OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT

BUDGET OF THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

FISCAL YEAR

1988

THE BUDGET DOCUMENTS

Budget of the United States Government, 1988 contains the Budget Message of the President and presents an overview of the President's budget proposals. It includes summary information on goals of the 1988 Budget, economic assumptions, receipts and outlays, defense and international programs, social security benefits, other programmatic changes, financing changes, reductions and terminations, a listing of the budget by agency and account, and various summary data tables.

Budget of the United States Government, 1988—Supplement repeats the Budget Message of the President and the summary information. In addition it includes sections on the Federal program by function, perspectives on the budget, the budget system and concepts, reform of the Federal credit system, and summary tables (both the tables included in the Budget and additional tables).

United States Budget in Brief, 1988 is designed for use by the general public. It provides a more concise, less technical overview of the 1988 budget than the above volumes, including summary and historical tables on the Federal budget and debt, together with graphic displays.

Budget of the United States Government, 1988—Appendix contains detailed information on the various appropriations and funds that constitute the budget. The Appendix contains more detailed information than any of the other budget documents. It includes for each agency: the proposed text of appropriation language, budget schedules for each account, new legislative proposals, explanations of the work to be performed and the funds needed, and proposed general provisions applicable to the appropriations of entire agencies or groups of agencies. Supplementals and rescission proposals for the current year are presented separately. Information is also provided on certain activities whose outlays are not part of the budget totals.

Special Analyses, Budget of the United States Government, 1988 contains analyses that are designed to highlight specified program areas or provide other significant presentations of budget data. This document includes information about alternative views of the budget; i.e., current services and national income accounts; economic and financial analyses of the budget covering Government finances and operations as a whole; and Government-wide program and financial information for Federal research and development programs. Data on Federal civilian employment are also included in this volume.

Historical Tables, Budget of the United States Government, 1988 provides data on budget receipts, outlays, surpluses or deficits, and Federal debt covering extended time periods—in many cases from 1940–1992. These are much longer time periods than those covered by similar tables in other budget documents. The data in this volume and all other historical data in the budget documents are consistent with the concepts and presentation used in the 1988 Budget, so the data series are comparable over time.

Management of the United States Government, 1988 includes the President's Management Message and provides the goals and strategies of the President's Management Improvement Program. It reports on the nine point credit management program, the program to improve financial management in executive branch agencies, the President's Productivity Program, the activities of the President's Council on Integrity and Efficiency, and the President's Council on Management Improvement. This document also describes the status of Grace Commission recommendations, the status of debt collection and prompt payment efforts, and a report on the motor vehicle cost reductions required by the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act (COBRA) of 1985.

Instructions for purchasing copies of any of these documents are on the last two pages of this volume.

GENERAL NOTES

1. All years referred to are fiscal years, unless otherwise noted.
2. Detail in the tables, text and charts of this volume may not add to the totals because of rounding.

EXPLANATION OF ESTIMATES

Part I contains various tables and certain schedules in support of the budget, including explanatory statements of the work to be performed and the money needed, as well as the text of the language proposed for enactment by Congress on each item for which congressional action in an appropriation bill is required. It also contains the text of general provisions of appropriations acts, proposed for enactment by the Congress, that apply to entire agencies or groups of agencies.

ARRANGEMENT

The chapters of Part I reflect the branches of Government, and the cabinet departments, selected independent agencies, and other activities of the executive branch. Most of the smaller agencies in the executive branch are grouped in one chapter—"Other independent agencies."

Each chapter is organized by major subordinate organizations within the agency (usually bureaus) or by major program area. For each bureau or major program area, Federal funds, covering the funds that are not set aside in "trust," precede trust funds, covering moneys that are held by the Government in accounts established by law or by trust agreement for specific purposes. Within each fund group, accounts with new budget authority in 1988 generally will precede those without such an entry. By law, the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance and Disability Insurance trust funds are outside the budget totals. In this volume, these accounts are presented in a separate chapter, Health and Human Services, Social Security.

The proposed language for general provisions of appropriations acts that are applicable to the agency in that chapter appear in a separate section at the end of the chapter. General provisions that apply to specified groups of agencies are placed in the chapter covering the first agency that appears in the respective appropriations act. The general provisions that are Government-wide in scope (identified "Departments, Agencies, and Corporations"), normally contained in the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government Appropriations Act, are placed at the end of the Executive Office of the President chapter.

An explanation of the types of funds included in the budget may be found in Part 6b of The Budget of the United States Government, 1988—Supplement.

FORM OF DETAILED MATERIAL

APPROPRIATIONS LANGUAGE

The language proposed for inclusion in the 1988 appropriations acts is printed following the account title. Language for 1987 appropriations, printed in roman type, is used as a base. All language for accounts receiving appropriations in 1987 is based on language, included in or enacted by reference in the continuing resolution for 1987 (Public Laws 99-500 and 99-591). Brackets enclose material that is proposed for deletion; italic type indicates proposed new language. At the end of the final language paragraph, and printed in italics within parentheses, are citations to any relevant authorizing legislation and to the appropriations act from which the basic text of the 1987 language is taken. An illustration of proposed appropriations language for 1988 follows:

OPERATING EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the Office of Climate Information, [$29,440,000] $28,920,000 of which [$150,000] $400,000 shall remain available until expended. (34 U.S.C. 218 et seq.; Department of Government Appropriation Act, 1987.)

BASIS FOR SCHEDULES

The 1986 column of this budget generally presents the actual transactions and balances for that year, as recorded in agency accounts.

For 1987, the regular schedules include enacted appropriations. In addition, indefinite appropriations are included on the basis of amounts likely to be required. Requests for supplemental appropriations, if any, to meet increased 1987 costs are included in Part II. Also included in Part II, in addition to proposed appropriation language and schedules for supplemental requests, are separate schedules for proposed rescissions, the language for which will be transmitted to the Congress in special messages.

The 1988 column of the regular schedules includes proposed appropriations for all programs under existing legislation, including those that require extension or renewal of expiring laws. The fourth column of schedules for accounts in the National Defense function (coded 050) and accounts with multiple functions (coded 999) with a National Defense component includes proposed appropriations for 1989. Appropriations for these accounts by law are requested on a biennial basis. Appropriations for 1989 and beyond may be requested for other accounts (see the "Budget by Agency and Account" in the Budget); however, a fourth column is not included in the Appendix for them in this budget.

Amounts for proposed new legislation are shown generally in separate schedules, following the regular schedules or in budget sequence in the respective bureau. These schedules are headed "Proposed for later transmittal under proposed legislation." Appropriation language is included with the regular schedules, but not with the separate schedules for proposed legislation. Necessary appropriations language will be transmitted later upon enactment of the proposed legislation. In some cases, when the amount requested in the budget is less than the amount required for the program level mandated in existing authorizing legislation (as in the case of certain entitlement programs), the reduced amount is reflected in the proposed appropriation language and the regular schedules. The proposed change in the authorizing legislation may be included in the appropriation language transmitted with the budget or in proposed legislation, to be transmitted separately. In these cases, the words, "Legislative Action Required" appear at the end of the language.

PROGRAM AND FINANCING SCHEDULE

This schedule consists of three parts.

