Responsibility states that: "The basic responsibility for providing legal services for those unable to pay ultimately rests upon the individual lawyer, and personal involvement in the problems of the disadvantaged can be one of the most rewarding experiences in the life of a lawyer. Every lawyer, regardless of professional prominence or professional workload, should find time to participate in serving the disadvantaged." The overall legal services effort depends on fulfillment of these attorney obligations.

A modest target of 2% of private attorney time, phased in over 2 years, yields about 4,600 attorney-years of service in 1980. The administration proposes $1 million for an Office of Attorney Responsibility to coordinate pro bono publico participation and $1 million for special projects to formalize attorney commitments and demonstrate ways to fulfill them. These activities can significantly increase the availability of legal services to the poor.

The insurance fund is used to carry out a program of insurance for member accounts in Federal credit unions and State-chartered credit unions which apply and qualify for insurance, authorized by Public Law 91-468, enacted October 19, 1970.

Budget program.—The activities consist of: (a) providing member account insurance, (b) formulating standards and requirements for insured credit unions, and (c) providing for liquidation or other disposition of the assets and liabilities of solvent and insolvent, insured credit unions.

The extent of the program is estimated as follows:

CREDIT UNION SHARE INSURANCE FUND—Continued

Item	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Number of insured credit unions.....	17,324	17,820	18,258
Number of insured member accounts (thousands)...	29,421	30,821	32,221
Shares of insured member institutions as of Dec. 31 of the previous calendar year (in millions of dollars).....	$37,332	$44,962	$53,307

It is estimated that approximately 5,469 State-chartered credit unions will be enrolled in the program by the end of 1980.

Financing.—Each insured credit union is required to pay a normal premium of one-twelfth of 1% of the total amount of its member accounts. The insurance fund is structured to be self-supporting through the insurance premiums which are paid by member credit unions. The estimated premiums of $42,675 thousand in 1980 are expected to cover all insurance claims and provide for an increase in the fund balance. This will be held in Government interest-bearing securities as an insurance reserve. The fund has $100 million in borrowing authority from the Treasury for use in unforeseen emergencies. The authority to borrow from the Treasury has never been used and probably will not be exercised in 1979 or 1980.

Operating results.—Anticipated net income of $43,989 thousand will be retained in the fund, raising the balance for unforeseen emergencies to $198 million by the end of 1980.

The National Credit Union Central Liquidity Facility will be established as a mixed ownership corporation on October 1, 1979, as authorized under Public Law 95-630. The Central Liquidity Facility will supply short-term loans to member credit unions to facilitate the operations of credit unions and enhance their services to their members. Credit unions, which choose to become members of the Central Liquidity Facility, are required to purchase stock equal to one-half to 1% of their assets.

The principal sources of funds for the lending operations are the stock subscriptions by credit unions and the sale of obligations of the facility. These obligations are not guaranteed by the U.S. Government as to either principal or interest.

The capital stock of the Central Liquidity Facility is owned entirely by the members who must subscribe at the rate of at least one-half of 1% of the assets of these credit unions. In 1980 the facility is requesting authority to borrow up to $500 million from the Secretary of the Treasury for unforeseen emergencies. This authority to borrow from the Treasury probably will not be exercised in 1980.

The Board resolves representation disputes in industry and remedies and prevents specified unfair labor practices by employers or labor organizations. Case intake in 1978 was 39,652 unfair labor practice cases and 13,609 representation cases. Estimates for unfair labor practice cases are 43,300 for 1979 and 46,244 for 1980. Representation case estimates are 14,929 for 1979 and 15,780 for 1980.

1. Field investigation.—Charges of unfair labor practices and petition for elections to resolve representation disputes are investigated by regional office personnel. Over 87% of the unfair labor practice cases and about 84% of the representation cases are closed by settlement, dismissal, or withdrawal. The remainder are prepared for public hearing. The agency strives to maximize the voluntary settlement of all cases, and the avoidance of litigation.

2. Administrative law judge hearing.—Administrative law judges conduct public hearings in unfair labor practice cases. Their findings and recommendations are set forth in their decisions. In 1978 there were 1,258 hearings closed, 54 proceedings adjusted after close of hearing, and 1,197 decisions issued. The estimate for 1979 is for 1,455 hearings to be closed, 75 adjusted after hearing, and 1,339 decisions. The estimate for 1980 is for 1,782 hearings to be closed, 105 adjusted after hearing, and 1,445 decisions.

3. Board adjudication.—In an unfair labor practice case a judge's decision becomes a Board order if no exceptions are filed. About 31% of these decisions become automatic Board orders or are complied with voluntarily. The remainder with exceptions filed requires contested Board decisions. In 1978, 1,146 such Board decisions were issued; the estimates for 1979 and 1980 are 1,382 and 1,493 respectively. In representation cases, regional directors initially decide the issues by Board delegation. In 1978 regional directors issued 1,853 such decisions; and the estimate is 2,169 for 1979 and 2,227 in 1980. The Board itself decides representation issues on referral from regional directors or by granting a request for review of a regional director's decision. In 1978 the Board issued 149 representation decisions; the estimates for 1979 and 1980 are 247 and 269 respectively. The Board also ruled on 467 objection and challenge questions in election cases in 1978; it is estimated that 494 such rulings will be required in 1979 and 503 in 1980.

4. Securing compliance with Board orders.—If the parties do not voluntarily comply with the Board's order involving unfair labor practices, the Board must request the appellate courts to enforce its decisions. In 1978 a total of 453 Board decisions of all kinds required such litigation; the estimate for 1979 is 531, and for 1980 it is 592.

1. Mediatory services.—The Board mediates disputes over wages, hours, and working conditions for some 650 rail and air carriers and approximately 800,000 employees in the two industries.

The Board's technical assistance activity enables labor and industry representatives to explore informally the relevant economic and noneconomic problems which condition collective bargaining in the railroad and airline industries.

2. Voluntary arbitration and emergency disputes.—When the parties fail to resolve their disputes through mediation, they are urged to submit their differences to arbitration. If neither mediation nor voluntary arbitration is successful, the President, when notified of disputes which threaten seriously to interrupt service, may appoint an emergency board to investigate and report on the disputes. Such reports usually serve as a basis for resolving the disputes.

3. Adjustment of railroad grievances.—Railroad employee grievances resulting from disputes over the interpretation or application of collective bargaining contracts may be brought for settlement to the National Railroad Adjustment Board. The divisions of the Board are composed of an equal number of carrier and union representatives compensated by the party or parties they represent. Administrative direction and support are provided by the staff director/grievances and clerical assistants who are compensated by the National Mediation Board. The appropriation also provides for neutral referees to sit with the Board when they are deadlocked. Boards of adjustment are also financed under this activity.

The National Science Foundation supports basic and applied research, science and technology policy research, and related scientific programs, to promote the progress of science and advance the Nation's health, prosperity, welfare, and security. The Foundation's 1980 research programs are designed to: (1) strengthen basic research in the mathematical, physical, biological, environmental, and social sciences and in engineering and materials; (2) focus U.S. scientific and technical resources on research and related activities having the highest potential for contribution to the understanding and resolution of significant problems; (3) promote international cooperation through science and technology; (4) strengthen and broaden training opportunities necessary to help meet the Nation's scientific personnel needs; and (5) address scientific and technological policy issues.

The major research program activities of the Foundation are:

1. Mathematical and physical sciences and engineering.—This activity provides support for research projects directed at increasing understanding of natural laws and phenomena and gaining new knowledge about engineering principles and materials to strengthen the Nation's technology base. Major research efforts are supported in mathematics, physics, chemistry, engineering, materials, and computer science.

2. Astronomical, atmospheric, Earth, and ocean sciences.—The general objectives of this activity are to gain new knowledge in astronomical and atmospheric sciences over the entire spectrum of physical phenomena; to better understand the physical and chemical makeup of the Earth and its geologic history; and to increase understanding of the oceans, their composition, structure, behavior, and resources. The Foundation provides the bulk of funding for the cost of operating and maintaining the 29 research vessels that make up the academic research fleet. The Foundation also supports six national research centers, five for astronomy and one for atmospheric sciences. These centers provide specialized facilities, equipment, staffing, and operational support which are beyond the capability of most individual educational or research institutions.

3. U.S. Antarctic program.—The Foundation provides overall management for the U.S. program in the Antarctic and supports a multidisciplinary research program on global weather and climate, renewable and nonrenewable resources, and the physical and biological characteristics of Antarctica and its surrounding seas. This activity is the sole expression of U.S. interest and presence in Antarctica.

4. Biological, behavioral, and social sciences.—The biological, behavioral, and social sciences activity consists of four major programs: Physiology, cellular, and molecular biology; behavioral and neural sciences; environmental biology; and social sciences. This activity aims to increase knowledge and understanding of fundamental life processes and forces affecting man as an individual and as a member of society. Emphasis continues to be given to plant sciences research because of its potential for providing knowledge on various questions related to food production.

5. Applied science and research applications.—This activity seeks to focus scientific and technological capabilities on current and emerging problems of national significance; shorten the time between scientific discoveries and their applications; and increase the use of science and technology in addressing the problems of the public sector.

Its principal areas of concern are problem focused research applications, applied research, integrated basic research, problem analysis, and intergovernmental science and public technology.

6. Scientific, technological, and international affairs.—This activity includes research and other efforts aimed at enhancing U.S. science through international cooperative science and technology programs, improving science information transfer, and providing science and technology policy research and assessment. The programs in this area include the collection and analysis of information on funding of research and development and on scientific and engineering manpower.

7. Program development and management.—This activity provides for the operation, support, management, and direction of all NSF programs and activities and includes necessary funds to develop, manage, and coordinate these program activities.

The special foreign currency program utilizes U.S.-owned excess currencies in certain foreign countries to support cooperative scientific projects, seminars, and the travel of U.S. and foreign scientists involved in mutually beneficial efforts. In addition, support is provided for the translation, publication, and dissemination of foreign scientific and technical information considered to be of interest to the U.S. scientific community. The Foundation awards grants to both U.S. and foreign institutions and scientists. Payments for this program are made in foreign currencies which the Department of the Treasury determines to be excess to the requirements of the United States.

One of the Foundation's key objectives is the initiation and support of programs to strengthen science education at all educational levels.

The 1980 science education program activity is organized as four subactivities:

1. Scientific personnel improvement.—Encouraging the highest quality standards in students and institutions by providing support for fellowships, traineeships, and other student-oriented activities, and by increasing the entry into the sciences of talented women, minorities, and the handicapped who have been historically underrepresented in these fields.

2. Science education resources improvement.—Strengthening the capabilities of schools, colleges, and universities for science education and research training; and stimulating the incorporation of validated knowledge and instructional strategies in science teaching.

3. Science education development and research.—Developing technologies, instructional methods, and course materials relevant to the teaching and learning of science.

4. Science and society.—Increasing public understanding of science and technology and their role in meeting national needs; increasing understanding of the interrelationships between scientific priorities and policies and the ethical and human values of society; increasing both the amount and quality of communication between the scientific community and the public; and increasing the use of science by the public.

NEIGHBORHOOD REINVESTMENT CORPORATION—Continued

The Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation was recently created by the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation Act (title VI of the Housing and Community Development Amendments of 1978, Public Law 95-557, October 31, 1978). The Corporation is to continue and expand the work of the Urban Reinvestment Task Force, a joint effort of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and five Federal financial supervisory agencies to promote reinvestment in older urban neighborhoods. The Corporation's board of directors is composed of the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, the Chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the Comptroller of the Currency, the Chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Chairman of the National Credit Union Administration, and a member of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. The Chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board is designated as Chairman of the Corporation's board for the first 2-year term.

