

APPENDIX

budget
OF THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT
FY 1985

THE BUDGET DOCUMENTS

Budget of the United States Government, 1985 contains the Budget Message of the President and presents an overview of the President's budget proposals. It includes explanations of spending programs in terms of national needs, agency missions, and basic programs, and an analysis of receipts, including a discussion of the President's tax program. This document also contains a description of the budget system and various summary tables on the budget as a whole.

United States Budget in Brief, 1985 is designed for use by the general public. It provides a more concise, less technical overview of the 1985 Budget than the above volume. Summary and historical tables on the Federal budget and debt are also provided, together with graphic displays.

Budget of the United States Government, 1985—Appendix contains detailed information on the various appropriations and funds that comprise the budget. The Appendix contains more detailed information than any of the other budget documents. It includes for each agency: the proposed text of appropriation language, budget schedules for each account, new legislative proposals, explanations of the work to be performed and the funds needed, proposed general provisions applicable to the appropriations of entire agencies or groups of agencies, and schedules of permanent positions. Supplementals and rescission proposals for the current year are presented separately. Information is also provided on certain activities whose outlays are not part of the budget-totals.

Special Analyses, Budget of the United States Government, 1985 contains analyses that are designed to highlight specified program areas or provide other significant presentations of Federal budget data. This document includes information about: alternative views of the budget, i.e., current services and national income accounts; economic and financial analyses of the budget covering Government finances and operations as a whole; and Government-wide program and financial information for Federal civil rights and research and development programs.

Instructions for purchasing copies of any of these materials are on the last page of this volume.

GENERAL NOTES

1. All years referred to are fiscal years, unless otherwise noted.
2. Detail in the tables, text, and charts of this volume may not add to the totals because of rounding.

EXPLANATION OF ESTIMATES

Part I contains various tables and certain schedules in support of the budget, including explanatory statements of the work to be performed and the money needed, as well as the text of the language proposed for enactment by Congress on each item for which congressional action in an appropriation bill is required. It also contains the text of general provisions of appropriations acts, proposed for enactment by the Congress, that apply to entire agencies or groups of agencies.

ARRANGEMENT

The chapters of Part I reflect the branches of Government, and the cabinet departments, selected independent agencies, and activities of the executive branch. Most of the smaller agencies in the executive branch are grouped in one chapter—"Other independent agencies."

Each chapter is organized by major subordinate organizations within the agency (usually bureaus) or by major program area. For each bureau or major program area, Federal funds, covering the funds that are not set aside in "trust," precede trust funds, covering moneys that are held by the Government in accounts established by law or by trust agreement for specific purposes. Within each fund group, accounts with new budget authority in 1985 generally will precede those without such an entry.

The proposed language for general provisions of appropriations acts that are applicable to the agency in that chapter appear in a separate section at the end of the chapter. General provisions that apply to specified groups of agencies are placed in the chapter covering the first agency that appears in the respective appropriations act. The general provisions that are Government-wide in scope (identified "Departments, Agencies, and Corporations"), normally contained in the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government Appropriations Act, are placed at the end of the Executive Office of the President chapter.

An explanation of the types of funds included in the budget may be found in Part 7 of—The Budget of the United States Government, 1985.

FORM OF DETAILED MATERIAL

APPROPRIATION LANGUAGE

The language proposed for inclusion in the 1985 appropriation acts is printed following the account title. The language of the 1984 appropriation acts, printed in roman type, is used as a base. Brackets enclose material that is proposed for deletion; italic type indicates proposed new language. At the end of the final language paragraph, and printed in italics within parentheses, are citations to any relevant authorizing legislation and to the appropriation act from which the basic text of the 1985 language is taken. An illustration of proposed appropriation language for 1985 follows:

I-2

OPERATING EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the Office of Climate Information, [$29,440,000] $28,920,000 of which [$150,000] $400,000 shall remain available until expended. (34 U.S.C. 218 et seq.; Department of Government Appropriation Act, 1984.)

BASIS FOR SCHEDULES

The 1983 column of this budget generally presents the actual transactions and balances for that year, as recorded in agency accounts.

For 1984, the regular schedules include enacted appropriations and also identify the amounts for supplemental appropriations requested to meet the increased costs of statutory and wage-board pay raises. When the annual appropriation has not been enacted, the regular schedules will include the amounts provided under the authority of a continuing resolution. Requests for supplemental appropriations to meet increased 1984 program costs (where costs other than for statutory pay raises are involved), or to finance proposed program expansions in 1984, are included in Part II. Also included in Part II in addition to proposed appropriation language for both pay and program supplemental requests, are proposed rescissions.

The 1985 column of the regular schedules includes proposed appropriations for all existing programs, including those that require extension or renewal of expiring laws. Amounts for proposed new legislation, if any, are shown generally in separate schedules, following the regular schedules or in budget sequence in the respective bureau. These schedules are headed "Proposed for later transmittal under proposed legislation." Appropriation language is included with the regular schedules, but not with the separate schedules for proposed legislation. In some cases, when the amount requested in the budget is less than the amount required for the program level mandated in existing authorizing legislation (as in the case of entitlement programs), the reduced amount is reflected in the proposed appropriation language and the regular schedules. The proposed change in the authorizing legislation may be included in the appropriation language transmitted with the budget or in proposed legislation, to be transmitted separately.

Obligations refer to orders placed, contracts awarded, loan agreements made, and recurring services (such as rent, utilities, and personal services) received during the year, regardless of the time of payment. They are usually the basis of the schedules and total obligations are always shown.

PROGRAM AND FINANCING SCHEDULE

This schedule consists of three parts.

In the "Program by activities" section, obligations generally are shown for specific activities or projects. The activity structure is developed individually for each appropriation or fund account so as to provide a meaningful presentation of information for the program being financed. That structure is tailored to the individual account and is not uniform across the Government. Obligations that are financed from collections credited to an account, are shown separately from direct obligations and aggregated in a single line with a stub entry that reads "Reimbursable program." The last entry "total obligations," indicates the amount of budgetary resources that must be available to the appropriation or fund account.

The "Financing" section shows the budgetary resources available or estimated to be available to finance the obligations. The amounts of any offsetting collections authorized to be credited to the account are shown as deductions from total obligations. For unobligated balances of appropriations of a prior year that have not expired, the start-of-year balances are subtracted from total obligations and the end-of-year balances are added. This shows that, on a net basis, unobligated balances are either used to finance total obligations or increased because part of the budget authority provided for that or a previous year will be carried forward and obligated in a future year. Other adjusting entries may be included. The residual is the new budget authority required to finance the program. Where more than one kind of budget authority is provided, that information is shown. In some cases, the availability of budgetary resources may be restrained by the imposition of legally binding limitations on direct loans or other obligation levels.

The "Relation of obligations to outlays" section shows the difference between obligations, which may not be liquidated in the same year in which they are incurred, and outlays. The entry "obligations incurred, net," shows the amount of new obligations incurred in the year, less offsetting collections credited to the account. The amount of obligations that were incurred in previous years but not liquidated, are entered as an obligated balance, start of year. Similarly, an end of year obligated balance is entered. Certain adjusting entries may be included. The residual is the net amount of outlays resulting from the liquidation of obligations incurred in that year and previous years.

The account identification code, found at the head of the program and financing schedule, facilitates computer processing of budgetary information. The last three digits of this code represent the functional category to which the account is classified. Functional classification permits presentation of budget authority and outlays in terms of their purpose, rather than the organization administering the program or the account under which these funds are made available. For example, the 452 at the top of the following schedule indicates that the purpose of the program financed by this appropriation is Area and regional development—a subfunction within major function 450, Community and regional development. When the outlays from an account are split between two or more subfunctions within a single major function, the code of the major function is used. In those few cases where the outlays from an account are split between two or more functions, a code of 999 is used. A detailed discussion of how Federal programs are addressed to each identified national need is included in Part 5 of the budget. The individual functional categories are identified with each appropriation or fund account in the Budget Accounts Listing in Part 8 of the budget.

NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Narrative statements present briefly the objectives of the program and the work to be financed primarily for 1985. Measures of expected performance may be included, and the relationship to the financial estimates is described.

SCHEDULE OF OBJECT CLASSIFICATION AND PERSONNEL SUMMARY

There is shown for each account a schedule of obligations, according to the following uniform list of object classifications:

- | | |
|--|---|
| 10 PERSONAL SERVICES AND BENEFITS | 25 Other services |
| 11 Personnel compensation | 26 Supplies and materials |
| 12 Personnel benefits | 30 ACQUISITION OF CAPITAL ASSETS |

| 24 Printing and reproduction | 43 Interest and dividends |
| | 44 Refunds |

These object classes reflect the nature of the things or services purchased, regardless of the purpose of the program for which they are used.

Except for revolving funds, reimbursable obligations are aggregated in a single line and not identified by object class. Data, classified by object, are illustrated in the following schedule:

99.0 Reimbursable obligations.....	250	350	380
99.9 Total obligations.....	30,396	30,590	29,300

Several of the object classes are divided into subclasses—personnel compensation, for example, is shown separately for full-time permanent employees, for other than full-time employees, and for certain other payments. Standard level user charges are rental payments assessed by the General Services Administration for space (leased and Government-owned) and building services.

When obligations for personnel compensation are shown in the object classification schedule, a personnel summary will follow the object classification schedule, as illustrated below:

Personnel Summary
Direct:
Total number of full-time permanent positions.....	813	785	741
Total compensable workyears:

Reimbursable:
Total number of full-time permanent positions.....	9	13	14
Total compensable workyears:

Control of Federal civilian employment generally is on a full-time equivalent (FTE) or workyear basis for the executive branch.

Business-Type Budget Statements

Business-type budget statements are presented for activities specifically required by the Government Corporation Control Act or similar legislation and generally for other revolving and trust revolving funds conducting business with the public. They are not usually presented for funds conducting business within the Government.

Statement of Revenue and Expense

For many revolving funds there is a statement of revenue and expense that shows the resulting net income or loss for the year. This statement usually includes accrued revenue (e.g., revenue earned) and accrued expenditures (e.g., including cost incurred but not yet paid), whether funded or unfunded.

Statement of Financial Condition

The statement of Financial Condition shows assets, liabilities, and Government equity for the fund at the close of each fiscal year. In addition to this information, which is similar to commercial balance sheet data, budget needs also require additional information, shown in the equity section. A disclosure is made of obligations incurred that have not yet accrued into liabilities (undelivered orders) and of budgetary resources for which no funding has been received (unfinanced budgetary resources). Unfinanced budgetary resources include orders from Federal customers that have not been filled (unfilled orders), and unfinanced budget authority in the form of authority to borrow for which borrowing has not taken place, and contract authority for which liquidating cash has not been received. Orders received from the public must be accompanied by advance payment.

The last section of the balance sheet is an "Analysis of Changes in Government Equity." This section sets forth for paid-in capital and retained income, as appropriate, the beginning balance, transactions (changes) during the year, and the balance at the end of the year.

FEDERAL CREDIT SCHEDULES

As part of an effort to establish systematic control of the levels of Federal credit during any fiscal year, the budget appendix includes annual limitations on the amount of obligations for direct loans and commitments for loan guarantees in appropriations language for appropriations or funds with credit activity. Schedules for the status of direct loans and the status of guaranteed loans summarize activity for the years shown.

Status of Direct Loans

A direct loan is a disbursement of funds (not in exchange for goods or services) that is contracted to be repaid—with or without interest—or any of the following transactions:

- direct Federal participation in loans privately made or held;
- purchase of private loans through secondary market operations;
- acquisition of guaranteed private loans or collateral in satisfaction of default or other guarantee claims.

A direct loan is counted against the annual limitation when the principal amount is obligated. Gross obligations for direct loans means the amount obligated during a fiscal year, without reductions for such items as repayments, prepayments, sale of loan assets, defaults, or forgiveness.

For each appropriation or fund with direct loan activity, a schedule is displayed immediately following the program and financing schedule as follows:

Status of Guaranteed Loans

A guaranteed loan is an agreement by which the Government pledges to pay part or all of the loan principal and interest to a lender or holder of a security, in the event of default by a third party borrower. For the purposes of credit control, the term includes agreements in the form of loan insurance; i.e., a program to pool risks, pledging the use of insurance premiums, and, under some circumstances, other resources to secure a lender against default by a borrower. The term also includes direct Federal loans that the Government has sold under guarantee or repurchase agreements.

A guaranteed loan is counted against the annual limitation when a firm commitment is made, i.e., when the Government enters into a guarantee agreement to become effective at such time as the lender meets stipulated pre-conditions. A commitment is reported for every guaranteed loan, even though the commitment and the actual guarantee may occur simultaneously. Amounts for limitations and in the schedules are the full principal amounts of loans guaranteed whether guaranteed in full or in part. The amount of the Government's contingent liability is shown as a memorandum entry in the schedule. Gross commitments for guaranteed loans means the amount committed during a fiscal year, without reductions for such items as repayments, prepayments, sale of guaranteed loans, or defaults.

For each appropriation or fund account with guaranteed loan activity, a schedule is displayed immediately following the program and financing schedule (or status of direct loans schedule, if there is one) as follows:

exchange, copyright deposit, and official deposit. This includes materials in all subjects, except medicine and agriculture, for the general collections of the Library and domestic and foreign law materials for the law library.

2. Preparation of books and library materials for use.—Library materials are cataloged for use and are classified for systematic arrangement on the shelves of the collection. The Network Development Office plans and coordinates the exchange of bibliographic information among major library cooperatives and research facilities.

6. Preservation of library materials.—Library materials are preserved in their original format by being bound or rebound, or by a variety of conservation/restoration techniques. Materials are also preserved by converting them to a more durable form through such means as the microfilming of books and newspapers, by conversion of nitrate film to safety base film, and by the conversion of deteriorating sound recordings to polyester tape.

7. Automated systems support.—Central computer support to all operations of the Library is provided by the Automated Systems Office. This support consists of systems analysis, programming, and operation of central computers, minicomputers and data communication services.

8. Central support services.—This activity supports the executive staff of the Office of the Librarian; exhibit, information, and publication activities; personnel, budget and finance, procurement, buildings management, and other centralized services. It also includes rental of space off Capitol Hill.

9. American Folklife Center.—Public Law 94-201 established the American Folklife Center in the Library of Congress "to preserve and present American folklife" through field documentation, consultancies, research, publishing, exhibition and dissemination of information.

The Copyright Office is responsible for recording copyright claims, assignments, and renewals, for supplying copyright information to the public, for collecting and accounting for copyright fees, and for printing complete and indexed catalogs for each class of copyright entries. The Office is conducted for the most part on a self-sustaining basis. The amount requested is substantially counterbalanced by fees received for services rendered and the value of books and other library materials deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act and transferred to the Library of Congress. The income and obligations for 1983, and estimates for 1984 and 1985 are as follows:

Income:
Gross receipts.....	6,212,000	6,450,000	6,700,000
Estimated value of materials de- posited and transferred to the Library of Congress.....	6,704,822	6,700,000	6,700,000
Total income.....	12,916,822	13,150,000	13,400,000
Obligations.....	15,421,986	16,650,000	17,133,000

The effort described under each of the activities are predicated on an estimated 500,000 copyright registrations during 1985, an estimated 500,000 during 1984, and registrations of 488,256 during 1983.

1. Receiving and accounting for applications, fees, and correspondence.—Materials received by the Copyright Office are assembled and routed; accounts are maintained for all moneys received; records relating to the registration of copyrights are filed; and materials are deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act.

2. Examining copyright applications.—All applications and deposits are examined before issuance of registration certificates or recordings of documents to determine whether the provisions of the Copyright Act have been satisfied.

3. Indexing and cataloging materials received.—The Register of Copyrights is required to print complete and indexed catalogs of all items registered. The catalog entries prepared by the Copyright Office are made available in part to the Library for its general operations. It is estimated that for 1985 the number of items to be cataloged will be 500,000.

4. Reference service.—The Copyright Office makes available to the public information concerning the provisions of the Copyright Act, including procedures, policies, and rulings. Information concerning registrations is furnished on a fee basis. Obtaining compliance with registration requirements is also part of this activity.

5. Printing the catalog of copyright entries and bulletins of decisions.—Catalogs for each class of copyright entries and bulletins of copyright decisions are printed and made available to the public.

6. Records management.—The Records Management Division is responsible for storing and maintaining records related to the copyright registrations process.

7. General supervision and legal services.—The work of the Copyright Office includes legal supervision and research into the present copyright law and international copyright relations. It also involves a study of improvement of the domestic law and our international copyright relations.

8. Licensing Division.—The Licensing Division performs the responsibilities connected with the registration of cable television stations and the licensing of jukeboxes.

1. Policy analysis and research.—The Congressional Research Service provides objective, nonpartisan analytical and consultative services to the Members and committees of Congress, assisting them in the analysis, appraisal, and evaluation of any subject matter of legislative concern, including recommendations submitted to the Congress by the Executive Branch. Research services are also provided to assist Congress with its oversight, representative, and other responsibilities. Support takes the form of background studies, in-depth policy analyses, consultations, briefings, legal research, continuous liaison with committees, assistance with committee hearings, public policy seminars for Members and congressional staff, and related data and materials. In order to respond most effectively to the broad range of congressional inquiries, the Service supplements individually tailored products with Issue Briefs, Reports, Committee Prints, and "Info Packs", which are collections of both CRS products and carefully selected materials from outside sources that provide background material on issues of very high congressional interest. Lists of subjects and policy areas that a committee might profitably pursue are periodically made available to each congressional committee. As provided by statute, the Service prepares decennially the Constitution of the United States—Analysis and Interpretation, and supplements at 2-year intervals, prepares compendiums for the annual national high school and college debate topics, and provides assistance to the Congressional Budget Office, the Office of Technology Assessment, and the General Accounting Office.

2. Documentation and status of legislation.—The Service prepares and publishes for distribution to the Congress the Digest of Public General Bills and Resolutions introduced in Congress, the status of bills receiving action, and various pertinent indexes. Upon request, the Service prepares legislative history memorandums on bills for which hearings have been announced, and compiles and makes available to each committee reports on legislatively authorized programs and activities within that committee's jurisdiction that are scheduled to terminate during the current Congress.

3. Information and reference services.—The Congressional Research Service provides extensive information and reference assistance to Members and committees. Reference files containing clippings, pamphlets, and documents and automated information services are maintained for rapid information retrieval. Lists of selected reports, prepared by CRS staff on legislative issues, are regularly distributed to congressional offices. To provide faster responses and in-person services, the Service also maintains reference centers in congressional office buildings and the Congressional Reading Rooms in the Madison and Jefferson Buildings of the Library of Congress.

4. Administration.—Providing overall supervision and administrative support to the entire Congressional Research Service is the responsibility of the administrative personnel.

The Librarian of Congress may use foreign currencies to provide information of technical, scientific, cultural, or educational significance to the United States through the collection of foreign library materials and the distribution of copies thereof to libraries and research centers in the United States. The program is being carried on in two countries in 1984: India and Pakistan. Of the total amount requested in 1985, $3,111,000 will be paid in foreign currencies, while $507,000 will provide U.S. dollar support.

Acquisition of books and other library materials.—Based upon the requirements of other Federal agencies and certain research libraries in the United States, publications and other library materials are purchased in multiple copies and distributed to selected libraries and research centers in the United States, including the Library of Congress.

Program support (U.S. dollars).—U.S. dollars are required to pay certain expenses which cannot be paid by foreign currencies, such as salaries of the coordinating staff at the Library of Congress, shared administrative support provided by the Department of State, travel in some instances, and equipment and supplies which cannot be procured abroad.

The Office of the Superintendent of Documents operates under a separate appropriation which provides funds for: (1) the mailing for Members of Congress and other Government agencies of certain Government publications, as authorized by law; (2) the distribution of Government publications to designated depository libraries; and (3) the compilation of catalogs and indexes of Government publications. These three functions are related to the publication activity of other agencies and to the demands of the public, Members of Congress, and depository libraries. Consequently, Documents can exercise little control over the volume of work which it may be called upon to perform. A description of these three functions follows:

1. Distribution for other Government agencies and Members of Congress.—The Office of Superintendent of Documents maintains mailing lists and mails, at the request of Government agencies and Members of Congress, certain publications specified by public law.

2. Depository library distribution.—As required, Government publications are supplied to libraries which are designated as depositories for Government publications.

3. Cataloging and indexing.—The Office of Superintendent of Documents is charged with preparing catalogs and indexes of all publications issued by the Federal Government. The principal publication is the "Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications."

The U.S. Tax Court hears and decides cases involving Federal income, estate and gift tax deficiencies and renders declaratory judgments regarding the qualification or continuing qualification (including revocations of rulings on the exemptions) of retirement plans under the provisions of Public Law 93-406, known as the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

The Tax Court has also been given jurisdiction under Public Law 94-455 (Tax Reform Act of 1976) to render declaratory judgments with respect to (1) exempt organization status determinations pursuant to section 501(c)(3), Internal Revenue Code and (2) determinations made pursuant to section 367 (transfers of property from the United States). Under the Revenue Act of 1978, the Court was given jurisdiction to enter declaratory judgments on the tax treatment of interest on proposed issues of Government obligations. In addition, the court has jurisdiction over actions to restrain disclosure and to obtain additional disclosure with respect to public inspection of written determinations issued by the Internal Revenue Service, and actions to compel the disclosure of the identity of third-party contacts relating to written determinations made by the Internal Revenue Service.

For 1985, the court proposes a trial program of 798 weeks consisting of 587 weeks of regular trial sessions and 211 weeks of small tax case sessions. Trials are held in approximately 116 cities throughout the United States.

The actual and estimated work volume of the court is presented in the following tabulation:

The United States Court of International Trade, established under Article III of the Constitution of the United States, was created by the Act of October 10, 1980 (94 Stat. 1727), effective November 1, 1980, as successor to the former United States Customs Court. The court has original and exclusive jurisdiction of civil actions against the United States, its agencies and officers, and certain civil actions brought by the United States, arising out of import transactions and Federal statutes affecting international trade. The court possesses all the powers in law and equity of, or as conferred by statute upon, a district court of the United States, and is authorized to conduct jury trials. The geographical jurisdiction of the court is nationwide and trials before the court may be held at any place within the jurisdiction of the United States. The court also is authorized to hold hearings in foreign countries. The principal statutory provisions pertaining to the court are contained in the following sections of title 28 of the United States Code: Organization, sections 251 to 257; Jurisdiction, sections 1581 to 1585; and Procedures, sections 2631 to 2647.

TITLE VI—GENERAL PROVISIONS

DEPARTMENTS, AGENCIES, AND CORPORATIONS

SEC. 601. Unless otherwise specifically provided, the maximum amount allowable during the current fiscal year in accordance with section 16 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (60 Stat. 810), for the purchase of any passenger motor vehicle (exclusive of buses and ambulances), is hereby fixed at $6,000 except station wagons for which the maximum shall be $6,400: Provided, That these limits may be exceeded by not to exceed $1,700 for police-type vehicles, and by not to exceed $3,600 for special heavy-duty vehicles: Provided further, That the limits set forth in this section shall not apply to electric or hybrid vehicles purchased for demonstration under the provisions of the Electric and Hybrid Vehicle Research, Development, and Demonstration Act of 1976.

SEC. 602. Appropriations of the executive departments and independent establishments for the current fiscal year available for expenses of travel or for the expenses of the activity concerned, are hereby made available for quarters allowances and cost-of-living allowances, in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 5922-5924.

SEC. 603. Appropriations available to any department or agency during the current fiscal year for necessary expenses, including maintenance or operating expenses, shall also be available for payment to the General Services Administration for charges for space and services and those expenses of renovation and alteration of buildings and facilities which constitute public improvements, performed in accordance with the Public Buildings Act of 1959 (73 Stat. 749), the Public Buildings Amendments of 1972 (86 Stat. 216), or other applicable law.

SEC. 604. Funds made available by this or any other Act of administrative expenses in the current fiscal year of the corporations and agencies subject to chapter 91 of title 31, United States Code, shall be available, in addition to objects for which such funds are otherwise available, for rent in the District of Columbia; services in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 3109; and the objects specified under this head, all the provisions of which shall be applicable to the expenditure of such funds unless otherwise specified in the Act by which they are made available: Provided, That in the event any functions budgeted as administrative expenses are subsequently transferred to or paid from other funds, the limitations on administrative expenses shall be correspondingly reduced.

SEC. 605. Funds made available by this or any other Act to (1) the General Services Administration, including the fund created by the Public Buildings Amendments of 1972 (86 Stat. 216), and (2) the "Postal Service Fund" (39 U.S.C. 2003), shall be available for employment of guards for all buildings and areas owned or occupied by the United States or the Postal Service and under the charge and control of the General Services Administration or the Postal Service, and such guards shall have, with respect to such property, the powers of special policemen provided by the first section of the Act of June 1, 1948 (62 Stat. 281; 40 U.S.C. 318), but shall not be restricted to certain Federal property as otherwise required by the proviso contained in said section, and, as to property owned or occupied by the Postal Service, the Postmaster General may take the same actions as the Administrator of General Services may take under the provisions of sections 2 and 3 of the Act of June 1, 1948 (62 Stat. 281; 40 U.S.C. 318a, 318b), attaching thereto penal consequences under the authority and within the limits provided in section 4 of the Act of June 1, 1948 (62 Stat. 281; 40 U.S.C. 318c).

SEC. 606. No part of any appropriation contained in, or funds made available by this or any other Act, shall be available for any agency to pay to the Administrator of the General Services Administration a higher rate per square foot for rental of space and services (established pursuant to section 210(j) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949, as amended) than the rate per square foot established for the space and services by the General Services Administration for the current fiscal year and for which appropriations were granted.

SEC. 607. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no part of any of the funds appropriated for the fiscal years ending September 30, 1985, or September 30, 1986, by this Act or any other Act, may be used to pay any prevailing rate employee described in section 5342(a)(2)(A) of title 5, United States Code, or any employee covered by section 5348 of that title—

(1) during the period from the date of expiration of the limitation imposed by section 616(a)(2) of H.R. 4139, incorporated by reference in section 101(f) of Public Law 98-151, until the first day of the first applicable pay period that begins not less than ninety days after that date, in an amount that exceeds the rate payable for the applicable grade and step of the applicable wage schedule in accordance with such section 616(a)(2); and

(2) during the period consisting of the remainder, if any, of the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, and that portion of the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, that precedes the normal effective date of the applicable wage survey adjustment that is to be effective in the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, in an amount that exceeds, as a result of a wage survey adjustment, the rate payable under paragraph (1) of this subsection by more than the overall average percentage of the adjustment in the General Schedule during the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 9(b) of Public Law 92-392 or section 704(b) of Public Law 95-454, the provisions of subsection (a) of this section shall apply (in such manner as the Office of Personnel Management shall prescribe) to any prevailing rate employee to whom such section 9(b) applies, except that the provisions of subsection

(a) may not apply to any increase in a wage schedule or rate that is required by the terms of a contract entered into before the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no prevailing rate employee described in subparagraph (B) or (C) of section 5342(a)(2) of title 5, United States Code, may be paid during the period for which subsection (a) of this section is in effect at a rate that exceeds the rate that would be payable under subsection (a) were subsection (a) applicable to such employee.

(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, including subsection (a) of this section, no part of any of the funds appropriated for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, by this Act or any other Act, may be used to pay any prevailing rate employee in the wage area described in section 780 of Public Law 97-114, at a rate of pay higher than the rate of pay for the applicable grade and step contained in the applicable wage schedule in effect on the date of enactment of this Act.

(e) For the purpose of this section, the rate payable to any employee who is covered by this section and who is paid from a schedule that was not in existence on September 30, 1984, shall be determined under regulations prescribed by the President.

(f) The provisions of this section shall apply with respect to pay for services performed by any affected employee on or after October 1, 1984.

(g) For the purpose of administering any provision of law, rule, or regulation that provides premium pay, retirement, life insurance, or any other employee benefit, that requires any deduction or contribution, or that imposes any requirement or limitation, on the basis of a rate of salary or basic pay, the rate of salary or basic pay payable after the application of this section shall be treated as the rate of salary or basic pay.

(h) Notwithstanding the limitations imposed on prevailing rate pay pursuant to subsection (a) of this section, such limitations shall not apply to wage adjustments for prevailing rate supervisors provided by the supervisory pay plan published in the Federal Register on March 30, 1983 (48 Fed. Reg. 13384).