In the "Program by activities" section, obligations generally are shown for specific activities or projects. The activity structure is developed individually for each appropriation or fund account to provide a meaningful presentation of information for the program being financed. That structure is tailored to the individual account and is not uniform across the Government. When the amounts of obligations that are financed from collections credited to an account (reimbursements) are significant, "Reimbursable program" obligations are shown separately from "Direct program" obligations. When the amounts are significant, "Capital investments" are shown separately from "Operating expenses." The last entry "Total obligations," indicates the minimum amount of budgetary resources that must be available to the appropriation or fund account in that year.

The "Financing" section shows the budgetary resources available or estimated to be available to finance the total obligations. First are the amounts of offsetting collections credited to the account. Next are unobligated balances of budgetary resources (that have not expired) brought forward from the end of the prior year. Finally, those amounts that were available for obligation during the year and were not used, but continue to be available, are shown as an unobligated balance available, end of year. That balance is carried forward and usually obligated in a subsequent year. Other adjusting entries may be included. The residual is the new budget authority required to finance the program. Where more than one kind of budget authority is provided, that information is shown. In some cases, the availability of budgetary resources may be restrained by legally binding limitations on obligations for direct loans or for other purposes. Such limitations are usually included in appropriations language.

The "Relation of obligations to outlays" section shows the difference between obligations, which may not be liquidated in the same year in which they are incurred, and outlays. The entry "obligations incurred, net," shows the amount of new obligations incurred in the year, less offsetting collections credited to the account. The amount of obligations that were incurred in previous years but not liquidated, are entered as an obligated balance, start of year. Similarly, an end of year obligated balance is entered. Certain adjusting entries may be included. The residual is the net amount of outlays resulting from the liquidation of obligations incurred in that year and previous years.

The account identification code, found at the head of the program and financing schedule, facilitates computer processing of budgetary information. The last three digits of this code represent the functional category to which the account is classified. Functional classification permits presentation of budget authority and outlays in terms of their purpose, rather than the organization administering the program or the account under which these funds are made available. For example, the 452 at the top of the following schedule indicates that the purpose of the program financed by this appropriation is Area and regional development—a subfunction within major function 450, Community and regional development. When the outlays from an account are split between two or more subfunctions within a single major function, the code of the major function is used. In those few cases where the outlays from an account are split between two or more functions, a code of 999 is used. A detailed discussion of how Federal programs are addressed to each identified national need is included in Part 5 of the 1988 Budget Supplement. The individual functional categories are identified with each appropriation or fund account in the "Budget by Agency and Account" in Part 4 of the Budget.

NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Narrative statements present briefly the objectives of the program and the work to be financed primarily for 1988. Measures of expected performance may be included, and the relationship to the financial estimates is described.

SCHEDULE OF OBJECT CLASSIFICATION AND PERSONNEL SUMMARY

There is shown for each account a schedule of obligations, according to the following uniform list of object classifications:

- | | |
|-----------------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| 10 PERSONAL SERVICES AND BENEFITS | 13 Benefits for former personnel |
| 11 Personnel compensation | 20 CONTRACTUAL SERVICES AND SUPPLIES |
| 12 Personnel benefits | |

30 ACQUISITION OF CAPITAL	44 Refunds

These object classes reflect the nature of the things or services purchased, regardless of the purpose of the program for which they are used.

Except for revolving funds, reimbursable obligations are aggregated in a single line and not identified by object class. Data, classified by object, are illustrated in the following schedule:

99.0 Reimbursable obligations	250	350	380
99.9 Total obligations	30,396	30,590	29,300

Several of the object classes are divided into subclasses—personnel compensation, for example, is shown separately for full-time permanent employees, for other than full-time employees, and for certain other payments. Standard level user charges are rental payments assessed by the General Services Administration for space (leased and Government-owned) and building services.

When obligations for personnel compensation are shown in the object classification schedule, a personnel summary generally will follow the object classification schedule, as illustrated below:

Personnel Summary
Direct:
Total number of full-time permanent positions	813	785	741
Total compensable workyears:
Full-time equivalent employment	774	748	706
Full-time equivalent of overtime and holiday hours	23	17	19
Reimbursable:
Total number of full-time permanent positions	9	13	14
Total compensable workyears: Full-time equivalent employment ..	8	12	13

Control of Federal civilian employment generally is on a full-time equivalent (FTE) or workyear basis for the executive branch.

BUSINESS-TYPE BUDGET STATEMENTS

Business-type budget statements are presented for activities specifically required by the Government Corporation Control Act or similar legislation and generally for other revolving and trust revolving funds conducting business with the public. They are not usually presented for funds conducting business within the Government.

Statement of Revenue and Expense

For many revolving funds there is a statement of revenue and expense that shows the resulting net income or loss for the year. This statement usually includes accrued revenue (e.g., revenue earned) and accrued expenditures (e.g., including cost incurred but not yet paid), whether funded or unfunded.

Revenue and Expense (in thousands of dollars)

Nonoperating income: Interest from U.S. securities
	8,092	9,874	12,791
Net income for the year	28,887	34,124	43,771

Statement of Financial Condition

The statement of financial condition shows assets, liabilities, and Government equity for the fund at the close of each fiscal year. In addition to this information, which is similar to commercial balance sheet data, budget needs also require additional information, shown in the equity section. A disclosure is made of obligations incurred that have not yet accrued into liabilities (undelivered orders) and of budgetary resources for which no funding has been received (unfinanced budgetary resources). Unfinanced budgetary resources include orders from Federal customers that have not been filled (unfilled orders), and unfinanced budget authority in the form of authority to borrow for which borrowing has not taken place, and contract authority for which liquidating cash has not been received. Orders received from the public must be accompanied by advance payment.

The last section of the balance sheet is an "Analysis of Changes in Government Equity." This section sets forth for paid-in capital and retained income, as appropriate, the beginning balance, transactions (changes) during the year, and the balance at the end of the year.

FEDERAL CREDIT SCHEDULES

As part of an effort to establish systematic control of the levels of Federal credit during any fiscal year, the budget appendix includes annual limitations on the amount of obligations for direct loans and commitments for guaranteed loans in appropriations language for appropriations or funds with credit activity. For those accounts under which Federal credit is extended, schedules for the status of direct loans and the status of guaranteed loans summarize activity for the years shown.

Status of Direct Loans

A direct loan obligation is a legal or binding agreement that results in: (1) a disbursement of funds to a non-Federal entity by a Federal agency (including the Federal Financing Bank on behalf of a Federal agency) that is contracted to be repaid, with or without interest; (2) a purchase of non-Federal loans by a Federal agency through secondary market operations; (3) an acquisition of guaranteed non-Federal loans by a Federal agency in satisfaction of default or other guarantee claims; or (4) a sale of Federal agency assets to a non-Federal entity on credit terms of more than 90 days duration.

A direct loan obligation is counted against the annual limitation when the principal amount is obligated. Limitations apply to the gross obligations for direct loans, which means the amount obligated during a fiscal year, without reductions for such items as repayments, prepayments, sale of loan assets, defaults, or forgiveness.