The major activities of the Corporation are to be assumed from the Urban Reinvestment Task Force. They include the establishment, support, and expansion of neighborhood housing services programs in urban neighborhoods; identifying, evaluating, and supporting neighborhood preservation projects which show promise for reversing neighborhood decline; replicating successful neighborhood preservation projects; and supporting a national loan purchase pool.

The Corporation receives both Federal and non-Federal funding to finance its program activities. The program and financing schedule above reflects only direct Federal appropriations to the Corporation. The following business-type tables reflect the total program activity of the Corporation and its predecessor, the Urban Reinvestment Task Force, and all sources of financing, both Federal and non-Federal.

1. Nuclear reactor regulation.—The assurance of adequate safety, environmental protection, and safeguards in the issuance of construction permits and operating licenses is the primary objective of this program. A major objective in 1980 will be to decrease the backlog of operating reactor licensing actions and generic issues. In addition to the licensing effort associated with operating reactors, special analyses will be accomplished to assure that operating reactors which were issued operating licenses prior to 1969 continue to operate safely. Minimizing licensing time through employment of standard review plans, resolution of generic technical problems, standardized plant designs, and increased organizational efficiencies will continue as a primary objective in 1980.

2. Standards development.—The standards development effort will be directed at: developing detailed supporting standards to complement the broad performance requirements already completed; developing new standards to reflect needs identified in the licensing and inspection and enforcement processes; and updating existing standards to reflect experience from plant operation, research results, feedback from users of standards, advances in technology, and improved regulatory practices.

3. Inspection and enforcement.—The new initiative started in 1978 to implement the revised inspection program will be continued in 1980. This program provides a stronger technical basis to assure that public health and safety and the environment are adequately protected. In 1980, NRC safety inspections will keep pace with the projected changes in the number of operating reactors and reactors under construction. The inspection program will continue to play a supportive role in the process of issuing construction permits and operating licenses. Safety inspections of fuel cycle facilities will increase moderately in 1980 commensurate with facility caseload growth as will the materials inspection effort. The effort devoted to safeguard inspections will decrease slightly, however adequate coverage will be afforded all licensees.

4. Nuclear material safety and safeguards.—The 1980 fuel cycle requirements will increase due to accelerated and expanded effort in the nuclear waste management program, increased activity in fuel cycle facility licensing, and the new initiative for review of Department of Energy remedial actions for inactive mill tailings and former Atomic Energy Commission industrial contractor sites. These increased requirements have been somewhat offset by reductions in transportation, and review and assessment of alternative fuel cycle studies. In safeguards, there will be increased activity in security and accountability evaluations relating to imports and exports as required by the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act of 1978, and accelerated effort in preparing regulatory guidance to be available to disseminate to licensees with new rules. These increased 1980 requirements will be offset by reductions in efforts related to the assessment of vulnerabilities of nuclear facilities and to safeguards information systems.

5. Nuclear regulatory research.—The 1980 research program for the NRC places major emphasis on continuing the quantification of safety margins for light water reactors. Operational testing of loss of fluid test facility (LOFT) will begin with the first nuclear test scheduled for 1979. The 1980 research budget reflects the LOFT increases due to the first full year funding of facility operations by NRC. The international 3-D flow distribution experimental program will be increased commensurate with program schedules with the NRC contributing instrumentation and code development and analysis for the Federal Republic of Germany and Japanese facilities. Site safety research will increase in order to respond to nuclear reactor seismic design safety questions. Research in nuclear waste management will increase in order to provide for investigations to predict the environmental and safety aspects of high level and spent fuel waste disposal. Risk assessment research will increase to provide improved methodology and criteria to apply risk assessment techniques to help improve the regulatory process. Research directed toward improvement of nuclear powerplant safety will be continued. The advanced converter safety assessment program will be phased down during 1979.

NOTES

Includes $108,214 thousand in 1978 and $110,483 thousand in 1979 formerly financed from Salaries and expenses, Civil Service Commission.

Excludes $951 thousand in 1979 (beginning December 31, 1978) and $1,286 thousand in 1980 for functions transferred to Salaries and expenses, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Comparable amounts for 1978 ($1,201 thousand) and 1979 through December 30, 1978 ($335 thousand) are included above.

The Office of Personnel Management was established as an independent agency by reorganization plan 2 of 1978. The Office assumes the responsibilities for positive personnel management functions formerly vested in the U.S. Civil Service Commission. These functions include the following activities:

1. Staffing systems and services.—This activity consists of: (a) identifying and communicating staffing needs; (b) evaluating and referring applicants; (c) developing staffing policy and methods; and (d) assuring fitness and suitability. In 1980 the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) will expand the decentralization of personnel authorities to agencies, continue efforts to bring the OPM into compliance with the Uniform Guidelines on Employee Selection Procedures, and maintain efforts to improve employment procedures for the Federal sector to assure a quality workforce.

The workloads for this activity are reflected on the following table:

2. Compensation, retirement and insurance.—The OPM administers compensation and benefits programs for the Federal work force. Principal activities of this program are administering salary, wage, hours of duty, leave, allowances, differential, group life insurance, health benefit programs and retirement programs for Federal employees and annuitants. The OPM sets policy, issues regulations, and makes recommendations to the President in these areas. In the case of the retirement program, the OPM conducts principal functions such as adjudicating claims, making payments to annuitants and other claimants. In 1980 the OPM will continue efforts in support of the development of a total compensation comparability system, and the development of job evaluation and pay systems for the clerical and technical service, the professional and administrative service, and special occupational services; and continue improvements to the processing systems in the retirement program.

Workloads are reflected in the following table:

PRODUCTION COUNT

Retirement inquiries answered.....	715,800	770,300	770,300

3. Workforce effectiveness and development.—The OPM administers programs designed to enhance employee performance and productivity. It provides program leadership and guidelines to Federal agencies in the areas of occupational health, incentive awards, performance appraisal, productivity measurement, organizational psychology, and employee training.

4. Agency relations.—The OPM has established a formal mechanism for assisting agencies in identifying, analyzing, and solving problems which impede workforce effectiveness, efficiency and the best use of resources. To this end the OPM maintains liaison with agencies and agency personnel offices, provides consultative services to agencies in the identification and resolution of management problems and provides a central focus for collaboration with other central management agencies in providing administrative systems for the Federal sector.

5. Agency compliance and evaluation.—The OPM establishes delegation agreements with Federal agencies which establish standards and requirements subject to which agencies are delegated personnel management authorities. The OPM conducts personnel management evaluations and follows up on agency conducted personnel evaluations. The OPM compiles, analyzes, and publishes Federal work force information. In 1980 the OPM will build upon 1979 pilot tests of the delegation agreement concept and continue to compile information on the Federal work force.

6. Executive personnel and management development.—This activity consists of: (a) administering a Federal executive personnel system; (b) conducting a management and executive development program for the Federal sector; and (c) administering the administrative law judge program. Principal functions of this activity include the allocation of executive slots to agencies, the review of executive qualifications, provision of leadership and guidance to agencies on management development and the conduct of all central personnel functions for the administrative law judge program.

7. Affirmative action programs.—The OPM promotes equal employment opportunity in the Federal Government through the establishment and implementation of affirmative employment, special emphasis, and upward mobility programs. Principal functions of this activity include: developing policies and tools which assist agencies and other OPM components to integrate affirmative employment programs in the overall Federal personnel management system; promoting established special emphasis programs to improve employment opportunities; and coordinating with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to assure consistency with Federal policy on equal employment opportunity.

8. Labor management relations.—This activity provides for the conduct of the OPM's labor management relations responsibilities by providing leadership in implementing and updating the Federal Government's labor management relations program. In 1980 the OPM will provide technical services on labor management relations to Federal agencies and State and local governments; provide for systematic and continuous assessment of the Federal labor management relations program; and continue the development and maintenance of systems for the collection and dissemination of information on Federal labor relations.

9. Intergovernmental personnel programs.—The purpose of the Intergovernmental Personnel Act of 1970, which the OPM administers, is to strengthen and improve the personnel resources of State and local governments. The OPM provides grant moneys and technical assistance to develop and encourage personnel programs consistent with prescribed merit employment principles.

In 1980, workloads are estimated to increase substantially over 1979 due to the requirements of a Presidential election year.

The Office of Personnel Management conducts full field security investigations for other departments and agencies, and performs training activities and miscellaneous services for Federal agencies and State and local governments on a reimbursable basis.

Budget program.—In 1980 workloads are expected to increase dramatically in the investigations program; agency demands for training will remain equal to the 1979 levels.

Operating results and financing condition.—The appropriated capital of the fund consists of $5 million. Since 1972, the first year of this level, the operations of the revolving fund have grown significantly in response to customer demand. As a result, cash investments in receivables, inventories, and fixed assets have increased dramatically. To maintain an adequate cash balance in the fund, retained earnings will be increased during 1979 and 1980. Surpluses will be generated by increasing the billing rates for the investigations program and adjusting various training course rates.

This fund is used to pay annuities to retired employees or their survivors; to make refunds to former employees for amounts withheld and to beneficiaries of employees who died before retirement or before the annuities equaled the amount withheld; and to pay administrative expenses of the Office of Personnel Management and the Merit Systems Protection Board in administering the program. The estimated unfunded liability for the civil service retirement system as of September 30, 1978, is $124 billion. Pertinent statistics as of the end of the year are shown below:

The fund finances the cost of health benefits for: (1) active employees, (2) employees who retired after June 1960, or their survivors, (3) those annuitants transferred from the Retired Federal employees health benefits program as authorized by Public Law 93-246, and (4) the related expenses of the Office of Personnel Management in administering the program.

Budget program.—The balance of the fund is available for payments without fiscal year limitation. Numbers of participants at the end of each fiscal year are as follows:

Active employees .....	2,308,000	2,321,800	2,335,800

In determining a biweekly subscription rate to cover program costs, 1% is added to the rates developed by health benefit carriers, for administrative expense, and 3% is added for a contingency reserve held by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) for each carrier. The OPM is authorized to transfer unused administrative reserve funds to the contingency reserve.

For Postal Service employees, the Government's contribution to the health benefits premiums is 75% of the current unweighted average of the high option premiums of six large plans. For general schedule and wage-board employees, the Government's contribution is 60%.

Financing.—The fund is financed by: (1) withholdings from active employees and annuitants; (2) agency contributions for active employees, appropriated to agencies; and (3) Government contributions for annuitants appropriated to the Office of Personnel Management.

Operating results.—Funds advanced to carriers but not used to pay claims in the current period are carried forward as special reserves for use in subsequent periods. About $25 million in unused administrative funds were transferred to the contingency reserve in 1978. The contingency reserves are retained by the Office of Personnel Management and paid to carriers, as necessary, to defray future rate increases or to provide increased benefits.

This fund finances insurance premiums paid to private insurance companies for Federal employees group life insurance and expenses of the Office of Personnel Management in administering the program. Separate cost data is maintained for employees regular group life insurance, an additional $10 thousand authorized in 1967, and insurance for members of former beneficial associations.