(i) Notwithstanding the delay in adjustments of wage schedules and rates imposed as a part of the limitation imposed by this section, if the adjustment in General Schedule rates of pay for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, takes effect in October 1984, the adjustments in rates and schedules limited by this section shall take effect on the date they would have taken effect under section 5344 of title 5, United States Code, were it not for this section.

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank) finances development projects in less developed countries. By applying banking principles to the achievement of development goals, it promotes increased economic productivity and helps developing economies meet more of the basic needs of their peoples. Since its origin in 1945, the Bank has made loan commitments of over $89 billion.

The Bank's 1983 lending program included 136 loan commitments to 43 countries for a total of $11.1 billion. More than twice this amount was contributed to these projects by recipient countries, commercial lenders, and other multilateral or bilateral agencies. In 1984 and 1985, the Bank is expected to lend $12.0 billion and $13.3 billion respectively.

Contributions to the Bank consist of paid-in capital, which leads to budget outlays, and callable capital which would lead to outlays only if required to meet Bank obligations resulting from borrowings in capital markets. There has never been a call on these funds, which are now provided under a program limitation.

The administration's request for 1985 is $109.7 million in budget authority for paid-in capital subscriptions and $1,353.2 million in program limitations for callable capital subscriptions to provide the fourth of six equal installments for the $8.8 billion U.S. share of the $40.0

billion 1981 General Capital Increase (GCI). In addition, a 1984 supplemental for $30 million of budget authority for paid-in capital and $370 million in program limitations for callable capital is being requested to complete the third installment of the GCI.

The International Development Association (IDA) is the member of the World Bank Group which provides development financing on highly concessional terms to the world's poorest nations. IDA is the largest source of multilateral lending extended on concessional terms to developing countries. Projects have to meet the same economic and financial standards as other World Bank projects and there has never been a default on an IDA loan by any borrower.

By June 30, 1983, IDA had extended credits totaling $30.1 billion for development projects in 79 countries. IDA assistance is concentrated overwhelmingly in the poorest countries—mainly those with an annual per capita gross national product of less than $400 in 1980 dollars. The fiscal 1984 lending program is presently programmed at $3.3 billion.

The Sixth Replenishment of IDA resources, totaling $12 billion, became effective on August 24, 1981, when the United States formally notified the Association of its intention to contribute $3.24 billion. Contributions totalling $3.09 billion have been made and the United States has stated its intention to complete its contribution to the Sixth Replenishment in 1984. To meet this objective, $150 million is being sought in a 1984 supplemental.

Negotiations are nearing completion for a Seventh Replenishment of IDA. The $750 million requested in 1985 is for the first installment of an expected U.S. share of $2.25 billion.

The Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) promotes the economic and social development of Latin America and the Caribbean through loans and technical assistance. In its 23 years of operation, the Bank has loaned over $22.5 billion for projects that represent a total investment of more than $85 billion. The 1984 lending level is estimated at $3.2 billion.

The Bank lends money through two channels: (1) The ordinary and inter-regional capital resources which lend at near-market rates; and (2) the Fund for Special Operations (FSO) which makes loans on concessional terms to the region's poorest nations. Pending ratification of the charter of the new Inter-American Investment Corporation (IIC), this Bank affiliate will begin loan and equity investments for the private sector.

The 1985 request includes funds for the second installment of the U.S. contribution to the Sixth Replenishment of the Bank's capital resources and the FSO, and the first installment of the U.S. share of the new Inter-American Investment Corporation. In addition, a 1984 supplemental is being requested to complete the first U.S. installment to the Bank's Sixth Replenishment.

The Asian Development Bank fosters economic growth and cooperation in the Asian and Pacific region. The Bank lends at near-market rates through its ordinary capital window and on highly concessional terms to the region's poorer nations through the Asian Development Fund (ADF). Since its founding in 1966, the Bank has made loans totaling $13 billion, contributing to a total investment of over $34 billion.

During calendar year 1983, Bank lending totaled $1.8 billion. In 1984, the Bank is expected to lend $2.3 billion with 1985 levels projected to be $2.7 billion.

The 1985 request includes contributions as follows to both the capital and ADF resources:

Ordinary capital.—Budget authority of $13.2 million is requested for paid-in capital, along with a callable program limitation of $251.4 million for the second installment on the Bank's current capital increase.

Asian Development Fund.—The 1985 request of $144 million includes payments of $14 million to the ADF's second increase of resources and $130 million for the second installment of the U.S. share under the ongoing Fourth Replenishment.

In addition, a 1984 supplemental of $47 million for the ADF is requested to complete the first installment of the U.S. share of the Fourth Replenishment and to apply $14 million to the remaining U.S. pledge to the second.

Functional development assistance.—Program provides economic resources to developing countries with the aim of bringing the benefits of development to the poor. Loans and grants under this program are concentrated in those areas in which the United States has special expertise and which promise the greatest opportunity for the poor to better their lives.

Funds are provided under six separate activities:

Agriculture, rural development and nutrition.—Supports efforts to increase food production in the developing countries by improving the productivity and income of small farmers, creating greater rural employment opportunities, enhancing rural infrastructure and the environment, improving nutrition and removing impediments to equitable economic growth.

Population planning.—Supports efforts to reduce population growth rates in developing countries and to provide families with effective options in choosing the number and spacing of their children.

Health.—Assists developing countries to increase access to health care, family planning and nutrition services, to make safe water and adequate sanitation more widely available, to reduce the incidence of debilitating tropical diseases, malnutrition, diarrheal infections, measles and other preventable diseases, and to increase governmental capacity to plan and manage their health resources.

Education and human resources.—Supports the efforts of developing countries to provide basic education for children, improve the fundamental life skills of adults, and improve the management skills and performance of managers of development programs.

Energy and selected development activities.—Provides assistance to developing countries to better contend with national energy problems, to cope with employment and income problems in urban areas, to mitigate the problems of rapid urban migration, and to improve environmental management and resource planning. This activity also facilitates the involvement of U.S. private voluntary organizations in development and helps improve access by developing countries to U.S. scientific and technical expertise.

Science and technology.—Supports new and innovative research on problems of development and assists developing countries in improving their scientific and technological capacities.

In addition, an estimated $10 million of funds proposed for this account will be used to pay cargo preference costs to support the U.S. maritime industry, as required by the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, as amended.

The private sector revolving fund will expand the AID private sector initiative through new financing mechanisms and support of business activities heretofore not addressed. For example, loans will be made to local private sector firms and credit institutions in developing countries. A 3-year capitalization totaling $60 million is intended to make the fund totally self-sustaining. Repayments of appropriated funds will be made from fees, interest payments, and other reflows. Repayment of appropriated funds to the Treasury will begin once the revolving fund reaches $100 million in assets.

Peace Corps operating expenses provide direct and indirect support for nearly 5,000 Americans engaged in voluntary services in over 60 countries worldwide. The volunteers help fill the trained manpower needs of developing countries and encourage self-sustaining development of skilled manpower. The Peace Corps promotes mutual understanding between the peoples of the developing world and the United States and focuses the attention of the American people on the concepts of voluntarism and self-help at the grassroots level. Public Law 97-113 established the Peace Corps as an independent agency within the executive branch, effective December 29, 1981.

1. Volunteer operations.—The financial resources associated with this budget activity provide for the placement, training and direct support of Peace Corps Volunteers overseas. These resources will fund approximately 4,655 volunteer years of service worldwide in 1985.

2. Recruitment and development education.—This activity provides for the domestic program functions of the Peace Corps, primarily volunteer recruitment. In 1985, approximately 2,580 trainees qualified to enter Peace Corps service will be selected.

3. Program development and support.—This activity funds the administrative expenses and general overhead costs associated with the Peace Corps program, including reimbursements to the Department of State for administrative support overseas.

2299	U.S. contingent liability for guaranteed loans outstanding, end of year.....	176,545	201,545	271,545
------	--	---------	---------	---------

The Overseas Private Investment Corporation encourages the participation of U.S. private capital and skills in the economic and social development of less developed friendly countries. Its primary programs are (1) political risk insurance against losses due to expropriation, inconvertibility, and war damage; and (2) investment financing through loans and guaranteed loans. The Corporation operates on a self-sustaining basis. In August, 1983, the Board of Directors authorized OPIC management to return $56 million to the U.S. Treasury in accordance with Section 240B of the FAA. This is reflected as a capital transfer in 1984 in accordance with established budget practices. However, the transfer was recorded as a liability in the 1983 GAO-audited financial statement in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles.

The International Security and Development Cooperation Act of 1980 established the African Development Foundation to promote nongovernmental small-scale indigenous development projects in Africa as a complement to other U.S. development assistance efforts.

In 1984 the African Development Foundation became operational when the Board of Directors was selected, confirmed by the Senate and appointed by the President. Program operations will commence in 1984 with several grants to various African community organizations prior to the close of the fiscal year. The 1985 request will provide funding for additional development projects and program support costs.

As of September 30, 1983 the current dollar value of the U.S. quota denominated in Special Drawing Rights (SDR), the IMF's unit of account, was $13,324 million. The slight decline from the level at the end of fiscal year 1982 reflects a slight decline in the dollar value of the SDR.

International negotiations on an increase in IMF quotas were concluded in early 1983. The IMF membership agreed to increase total quotas by 47.5 percent, from about SDR 61 billion to SDR 90 billion, of which the U.S. share amounts to SDR 5,310.8 million, approximately $5.8 billion. Under established budget procedures, an increase in the U.S. quota in the IMF requires budget authorization and appropriation for the full amount of the increase. Legislation providing for U.S. participation in the augmentation of IMF resources was submitted to Congress in March 1983, and approved in November. Use by the IMF of the quota commitment does not result in net budget outlays because the United States receives an increase in its international monetary reserves corresponding to any transfer of dollars to the IMF under the U.S. quota subscription.

The purpose of the Supplementary Financing Facility is to augment temporarily the ability of the IMF to assist member countries with serious balance of payments problems, thereby allowing these countries time to implement required policy measures without resorting to abrupt and harmful restrictions on trade and payments. The United States and other countries agreed to finance the facility by making available to the IMF lines of credit totalling 7,784 Special Drawing Rights (about $8.2 billion based on the exchange rate at the end of 1983) of which the U.S. commitment is 1,450 million SDR (but not to exceed $1,831 million appropriated). Transfers of dollars to the IMF under the U.S. credit line do not result in net budget outlays since the United States receives a corresponding increase in its international monetary reserve assets which can be used automatically to meet a balance of payments financing need. At the end of 1982, $484.9 million of the original U.S. commitment remained undrawn. This amount was fully drawn in 1983 resulting in full use of the U.S. commitment. The dollar value of U.S. claims under the Supplementary Financing Facility declined by $27.2 million during the year as a consequence of exchange value changes. Any exchange value changes will be realized upon repayment of the loans.

One partial repayment of $1.4 million was made in 1983. This repayment constituted a loss of $365 thousand.

The General Arrangements to Borrow (GAB) were established in 1962 by 10 industrial countries, including the United States, as a means of supplementing the IMF's resources when needed to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary system. Each participant agreed to provide specific amounts of its currency to help finance drawings from the IMF by another GAB participant. GAB members agreed in early 1983 to increase their financial commitments to the GAB and to allow the IMF, in certain strictly defined circumstances, to activate the GAB to provide financing for any IMF member. Total GAB commitments were increased from SDR 6.3 billion to SDR 17 billion, with the U.S. share rising from $2.0 billion to SDR 4.250 billion. Legislation providing for the increased U.S. commitment to the GAB and approving the modification was submitted to Congress in March 1983 and approved in November. The GAB increase does not result in any net budget outlays because the United States receives an increase in its international reserve assets corresponding to any transfer to the IMF under the U.S. credit line.

During 1983, no calls were made on the U.S. commitment under the GAB, and no U.S. loans were outstanding at the beginning of the fiscal year.

This revolving fund finances the acquisition of defense articles and defense services in anticipation of their transfer to foreign countries and international organizations. The fund enhances the ability of the United States to respond to urgent requirements of allied and friendly governments for military equipment while minimizing the adverse impact on U.S. forces due to diversions from production or U.S. military stocks. The account is capitalized by foreign military sales receipts from the use of United States Government assets and recoupment of nonrecurring research, development, and production costs.

The Agriculture Research Service conducts research to provide the means for a safer, more economical, and more abundant supply of agricultural products for the Nation. The Service uses coordinated, interdisciplinary approaches to perform basic and applied research in the fields of livestock; plants; soil-air-water resources; processing, storage, and distribution; nutrition and food safety; and consumer services research.

1. Research on animal production.—Research is conducted to improve livestock productivity (including poultry) through improved breeding, feeding, and management practices, and to develop methods for controlling diseases, parasites, and insect pests affecting them. The increases proposed in 1985 and for research to accelerate animal genetic improvement; improve animal disease resistance and in support of APHIS animal protection programs.

2. Research on plant production.—Research is conducted to improve plant productivity through improved varieties of food, feed, fiber, and other plants; develop new crop resources; and improve crop production practices, including methods to control plant diseases, nematodes, insects, and weeds. The increases proposed in 1985 are for research to integrate agricultural systems, modify plant germplasm; strengthen biological control of pests and in support of APHIS plant quarantine programs.

3. Research on the use and improvement of soil, air, and water.—Research is conducted to improve the management of natural resources, including investigations to improve soil and water management, irrigation, and conservation practices; to protect natural resources from harmful effects of soil, air, and water pollutants and to minimize certain agricultural pollution problems; and to determine the relation of soil types and water to plant, animal, and human nutrition. The increases proposed in 1985 are for conservation tillage, and soil fertility research.

4. Processing, storage, distribution, food safety, and consumer services research.—Research is conducted to develop new and improved foods, feeds, fabrics, and industrial products and processes for agricultural commodities for domestic and foreign markets, including ways to minimize processing wastes as well as the processing, transportation, storage, wholesaling, and retailing of products.

Research is also conducted on problems of human health and safety, including means to insure the safety of food and feed supplies; control insect pests of man and his belongings; reduce the hazards to human life resulting from pesticide residues and other causes; and on consumer services. Initiatives in 1985 are targeted to control commodity losses and improve the utility and quality of export commodities.

5. Research on human nutrition.—Research is conducted on human nutritional requirements, composition and nutritive value of foods, dietary status, monitoring and surveillance and nutrition education and methodology needs of Federal, State, and local agencies administering food and nutrition programs.

6. Repair and maintenance of facilities.—Funds are used to restore, upgrade, and maintain Federal facilities to meet OSHA and EPA requirements, provide suitable workspace for in-house research programs, and to retrofit existing structures for better energy utilization.

7. Higher education grants.—In fiscal year 1984, the Department conducted two higher education grant programs—the Morrill-Nelson Permanent Appropriation, which provides $50,000 to every State and territory; and competitive fellowship grants, which will be administered by several institutions to attract future scientists and professionals to shortage areas in the food and agricultural sciences. In fiscal year 1985, the Administration proposes to replace the Morrill-Nelson program with a new $2 million program specifically for the 1890 Colleges and Universities, Tuskegee Institute and the University of the District of Columbia. No funding is requested for the competitive fellowship program in fiscal year 1985.

8. Contingencies.—$1 million will be available to meet urgent needs that develop unexpectedly during the year when such needs cannot be met by redirection of resources from other projects.

9. Construction of facilities.—Amounts reflect obligations from prior balances. There is no funding request for this item.

10. Advances and reimbursements.—Agricultural Research Service performs program research activities and services for other USDA, Federal, and non-Federal agencies. These activities and services are paid for on a reimbursable basis.

1. Payments under the Hatch Act.—Funds under the Hatch Act are allocated to agricultural experiment stations of the land-grant colleges in the 50 States, District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, and American Samoa, for agricultural research including investigations and experiments to promote a permanent and efficient agricultural industry and improvements in the rural home and rural community. Beginning in 1985, in lieu of providing Hatch Act funding, Federal assistance to Micronesia will be handled by a grant program to be included in the State Department budget. The increase proposed in 1985 is for biotechnology research.

2. Cooperative forestry research.—These funds are allocated to land-grant colleges or agricultural experiment stations in the 50 States, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and other State-supported colleges and universities offering graduate training in the sciences basic to forestry and having a forestry school. Beginning in 1985, in lieu of providing cooperative forestry research funding, Federal assistance to Micronesia will be handled by a grant program to be included in the State Department budget. A program decrease is proposed in 1985.

3. Payments to 1890 colleges and Tuskegee Institute.—Funds support planning, coordinating and conducting agricultural research at the 1890 land-grant colleges including Tuskegee Institute. The eligible institutions plan and conduct agricultural research in cooperation with each other and such agencies, institutions, and individuals as may contribute to the solution of agricultural problems. The increase proposed in 1985 is for basic research.

4. Special research grants.—These funds support basic and applied research in the areas of pesticide clearance, minor use animal drugs, pesticide impact assessment, animal health, germplasm resources, acid precipitation, and tropical and subtropical research. A program decrease is proposed in 1985.

5. Competitive research grants.—This program emphasizes basic research critical to food production and human nutrition. In 1985, the following research areas are proposed for funding: $15 million to study serious problems relating to plant science research, $2 million for human nutrition research, $28.5 million for a new initiative in basic biotechnology research in the plant and animal sciences, and $4.5 million for a new program in basic animal science research.

6. Animal health and disease research.—Funds, distributed by legislated formula, support livestock and poultry disease research in colleges of veterinary medicine and in eligible agricultural experiment stations. Research on specified national and regional problems of joint USDA-State concern is conducted as agreed upon between the USDA and specific eligible institutions. Animal health and disease research can be implemented by the States using other formula research funds.

7. Federal administration (direct appropriation).—A research coordinating and review staff is maintained which encourages and assists in the establishment and maintenance of cooperation within and among the States and between the States and their Federal research partners, and which administers research grants and payments to States. Federal administration is funded from a combination of program set-asides from formula and grant programs and from direct appropriation for administration.

8. 1890 research facilities.—Funds support the purchase of land and the construction, alteration or renovation of buildings necessary for the conduct of food and agricultural research at colleges eligible to receive funds under the Act of August 30, 1890, including Tuskegee Institute.

Reimbursable program.—Funds support basic and applied agriculture research cooperatively sponsored with other Federal agencies.

The primary function of the nationwide system of cooperative extension work is out-of-school applied education in agriculture, home economics, community development, 4-H youth programs, and related subjects.

Funds appropriated for payments to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, and American Samoa are distributed primarily on the basis of population and on the basis of special problems and needs. Funds are used primarily for the employment of State, area, and county extension workers and paraprofessionals who work with individuals, families, community organizations, marketing concerns, and others by providing advice and assistance in the application of improved methods for production, marketing, nutrition, family living, and community development. Work with youth is accomplished largely through the 4-H program. Most of these funds are matched by the States and provide the Federal share of State retirement and penalty mail costs associated with program activities specifically undertaken with these matched funds.

In fiscal year 1985, an increase of $6.5 million in formula support to most institutions, including maintenance of operations at the 1890 institutions, Tuskegee Institute, and the District of Columbia at current levels is proposed. The increased request is designed to strengthen extension assistance in the high priority areas of: systems approaches to farm/ranch production and management; marketing strategies for agricultural producers; financial management for both producers and families; and conservation and use of soil and water resources. Some Cooperative Extension Service activities are proposed for reduction. These are in the area of pest management, pesticide clearance, urban gardening, farm safety, renewable resources, and human nutrition. A major portion of these programs, however, remain intact and are carried out from formula funds at levels consistent with the needs that exist in the respective States. Beginning in 1985, in lieu of providing Smith-Lever Act funding, Federal assistance to Micronesia will be handled by a grant program to be included in the State Department budget.

The Extension Service provides leadership and assistance to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, the District of Columbia, and American Samoa, in developing extension programs, improving teaching methods, efficient use of available resources, evaluation of programs, and administrative services. These responsibilities are funded from a combination of program set-asides for administering payments to States and from direct appropriations for the Federal Extension Administration.

1. Crop and livestock estimates.—The Service provides the official National and State estimates of acreage, yield, and production of crops, stocks and value of farm commodities, and numbers of inventory values of livestock items. Data on approximately 120 crops and 45 livestock products are covered in some 300 reports issued each year. Data collected and published on prices paid and received by farmers are basic to computation of parity prices.

The work under this activity is conducted through 44 State offices serving the 50 States; most of these offices are operated as joint State and Federal services. Cooperative arrangements with State agencies provide additional State and county data; Federal funds are not available for collection and publication of these additional data. The major program modification in 1985 is an increase of $750,000 to provide improved quality of surveys on the February acreage intentions, June acreage, and end-of-year acreage and production by using probability procedures.

2. Statistical research and service.—This activity is designed to improve crop and livestock estimating techniques by improving sample survey designs and procedures and by testing new forecasting and estimating techniques, such as the use of satellite data.

The 1985 estimate includes savings from consolidation of administrative support services as part of the 1985 budget management reforms.

The World Agricultural Outlook Board (WAOB) was established to provide a single focal point for the Nation's economic intelligence related to domestic and international food and agriculture.

The objectives of the WAOB are to improve the consistency, objectivity, and reliability of outlook and situation material being disseminated to the public and to integrate and coordinate USDA domestic and international economic information assistance.

The WAOB carries out these objectives through daily market surveillance and special analyses of international and domestic agricultural developments, direct participation in the planning of research programs supporting outlook and situation activities, and coordination of all departmental activities relating to weather and climate and remote sensing.

The 1985 budget includes funds for specialty crops analysis and outlook; meteorological database acquisition; and National Academy of Sciences study of NOAA weather and climate programs.

The Foreign Agricultural Service mission is to help American farmers and traders take maximum advantage of increased opportunities to sell U.S. agricultural commodities abroad and to help increase U.S. farm income.

Activities are conducted within five program areas:

1. Foreign agricultural affairs.—The Service maintains agricultural counselors, attachés or trade officers at 74 foreign posts to assist overseas development of markets for U.S. farm commodities. They work closely with numerous U.S. agricultural trade groups and maintain significant contacts with foreign governments and traders to promote market access for U.S. farm products. They also file annually about 4,000 comprehensive reports regarding foreign agricultural production, supply, demand, marketing and trade policy developments to keep U.S. agriculture, industry, and Government currently informed.

PROGRAM STATISTICS

	1983 actual	1984 estimate	1985 estimate
Number of countries covered.....	105	103	103
Number of trade and Government visitors.....	23,500	24,000	24,000
Number of posts accessible by telecommunications..	20	30	30

2. Foreign market information and access.—This program forges a link between the Foreign Agricultural Affairs program and the agency's analytical/informational and market development planning/services functions that serve the U.S. agricultural community and Government decisionmakers. The analysis and timely release of periodicals on world commodity conditions allow U.S. farm and trade groups to have ready access to information that can be used as reliable sources to assess short-term changes in world agricultural supply conditions by commodity.

The analyses of world commodity conditions provide the information necessary to develop export marketing strategies that can be used not only by the Department to gain market access but to enhance the long term market development plans for major U.S. commodities.

PROGRAM STATISTICS

Bilateral trade issues.....	130	130	130

3. Foreign market development.—This program provides funding support to 44 commodity associations (co-operators), 28 contractors participating in the export incentive program, 4 regional groups (representing 46 State departments of agriculture) and the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture. Under FAS guidance and supervision, these organizations conduct an extensive worldwide market development program on behalf of the U.S. farm sector. In addition, the Service develops and operates a worldwide system of multicommodity promotional programs utilizing product exhibits, trade teams, trade services, market information programs, and trade referral services to expand overseas markets. The 1985 budget includes additional funds for further expansion of this activity.

4. LANDSAT data.—In 1985, FAS intends to discontinue purchases of LANDSAT remote sensing data from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

General sales manager.—This activity formulates policies and administers agricultural commodity export programs including: Public Law 480, which facilitates the sale of agricultural commodities on a long-term credit basis and the donation of agricultural commodities to foreign governments, intergovernmental and voluntary agencies and the world food program; and the CCC export credit programs and other export promotion programs authorized by the CCC Charter Act.

The 1985 estimate for FAS includes savings from consolidation of administrative support services as part of 1985 budget management reforms.

The Agency also formulates and reviews food aid development activities supported by Public Law 480 Titles I and III agreements.

2. International scientific and technical cooperation.—OICD manages the Department's bilateral exchange and cooperative research programs with foreign governments and institutions in order to strengthen the role of science and technology in the ongoing effort to stabilize world food supplies and to increase the efficiency with which world resources are used. Priorities and criteria for these programs are based on domestic research priorities, potential benefits to U.S. agricultural production, and the availability of desired technologies. OICD coordinates USDA's and the U.S. Government's participation in approximately 30 international organizations concerned with food, agriculture and rural development.

3. Caribbean Basin Initiative.—OICD is responsible for the design, implementation and coordination of USDA's development efforts in response to the President's Caribbean Basin Initiative. OICD coordinates in-tradepartmental efforts to improve animal and plant health and quality, expand agricultural research and training opportunities, and promote agro-industry in the region.

4. Reimbursable program.—OICD, utilizing USDA and university expertise, provides technical assistance and training to developing countries at the request of AID and international organizations. OICD manages technical assistance projects in over 50 countries, focusing on land and water management, crop and livestock production and marketing, forestry, pest control, resource conservation and other areas. OICD offers a technical and management training program in agriculture and rural development to participants from foreign countries and designees of international organizations.

The 1985 estimate for OICD includes savings from consolidation of administrative support services as part of 1985 budget management reforms.

1. Financing the sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies and for dollars on credit terms (titles I and III).—The Corporation finances all sales made pursuant to agreements concluded under title I, and may serve as the purchasing or shipping agent, or both, if the purchaser so requests. Sales are made to friendly countries—as defined in section 103(d) of the act—and must not displace expected commercial sales for cash dollars (secs. 103 (c) and (n)).

Agreements may not be made under title I in any calendar year which call for an appropriation to reimburse the Corporation in excess of $1.9 billion, plus unused prior years' authorizations.

Whenever practicable, terms of agreements must require payment at time of delivery of not less than 5% of the purchase price in dollars or in currencies convertible to dollars. These initial payments are applied against costs to reduce appropriation requests.

At least 50% of the gross tonnage of commodities shipped under the authority of title I is required to be transported on U.S.-flag vessels in accordance with the Cargo Preference Act. When U.S.-flag vessels are required, the Corporation will finance the differential between U.S.-flag rates and foreign-flag rates. In addition, under a title III food for development program, CCC is authorized to pay freight from U.S. ports to designated ports of entry abroad or to designated points of entry abroad in the case of landlocked countries with respect to commodities made available to a country on the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development list of relatively least developed countries.

(a) Financing sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I).—Agreements for sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies have not been authorized since December 31, 1971.

Certain U.S. uses of foreign currencies are subject to the appropriation process. The Corporation is reimbursed for the dollar value of currencies so used. Proceeds from sales of foreign currencies and from dollar repayments of foreign currency loans are applied as a reduction in appropriation requests.

(b) Financing sales of agricultural commodities for dollars or convertible foreign currencies on credit terms (title I).—Agreements are made with friendly countries for delivery in annual installments for not more than 10 years from the date of the agreement subject to the availability of the commodity.

Food aid allocated to countries meeting the poverty criterion established for International Development Association financing shall be not less than 75% of the food commodities financed under Title I.

Credit terms are to be no less favorable than those required by section 122 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, for loans made under that section.

Repayments under dollar credit agreements are not more than 20 years with a grace period of not more than 2 years on repayment of principal. Convertible foreign currency terms permit repayment of up to 40 years with deferral of principal payments for up to 10 years. As payments are received each year, they are applied against current costs to reduce appropriation requests.

The estimates under title I include the cost of financing sales of commodities for food for development programs under title III of the act. CCC is authorized to furnish credit under title I for the purchase of available commodities to be delivered for periods from 1 to 5 years. The repayment obligation to CCC is reduced to the extent that a country applies the sales proceeds or commodities to approved development assistance programs.

Total title I agreements made since inception to September 30, 1983, amount to $13,246 million cost value, including ocean freight for shipment on U.S. ships. Major commodities are wheat, cotton, oils, rice, and feed grains. Payments received during the period amount to $3,151.2 million, of which $1,975.0 million was applied to principal and $1,176.2 million to interest.

2. Commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad (title II).—Under title II, agricultural commodities are furnished to developing countries to meet famine or other emergency relief needs, as well as to promote economic and community development and to combat malnutrition. They are furnished through friendly governments, private voluntary agencies, foreign nonprofit voluntary agencies if no such U.S. agency is available, and intergovernmental organizations such as the United Nations World Food Program.