For each appropriation or fund with direct loan activity, a schedule is displayed immediately following the program and financing schedule as follows:

Status of Guaranteed Loans

A guaranteed loan commitment is a legal or binding agreement that results in: (1) a non-Federal debt instrument on which the agency pledges to pay part or all of the amount due to a lender or holder in the event of default by the borrower; and (2) a direct Federal loan that an agency has sold to the public under a guarantee, agreement to repurchase, or other form of recourse. Beginning in 1987, direct loan assets that are sold with recourse are treated as agency borrowing. Agency guarantees that result in loans that are disbursed by the FFB are counted as direct loans of the agency and, therefore, will not be counted as guaranteed loans. However, the amount of direct loans made in this manner is subject to limitations on loan guarantee commitments of the originating agency. Loan guarantees include agreements in the form of loan insurance, defined as a type of guarantee in which an agency pledges the use of accumulated insurance premiums to secure lenders against default on the part of borrowers.

A guaranteed loan is counted against the annual limitation when a firm commitment is made, i.e., when the Government enters into a guarantee agreement to become effective at such time as the lender meets stipulated pre-conditions. A commitment is reported for every guaranteed loan, even though the commitment and the actual loan guarantee may occur simultaneously. Amounts for limitations and in the schedules are the full principal amounts of loans guaranteed whether guaranteed in full or in part. The amount of the Government's contingent liability is shown as a memorandum entry in the schedule. Limitations apply to the gross commitments for guaranteed loans, which means the amount committed during a fiscal year, without reductions for such items as repayments, prepayments, sale of guaranteed loans, or defaults.

For each appropriation or fund account with guaranteed loan activity, a schedule is displayed following the program and financing schedule (or status of direct loans schedule, if there is one) as follows:

Personal services and necessary expenses to provide support for the basic operations of the Library are financed from this appropriation.

Purchase of books and library materials.—The Library's collections are acquired through purchase, gift, exchange, copyright deposit, and official deposit. This includes materials in all subjects, except clinical medicine and technical agriculture, for the general collections of the Library and domestic and foreign legal materials for the law library.

Preparation of books and library materials for use.—Library materials are cataloged for use and are classified for systematic arrangement on the shelves of the collection. Cataloging data is converted to machine-readable form for use by the Library of Congress, other libraries, and cataloging service agencies. The Network Development and MARC Standards Office plans and coordinates the exchange of bibliographic information among major library cooperatives and research facilities.

Cataloging distribution service.—The cataloging distribution service makes available copies of the Library's printed catalog cards, cataloging data in machine-readable form, book catalogs, technical publications, and select bibliographies from the automated data bases.

Research and reader services.—Books and other library materials are provided to readers inside and outside the Library, reference, referral and bibliographic assistance is rendered, and custody of the collections is maintained.

Preservation of library materials.—Library materials are preserved in their original format by being bound or rebound, or by a variety of conservation techniques. Materials are also preserved by converting them to a more durable form through such means as microfilming, by conversion of nitrate film to safety base film, and by the conversion of deteriorating sound recordings to polyester tape. Scientific research on the preservation of library materials is undertaken.

Automated systems support.—Central computer support to all operations of the Library is provided by the Automated Systems Office. This support consists of systems analysis, programming, and operation of central computers, minicomputers and data communication services.

Optical disk program.—In 1982 the Library began research in the use of optical disks for image preservation and retrieval with a view to using this advanced technology for the preservation and management of its collections. The program has two aspects: print or textual materials stored on digital optical disks and pictorial materials stored on analog optical disks (videodisks). The Library is actively studying the results gained from the pilot program. It hopes to phase in the new technology in all appropriate activities throughout the organization.

Central support services.—This activity supports the executive staff of the Office of the Librarian; exhibit, information, and publication activities; personnel, budget and finance, procurement, buildings management, and other centralized services. It also includes rental of space off Capitol Hill.

American Folklife Center.—Public Law 94-201 established the American Folklife Center in the Library of Congress "to preserve and present American folklife" through field documentation, consultancies, research, publishing, exhibition and dissemination of information.

Deacidification facility.—Public Law 98-427 authorized the Library of Congress to construct a deacidification facility for the operation of the diethyl zinc preservation process. The funding for this project was provided under Public Law 98-396. The funds are to remain available until expended.

The Copyright Office is responsible for registering and recording copyright claims, assignments, and renewals, for supplying copyright information to the public, for collecting and accounting for copyright fees, and for publishing complete and indexed catalogs for each class of copyright entries. The Office is conducted for the most part on a self-sustaining basis. The amount requested is substantially counterbalanced by fees received for services rendered and the value of books and other library materials deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act and transferred to the Library of Congress. The income and obligations for 1986, and estimates for 1987 and 1988 are as follows:

	1986 actual	1987 est.	1988 est.
Income:
Gross receipts.....	7,505,851	7,456,000	7,994,000
Estimated value of materials deposited and transferred to the Library of Congress.....	6,959,568	7,200,000	7,400,000

Total income.....	14,465,419	14,656,000	15,394,000
Obligations.....	16,874,000	17,953,000	19,788,000

The effort described under each of the activities are predicated on an estimated 590,000 copyright registrations during 1988, an estimated 575,000 during 1987, and registrations of 561,208 during 1986.

Receiving and accounting for applications, fees, and correspondence.—Materials received by the Copyright Office are assembled and routed; accounts are maintained for all moneys received; records relating to the registration of copyrights are filed; and materials are deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act.

Examining copyright applications.—All applications and deposits are examined before issuance of registration certificates or recordings of documents to determine whether the provisions of the Copyright Act have been satisfied.

Indexing and cataloging materials received.—The Register of Copyrights is required to publish complete and indexed catalogs of all items registered. The catalog entries prepared by the Copyright Office are made available to the public and the Library. It is estimated that for 1988 the number of items to be cataloged will be 590,000.

Reference service.—The Copyright Office makes information available to the public concerning the provisions of the Copyright Act, including procedures, policies, and rulings. Information concerning registrations is furnished on a fee basis.

Publishing the catalog of copyright entries and bulletins of decisions.—Catalogs for each class of copyright entries and bulletins of copyright decisions are published and made available to the public.

General supervision and legal services.—The work of the Copyright Office includes legal supervision and research into the present copyright law and international copyright relations. It also involves a study of improvement of the domestic law and our international copyright relations.

Licensing Division.—The Licensing Division performs the responsibilities connected with the licensing activities of cable television stations and the licensing of jukeboxes.

Policy analysis and research.—The Congressional Research Service provides objective, nonpartisan analytical and consultative services to the Members and committees of Congress, assisting them in the analysis, appraisal, and evaluation of any subject matter of legislative concern, including recommendations submitted to the Congress by the Executive Branch. Research services are also provided to assist Congress with its oversight, representative, and other responsibilities. Support takes the form of background studies, in-depth policy analyses, consultations, briefings, legal research, continuous liaison with committees, assistance with committee hearings, public policy seminars for Members and congressional staff, and related data and materials. In order to respond most effectively to the broad range of congressional inquiries, the Service supplements individually tailored products with Issue Briefs, Reports, Committee Prints, and "Info Packs", which are collections of both CRS products and carefully selected materials from outside sources that provide background material on issues of very high congressional interest. Lists of subjects and policy areas that a committee might profitably pursue are periodically made available to each congressional committee. As provided by statute, the Service prepares decennially the Constitution of the United States—Analysis and Interpretation, and supplements at 2-year intervals, prepares compendiums for the annual national high school and college debate topics, and provides assistance to the Congressional Budget Office, the Office of Technology Assessment, and the General Accounting Office.