Budget program.—The status of the basic (regular and optional) life insurance program on September 30 is as follows:

Life insurance in force (in billions of dollars):	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
On active employees <sup>1</sup> .....	54.9	57.4	57.4

Financing.—For non-Postal Service employees' premium costs for the regular program are met by withholding 25½ cents biweekly from the salaries of employees for each $1 thousand of life insurance and a 50% matching by employer agencies. The optional program is financed by withholding from employees' salaries or retirees' annuities. The beneficial association program is financed by direct collection from members. Most of the difference between receipt and benefit payments under the policy is held in reserve for paying future life insurance claims. The status of reserves at the end of the year is as follows (in millions of dollars):

Held in special contingency reserves:
By basic program insurer .....	50	50	50
By beneficial association insurer .....	1	1	1

Total reserves.....	3,067	3,391	3,732

The carrier held contingency reserve for the basic program was reduced to $50 million as of June 30, 1976, and it is expected to remain at this level in subsequent years. Excess income from the program over benefit payments and other expenses is deposited in the U.S. Treasury to the credit of the Employees life insurance fund. The operations of the insurer for the regular and optional life insurance program to the end of each year follow (in millions of dollars):

This fund, created by the Retired Federal Employees Health Benefits Act, finances: (1) the cost of health benefits for retired employees and survivors who enroll in the Government-sponsored uniform health benefits plan; (2) the contribution to retired employees and survivors who retain or purchase private health insurance; and (3) expenses of the Office of Personnel Management in administering the program.

Budget program.—The fund is available without fiscal year limitation. Amounts contributed by the Government shall be paid into the fund from annual appropriations. Numbers of participants at the end of the fiscal year are as follows:

Financing.—The fund is financed by contributions from those participants enrolled in the Government-sponsored plan and by Government contributions. The special contingency reserve with the carrier of the uniform plan is currently limited to $250 thousand at the end of the policy year. Excess income from the program over benefit payments and other expenses is deposited in the U.S. Treasury to the credit of the retired employees health benefits program.

Operating results.—There will be an estimated $3.1 million contingency reserve in the fund at the end of 1980 as compared with an estimated $4.8 million in 1979. Withholdings from the annuitants have been increased as well as the Government's contribution. Also, the participants are being encouraged to enroll in the Federal employees health benefits program through an open season.

The Panama Canal Treaty of 1977 designates the Panama Canal Commission as the successor agency to the Panama Canal Company and Canal Zone Government. Legislation is being proposed to establish the Panama Canal Commission as a wholly owned U.S. Government corporation which will operate generally as the company has operated since its inception in 1950. The primary purpose of the Panama Canal Commission will be to operate and maintain the interoceanic waterway. The Commission is expected to be financially self-sufficient in its operations and to make payments to the Republic of Panama as specified in the treaty of 1977. The following budget programs reflect operations of the Panama Canal Commission for the full year 1980. For comparison purposes, data from the predecessor, Panama Canal Company, are also displayed for 1978 and 1979.

Budget program—Transit operations.—The services performed by this activity are (in thousands of dollars):

Net operating costs .....	117,236	124,126	223,687

Payments to Panama in 1980 are for certain public services to be provided by Panama, a fixed annuity of $10 million, and an annuity based on net tonnage of vessels passing through the canal. These payments are prescribed in paragraph 5 of article III and paragraphs 4(a) and 4(b) of article XIII of the Panama Canal Treaty of 1977.

Pursuant to article XIII4(c) of the Treaty, Panama will receive an additional amount of up to $10 million per year, to be paid out of Canal operating revenues to the extent that such revenues exceed expenditures of the Panama Canal Commission including amounts indicated in article III(5) and article XIII4 (a) and (b). In the event that Canal operating revenues do not produce a surplus sufficient to cover this payment, the unpaid balance is to be paid from operating surpluses in future years. This $10 million contingent payment is not considered a cost for inclusion in the toll base, with payment dependent upon the generation of revenue in excess of requirements.

Commercial vessel traffic volume and other indices of workload are as follows:

	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Ship transits (over 300 net Panama Canal tons) .....	12,785	13,265	13,420
Tolls .....	$195,735	$208,300	$260,000

Capital acquisition costs for 1980 total $18.9 million. This includes $5.0 million for channel improvements; $4.0 million for additional locks towing locomotives and spare components; $2.5 million to replace and add equipment throughout the various transit operations activities; $2.0 million to construct launch repair facilities; $1.3 million to provide for the renovation of certain facilities to relocate activities of the Commission displaced from facilities transferred to the Government of Panama under the 1977 treaty; and $1.1 million to replace launches and launch engines.

Supporting services.—The services performed by these support activities are (in thousands of dollars):

	1978 actual	1979 estimate	1980 estimate
Supply and logistical services .....	73,979	75,806	37,327

Less intra-agency recoveries .....	-62,496	-65,212	-44,679
Net operating costs .....	106,037	111,972	40,865

Capital expenditures for 1980 total $4.8 million. They include $0.7 million for motor vehicle additions and replacements; $0.6 million to replace and add equipment; $0.5 million for water system improvements; $0.5 million to improve communications facilities; $0.5 million to reroof employees quarters; and $0.5 million for minor improvements to quarters.

General corporate expense.—This category of expense includes the general and administrative expenses under statutory limitation; the costs of the Commission's employee health benefits program; the annuitant welfare program; death and disability payments; and the cost of health and education services provided to its employees and dependents.

Financing.—Under the implementing legislation, the Commission will be authorized to obtain appropriations for its capital needs and, in addition, may borrow from the Treasury, amounts not exceeding $40 million outstanding at any time. No borrowing against this authority is contemplated in 1980.

Operating results and financial condition.—The net operating result for 1980 is estimated to be a margin of $4.0 million. The tolls estimates reflect the Commission's projection of toll rate increases yielding an estimated $46.7 million in 1980.

Note.—This table represents the Postal Service request as transmitted without change pursuant to section 3, Public Law 93-328, as well as the President's request.

This appropriation is for the purpose of reimbursing the Postal Service for public service costs and loss in revenue associated with carrying certain categories of mail at free and reduced rates. The $66,655 thousand requested for previously unfunded liabilities of the former Post Office Department provides $35,655 thousand to cover payments to the employees' compensation fund in 1980 for injuries to postal employees which occurred prior to July 1, 1971, and $31 million to cover one-twelfth of the $372,796,423 in earned and unused annual leave balances due postal employees on June 30, 1971, from the former Post Office Department.

In addition to the amounts shown above, a supplemental appropriation of $18,233 thousand is proposed for coverage of revenue forgone pursuant to Public Law 95-593, which permits bulk third-class matter mailed by a qualified political committee to be mailed at the special bulk third-class rates for qualified nonprofit organizations. This is shown in greater detail in Part III of the Appendix. The transactions of the Postal Service appear in Part IV of the Appendix under Off-Budget Federal Entities.

The following table represents the estimated revenue forgone by the Postal Service in 1980 for carrying certain categories of mail at free and reduced rates.

This appropriation is a Federal subsidy to the Railroad retirement account for certain costs not financed by taxes from the railroad sector.

Payment for windfall benefits.—This is the fifth request for appropriations authorized by the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974 to subsidize “windfall” benefits received by persons covered by both the railroad retirement system and the social security system.

Because the social security benefit formula heavily favors persons with short periods of service, low earnings, or both, persons acquiring eligibility under both systems generally receive a disproportionate benefit.

The Railroad Retirement Act of 1974 authorizes annual appropriations, on a level cost basis, from 1976 through the year 2000 to subsidize the phaseout of windfall benefits. The amount of the appropriation, under this act, is to be reestimated every 3 years, in conjunction with the triennial actuarial valuation of the railroad retirement system. While the original estimates were for a level amount of $250 million, the 13th actuarial valuation indicates an amount of $363 million from 1979 onward which was a 45% increase over the original estimate. The administration is proposing legislation for this account to no longer index the initial windfall benefit for workers who retire after June 1979.

The Regional Rail Reorganization Act of 1973 provides for various benefits to protected employees adversely affected in the establishment of the Midwest and Northeast rail system provided by that act. The payment of all allowances, expenses, and costs provided protected employees will be made by the Consolidated Rail Corporation (Conrail), the United States Railway Association (USRA), and acquiring railroads. Upon certification to the Railroad Retirement Board of the amounts paid to protected employees, these organizations will be reimbursed for such amounts by the Board. The act authorizes appropriations to the Board for this purpose up to the aggregate sum of $250 million.

1. Maintenance of earnings accounts.—Insurance payments for unemployment and sickness benefits are based on individual records of earnings and daily wage rates. The workload fluctuates according to such factors as level of employment and rate of turnover in the railroad industry. The costs are shared on an allocated basis with the retirement program. Accounts posted are estimated at 665,000 in 1980.

2. Processing of unemployment insurance claims.—Workers' claims for unemployment compensation are filed locally and certified for payment through the headquarters office. Unemployment claims are projected to decline by 5% as indicated in the following table:

3. Processing of sickness claims.—These claims are filed by mail and certified for payment through the headquarters office of the Board. Sickness claims receipts are also projected to decline, as indicated in the preceding table.

4. Claimant placement services.—The Board conducts an employment service for unemployment benefit claimants. Savings of unemployment benefits of approximately $2,820 thousand are expected in 1980 from the placement of approximately 5,000 claimants in jobs, 1,500 of which are outside of the railroad sector.

5. Administration.—The costs of administration are shared between this and the retirement program on an allocated basis.

Under the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974, which radically restructured railroad retirement, beneficiaries receive the equivalent to a social security benefit based on a worker's railroad wages and other covered employment (designated "Tier I"), a railroad industry pension like other private pension plans but embedded in Federal law (designated "Tier II"), and one-third of the 1.0 million beneficiaries also receive a "windfall" benefit. Railroad workers and employers pay taxes on wages to finance: (1) retirement and disability benefits paid to primary beneficiaries and their dependents; (2) benefits to the survivors of railroad workers; and, (3) hospital insurance benefits (medicare). A Federal subsidy to the Railroad retirement account finances the windfall benefits received by individuals covered by both railroad retirement and social security. The taxes are deposited in the Railroad retirement account and invested in Government securities. The portion of the taxes which finances social security and hospital insurance benefits is transferred to the old-age, survivors and disability insurance trust funds and to the Federal hospital insurance trust fund under the financial interchange provisions governing railroad retirement and social security.

Supplemental annuities are also paid to certain employees in addition to regular benefits and windfalls. This program is financed by a tax paid by employers and deposited in the Railroad retirement supplemental account.

Income.—The income of the Railroad retirement accounts consists of taxes paid by railroad employers and employees; interest on investments; annual appropriations to subsidize windfall benefits as authorized by the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974; and, payments from the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund and the Federal disability insurance trust fund. The railroad retirement system has an arrangement of annual financial interchanges with the social security system so as to place social security in the same position in which it would have been if railroad employment had been directly covered by social security.

Retirement, disability, and survivor benefit payments.—Payment estimates reflect the increases in benefit rates provided by law.

Administrative expenses.—Such expenses are subject to annual limitations in appropriation acts (see Limitation on salaries and expenses).

Payment to Federal hospital insurance trust fund.—Portion of taxes which finances hospital insurance benefits is for payment to the Federal hospital insurance trust fund, since payments of hospital benefits for railroad retirement beneficiaries are made from that fund.

The Board also participates in the administration of the hospital and medical insurance programs for persons covered by the Railroad Retirement Act for which it is reimbursed by the social security trust funds.

The Board also administers a program for the payment of industry financed supplemental annuities to certain career railroad workers.