The law provides that a minimum of 1.7 million metric tons of agricultural commodities shall be distributed in fiscal year 1982 and each fiscal year thereafter, of which not less than 1.2 million metric tons for non-emergency programs shall be through nonprofit voluntary agencies and the World Food Program, unless the President determines and so reports to Congress that such quantity cannot be used effectively for intended purposes or that such a quantity is not available.

The Agency for International Development is responsible for administering title II programs.

The Corporation is authorized to pay the costs of acquisition, packaging, processing, enrichment, preservation, fortification, transportation, handling, and other incidental costs incurred up to the time of delivery to U.S. ports. The Corporation also pays ocean freight charges, and pays transportation costs to points of entry other than ports in the case of landlocked countries, where carriers to a specific country are unavailable, where ports cannot be used effectively, or where a substantial saving in costs or time can be obtained, and pays general average contributions arising from ocean transport.

Up to $7.5 million each year may be used to buy foreign currencies accruing under title I of this act to meet costs directed to community and other self-help activities designed to alleviate the causes of the need for such aid. Such costs may not include personnel and administrative costs of cooperating sponsors, distributing agencies and recipient agencies.

Through December 31, 1983, appropriations totaling $14,850 million were authorized. Beginning in 1982, no programs of assistance shall be undertaken under this title during any calendar year which call for an appropriation of more than $1 billion to reimburse the Corporation. This limitation applies to costs incurred, including its investment in commodities (but only on the basis of a price not greater than the export market price of commodities acquired under a price support program), plus any amount by which programs of assistance undertaken under this title in the preceding calendar year have called or will call for appropriations in amounts less than authorized during the preceding year. Any incidental sales proceeds and proceeds from loss, damage, and other claims are applied against costs to reflect a reduction in appropriation requests.

This account includes funds to cover expenses of programs administered by, and functions assigned to, the Service. The funds consist of direct appropriation, transfers from the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC), and miscellaneous advances from other sources. This is a consolidated account for administrative expenses of national, commodity, State, and county offices.

1. Program formulation and appraisal.—The supply adjustment, conservation, and commodity support programs, and the management and merchandising of commodities acquired under the support program, have a tremendous impact on the national and (to a lesser extent) the international economy. This activity provides for constant review of the effectiveness of these programs. It also provides for the analysis of data to formulate more effective programs.

2. Operation of supply adjustment, conservation, and price support programs.—This activity includes all functions dealing with the administration of programs carried out through the farmer committee system, including: (a) developing program regulations and procedures; (b) holding meetings with employees and producers to discuss new programs or changes in existing programs; (c) collecting and compiling basic data for individual farms; (d) establishing individual farm allotments, bases, and yields; (e) notifying producers of established allotments, bases, and yields; (f) determining farm marketing quotas; (g) handling appeals; (h) conducting referendums and certifying results; (i) accepting farmer certifications and checking compliance; (j) accepting producer applications for participation in commodity price stabilizing programs; (k) issuing marketing cards so that production from the allotted acreage can be marketed without penalty; (l) processing producer requests for conservation cost-sharing; (m) processing commodity loan and storage facility loan documents and issuing checks; and (n) processing deficiency and diversion payments and issuing checks.

3. Inventory management and merchandising.—This activity includes: (a) overall management of CCC-owned commodities; (b) selling commodities; (c) donating commodities; and (d) accounting for loans and commodities.

Automated data processing.—ASCS is in the initial stages of introducing a major new ADP and communications system in support of CCC operations. Most data processing and accounting for CCC programs is currently performed in a large centralized facility in Kansas City, to which county offices send copies of transaction documents for recordation. Most work in county and State offices is performed manually. For the past three years, tests have been conducted using equipment in county offices. A cost benefit analysis has been completed showing significant savings and increased productivity from using automated equipment, and nationwide automation of all State and county offices is now being implemented. Contract award for the automation equipment is planned for 1984, with delivery and system implementation targeted for early 1985 through mid-1987. This effort is an integral part of a broader Information Resources Management Plan. Another major facet of the plan is the establishment of a joint ASCS-FAS data base, which includes information on local production of, and foreign demand for, agricultural commodities. Equipment purchases for these new systems will represent capital investment under the statutory authority of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act.

The 1985 estimate for ASCS includes savings from consolidation of administrative support services and the closing of certain printing and duplicating facilities as part of 1985 budget management reforms.

This experimental Rural Clean Water Program (RCWP), authorized by the Appropriation Acts of 1980 (Public Law 96-108) and 1981 (Public Law 96-528), is a cooperative endeavor among farmers, various USDA agencies and other organizations to develop and test means of controlling agricultural nonpoint source water pollution in rural areas. The RCWP provides long-term financial and technical assistance to landowners and operators to improve water quality and to meet water quality goals.

Recommended project areas were developed by local and State committees and approved by the Secretary of Agriculture in consultation with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. Full funding is provided for all approved projects.

Technical assistance is provided by the Soil Conservation Service, Forest Service, Extension Service, and others.

Under the RCWP, participants agree to install and maintain Best Management Practices (BMP's) which reduce or control water pollution, as specified in an approved water quality plan.

The effectiveness of BMP's in reducing identified pollutants entering a stream or lake or leaving their source is evaluated under the ongoing program.

AGRICULTURAL CONSERVATION PROGRAM

public agency for the same purpose and under the same conditions: Provided further, That for the current year's program for soil and water conservation and pollution abatement, $2,500,000 shall be available for technical assistance: Provided further, That not to exceed $3,000,000 of the funds appropriated herein shall be available to carry out emergency conservation practices authorized in sections 401 and 402 of title IV of the Agricultural Credit Act of 1978: Provided further, That no part of any funds available to the Department, or any bureau, office, corporation, or other agency constituting a part of such Department, shall be used in the current fiscal year for the payment of salary or travel expenses of any person who has been convicted of violating the Act entitled "An Act to prevent pernicious political activities" approved August 2, 1939, as amended, or who has been found in accordance with the provisions of title 18 U.S.C. 1913 to have violated or attempted to violate such section which prohibits the use of Federal appropriations for the payment of personal services or other expenses designed to influence in any manner a Member of Congress to favor or oppose any legislation or appropriation by Congress except upon request of any Member or through the proper official channels.

The primary objectives of the program are: (1) to help assure a continued supply of food and fiber necessary for a strong and healthy economy and people, (2) to facilitate sound resource management systems through soil and water conservation, (3) to control erosion and sedimentation from agricultural land, (4) to control pollution from animal wastes, (5) to encourage voluntary compliance by agricultural producers with State and Federal requirements to solve point and nonpoint sources of pollution, (6) to improve water quality, (7) to help achieve national priorities in the National Environmental Policy Act, (8) to help achieve national priorities in the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, and (9) to encourage the energy conservation measures specified in the Energy Security Act of 1980.

Beginning in fiscal year 1985, the objectives and unexpended balances of the Emergency Conservation, Forestry Incentives and Water Bank programs are recommended for consolidation with the Agricultural Conservation Program. These additional objectives provide immediate relief to producers to rehabilitate farmland severely damaged by natural disaster and return it to productive agricultural use; preserve, maintain, and improve wetlands in important waterfowl nesting and breeding areas in the United States; and bring private nonindustrial forestland under intensified management to increase timber production and assure adequate supplies of timber products.

The program is carried out in line with the National Program for Soil and Water Conservation (NCP), which emphasizes erosion control, water conservation, and upstream flood protection. Along with annual agreements, cost sharing is authorized for long-term agreements of 3-10 years, or shorter term agreements of 3-5 years. On the shorter term agreements, the conservation plan of operation (CPO) applies only to a portion of the farm rather than the entire farm. Annual payments are authorized for 10-year wetland agreements.

The program is administered in each county by the ASC county committee, with review and approval by State ASC committees and the Secretary, and in consultation with other agencies. For the 1984 ACP, county committees, in consultation with the county conservation review group and community committee persons, submitted their proposal for practices (including land, water, and related resource management practices having significant energy conserving effects) and changes from the previous year's program to State committees for review. The State committees, after reviewing county recommendations with the State conservation review group, sent State recommended changes to the national level for review by the Secretary. However, no changes in the national program or practices were provided to the State and county committees for their use in carrying out the 1984 program.

The 1984 program targets financial and technical assistance to areas with the most critical resource problems, while maintaining a base program throughout the country. In addition, it utilizes $20 million of ACP funding for long-term (5-10 years) conservation measures on highly erodible land. Farmers enrolled in a 1984 commodity program requiring acreage reduction are eligible for cost-sharing assistance on highly erodible land at a 90 percent cost-share rate. These funds will encourage farmers to plant grass or trees rather than crops on highly erodible land.

The 1984 program is expected to serve 10.5 million acres. Practices identified specifically to abate soil erosion are expected to prevent approximately 85.9 million tons of erosion. The proposed consolidation of program objectives in fiscal year 1985 will provide maximum flexibility to States and counties to set priorities for and treat the most severe natural resource problems. The proposed language designates funds for sharing the cost of emergency measures to deal with cases of severe damage to farm and ranch lands resulting from natural disasters.

This program carries out the purposes of section 202 of Title II of the Colorado River Basin Salinity Control Act, Public Law 93-320, by providing cost-share assistance, technical assistance, and education and information to landowners and others in the Colorado River Basin. This program would consolidate into one account all salinity control activities of the Department of Agriculture for the Colorado River Basin. Legislation authorizing the consolidation has been proposed. This request is contingent on enactment of that proposal.

The main objective of this program is to enhance the supply and quality of water in the Colorado River for delivery to downstream users in the U.S. and the Republic of Mexico.

Practices will be recommended by the ASC county committees and approved by the State committees and the Secretary of Agriculture. Technical assistance will be provided by the Soil Conservation Service, and educational and informational activities will be provided by the Extension Service.

The 1985 program will continue progress on the two existing projects, begin implementation of two projects for which planning studies are complete, and provide three additional planning studies.

The objectives of the Water Bank Program are to conserve water; preserve, maintain, and improve the Nation's wetlands; increase waterfowl habitat in migratory waterfowl nesting, breeding, and feeding areas in the United States; and secure recreational and environmental benefits for the Nation. The program was authorized by the Water Bank Act, approved December 19, 1970, as amended by Public Law 96-182, approved January 2, 1980.

The Secretary of Agriculture, through designated ASCS county offices, uses program funds to enter into 10-year agreements with landowners and operators for the conservation of specified wetlands. Provisions exist to renew agreements for additional periods, to make annual payments on agreements, and under certain conditions to increase payment rates in the fifth year of a contract or at the time of renewal.

The 1984 program is expected to bring 40,700 acres under agreement. This would be accomplished through the signing of 407 agreements with landowners. Additionally, payment rates on 63,000 acres would be increased.

It is proposed that in fiscal year 1985 the objectives of the Water Bank Program be carried out under the consolidated Agricultural Conservation Program.

[EMERGENCY CONSERVATION PROGRAM]

[For an additional amount to carry out the emergency conservation program authorized by title IV of the Agricultural Credit Act of 1978 (16 U.S.C. 2201 et seq.), $7,000,000, to remain available until expended.] (Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1984.)

This program was authorized by the Agricultural Credit Act of 1978 (16 U.S.C. 2201-05). The appropriation provides special funds for sharing the cost of emergency measures to deal with cases of severe damage to farms and rangelands resulting from natural disasters.

Assistance is made available to treat new conservation problems which (1) if not treated will impair or endanger the land, (2) materially affect the productive capacity of the land, (3) represent damage which is unusual in character and, except for wind erosion, is not the type which would recur frequently in the same area, and (4) will be so costly to rehabilitate that Federal assistance is or will be required to return the land to productive agricultural use. Also, assistance is available for measures to provide for or conserve water to be used for agricultural purposes during periods of severe drought as determined by the Deputy Administrator, State and County Operations, ASCS.

Under the 1983 program, cost-sharing assistance was provided in 34 States to treat farmlands damaged by floods, tornadoes, hurricanes, and drought.

It is proposed that in fiscal year 1985 the objectives of the Emergency Conservation Program be carried out under the consolidated Agricultural Conservation Program.

Under this program indemnification payments are made to dairy farmers and manufacturers of dairy products.

The Dairy Indemnity Program was authorized under 78 Stat. 508 in 1964, and has been extended through September 30, 1985, by the Agriculture and Food Act of 1981 (Public Law 97-98). Payments are made to farmers who are directed to remove their milk from commercial markets because the milk contains residues of chemicals which have been registered and approved for use by the Federal Government, of other chemicals, of nuclear radiation, or of nuclear fallout. The authority also provides that indemnification may be paid for cows producing such milk.

The Agricultural Act of 1970 (84 Stat. 1382) broadened the indemnification authority to include manufacturers of dairy products whose products become contaminated with residues of chemicals which have been registered and approved for use by the Federal Government.

No funds are requested for fiscal year 1985.

This program was authorized by the Cooperative Forestry Assistance Act of 1978 (16 U.S.C. 2101). The objectives of the program are to bring private nonindustrial forest land under intensified management, to increase timber production, and to assure adequate supplies of timber products, and to enhance other forest resources.

The Forestry Incentives Program shares up to 65% of the cost of tree planting and timberstand improvement. The percentage cost-shared depends on the rate set in a particular State and county by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee, after consulting with the State forester. The program is available in designated counties based on a Forest Service survey of total eligible private timberland available for production of timber products. The program is administered by ASCS with technical assistance from Forest Service.

Under the 1984 program, it is planned to cost-share the expenses of planting trees on 136,500 acres and improving the timberstand on 64,900 acres of forest.

It is proposed that in fiscal year 1985 the objectives of the Forestry Incentives Program be carried out under the consolidated Agricultural Conservation Program.

This appropriation finances the administrative and operating expenses of the Corporation to provide funds to establish and maintain rates and coverages for 18,500 county programs in about 3,000 counties and to continue development of sales policies. Crop insurance in force is estimated to increase from $7.8 billion in crop year 1984 to $9.5 billion in crop year 1985, and the estimated insured acres is expected to increase from 55.6 million in crop year 1984 to 67.4 million in crop year 1985.

The Corporation's long-term objective is to provide the maximum number of farm producers with crop insurance coverage, on an actuarially sound basis, as protection against essentially all risks and economic losses resulting from uncontrollable natural hazards.

For fiscal year 1985, the appropriation for administrative and operating expenses will enable the Corporation to provide for growth in the expanded crop insurance program to an estimated 24 percent farmers' participation, bringing the program closer to attaining its long-term objective.

The major portion of administrative and operating expenses is to support delivery systems which rely heavily on the private sector as provided by the Federal Crop Insurance Act of 1980 under section 507(c).

The delivery systems are:

1. Reinsured companies which enable insurance companies to provide the insurance marketing, distribution, servicing, training, quality control, and loss adjustment functions. The companies also share with Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, to a limited extent, in both profits and losses. It is estimated that reinsurance companies will handle about 55% of the total premium during crop year 1985. For crop year 1984, approximately 50 companies or groups will be writing crop insurance with reinsurance from FCIC; and

2. Agency sales and service agreement, also known as the "master marketing agreement." Under this type of agreement, private insurance companies and associations are offered the opportunity to contract with FCIC to provide insurance sales and services. They are compensated on a commission basis. It is estimated that these agreements will account for about 45% of the total premium for crop year 1985. FCIC anticipates that about 60 organizations will be involved in master marketing agreements with a total of about 8,000 agents for crop year 1985.

In addition, in areas where an adequate private sales and service force is not available, FCIC may ask other USDA agencies to sell and service all-risk crop insurance through existing county offices.

As the private sector becomes more involved in the all-risk crop insurance program, it is expected that the companies will be able to "risk" more of their funds thus reducing the cost to the Government and at the same time reach the Corporation's goal of providing all-risk crop insurance to as many farm producers as possible.

The 1985 estimate includes savings from consolidation of administrative support services as part of 1985 budget management reforms.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, a wholly owned Government corporation, was created on February 16, 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1501-1520), to carry out the provisions of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended. The purpose of this act is to promote the national welfare by improving the economic stability of agriculture through a sound system of crop insurance, and to provide the means for the research and experience helpful in devising and establishing such insurance.

Crop insurance offered to agricultural producers by the Corporation provides protection from losses caused by natural hazards, such as insect and wildlife damage, plant diseases, fire, drought, flood, wind, and other weather conditions. It does not indemnify producers for losses resulting from negligence or failure to observe good farming practices.

The crop insurance programs are planned, developed, and monitored by the FCIC headquarters office located in Washington, D.C. and its national operations office located in Kansas City, Missouri. The program is administered in the field through 18 field operations offices and 11 field actuarial offices. Sales and servicing of contracts at the county level are performed primarily by agents operating under agency sales and service agreements (master marketing agreements) and agents of reinsured companies. In those areas where these delivery systems are not in place, other USDA agencies may be used to market and service the program. The adjustment of losses is performed by FCIC employees, adjusters under contract with FCIC, and reinsured companies under contract with FCIC. Also, ASCS will perform some loss adjustment support on a reimbursable basis for the Corporation. Detailed administrative and program accounting and statistical functions, as well as the underwriting and actuarial analysis work, are performed in Kansas City, Mo.

Budget program.—The program for 1985 (crop year 1984) will provide crop insurance protection to farmers amounting to approximately $7.8 billion on the following commodities: Almonds, apples, barley, beans, citrus, combined crop, corn, cotton, flax, forage production, forage seeding, grain sorghum, grapes, hybrid seeding, oats, peaches, peanuts, peas, peppers, potatoes, prevented planting raisins, rice, rye, soybeans, stake tomatoes, sugar beets, sugarcane, sunflowers, sweet corn, tobacco, tomatoes, and wheat.

The 1984 appropriation provides sufficient funding for crop year 1984 to insure 55.6 million acres with an estimated $500 million in total premium income, including $125 million in premium subsidy. In order to allow for the broadest possible participation in the new crop insurance program, the appropriation request of $141 million in premium subsidy would provide sufficient funding to insure up to approximately 60 million acres in crop year 1984.

The following table compares the scope of the insurance operations planned for 1984 and 1985, as compared with 1983. Amounts in the 1983 column are actual, and pertain to the 1982 crop year. The 1984 column pertains to the 1983 crop year, and reflects levels of participation that can be achieved with the 1984 appropriations. The 1985 column pertains to the 1984 crop year.

Financing.—The Corporation is authorized under the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended, to use funds from the issuance of capital stock which provides working capital for the Corporation.

Receipts which are for deposit to this fund come mainly from premiums paid by farmers. The principal payments from this fund are for indemnities to insured farmers, the direct cost of adjusting crop losses and agents' commissions. However, an appropriation will be requested in subsequent years for payments made from premium income used for loss adjustment costs and/or agents' commissions as provided by section 516(a) of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended.

Premium subsidies are authorized by section 508(b) of the Federal Crop Insurance Act as amended. The purpose of the subsidy is to encourage the broadest possible participation of farm producers in the crop insurance program. Subsidies are paid by the Corporation based upon 30 percent of each producer's premium (reduced, where applicable, for hail and fire exclusion or State agency subsidy) on any coverage, under the Corporation's policy of insurance of up to a maximum of 65 percent of the recorded or appraised average yield, as adjusted.

Operating results and financial condition.—As of September 30, 1983, the Corporation reflected a deficit of $264.1 million. This compares with a deficit of $36.8 million at September 30, 1982.

For crop years 1948 through 1982, indemnities ($2,455.0 million) exceeded premium income ($2,106.9 million) by $348.1 million; the loss ratio for the period was 1.17. Indemnity costs exceeded premiums in 17 of the 35 years.

The Corporation was created to stabilize, support, and protect farm income and prices, to help maintain balanced and adequate supplies of agricultural commodities, their products, foods, feeds, and fibers, and to help in their orderly distribution (15 U.S.C. 714-714p). It may make available materials and facilities required in connection with the production and marketing of agricultural commodities and may be used to administer and to temporarily finance numerous special activities.

The Corporation's capital stock of $100 million is held by the United States. Under present law, up to $25 billion may be borrowed from the U.S. Treasury to finance operations.

The 1985 estimate includes savings from improving the control and timing of disbursements as part of 1985 budget management reforms.

Budget assumptions.—The following general assumptions form the basis for the Corporation's 1984 and 1985 budget estimates: (a) Production and national income will rise both in 1984 and 1985 from the present level; (b) generally, exports of agricultural commodities in 1985 will be higher than 1984 levels; (c) yields for the 1984 crops are based on recent averages adjusted for trend; (d) acreage allotments and marketing quotas will be in effect for the 1984 crops of certain kinds of tobacco;

(e) poundage quotas will be in effect for peanuts; and (f) continuation, in general, of current statutory provisions authorizing the Corporation's programs.

It is difficult to forecast with accuracy requirements for the year ending September 30, 1985, since the projections are subject to complex and unpredictable factors such as weather, other factors which affect the volume of production of crops not yet planted, feed and food needs here and overseas, and available dollar exchange.

PROGRAMS OF THE CORPORATION

The basic functions of the Corporation include the following programs for which appropriations are made for net realized losses sustained:

All other	376,732	1,544,440	355,115
Total	14,902,596	10,655,401	8,221,289

Support and related stabilization programs.—The Corporation conducts programs to support farm income and prices and stabilize the market for agricultural commodities. Price support is provided to producers of agricultural commodities through loans, purchases, payments, and other means. This is done mainly under the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act, as amended (15 U.S.C. 714 et seq.), the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.), and the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1281 et seq.).

Support is mandatory for the basic commodities—corn, cotton, wheat, rice, peanuts, and tobacco. The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, also requires support of the following nonbasic commodities: honey, milk, barley, oats, rye, grain sorghum, sugar, soybeans, and seed cotton. The National Wool Act of 1954, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1781-87), requires support for wool and mohair. Support for other nonbasic commodities is discretionary. The support program may also include operations to remove and dispose of surplus agricultural commodities in order to stabilize prices at levels not in excess of those permissible by law.

The principal methods of providing support are loans to and purchases from producers. With limited exceptions, loans made on commodities are nonrecourse. The commodities serve as collateral for the loan and on maturity the producer may deliver or forfeit such collateral to satisfy his obligation without further payment.

Direct purchases are also made from processors as well as producers, depending on the commodity involved. Also, special purchases are made under various laws for the removal of surpluses; for example, the Act of August 19, 1958, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431 note), and section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431).

Deficiency payments.—Producers may receive deficiency payments in addition to Commodity Credit Corporation loans and purchases for feed grains, rice and wheat; and in addition to loans for cotton. Producers of feed grains and wheat must comply with acreage limitation provisions or acreage set-aside provisions, and normal crop acreage (NCA) requirements, if in effect, in order to be eligible for loans, purchases, and payments. Producers of cotton and rice must comply with acreage limitation provisions, if in effect, in order to be eligible for loans, purchases, and payments. The total amount of payments, excluding disaster payments, which a person is entitled to receive under one or more of the annual programs for feed grains, wheat, upland cotton, ELS cotton, and rice for each of the 1984 and 1985 crops of these commodities shall not exceed $50 thousand. Since crop insurance is available in all 3,000 agricultural counties, no disaster payments are estimated for fiscal years 1984 and 1985.

The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, establishes minimum target prices for the 1982 through 1985 crops of the following commodities—wheat, corn, upland cotton, rice, and, beginning with the 1984 crop of ELS cotton, and establishes minimum loan and purchase levels for wheat, feed grains, and rice, and establishes minimum loan levels for upland cotton and ELS cotton. Deficiency payments for each of the commodities are required when the target price for the commodity exceeds the national average market price or the loan rate, whichever is higher. The target prices for grain sorghum and oats and, if designated by the Secretary, barley, are established at a level which is fair and reasonable in relation to the target prices established for corn.

Dairy.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended by the Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983, provides for a revised dairy price support program. For the period beginning December 1, 1983, and ending September 30, 1985, the support price is $12.60 per hundredweight. On April 1, 1985, the Secretary of Agriculture may reduce the support price in effect by 50 cents per hundredweight if estimates of CCC purchases of milk or milk products for the twelve-month period beginning on such date is in excess of six billion pounds milk equivalent. On July 1, 1985, the Secretary may reduce the support price in effect by 50 cents per hundredweight if estimates of CCC purchases of milk or milk products for the twelve-month period beginning on such date is in excess of five billion pounds milk equivalent. Also on July 1, 1985, the Secretary may increase the price support rate in effect by not less than 50 cents per hundredweight if the estimate of CCC purchases of milk or milk products for the twelve-month period beginning on such date is five billion pounds milk equivalent or less and the Secretary determines the increase to be necessary to assure an adequate supply of milk. In order to reduce the quantity of milk marketed for commercial use, a milk diversion program will be in effect for the fifteen-month period beginning January 1, 1984, and ending March 31, 1985. Under this program, a milk producer who complies with a contract entered into with CCC to reduce milk production by 5 to 30 percent of the producer's established milk base will receive $10 per hundredweight for the milk not produced. To encourage the adjustment of milk production to levels consistent with national demand, the Secretary is required to provide for a reduction of 50 cents per hundredweight in the price received on all milk marketed for commercial use by producers to be made during the period December 1, 1983, through March 31, 1985. The funds represented by the reduction are to be remitted to CCC to offset the payments made to producers under the milk diversion programs.

Commodity export.—The Corporation promotes the export of agricultural commodities and products through sales for dollars or foreign currency, payments, extension of credit, assumption of certain risks, and conduct of other operations with respect to the exportation of commodities. Such commodities and products may be those held in private trade channels as well as those acquired by the Corporation. These programs are carried out under section 5(f) of the Corporation's charter.

Storage facilities.—Pursuant to sections 4(h) and 5(b) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act, the Corporation has authority to make secured loans for the purchase, construction, or remodeling of facilities for storage and care of commodities on the farm.

Supply and foreign purchase.—The Corporation can procure from domestic and foreign sources food, agricultural commodities, and products and related materials to supply the needs of Federal agencies, foreign governments, and private and international relief agencies, under section 5 (b) and (c) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act.

Set-aside program and acreage limitation program.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, authorizes the Secretary to establish, through the Corporation, acreage limitation programs on the 1982 through 1985 crops of upland cotton, rice, and on ELS cotton beginning with the 1984 crop. In addition, the Secretary is authorized to implement a set-aside or acreage limitation program for the 1982 through 1985 crops of wheat and feed grains.

Land diversion payments.—To assist in adjusting the acreage of commodities to desirable goals, the Secretary is authorized by the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, to make land diversion payments, through the Corporation, to producers of the 1982 through 1985 crops of wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, rice, and to producers of ELS cotton beginning with the 1984 crop who devote to approved conservation uses acreages of cropland in addition to those required to be so devoted under the set-aside programs.

Payment-in-kind (PIK) program.—In accordance with the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, and the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act, the Secretary established a payment-in-kind program for the 1983 crops of wheat, corn, grain sorghum, rice, and upland cotton. Under the PIK program, participants in the acreage reduction program and the paid land diversion program could idle an additional portion of their base acreage and devote the acreage to conservation uses. In return, participants would receive in-kind payments on their PIK acres equal to a percentage of their farm program yield. In-kind payments are made available from price support loan collateral which is redeemed and sold to the Corporation or from other stocks in CCC inventory. For the 1984 crops, only wheat is authorized for payment-in-kind.

Grain reserves.—A producer-owned food grain reserve program for wheat and rice which provides 3-year extended loans to producers was announced in April 1977. This program was later expanded to include feed grains. Producers receive annual storage payments under the contract. Program provisions establish when interest is charged and a market price level at which storage payments cease and producers may repay their loans.

Operating expenses.—The Corporation carries out its functions through utilization of employees and facilities of other Government agencies. Administrative expenses are incurred for the services of: the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, the Agricultural Marketing Service, Foreign Agricultural Service—General Sales Manager, and other agencies of the Department engaged in the Corporation's activities; the General Accounting Office for audit; and the General Services Administration for space. Additional expenses are incurred for ASCS county offices for work related to programs of the Corporation, other ASCS expenses offset by revenue, custodian, and agency expenses of the Federal Reserve banks and lending agencies, and miscellaneous costs.

Expenses are incurred for acquisition, operation, maintenance, improvement, or disposition of property which the Corporation owns or in which it has an interest. These expenses are treated as program expenses. Such program expenses include inspection, classing, and grading work performed on a fee basis by Federal employees or Federal- or State-licensed inspectors; work relating to CCC programs performed on a contract or fee basis by Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service; and special services performed by other Federal agencies within and outside this Department. Most of these general expenses, including storage and handling, transportation, inspection, classing, and grading and producer storage payments, are included in program costs. They are shown in the program and financing schedule in the entries entitled "Storage, transportation, and other not included above," and "Producer storage payments."