Documentation and status of legislation.—The Service prepares and publishes for distribution to the Congress the Digest of Public General Bills and Resolutions, including summaries of all public bills and resolutions introduced in Congress, the status of bills receiving action, and various pertinent indexes. Upon request, the Service prepares legislative history memorandums on bills for which hearings have been announced, and compiles and makes available to each committee reports on legislatively authorized programs and activities within that committee's jurisdiction that are scheduled to terminate during the current Congress.

Information and reference service.—The Congressional Research Service provides extensive information and reference assistance to Members and committees. Reference files containing clippings, pamphlets, and documents and automated information services are maintained for rapid information retrieval. Lists of selected reports, prepared by CRS staff on legislative issues, are regularly distributed to congressional offices. To provide faster responses and in-person services, the Service also maintains reference centers in congressional office buildings and the Congressional Reading Rooms in the Madison and Jefferson Buildings of the Library of Congress.

Executive direction and support.—Providing overall supervision and administrative support to the entire Congressional Research Service is the responsibility of the Office of the Director and the administrative personnel.

The Oliver Wendell Holmes devise fund and the permanent committee for the Oliver Wendell Holmes devise to administer it were created by an act of Congress, approved August 5, 1955 (69 Stat. 533).

The current program is devoted primarily to the preparation of a History of the Supreme Court of the United States, of which the first two volumes were published by the Macmillan Co. in 1972. The third, fourth and fifth volumes were published in August 1974, September 1981 and August 1985, respectively. Additional volumes are nearing completion.

The Office of the Superintendent of Documents operates under a separate appropriation which provides funds for: (1) the mailing for Members of Congress and other Government agencies of certain Government publications, as authorized by law; (2) the distribution of Government publications to designated depository libraries; (3) the compilation of catalogs and indexes of Government publications; and (4) beginning in 1987, the International Exchange Program which previously has been charged to the establishment issuing the publication. These four functions are related to the publication activity of other agencies and to the demands of the public, Members of Congress, and depository libraries. Consequently, the Office of the Superintendent of Documents can exercise little control over the volume of work which it may be called upon to perform. A description of these four functions follows:

Distribution for other Government agencies and Members of Congress.—The Office of Superintendent of Documents maintains mailing lists and mails, at the request of Government agencies and Members of Congress, certain publications specified by public law.

Depository library distribution.—As required, Government publications are supplied to libraries which are designated as depositories for Government publications.

Cataloging and indexing.—The Office of Superintendent of Documents is charged with preparing catalogs and indexes of all publications issued by the Federal Government. The principal publication is the "Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications."

International exchange.—The Office of Superintendent of Documents distributes Government publications to foreign governments which agree, as indicated by the Library of Congress, to send to the United States similar publications of their governments for delivery to the Library of Congress.

The Government Printing Office executes orders for printing, binding, and blankbook work, placed by Congress and the various agencies of the Federal Government, and furnishes on order, blank paper, inks, and similar supplies. The Government Printing Office also sells publications to the public through its sales of publications program.

All such work is financed through the Government Printing Office revolving fund (44 U.S.C. 309). The fund is reimbursed by the customer agencies, receipts from sales of publications to the general public, and, except for the excess of receipts over costs associated with the sale of publications to the public, net operating income is retained for reuse by the fund.

The U.S. Tax Court hears and decides cases involving Federal income, estate and gift tax deficiencies and excise taxes relating to public charities, private foundations, qualified pension plans, real estate investment trusts, and windfall profit tax on domestic crude oil. It also renders declaratory judgments regarding the qualification or continuing qualification (including revocations of rulings on the exemptions) of retirement plans.

The Tax Court has jurisdiction to render declaratory judgments with respect to exempt organization status determinations pursuant to section 501(c)(3), Internal Revenue Code, and to enter declaratory judgments on the tax treatment of interest on proposed issues of Government obligations. In addition, the court has jurisdiction over actions to restrain disclosure and to obtain additional disclosure with respect to public inspection of written determinations issued by the Internal Revenue Service, and actions to compel the disclosure of the identity of third-party contacts relating to written determinations made by the Internal Revenue Service.

For 1988, the court proposes a trial program of 798 weeks consisting of 587 weeks of regular trial sessions and 211 weeks of small tax case sessions. Trials are held in approximately 90 cities throughout the United States.

The actual and estimated work volume of the court is presented in the following tabulation:

The Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe was created to monitor compliance with that code of conduct, particularly in regard to what is called "Basket Three" of the Final Act, the Provisions on Cooperation in Humanitarian and Other Fields. The law establishing the Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe also mandated it to monitor and encourage U.S. Government and private activities designed to expand East-West trade and the exchange of people and ideas. The Commission will receive semiannual reports from the President on the signatories' compliance with the Final Act and on U.S. activities in trade and cultural/humanitarian exchange and it will itself make advisory reports to the Congress on the progress of implementation.

The Commission is made up of nine Senators, nine Members of the House of Representatives and one Commissioner each from the Departments of State, Defense, and Commerce.

The United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit has exclusive jurisdiction of appeals from final decisions of all Federal district courts in cases arising under 28 U.S.C. 1338; 35 U.S.C. sections 145 and 146; 28 U.S.C. 1346(a)(2); final decisions of the U.S. Court of International Trade; final decisions of the U.S. Claims Court; final determinations of the U.S. International Trade Commission relating to unfair practices in import trade made under 19 U.S.C. 1337; findings of the Secretary of Commerce under headnote 6 to schedule 8, part 4, of the Tariff Schedules of the United States relating to importation of educational or scientific instruments and apparatus; final orders or decisions of the Merit Systems Protection Board, and final decisions of all agency Boards of Contract Appeals; and exclusive jurisdiction over appeals from final decisions of the Patent and Trademark Office tribunals on patent applications and interferences, trademark applications and interferences, cancellations, concurrent uses, and oppositions; and appeals under section 71 of the Plant Variety Protection Act of 1970.

The Court also has exclusive jurisdiction of (1) appeals from interlocutory orders or decrees in cases where the court would have jurisdiction of the appeal; and (2) appeals from judgments in civil actions for patent infringement otherwise appealable to the court and final except for accounting. The court may, in its discretion, permit an appeal from an interlocutory order of a judge who certifies that there is a controlling question of law and a substantial ground for difference of opinion thereon, and an immediate appeal may materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation.