1. Maintenance of earnings accounts.—Eligibility for retirement and the amount of benefits paid are based on individual earnings records. The workload fluctuates according to the level of employment, and rate of turnover in the railroad industry. Accounts posted are estimated at 665,000 in 1980. The costs are shared with the railroad unemployment insurance program.

2. Processing applications.—This activity includes processing annuity claims under the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974.

In the 1979 Appropriation Act for the Board, the Congress ordered cessation of its activities as of March 31, 1979. A supplemental 1979 appropriation request to continue the Board's operation through 1979 is included in Part III of this Appendix. The request for 1980 assumes enactment of the supplemental request.

The Board conducts renegotiation proceedings with contractors and subcontractors to determine and eliminate excessive profits on defense and space contracts and related subcontracts. The Renegotiation Act provides that a report must be filed with the Board by every contractor or subcontractor having receipts or accruals that exceed $1 million in a year.

From the date of its establishment through September 30, 1978, the Board made determinations of excessive profits in the amount of $1.4 billion, before adjustment for Federal income and excess profits tax credits. Of this total, $31.5 million was determined during 1978.

1. General management and support staff.—The support staff provides administrative management, legal, and program analysis and planning services to the statutory board and to the headquarters and regional boards' staffs. Increases in 1980 will permit the continued development of uniform screening and review criteria to facilitate case processing and will allow for the accelerated application of ADP in the Board's financial review process.

2. Headquarters operations.—The headquarters operations staff assists the Board in the formulation of policy, gives technical guidance to, and coordinates the activities of the field organization. It is responsible for the screening of contractors' filings and the handling of requests for exemptions and assists the Board in completing certain cases which have been processed in the field. Planned management actions will permit increased efficiency, improved case analysis, and a reduction in the case backlog.

3. Regional operations.—The regional boards conduct renegotiation proceedings and make recommendations and determinations of excessive profits. Planned management actions in 1980 will assist in reducing the case backlog.

Issuers having total assets and security-holder populations of specified sizes are also required to furnish comparable information on a continuing basis in annual and other periodic reports and in proxy solicitation materials. Commission staff review these filings to insure full and fair disclosure and to prevent fraud and misrepresentation.

The 1980 request will allow the Selective Service System to continue to improve its capability to respond rapidly and efficiently from its standby posture. The response capability is founded upon the concept that a higher degree of readiness can be attained with a standby local and appeal board structure, a program for post

M-day registration, and refined automated data processing procedures.

1. Mobilization readiness.—This activity includes all facets of National and Regional operational planning, maintenance of a standby registration organization, maintenance of a trained force of uncompensated local and appeal board members, and a comprehensive training program for the Selective Service Reserve Forces. The processing procedures employed by the Emergency Military Manpower Procurement System will continue to be tested and refined to insure that it can fully satisfy the emergency manpower needs of the armed forces.

2. Administration.—This activity includes the Office of the Director of Selective Service as well as personnel administration, fiscal management, logistics, data processing support and other necessary administrative services in support of the mobilization readiness planning and training programs.

3. Reserve program.—This activity includes special utilization and training of Reserve and National Guard officers who constitute the Selective Service Reserve Forces. During scheduled training periods and the annual 2-week active duty period, the Reserve Forces will undergo comprehensive training in the administration of the Military Selective Service Act and the varied duties each officer will be expected to perform during and after mobilization, registration, and induction activities of the Selective Service System. This training will include a thorough understanding of the policies and procedures in appointing and training compensated and uncompensated employees and local and appeal board members, classification and appeal procedures, coordination actions necessary to conduct rapid registration, and special mobilization exercises to test and refine mobilization plans for rapid reconstitution and registration activities. Special emphasis training of the Reserve Officers will focus on the implementation of mobilization plans so that these plans can be carried out quickly and efficiently. This force of experienced, well-trained Reserve and National Guard officers is an essential resource of the Selective Service System in standby.

The Small Business Administration (SBA) counsels, assists, and protects the interest of small business, and provides aid to business firms and homeowners who have suffered losses through disasters. These efforts are conducted through the following activities:

1. Procurement assistance.—This activity assures small business a fair share of Government procurements. The basic objective of the minority enterprise business development program is to assist in the establishment or expansion of minority or disadvantaged firms that have the potential of developing into viable competitive businesses in a reasonable period of time.

2. Management assistance.—The management assistance activity is structured to aid in the establishment, growth, and success of small businesses. Through the Small Business Institute and Small Business Development Center programs, along with counseling services, training programs, and publications, small business owner/managers are assisted in their goal of improving the management and efficiency of their businesses. In addition, section 7(j) of the Small Business Act, as amended, provides authority to contract for professional management training and support to assist the small business entrepreneurs.

3. Finance and investment.—The salaries and related expenses for this activity are financed through this fund. However, the following programs are financed through the agency's various revolving funds.

(a) Business loans.—This includes loans and financial counseling to businesses eligible under section (i) of the Small Business Act and those loans to the handicapped or nonprofit organizations hiring the handicapped and loans to create solar and renewable energy sources under section 7(h) and 7(l) of the Small Business Act. The program for 1980 is projected as follows:

	(Dollars in millions)
	Number	Amount
7(a) Business loans.....	34,200	$3,400
7(h) Handicapped loans.....	325	25
7(i) Economic opportunity loans.....	4,600	135
7(l) Energy loans.....	360	45
Total.....	39,485	$3,605

(b) Development company loans.—This activity covers (1) efforts to encourage private lending institutions to expand their role in the economic development of their respective States and (2) loans to State and local development companies to enable them to provide long-term capital equity and loans to small businesses. The program level for 1980 is estimated at $90 million.

(c) Investment company assistance and supervision.—In order to stimulate and supplement the flow of private capital to small business concerns, the SBA is authorized to (a) license, regulate, and examine small business investment companies, and (b) provide funds to such companies for financing small business firms. The program level for 1980 is estimated at $217 million.

(d) Surety bond guarantees.—In order to enable small firms to obtain bid, performance, and payment bonds otherwise denied them through asserted lack of financial and other capability, the SBA is authorized to guarantee sureties against losses resulting from the breaching of such bonds by small contractors who were furnished bonds by the sureties under the provision of this program. SBA guarantees a portion of the loss under contracts not exceeding $1 million in amount. The program level (contracts insured) for 1980 is estimated at $1.7 billion.

(e) Pollution control equipment contract guarantees.—The purpose of this recently established fund is to alleviate the adverse impact of pollution regulations on small businesses. The agency estimates that approximately 12 taxfree bond issues will be approved in 1980 for about $50 million to assist about 225 firms in their efforts to abate pollution.

(f) Nonphysical disaster loans.—Under this activity, SBA provides loans to small firms to enable them to comply with new health and safety standards (involving changes in equipment, facilities, or methods of operation) imposed by a number of Federal statutes or conforming State laws. Similar loans are also authorized for any small firm likely to suffer substantial economic injury as a result of any international agreement limiting the development of strategic arms or the installation of strategic arms facilities, base closings and those adversely affected by the energy crisis. In addition, loans are made to businesses who suffer economic loss due to displacement by a governmental program or project. The program level for 1980 is estimated at $60 million.

(g) Reimbursable program.—SBA works with the Economic Development Administration, Department of Commerce, in servicing EDA loans on a reimbursable basis. In addition, SBA has a memorandum of understanding with the Department of Energy to jointly support and utilize the Centralized Computerized Procurement Source System.

8. Planning and data management.—This function has the responsibility to plan for and evaluate agency activities and manages the agency's data programs.

9. Advocacy, and public communications.—The SBA advocacy function is responsible for the initiation, coordination, and development of the agency's position as the Government's principal advocate of small business. In addition to spreading awareness of the position of small business with all Federal agencies and State and local governments, the advocate maintains liaison with trade and professional organizations, develops and recommends policies to the Administrator and communicates to the small business community, news media, and the public at large. Funds of $905 thousand are also requested to continue work on establishing a comprehensive statistical data base on the small business sector in the U.S. economy.

11. Minority small business.—This activity provides for the formulation of policy for SBA's programs which provide assistance to minority small concerns, and for evaluating agency performance and execution in light of such policy.

In order to identify fully the range of problems confronting small businesses and to develop an agenda to solve these problems, Executive Order No. 12061 announced the establishment of a White House Conference on Small Business to be held in Washington, D.C., in early 1980.

To allow for the broadest participation by the Nation's small business concerns, a series of State and regional conferences are planned prior to the Washington meeting.

This fund was established on July 1, 1966 to finance loan programs and prime contracting activity performed pursuant to sections 7(a), 7(b)(3), 7(e), 7(h), 7(i), 7(l), and 8(a) of the Small Business Act, as amended, and titles III and V of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, as amended.

1. Financial assistance. Business loans (sec. 7(a), Small Business Act).—Funds may be loaned to business concerns that are not dominant in their fields. To such small businesses, loans may be made directly or in participation with banks or other lending institutions, and shall be of such value or so secured as reasonably to assure repayment. No loan may be made unless the financial assistance is not otherwise available on reasonable terms. No direct loan may be made unless it is shown that a bank participation is not available, and no loan on an immediate participation basis may be made unless it is shown that a guaranteed loan is not available. Under the guaranty plan, the SBA agrees to purchase the guaranteed portion of the loan only upon default.

Business loans (sec. 7(h), Small Business Act).—The SBA provides loans to handicapped persons operating or establishing a small business, and to nonprofit organizations hiring the handicapped.

Business loans (sec. 7(i), Small Business Act).—The SBA administers a program of financial assistance to small business concerns and to qualified persons seeking to establish such concerns. The credit and collateral requirements are more flexible than those applicable to 7(a) business loans, and provision for management training is made an integral part of the program.

Business loans (sec. 7(1), Small Business Act).—The SBA may approve loans to small energy-oriented firms to finance plant facilities and the acquisition of supplies and equipment needed in specified energy measures.

Development company loans.—The SBA lends funds to State and local development companies. Funds are available to State development companies for general use purposes and State and local development companies for plant construction, conversion, or expansion, including the acquisition of land.

2. Investment company assistance.—A primary function of small business investment companies is to provide a source of needed equity capital for small concerns. To encourage the formation and growth of such investment companies. The Small Business Investment Act, as amended, authorized the SBA to purchase, or to guarantee the timely payment of all principal and interest as scheduled on debentures issued by such companies. In addition, the SBA is authorized to purchase preferred securities (shares of nonvoting stock or other securities having similar characteristics) from small business investment companies operating under authority of new section 301(d) wherein the investment policy of such companies will be to make investments solely in small concerns owned and operated by disadvantaged persons.

Interest expense.—Interest is payable into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury on outstanding cash disbursements from the fund. The interest rate or rates applicable to each year's disbursements are determined at the beginning of the year by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Financing.—Appropriations are authorized to be made to the fund as additional capital to the extent required to carry out the authorized functions. A capital appropriation of $546 million is required for 1980.

Operating results.—The fund will continue to operate at a deficit. Interest and fee income will not be sufficient to cover interest, other expenses, and a provision for estimated loan losses. Primarily this reflects the excess of interest expense rates over interest income rates. Included in the deficit of the fund is the cost differential on section 8(a) contracts. In expanding the use of the section 8(a) prime contracting authority to bring more minority firms into the Government procurement process, there are instances in which the program objectives justify a payment to the minority subcontractor in excess of an apparent competitive market price to the procuring agency.