The Corporation receives reimbursement for grain requisitioned pursuant to Public Law 87-152 (7 U.S.C. 447-449) by the States from Corporation stocks to feed resident wildlife threatened with starvation, through the appropriation reimbursement for net realized losses. There have been no requisitions in recent years, however.

SPECIAL ACTIVITIES

These activities are carried out under authority of section 5(g) of the Corporation's charter act and specific statutory authorizations or directives with respect thereto which are currently in effect or which may subsequently be enacted.

Actual or estimated payments compared with this limitation are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Funds of the Corporation are used to carry on this program. For the purpose of reimbursing the Corporation, section 705 of the act appropriates each fiscal year an amount equal to amounts expended by the Corporation during the preceding year and to amounts expended in prior fiscal years not previously reimbursed, but not to exceed an amount equal to 70 percent of the gross receipts from duties collected on wool and wool manufactures during the calendar year preceding the fiscal year.

FINANCING

Borrowing authority.—The Corporation has an authorized capital stock of $100 million held by the United States and authority to borrow up to $25 billion.

Funds are borrowed from Treasury and may also be borrowed from private lending agencies and others. The Corporation reserves a sufficient amount of its borrowing authority to purchase at any time all notes and other obligations evidencing loans made by such agencies and others. All bonds, notes, debentures, and similar obligations issued by the Corporation are subject to approval by the Secretary of the Treasury as required by the Act of March 8, 1938 (15 U.S.C. 713a-4).

Interest on borrowings from the Treasury (and on capital stock) is paid at a rate based upon the average interest rate of all outstanding marketable obligations

(of comparable maturity date) of the United States as of the preceding month. Interest is also paid on other notes and obligations at a rate prescribed by the Commodity Credit Corporation and approved by the Secretary of Treasury.

The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1966, made provision for terminating interest after June 30, 1964 on the portion of the Corporation's borrowings from the Treasury equal to the unreimbursed realized losses recorded on the books of the Corporation after the end of the fiscal year in which such losses are realized.

The computation of the transfer from interest-bearing to non-interest-bearing capital is (in thousands of dollars):

Less appropriations for year.....	16,173,514	9,673,636	8,698,269

Contract authority.—Price support and other programs required by statute may result in the Corporation incurring obligations in excess of available funds and borrowing authority. Such obligations are liquidated from subsequent appropriations and other funds which may become available to the Corporation. Any increase in obligations in excess of available fund resources is reported as contract authority in the year involved; a decrease is reported as the application of appropriations and other funds to liquidate the authority.

Appropriations.—Under section 2 of Public Law 87-155 (15 U.S.C. 713a-11), annual appropriations are authorized for each fiscal year to reimburse the Corporation for net realized losses incurred as of the close of each year.

The special activities are financed as indicated in the program descriptions above. In addition to certain reimbursments from other agencies, appropriations are made for the National Wool Act (see above) and for foreign assistance programs.

Deficit.—The net realized losses of the Corporation have previously been reimbursed as follows (in thousands of dollars):

The Rural Electrification Administration, under authority of the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, as amended, makes subsidized direct loans and guarantees loans made by other qualified lenders to rural electric and telephone systems for electric and telephone service in rural areas.

In order to protect the Government's loan security on over $54 billion of loans and guarantees made to borrowers, to assure that construction and operation projects conform to approved standards, REA furnishes business management and technical assistance on a regular basis to its borrowers. This objective is carried out through regulations, personal visits to the borrowers, and by training. REA has personnel in the Washington office and a field staff who have expertise in the electric or telephone industry and who are available to assist borrowers in specialized areas.

For 1985, legislation will be proposed to finance this activity on a user-charge basis. The 1985 estimate includes savings from consolidation of administrative support services as part of 1985 budget management reforms.

Rural housing insurance fund.—This fund was established in 1965 (Public Law 89-117) pursuant to section 517 of title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended. This fund may be used to insure or guarantee rural housing loans for single family homes, rental and cooperative housing, farm labor housing, and rural housing sites. Loan programs are limited to rural areas which include towns, villages, and other places of not more than 10,000 population, which are not part of an urban area. Loans may also be made in areas with a population in excess of 10,000 but less than 20,000, if the area is not included in a standard metropolitan statistical area and has a serious lack of mortgage credit for low- and moderate-income borrowers.

The focus of the housing assistance programs will be directed towards assisting low income individuals and families without other alternatives to find safe and adequate housing. The proposed budget will enable FmHA to make loans and intensify its debt collection and loan servicing activities in an effort to more effectively manage its $27 billion housing loan portfolio and to lessen loan delinquency rates.

The 1985 estimate includes savings from accelerating and improving the collection, processing and distribution of receipts, improving the control and timing of disbursements and collecting delinquent debt as part of the 1985 budget management reforms.

The major programs currently funded through the Rural Housing Insurance Fund are:

Very low-income housing repair loans.—Home repair loans for very low-income owner/occupants are made from amounts available in this fund. These loans are made to families and individuals to repair their dwellings in order to make them safe and to remove health hazards. The loans are made at 1% interest for a term of not more than 20 years.

Low to moderate income housing loans.—Individual home ownership loans are made to low and moderate income individuals and families who are unable to obtain home ownership financing from conventional sources on terms they reasonably can be expected to meet. Loans may be made to eligible applicants to construct, improve, alter, repair, or replace dwellings, and may include funds to purchase a house and building site. These loans generally have a term of up to 33 years and currently bear a note rate based on the cost of Treasury borrowings. However, interest credits may reduce a borrower's effective interest rate to as low as 1%. For 1985, no program is proposed for moderate income housing loans.

Farm labor housing loans.—These loans are made to farm owners, public or private nonprofit organizations of farm workers to provide modest living quarters, basic household furnishings, and related facilities, including the land necessary for an adequate site for domestic farm labor housing. Loans generally bear interest at 1% and in some cases may be made in conjunction with a farm labor housing grant.

Rural rental housing loans.—Rural rental and cooperative housing loans are made to individuals, corporations, partnerships and public bodies with the objective of providing low-rent housing for low to moderate income persons and the elderly. These loans bear a note rate based on the cost of Treasury borrowings and may be subsidized to a rate as low as 1% through interest credits. This subsidy permits rents to be adjusted to a level that lower income families can afford to pay. The Rural Rental Housing Program operates in tandem with the HUD Section 8 Rental Assistance Program and the FmHA Rental Assistance Program which is discussed below.

Rental assistance.—The objective of the rental assistance program is to reduce rents paid by low-income families living in FmHA financed rental projects and farm labor housing projects. Payments from the fund are made to the project owner to make up the difference between the tenant's payment and the approved rental rate established for the unit. For 1985, the Budget proposes to establish a separate appropriation account in order to more adequately identify the costs associated with the program. The proposed 1985 budget will allow the renewal of rental assistance contracts which will be expiring during the year.

Rural housing site loans.—Site development loans are made for the purchase and development of land to be subdivided into building sites and sold on a nonprofit basis to low- and moderate-income families or to organizations for rental or cooperative housing. These loans have a term of 2 years and currently bear a note rate based on the cost of Treasury borrowing. For 1985, no program is proposed for rural housing site loans.

The following table shows 1983 actual and estimated 1984 and 1985 number of units and program levels.

The Agricultural credit insurance fund is used to insure or guarantee farm ownership, soil and water, farm operating, and emergency loans to individuals. Associations are eligible for the following types of loans: Indian land acquisition, watershed protection, flood prevention, and resource conservation and development.

The 1985 estimate includes savings from accelerating and improving the collection, processing and distribution of receipts and improving the control and timing of disbursements as part of 1985 budget management reforms.

The following loans are financed through this fund:

Farm ownership loans are made to farmers and ranchers for acquiring, enlarging, or improving not larger than family farms, including dwellings and farm buildings; for financing land and water development, use, and conservation; for developing recreational and other nonfarm enterprises; for forestry development; for refinancing indebtedness; and for loan closing costs. Corporate family farmers, farming cooperatives, and partnerships are also eligible. The FmHA and private or cooperative lenders can make loans to the same borrowers on the same security. Loans are made for 40 years or less. Insured principal indebtedness of any borrower may not exceed $200,000 and guaranteed principal indebtedness of any borrower may not exceed $300,000. The borrower is charged not more than the cost of money interest rate for insured loans except for low-income, limited resource borrowers who currently are charged a lower interest rate. An additional 2% is added to the interest rate if the loan involves the use of prime farm land for nonfarm purposes. The interest rate for guaranteed loans is negotiated by the lender and the borrower.

Soil and water loans are made to owners or operators of farms and ranches for developing and conserving land and water resources. These loans may be made on farms which are larger than family farms. Corporate family farmers, farming cooperatives, and partnerships are also eligible. Loans are made for 40 years or less. Insured principal indebtedness of any borrower may not exceed $200,000 and guaranteed principal indebtedness of any borrower may not exceed $300,000. The borrower is charged not more than the cost of money interest rate for insured loans. An additional 2% is added to the interest rate if the loan involves the use of prime farm land for nonfarm purposes. The interest rate for guaranteed loans is negotiated by the lender and the borrower.

Resource conservation and development (RCD) loans are made to local sponsors of RCD projects approved for operation by the Soil Conservation Service. Loans are made to local organizations for conservation measures specified in approved project and works of improvement plans. These loans are repayable in not more than 30 years. Loans bear interest at a rate based on the average rate paid by the U.S. Treasury on obligations of similar maturity. No program is proposed for fiscal year 1985.

Watershed protection and flood prevention loans are made to local sponsors of projects approved by the Soil Conservation Service. Loans are made to local organizations for installing, repairing, or improving water storage facilities, purchasing sites or rights-of-way and for related costs. These loans are repayable in not more than 50 years at an interest rate based on the average rate paid by the U.S. Treasury on obligations of similar maturity. Total loans outstanding on any one project may not exceed $10 million. No program is proposed for fiscal year 1985.

Indian tribe land acquisition loans are made to qualified Indian tribes or tribal corporations to acquire land or interest in land within the tribe's reservation or Alaskan Indian community, as determined by the Secretary of the Interior. Loans are made for 40 years or less. The tribe is charged not more than the cost of money interest rate except those tribes that are unable to pay the higher rate currently may be charged a lower interest rate.

Farm operating loans are made to farmers and ranchers for paying costs incident to reorganizing a farming system for more profitable operation; purchasing livestock, poultry, and farm equipment; purchasing feed, seed, fertilizer, and other farm supplies; meeting other essential operating expenses; financing land and water development, use, and conservation; developing recreation and other nonfarm enterprises; providing other farm and home needs; refinancing indebtedness; complying with certain safety standards; financing modest farm and nonfarm projects for rural youths in connection with their participation in 4-H clubs, Future Farmers of America, and similar organizations; and loan closing costs.

Operating loans for farming operations are confined to operators of not larger than family farms. Individuals, partnerships, corporations, and cooperatives operating family-size farms may be eligible. The outstanding principal loan balance for operating loans to a borrower is limited to $100,000 for insured loans and $200,000 for guaranteed loans. The borrower is charged not more than the cost of money interest rate for insured loans except for low-income, limited resource borrowers who are currently charged a lower interest rate. An additional 2% is added to the interest rate if the loan involves the use of prime farm land for nonfarm purposes. The interest rate for guaranteed loans is negotiated by the lender and the borrower. Funds advanced for operating expenses are usually repaid when the crops, livestock, or other farm products are sold. Funds advanced for other purposes may be repaid in 1 to 7 years; and loans may be rescheduled for up to 7 additional years. Loans are secured by crop and chattel liens and, when necessary, by real estate mortgages. It must be clearly established that the loan applicants are unable to obtain sufficient credit elsewhere to finance their needs.

Emergency disaster loans are made available in designated counties where property damage and/or severe production losses have occurred as a direct result of a natural disaster. Subsequent emergency loans for annual operating expenses are made to established eligible farmers, ranchers, and aquaculture operators at a market rate of interest as established periodically by the Secretary. Effective October 1, 1982, such subsequent annual production loans are available only to those borrowers who were indebted to FmHA for an emergency loan on December 15, 1979, and who have received an initial emergency annual production loan due to a disaster occurring prior to December 15, 1979.

Actual loss loans are made for physical losses to repair, restore, or replace damaged or destroyed farm property, livestock and livestock products, and supplies, and for production losses to compensate for loss of income based on reduced production of crops resulting from the disaster. Repayment terms vary according to the purposes of the loan and the projected repayment ability of the borrower. Loans for actual losses to crops, livestock, supplies, and equipment may be scheduled for repayment for up to 7 years. These loans may be renewed for up to 7 additional years. Under some conditions a longer repayment period may be authorized, but not to exceed 20 years. Generally, real estate will be needed as security when more than 7 years is authorized. Real estate loans will generally be scheduled for repayment within 30 years but may be scheduled for up to 40 years. Annual operating expenses usually will be scheduled for repayment each year when the principal income from the year's operations is received.

An actual loss loan may not exceed $500,000 or the amount of the actual loss caused by the disaster. The interest rate is 8 percent on loans for actual losses caused by disasters on and after October 1, 1981. The interest rate is 5 percent on loans for actual losses caused between September 30, 1978 and October 1, 1981. The program has been temporarily liberalized somewhat to ease the impact of the recent drought.

A farmer who cannot obtain credit elsewhere is eligible for an actual loss loan of up to $500,000 per disaster at an interest rate of 5% on the first $100,000 borrowed. Amounts above $100,000, up to the limit of $500,000, will be subject to an interest rate of 8%. Annual production loans are made to borrowers who cannot obtain credit elsewhere at the rates prevailing in the private market for similar type loans, provided they were indebted in the program on December 15, 1979. The Small Business Act of 1980, Public Law 96-302, made credit-worthy borrowers eligible for FmHA emergency disaster actual loss loans at a market rate of interest.

Economic emergency loans will be made from December 22, 1983 through September 30, 1984. This program enables the Secretary of Agriculture to insure or guarantee up to $600 million in loans to bona fide farmers and ranchers who are primarily and directly engaged in agricultural production. It allows them to continue their normal farming or ranching operations during the economic emergency which caused a serious lack of agricultural credit due to national or area-wide economic stress. The increased levels of the farm operating loan program should alleviate much of the future need for the economic emergency loan program.

The following table shows 1983 actual and estimated 1984 and 1985 number of loans and program levels. The guaranteed program levels reflect the full principal amount of the loan of which part is guaranteed by the U.S. Government.

The Rural development insurance fund was established on October 1, 1972, pursuant to section 116 of the Rural Development Act of 1972 (Public Law 92-419), approved August 30, 1972, which also provided for transfer of the assets and liabilities of the Agricultural credit insurance fund applicable to loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities to this fund.

The fund is used to insure or guarantee loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities, community facilities, and industrial development in rural areas.

The 1985 estimate includes savings from accelerating and improving the collection, processing and distribution of receipts, improving the control and timing of disbursements, and collecting delinquent debt, as part of 1985 budget management reforms.

The objective of the water and waste disposal loan program is to assist eligible borrowers (communities and others) by providing assistance to attain basic human amenities, to alleviate health hazards, to promote the orderly growth of rural areas by meeting the need for financing new and improved rural water and to waste disposal systems and to meet National Clean Water Standards and the requirements of the Safe Drinking Water Act.

Water and waste disposal development loans may be made to organizations including certain Indian tribes, corporations not operated for profit, and public and quasi-public agencies for the development, storage, treatment, purification, or distribution of water and/or the collection, treatment, or disposal of waste in rural areas. Loans are made for facilities which primarily serve farmers, ranchers, farm tenants, farm laborers, and other rural residents in rural areas which shall not include any areas in any city or town having a population in excess of 10,000 inhabitants according to the latest decennial census of the United States. These loans are repayable in terms not to exceed the useful life of the facility or 40 years, whichever is less. These loans bear interest not in excess of the current market yield for comparable term municipal obligations. Those loans made in areas where the median family income falls below the poverty level and the project is needed to meet health or sanitary standards bear interest not in excess of 5 percent. An intermediate rate, half way between the 5 percent and the market rate, applies when the median family income of the service area is not more than 85 percent of the nonmetropolitan median family income of the state.

The objective of the community facility loan program is to assist rural communities in developing or improving essential community facilities.

Community facility loans may be made to organizations including certain Indian tribes, corporations not operated for profit, and public and quasi-public agencies for the purposes of constructing, enlarging, extending, or otherwise improving community facilities which provide essential services to rural residents and contribute to the overall development of the community. Such facilities include those that provide fire and rescue services, health care, hydroelectric generation, and community, social, and cultural benefits. Loans are made for facilities which primarily serve farmers, ranchers, farm tenants, farm laborers, and other rural residents in rural areas which shall not include any area in any city or town having a population in excess of 20,000 inhabitants according to the latest decennial census of the United States. These loans are repayable in terms not to exceed the useful life of the facility or 40 years, whichever is less. These loans bear interest not in excess of the current market yield for comparable term municipal obligations. Those made in areas where the median family income falls below the poverty level and the project is needed to meet health or sanitary standards bear interest not in excess of 5 percent. An intermediate rate, half way between the 5 percent and the market rate, applies when the median family income of the service area is not more than 85 percent of the nonmetropolitan median family income of the state. An additional 2 percent is added to the interest rate for projects built on prime farmland when an optional site is available.

The objective of the guaranteed industrial development loan program is to facilitate the development or improvement of business and industry in rural areas, to stimulate economic growth, to create employment opportunities, and to improve the environmental climate.

No program is proposed for fiscal year 1985, because it has not demonstrated sufficient effectiveness to merit continuation.

The following table shows the number of loans and the program levels for 1983 actual and estimated for 1984 and 1985. The guaranteed program levels reflect the full principal amount of the loan of which part is guaranteed by the U.S. Government.

1. Technical assistance.—Technical assistance is provided through conservation districts to land users and decisionmakers, including individual landowners and operators, community groups, units of government, Indian tribes, and others for the planning of conservation programs and installation of needed conservation systems on the land, including design, layout, installation, and consultation services.

Combinations of needed soil and water conservation systems are planned in relation to each other to achieve well-balanced conservation programs. Both vegetative and structural measures are installed in harmony with the needs of the land for protection, treatment, and resource improvement. Plans reflect the decisions of the land users, community groups, and units of government concerning the use and treatment of land and water resources.

Technicians of the Soil Conservation Service explain the various soil conditions, develop alternative uses and treatments, help to evaluate the costs and returns of conservation work, and furnish assistance in applying the needed treatments. The technical services provided through conservation operations are instrumental in encouraging farmers, ranchers, and others to establish conservation practices.

Technical assistance is also provided to participants in the agricultural conservation cost-share program in establishing specified enduring practices and measures; to participants in other programs involving land-use adjustments and soil and water conservation; in support of the experimental rural clean water program; in the planning and application of soil and water conservation practices for which loans are made by the Farmers Home Administration; and to rural development committees. Technical assistance on special national soil, water, and related resource problems such as land-use planning, mine spoil restoration, and control of erosion, sedimentation, and agricultural-related pollutants, is also provided.

Beginning in 1981 a program of accelerated technical assistance was initiated in targeted geographical areas with severe erosion, water conservation, and water quality problems. In fiscal year 1983 a total of $12.5 million of the technical assistance funds was designated for this purpose. The targeted geographical areas include the Palouse area of Washington, Oregon, and Idaho; the Corn Belt area of Missouri and Iowa; the Southern Piedmont areas of Alabama and Georgia; West Tennessee; the irrigated areas of the Western States; and other areas with critical soil erosion and/or water resource problems.

2. Inventorying and monitoring.—Inventorying and monitoring provides soil, water, and related resource data for land conservation, use, and development; for guidance of community development to achieve a balanced rural-urban growth; for identification of prime agriculture-producing areas; for evaluating land-use changes and trends; and for use in protecting the quality of the natural resource base.

3. Soil surveys.—Soil surveys and investigations are made of the Nation's soil resources, with interpretations and publications that provide physical land facts needed for program development, resource conservation planning, installation of planned practices, and for use by other Federal, State, and local agencies in making land-use decisions.

4. Snow survey water forecasting.—Water supply forecasts prepared from snow surveys in western states are used in making efficient seasonal use of water for irrigation, flood control, fish and wildlife, recreation, power generation, municipal and industrial water supply, and water quality management.

5. Operation of plant materials centers.—The selection and evaluation of plant materials are made at 20 plant materials centers through field trials to determine their suitability for erosion control, conservation, and other environmental improvements.

6. Resource appraisal and program development.—Resource appraisal and program development is carried out to insure that programs administered by the Secretary of Agriculture for the conservation of soil, water, and related resources shall respond to the Nation's long-term needs. The Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act of 1977 provides for a report to the public and Congress at 5-year intervals beginning January 1980.

1. River basin surveys.—The Department participates in cooperative surveys and investigations in river basins primarily with State water resource agencies, but also with other interested Federal and local entities. Priority is given to studies which: (a) address erosion problems, protect the resource base, and improve water quality; (b) solve nonpoint source pollution problems, including erosion control, salinity, and water quality; (c) protect important farm and wetlands; and (d) improve irrigation efficiencies and conservation of water.

2. Flood plain management assistance.—Through this cooperative program, SCS assists local governments in carrying out flood hazard studies and provides technical assistance for the development of a flood plain management program. These detailed technical studies delineate flood-prone areas and floodways on maps for local use in implementing programs to reduce hazards to life and property from flooding.

3. Interagency coordination and program formulation.—The Department maintains representation on three river basin interagency committees, the Susquehanna and Delaware River Basin Commissions and other regional entities involved in water and related resource planning and coordination. These serve as points of contact in coordinating activities and programs of this Department and other Federal departments and agencies and the States in these basin areas. Department representatives keep concerned parties informed of the activities of the member agencies and facilitate interagency coordination.

The Department makes surveys of proposed small watershed projects, and work plans are prepared in cooperation with local sponsors. These plans outline the soil and water management problems in the watershed, the steps that have been or are authorized to be taken to alleviate these problems, the proposed works of improvement to be installed, the estimated benefits and costs, cost sharing, and operation and maintenance arrangements, and other facts necessary to justify Federal participation in project development. New planning starts in 1983 and 1984 will be primarily for watershed protection work. There will be no new planning starts in 1985.

This program provides for cooperation between the Federal Government and States and their political subdivisions in installing works of improvement: to reduce damage from floodwater, sediment, and erosion; for the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water, and; for the conservation and proper utilization of land. Loans are available through the Agricultural credit insurance fund of the Farmers Home Administration to local organizations to help them finance their share of the costs for certain works of improvement.

Watershed operations authorized by Public Law 534.—The Department cooperates with soil conservation districts and other local organizations in planning and installing works of improvement for flood prevention in 11 watersheds authorized by the Flood Control Act of 1944. The Federal Government shares the cost of works of improvement for flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife development.

The Department furnishes technical and, in certain instances, financial assistance to landowners to accelerate planning and installation of land treatment measures for runoff retardation, sediment control, and water management. Local sponsoring organizations must furnish all land easements and rights-of-way, water rights, all costs of works of improvement for nonagricultural water management measures (except for those related to fish and wildlife development and recreation) and operate and maintain all completed works of improvement.

Within the 11 authorized projects, 389 subwatershed areas have been identified for planning purposes. Installation progress in these subwatersheds is as follows:

Emergency watershed protection operations.—This program authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to undertake such emergency measures for runoff retardation and soil erosion prevention as may be needed to safeguard life and property from floods and the products of erosion on any watershed whenever natural elements or force causes a sudden impairment of that watershed. An emergency is considered to exist when a watershed is suddenly impaired by flood, fire, wind, earthquake, or other natural cause and consequently life and property are endangered by floodwater, erosion, or sediment discharge. The emergency area need not be declared a national disaster area to be eligible for emergency watershed protection. Emergency watershed protection is applicable to small scale, localized disasters as well as large scale disasters. State environmental, natural resource, fish and game, and other agencies participate in planning and coordinating emergency work.

Emergency operations on non-Federal land are sponsored by State or local organizations. Emergency operations supplement other Federal, State, and local resources committed to alleviate the hazard. Conditions essential to funding assistance are that a watershed impairment must have occurred suddenly as a result of a natural element or force and there exists a threat to life or property from floods or the products of erosion. Sponsoring organizations must provide needed land rights, water rights, and permits and accept responsibility for operation and maintenance, if required, all without cost to the emergency operation funds. The Forest Service does this work on lands it administers and on lands adjacent to Forest Service land which they administer under formal agreement. Funds are made available to the Forest Service from this appropriation.

Small watershed operations authorized by Public Law 566.—The Department provides technical and financial assistance to local organizations to install measures for watershed protection, flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife enhancement.

Watershed work plans are prepared by sponsoring local organizations with the Department's assistance or through State and local resources. After work plans are approved by the Department or Congress (projects where the estimated Federal contribution will exceed $5 million require congressional approval), technical services and financial assistance are provided for specific works of improvements.

Land treatment and engineering services are provided to approved projects in advance of construction. During the preconstruction state, surveys, and investigations are made and detailed designs, specifications, and engineering cost estimates are prepared for structural measures, land rights areas are identified, and the technical services are furnished for accelerating planning and application of land treatment measures.

On non-Federal lands, local sponsoring organizations must acquire water rights and furnish land, easements, and rights-of-way for all structural measures, except up to 50% of the cost of land rights allocated to public fish and wildlife and recreational developments which may be paid from Public Law 566 funds. Local sponsoring organizations have the option of contracting for construction work or may request SCS to do the contracting for them. Local sponsoring organizations must operate and maintain completed works of improvement and in the case of multiple-purpose structures, bear a share of the construction costs. On Federal lands, Federal agencies do this work on lands they administer with appropriate contributions made by local people who receive benefits.

The following tabulation shows the status of Public Law 566 projects:

Loan services.—Loans are made to local sponsoring organizations to finance the local cost of installing works of improvement in Public Law 534 and approved Public Law 566 watershed projects. Repayment with interest is required within 50 years after the principal benefits of improvements first become available. Loans are made from funds available for this purpose from the Agricultural credit insurance fund of the Farmers Home Administration. Loan services related to processing and making loans are financed from this appropriation.

This program provides cost-share and technical services to participating landowners or operators in the Great Plains area in the development and installation of long-term conservation plans and practices for their land under contracts entered into in prior years. It is a voluntary program which complements other conservation programs of the Department in 519 designated counties of 10 Great Plains States. Contracts with individual landowners range in time from 3 to 10 years.

Conservation plans made for each farm or ranch serve as a basis for cost sharing on approved practices. The fundamental purposes of this program are to achieve needed land use adjustments, conservation treatments, and economic stability of each unit. The planned work is installed under contract according to specific time schedules.

MAIN WORKLOAD FACTORS

Program participants:	1983 actual	1984 estimate	1985 estimate
Number of new contracts during year	929	720	400
Number of contracts serviced during year	7,477	7,000	6,500
Number of acres under contracts	21,438,635	20,069,000	18,635,500

As of September 30, 1983, there were 7,477 active contracts on hand. Co-landowners or operators finance the entire cost of installing recurring management-type practices and pay a specified part of the cost-shared practices installed on their land.

Program regulations provide that cost-share rates offered in any contract shall not exceed 80% of the cost of installing eligible practices within the designated county. The rates vary among States and practices due to differences in conservation and program needs. Cost sharing for irrigation practices in any one contract shall not exceed $10,000 or one-fourth of the total Federal obligation. There is a cost-sharing limitation of $35 thousand for any contract.

Each participant who signs a Great Plains program contract is responsible for implementing his plan of operations; and the Department is committed to furnishing the necessary technical help needed for design, layout, and other services. Co-landowners and operators are encouraged to make use of other available assistance under local, State, and Federal programs as a means of further improving their land and water resources.

This program provides for the Department to assist States, local units of government, groups and individuals in developing area plans for resource conservation and development (R.C. & D.).

R.C. & D. areas are provided technical and financial assistance to help States and local units of government prepare plans for resource development and economic improvement and to plan and install community-type conservation projects or measures. Financial contributions, loans, and other Federal assistance are used to help carry out measures specified in R.C. & D. area plans. Loans were made to qualified local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of installing the measures.

No funds will be available in 1985 to continue the R.C. & D. program.

The following tabulation shows the status of R.C. & D. areas authorized to receive technical and financial assistance.

Note.—Excludes $167 thousand in 1984 and 1985 for activities transferred to "Departmental administration", Department of Agriculture. Comparable amount for 1983 ($175 thousand) included above.

The major objectives of the Service are to protect the animal and plant resources of the Nation from destructive pests and diseases.