The United States Court of International Trade, established under Article III of the Constitution of the United States, was created by the Act of October 10, 1980 (94 Stat. 1727), effective November 1, 1980, as successor to the former United States Customs Court. The court has original and exclusive jurisdiction of civil actions against the United States, its agencies and officers, and certain civil actions brought by the United States, arising out of import transactions and Federal statutes affecting international trade. The court possesses all the powers in law and equity of, or as conferred by statute upon, a district court of the United States, and is authorized to conduct jury trials. The geographical jurisdiction of the court is nationwide and trials before the court may be held at any place within the jurisdiction of the United States. The court also is authorized to hold hearings in foreign countries. The principal statutory provisions pertaining to the court are contained in the following sections of title 28 of the United States Code: Organization, sections 251 to 257; Jurisdiction, sections 1581 to 1585; and Procedures, sections 2631 to 2647.

Funds appropriated under this heading are for the salaries and benefits of judges and supporting personnel and all operating expenses of the United States courts of appeals, district courts, bankruptcy courts, and Claims Court. In fiscal year 1987, the following appropriation accounts, which are now shown as separate activities, were consolidated into this account: "Salaries of Judges," "Salaries of Supporting Personnel," "Expenses of Operation and Maintenance of the Courts," and "Space and Facilities."

Salaries of judges.—This activity includes the salaries and benefits of all active United States circuit and district judges (including judges of the territorial courts of the United States), Claims Court judges, bankruptcy judges, and all justices and judges who have retired from office or from regular active service in pursuance of law. The fiscal year 1988 request includes funds for an increase in the number of senior judges and for recalled bankruptcy judges.

Salaries of supporting personnel.—The salaries and benefits of all other officers and employees of the Federal Judiciary not otherwise specifically provided for are included under this activity. It provides for United States magistrates; the administrative and legal aides required to assist the judges and magistrates in the conduct of hearings, trials, and other judicial functions; and personnel to staff the component offices of the courts, including the Federal Probation Service. For fiscal year 1988, funds are included to annualize the cost of new positions authorized in 1987 and for an additional 1,679 supporting personnel required as a result of increased workload.

Expenses of operation and maintenance of the courts.—Funds included under this activity are for travel expenses incurred by judges, magistrates, and supporting personnel in attending sessions of court or transacting other official business and for relocation expenses, communications, printing, contractual services, supplies, equipment, and lawbooks. (d) For the purpose of this section, the rates payable to an employee who is covered by this section and who is paid from a schedule that was not in existence on September 30, [1986] 1987, shall be determined under regulations prescribed by the Office of Personnel Management.

(h) Nothing in this section may be construed to permit or require the payment to any employee covered by this section at a rate in excess of the rate that would be payable were this section not in effect.

(i) The Office of Personnel Management may provide for exceptions to the limitations imposed by this section if the Office determines that such exceptions are necessary to ensure the recruitment or retention of qualified employees.

(b)(1) If an officer or agency allots space during fiscal year 1988 or any fiscal year thereafter, to an individual or entity under subsection (a), such space may be provided to such individual or entity without charge for rent or services.

(2) If there is an agreement for the payment of costs associated with the provision of space allotted under subsection (a) or services provided in connection with such space, nothing in title 31, United States Code, or any other provision of law, shall be construed to prohibit or restrict payment by reimbursement to the miscellaneous receipts or other appropriate account of the Treasury.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—For the purpose of this section, the term "Combined Federal Campaign" and the term "community" each has the meaning given such term by section 950.101 of title 5 of the Code of Federal Regulations (as in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.)

[SEC. 619. None of the funds appropriated by this Act or any other Act shall be used for preparing, promulgating or implementing any regulations dealing with organization participation in the 1986 and 1987 Combined Federal Campaign other than repromulgating and implementing the 1984 and 1985 Combined Federal Campaign regulations, unless such regulations provide that any charitable organization which participated in any prior campaign shall be allowed to participate in 1986 and 1987 campaign: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated by this Act or any other Act shall be used for preparing, promulgating or implementing new regulations dealing with the Combined Federal Campaign ("CFC") which require or allow the Office of Personnel Management to directly or indirectly determine the eligibility of any agency to participate in the CFC (other than the local service of those agencies which perform a substantial preponderance of their services in the United States) if that agency is a member of a qualified federated group.]

[SEC. 620. None of the funds appropriated or made available by this Act shall be used to implement or enforce the rule proposed on May 7, 1986 (51 Federal Register 16988-16991), or any other regulation issued pursuant to statute requiring competitive bidding for electricity, gas, or steam utility services acquired by the Federal Government.]

[SEC. 621. [SEC. 622. Section 202 of title 3, United States Code, is amended by inserting a new clause (3) to read "(3) the Treasury Building and grounds;" and by renumbering previously existing clauses (3) through (8) as clauses (4) through (9). The word "immediately" in prior clause

(6) (renumbered clause (7)) is stricken and the word "immediate" is inserted in its place.]

[SEC. 623. The Rural Electrification Act of 1936 is amended by inserting after section 310 (7 U.S.C. 940) the following new section:

"SEC. 311. PRIVATIZATION PROGRAM.—The Administrator shall establish a privatization demonstration program which shall permit borrowers to prepay loans made by the Federal Financing Bank and guaranteed under section 306 of this Act by paying the outstanding principal balance due on the loans. No sums in addition to the payment of the outstanding principal balance due on the Federal Financing Bank loans may be charged as the result of such prepayment against the borrower, the fund, or the Rural Electrification Administration. Federal Financing Bank shall be refinanced using the existing section 306 loan guarantee, with private capital, in an amount not to exceed the outstanding principal amount prepaid: Provided, That such guarantee of private capital shall be 90% of the principal amount of the loan or any portion thereof plus accrued interest outstanding at any time during the maturity period of the loan and shall be fully transferable and assignable. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, borrowers may prepay Federal Financing Bank loans under this section, except that such borrowers shall be required to prepay all of their outstanding loans made or guaranteed under this Act within one year of prepayment of the first loan. A direct or insured loan prepaid under this section shall be prepaid by the borrower at the lesser of the outstanding principal balance due on the loan or the loan's present value discounted from the face value at maturity at the rate set by the Administrator. A Rural Telephone Bank loan shall be prepaid by paying the outstanding principal balance on the loan. No guarantee or other financial assistance shall be available to the borrowers to refinance outstanding loans prepaid hereunder. In the case of an electric borrower prepaying under this section or otherwise prepaying a loan at less than the outstanding principal balance due on the loan, after the date of prepayment, no loans, loan guarantees or other financial assistance shall be provided pursuant to this Act to the borrower or its successors or for the purpose of financing the construction or operation of generating plants or bulk transmission lines for the purpose of furnishing electric energy in the area served on a retail or wholesale basis by such borrower. In the case of a telephone borrower prepaying under this section, or otherwise prepaying a loan at less than the outstanding principal balance due on the loan, after the date of prepayment, no loans, loan guarantees or other financial assistance shall be provided pursuant to this Act to the borrower or its successors or for the purpose of furnishing or improving telephone service in the area served by such borrower. In determining the service area of electric borrowers, the Administrator shall make allowances and adjustments to avoid adversely affecting the eligibility of other borrowers for financial assistance under this Act where such borrowers are currently providing electric supply services for retail loads in the same area and which are reasonably expected to continue providing electric supply services for retail loads in such areas. In the event that the borrower prepaying under this section shall be using a majority of its generating capacity to directly serve its retail consumers, other borrowers which are purchasing power from such borrower as of September 30, 1986, shall continue to remain eligible for financing under this Act for needs in their service area. Nothing in this section shall prohibit a borrower which has prepaid pursuant to this section from participating in generation and transmission projects with borrowers which have not prepaid, so long as the borrower which has prepaid utilizes private capital financing without financial assistance under this Act: Provided further, That nothing in this section shall prohibit short-term power purchases by borrowers which have prepaid under this section from borrowers which have not prepaid. The Administrator shall issue regulations to implement this section within 60 days." The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank) finances development projects in less developed countries. By applying banking principles to the achievement of development goals, it promotes increased economic productivity and helps developing economies meet more of the basic needs of their people. Since its founding in 1945, the Bank has made loan commitments of approximately $126 billion.