Public Law 89-409, approved May 2, 1966, established this fund as of July 1, 1966, to finance disaster loans made pursuant to sections 7(b), 7(f), and 7(g) of the Small Business Act, as amended. Public Law 95-89, approved August 4, 1977, provided for the financing of loans to displaced businesses made under section 7(b)(3) which was previously excluded under Public Law 89-409. Under current law, both the Farmers Home Administration in the Department of Agriculture and the SBA have authority to make emergency farm disaster loans. To remedy difficulties caused by this overlap in responsibility, legislation will be proposed to limit such authority to the Farmers Home Administration, which is better equipped to handle this program through its long experience in dealing with farmers.

Physical disaster loans.—Under this function, loans are made at favorable terms to property owners for rehabilitation of property damaged by natural disasters. In 1980, approvals are estimated at $250 million.

Nonphysical disaster loans.—Under this function, loans are made to small firms which need assistance in complying with various Federal or State statutes and regulations to small businesses which have suffered economic loss due to displacement or economic injury as a result of shortages in energy-producing materials. Estimated approvals for nonphysical disaster loans are expected to be $60 million in 1980.

Interest expense.—Interest is payable into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury on outstanding cash disbursements from the fund. The interest rate or rates applicable to each year's disbursements are determined at the beginning of the year by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Financing.—Appropriations are authorized to be made to the fund as capital to the extent required to carry out the authorized functions. A capital appropriation of $60 million is requested for 1980.

Public Law 93-386, the Small Business Amendments of 1974, established this fund to finance the lease guarantees program.

The lease guarantees program was designed to provide prime space for those small business firms which cannot compete with prospective tenants with AAA ratings. This program has been incurring excessive losses and has not been an important form of assistance to small businesses. As a result, the program is limited to paying claims resulting from defaulted leases approved in prior years.

The Small Business Administration will guarantee a portion of the losses sustained by a surety company as a result of the issuance of a bid, payment, and/or performance bond to a small business concern on a contract up to $1 million.

It is estimated that surety bond guarantees will be made in connection with 27,500 contracts totaling $1.7 billion in 1980. SBA will undertake improvements in this program to reduce the high loss rates which have occurred in recent years.

POLLUTION CONTROL EQUIPMENT CONTRACT GUARANTEE REVOLVING FUND—Continued

Public Law 94-305, approved June 4, 1976, established this fund to alleviate the adverse impact of pollution regulations on small businesses. The Small Business Administration may, whenever it determines that small business concerns are to be at an operational or financial disadvantage with respect to the planning, design, or installation of pollution control facilities or the financing thereof, guarantee the payment of rentals or other amounts due under qualified contracts.

It is estimated that 12 tax-free bonds for $50 million will be approved in 1980.

The Smithsonian Institution maintains public exhibits representative of the arts, American history, aeronautics and astronautics, technology, anthropology, geology, and biology (including living animal exhibits); acquires and preserves for reference and study purposes millions of items of scientific, cultural, and historic importance; conducts research in the natural and physical sciences and in the history of cultures, technology, and the arts; presents performances of American arts and crafts; undertakes education programs at all levels; and participates in the exchange of scientific information.

The Institution is responsible for the operation and maintenance of 10 major exhibition buildings, as well as a zoological park; a preservation and storage facility at Silver Hill, Md.; a conference center at Elkridge, Md.; two natural preserves, in Panama and on the Chesapeake Bay; an observatory on Mount Hopkins, Ariz.; and supporting administrative, laboratory, and storage areas. Visitor attendance to buildings on and off the Mall, including the National Zoological Park, totaled more than 25 million in 1977.

A bill signed into law by the President in October 1978 has authorized the transfer of the Museum of African Art to the Smithsonian (Public Law 95-414). The Panama Canal treaties of September 1977 and associated agreements have imposed additional responsibilities upon the Tropical Research Institute.

In 1980, emphasis is placed on the care and management of the collections and original research. Maintenance of the Institution's physical plant and the provision of protection and management services are stressed also.

The objectives of the Woodrow Wilson Center are to produce scholarship of the highest quality on subjects that matter to our civilization and to communicate that scholarship to a wider audience within and beyond Washington through publication and dialog.

The Center has chosen to fulfill these objectives through its fellowship and guest scholar program. Each year the Center conducts a major open international competition for a limited number of fellowships. The scholars themselves and the scholarly work they produce constitute the memorial to Woodrow Wilson. Virtually all of the Center's expenditures derive from the basic decision to create a resident body of fellows.

The Center is directed by its congressional statute to raise both public and private funds and indeed the Center's major objectives could not be attained by an exclusive reliance on either Federal appropriation or private contribution. The present request for a Federal appropriation for 1980 seeks minor programmatic adjustments to an institution that is largely established and already carrying out its mandate.

In addition, the Commission will conduct public hearings in various locations and surveys to determine the role and function of the social security programs. The full cost of conducting the studies and submitting the reports required by the authorizing legislation totals $2.5 million, of which $0.5 million has been appropriated.

The Tennessee Valley Authority was created in 1933 as a Government-owned corporation for the unified development of a river basin comprising parts of seven States. Its program in 1980 will be financed from three sources: (1) appropriations by the Congress; (2) proceeds available from current power operations and borrowings against future power revenues; and (3) proceeds available from nonpower activities.

The following table provides detailed information on programs financed by power proceeds and borrowings and programs financed by appropriations and nonpower proceeds.

Budget program—1. Regional resources development program. The development of the resources of the Tennessee River Basin is reflected in the areas of navigation, flood control, water quality, recreation, and fisheries and wildlife development; in agriculture and forest resources; in human resources development; and in related economic and industrial development.

(a) Water resources includes operation and continuing development of the all-year 9-foot navigation channel from the mouth of the river at Paducah, Ky., to Knoxville, Tenn., a distance of 650 miles.

Flood control activities include operating the system of multipurpose reservoirs to retain excessive seasonal runoff and regulate discharges at flow rates that can be accommodated by downstream channels and reservoirs. Flood crests are reduced along the lower Ohio and Mississippi Rivers.

(b) Natural resources.—Efforts include: agricultural education and demonstration programs to help rural residents improve their standard of living; implementation of new technologies and dissemination of information to promote the growth and use of the timber resources in the Tennessee Valley; projects to assist local governments with solid waste collection and disposal problems; programs to improve the quality of the region's rivers, streams, and lakes; enhancement of fisheries, wildlife, and waterfowl resources; recreation development activities that not only improve access to TVA lakes and stream, but also assist communities and commercial developers with their recreation programs; and a vigorous environmental-energy education and awareness program.

(c) Land Between The Lakes.—Work will continue on development of the 170,000-acre area in western Kentucky and Tennessee situated between TVA's Kentucky Reservoir and the Corps of Engineers' Barkley Reservoir. Land Between The Lakes is a demonstration of new ideas in public outdoor recreation and environmental education.

(d) Community development.—TVA provides technical assistance and guidance to local communities to help them improve the quality of public services, revitalize central business districts, identify and develop new industrial sites, improve the quality and availability of health services, develop local flood damage prevention programs, and provide other supportive services to industry and local communities such as economic analysis and community planning. TVA also assists the minority business community and economically depressed counties so that they may contribute more fully to the region's growth.

2. National fertilizer development program.—Chemical and ammonia from coal facilities at Muscle Shoals, Ala., are maintained and operated as the National Fertilizer Development Center. Program activities are of three general types: fertilizer research and development, fertilizer introduction, and ammonia from coal efforts.

Fertilizer research and development consists of basic chemical and agronomic research and the development of fertilizer products and processes. TVA works cooperatively with the Department of Agriculture, the land-grant universities, and industry to increase the effectiveness of the research and to avoid duplication.

Fertilizer introduction is carried on cooperatively with the land-grant universities and the fertilizer industry. It includes controlled small-plot demonstrations, tests and demonstrations of fertilizer materials and practices on selected operating farms, and nationwide education about fertilizers that are being introduced. Program costs are financed from appropriations and nonpower proceeds, the majority of which arises from the sale of experimental fertilizers to industry and farmers.

Ammonia is required in the production of fertilizer. With the Nation facing reduced supplies of natural gas in the years ahead, TVA is developing ways to economically derive ammonia from coal, an abundant natural resource.

3. National energy demonstration program.—The national energy demonstration program consists of significant involvement in energy conservation activities and in the development of alternative energy sources. The work is done in the context of TVA's power program as it seeks to meet the electric power supply needs of the region. The 1980 program is financed primarily with power program funds with other funds coming from appropriations, and from other Federal agencies such as the Department of Energy, Department of Transportation, the Environmental Protection Agency, and other sources including the Electric Power Research Institute. The appropriations financed effort is concentrated on a waste heat utilization program designed to develop and transfer technologies that utilize waste heat as an energy source for industry; electric/hybrid vehicles and alternate fuels program designed to reduce the dependence of Valley residents on petroleum; and a public transportation program to demonstrate ways to reduce the Nation's dependence on oil while reducing traffic and pollution in downtown areas.

4. Power program—power supply and use.—TVA is the sole supplier of electric power to an area of 80,000 square miles in the seven Tennessee Valley States. Income from power operations, net of interest charges and depreciation, is estimated at $183,181 thousand in 1980.

The power generating facilities presented in the capital investment table are financed from power proceeds and borrowings. The estimate for investment in future energy facilities for 1980 may include: conventional central-station generation; dispersed installations including fuel cells and cogeneration; new technology applications including solar energy and atmospheric fluidized-bed generation; and the construction of an away-from-reactor spent fuel storage facility.

5. General service activities.—Operating costs for general service activities include mapping and remote sensing, bridge maintenance, scientific and technical cooperation expenses, fallout shelter maintenance, regional library demonstrations and reimbursable services furnished at the request and expense of other agencies.

Operating results and financial conditions.—Only the power program is intended to be self-supporting; the net expense of nonpower programs is covered largely by appropriation funding. Payments to the Treasury from power proceeds in 1980 are estimated at $87,000 thousand—$67,000 thousand as a dividend (return on the appropriation investment in the power program) and $20,000 thousand as a reduction in the appropriation investment in the power program. Borrowings for the power program are expected to increase by $1,700,000 thousand during 1980.

Total assets are estimated to increase by $1,981,163 thousand during 1980. A total of $1,923,237 thousand of the increase in assets is in the power program and $57,926 thousand is in nonpower programs. The estimate of liabilities at September 30, 1980, is $1,841,560 thousand more than the estimate at September 30, 1979. This increase reflects the proposed borrowings in 1980. Total Government equity at September 30, 1980, is estimated to be $139,603 thousand greater than that at September 1979. This change includes the requested appropriation for 1980 and the net income from power operations, less payments to the Treasury and the net expense of nonpower programs.

The United States Railway Association was created to prepare and implement a system plan for restructuring and rehabilitating the bankrupt railroads of the Northeast and Midwest. On April 1, 1976, railroad facilities designated by the Association were conveyed to a new operating entity called the Consolidated Rail Corporation (Conrail).

The current tasks of the Association are (a) to provide and monitor the Federal funds which are to be made available to Conrail for working capital and rehabilitation; (b) to develop alternative courses of action for Conrail and for the Government which would provide adequate rail service on a basis that will minimize future Federal involvement; and (c) to defend the reorganization which has been implemented against legal challenges filed by the estates of the reorganized railroads.

These funds have been provided for the U.S. Railway Association to purchase debentures and series A preferred stock issued by the Consolidated Rail Corporation. The Corporation utilizes these funds along with internally generated funds and funds from private sources to undertake major rehabilitation of plant and equipment and to cover losses that occur during the initial phase of operations.