1. Plant disease and pest control.—Through inspections at ports of entry, insects, plant diseases, nematodes, and animal pests and diseases harmful to agriculture are prevented from entering this country. Cooperative programs with the States are conducted to prevent the spread of and/or to eradicate certain plant pests already established in this country. The 1985 estimates propose increases for Medfly, miscellaneous plant pests, and international programs, and decreases for boll weevil, golden nematode, grasshopper, gypsy moth, imported fire ant, noxious weeds, pink bollworm, and witchweed programs. The budget anticipates an increase of $1.8 million in fees for certifying export certificates for plants.

2. Animal disease and pest control.—Programs are conducted to keep communicable diseases of foreign origin from entering this country and to prevent the spread of diseases through interstate shipments of livestock or distribution of impure or impotent veterinary biologics. In cooperation with States, other programs are directed at the control and eradication of livestock diseases present in this country. Foreign animal diseases, should they enter this country, are rapidly diagnosed and outbreaks which are of economic significance and for which the Secretary of Agriculture declares a national emergency are controlled and eradicated. The animal care programs regulate the humane care and handling of approximately 40 million warmblooded commercial (pet) and laboratory animals, restrict animal fighting ventures and prohibit the soring of horses. Part of the program includes the exportation of healthy and sound livestock in a humane manner. The 1985 estimates propose to reduce the Federal contribution to the brucellosis eradication program. Funds, in addition to appropriated funds are proposed to be collected through a checkoff system to provide revenues for the program. This program revision will result in a cooperative Federal/State/Producer cost sharing system. Legislation will be submitted to Congress to implement the program.

Increases are proposed for international programs and miscellaneous animal diseases, and decreases for animal welfare and screwworm programs. The budget anticipates an increase of $0.4 million in fees so as to recover 100% of the costs associated with quarantining livestock entering the United States through animal quarantine facilities. This change equalizes the fees charged for importing all types of animals into the United States. An additional $1.4 million is anticipated in fees for export certificates for animals and animal semen.

3. Construction of facilities.—In 1981, the Congress appropriated funds under a separate account to APHIS, Buildings and facilities. The activity reflected shows obligations from prioryear moneys.

4. Contingencies.—Of the total annual amounts provided under this appropriation, $1.0 million has been apportioned for use pursuant to section 3679 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, for the control of outbreaks of insects, plant diseases, and animal diseases to the extent necessary to meet emergency conditions.

The 1985 estimate for APHIS includes savings from consolidation of Administrative support services as part of the 1985 Budget management reforms.

The FGIS provides for the establishment of official United States standards for grain, promotes the uniform application thereof by official inspection personnel, provides for an official inspection system for grain, and regulates the weighing and certification of the weight of grain shipped in interstate or foreign commerce as authorized by the U.S. Grain Standards Act (USGSA), as amended, and the regulations thereof, and the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946 (AMA).

Standardization activities to be performed during the year will include: establishing and updating U.S. grain standards and researching, developing and improving methods to ensure the accurate and uniform application of the standards.

Compliance activities include the delegation, designation and review of the official performance of State and private inspection agencies, licensing of personnel and investigation of technical violations.

The International Monitoring Staff will brief foreign buyers, assess foreign inspection and weighing techniques, and respond to foreign quality and quantity complaints.

An advisory committee consisting of members from the grain industry was established to advise the agency regarding efficient and economical implementations of the USGSA. The committee will terminate in September 1984 unless renewed.

Legislation has been submitted to Congress authorizing the continuation of user fees to standardization, compliance, and related activities.

The Federal Grain Inspection Service provides a uniform system for the inspection and weighing of grain. Services provided under this system are financed through a fee supported revolving fund.

Fee supported programs include direct services, supervision activities and administrative functions. Direct services include official grain inspection and weighing by FGIS employees at certain export ports as well as the inspection of U.S. grain shipped through Canada. FGIS supervises the inspection and weighing activities of its own employees. The agency also oversees the inspection and weighing of grain performed by employees of 8 delegated states and 83 designated state and private agencies. FGIS provides an appeal service of original grain inspections and a registration system for grain exporting firms. Through support from the Association of American Railroads and user fees, FGIS conducts a railroad track scale testing program. In addition, the agency provides grading services on request for rice and grain related products under the authority of the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946 (AMA).

Legislation has been submitted to the Congress authorizing the continuation of the collection of user fees for inspection and weighing services.

AMS activities assist producers and handlers of agricultural commodities by providing a variety of marketing services. These services continue to become more complex as the volume of agricultural commodities increases, as a greater number of new processed commodities are developed, and as the agricultural market structure undergoes extensive changes. Marketing changes include increased concentration in food retailing, direct buying, decentralization of processing, growth of interregional competition, vertical integration, and contract farming. The individual activities include:

1. Market news service.—The market news program provides the agricultural community with information pertaining to the movement of agricultural products. This nationwide service provides daily accounts of the supplies, demands and prices of over 400 commodities throughout the country.

Alternatives to the current system for disseminating market news are being sought through research in the area of telecommunications being conducted through an inter-agency agreement with the General Services Administration.

2. Inspection, grading and standardization.—Nationally uniform standards of quality for agricultural products are established and applied to specific lots of products to: promote confidence between buyers and sellers; reduce hazards in marketing due to misunderstandings and disputes arising from the use of nonstandard descriptions; encourage better preparation of uniform quality products for market; and furnish consumers with more definite information on the quality of products they buy. Grading services are provided for cotton, tobacco and naval stores. AMS also provides warehouse examination services for warehouses licensed under the U.S. Warehouse Act and those storing CCC-pledged or owned commodities. By conducting periodic unannounced examinations of warehouses licensed under the U.S. Warehouse Act and warehouses storing CCC-owned or pledged commodities the warehouse examination program provides: protection to farmers and others who warehouse their crops; the confidence in the fiscal soundness of warehouses necessary to insure that warehouse receipts are accepted as documents of title for loan collateral or in facilitating interstate commerce; and, a standard for sound warehouse operations.

Continuous in-plant inspection of all plants manufacturing liquid, frozen or dried egg products is provided with quarterly inspection of egg handlers and hatcheries to ensure the proper disposition of restricted eggs. Imported egg products are controlled to make certain that the inspection systems in exporting countries are equal to United States' standards.

A uniform government food specification system is maintained to provide a more efficient Federal food procurement service.

3. Market protection and promotion.—This program consists of: (1) the research and promotion programs which are designed to improve the competitive position and expand markets for cotton, eggs, wheat, milk and dairy products, flowers and plants, wool, mohair, and potatoes; (2) the administration of the U.S. Warehouse Act for cotton warehouses, Federal Seed Act, Plant Variety Protection Act, and the Export Fruit Acts; and (3) the administration of the Capper-Volstead Act and the Agricultural Fair Practices Act.

The U.S. Warehouse Act protects producers who store their cotton in public warehouses. AMS licenses public warehouses and conducts unannounced examinations of cotton warehouses. Legislative changes that will permit fees to be charged for cotton warehouse examination have been submitted to Congress as part of the AMS budget proposal for 1985.

Federal seed inspectors conduct tests on samples to help assure truthful labeling of agricultural and vegetable seeds sold in interstate commerce. Plant variety protection provides for the issuance of certificates to assure that developers of novel varieties of sexually reproduced plants have exclusive rights to sell, reproduce, import and export such varieties for a period of 17 years. The issuance of plant variety certificates is proposed to be user funded in 1985.

The Export Fruit Acts promote U.S. foreign trade of various fruits to protect the reputation of U.S. grown fruit in foreign markets and to prevent deception as to the quality of such products moving in foreign commerce.

The Capper-Volstead Act and the Agricultural Fair Practices Act protect producers against discriminatory practices by handlers, permits producers to engage in cooperative efforts, and assures that such cooperatives do not engage in practices that monopolize or restrain trade.

License fees are deposited in this special fund and are used to meet the costs of administering the Perishable Agricultural Commodities and the Produce Agency Acts (7 U.S.C. 491-497, 499a-499s). The current annual license fee is set at $180 plus $72 for each additional business facility operated by the applicant in excess of nine facilities, up to a maximum of $1,200.

The acts are intended to assure equitable treatment to farmers and others in the marketing of fresh and frozen fruits and vegetables. Commission merchants, dealers, and brokers handling these products in interstate and foreign commerce are licensed. Complaints of violations are investigated and violations dealt with by (a) informal agreements between the two parties, (b) formal decisions involving payment of reparation awards, and (c) suspension or revocation of license and/or publication of the facts. Payments in connection with amicable settlements to producers are estimated to amount to $9 million in 1985.

Under section 32 of the act of August 24, 1935, as amended (7 U.S.C. 612c), an amount equal to 30% of customs receipts collected during each calendar year is automatically appropriated for expanding outlets for nonbasic commodities. An amount equal to 30% of receipts collected on fishery products is transferred to the Department of Commerce. Most of the funds are transferred to the Food and Nutrition Service and are dedicated to commodity distribution activities under section 6 of the national school lunch and other authorities specified in the child nutrition appropriation. If commodity surpluses not now foreseen should develop, the reserves not currently programmed (unobligated balances) are available for surplus removal.

1. Expenses and refunds, inspection and grading of farm products.—The commodity inspection and grading programs provide grading, examination, and certification services for a wide variety of fresh and processed food commodities using federally approved grade standards and purchase specifications. Commodities graded include poultry, livestock, meat, dairy products, and fresh and processed fruits and vegetables. These programs use official grade standards which reflect the relative quality of a particular food commodity based on laboratory testing and characteristics such as taste, color, weight and physical condition. Producers voluntarily request the grading and certification service and it is provided on a fee for service basis.

Legislative changes that will permit fees to be charged for cotton and tobacco market news reports and plant variety protection service was submitted to Congress as part of the AMS overall budget proposal for 1984.

2. Marketing agreements and orders.—The marketing agreements and orders program establishes orderly marketing conditions for the sale of milk by setting minimum prices which handlers pay producers, and regulates the quality and quantity of produce sold in commercial channels. For 1985 a change in legislation is being proposed that will permit fees to be charged for administering the marketing agreement and order program.

¹ The administrative fund totals are comprised of 46 separate independent order accounts in 1983. The Marketing Service fund totals are comprised of 36 separate independent order accounts in 1983.

The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, as amended—under certain conditions—to issue Federal milk marketing orders establishing minimum prices which handlers are required to pay for milk purchased from producers.

Market administrators are responsible for carrying out locally the terms of specific marketing orders. Their operating expenses, partly financed by assessments on regulated handlers and partly by deductions from producers, are reported in these schedules. These funds are collected locally, deposited in local banks, and disbursed directly by the market administrator.

Each milk order is administered locally by a market administrator who is appointed by the Secretary. His staff is employed directly by the market administrator.

The expenses of each local office are met from an administrative fund and a marketing service fund which are prescribed in each order. The administrative fund is derived from prorated handler assessments. The marketing service fund of the individual order provides for the expense of disseminating market information to producers who are not members of a qualified cooperative. It also provides for the verification of the weights, sampling, and testing of milk from these producers. The cost of these services is borne by such producers.

The maximum rates for administrative assessment and for marketing services are set forth in each order and adjustments below these rates are made from time to time upon recommendations by the market administrator and upon approval of the Agricultural Marketing Service to provide reserves at about a 6-month operating level. Upon termination of any order, the statute provides for distributing the proceeds from net assets pro rata to contributing handlers or producers as the case may be.

Title I of the Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983 went into effect December 1, 1983, and will terminate March 31, 1985. Under the new law, the Secretary is required to provide for a reduction of 50 cents per hundredweight in the price received on all milk produced in the forty-eight contiguous States and marketed by producers for commercial use. The funds represented by the reduction will be used to partially offset the costs of the dairy price support paid diversion program. The market administrators collect these fees from producers and remit them to the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Milk sold by regulated handlers supplied almost 170 million persons in calendar year 1982.

The major objectives of the Food Safety and Inspection Service are to assure that meat and poultry products are wholesome, unadulterated, and properly labeled and packaged, as required by the Federal Meat Inspection Act and the Poultry Products Inspection Act.

The Meat and Poultry Inspection program of the Food Safety and Inspection Service provides continuous inplant inspection of all domestic plants preparing meat or poultry products for sale or distribution; reviews foreign inspection systems and establishments that prepare meat or poultry products for export to the United States; and provides technical and financial assistance to States which maintain meat and poultry inspection programs.

Legislation is again being proposed to provide for more efficient meat and poultry processing inspection methods.

The 1985 estimate includes savings from consolidation of administrative support services as part of 1985 budget management reforms.

The child nutrition programs are authorized by the National School Lunch Act and the Child Nutrition Act of 1966. Through State agencies, Federal assistance in cash and commodities is provided for use in preparing and serving nutritious meals to children. This assistance is provided through the school lunch, school breakfast, summer food service and child care food programs. Funds are also made available for nutrition studies and State administrative expenses. Proposed legislation will allow wider State discretion in allotting child care feeding and summer feeding fund.

The goal of this program is to assure the integrity of the livestock, meat, and poultry markets and the marketplace in order to protect producers against unfair, deceptive, or discriminatory practices as well as those that are predatory or monopolistic in nature. Consumers and members of the livestock, poultry, and meat industries are also protected against unfair business practices in the marketing of meat and poultry, and from restrictions on competition which could unduly affect meat and poultry prices.

The Agricultural Cooperative Service serves as the national focal point and storehouse for information about farmer cooperatives. The major missions of the agency include research on cooperative problems and issues, provisions of technical assistance and advice to existing and newly emerging cooperative associations, collection and dissemination of cooperative statistics, and preparation and distribution of educational materials on cooperatives.

The agency's research program includes studies of economic, financial, organizational, managerial, legal, social, and policy related issues that affect cooperatives.

Technical assistance is provided in response to requests, usually from cooperative boards of directors or organizational steering committees who may represent from a small group up to thousands of farmers, and includes feasibility analysis, merger and other organizational studies, strategic assessment and planning, and review of operations and performance of the range of cooperative activities.

Data on numbers of cooperatives, memberships, business volumes, and financial condition are collected and analyzed to detect changes in structure, operations, and growth trends of cooperatives. Educational materials are prepared by ACS to promote the knowledge of cooperative principles and practices as a self-help means to increase family farm income.

The 1985 estimates propose reductions for the international marketing programs, the development of financial performance criteria and reductions in cooperative research efforts. ACS will continue to render tech-

The 155 national forests, 19 national grasslands, and 18 land utilization projects located in 44 States, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are managed under multiple use and sustained yield principles. The natural resources of outdoor recreation, range, timber, watershed, and wildlife are utilized in a planned combination that will best meet the needs of the Nation, without impairing productivity of the land and will be environmentally acceptable. These management and utilization principles are recognized in the Multiple-Use Sustained-Yield Act of June 12, 1960 (74 Stat. 215). Work programs and budget estimates are related to meeting the increased demands for specific National Forest resource needs through 1985 and for long-term objectives for the year 2020. Increases are provided in the budget for further attainment of these program objectives.

1. Land and resource protection.—Provides for the protection and/or maintenance of National Forest System users, resources, lands and facilities, including roads and trails, and for program administration to acquire, through exchange, those lands within National Forest boundaries that meet the criteria for inclusion in the National Forest System.

2. Renewable resource management and utilization.—Provides for the management and utilization of the timber, wildlife and fish, range, recreation, watershed, and soil resources on National Forest System lands.

3. General administration.—This activity represents that share of the cost which contributes to the support for accomplishment of programs financed from Research, State and Private Forestry, National Forest System, Construction, and Land Acquisition appropriations.

4. Youth conservation corps.—The objectives of the Youth Conservation Corps Act of 1970, as amended (Public Law 93-408, Sept. 3, 1974), are to provide: (1) gainful employment of America's youth, ages 15 through 18, during the summer months in a healthful outdoor atmosphere; (2) further development and maintenance of natural resources of the United States by the youth; and (3) an opportunity for understanding and appreciation of the Nation's natural environment and heritage.

This account has been adjusted to reflect management savings resulting from the consolidation of administrative support services; the closing of certain printing and duplicating facilities; and the closing of a travel office. Additional budget savings are anticipated due to completion of efficiency reviews of federally-performed commercial activities.

1. Construction of facilities—(a) Recreation facilities.—To provide facilities necessary to safely meet increased recreation demand without sacrificing environmental values and without unduly impinging upon other resource uses of the National Forests. Emphasis will be in areas of higher populations to assist in the conservation of energy.

(b) Other facilities.—To provide for construction and acquisition of fire, administrative, and other improvements and related facilities necessary to carry out National Forest and State and private forestry programs. Includes fire lookouts, offices, dwellings and barracks for employee housing, service, and storage buildings, insectories, tree nursery buildings, dams, and other forest resource management projects. Efforts to make buildings more energy efficient (retrofit) will be continued. Also includes acquisition of land and interests therein for administrative purposes where buildings are already onsite and are the primary reason for acquisition, or when planned as part of a total administrative site development project.

(c) Research construction.—To provide for construction, alteration, and improvement of research laboratories and related facilities, and for procurement and installation of necessary initial equipment needed to put the facility into operating condition. An effort to make research facilities more energy efficient (retrofit) will be undertaken.

2. Road and trail construction—(a) Road and trail construction.—Roads and trails are essential to the protection and management of the National Forest Systems, as well as providing access to National Forest System areas for recreation and utilization of their resources. Of the revenues received annually from National Forest activities, 10% is being transferred to the General Fund with a comparable amount appropriated to the construction program for road and trail construction activities.

(b) Timber purchaser construction.—Roads may be constructed and/or reconstructed by a timber purchaser who in turn receives credit against timber value as reimbursement. These roads are those required within a timber sale area specifically for the removal of the timber, but which will remain on the National Forest development road system for resource management purposes after the timber sale contract is completed. (16 U.S.C. 535, item (2); section 9 of Public Law 93-378; and section 3(a) of Public Law 93-344.)

Twenty-five percent of the amounts allowed any timber purchaser for the construction of roads are paid to the States under provisions of 16 U.S.C. 500 and Public Law 98-175.

This account has been adjusted to reflect management savings resulting from the consolidation of administrative support services and the closing of certain printing and duplicating facilities. Additional budget savings are anticipated due to completion of efficiency reviews of federally-performed commercial activities.

Legislation is proposed to change the method of calculating the annual payment to the States from National Forest receipts. Under existing legislation, 25 percent of all money received from the National Forests during any fiscal year is paid to the States in which the forests are located, for the benefit of public schools and public roads of the county or counties in which such National Forests are situated. This proposed legislation would make these payments more equitable by computing them on a tax equivalency basis rather than a percentage of receipts.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS, FOREST SERVICE

excess sources, and hire of such vehicles; operation and maintenance of aircraft, the purchase of not to exceed 4 for replacement only, and acquisition of [49] 45 aircraft from excess sources; (b) services pursuant to the second sentence of section 706(a) of the Organic Act of 1944 (7 U.S.C. 2225), and not to exceed $100,000 for employment under 5 U.S.C. 3109; (c) uniform allowances for each uniformed employee of the United States Forest Service, not in excess of $400 annually; (d) purchase, erection, and alteration of buildings and other public improvements (7 U.S.C. 2250); (e) acquisition of land, waters, and interests therein, pursuant to the Act of August 3, 1956 (7 U.S.C. 428a); and (f) for expenses pursuant to the Volunteers in the National Forest Act of 1972 (16 U.S.C. 558a, 558d, 558a note).

【None of the funds made available under this Act shall be obligated or expended to change the boundaries of any region, to abolish any region, to move or close any regional office for research, State and private forestry, and National Forest System administration of the Forest Service, Department of Agriculture, without the consent of the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations and the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry in the United States Senate and the Committee on Agriculture in the United States House of Representatives.】

【None of the funds made available under this Act shall be obligated or expended to adjust annual recreational residence fees to an amount greater than that annual fee in effect at the time of the next to last fee adjustment, plus 50 per centum. In those cases where the currently applicable annual recreational residence fee exceeds that adjusted amount, the Forest Service shall credit to the permittee that excess amount, times the number of years that that fee has been in effect, to offset future fees owed to the Forest Service.】

Any appropriations or funds available to the Forest Service may be advanced to the National Forest System appropriation for the emergency rehabilitation of burned-over lands under its jurisdiction.

Appropriations and funds available to the Forest Service shall be available to comply with the requirements of section 313(a) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended (33 U.S.C. 1323(a)).

【The appropriation structure for the Forest Service may not be altered without advance approval of the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations.】

Funds appropriated to the Forest Service shall be available for assistance to or through the Agency for International Development and the Office of International Cooperation and Development in connection with forest and rangeland research and technical information and assistance in foreign countries.

Funds previously appropriated for timber salvage sales may be recovered from receipts deposited for use by the applicable national forest and credited to the Forest Service Permanent Appropriations to be expended for timber salvage sales from any national forest.

Provisions of section 702(b) of the Department of Agriculture Organic Act of 1944 (7 U.S.C. 2257) shall apply to appropriations available to the Forest Service only to the extent that the proposed transfer is approved by the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations in compliance with the reprogramming procedures contained in House Report 97-942.

【No funds appropriated to the Forest Service shall be transferred to the Working Capital Fund of the Department of Agriculture without the approval of the Chief of the Forest Service.】

The Working capital fund was established by the act of August 3, 1956 (16 U.S.C. 579b), as amended by the act of October 23, 1962 (16 U.S.C. 579b). It is a self-sustaining revolving fund which provides services to national forests, experiment stations, and when necessary, to other Federal agencies, and as provided by law, to State and private agencies and persons who cooperate with the Forest Service in fire control and other authorized programs.

The forestry related supply and support services provided by the Working capital fund in 1983 included:

Equipment service which owns, operates, maintains, replaces, and repairs common use motor driven and similar equipment. This equipment is rented to administrative units, that is, national forests, experiment stations, and other units, and in some cases to the other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of operation, repair and maintenance, management, and depreciation. The rates also include an increment which provides additional cash which, when added to depreciation earnings and the residual value of equipment, provides sufficient funds to replace the equipment.

Aircraft service which operates, maintains, and repairs Forest Service owned aircraft used in fire surveillance and suppression and in other Forest Service programs. The aircraft are rented to national forests, experiment stations, and in some cases to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of depreciation, operation, maintenance, repair, and improvements in the airworthiness of the aircraft. Aircraft replacement costs are financed from either appropriated funds or the Forest Service Working capital fund, or a combination of both.

Supply service which operates the following common services:

Photo reproduction laboratories which store, reproduce, and supply aerial photographs, aerial maps, and other photographs of national forest lands. The photographic reproductions are sold to national forests, experiment stations, and others at cost.

Sign shops which manufacture and supply special signs for the national forests for use in regulating traffic and as information to the public and other users of the national forests. The signs are sold to national forests and experiment stations at cost.

Subsistence which prepares and serves meals to Forest Service crews working in areas where adequate public restaurant facilities are not available.

Nurseries which operate forest tree nurseries and cold storage facilities for storage of tree and seed stock and a seed extractory. Tree seed is procured, cleaned, bagged, and stored in refrigerated facilities. Tree and seed stock is sold to national forests, States, and other Federal agencies at cost.

Twenty-five percent of all collections under 16 U.S.C. 576b are paid to the States under the provisions of 16 U.S.C. 500 and Public Law 98-175.

This account has been adjusted to reflect management savings resulting from the consolidation of administrative support services and the closing of certain printing and duplicating facilities. Additional budget savings are anticipated due to completion of efficiency reviews of federally performed commercial activities.

SEC. 602. Funds in this Act available to the Department of Agriculture shall be available for uniforms or allowances therefor as authorized by law (5 U.S.C. 5901-5902).

SEC. 603. Not less than $1,500,000 of the appropriations of the Department of Agriculture in this Act for research and service work authorized by the Acts of August 14, 1946, July 28, 1954, and September 6, 1958 (7 U.S.C. 427, 1621-1629; 42 U.S.C. 1891-1893), shall be available for contracting in accordance with said Acts.

SEC. 604. No part of the funds contained in this Act may be used to make production or other payments to a person, persons, or corporations who harvest or knowingly permit to be harvested for illegal use, marihuana, or other such prohibited drug-producing plants on any part of lands owned or controlled by such persons or corporations.

SEC. 605. Advances of money from any appropriation in this Act for the Department of Agriculture may be made by authority of the Secretary of Agriculture to chiefs of field parties.

SEC. 606. New obligational authority provided for the following appropriation items in this Act shall remain available until expended: Scientific Activities Overseas (Foreign Currency Program); Public Law 480; Watershed and Flood Prevention Operations; Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, Buildings and Facilities; Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Salaries and Expenses funds made available to county committees; the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation Fund; and Buildings and Facilities, Food and Drug Administration.

This does not preclude appropriate payment of indirect costs on grants and contracts with such institutions when such indirect costs are computed on a similar basis for all agencies for which appropriations are provided in this Act.

1. Economic statistics programs—(a) Economic censuses.—The economic censuses provide data on manufactures, mineral industries, retail and wholesale trades and service industries, construction, and transportation every fifth year, covering calendar years ending in two and seven.

The 1985 budget provides for the completion of activities for the 1982 Economic Censuses. Operations will include computer editing, analytical review, and correction of data; publication of preliminary and final reports of census results; evaluation studies; and data processing collection activities for the survey of minority-owned businesses and census of manufactures follow-on surveys. Planning will be initiated for the 1987 censuses.

(b) Census of governments.—This census collects State and local government data on taxes, tax valuations, governmental receipts, expenditures, indebtedness, and number of employees. This census is taken every fifth year for calendar years ending in two and seven.

PERIODIC CENSUSES AND PROGRAMS—Continued

The 1985 budget includes the first funding increment for the 1987 census and provides for overall planning, research, questionnaire and sample design.

(c) Census of agriculture.—This census covers the agricultural sector of the economy and includes the census of irrigation.

The 1985 budget provides for completion of the tabulation, review, and publication of the Volume 2 Subject Series; preparation of final user data tapes and microfiche; and continued assistance to data users (through workshops, interpretative reports and other user-related activities). Work will continue on improved linkage of data for the food and fiber industry. The 1985 budget also includes the first year of funding for the 1987 Census of Agriculture.

2. Demographic statistics programs—(a) Intercensal demographic estimates.—This program provides updated population and per capita income estimates for approximately 38,500 general purpose governmental units. The data are used for equitable allocation of funds under the General Revenue Sharing Act and for other purposes.

(b) Decennial census.—The decennial census of population and housing involves the enumeration of the total population of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, Canal Zone, and other areas of U.S. sovereignty or jurisdiction.

The 1985 budget provides for continued planning, testing, and evaluation of techniques and methodologies identified as feasible approaches to the 1990 census.

3. Geographic support.—This activity provides for the geographic requirements of the various periodic programs and involves accurate identification of both political and statistical areas, preparation of maps, and maintenance of geographic base files.

The 1985 budget provides for continued work on the conversion to a new automated geographic support system.

4. Data processing systems.—This program provides the resources necessary to improve the data processing installation of the Bureau of the Census.

1. Economic analysis.—The objective of this activity is to provide a clear picture of the state of the economy through the preparation, development, and interpretation of the economic accounts of the United States. The principal programs are:

(a) National economic accounts.—The national income and product accounts, summarized by the gross national product (GNP), provide an up-to-date overall view of national production, its distribution, and its use as shown by the interrelated receipts and expenditures of producers, consumers, investors, government, and the foreign customers of the United States.

(b) Analysis of business trends.—This work includes surveys of business investment, econometric models of the U.S. economy, a system of business cycle indicators, and analyses of the economic situation.

(c) International economic accounts.—The balance of payments accounts provide a comprehensive and detailed view of economic transactions between the United States and foreign countries. The international investment accounts consist of the preparation, development, and analysis of estimates of U.S. direct investment abroad and foreign direct investment in the United States.

2. Industrial economics.—Major functions of this activity are being transferred to the International Trade Administration with the remainder being included in the Policy support activity.

3. Policy support.—The objective of this activity is to support the Secretary, Under Secretary for Economic Affairs, and other Government officials in interpreting the state of the economy, and on matters relating to economic policy, including emphasis on domestic macroeconomic policy. The 1985 request provides for an increase of $470 thousand to develop a policy-oriented economic forecasting capability to support the Secretary's participation in the Cabinet Council on Economic Affairs and provide a sector-specific perspective to the Government's macroeconomic forecasts.