The Bank's 1986 lending program included 131 loan commitments to 41 countries for a total of $13.2 billion. More than twice this amount was contributed to these projects by recipient countries, commercial lenders, and other multilateral or bilateral agencies.

The Administration's request for 1988 consists of: (1) $58.6 million in budget authority for paid-in capital subscriptions and $664.7 million in program limitations for callable capital subscriptions to provide the last payment for the $8.8 billion U.S. share of the $40.0 billion 1981 General Capital Increase (GCI); (2) $14.8 million for paid-in capital subscriptions and $133.6 million in program limitations for callable capital subscriptions to the 1970 Selective Capital Increase (SCI); and (3) $131.4 million for paid-in capital subscriptions and $1,370.8 million in program limitations for callable capital subscriptions to the 1984 SCI.

The International Development Association (IDA), a member of the World Bank Group, provides development financing on highly concessional terms to the world's poorest nations. IDA is the largest source of multilateral lending extended on concessional terms to developing countries. Projects have to meet the same economic and financial standards as other World Bank projects and there has never been a default on an IDA loan by any borrower.

By June 30, 1986, IDA had extended credits totaling $39.8 billion for development projects in 85 countries. IDA assistance is concentrated overwhelmingly in the poorest countries—mainly those with an annual per capita gross national product of less than $400 in 1985 dollars. In 1985, IDA's lending program included 105 credits to 38 countries for a total of $3.1 billion.

The Eighth Replenishment of IDA will provide resources of nearly $12.5 billion. The United States has pledged $2.875 billion to the replenishment and the $958.3 million requested in 1988 is for the first installment on that contribution.

In addition, a 1987 supplemental for $207.5 million of budget authority is being requested to complete the third, and final, installments to the seventh replenishment.

The African Development Fund (AFDF), the concessional lending affiliate of the African Development Bank, makes loans to the poorest African nations. More than 80 percent of its lending goes to countries with per capita GNP of $510 or less. During 1986, AFDF lending amounted to $400 million to 27 countries.

The 1988 request for the AFDF is $75 million—the final installment of the U.S. share of the Fund's fourth replenishment.

In addition, a 1987 supplemental of $36.6 million is being requested to complete the second installment to the current replenishment.

The African Development Bank (AFDB) makes loans at near-market rates for the economic and social development of its African members. Membership in the Bank was restricted to African nations until 1982 when non-regional countries were allowed to join. The U.S. became a member of the Bank in 1983 with an initial subscription of $360 million of AFDB capital.

In 1986, the AFDB lent $849 million for development projects in 13 countries. The Bank expects to lend about $1 billion in 1987.

The 1988 request of $9 million of paid-in capital and $135 million of program limitations for callable capital subscriptions is for the first installment on the $179 million U.S. share of the $13 billion increase in AFDB capital.

In addition, a 1987 supplemental is being requested to complete the U.S. share of the previous capital increase.

The Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency (MIGA) is a proposed international development institution designed to encourage the flow of investment to and among developing countries by: (1) issuing guarantees against noncommercial risks; (2) carrying out a wide range of investment promotion activities; and (3) encouraging sound investment policies in member countries. The administration supports the MIGA Convention and seeks authorization and full funding of U.S. membership in the 1988 budget.

The capital stock of the MIGA will be $1.08 billion. The U.S. share will be $222 million or 20.5 percent of the total. The request for 1988 is $44.4 million of budget authority, half to be paid in cash and the remainder to be paid in the form of non-negotiable, non-interest bearing promissory notes. The rest of the U.S. share ($177.6 million) represents callable capital requested under program limitations.

Functional development assistance.—Program provides economic resources to developing countries with the aim of bringing the benefits of development to the poor. Loans and grants under this program are concentrated in those areas in which the United States has special expertise and which promise the greatest opportunity for the poor to better their lives.

Funds are provided under seven separate activities:

Agriculture, rural development and nutrition.—Supports efforts to increase food production in the developing countries by improving the productivity and income of small farmers, creating greater rural employment opportunities, enhancing rural infrastructure and the environment, improving nutrition and removing impediments to equitable economic growth.

Population planning.—Supports efforts to reduce population growth rates in developing countries and to provide families with effective options in choosing the number and spacing of their children.

Health.—Assists developing countries to increase access to health care, family planning and nutrition services, to make safe water and adequate sanitation more widely available, to reduce the incidence of debilitating tropical diseases, malnutrition, diarrheal infections, measles and other preventable diseases, and to increase governmental capacity to plan and manage their health resources.

Child survival fund.—Provides funds for programs designed to deal directly with the special health needs of children and mothers. Includes oral rehydration therapy to combat diarrheal diseases, immunization and other primary health care efforts aimed at cutting in half infant and child mortality rates in developing countries.

Education and human resources.—Supports the efforts of developing countries to provide basic education for children, improve the fundamental life skills of adults, and improve the management skills and performance of managers of development programs.

Energy and selected development activities.—Provides assistance to developing countries to better contend with national energy problems, to cope with employment and income problems in urban areas, to mitigate the problems of rapid urban migration, and to improve environmental management and resource planning. This activity also facilitates the involvement of U.S. private voluntary organizations in development and helps improve access by developing countries to U.S. scientific and technical expertise.

Science and technology.—Supports new and innovative research on problems of development and assists developing countries in improving their scientific and technological capacities.

Beginning in 1988, development assistance for sub-Saharan Africa, including assistance currently provided under the Sahel Development Program, is requested to be funded under the new Development Fund for Africa account.

TRADE CREDIT INSURANCE PROGRAM

During fiscal year [1987] 1988, total commitments to guarantee or insure loans for the "Trade Credit Insurance Program" may be made only to the extent that the total loan principal, any part of which is to be guaranteed, shall not exceed [$275,000,000 of contingent liability for loan principal] $200,000,000. (Foreign Assistance and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 1987, as included in Public Laws 99-500 and 99-591, Section 101(f).)

The Trade Credit Insurance Program is a secondary guarantee program designed to promote recovery of the private export sector in Central America. Given startup and implementation difficulties in the program, which are being addressed, and continuation of the weak financial position of the Central American economies, which limits their access to the Export-Import Bank's regular credit programs, new authority of $200 million to commit to guarantee or insure loans is sought for 1988.