Appropriations totaling $2.326 billion have been provided through 1979. The investment of these funds is intended to make possible the establishment of Conrail as a private corporation that will operate on a profitable basis. A supplemental appropriation in the amount of $974 million is proposed.

The Water Resources Council was established to encourage conservation, development, and utilization of water and related land resources on a comprehensive and coordinated basis. The President has assigned to the Council responsibility for implementation of major elements of his water policy reform, i.e., principles and standards manual, floodplain management program, State water management and conservation technical assistance grants, project reports evaluation, and enhancing State-Federal cooperation in water policy.

1. Administration and coordination.—Includes Council staff activities and expenses in implementing the total program assigned except direct contributions for comprehensive studies, river basin commissions, the State grants program, and the water for energy program. Staff activities include: revising and rewriting principles and standards for projects to reflect changes as directed by the President's water policy review, and the issuance of a uniform planning manual; implementing the national floodplain management program; initiation of a continuing assessment of water policy and program needs, to be operational after 1980; executive direction for all Council programs and activities; and, general administrative support for Council staff and all programs and activities.

2. River basin commissions.—Six river basin commissions have been established under title II of Public Law 89-80. Activities include preparation of a comprehensive, coordinated, joint plan and an updated priorities report for each Commission area. Commissions serve as a forum for enhanced State-Federal relationships.

3. Planning grants to States.—Financial assistance is provided States to develop total water management programs, emphasizing conservation, integration of water quantity and quality and surface and ground water planning, protection of instream values, etc., and water conservation technical assistance programs to increase efficiency of water use.

4. Comprehensive planning.—This program includes activities relating to water resource management studies. These studies are designed to resolve multidiscipline regional or river basin water resource problems leading to better informed Federal and/or State decisions in resource allocations. Also included in this program is the continued management of the water for energy assessments.

The proposed National Development Bank will offer a broad range of new incentives to businesses and consolidate a number of existing business assistance programs. It will facilitate business development by combining a variety of programs within a single agency, and enhance economic development by targeting its efforts on promoting business growth in economically distressed areas.

The Bank will offer aid to firms in declining areas with a variety of new financing incentives to induce them to remain, expand or locate in those areas. These incentives include new capital grants, loan guarantees, direct interest subsidies on loans and taxable development bonds, and a liquidity facility to provide secondary market reinforcement to primary lenders.

To provide business assistance more efficiently and effectively, a consolidation of existing Federal credit program will be proposed. Direct loan and loan guarantee programs being considered for consolidation include development assistance efforts of the Economic Development Administration, Farmers Home Administration, Small Business Administration, and the Department of Housing and Urban Development. A proposal is under consideration to consolidate the Bank with other related programs in a single agency.

Legislation is proposed to restore the solvency of the railroad industry pension fund in an equitable way. The Railroad Retirement Board projects that the industry pension component will run out of funds by 1986, which currently has an actuarial deficiency of 4% of railroad industry payroll. Under this proposal, revenues would increase annually by 2% of railroad industry payroll and prospective benefits would decrease by an amount actuarially equivalent to 2% of this payroll, thereby eliminating the actuarial deficiency. These proposals also make the railroad industry social security component more similar to social security. The proposals would:

Finance the industry pension component from the full railroad payroll and apply the social security tax to the railroad industry in the same manner as other private sector employment (increase in receipts of $211 million in 1980);

Prospectively apply social security rules to the initial award of disability benefits, the computation of spouse's age reduction, the treatment of 60-61-year-old widowed spouses, the use of earnings in the year of retirement, and in calculating annual cost of living increases (outlay reduction of $22.1 million in 1980);

Correct anomalies in computing: (a) spouse's maximum social security equivalent (tier I) benefits, (b) years of service by crediting only full years of service, (c) primary insurance amounts for early retirees with 30 years of railroad employment, and (d) net tier I benefits in retirement cases with an age reduction (outlay reduction of $7.7 million in 1980); and Preclude total railroad retirement benefits from exceeding pre-retirement earnings and phaseout industry pension component student benefits (outlay reduction of $5.5 million in 1980).

In addition, OASDI legislative proposals also affect the railroad retirement social security component, and reduce outlays by $30 million in 1980.

EXPLANATION OF SCHEDULES

Part II contains detailed schedules of permanent positions that are furnished to the Congress pursuant to the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921, as amended, excluding waivers thereunder granted by the Appropriations Committees.

Most civilian employees in the Federal Government are included in one of the following pay systems: Executive level, general schedule, or Foreign Service. The salary ranges for the grades in each of these systems are shown in the following tables. Pay rates for wage-board positions included in the "ungraded" positions are established on the basis of prevailing rates, which vary from area to area. Salary ranges shown for executive levels, general schedule (GS), and Foreign Service (FO, FR, or FS) are those that became effective in October 1978, pursuant to Executive Order 12087 of October 7, 1978.

Note.—In the general schedule grades and certain other positions, the pay scales shown in the schedules may be exceeded when pay rates in the private sector for comparable occupations in one or more areas or locations are substantially above the statutory rates. In such cases, the Civil Service Commission has authority to permit a higher entrance level (not to exceed the maximum pay step prescribed by statute) and add a corresponding number of steps above the stated pay range.

The following pages display schedules of permanent positions for each of the three branches of Government. The schedules relate to positions established for full-time employment without time limit, and to any others occupied for a year or more. These schedules cover all permanent positions of the organizational element(s) identified, regardless of the source from which financed. Positions to be filled by reimbursable details from other agencies, and positions financed by allocations to other agencies will be reflected in the corresponding schedules of those agencies.

Authorized positions that are funded as of the end of the year are counted, whether filled or unfilled at that time; positions abolished during the year are not counted. Each schedule contains a listing of the grades of authorized positions and the total number in each grade as illustrated below:

Grades are reflected in the stub column; the most commonly used grade series, general schedule, is abbreviated "GS- . ." Salary ranges are shown only when the grades are unique to a single agency or bureau (for example, physicians and nurses schedules within the Department of Medicine and Surgery, Veterans Administration) or where a grade is identified only by title. In the latter case, the title of each grade and the basic salary range is listed. Classification systems with the same salary ranges as the general schedule are so noted. A subtotal line is shown for executive level positions as well as for each separate series of positions, whenever more than one position is shown in these categories. Two additional lines provide for deducting the number of unfilled positions to arrive at the total employment in permanent positions at the end of the year.

PART III

---

EXPLANATION OF REQUESTS

This part contains supplemental appropriations requests being proposed for congressional consideration in this budget. Requests for supplemental appropriations are made after enactment of regular appropriations. Information is also included on proposals to rescind budget authority.

PROPOSED SUPPLEMENTAL REQUESTS

Supplemental requests for various program purposes, for 1979 increased pay costs, and for general provisions of appropriation language are shown as separate sections, following the usual form of supplemental appropriations acts.

Section I. —Supplementals for various purposes other than increased pay costs are presented in this section and include: suggested appropriation language, program and financing schedules, and the reasons for the requests.

Section II. —Requests for pay supplementals in this section are in the form of suggested appropriation language for 1979. The amounts contained in the appropriation language also appear as separate line entries in the regular program and financing schedules in Part I.

RESCISSION PROPOSALS

Under the provisions of the Impoundment Control Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-344), whenever the President proposes rescission of enacted appropriations, a special message must be sent to the Congress giving details of the proposal. Included in this part—for rescission proposals being sent to the Congress and on which action by the Congress is still pending—are program and financing schedules and references to the appropriate special messages.

90.00 Outlays.....		23,000	19,100

This supplemental appropriation would be used for the following:

Coal utilization.—For compliance with the requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act in implementing the Powerplant and Industrial Fuel Use Act which encourages the use of coal rather than oil or natural gas in electric powerplants and other major fuel-burning installations. The 1979 budget assumed that environmental impact statements would not have to be prepared for each prohibition order and petition for exemption from the statutory requirements of the Powerplant and Industrial Fuel Use Act. However, the act requires that individual rather than general program statements will have to be prepared in many cases.

Utility programs.—For conducting power pooling and electric systems reliability studies required by the Public Utilities Regulatory Policies Act.

Emergency preparedness.—For a proposed gasoline rationing plan, to be submitted to the Congress in 1979. This will enable ERA to bring the standby rationing plan to a 90-day state of readiness. Certain preimplementation activities are necessary to have the plan ready for rapid implementation in the event of a severe petroleum crisis. These activities include producing coupons and ration checks, developing systems for distributing, issuing and reconciling checks and coupons and systems for management, control, finance and accounting.

Compliance.—To enable ERA's Office of Compliance to procure essential contract support to continue audits of major oil refiners, determining civil or criminal violations of the Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act, and recovering any overcharges made. The contracts will provide audit capability without the need to have full-time Federal personnel for a temporary assignment and provide resources and expertise not currently available in the Department for developing and applying computer audit techniques.

This supplemental appropriation would provide for the purchase of foreign currencies in excess currency countries to support research activities which assist domestic research and service programs. No U.S. dollars will be expended from this appropriation, only foreign currencies which are determined to be excess by the State Department. This program enables the United States to benefit from progress that other countries are making in dealing with rehabilitation, and social security problems, and to utilize the talents of foreign scientists working in these fields.

The request would be used to support 15 projects in 5 countries that have excess currencies. Thirteen research and demonstration projects are planned in the area of vocational rehabilitation services, including projects covering neuromuscular diseases, cancer, spinal cord injury, neurological disabilities, cardiovascular diseases, mental illness, mental retardation, and sensory disorders. Two projects are proposed for dealing with social security problems. These projects will provide analysis of the experience of other nations in dealing with comparable social insurance and social welfare problems.

There will be U.S. consultants and international scientists or fellows participating in the program. This interchange of program experts supplements the research and demonstration international program and provides direct technical assistance and information among scientists.

GENERAL PROVISION

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

COAST GUARD

Sec. — None of the funds provided in this Act shall be available for the implementation or execution of programs the obligations for which are in excess of $60,000,000 in fiscal year 1979 for the "Offshore Oil Pollution Compensation Fund".

The proposed general provision language will limit the obligation for the Offshore oil pollution compensation fund to $60 million.

COAST GUARD

Sec. — The authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to carry out the provisions of Title III of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act Amendments of 1978 (Public Law 95-372) is hereby made effective without fiscal year limitation.

This general provision language would provide for the collection by the Federal Government of a fee not to exceed 3 cents per barrel on oil obtained from the Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) as authorized by Title III of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act Amendments of 1978. This authority is not effective unless provided for in appropriation acts enacted subsequent to the enactment of the OCS Amendments. Section 313(c) provides further that this authority is to be without fiscal year limitation.

FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION

Sec. — None of the funds in this Act or Public Law 95-335 shall be available for the administrative expenses of making a new loan guarantee during fiscal year 1979 for any aircraft purchase loan, pursuant to the Act of September 7, 1957 (71 Stat. 629), as amended, (a) to any air carrier other than a commuter air carrier as defined in section 2 of the Act of September 7, 1957, as amended, or (b) which causes the aggregate unliquidated principal amount of all loans guaranteed pursuant to the Act of September 7, 1957, as amended, currently outstanding immediately after such new loan guarantee, to exceed by more than $50,000,000 the aggregate unliquidated principal amount of such loans guaranteed and outstanding at the beginning of fiscal year 1979.

This general provision defines the extent to which the Secretary of Transportation in 1979 may use his authority in Public Law 85-307, as amended, to provide Government guarantee of private loans to certain air carriers for the purchase of aircraft and equipment.