4. Productivity, technology, and innovation.—The objective of this activity is to provide assistance for private sector cooperative research and development, facilitate commercial development of innovations, support private sector productivity improvement efforts, and eliminate policy barriers to the competitiveness of U.S. industry. The 1985 request provides for an increase of $365 thousand to: (1) support additional evaluation, promotion, and licensing of commercially valuable Government inventions, and (2) support additional foreign patent filings and increasing costs of foreign and U.S. patent prosecution and maintenance.

Reimbursable.—ESA, upon request by other Federal agencies, private individuals, and firms, provides economic and statistical data and analysis on a reimbursable and advance payment basis. Funds received for these services cover the cost of performing this work. ESA is authorized to perform these services under 31 U.S.C. 686 and 15 U.S.C. 1526. This account includes activities that prior to 1984 were financed through Special Studies, Services, and Projects.

The activities of the International Trade Administration in the Department of Commerce are designed to promote an improved trade posture for U.S. industry in a manner consistent with national security and foreign and economic policy.

1. Trade development.—Analyzes competitiveness of U.S. industries; prepares competitive assessments and analyses in support of industry programs and trade policy; strengthens planning and implementation of trade policy and promotion programs directed toward industry sectors. Trade Adjustment Assistance to firms is proposed for termination in 1985. In 1985, an increase of 48 positions and $3,007,000 is requested for the purpose of strengthening ITA's industry sector analysis capabilities.

2. International economic policy.—Develops regional and multilateral economic policies; provides marketing services directly and through the Foreign Commercial Service which will assist U.S. industries to expand exports; identifies long range trade and investment problems and develops remedial strategies.

3. Trade administration.—Through administration of the Export Administration Act, assures that export activity is consistent with national security, foreign policy objectives, and U.S. material and commodity requirements; enforces the law against participation in foreign boycotts; assures the availability of industrial resources for national defense and other priority programs under the authority of the Defense Production Act; investigates antidumping and countervailing duty cases to ensure compliance with applicable U.S. statutes; and administers certain other statutory programs relating to imports and foreign trade zones. In 1985, an increase of 134 positions and $9,000,000 is requested to stop the illegal transfer of technology, to develop and maintain an up-to-date computerized tracking system for export license applications, and to comply with the requirements of the Export Administration Act concerning foreign availability and distribution licensing.

4. U.S. and foreign commercial services.—Counsels U.S. businessmen on exporting through 48 U.S. Commercial Service District Offices in the United States and Foreign Commercial Service Offices in 66 countries overseas. Goals are to increase the number of U.S. firms that export and the number of foreign markets to which they export, to provide business with information on U.S. and foreign government procurements through the Commerce Business Daily; to provide export market information; to promote and facilitate participation of U.S. firms in trade shows; and to encourage and sponsor additional involvement by the private sector and the States in export promotion efforts.

Reimbursable program.—Includes activities that were previously financed through "Special studies, services, and projects" and "Contributions, educational and cultural exchange," International Trade Administration. A portion of the cost of overseas trade promotions and export information services is offset by user fees.

In its leadership role of developing private sector market opportunities and coordinating Federal minority business development programs, the Minority Business Development Agency (MBDA) assists minority citizens in becoming involved in the American business system. In 1985, MBDA's goals are designed to make specific progress toward increased minority participation in business ownership through increased minority business enterprise formation, expansion, and reduced failure rates. MBDA will also increase minority business participation through increased cooperation with State and local governments and private sector organizations in support of minority business development. In 1985, MBDA will continue a cost-sharing program targeted at $12 million, for a total program level of $62 million.

1. Enterprise development.—Within this activity is MBDA's primary delivery system—the Minority Business Development Centers (MBDC). The MBDC component is designed to coordinate, within at least 100 Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas (SMSA's), all resources available for minority business assistance and to provide client firms with direct management and technical assistance. Incorporated into the MBDC line of services will be a minority export development component which will provide consultant services to minority business enterprise (MBE) clients in generating new export sales. As a complementary part of the Enterprise Development activity, Technology Commercialization activities will provide a specialized link to new technologies, financing and market commercialization for qualified minority firms.

2. Resource development.—MBDA's private sector component assists minority firms in taking advantage of expanded market, capital, and management opportunities available through private corporations. Trade associations provide support to minority firms by facilitating access to information and services. Another component of the Resource Development activity is the public sector program consisting of the following: Offices of Minority Business Enterprise which promote and mobilize State and local government resources in behalf of minority business, Federal coordination through the Cabinet Council on Commerce and Trade, and local networks of Minority Business Opportunity Committees. Consequently, this component will provide access to public sector procurement opportunities nationwide for minority business entrepreneurs (MBE's).

3. Advocacy, research, and information.—Within this activity, MBDA provides advocacy efforts, a research program, and information systems for formulating policy decisions and for reducing information barriers to improve the participation rate of minority-owned businesses in the U.S. economy.

1. Ocean and coastal programs.—Provides for the management and development of the marine environment and its resources; the conservation, rational use, and charting of the Nation's coastal regions; production of aeronautical and nautical charts; and geodetic surveys. In 1985 the Coastal Zone Management program is proposed for transfer to the "Operations, research, and facilities" appropriation. The administration will submit a new proposal to increase the price of aeronautical and nautical charts to reflect production costs and market value. This change will increase receipts by $4,315,000 in 1985. Decreases include reductions in ocean mineral activities and ocean and Great Lakes research and services. Termination is proposed for the ocean thermal energy conversion regulatory activities, undersea research program, the Sea Grant program, and Coastal Zone Management grants.

2. Marine fishery resource programs.—Provides for the management and conservation of the nation's living marine resources, marine mammals, and endangered species stocks; and encourages the increased use of the resources through fishery product quality and safety research. Decreases will reduce information collection and analyses and related research; regulatory and management operations including environmental impact analysis, and regional councils; and the fishery development and research program. The aquaculture research, salmon vessel buy back, and fisheries grant programs are being terminated.

3. Atmospheric programs.—Provides timely and accurate meteorologic, hydrologic, and oceanographic warnings, forecasts, and planning information to ensure the safety of the population, mitigate property losses, and improve the economic efficiency of the Nation. Conducts research in atmospheric and hydrologic processes and conditions to improve short-term and long-term predictions of environmental changes. Additional funding in 1985 provides for the final phase of a computer replacement for the National Weather Service. Specialized weather services which can be conducted by the private sector will be reduced or eliminated. NWS also proposes to consolidate several regional headquarters; reduce noncritical staffing at some weather service offices; eliminate regional hydrologists; reduce data buoy and weather modification and solar-terrestrial services and research.

Increases provide for improvements in the next generation of geostationary weather satellites to improve short range severe weather forecasts and warnings; the transfer of operation of the Gilmore Creek facility from NASA; and launch costs for geostationary spacecraft. A decrease associated with changing from a two to a one polar-orbiting weather satellite system is proposed.

5. Program support.—Provides for the administrative management of NOAA and for the operational and logistics support of ships, marine centers, and aircraft to support NOAA missions. Decreases in 1985 include reduction of administrative support activities, and the number of ships and days at sea, savings resulting from the substitution of charters for the fisheries research fleet, and from management efficiency reviews (OMB circular A-76). Funding for the National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere will be terminated in 1985.

This appropriation provides for administration, management, beneficial use, protection, and development of the land and water resources of the Nation's coastal zone, by providing the following grants to States for the planning and management of their coastal areas: 1) States assistance programs to support ongoing State and territorial coastal management activities and to mitigate impacts of Outer Continental Shelf oil and gas production and coastal transportation energy resources; 2) estuarine sanctuaries grants to acquire, develop and operate estuarine sanctuaries for studying processes occurring within coastal estuaries; 3) grants to support the designation and management of ocean waters as marine sanctuaries to preserve or restore the sites for conservational, recreational, ecological, or esthetic value; 4) policy coordination to assist States and territorial governments in developing and implementing coastal zone management programs; to coordinate Federal activities that impact coastal zone management programs; and to develop NOAA policy positions on Outer Continental Shelf oil and gas lease sales, marine transportation, and spills of oil and hazardous materials.

In 1985, the Coastal Zone Management program is proposed to be transferred to the "Operations, research, and facilities" appropriation.

This fund provides compensation to fishing vessel owners who sustain losses or damage to their gear or vessels while engaged in any fishery subject to the exclusive fishery management authority of the United States under the Fishery Conservation and Management Act of 1976, provided that the loss is attributable to any foreign vessel or its crew or fishing gear, or a natural disaster. An appropriation will not be required in 1985 because a sufficient unobligated balance will be available to cover anticipated claims.

This program provides for loans to vessel operators at subsidized rates for purchasing, constructing, equipping, maintaining, repairing, or operating new or used commercial fishing vessels or gear. Public Law 98-44 extended the expiration of this fund, established under the Fish and Wildlife Act of 1956, to September 30, 1984. The administration is not seeking reauthorization of this program in 1985. Beginning in 1985, receipts from foreign fishing fees will be appropriated each year to NOAA "Operations, research and facilities" and Coast Guard "Operating expenses" to offset costs of the Magnuson Fishery Conservation and Management Act of 1976, as amended (Public Law 94-265).

This fund provides for payment to vessel owners and crews to compensate for certain financial losses sustained as a result of foreign seizures of American fishing vessels found within 200 miles of their coasts. Through 1977, funds in this account were derived from Federal appropriations and fees from vessel owners. Beginning in 1978, the basic annual appropriation was discontinued, although appropriated funds can be requested if the fund's balance is depleted.

The Airport and Airway Improvement Act of 1982 (49 U.S.C. 2205) authorizes use of the Airport and Airway Trust Fund for financing the Aviation Weather Services program administered by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) of the Department of Commerce. NOAA provides meteorological observations, forecasts, warnings, and advisories to the Federal Aviation Administration in support of the National Airspace System. In 1984, the Congress appropriated $27,000,000 for this program, and continuation is proposed in 1985.

The Office administers laws governing the granting of patents for inventions and the registration of trademarks.

Public Law 97-247 provides for a portion of Office operating costs to be recovered through user fee revenues. Receipts deposited in the general fund of the Treasury from fees were $28.5 million in 1982. Beginning in 1983, all fees are retained in the PTO appropriation. Collected fees are available along with appropriated funds. Collections were $82.7 million in 1983 and esimated to be $88.5 million in 1984 and $98.6 million in 1985.

Activities of the Office fall into the following areas:

1. Patent process.—Applications are examined to determine inventor entitlements to a patent for the claimed invention. Patent application examination also includes quasi-judicial review in appeal and interference proceedings, and the publication of issued patents.

The 1985 increases support programs to reduce patent application pendency time to 18 months by 1987; to further patent process automation with the completion of Stage I (one examining group) of the Automation Master Plan and the initiation of Stage II, the automation of the remaining examining groups.

Key patent application workload and performance data are:

	1982 actual	1983 actual	1984 estimate	1985 estimate

Total pendency in Office, all applications (in months).....	24.2	25.5	25.3	24.0

¹ Includes inventory adjustment (+6,440) in 1983 to reflect new abandonment counting procedures.

2. Trademark process.—Provides for the examination of applications to determine whether the statutory criteria for the Federal registration of the trademark or service mark have been met. When the criteria are met, a registration is printed and issued to the applicant. Examination also includes inter partes proceedings involving oppositions, cancellations, and interferences. The 1985 increases will reduce pendency and backlog in the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board. The automated trademark system to be completed in 1984 will be maintained.

Key trademark application workload and performance data are:

¹ Includes inventory adjustment (+3,290) 1982, (+4,885) 1983.

3. Information dissemination.—Provides materials and services to examiners and the public to assist in examination of patent and trademark applications, and in the transfer of technological information. Included are the maintenance of subject matter search files of prior art documents; maintenance of a scientific library and public search room; preparation of copies of patents, trademark registrations, and official documents, assignment of patents and trademark rights; and administration of printing.

The 1985 increases provide funds to support a fully automated patent assignment system and to develop an automated system to maintain classification data.

4. Executive direction and administration.—Supports management and administration of the Office. The 1985 increases support the development, management, operation, and enhancement of the PTO automated systems to carry out the initiatives identified in the Automation Master Plan.

The National Bureau of Standards (NBS) is responsible for the development and maintenance of a system of measurements required to support the Nation's economy. NBS efforts are organized into the following program activities:

1. Measurement and Engineering Research and Standards.—(a) Measurement research and standards.—This subactivity includes programs in the areas of fundamental physical measurements and standards, radiation measurements and standards, analytical chemical measurements and standards, materials characterization processing and performance, chemical properties and processes, measurement technology transfer, and applied measurement programs. In 1985, the budget for measurement technology transfer reflects conversion of the measurement assurance program and the national voluntary laboratory accreditation program to reimbursable activities. The 1985 budget will fund the development of advanced primary standards and measurement methods to improve industrial productivity and competitiveness through improved process and quality control; the development of a scientific basis for the use of biotechnology in chemical production and related industries; and the design and installation of a cold neutron source to provide a unique capability for measuring the properties, performance, and processing of high technology materials.

(b) Engineering measurements and standards.—This subactivity includes programs in the areas of building research, signals and systems metrology, chemical engineering metrology, engineering and product standards, and mathematical sciences. In 1985, the building research program will be terminated.

(c) Computer sciences and technology.—This subactivity provides for the establishment of government-wide automated data processing (ADP) standards and technical support for U.S. interests in international standards development. This program will be reduced by $5 million in 1985.

(d) Core measurement research for new technologies.—This subactivity includes metallurgy programs supportive of metals processing research, semiconductor programs, and the automated manufacturing research program which consists of automated manufacturing interface standards, mechanical engineering metrology, and an automated manufacturing research facility.

(e) Fire research.—This subactivity provides scientific and technical information used in fire hazard assessment. This program will be terminated in 1985.

2. Competence and Central Technical Support.—(a) Technical competence fund.—This subactivity supports long-term experimental and/or theoretical efforts in science and technology.

SCIENTIFIC AND TECHNICAL RESEARCH AND SERVICES—Continued

(b) Central technical support.—This subactivity includes the research associate program, computing support, and resources transferred to the working capital fund for purchase of general purpose equipment and production of standard reference materials. The 1985 increase will fund two management initiatives: the procurement of a scientific computer for use by NBS and NOAA and the replacement of the aging telephone system at the Gaithersburg site.

3. National Technical Information Service.—Since 1984 this activity has been included in the Economic and Statistical Analysis appropriation.

The National Telecommunications and Information Administration is the principal executive branch adviser to the President on domestic and international communications policy. Additionally, it manages the Federal radio frequency spectrum and performs extensive research in telecommunications sciences.

1. Domestic, Federal and international policies.—(a) Domestic and Federal policies.—In 1985, NTIA will continue to assist the FCC in its implementation of new common carrier legislation and with analysis of new and emerging distribution technologies. A new program will be initiated to develop policies for worldwide digital communications networks. Also, NTIA will continue its efforts in the identification and analysis of issues affecting emergency communications planning.

(b) International policies.—In 1985, NTIA will continue the development and advocacy of policies for the advancement of U.S. interests in the international telecommunications area. In coordination with the Department of State, the agency will continue to discharge the Presidential responsibility for oversight of the Communications Satellite Corporation (COMSAT).

2. Spectrum management.—(a) Spectrum plans and policies.—In 1985, NTIA will continue to prepare for, participate in, and implement the results of international, regional, and national conferences addressing spectrum allocation and utilization. Also, NTIA will formulate, in coordination with the FCC, plans and policies for efficient use of the spectrum.

(b) Spectrum management, analysis and operations.—In 1985, NTIA will continue to authorize frequency assignments, review proposed Federal telecommunications systems, conduct frequency band studies and compliance activities.

3. Telecommunication sciences research.—(a) Spectrum research and analysis.—In 1985, NTIA will conduct applied research and analysis as a basis for improving the efficiency of spectrum use.

(b) Systems and networks research and analysis.—In 1985, NTIA will assess and develop domestic and international technical performance standards to facilitate competition in telecommunications products and services. Additionally, analytical methods and automated models will be employed to assist in the development of credible and defensible positions before international conferences and committees. A new program will be initiated to develop standards for worldwide digital communications networks.

4. Telecommunications applications.—In 1985, the budget request assumes no tasks will be performed under this activity. The Administration continues to support the abolishment of the public telecommunications facilities grant program. Accordingly, no grant funds are requested for 1985.

The public telecommunications facilities program has provided grants for planning and construction of non-commercial telecommunications facilities in areas not previously served by public television and radio. Since over 95% of the United States currently receives public broadcast programming, funding for this grant program is not requested in 1985.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE—MILITARY

MILITARY PERSONNEL

ACTIVE FORCES

These appropriations finance the personnel costs of the active duty appropriations for the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force. Changes in financial requirements are primarily related to military personnel strengths. In addition, these appropriations will finance for the first time in 1985, the future retirement benefits of the current active forces. While most of the entitlements financed by these appropriations are set by statute, the estimates reflect continuing efforts to improve management including implementation of audit recommendations, improved management of military travel, and prudent use of subsistence, bonus programs, and other pay programs.

The numbers of active duty military personnel provided for are shown in the following table:

RESERVE FORCES

These appropriations finance the personnel costs of the National Guard and Reserve forces, including for the first time in 1985, the future retirement benefits of the current reserve forces. The estimates reflect continuing efforts to improve management efficiency including, for example, more economical use of training and recruiting resources as well as the undertaking of active missions at lower costs.

The number of National Guard and Reserve personnel estimated to participate in the paid training programs and the number of full-time active duty military personnel provided for are summarized in the following table:

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps program provides training for reserve and regular officer candidates who have enrolled in the course while attending a college at which an ROTC unit has been established. College graduates who satisfactorily complete the advanced course of the program are commissioned and are ordinarily ordered to active duty for a minimum of 3 years.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps Vitalization Act of 1964, as amended, authorizes a limited number of scholarships for ROTC students on a competitive basis. Successful candidates for the scholarships generally serve a minimum period of 4 years on active duty upon graduation and appointment as a commissioned officer. A number of scholarship recipients will fulfill their entire obligation in the Reserve components.

The Armed Forces health professions scholarship program provides a source of commissioned officers for the various health professions.

The numbers of commissioned officers graduated from these programs are summarized below:

This appropriation includes funds for the pay of all personnel on the military retired lists for the Department of Defense. Included are the consolidated requirements of the military departments for: (a) payments to retired officers and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force; (b) retainer pay of enlisted personnel of the Fleet Reserve of the Navy and Marine Corps; and (c) survivors' benefits. As a result of the change to accrual accounting for military retirement enacted in the 1984 Defense Authorization Act (Public Law 98-94), the Retiree Pay, Defense appropriation is discontinued in 1985. The following chart shows the average number of personnel on the rolls during 1983 compared with the estimate for 1984.

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

These appropriations finance the costs of operating and maintaining the Armed Forces, including the Reserve components and related support activities of the Department of Defense, except military personnel costs.

Included are amounts for pay of civilians, contract services for maintenance of equipment and facilities, fuel, supplies, and repair parts for weapons and equipment. Financial requirements are influenced by many factors, including the number of aircraft squadrons, Army or Marine Corps divisions, installations, military strength and deployments, rates of operational activity, and quantity and complexity of major equipment (aircraft, ships, missiles, tanks, et cetera) in operation. The estimates reflect savings resulting from management initiatives to improve operations. For example, actions were taken to improve logistics operations, reduce administrative overhead, increase productivity, and improved management of health care delivery.

During the development of weapon systems, special management emphasis is placed on achieving savings through eliminating duplicate or marginal programs, increased testing, increased competition, and developing realistic budgets.

The 1985 program provides for development of the Peacekeeper and Trident II strategic missile systems, as well as of a guided missile destroyer (DDG), a rotary wing aircraft (JVX), a joint Army and Air Force tactical missile system, and a derivative fighter aircraft for the Air Force. Effort will begin on a new nuclear attack submarine, a new light helicopter, and a new Strategic Defense Initiative.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

The direct military construction programs for the Armed Forces, both Active and Reserve, shown in the individual schedules of this title are summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

	1983 actual	1984 estimate	1985 estimate
Active Forces	3,470,884	3,892,650	6,010,700

The 1985 military construction program will support new construction needed to improve living and working conditions, as well as for the introduction of new weapon systems. Weapon systems entering the inventory that require new construction include naval vessels, the M-1 tank, the Multiple Launch Rocket system, the Division Air Defense (DIVAD) gun system, and the B-1 bomber. The program continues initiatives to reduce operating costs, increase productivity, and conserve energy by upgrading or replacing facilities which have become functionally obsolete or can be made more efficient through relatively modest investments in improvements.

FAMILY HOUSING, DEFENSE

These appropriations finance all costs associated with construction, improvements, operations, maintenance and leasing of all military family housing. The family housing indebtedness information schedules show the status of indebtedness assumed by each military department to acquire family housing for assignment as public quarters. The program contains initiatives to reduce operating costs and conserve energy by upgrading or replacing facilities which can be made more efficient through relatively modest investments in improvements.

Total Department of Defense stock funds ...	40,016	42,908	44,345

Procurement leadtime for material acquisition is greater than the time required to fill and collect customers' orders. As a result, Department of Defense stock funds are authorized to incur obligations in anticipation of future years' sales (10 U.S.C. 2210(b)). Pursuant to this authority, contract authority of $7,726 million was available at the end of 1982, estimated to remain at $7,726 million in 1984 and 1985.

Operating results and financial conditions.—Revenue and expenses for 1984 and 1985 are projected on a break-even basis. It is estimated that by the end of 1985, investment (equity) of the U.S. Government will be $49,191 million, including $31,768 million in inventory and other assets capitalized, and a cumulative retained income of $17,423 million.

INDUSTRIAL FUNDS

Department of Defense industrial funds finance various Defense activities that perform industrial or commercial type functions on a reimbursable basis (10 U.S.C. 2208). Workload at these activities is generated by orders from various customers who provide reimbursement through progress payments for the full cost of the work performed. This enables the industrial funds to maintain the level of working capital needed for continued operations.

Budget program.—The policy of stabilizing the rates charged to customers will continue. Estimated total obligations in 1985 are projected to increase by over $2,060 million, reflecting an increase in customer workload requirements and price growth. Yearend totals are shown in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

TOTAL PRODUCTION COSTS

	1983 actual	1984 estimate	1985 estimate
Army industrial fund	3,157,244	3,338,386	3,563,889
Navy industrial fund	14,233,088	13,984,274	15,455,235

The Marine Corps industrial fund finances maintenance depots engaged in repairing or overhauling Marine Corps equipment and providing technical engineering support.

The activities financed under the Air Force industrial fund include laundries, depot maintenance activities, real property maintenance facility, and the Military Airlift Command.

The Defense industrial fund finances the Defense Clothing and Textile Center, leased communications procured by the Defense Commercial Communications Office.

This activity provides for flood emergency preparation, flood fighting and rescue operations, and repair of flood control and Federal hurricane or shore protection works. It also provides for emergency supplies of clean drinking water where the source has been contaminated and, in drought distressed areas, provision of adequate supplies of water for human and livestock consumption. In the event of a major flood or coastal emergency, additional funds will be requested.

1. (a) State block grants.—States and outlying areas receive grants according to a statutory formula based on school-age population to improve the quality of elementary and secondary education for children in public and private schools. States and local educational agencies may use block grant funds for basic skills development, educational improvement and support services, and special projects.

Of the total allotted to each State, the State may reserve up to 20 percent for State use. It distributes the remainder to local educational agencies according to State-devised criteria that take into account school enrollment and the number of children whose education imposes a higher than average cost.

(b) Secretary's discretionary funds.—The Secretary supports programs of national or regional significance. In 1985, the Secretary will use these funds to support activities such as inexpensive book distribution, arts in education, alcohol and drug abuse education, the national diffusion network, educational technology activities, and special initiatives to help States and school districts plan and implement recommendations of the National Commission on Excellence in Education.

There is a growing shortage of high school science and mathematics teachers. The gap between supply and demand is expected to widen as boards of education and States raise graduation requirements in these subjects. The purpose of this proposed legislation is to help overcome these shortages by providing assistance to States to train individuals to teach science and mathematics.

Discretionary awards are made to Indian-controlled schools on or near reservations and to LEAs that have been in existence less than three years that serve substantial numbers of Indians. About 30 discretionary awards will support enrichment programs at such schools and LEAs.

2. Special programs for Indian students.—Funds support planning, pilot and demonstration projects; educational service projects; education personnel training; resource and evaluation centers; and fellowships.

3. Special programs for Indian adults.—Competitive grants are made to Indian tribes, institutions, and organizations for programs to improve educational opportunities for Indian adults.

4. Program administration.—Funds support the administrative expenses of the Office of Indian Education and the National Advisory Council on Indian Education, as well as planning and evaluation studies to provide information for policy decisions and program improvement.

Proposed legislation would change existing bilingual education programs to authorize support of a broadened range of instructional approaches for serving children of limited English proficiency, focus on building school district capacity, and strengthen the role of State educational agencies in improving bilingual education programs. The program would direct more of its funding to projects that serve children whose usual language is not English. In addition, vocational education activities now carried out under the authority of the Vocational Education Act would be supported under the Bilingual Education Act.

NOTES

The obligated balance at the end of 1983 includes $847 thousand contingently obligated under court order. Excludes $30 thousand in 1985 for activities transferred to Department of Education, Departmental Management, Salaries and expenses. Comparable amounts for 1983 ($45 thousand) and 1984 ($30 thousand) are included above.

1. State grants—(a) State grant program.—This program assists States in providing a free appropriate public education and related services to all handicapped children aged 6 through 17. Handicapped children aged 3 through 5, and 18 through 21 must also be served except when such services would be inconsistent with State law or practice, or the order of any court. To be eligible for grants, each State is required to submit an acceptable State plan which requires the development and use of individualized education programs for each handicapped student, the establishment of procedural safeguards for all handicapped children and their parents, and the training of personnel for these special education programs.

(b) Preschool incentive grants.—Grants are made to States based on the number of handicapped children aged 3 through 5 served, although States may use funds to provide services to children from birth through age 5.

Departmental review and approval of three-year State plans resulted in delayed funding of some school year 1983-1984 State grant program and preschool incentive grant awards until early 1984. As a result, some moneys for the 1983-1984 school year were not obligated until 1984. The change in timing of obligations does not affect program level. The actual new funding for each school year is as follows:

Total.....	1,042,900	1,095,205	1,095,205

2. Special purpose funds—(a) Deaf-blind centers.—Deaf-blind centers primarily provide technical assistance to States to develop the capacity to educate this severely handicapped population. Centers also provide direct services to very young and older deaf-blind children whom States are not required to serve under the State grant program. Demonstration projects are also supported.

(b) Severely handicapped projects.—Grants are awarded principally for demonstration projects designed to meet the educational and training needs of severely handicapped children and youth. Projects emphasize areas such as independent living and parental involvement.

(c) Early childhood education.—Projects are supported to develop, demonstrate, and disseminate a variety of models incorporating educational and therapeutic services for preschool handicapped children and their parents. Other funded activities include assistance to States in developing and implementing plans to serve all preschool handicapped children.

(d) Secondary and transitional services.—Awards are made to improve educational services provided to handicapped children in secondary school and to assist them in making the transition from secondary school to work or further education.

(e) Postsecondary programs.—Grants are awarded to develop and operate special programs for handicapped persons at institutions of higher education, vocational and technical institutions, and other appropriate agencies. Of the funds appropriated, not less than $2,000,000 must be used to support four institutions serving deaf students.

(f) Innovation and development.—Grants and contracts are awarded for research, development and demonstrations.

(g) Media services and captioned films.—Specialized educational materials for handicapped persons are produced and distributed under this program. Its emphasis is on the development and operation of a system to caption films and TV programs for the hearing impaired.

(h) Regional resource centers.—Centers provide technical assistance to aid States, and through them local educational agencies, to meet their responsibilities under Public Law 94-142.

(i) Recruitment and information.—This program supports distribution of information about educational services and resources for the handicapped to interested persons. In addition, recruitment information to encourage students and professional personnel to enter the career field of special education is disseminated to institutions of higher education and the media.

(j) Special education personnel development.—Grants are awarded to address identified shortages of personnel in fields related to the education of the handicapped. Awards will focus on preservice training in 1985. In addition, at least 10 percent of the funds appropriated must be used for awards to provide training and information to parents and volunteers who work with parents.

(k) Special studies.—Studies are conducted to provide information on the effectiveness of education programs for handicapped children.

3. Architectural barriers removal.—In 1983, funds were appropriated under Public Law 98-8 for the removal of architectural barriers in schools. These funds will be awarded through State grants in 1984.