The Housing guaranty program extends guaranties to assist developing countries in formulating and executing sound housing and community development policies that meet the needs of lower income groups. Activities to be carried out will emphasize: (1) sites and services and core housing projects providing homesites and shelter for poor families; (2) slum upgrading projects designed to conserve and improve existing shelter; (3) low-income shelter projects designed for demonstration or institution building purposes; and (4) project-related community facilities and services. The request for borrowing authority in 1988 is to replenish the Housing Guaranty reserve, depleted as a result of increased loan reschedulings.

The private sector revolving fund expands the AID private sector initiative through new financing mechanisms and support of business activities. For example, loans are made to local private sector firms and credit institutions in developing countries. A capitalization totaling $60 million is intended to make the fund totally self-sustaining. Repayments of appropriated funds will be made from fees, interest payments, and other reflows. Repayment of appropriated funds to the Treasury will begin once the revolving fund reaches $100 million in assets.

Section 608 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 created a revolving fund to finance the acquisition and rehabilitation at minimal cost of U.S. Government-owned excess property for purchase by friendly countries and eligible organizations, for use in conjunction with economic development programs. Excess property includes heavy construction equipment, vehicles, heavy machinery, electrical generating equipment, and medical equipment and supplies. Peace Corps operating expenses provide direct and indirect support for over 5,000 Americans engaged in voluntary services in over 60 countries worldwide. The volunteers help fill the trained manpower needs of developing countries and encourage self-sustaining development of skilled manpower. The Peace Corps promotes mutual understanding between the peoples of the developing world and the United States and focuses the attention of the American people on the concepts of volunteerism and self-help at the grassroots level.

Volunteer operations.—The financial resources associated with this budget activity provide for the placement, training and direct support of Peace Corps Volunteers overseas. These resources will fund approximately 4,500 volunteer years of service worldwide in 1988.

Recruitment and development education.—This activity provides for volunteer recruitment and selection, development education, and related activities of the Peace Corps. In 1988, approximately 2,900 trainees qualified to enter Peace Corps service will be selected.

Program development and support.—This activity funds the administrative expenses and general overhead costs associated with the Peace Corps program, including reimbursements to the Department of State for administrative support overseas.

The Overseas Private Investment Corporation encourages the participation of United States private capital and skills in the economic and social development of less developed friendly countries. Its primary programs are: (1) political risk insurance against losses due to expropriation, inconvertibility, and war damage; and (2) investment financing through loans and guaranteed loans. The Corporation operates on a self-sustaining basis. The Administration is analyzing how some functions of the Corporation could be privatized. It will explore ways by which to make OPIC's insurance program truly complementary to the private insurance market through such means as moving OPIC towards a role of insurer of last resort. Accordingly, the Administration will evaluate the levels of some OPIC insurance coverage, OPIC operations in countries where the private insurance sector may now be competitive, and changes in OPIC's insurance premiums and maturity coverages. OPIC will also be used more in concert with other government agencies as an effective instrument in achieving investment policy reform in developing countries.

As of September 30, 1986 the current dollar value of the U.S. quota denominated in Special Drawing Rights (SDR), the IMF's unit of account, was $21,742 million.

Use by the IMF of the quota commitment does not result in net budget outlays because the United States receives an increase in its international monetary reserves corresponding to any transfer of dollars to the IMF under the U.S. quota subscription. The United States can use these reserves automatically to meet a balance of payments financing need.

Members of the IMF are obligated to maintain the value of their currency, held by the IMF, in terms of the SDR—the unit of account of the IMF. When the dollar appreciates (depreciates) against the SDR, the cost of maintaining these holdings decreases (increases), and an appropriate adjustment is made in the U.S. account with the IMF. In fiscal year 1986, the maintenance of value adjustment resulted in an increase in the dollar value of IMF dollars holdings equivalent to $1,514 million. Budget authority is provided for the maintenance of value adjustment, but this adjustment does not result in any immediate cash transfers to the IMF.

The Supplementary Financing Facility was created to augment temporarily the ability of the IMF to assist member countries with serious balance of payments problems, thereby allowing these countries time to implement required policy measures without resorting to abrupt and harmful restrictions on trade and payments. The United States and other countries agreed to finance the facility by making available to the IMF lines of credit totalling 7,784 Special Drawing Rights (about $9.4 billion at the September 30, 1986 exchange rate) of which the U.S. commitment was 1,450 million SDR (but not to exceed $1,831 million appropriated). As of September 30, 1986, U.S. claims on the IMF under the Supplementary Financing Facility had declined to SDR 866 million ($1,051 million) as a consequence of repayments by the IMF.

The General Arrangements to Borrow (GAB) were established in 1962 by 10 industrial countries, including the United States, as a means of supplementing the IMF's resources when needed to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary system. Each participant agreed to provide specific amounts of its currency to help finance drawings from the IMF by another GAB participant. GAB members agreed in early 1983 to increase their financial commitments to the GAB and to allow the IMF, in certain strictly defined circumstances, to activate the GAB to provide financing for any IMF member. Total GAB commitments were increased from SDR 6.3 billion to SDR 17 billion, with the U.S. share rising from $2.0 billion to SDR 4.250 billion, approximately $5.2 billion at the September 30, 1986 exchange rate. Financing extended by the United States under the GAB does not result in any net budget outlays because the United States receives an increase in its international reserve assets corresponding to any transfer to the IMF under the U.S. credit line.

During 1986, no calls were made on the U.S. commitment under the GAB, and no U.S. loans were outstanding at the end of the fiscal year.

This revolving fund finances the acquisition of defense articles and defense services in anticipation of their transfer to foreign countries and international organizations. The fund enhances the ability of the United States to respond to urgent requirements of allied and friendly governments for military equipment while minimizing the adverse impact on U.S. forces due to diversions from production or U.S. military stocks. Such reviews shall address the economic viability of the project; adverse impacts on the environment, natural resources, and indigenous peoples; and recommendations as to measures, including alternatives, that could eliminate or mitigate adverse impacts. If not classified under the national security system of classification, such information shall be made available to the public;]

None of the funds made available to carry out part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used to pay for any biomedical research which relates in whole or in part, to methods of, or the performance of, abortions or involuntary sterilization as a means of family planning. None of the funds made available to carry out part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be obligated or expended for any country or organization if the President certifies that the use of these funds by any such country or organization would violate any of the above provisions related to abortions and involuntary sterilizations. The Congress reaffirms its commitments to Population, Development Assistance and to the need for informed voluntary family planning.

【Sec. 541. Not less than $30,000,000 of the aggregate amount of funds appropriated by this Act to carry out the provisions of chapter 1 of part I of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 and chapter 4 of part II of that Act, shall be available for the provision of food, medicine, or other humanitarian assistance to the Afghan people, notwithstanding any other provision of law.】

【Sec. 542. None of the funds provided in this Act shall be available for the Sudan if the President determines that the Sudan is acting in a manner that would endanger the stability of the region, or the Camp David peace process.】

【Sec. 543. The President shall make available to the Cambodian non-Communist resistance forces not less than $1,500,000 nor more than $5,000,000 of the funds appropriated by this Act for “Military assistance” and for the “Economic support fund”, notwithstanding any other provision of law: Provided, That funds appropriated by this Act for this purpose shall be obligated in accordance with the provisions of section 906 of the International Security and Development Cooperation Act of 1985 (Public Law 99-83).】

Sec. 【544】 528. None of the funds appropriated or made available pursuant to this Act shall be available to a private voluntary organization which fails to provide upon timely request any document, file, or record necessary to the auditing requirements of the Agency for International Development.