FEDERAL HIGHWAY ADMINISTRATION

Sec. — None of the funds provided in this Act, or any previous appropriations act, shall be available for the planning or execution of programs for the purposes of Section 152 of Public Law 95-599.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1978 authorizes funding for construction of a bypass highway along the Redwoods National Forest in California. The above provision simply confirms the intent of the Congressional conferees, as expressed in a November 22, 1978, letter to the Department of Transportation from the leadership of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works, that authorized funds are not to be made available for this program until and unless explicitly provided in the appropriations process. The Administration requests no funds for this narrow, categorical program.

PART IV

OFF-BUDGET FEDERAL ENTITIES

OFF-BUDGET FEDERAL ENTITIES

Part IV contains detailed budgets and explanatory statements of certain Federal entities that are not part of the budget totals. These budgets and statements are made available as auxiliary information.

Public Law 93-32 removed from the budget totals the governmental financing of rural electric and telephone systems administered by the Department of Agriculture.

The Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, a wholly owned Government corporation, was established by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, within the Department of Labor but outside the budget totals.

The Federal Financing Bank was created by the Federal Financing Bank Act of 1973 to: (1) assure coordination of Federal and federally assisted borrowing programs with the overall economic and fiscal policies of the Government, (2) reduce the cost of Federal and federally assisted borrowing from the public, and (3) assure that such borrowings are financed in a manner least disruptive to private financial markets and institutions. The bank is authorized to make direct loans by making commitments to purchase and sell, and purchasing and selling on terms and conditions determined by the bank, any obligation that is issued, sold, or guaranteed by a Federal agency. The Federal Financing Bank is administered by the Department of the Treasury.

The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System provides its administrative budget for inclusion without further review. In conformance with its accounting system, the figures for the Board are on a calendar year basis.

The budget presentation of the Postal Service reflects its conversion to independent status consistent with the Postal Reorganization Act of 1970. The activities of the Postal Service, but not the Federal subsidy, are excluded from the budget totals and presented here.

The United States Railway Association, established by the Regional Rail Reorganization Act of 1973, is a Government corporation. Part of the financing activities of the Association are presented here, while the administrative expenses of the Association and the purchase of ConRail securities are reflected in Part I.

The Rural Electrification Administration conducts two capital investment programs: (1) The rural electrification program to provide electric service to farms and other rural establishments; and (2) the rural telephone program to furnish and improve telephone service in rural areas.

Insured electric and telephone loans are financed from the Rural Electrification and Telephone Revolving Fund (RETRF) under the authority of the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, as amended. Insured loans bear either 2% or 5% interest in accordance with criteria as specified in the act, and must be repaid within a period not to exceed 35 years. REA also guarantees loans made by the Federal Financing Bank (FFB) and other qualified lenders at rates agreed upon by the lender and the borrower.

Insured loans from the RETRF are financed from available receipts or, when necessary, by interim Treasury borrowings. Loans made from the RETRF are held in a pool as security for certificates of beneficial ownership (CBO's) which are sold to investors. Through 1980, CBO's to be sold to the Federal Financing Bank are estimated to aggregate to $1,804.7 million.

1. Rural electrification.—This capital investment program is financed through REA insured loans and guarantees of loans made by other qualified lenders for the construction and operation of generating plants, electric transmission, and distribution lines or systems in rural areas.

The 1980 budget request reflects the availability of supplemental financing from the National Rural Utilities Cooperative Finance Corporation (CFC) and other sources to satisfy a part of the capital requirements of the rural electric systems.

The Rural Telephone Bank (RTB) was established by Public Law 92-12, approved May 7, 1971, which amended the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, as amended. The RTB provides a supplemental source of financing for the REA telephone program. Public Law 92-234, approved June 30, 1972, amended the act to permit the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase the bank's debentures. This has minimized the bank's borrowing costs. The bank charges an interest rate based on the average cost of money to the bank, but not less than 5% per annum. The weighted average interest rate on cumulative loans through September 30, 1978, was 6.82. During the first quarter of fiscal year 1979, loans were made at 7.0% interest.

Equity capital of the bank consists of class A stock purchased by the United States, classes B and C stock purchased by bank borrowers, organizations eligible to become borrowers and organizations controlled by borrowers, and retained earnings. The maximum borrowing authority of the bank by law is limited to 20 times its paid-in capital and retained earnings. Total available borrowing authority of the bank for 1979 is estimated at $6.1 billion. For fiscal year 1980 it is estimated at $7.0 billion.

Bank loans totaled $159.2 million in fiscal year 1978. After almost 7 years in operation loans to 396 borrowers have been approved, totaling over $1,076 million. Telephone bank loans are estimated at $185 million for 1979 and $185 million for 1980.

Administrative support for the general operations of the bank are provided on a part-time basis by REA employees and the Office of the General Counsel, without cost to the bank, as provided for in the enabling legislation. Certain administrative expenses, such as expenses of the elected members of the Board of Directors, postage fees and the audit by the General Accounting Office, must be borne by the bank.

Title IV of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-406) provides for the establishment of a wholly owned Government corporation, the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation. This Corporation is administered by a board of directors, the chairman being the Secretary of Labor. The Corporation's mission is to administer insurance programs to prevent the loss of pension benefits to participants if pension plans terminate and are not able to pay the insured benefits.

The act further provides that the Corporation's budget not be included in the totals of the U.S. budget, however, it is subject to the budget and related provisions of the Government Corporation Control Act.

1. Administration.—Expenses associated with this activity include the costs of executive direction, legal support, financial controls, program development and operations, and associated management and information services.

2. Benefit payments.—Terminated plans are taken over by the Corporation and a trust fund established for plans taken into trusteeship. The Corporation assumes control of the plan assets and takes responsibility for the expected plan liability. The trust pays the share of benefit payments actuarially funded by plan assets and employer liability. The balance is paid by the revolving fund.

3. Annuity purchases.—Beginning in 1979, the Corporation may initiate a program of annuity purchases for participants of terminated plans.

Financing.—The Corporation is required by law to be self-supporting. Sources of financing are insurance premiums from on-going defined benefit pension plans, assets from terminated plans, investment income and employer liability. Any change in the Corporation's insurance premium rate must be approved by a joint resolution of Congress. Premium receipts are placed in revolving funds with the U.S. Treasury.

The following informational table details the status of the Corporation's trust funds.

The Federal Reserve System operates under the provisions of the Federal Reserve Act of 1913, as amended, and other acts of Congress.

Program.—To carry out its responsibilities under the act, the Board determines general monetary, credit, and operating policies for the System as a whole and formulates the rules and regulations necessary to carry out the purposes of the Federal Reserve Act. The Board's principal duties consist of exerting an influence over credit conditions and supervising the Federal Reserve banks and member banks.

Renovation of Board building.—In July 1976, the Board approved a program to modernize and renovate interior portions of the original Board building and to upgrade the electrical, mechanical, and utilities systems. The primary benefits are increased density of population, improved environmental conditions, and improved energy conservation. This work was substantially completed in 1978 and all space occupied.

Financing.—Under the provisions of section 10 of the Federal Reserve Act, the Board of Governors levies upon the Federal Reserve banks, in proportion to their capital and surplus, an assessment sufficient to pay its estimated expenses. The Board, under the act, determines and prescribes the manner in which its obligations are incurred and its expenses paid. Funds derived from assessments are deposited in the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, and the act provides that such funds "shall not be construed to be Government funds or appropriated moneys." No Government appropriation is required to support operations of the Board.

The Federal Financing Bank (FFB) was created December 29, 1973, to assure the coordination of Federal and federally assisted borrowing from the public and to assure that such borrowings are financed in a manner least disruptive of private financial markets and institutions.

The Bank has become the vehicle through which most Federal agencies finance their programs involving the sale or placement of credit market instruments, including agency securities, guaranteed obligations, participation agreements, and the sale of assets. The major exceptions to date are the title XI ship mortgage bonds, the federally guaranteed tax-exempt Housing and Urban Renewal notes and bonds, and the Government National Mortgage Association asset sales.

During 1978, the Federal Financing Bank made loans and advances totaling $21.8 billion to Federal agencies and federally guaranteed borrowers. In the absence of the Bank, the majority of borrowers would have issued their obligations in the market at a cost significantly higher than that charged by the FFB.

At the first meeting of the Board of Directors of the Bank on May 23, 1974, the Board approved a policy of borrowing from the Treasury Department on an interim basis. These borrowings were to be periodically repaid by the sale of FFB securities in the market. On July 23, 1974, the Bank auctioned $1.5 billion of 244-day Federal Financing Bank bills dated July 30, which matured on March 31, 1975. In a later meeting on June 5, 1975, the Board of Directors decided that the Bank would borrow all funds from the Treasury Department matching the terms and conditions of its borrowings from the Treasury with the terms and conditions of its loans. The Bank is currently lending funds at a rate one-eighth of 1% above the new issue rate of marketable U.S. Treasury securities of similar terms and conditions.

The Postal Reorganization Act of 1970, Public Law 91-375, converted the Post Office Department into the U.S. Postal Service, an independent establishment within the executive branch. The Postal Service commenced operations July 1, 1971. This agency is charged with providing patrons with reliable mail service at reasonable rates and fees.

The U.S. Postal Service is governed by an 11-member Board of Governors, including 9 Governors appointed by the President, a Postmaster General who is selected by the Governors, and a Deputy Postmaster General who is selected by the Governors and the Postmaster General.

Decisions on changes in domestic rates of postage and fees for postal services are recommended to the Governors of the Postal Service by the independent Postal Rate Commission after a hearing on the record under the Administrative Procedure Act. The Commission also recommends decisions on changes in the domestic mail classification schedule to the Governors. Decisions of the Governors on rates of postage, fees for postal services, and mail classification are final, subject to judicial review.

Programs.—Included are all postal activities providing window services; processing, delivery, and transportation of mail; research and development; administration of postal field activities; and associated expenses of providing facilities and financing.

Financing.—The activities of the U.S. Postal Service are financed from the following sources: (1) Mail and services revenue, (2) reimbursements from Federal and non-Federal sources, (3) proceeds from borrowing, (4) interest from U.S. securities and other investments, and (5) appropriations by the Congress. All receipts and deposits are made to the Postal Service fund and are available without fiscal year limitation for payment of all expenses incurred, retirement of obligations, investment in capital assets, and investment in obligations and securities.

Since 1973, transactions of the Postal Service fund and the assets and liabilities of the U.S. Postal Service no longer appear within the totals of the U.S. budget. The schedules presented here reflect summary data on postal operations.

Section 2005 of the Postal Reorganization Act authorizes borrowing authority of $10 billion with a yearly limitation of $2 billion, of which not more than $500 million may be used to cover operating expenses. As of September 30, 1980, it is expected that indebtedness outstanding pursuant to this borrowing authority will amount to $2.75 billion.

Operating.—Estimated receipts will total $18.1 billion in 1980. This includes $16.2 billion from mail and services revenue, $212.7 million from investment income, $1.7 billion from appropriations including $66.7 million to cover unfunded liabilities of the Post Office Department, and miscellaneous other income of $20.6 million.