Excludes $330 thousand in 1985 for the National Council on the Handicapped, which is transferred to Department of Education, Departmental Management, Salaries and expenses. Comparable amounts for 1983 ($193 thousand) and 1984 ($500 thousand) are included above. The 1984 obligations include $200 thousand in one-time expenses.

1. Rehabilitation services—(a) Basic State grants.—The basic State grant program provides 80 percent Federal matching to State vocational rehabilitation agencies to assist physically and mentally handicapped individuals to become gainfully employed. Services provided include counseling, vocational evaluation, work adjustment, mental and physical restoration, education and vocational training, job placement, and post-employment services. Priority is given to serving those with the most severe disabilities.

The first table below presents estimates of the number of persons served and rehabilitated nationally. The second table shows relative State performance in rehabilitating severely disabled persons. During 1984 the Department of Education will investigate various caseload and performance trends, including causes of the wide variation in rehabilitation rates between States and changes in rehabilitation rates over time.

(b) Service projects.—Grants are made for projects to expand services to disability groups who have been underserved in the past, develop new and innovative approaches to meeting the needs of the severely disabled, and provide disabled individuals special training and placement opportunities with private industry. A new initiative in 1985 will help States develop the capacity to offer severely disabled adults supported work opportunities as an alternative to day activity programs.

(c) Independent living.—Project grants are awarded to support a network of nonresidential, community-based independent living centers for individuals whose disabilities are so severe that they generally are ineligible for vocational rehabilitation. The centers teach these persons how to live and function more independently.

(d) Training.—In 1985, grants will be made to States and public or nonprofit agencies and organizations, including institutions of higher education, to address identified shortages of rehabilitation personnel.

2. National Institute of Handicapped Research.—The Institute carries out a comprehensive and coordinated program of rehabilitation research. Through grants and contracts, it supports research and training centers, rehabilitation engineering centers, research and demonstration projects, and information utilization projects. The Institute acts as a focal point for dissemination of rehabilitation information. The Director of the Institute chairs the Interagency Committee on Handicapped Research. In the reimbursable program, the National Institute of Mental Health cosponsors research and training centers for rehabilitating persons disabled by mental illness.

3. National Council on the Handicapped.—The council consists of 15 members appointed by the President. The council establishes general policies for the National Institute of Handicapped Research and advises the Commissioner of Rehabilitation Services and the Secretary on research and services for handicapped individuals. The Council will be supported under the Department's Salaries and expenses account in 1985, along with other Education Department advisory groups.

4. Evaluation.—Studies are conducted to evaluate the impact and effectiveness of various programs authorized under the Rehabilitation Act.

1. Vocational education.—This program provides funds for expansion and improvement of vocational education programs and for provision of greater access to these programs for underserved populations.

(a) State grants and innovative programs—(1) Basic grants.—Grants to States may be used to support, at the discretion of each State, a variety of vocational education programs. States are required to use a portion of their funds to serve handicapped, disadvantaged, and limited-English-proficient students.

(2) Program improvement and supportive services.—Under this activity, States receive assistance to improve the quality of their vocational education programs.

(3) Programs of national significance.—Funds are awarded on a competitive basis to promote innovation in vocational education. Additional funds are allocated annually to the Department of Labor in joint support of the National Occupational Information Coordinating Committee.

The Smith-Hughes Act of 1917 (Public Law 64-347), as amended, provides a permanent appropriation for vocational education State grants and innovative programs.

In 1985, new legislation is proposed to replace the current Vocational Education Act.

2. Adult education.—Formula grants are made to States to eliminate functional illiteracy among the Nation's adults and to assist them in obtaining a high school diploma or its equivalent. In 1985, more than 2,000,000 adults will be served. The Administration will propose legislation to reauthorize the adult education program with simplified administrative procedures.

Reimbursable program.—Amounts in this activity are payments made to the Secretary as audit recoveries which the Secretary has granted back to the audited agency under the terms of section 456 of the General Education Provisions Act.

Student financial assistance will continue to provide grants, work study and direct loans to the needy student.

1. Pell self-help grants.—These grants are awarded to eligible undergraduate students to help them finance their postsecondary education. These need-based grants are currently limited to the lesser of one-half of the cost of education and the difference between the authorized maximum ($1,900 in 1984-1985) and the expected family contribution as calculated under a national need analysis system. In 1985 the maximum grant will be increased to $3,000. Students will be expected to contribute a minimum of $500 to educational costs before qualifying for a grant. Approximately 2.3 million students will receive grants averaging $1,220.

2. Supplemental opportunity grants.—This program provides awards at the discretion of the postsecondary institution to supplement Pell self-help grants to undergraduate students who demonstrate financial need. No appropriation is requested for this activity in 1985. However, in academic year 1985-1986 institutions will be allowed to use up to 50 percent of their Work study allocation for making supplemental grants. In 1985 the total of Pell self-help grants and these Work study funded grants may not exceed $4,500 per student.

3. Work study.—Part-time employment is provided to financially needy students as a self-help resource in meeting educational costs. Federal funds contribute 80 percent of the student's wages with 20 percent paid by the employer. Under proposed legislation, cooperative education activities may also be supported under the Work study program through expanded Job location centers, and institutions may use up to $100,000 of their Work study allocation to support Job centers. Institutions may also use Work study funds to finance jobs which help to reduce adult illiteracy. In 1985 an expanded Work study program will support over 1,205,000 students with grants averaging $800.

4. Direct loans.—Payments into the revolving funds from prior loans will provide $585,131,000 for loans to 731,000 students in 1985-86, which will serve as a resource for low cost loans to financially needy students. No additional Federal capital contribution to institutional revolving funds is proposed in 1985. Funds requested under the teacher cancellation program will reimburse institutions for their share of canceled loans made to borrowers who subsequently undertook specified types of teaching or military service.

The charts below illustrate the total aid and number of awards available to students through the financial aid programs (including the Guaranteed student loan program), if the Administration's budget and legislative proposals are adopted.

Guaranteed student loans.—This program is designed to promote the availability of loans from banks and other lenders to students and their parents to help meet those otherwise unmet costs of attending participating universities, colleges and other post-secondary institutions after taking into consideration family fi-financial resources and other student financial assistance. This is accomplished through the provision of Federal insurance and reinsurance against borrower default, as well as through substantial Federal subsidy payments. In general, the program is administered by State and private nonprofit guarantee agencies which serve as intermediate loan insurers, defaulted loan collectors, and providers of various services to lenders. In certain special circumstances, the Federal Government insures loans directly, and, in such cases, is responsible for defaulted loan collection and providing assistance to lenders.

The Federal Government is currently liable for up to 100 percent of costs related to borrower default, death, disability and bankruptcy. It is proposed that the Federal Government's reinsurance of guarantee agency default activity be limited to 80 percent of the claim on a loan insured after July 1, 1984.

The Federal Government also pays the interest obligation (generally 8 percent on new loans) of eligible borrowers while they are in school and during certain grace and deferment periods under the regular loan component of the Guaranteed Student Loan program. Since 1981, evidence of financial need has been required for a student to receive a regular student loan when family income is over $30,000. In 1985, it is proposed that all recipients of a regular student loan be required to demonstrate financial need. The maximum loan amount of a regular student loan to an undergraduate student is $2,500 annually. All loans can only be used to meet educational expenses.

Under the auxiliary loan component of the Guaranteed Student Loan program, independent undergraduate and graduate students and parents of dependent undergraduate students may borrow to meet the student's educational expenses. However, unlike the regular student loan, the borrower's interest obligation during in-school, grace and deferment periods (12 percent) is not paid by the Federal Government. Repayment of an auxiliary student loan must begin within 60 days of the loan's origination.

The Federal Government pays lenders a quarterly special allowance throughout the life of each regular, auxiliary and consolidated loan. By statutory formula, this allowance assures lenders a total yield equal to the current 91-day Treasury bill rate plus 3½ percent.

In addition, the Federal Government pays administrative cost allowances to guarantee agencies and provides them with reserve fund advances. In 1985, it is proposed that the administrative cost allowances be terminated and the reserve fund advances be returned. Guarantee agencies are allowed to charge insurance premiums and to retain up to 30 percent of their default collections.

Federal receipts include collections on defaulted accounts, reimbursements from default collections by guarantee agencies, insurance premiums and origination fees charged regular borrowers.

Total loan volume is expected to be $7,544 million in 1985. Of this amount, approximately 99 percent of the regular loan volume is expected to be insured by the guarantee agencies (who then reinsure these loans with the Federal Government) and 1 percent insured directly by the Federal Government. The Education Amendments of 1980 authorized the consolidation of student loan debts into a single loan with extended repayment. The Student Loan Marketing Association exercised this authority until it expired on November 1, 1983.

Costs to the Federal Government related to a particular loan accrue throughout the period the loan is outstanding, which can be extended up to 15 or more years. Federal costs on new regular loans are significantly reduced during the year of disbursement through the origination fees which are used to offset interest subsidy costs for that year.

Increased efforts are being made to collect outstanding defaults and to reduce the incidence of default. These efforts include: expanding collection activities by referring both insured and reinsured defaulted loans to private collection agencies, sharing information on defaulted loans with consumer credit bureaus, computer matches to locate defaulters, increased litigation, increased lender due diligence requirements, and closer monitoring of collection activity. It is expected that large increases in annual defaults will occur due to the amount of loans entering repayment from 1983 to 1985. Outstanding defaults in fiscal years 1983-85 are as follows:

1. Assistance for the disadvantaged—(b) Special programs for the disadvantaged.—This program is intended to increase admission to and graduation from college of individuals from disadvantaged backgrounds. In 1985, funds will support matching grants to postsecondary institutions which participate in the special services and upward bound programs.

2. Program development—(a) Fund for the improvement of postsecondary education.—This program supports locally-developed projects which have potential for addressing problems and opportunities for improvement in postsecondary education. Legislation will be proposed for 1985 to require a 50 percent matching contribution from grantees.

(b) Minority institutions science improvement program.—This program is designed to effect long-range improvement in science education at predominantly minority institutions.

4. Higher education construction—(a) Interest subsidy grants.—Funds will meet mandatory interest subsidy costs of construction loan commitments made prior to 1974.

Reimbursable program—Cuban and law enforcement education loan collection costs.—A portion of loan recoveries and repayments in these two programs will be used to offset the costs of private debt collection agencies. Outstanding defaults, as well as delinquent loans, are as follows:

1. Assistance for the disadvantaged—(a) Institutional aid.—This activity provides support for institutions to strengthen their fiscal management and their academic and administrative programs in order to achieve self-sufficiency. In 1985, legislation will be proposed that would consolidate the current four programs into two programs—the Strengthening Institutions and Endowment programs. Funds would support matching grants under both programs and will be targeted on institutions that enroll substantial numbers of needy students, including many of the Nation’s historically black colleges and universities. Grant funds in 1985 for historically black colleges and universities would be maintained at 1984 appropriation levels.

Program operations.—Title VII of the Higher Education Act of 1965 authorizes loans at 4 percent interest to institutions of higher education and higher education building agencies for the construction, reconstruction or renovation of academic or research facilities and the acquisition of special equipment which will increase energy efficiency, remove architectural barriers or remove hazards. Such loans may be made for up to 80 percent of a project’s total cost and must be repaid within 50 years. No new loan commitments have been made since 1981 nor are any planned in 1985.

Financing.—Funds for this direct loan program have been provided primarily through Treasury appropriations and the sale of participation certificates which are backed by pools of higher education facilities loans held by the Federal Government.

Interest is payable to Treasury on the cumulative amount of appropriations paid out for loans under this title, less the average undisbursed cash balance during the year. The rate certified by Treasury for payment from the account was 11¾ percent in 1983 and is expected to be 11⅞ percent in 1984 and 1985.

Sales of participation certificates by the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) were provided for under the Participation Sales Act of 1966 and were authorized specifically for higher education facilities loans under appropriations acts in 1967 and 1968. The participation certificates outstanding held by this account total $108,049 thousand as of September 30, 1983, and are expected to remain at this level during 1984 and 1985.

Insufficiencies appropriations are used to fund the deficit resulting from the interest rate on participation certificates and the lower interest rate paid by institutions on pledged loans. The budget authority required for insufficiencies is computed as follows:

The annual appropriation, along with repayments on outstanding loans, is used to pay operating expenses of the program and to amortize the outstanding debt on participation certificates. It is anticipated that $16 million will be transferred to GNMA in 1985.

The budget provides $100 thousand to fund loan management and property disposition expenses related to loan collection action in 1985.

A total of $1.5 million was collected in 1983 from institutions in default. Continued collection efforts will result in a decreasing amount of outstanding defaulted loans. The status of defaulted loans is shown in the following table:

universities and eligible college housing agencies for the construction, rehabilitation or acquisition of housing and related facilities such as student centers, dining halls or infirmaries. Such loans may be made for up to $3.5 million and must be repaid within 50 years. No new loan commitments are planned in 1985.

Financing.—Funds for this direct loan program have been provided primarily through Treasury borrowings and the sale of participation certificates which are backed by pools of college housing loans held by the Federal Government.

As of September 30, 1983, $2,687.3 million was borrowed. Interest, at a rate of 2.75 percent, is payable to Treasury on the total borrowings, less the average undisbursed cash balance during the year.

Sales of participation certificates by the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) were provided for under the Participation Sales Act of 1966, and were authorized specifically for college housing loans under appropriations acts in 1967 and 1968. The participation certificates outstanding held by this account total $451,504 thousand as of September 30, 1983 and are expected to remain at this level during 1984 and 1985.

Insufficiencies appropriations are used to fund the deficit resulting from the interest rate on participation certificates and the lower interest rate paid by institutions on pledged loans. The budget authority required for insufficiencies is computed as follows:

The estimated net operating income of $13.9 million will decrease the cumulative deficit to $149.1 million in 1985.

The excess income along with repayments on outstanding loans will be used to amortize the outstanding debt on participation certificates. It is anticipated that $115 million will be transferred to GNMA in 1985.

The budget provides $1.2 million to fund loan management and property disposition expenses related to loan collection action in 1985.

A total of $5.3 million was collected in 1983 from institutions in default. Continued collection efforts will result in a decreasing amount of outstanding defaulted loans. The status of defaulted loans is shown in the following table:

1. National Institute of Education.—Research, development, and dissemination activities aid students, teachers, administrators, and decisionmakers at all levels of education. There are three major programs.

The teaching and learning program attempts to enlarge scientific understanding of human learning and development and knowledge of effective educational practices.

The educational policy and organization program supports research on how the governance and organization of education can be made more effective and equitable and assists practitioners who want to take advantage of what is learned.

The dissemination and improvement of practice program helps translate educational research into forms that are useful to educational policymakers, administrators, and practitioners, and makes it available through national and regional information systems.

2. National Center for Education Statistics.—Statistics are maintained on educational institutions and on individuals to monitor trends in education. A coordinated program of statistical services is supported which provides: (1) assistance to States in developing comparable data bases, (2) analyses of the implications of data, and (3) dissemination of timely information to the public and educational practitioners.

Note.—The activities previously financed in four accounts under Department of Education, Special Institutions—American Printing House for the Blind; National Technical Institute for the Deaf; Gallaudet College; and Howard University—in 1983 and 1984 are presented in these schedules and are proposed to be financed in this account in 1985. Budget authority and outlays are distributed by account above.

This new account consolidates four prior accounts, each of which included a grant to a particular institution.

1. American Printing House for the Blind.—This institution provides educational materials to blind students of less than college grade. Legislation will be proposed to terminate the institution's 1879 trust fund in 1985 and transfer the principal to the general funds of the Treasury.

2. National Technical Institute for the Deaf.—This institution is a national coeducational residential center that provides postsecondary technical education for deaf people to prepare them for successful employment. The budget display shows separately the costs of educating victims of the rubella epidemic of 1964–65.

3. Gallaudet College.—This institution is a private, nonprofit educational institution which provides an undergraduate higher education program for deaf persons, a preparatory program for students who need such training to qualify them for college admission, a graduate program in fields of study related to deafness, and continuing education and public service programs appropriate to its postsecondary education mission. Gallaudet also conducts some applied deafness-related research and provides sign language programs for hearing and deaf persons and an associate of arts degree program in interpreting. The budget display shows separately the costs of educating victims of the rubella epidemic of 1964–65.

Gallaudet also operates on campus the Model Secondary School for the Deaf, which serves deaf students of high school age, and the Kendall Demonstration Elementary School for younger children. In connection with their instructional programs, these schools also develop materials and methods for teaching deaf children. Legislation will be proposed to allow Gallaudet to charge school districts for the direct educational expenses of children from those districts attending either of these schools. The Federal research and demonstration effort will continue.

4. Howard University.—This institution is a private, nonprofit educational institution consisting of 17 schools and colleges. Federal funds are used to provide partial support for academic programs as well as for teaching hospital facilities. A new endowment matching grant is proposed, to be structured in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Challenge Grant Amendments of 1983 (Public Law 98–95). A new program to support increased research in the sciences is also financed in 1985.

Legislation will be proposed in 1985 to eliminate the trust fund. The corpus of the trust fund would be transferred to the general funds of the Treasury.

SEC. 304. No part of the funds contained in this title may be used to force any school or school district which is desegregated as that term is defined in title IV of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Public Law 88-352, to take any action to force the busing of students; to force on account of race, creed or color the abolishment of any school so desegregated; or to force the transfer or assignment of any student attending any elementary or secondary school so desegregated to or from a particular school over the protest of his or her parents or parent.

1. Naval reactors development.—This program provides for the design, development, and testing of improved naval nuclear propulsion plants and reactor cores having longer fuel life, increased reliability, improved performance, and simplified operating and maintenance requirements. These reactors are necessary to meet a variety of military requirements. During 1985 efforts will continue to improve existing submarine and surface ship reactor cores and plant technology, and to develop new advanced reactor concepts and propulsion plants. This program also continues test facility upgrading and materials facility construction, and provides equipment for ongoing reactor design and testing activities.

2. Weapons activities.—This program provides for the research, development, engineering, testing, and production of all U.S. nuclear weapons; maintenance of reliable weapons for their stockpile life, and retirement and disposal of nuclear weapons from the stockpile. This program also includes the inertial confinement fusion activities, which have applications in the future development of the nuclear weapons program. In 1985 the weapons program will continue to provide new technology to maintain a modern nuclear force, along with the design and development of new weapon systems in response to defense requirements. This program also provides for the certification of safety, reliability, and performance of new weapon systems and surveillance of the existing stockpile. Increases are provided for continued production of weapon systems and for stockpile improvements. In addition, this program provides for facility construction, maintenance, and restoration for the weapons research and development, testing, and production activities. This program also includes inertial confinement fusion construction.

3. Verification and control technology.—This program provides staff and programmatic resources for the conduct of research activities directed toward the advancement of verification technology related to nuclear treaties and arms control measures. In 1985, the program provides for continued technical and scientific efforts to support nuclear test limitation treaties and nuclear arms reduction negotiations. Other activities provide analytical support to export control requirements, non-proliferation policy, and weapon analysis issues. This program also provides capital equipment for nuclear detection technology efforts and analytical support activities.

4. Materials production.—This program provides nuclear materials to meet near-term national defense and nondefense requirements and sustain a base production program capable of meeting long-term nuclear materials production requirements consistent with the annual Presidential Nuclear Weapons Stockpile Memorandum and the annual Materials Management Plan. In 1985, this program will operate a reactor feed material production complex, five production reactors, chemical processing plants at three major sites, R&D efforts on long-range alternatives for production of nuclear materials, and support facilities integral to the operation of the facilities mentioned above. Activities will continue to increase production of nuclear materials including high purity plutonium for blending with fuel-grade plutonium to produce weapon-grade plutonium, preproduction of fuel cores for conversion of the Savannah River reactors to a more efficient plutonium producing core loading beginning in 1986 and planned productivity improvements to N Reactor. Research and development activities for the Special Isotope Separation (SIS) program and for a fuel cycle improvements program at Savannah River will be continued. Special environmental activities and research and development for a New Production Reactor will be completed to support final concept and site selection. In addition, environmental protection and physical security and safeguard matters will continue to be addressed at all materials production sites.

5. Defense waste and byproducts management.—This program provides for safe interim storage of nuclear wastes and utilization of byproducts generated primarily from nuclear materials production and naval propulsion; and for the development of alternative technologies and processes to support final disposal of defense nuclear waste. The 1985 program provides operating funds for continuation of the waste operations program including transfer of wastes to new tanks and continued waste management research and development efforts. Major construction funded activities include continued construction of the Waste Isolation Pilot plant project near Carlsbad, New Mexico, and the Defense Waste Processing Facility at the Savannah River plant in South Carolina.

6. Nuclear safeguards and security.—This program provides for the development of measures for the protection of nuclear weapons in the agency's custody, special nuclear materials, classified materials and information, and agency property. It also provides technical support and advice to the development of foreign country nuclear materials security and international agency safeguards. In 1985, this program will continue development of procedures that preclude the unauthorized disclosure, theft, or loss of classified material; management of a research and development program to safeguard nuclear weapons and nuclear materials and protect agency facilities against sabotage; providing for assistance to site managers in designing effective safeguards systems; and support of international safeguards technology.

7. Security investigations.—This activity covers the costs related to performance of security investigations for personnel who, in performance of their official duties, must have access to restricted data, national security information or special nuclear material, or who occupy a designated critical sensitive position.

Note.—Funding for this account reflects economies from management reform initiatives.

1. Life sciences and nuclear medicine applications.—The Life sciences and nuclear medicine applications activities, previously included in the General science and research appropriation, have been merged with the Biological and environmental research activities within the Energy supply, research and development appropriation.

2. High energy physics.—Research in this program focuses on the fundamental constituents of matter, the fundamental forces in nature and the transformations between matter and energy at the most elemental level. The program includes experimental and theoretical particle physics research and related advanced accelerator and detector technology R&D. The primary mode of experimental research involves the study of collisions of energetic particles using large particle accelerators or colliding beam facilities by means of advanced multi-particle detector systems and associated electronics. Research in 1985 will continue studies of known fundamental constituents of particles, initiate searches for new particle constituents, and continue to pursue a unified description of the four fundamental forces in nature. A major feature of the program in 1985 will be experiments at Fermilab using the new beam capability of the superconducting magnet Energy Saver accelerator completed in 1983. Funding is requested in 1985 to continue construction at Fermilab of the Tevatron I project which will provide 1000 GeV x 1000 GeV proton-antiproton colliding beam capabilities, and of the Tevatron-II project which upgrades the existing experimental areas for a full 1000 GeV fixed target research program. construction of the Stanford Linear Collider (SLC) which will demonstrate the feasibility of new techniques for very high energy electron-positron collisions and also give the U.S. high energy physics program early access to information necessary for validating current theory predicting the unification of the electromagnetic and weak nuclear forces. In 1985 funds are also included for Phase I of an R&D scoping study to design the next generation hadron-hadron accelerator facility.

3. Nuclear physics.—Research in this program strives to attain a deeper understanding of the interactions, properties, and structures of atomic nuclei and nuclear matter at a fundamental level through interdependent accelerator experiments and theoretical investigations of atomic nuclei. The program supports the operation of seven national accelerator facilities whose beams are available to all qualified scientists and four dedicated university accelerator facilities. In 1985, priority will be given to completing the upgrades of the accelerators at Yale and the University of Washington and to increasing the utilization level of all program facilities. In addition, in 1985 funds are included to initiate construction of a high duty factor 4 GeV electron machine and to upgrading existing accelerators at Brookhaven National Laboratory. Major research themes in 1985 include the role that quarks play in the makeup and interactions of nuclei, nuclei as proving grounds for understanding the basic strong and electroweak forces of nature, possible existence of new forms of nuclear matter, and, the mechanisms by which colliding nuclei exchange mass, energy, and angular momentum.

Note.—Funding for this account reflects economies from management reform initiatives.

The purpose of energy supply, research and development is to develop new energy technologies and improve existing energy technologies. Included in this mission are basic and applied research, technology development, and demonstration.

This account provides funds for capital equipment and construction projects for the research and technological development and demonstration of the various energy technologies under examination in the energy supply, research and development mission.

1. Solar energy.—In 1985, the solar energy program will conduct research and development to help the U.S. private sector in advancing solar technologies as competitive energy supply options. Solar technologies consist of methods which directly or indirectly convert the sun's radiation for heating, cooling and electric power generation applications. Moderate and high temperature solar heat, photovoltaics, biofuels, wind and ocean thermal are specific solar energy systems being investigated.

2. Geothermal.—In 1985, the geothermal program will conduct research in partnership with the private sector to build a technology base for future commercial geothermal development. Technical and economic barriers to the use of geothermal resources will be lessened. The program will further develop knowledge of, and methods to recover energy from, the nation's geopressured resources. Specific technologies related to the use of geothermal resources will be developed in the areas of hot dry rock, hydrothermal, hard rock penetration, and magma energy extraction.

3. Hydropower.—In 1985, the hydropower program consists of personnel costs and other administrative expenses for monitoring existing hydrothermal projects.

4. Electric energy systems.—In 1985, the electric energy system program will conduct research coordinated with the private sector on future electric networks to: (1) determine safety thresholds; (2) enhance regional energy exchange; (3) optimize control of electric energy sources; (4) enhance electric service; and (5) improve system efficiency fuel displacements.

5. Energy storage systems.—In 1985, the energy storage program will conduct research to: (1) develop low-cost, efficient, long lasting, high energy and power dense electrochemical storage; (2) transfer energy and resource conserving technology to the electrolytic industries, and (3) accelerate development of batteries and electrochemical processes.

6. Nuclear fission.—The nuclear waste technology program includes efforts to develop acceptable technologies and technical support activities related to the long-term management of commercial radioactive wastes. Specific activities include: assistance to the States to develop regional capacities for the disposal of low-level radioactive waste; and development of nuclear waste treatment processes and forms suitable for transportation, storage, and disposal in a geologic repository.

The nuclear fuel cycle program involves efforts on advanced fuel reprocessing technology and related technology for conversion, waste management, safeguards; proof-of-breeding in support of the light water reactor (LWR) breeder program; and spent breeder fuel handling and transportation.

In the converter reactor systems program, work will be conducted on advanced reactor safety studies, efforts at Three Mile Island (TMI) involving reactor evaluation, waste immobilization and data acquisition will continue, methods and design activities for the safe treatment of TMI wastes will be developed, and efforts on the high temperature reactor concept will continue. The extended burnup program will begin orderly close-out activities.

The breeder reactor program is composed of the liquid metal fast breeder reactor and the water cooled breeder reactor subprograms. The Clinch River Breeder Reactor Plant project was terminated by Congress during 1983 and termination settlements are expected to be concluded in 1985. Test facility experiments will be consolidated in 1985 and research and development activities will be reoriented toward advanced concepts. Water cooled breeder reactor activities will focus on evaluating the core fuel from the Shippingport reactor to determine the breeding effect of the light water reactor design.

The advanced nuclear systems program continues development work on the space power systems for use on U.S. space missions. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration Galileo Spacecraft and the International Solar Polar Mission Spacecraft are scheduled for launch in 1986. Another major activity will be the continuation of the space nuclear reactor power program (SP-100) in coordination with NASA and DOD. A third activity is the technology program aimed at demonstrating a new, light weight, radioisotope thermoelectric generation (RTG) design.

The remedial actions program includes efforts to treat or stabilize radioactive wastes and perform required decontamination and decommissioning at contaminated DOE and legislatively dictated non-government facilities and sites. The major program areas are the Formerly Utilized Sites Remedial Action program, the Grand Junction Remedial Action program, the Uranium Mill Tailings Remedial Action program for inactive uranium mill tailings sites, the Surplus Facilities program for DOE contaminated facilities declared surplus and resulting principally from civilian nuclear energy programs, and the West Valley Demonstration project, which will demonstrate the solidification of high-level radioactive waste. Efforts are directed at cleaning up these sites and facilities to release this property for alternative productive use with minimum or no restrictions. Capital equipment will provide for instrumentation and field equipment required for cleanup at the various sites and facilities.

The civilian waste research and development program provides testing of new at-reactor spent fuel storage technologies through cooperative demonstrations with utilities to evaluate their safety and feasibility in order to provide a data base for NRC licensing requests. Other research activities include: alternative methods, such as the subseabed program, for the permanent disposal of high-level radioactive wastes; basic generic research and development support for the geologic disposal of civilian nuclear waste; and coordination of generic international waste disposal activities.