The United States Railway Association is authorized by the Regional Rail Reorganization Act, as amended, to borrow funds and make loans to certain railroads. Borrowings by the United States Railway Association are guaranteed by the Secretary of Transportation. The aggregate of outstanding obligations of the Association are limited to $395 million at any one time. Two types of loans are currently authorized: (a) Loans related to the implementation of the system plan developed by the Association for restructuring the bankrupt railroads in the Northeast and Midwest, and (b) loans to defray obligations of the reorganized railroads which were incurred prior to the conveyance of their rail properties but which were unpaid after the conveyance to the Consolidated Rail Corporation on April 1, 1976. During the current fiscal year, the Association will utilize practically all of its present borrowing authority. Securities in lieu of interest were received by the Association on its investment in Conrail 7.5% debentures.

PART V

OTHER MATERIALS

---

EXPLANATION OF OTHER MATERIALS

This section includes the following material required by section 601 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974:

(a) a list of advance appropriations requested in this budget for 1981, together with a list of all accounts for which 1981 advance appropriations are authorized; and

(b) a statement of amendments and revisions to 1979 budget authority requests that were transmitted to the Congress after the 1979 Budget but prior to the transmittal of the 1980 Budget.

ADVANCE APPROPRIATIONS FOR 1981

Section 601 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-344) requires inclusion in the budget of "information with respect to estimates of appropriations for the next succeeding fiscal year for grants, contracts, or other payments under any program for which there is an authorization of appropriations for such succeeding fiscal year and such appropriations are authorized to be included in an appropriation act for the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year in which the appropriation is to be available for obligation." There are two funding measures used to assure Federal financing of programs beyond fiscal year 1980 in annually appropriated programs: advance appropriations and forward funding.

Advance appropriations provide funding in fiscal year 1980 appropriations bills for programs beyond fiscal year 1980. Since these appropriations are not available until after fiscal year 1980, the amounts will not be included in fiscal year 1980 budget totals, but will be reflected in the budget totals for the fiscal year requested. Section 601 of the Congressional Budget Act requires an identification of these items. In fulfillment of this requirement, the table below lists those accounts authorized to receive, in fiscal year 1980, advance appropriations for fiscal year 1981. The listing is in two parts: Section I shows the amounts of advance 1981 appropriations included in the 1980 budget. Section II is a listing of accounts for which advance appropriations are authorized, but not requested in the 1980 budget.

Forward funding also provides for fiscal year 1981 requirements in the 1980 budget for ongoing grant programs. When forward funding is provided, the 1980 appropriation may be obligated in 1980 to finance the grantee program for 1981. These appropriations are included in the 1980 budget totals. In the table below, a footnote identifies the affected appropriation accounts.

STATEMENT OF AMENDMENTS TO AND REVISIONS IN BUDGET AUTHORITY FOR FISCAL YEAR 1979

(Between the Transmittal of the 1979 and 1980 Budgets)

A statement of all amendments to or revisions in budget authority requested between submission of the fiscal 1979 budget and the fiscal 1980 budget is presented below. This statement is being included in the budget in accord with section 201 of the Budget and Accounting Act, 1921, as amended by section 601(g) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

The modifications to requests for 1979 budget authority that were made through the course of the past year took three forms. If the Congress had not yet acted on a pending request, the President sent amendments to the January 1978, budget requests. If appropriations had been enacted, the President proposed either supplemental budget authority or rescission of enacted appropriations.

Amendments and requests for supplemental appropriations are printed in the documents of the House of Representatives and the Senate that are identified in part A of the following listing. The President's proposals for rescission are included in special messages to the Congress under the Impoundment Control Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-344). Both the special messages and monthly cumulative reports on the items they cover are printed in the Federal Register.

The Student Loan Marketing Association (SLMA), a Government-sponsored, private corporation, was created by the Education Amendments of 1972 to expand funds available for student loans by providing liquidity to banks, educational institutions, and other lenders engaged in the guaranteed student loan program.

To date, SLMA has provided liquidity through direct purchase of insured student loans from eligible lenders and by making warehousing advances, secured by insured student loans, to eligible lenders. Proceeds from warehousing advances are required to be invested in additional student loans.

Operations.—As of December 1978, SLMA had $470,000 outstanding in warehousing advances. It is expected that volume under this program will reach an adjusted level of $670,001 thousand by September 30, 1979, with continued activity in 1980. SLMA expects to purchase $323,700 thousand in loans in 1979 and $321,500 thousand in 1980, to a level of $835,758 thousand as of September 1980.

SLMA is authorized by the Health Professions Educational Assistance Act of 1976 to provide a secondary market for federally insured loans to graduate health professions students. This program began actual operations in September 1978. To date, no transactions have been made in support of this program.

Financing.—To obtain funds for its programs, SLMA is authorized, with the approval of the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and the Secretary of the Treasury, to issue its own debt obligations. The Secretary of HEW is authorized by the Education Amendments of 1972 to guarantee as to principal and interest such obligations issued prior to July 1, 1982, regardless of maturity date. As of September 30, 1978, SLMA had total outstanding debt obligations to the Federal Financing Bank of $745 million. SLMA expects to continue selling guaranteed debt obligations to the Federal Financing Bank in the future.

The corporation is authorized to issue common stock to qualified educational and financial institutions and raised $24.5 million less issuance costs of $635,257, or a net of $23.9 million by June 1974.

Management.—At its annual meeting in May 1978, the shareholders of SLMA elected a board of directors to serve until May of 1979. The shareholders of SLMA are entitled to elect 14 members to the board. Pursuant to the Education Amendments of 1972, the President of the United States continues to appoint the remaining 7 members of the 21-member board, as well as designating the chairman of the board. The seven new directors including the chairman were appointed by the President in 1978.

The forecast data with respect to operations are based on certain specific assumptions by management, including the continued successful development, implementation, and financing of authorized programs. The board of directors has not yet reviewed or approved these financial estimates. Accordingly, such data should not be relied upon as an official forecast of the corporation's future business.

The Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA) is a Government-sponsored private corporation. Its purpose is to provide supplementary assistance to the secondary market for home mortgages by supplying a degree of liquidity for mortgage investments, thereby improving the distribution of investment capital available for home mortgage financing.

To carry out this purpose, FNMA buys mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration or guaranteed by the Veterans' Administration or conventional mortgages, which are, under certain conditions, insured by private mortgage insurance companies.

The Emergency Home Finance Act of 1970 empowered FNMA, with the approval of the Secretary of HUD, to purchase, service, lend on the security of, and otherwise invest in conventional mortgages. FNMA acts to minimize the possible additional risk involved in purchasing conventional mortgages by applying strict qualifications to such purchases.

The authorizing statute, the Housing Act of 1954, approved August 2, 1954, originally contemplated that FNMA's secondary market operations would ultimately be completely owned and financed by private participants. On September 30, 1968, pursuant to the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968, approved August 1, 1968, FNMA was converted to a Government-sponsored, privately-owned corporation whose expenditures and receipts are not reflected in the Federal Budget.

The common stock of the Corporation is owned by the public, is fully transferable and is listed on major stock exchanges.

The Corporation has three separate authorities to borrow money from private sources. It may issue subordinated capital debentures in an amount not in excess of twice the net equity. It may, in addition, borrow amounts not in excess of the sum of net equity and subordinated capital debentures outstanding multiplied by a factor established by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. This factor is currently set at 25. These borrowings usually take the form of debentures and short-term discount notes. Finally, FNMA may issue securities guaranteed by the Government National Mortgage Association which are fully backed by pools of mortgages. There is no statutory limitation on the amount of the last-named type of obligations that may be outstanding.

For the years ended September 30, 1977 and 1978, income and retained earnings were as follows (in millions of dollars):

Gross revenue.....	2,775	3,165

The 13 Banks for cooperatives are under the general supervision of the Farm Credit Administration. They finance the operations of farmers' cooperatives. The funds to finance these loans are obtained primarily from sales of bonds to the public and from their own capital funds. The bonds issued by the banks are not guaranteed by the U.S. Government either as to principal or interest. All of their expenses are paid from their own income and are not included in the budget of the United States. Included in these expenses is the banks' share of the costs of the Farm Credit Administration.

The Farm Credit Act of 1955 provided for eventual ownership of the banks by farmers' cooperatives and the retirement of the U.S. Government's investment. This was accomplished on December 31, 1968, when the remainder of the U.S. Government capital was retired.

The banks for cooperatives presently operate under authorities contained in title III of the Farm Credit Act of 1971, Public Law 92-181, as amended.

The 12 Federal intermediate credit banks are under the general supervision of the Farm Credit Administration. They serve as banks of discount for agriculture, discounting agricultural and livestock paper for, and making loans to local financing institutions such as production credit associations, agricultural credit corporations, livestock loan companies, and commercial banks. They also provide the production credit associations with necessary supervision and services.

The banks' lending funds are obtained primarily from the sale of bonds to the public and from their own capital funds. The bonds are not guaranteed by the U.S. Government either as to principal or interest. All of their expenses are paid from their own income and are not included in the budget of the United States. Included in these expenses is the credit banks' share of the costs of the Farm Credit Administration.

The banks were originally wholly owned Government corporations set up exclusively as banks of discount; however, pursuant to the Farm Credit Act of 1956, the banks become mixed-ownership corporations and were made responsible for supervising the production credit associations and assisting them to make sound credit available to farmers.

All of the capital stock of the Federal intermediate credit banks, from organization in 1923 to December 31, 1956, was held by the U.S. Government. The 1956 act provided a long-range plan for the eventual ownership of the credit banks by the production credit associations and the gradual retirement of the Government's investment in the banks. This retirement was accomplished in full on December 31, 1968.

The Federal intermediate credit banks presently operate under authorities contained in title II of the Farm Credit Act of 1971, Public Law 92-181, as amended.

The Federal land banks, through the 520 Federal land bank associations, which are located at the local level, make long-term real estate loans to farmers and ranchers. These banks and associations are under the general supervision of the Farm Credit Administration. The funds to finance these loans are obtained primarily from the sale of the banks' bonds to the public and from their own capital funds. These bonds are not guaranteed by the U.S. Government either as to principal or interest. All of their expenses are paid from their income and are not included in the budget of the United States. Included in these expenses is the land banks' share of the costs of the Farm Credit Administration.

The last of the Government capital that had been invested in the banks was repaid in 1947.

The Federal land banks presently operate under authorities contained in title I of the Farm Credit Act of 1971, Public Law 92-181, as amended.

The 12 Federal Home Loan Banks are chartered and supervised by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board under the authority of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act of 1932. The banks are financial institutions whose main function is to supply their members—principally savings and loan-type institutions and savings banks—with credit to smooth their operations and enhance their service to the public as savings media and home-mortgage lenders. Each bank operates in a geographic district designated by the Board and together the banks cover all of the United States as well as Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam. In 1978, the banks extended credits of $23.9 billion and received repayments of $11.8 billion. Advances outstanding on September 30, 1978, totaled $29.2 billion.

The principal source of funds for the lending operation is the sale of consolidated obligations of the banks to the public. On September 30, 1978, $25.0 billion of these obligations were outstanding. The consolidated obligations are not guaranteed by the U.S. Government as to principal or interest. Other sources of lendable funds include a portion of members' deposits as determined by Board policy (total deposits were at $5.6 billion on September 30, 1978) and funds paid for the purchase of capital stock by member institutions, amounting to $3.9 billion at the end of 1978. Funds not immediately used for advances to members are invested until such times as needed.

The capital stock of the Federal home loan banks is owned entirely by the members. Initially the U.S. Government purchased stock of the banks in the amount of $125 million. The banks had repurchased the Government's investment in full by mid-1951.

The entire operating expenses of the banks are paid from their own income and are not included in the budget of the United States. Included in these expenses is the assessment by the Federal Home Loan Bank