7. Environment, safety, and health.—The goals of this program are to develop policies and standards for safety in agency processes and programs, assure public safety and environmental protection at agency facilities, and assure compliance with environment statutes, regulations, and standards. Planned 1985 activities include issuing revised environmental protection, safety and health protection guidance, as required for agency operations, conducting appraisals of ES&H performance at four of the eight Operations Offices; developing training guidance for reactor operators to improve operational safety at agency nuclear facilities; maintaining a viable radiological emergency response capability for agency facilities. Continuation of review of documentation activities in response to Public Law 91-190, the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 is planned. This program will also provide capital equipment for continuation of diverse activities in assessment of environment, safety, and health impacts of Government-owned operational activities.

8. Biological and environmental research.—The goals of this program are to provide scientific data through the conduct of research on the health and environmental effects of energy technologies and to support development of new medical applications of radiation for the treatment of human disease. Planned 1985 activities include studies of the health and environmental effects of radiation and other energy-related pollutants, studies to provide basic information on pollutant-induced damage in biological systems, and research on new radionuclides for use in medical applications. This program will also conduct comprehensive research on the effects of increased levels of carbon dioxide on climate, and will continue research on the environmental effects of nonnuclear energy technologies.

9. Spill test facility.—This program is proposed for deferral and close-out during 1984. During 1983 this activity was contained in the Environment, Safety and Health program.

10. Magnetic fusion.—The 1985 budget provides support for continuing the development of magnetic fusion energy technology to the point where commercial deployment of fusion can begin. Experimental as well as theoretical research on two mainline concepts of confinement, toroidal and mirrors, will continue through the operation of current generation experimental devices. Preparation for achievement of scientific breakthrough on the TFTR device at PPPL will continue. A smaller effort will be devoted to investigation of several promising alternate concepts. All of these efforts will be complemented with a program to develop supporting technology needs for components, materials, and reactor systems engineering. Construction on the next generation of mirror fusion experimental devices will continue on the Mirror Fusion Test Facility-B. Capital equipment funds are provided for the necessary support of research and development in the confinement systems, applied plasma physics, development and technology and planning and projects subprograms.

11. Supporting research and technical analysis.—The role of these programs is to expand the scientific and engineering base for future energy technology development and to provide independent objective evaluations of Energy Research Activities and associated manpower needs. Educational support of energy technology research in universities is also provided.

Basic energy sciences.—This program funds long range generic research in the physical and engineering sciences in support of both the nuclear and non-nuclear technology programs. In 1985, work will continue in materials sciences, chemical sciences, and nuclear sciences. Additional resources will be provided for facility operations, advanced energy projects, biological energy research, and research in engineering systems, applied mathematics, and the geosciences. Research related to advanced materials development, combustion, chemistry of coal, catalysts, photochemistry, nondestructive evaluation techniques, and the synthesis of novel materials will be expanded. In 1985, the construction of the Center for Advanced Materials at Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory and the upgrade of the National Synchrotron Light Source at Brookhaven National Laboratory will continue. In addition, in 1985, construction funds are provided for general plant projects, and accelerator improvements and modifications, and an ion collision physics facility at Kansas State University.

University research instrumentation.—This program will support the purchase, by the major research universities, of state-of-the-art, scientific instrumentation used in energy-related research areas such as combustion, materials, catalysis, and radioactive waste management.

University research support.—This program supports energy related research and training through the university reactor fuel assistance program, the university laboratory cooperative research program, the energy manpower development program, and related education and training activities.

Energy research analysis.—This activity involves the independent assessment of existing or proposed technological initiatives, including examination of the base of research that underlies energy supply and utilization technologies.

12. Multiprogram facilities.—Construction funds for rehabilitating and replacing common-use utilities, roads and buildings at multi-program laboratories are provided by this program.

13. In-house energy management.—This program funds energy conservation retrofit projects at department facilities. These projects are designed to improve the efficiency of DOE energy use and set an example for other Federal agencies and the private sector. Surveys are conducted to identify cost-effective candidate projects and projects are then selected on a competitive basis using as the primary criterion the greatest economic return.

14. Technical information services.—This program contributes to DOE's missions in advancing energy and nuclear defense technologies and protecting U.S. economic and military security through the effective management and control of the Department's scientific and technical knowledge which is contained in its information resources. Major objectives which are structured to meet the overall purpose are the effective management, control, and use of the results of DOE's multibillion dollar research program, and the acquisition and management of results of worldwide investment in energy R&D.

15. Plant engineering and design.—This program identifies and supports through the advanced funding of Architect-Engineering (A-E) services those proposed construction projects considered critical to timely accomplishment of energy activities. A-E services permit designated non-defense projects to proceed from conceptual design into Preliminary (Title I) and Definitive (Title II) design prior to Congressional authorization.

16. Policy and management.—Provides executive direction, management assistance and administrative support to all programs within energy supply activities.

Emphasis will be placed on acid rain related research through integrated efforts that cross-cuts virtually all programs. The 1985 research activities include environmental research in flue gas cleanup, waste management, coal preparation, and gas stream cleanup technologies. Advanced research and technology development efforts will be continued including basic and applied research on materials and components, processes, direct utilization, and research that cross-cuts all Fossil Energy programs. Coal liquefaction industrial and in-house research will continue on direct and indirect liquefaction processes, catalyst evaluations, and toxicology studies of coal liquids. Research in the direct use of coal in an environmentally sound and efficient manner will continue including the continuation of the atmospheric and pressurized fluidized bed combustion technology, alternate fuel utilization, and advanced combustor technology development. The heat engines technology base program will continue advanced technology research related to coal-fired turbines and diesels. Fossil Energy participation in the MHD program will also be continued. 1. Buildings and community systems.—In 1985, the buildings and community systems program will assist the private sector in research in the area of economical and efficient energy use, primarily related to buildings. Such areas as energy efficiency in: (1) Buildings-insulation, energy retrofit, wall and roof systems, (2) Consumer Products, and (3) Community Systems and windows and daylighting will be researched. Support will also be provided for conservation regulatory programs (e.g., Residential Conservation Service, Federal Energy Management Program).

2. Industry.—In 1985, the industrial energy program will conduct research and development designed to increase energy use efficiency and the use of alternative fuels in private industry. Such areas as waste energy reduction, industrial process efficiency, industrial cogeneration and related support activities will be undertaken.

3. Transportation.—In 1985, the transportation program focuses on research efforts to improve energy efficiency in the transportation sector, thus, reducing dependence on conventional petroleum products. Major efforts include: ceramic material development for heat engines, automotive gas turbine engine development, electric vehicle R&D, and construction of a High Temperature Materials Laboratory.

4. State and local assistance.—The 1985 request provides funding for program direction, including management of the new 1985 funding requested as proposed legislation.

5. Multisector.—In 1985 the multisector program supports technology base research in such areas as combustion and thermal sciences, materials sciences, biocatalysis, and tribology.

The "Petroleum overcharge restitution fund" in the Department of Health and Human Services holds moneys recovered by the U.S. Government from petroleum pricing and allocation violations under the Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act of 1973 as amended, in instances where the overcharged customers cannot be identified and repaid. Oil overcharge money in this fund will be used to support the Department of Energy's Low-Income Weatherization Program and Energy Grants to Schools and Hospitals. These program funds will be merged with and managed by the existing State and Local Assistance grant program in the Department of Energy.

The objective of this program is to decrease the vulnerability of the United States to disruptions in world petroleum markets by creating a 750 million barrel crude oil stockpile to be used in the event such disruptions occur.

This account includes funds of $459,190,000 for continued development of the petroleum reserve storage facilities. In 1985, $441,300,000 is provided for storage facility construction and ongoing operations and maintenance activities, $5,600,000 for planning studies, and $12,290,000 for program administration.

Beginning in 1982 and continuing to the present, petroleum acquisition and transportation is funded from the off-budget SPR Petroleum Account pursuant to the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (Public Law 97-35).

This program supports energy information activities which are designed to provide timely, accurate and relevant energy information for use by the Administration, the Congress, and the general public.

1. Collection, production and analysis.—These activities design, develop and maintain information systems on oil, natural gas, coal, nuclear, electric, alternate fuel sources, and energy consumption. These programs collect data and ensure its accuracy. They also prepare limited short-term forecasts, and prepare reports associated with these energy sources, and with energy end-use, prices, supply, and demand balances, economic, international, and financial matters.

2. Program services.—The activities funded in program services include the operation of the Energy Information Administration (EIA) computer facility, telecommunications support, customer services, and ADP software support to in-house EIA personnel and others. In addition, the National Energy Information Center (NEIC) disseminates publications, analytic reports, information directives, public use tapes, and responds to public inquiries. Finally, this activity provides survey and statistical design standards, documentation standards, and energy data public-use forms clearance, and burden control services.

3. Policy and management.—This program provides direction to EIA through the Office of the Administrator, provides funding for administrative services, and provides administrative support to EIA program offices in the area of planning, budgeting, contract administration, personnel, and administrative services.

1. Economic regulation.—The Economic Regulatory Administration (ERA) is responsible for pursuing and finalizing any remaining enforcement actions to assure that oil companies complied with petroleum regulations in effect prior to decontrol of oil in January 1981. Naturally, the funding level is reduced from prior years as enforcement cases are completed. In addition, ERA authorizes the import and export of natural gas and export of electricity, and licenses international electricity transmission facilities.

2. Hearings and appeals.—The Office of Hearings and Appeals issues all final orders of an adjudicatory nature other than those over which the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission has jurisdiction. It decides appeals of such orders, examines requests for exception relief, and administers refund proceedings involving consent order funds obtained as a result of petroleum enforcement actions.

3. Emergency preparedness.—This program will provide ongoing capability for the coordination of comprehensive energy emergency preparedness programs designed to reduce the vulnerability of the Nation to energy supply disruptions within a framework of maximum free market operations.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) is charged with regulating certain interstate aspects of the natural gas, hydroelectric, oil pipeline, and electric industries. Such regulation includes issuing licenses, inspecting dams, and providing other services to regulated businesses. In 1985, these businesses will pay an estimated $60 million in fees and charges to cover the Commission's cost of providing licenses, inspections and other services.

1. Natural gas regulation.—The Commission regulates 150 natural gas pipeline companies and approximately 8,500 producers. Responsibilities include issuing certificates of public convenience and necessity for natural gas pipelines, determining rates for the transportation and sale of natural gas, and establishing curtailment provisions. Producer regulation requires the enforcement of appropriate wellhead prices for natural gas sold to pipelines or end users.

2. Hydropower licensing regulation.—The Commission issues permits and licenses for hydroelectric projects, enforces the terms and conditions of the licenses, and performs dam safety inspections. There are currently 795 hydroelectric projects under license representing more than 1,160 hydroelectric developments with an ultimate generating capacity of about 59 million kilowatts. The Commission also performs investigations of headwater benefits and rate approval for all Federal power marketing agencies except TVA.

3. Oil pipeline regulation.—The Commission's responsibilities include the establishment of economical and reasonable transportation rates to provide incentives for increasing domestic oil supplies and insuring that consumers are not adversely affected by unjustifiably high tariffs. A total of 138 oil pipeline companies, including the Trans Alaska Pipeline System (TAPS), are currently under the jurisdiction of the FERC. The valuation of these regulated companies approximates $20 billion. The Commission seeks to encourage fair competition among the oil companies and to foster the development of future oil supplies in the Prudhoe Bay and North Slope by establishing prudent rate tariffs.

4. Electric power regulation.—The Commission is responsible for determining rates for the interstate sale or transmission of wholesale electric energy for 214 electric utilities and for overseeing electric utility corporate transactions and interlocking directorates.

The objectives of the loan guarantee program are: (1) to encourage and assist the private sector in developing geothermal resources by minimizing lenders' financial risk associated with the introduction of new technology; and (2) develop normal borrower-lender relationships that will in time encourage the flow of credit without the need for Federal assistance.

This interim program was established in 1980 for the purpose of expediting the development and production of alternative fuels.

1. Loan guarantees.—This provided for a loan guarantee to the Great Plains Gasification Associates for construction of a coal gasification plant.

2. Program management.—This provides for costs associated with monitoring the guaranteed loan and the management of cooperative agreements and feasibility studies.

When the Synthetic Fuels Corporation was declared to be operational in 1981, the uncommitted and unobligated funds remaining in the program were transferred to the Energy Security Reserve for use by the Synthetic Fuels Corporation with the exception of the Great Plains Gasification Project which remained under the jurisdiction of the Department of Energy.

The Alaska Power Administration (APA) is responsible for operation, maintenance and power marketing for the Eklutna and Snettisham hydroelectric projects in accordance with the authorizing legislation for each project. The program objectives include:

Operating and maintaining the two Federal projects to optimize production of power and energy in a manner that ensures integrity of the investment, maximizes reliability and energy production and minimizes long-term costs. A major objective is scheduling and installing necessary replacements and improvements to project facilities.

Marketing power in accordance with authorizing legislation to achieve widespread benefits at lowest rates consistent with sound business principles and requirements for repayment of Federal investment.

Maximizing public benefits from other uses of project land and water, including visitation, reservoir recreation, and fish and wildlife uses.

The 1985 budget request will permit continuation of all normal operation and maintenance activities plus satisfactory progress on the multiyear program of replacements and project improvements, thus ensuring continued productivity of the investment in the projects.

Expected 1985 revenues are $7,119,000 on energy sales of 356 million kilowatt-hours, representing approximately 9% of the statewide electric utility requirements in Alaska.

Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) is the Federal electric power marketing agency in the Pacific Northwest. BPA markets hydroelectric power from 21 multipurpose water resource projects of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and 9 projects of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, plus some energy from non-Federal generating projects in the region. These generating resources and BPA's transmission system, planned by the end of 1985 to consist of an estimated 14,077 circuit-miles of high-voltage transmission lines and 381 substations, are operated as an integrated power system with operating and financial results combined and reported as the Federal Columbia River Power System. BPA markets about one-half of the electric energy produced in the Northwest and provides about four-fifths of the region's electric power transmission capacity.

BPA is responsible for meeting the net firm power requirements of its requesting customers through a variety of means, including energy conservation programs, acquisition of renewable and other resources, and power exchanges with utilities both in and outside the region.

BPA will continue its operations on the basis of its self-financing authority and the new borrowing authority provided by the Regional Act¹ for energy conservation and renewable energy resources. Authority to borrow available to the Bonneville Power Administration is available on a permanent, indefinite basis. This authority is limited only in that the amount of borrowing outstanding at any time cannot exceed $3,750,000,000.

Budget programs.—1. Resource planning, acquisition, and oversight.—Provides for the orderly planning, acquisition, and oversight of reliable, cost-effective, environmentally acceptable resources, including resources purchased prior to the Regional Act, needed to serve BPA's portion of the region's forecasted net electric load requirements that cannot be met through cost-effective conservation.

2. Energy conservation.—Provides for funding conservation measures, including home energy efficiency, commercial energy efficiency, street lighting, utility distribution system loss reduction, industrial technological transfers, passive solar energy applications, and conservation measures for new home construction.

3. System planning and construction.—Provides for continuation of construction work on transmission lines, substations and related facilities initiated in prior years, initiation of construction on system additions, and planning and research and development for a reliable, efficient and cost-effective regional transmission system. During 1985 BPA plans to construct and energize approximately 80 miles of line and 2 substations.

4. Operation and maintenance—(a) System operation.—Provides for operating an estimated 14,077 miles of line and 381 substations of the BPA transmission system in 1985.

(b) System maintenance.—Provides for maintaining the facilities and equipment of the BPA transmission system in 1985.

(c) Power marketing.—Provides for forecasting regional demand; negotiating power sales and wheeling, billing, and servicing these contracts; reviewing and establishing wholesale power and wheeling rates; and encouraging public participation in the formation of BPA policies and programs.

(d) Power scheduling.—Provides for the scheduling and dispatch of power.

(e) Fish and wildlife.—Provides for protection, mitigation and enhancement of fish and wildlife of the Columbia River and its tributaries, including related spawning grounds and habitat in accordance with the Regional Act.

(f) Planning Council.—Provides for activities of the Pacific Northwest Electric Power and Conservation Planning Council required by the Regional Act.

5. Interest expense.—Provides for payments to the U.S. Treasury for interest on borrowings to finance BPA's construction and energy conservation programs under $3,750,000 borrowing authority provided by the Federal Columbia River Transmission System Act (FCRTSA) as amended by the Regional Act and replenished by Public Law 98-50.

6. Associated project costs.—Provides for repayment of the operation and maintenance costs of the 30 U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and U.S. Bureau of Reclamation power generating projects, interest and amortization on the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation capital investment in power generating facilities and coordination agreement payments to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Reimbursable.—Provides for the purchase by BPA of replacement energy from other sources for BPA industrial and utility customers during periods when non-firm energy is not available from the Federal system, a service for which each customer provides funds in advance. Also provides for services such as construction, operation and maintenance of transmission facilities when requested and financed by other entities.

Contingencies.—Although contingencies are not specifically funded, the need may arise to provide for purchase of power in low-water years; for repair and/or replacement of facilities affected by natural and man-made emergencies, including the resulting additional costs for contracting, construction, and operation and maintenance work; and for unavoidable increased costs for the planned program due to necessary but unforeseen adjustments, including engineering and design changes, contractor and other claims and relocations.

Financing.—The FCRTSA provides for the use by BPA of all receipts, collections, and recoveries in cash from all sources, including the sale of bonds, to finance the annual budget programs of BPA. These receipts result primarily from the sale of power and wheeling. The FCRTSA also provides for authority to borrow from the U.S. Treasury at rates comparable to borrowings at open market rates for similar issues. As amended by the Regional Act and replenished by Public Law 98-50, it allows for $3,750,000,000 of borrowing to be outstanding at any time. Borrowing authority estimated for use in 1985 is $298,730,000.

Operating results.—Total revenues and receipts are expected to amount to approximately $3,119,500,000 in 1985. Estimated cumulative retained earnings at the close of the budget year are $146,870,000,000, a net increase of $76,870,000 from 1984.

The Southeastern Power Administration (SEPA) markets power generated at Corps of Engineers Hydroelectric generating plants in a 10-State area of the Southeast. Deliveries are made by means of transmission facilities owned by others. There are 21 projects now in operation. A schedule of kilowatt capacity of projects in operation or under construction follows:

Projects in operation.....	Installed capacity	2,792,375
Project under construction: Richard B. Russell (initial operation beginning 1984).....		600,000
Total.....		3,392,375

SEPA sells power at wholesale primarily to publicly and cooperatively owned electric distribution utilities

using wheeling and pooling agreements with the region's large private utilities to provide firm power to its customers. SEPA does not own or operate any transmission facilities. Its long-term contracts provide for periodic electric rate adjustments to insure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of operation and all capital invested in power, with interest, in keeping with statutory requirements. The SEPA program includes the following activities:

1. Systems operations and maintenance.—Provision is made for negotiation and administration of power contracts, collection of revenue, development of wholesale power rates, the amortization of power investment, investigation and planning of proposed water resources projects, scheduling and dispatch of power generation, scheduling storage and release of water, administration of contractual operation requirements, and determination of methods of operating generating plants individually and in coordination with others to obtain maximum utilization of resources. Miscellaneous receipts deposited in the Treasury were $63,426,469 for 1983, and are estimated to be $80,830,000 for 1984, and $110,143,000 for 1985.

2. Purchase power and wheeling.—Provision is made for the payment of wheeling fees and for the purchase of electricity in connection with disposal of power under contracts with utility companies.

The Southwestern Power Administration (SWPA), operates as a marketing agent for hydroelectric power and energy produced at Corps of Engineers dams in a six-State area. It also operates and maintains some 1,660 miles of high voltage transmission lines, 34 substations and switching stations and 20 radio and microwave stations. SWPA sells its power at wholesale primarily to publicly and cooperatively owned electric distribution utilities. Its long-term contracts provide for periodic rate adjustments to insure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of operation and all capital invested in power, with interest, in keeping with statutory requirements.

SWPA also is responsible for scheduling and dispatching power, negotiating power sales contracts, and constructing facilities required to meet changing customer load requirements.

1. Systems operation and maintenance.—Provision is made for investigating and planning proposed water resources projects, scheduling and dispatching power generation, scheduling storage and release of water, administering contractual operation requirements, and determining methods of operating generating plants individually and in coordination with others to obtain maximum utilization of resources. Provision also is made for maintenance of the transmission system and related facilities to assure reliable service, negotiation and administration of power contracts, collection of revenue, development of wholesale power rates and the amortization of the power investment. Estimated proprietary receipts which are deposited in the Treasury are $73,680,000 in 1983 and are estimated to be $87,900,000 in 1984, and $90,300,000 in 1985.

2. Purchase power and wheeling.—Provision is made for the payment of wheeling fees and for the purchase of energy in connection with the marketing of power under contracts with utility companies.

3. Construction.—The construction program provides transmission, substation and switching facilities to transmit power generated at Corps of Engineers' hydroelectric projects in the Southwest. This program is coordinated with the Corps of Engineers' construction program and customer requirements in order that transmission and related facilities will be in place when these power projects are completed and available for marketing. This program also provides for the purchase of capital electrical equipment used for upgrading the established system to meet changing customer load requirements.

All operation and maintenance activities, with the exception of the gross expenses for the purchase of power and payment of transmission charges, are financed through direct appropriations. An appropriation for the purchase of power and payment of transmission expenses is necessary to cover monthly net expenditures for the thermal power and energy and transmission service provided to SWPA.

The Western Area Power Administration (Western) markets power in 15 western States from generating projects of the Bureau of Reclamation, Corps of Engineers and the International Boundary and Water Commission's powerplants in Texas. Western operates and maintains about 16,000 miles of high-voltage transmission lines and over 200 associated substation/switchyards and constructs transmission facilities, including new transmission lines, substations and essential additions and modifications to existing facilities.

Western sells power at wholesale to publicly and cooperatively owned electric distribution utilities. Its long-term contracts provide for periodic rate adjustments to ensure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of operation and all capital invested in power with interest in keeping with statutory requirements.

1. Systems operation and maintenance.—A total of 12 power systems will be operated and maintained to market power produced principally by the Bureau of Reclamation and Corps of Engineers. Additionally, revenue will be available from Boulder Canyon project operations and Navajo generating plant for payment of Western's power marketing and transmission expenses. Western will continue to participate in conservation and renewable resources programs in 1985.

Commercial power is sold to wholesale customers such as municipalities, cooperatives, irrigation districts, public utility districts, State and Federal government agencies, and private utilities. Receipts are deposited in the Reclamation fund, the General fund, the Colorado River Dam fund, and the Lower Colorado River Basin Development fund.

Energy sales and revenues resulting from these Western power systems operations, excluding the Colorado River Storage project, the Navajo generating plant, and the Central Arizona project are as follows:

	1983 actual	1984 estimate	1985 estimate
Energy sales (millions of kilowatt hours)	30,346	29,035	28,122
Revenue from energy sales (in thousands of dollars)	280,902	349,828	384,162

2. Purchase of power and wheeling.—The program provides for purchase of power, wheeling, and fuel conservation expenses. Financing of this program consists of $90,000,000 of new budget authority and $50,944,000 associated with net billing procedures and Bonneville Power Administration power transfers. Additionally, to meet total contractual obligations, Western requires $36,000,000 of customer/supplier bill crediting arrangements. Negotiations for these arrangements are underway.

System construction.—Construction of transmission facilities is necessary to maintain system reliability and for marketing of electric power produced from generating plants of others. Funding is provided in 1985 for system interties, joint construction participation, replacement of deteriorated wood poles and damaged wood or steel structures, reconductoring and upgrading transmission lines to increase system capacity and reliability, construction of operation and maintenance control and dispatch facilities, and system security additions. Engineering studies will continue on Western's transmission systems.

Reimbursable program.—This program involves services provided by Western to others under various types of reimbursable arrangements. In 1985, the reimbursable program primarily provides for construction and operation and maintenance services by Western for the Bureau of Reclamation and Bureau of Indian Affairs.

This fund is used to insure continuous operation of power systems due to equipment or other physical failure, or damage due to acts of God, flood, drought, strikes, embargoes or other conditions which might cause interruption in service. In 1985, Western will continue replenishment of funding on a continuous basis from power revenues. This allows for more timely, cost-effective emergency repair work of damaged power facilities and ensures continuity of electrical service.

Western's operation and maintenance and power marketing expenses for the Colorado River storage project, the Colorado River Basin project and the Fort Peck project will be financed from power revenues collected by Western.

Western operates and maintains approximately 3,000 miles of transmission lines and over 40 substations associated with these projects. Wholesale power is provided to utilities over the interconnected high-voltage transmission systems. Long-term contracts provide for periodic rate adjustments to ensure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of operation and all capital invested in power with interest in keeping with statutory requirements.

Following are energy sales and revenues from power operations associated with the Colorado River storage project and the Colorado River Basin project. Starting in 1984, by prior agreement, energy generated by the Navajo project will begin to be used for pumping purposes and will not be available for sale by Western. As a result, Western's energy sales and revenues in the Colorado River Basin project will be significantly reduced. The revenue from the Fort Peck project is integrated with Pick-Sloan Missouri Basin project revenue and is included in the construction, rehabilitation, operation and maintenance account.

1. Colorado River storage project.—Western markets power and operates and maintains the power transmission facilities of units of the Colorado River storage project and the Seedskaadee participating project. Provision is made for payment for purchase of electricity and wheeling fees to meet contractual obligations and fuel conservation.

2. Colorado River Basin project.—The 1985 program provides for Western's power marketing and operation and maintenance expenses for the Navajo project participation agreement and Central Arizona project. Financing will be from project power revenue.

3. Fort Peck project.—Revenue collected by Western is used to defray construction, operation and maintenance and power marketing expenses associated with the power generation and transmission facilities of the Fort Peck project, Corps of Engineers—Civil, and emergency expenses to ensure continuous operation. The Corps operates and maintains the power generating facilities, and Western operates and maintains the transmission system and performs power marketing functions. Funding is provided in 1985 for continuation of reconstruction and realignment of the Fort Peck-Havre 161-kV transmission line in Montana.

NOTES

Includes $1,145 thousand for 1985 for activities previously financed from Department of Health and Human Services, Food and Drug Administration, Buildings and facilities.

The activities financed in Standard level user charges in 1984 are presented in these schedules and are proposed to be financed in this account in 1985. Budget authority and outlays are distributed by account above.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) is charged with the administration and enforcement of laws concerning dangerous, misbranded, and adulterated foods, drugs, human biologics, medical devices, cosmetics, and man-made sources of radiation.

1. Foods.—FDA reviews industry petitions and publishes tolerances for the safe use of food additives, conducts research, develops analytical methods to detect and prevent food and cosmetic adulteration, sets standards for classes of food and defines good manufacturing and sanitary practices. FDA also inspects food and cosmetic processing plants and marketing establishments, analyzes collected samples to verify that these products are safe and properly labeled and—when necessary—takes regulatory action to obtain compliance with the law.

2. Drugs.—FDA reviews research and manufacturing data to support the safety and efficacy of drugs prior to marketing, evaluates literature and experience reports submitted by industry and the medical profession, and conducts research. FDA also inspects manufacturing firms, reviews labeling, analyzes samples, and—when necessary—takes regulatory action to enforce the legal requirements.

3. Devices and radiological products.—FDA is responsible for ensuring the safety and effectiveness of medical devices and eliminating unnecessary exposure to electronic product radiation through research, surveillance, performance standards and premarket approval of certain devices.

4. National Center for Toxicological Research.—FDA conducts research programs to study the biological effects of potentially toxic chemical substances found in man's environment.

5. Program management.—This activity supports executive and administrative functions.

6. Buildings and facilities.—This activity provides for construction and renovation of facilities.

Title VI and subsequently title XVI of the Public Health Service Act established a loan and loan guarantee fund for medical facilities with a maximum amount allowable for the Government's liability. Direct loans were made available for public facilities and guaranteed loans for private, nonprofit facilities.

Funds under this authority were established in the amount of $50 million for use in fulfilling guarantees in event of default, $30 million as a revolving fund for direct loans and an amount for interest subsidy payments on guaranteed loans. Default and interest subsidy funds are replenished as necessary through the annual appropriation process.

To cover $32 million interest subsidy obligations in 1985, new budget authority of $26.5 million is requested in 1985 to supplement $5.5 million derived from the inactive revolving account within this fund. About $1.1 billion in direct and guaranteed loans will be outstanding in 1985.

This is a public enterprise revolving fund. Direct loans will be sold to the Federal Financing Bank to provide operating capital for the fund and loans thus sold will be guaranteed. In 1975, $35 million was appropriated to the Health Services Administration as capital for the revolving fund.

In 1985 no new loans will be made—only previous loan commitments of $2.6 million will require disbursements.