【Sec. 545. Of the amounts made available by this Act for military assistance and financing for El Salvador under chapters 2 and 5 of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 and under the Arms Export Control Act, $5,000,000 may not be expended until the President reports, following the conclusion of the Appeals process in the case of Captain Avila, to the Committees on Appropriations that the Government of El Salvador has (1) substantially concluded all investigative action with respect to those responsible for the January 1981 deaths of the two United States land reform consultants Michael Hammer and Mark Pearlman and the Salvadoran Land Reform Institute Director Jose Rodolfo Viera, and (2) pursued all legal avenues to bring to trial and obtain a verdict of those who ordered and carried out the January 1981 murders.】

【Sec. 546. It is the sense of the Congress that all countries receiving United States foreign assistance under the “Economic support fund”, “Foreign Military Credit Sales”, “Military Assistance” program, “International military education and training”, Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (Public Law 480), development assistance programs, or trade promotion programs should fully cooperate with the international refugee assistance organizations, the United States, and other governments in facilitating lasting solutions to refugee situations. Further, where resettlement to other countries is the appropriate solution, such resettlement should be expedited in cooperation with the country of asylum without respect to race, sex, religion, or national origin.】

【Sec. 547. (a) The Congress finds that—】

【(1) the United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF) reports that four million children die annually because they have not been immunized against the six major childhood diseases: polio, measles, whooping cough, diphtheria, tetanus, and tuberculosis;】

【(2) at present less than 20 percent of children in the developing world are fully immunized against these diseases;】

【(3) each year more than five million additional children are permanently disabled and suffer diminished capacities to contribute to the economic, social and political development of their countries because they have not been immunized;】

【(4) ten million additional childhood deaths from immunizable and potentially immunizable diseases could be averted annually by the development of techniques in biotechnology for new and cost-effective vaccines;】

【(5) the World Health Assembly, the Executive Board of the United Nations Children’s Fund, and the United Nations General Assembly are calling upon the nations of the world to commit the resources necessary to meet the challenge of universal access to childhood immunization by 1990;】

【(6) the United States, through the Centers for Disease Control and the Agency for International Development, joined in a global effort by providing political and technical leadership that made possible the eradication of smallpox during the 1970’s;】

【(7) the development of national immunization systems that can both be sustained and also serve as a model for a wide range of primary health care actions is a desired outcome of our foreign assistance policy;】

【(8) the United States Centers for Disease Control headquartered in Atlanta is uniquely qualified to provide technical assistance for a worldwide immunization and eradication effort and is universally respected;】

【(9) at the 1984 Bellagio Conference it was determined that the goal of universal childhood immunization by 1990 is indeed achievable;】

【(10) the Congress, through authorizations and appropriations for international health research and primary health care activities and the establishment of the Child Survival Fund, has played a vital role in providing for the well-being of the world’s children;】

【(11) the Congress has expressed its expectation that the Agency for International Development will set as a goal the immunization by 1990 of at least 80 percent of all the children in those countries in which the Agency has a program; and】

【(12) the United States private sector and public at large have responded generously to appeals for support for national immunization campaigns in developing countries.】

【(b)(1) The Congress calls upon the President to direct the Agency for International Development, working through the Centers for Disease Control and other appropriate Federal agencies, to work in a global effort to provide enhanced support toward achieving the goal of universal access to childhood immunization by 1990 by—】

【(A) assisting in the delivery, distribution, and use of vaccines, including—】

【(i) the building of locally sustainable systems and technical capacities in developing countries to reach, by the appropriate age, not less than 80 per centum of their annually projected target population with the full schedule of required immunizations, and】

【(ii) the development of a sufficient network of indigenous professionals and institutions with responsibility for developing, monitoring, and assessing immunization programs and continually adapting strategies to reach the goal of preventing immunizable diseases; and】

【(B) performing, supporting, and encouraging research and development activities, both in the public and private sector, that will be targeted at developing new vaccines and at modifying and improving existing vaccines to make them more appropriate for use in developing countries.】

【(2) In support of this global effort, the President should appeal to the people of the United States and the United States private sector to support public and private efforts to provide the resources necessary to achieve universal access to childhood immunization by 1990.】

Budget and program analysis.—This activity provides direction and administration of the Department's budgetary functions including development, presentation, execution, control, reporting and adjusting fund and manpower resources; evaluates program and legislative proposals for program, budget and related resource implications; develops and maintains a mission-oriented program structure which defines Department missions, goals and objectives for the purpose of establishing long- and short-range program planning and to aid the Secretary and other departmental and agency officials in making management decisions regarding the Department's programs and resources. The office analyzes program and resource issues and alternatives, and prepares summaries of pertinent data to aid departmental policy officials and agency program managers in the decisionmaking process.

Personnel.—This activity provides general liaison, direction, leadership coordination and monitoring of the personnel management program in the Department. Department policies and procedures relating to all personnel functions are promulgated, and operational services are provided to the Office of the Secretary, Office of the General Counsel, Office of Governmental and Public Affairs, Office of Budget and Program Analysis, and those agencies under Departmental administration reporting to the Assistant Secretary for Administration.

Finance and management.—This activity provides Departmental leadership, development and evaluation of programs in finance, accounting, Federal assistance, occupational safety and health, productivity and management improvements. The Director serves as the Department's finance officer, management improvement officer and comptroller of the Working Capital Fund. Finance and Management also provides budget, accounting and fiscal services for the Departmental staff offices, Office of the General Counsel, Office of Governmental and Public Affairs, and the Office of the Secretary.

Operations.—This activity provides staff and support services in the management of real and personal property, procurement, contracts, supplies, motor vehicles and internal energy conservation to the USDA agencies, including those in the Washington, D.C., complex.

Information resources management.—This activity designs, implements and revises systems, processes, work methods and techniques to improve the management of information resources and the operational effectiveness of USDA. The Director serves as the Department's clearance officer for statistical reporting and information collection. This activity also provides telecommunications and ADP services to USDA agencies and staff offices, including the Washington Computer Center, Fort Collins Computer Center, and Kansas City Computer Center.

Advocacy and enterprise.—This activity provides leadership, direction and coordination for the Department's programs for civil rights, which include program delivery, compliance and equal employment opportunity, and for efforts to further participation of minority colleges and universities in Departmental programs. It provides oversight of all procurement activities to assure maximum participation of small and disadvantaged business in the process and directs and monitors agency compliance in promoting full and open competition in procurement.

Administrative law judges and judicial officer.—The administrative law judges hold hearings on new regulations and orders and on disciplinary complaints filed by the Department or on some petitions filed by private parties. Final administrative decisions in regulatory proceedings are rendered by the Judicial Officer.

National communications system.—This item provides funding for USDA's proportional share of the communications system being developed as part of the National Security and Emergency Preparedness Program. Participation in the NCS is required under National Security Directive 201 of December 1985.

Hazardous waste management.—Under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act and the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act the Department has the responsibility to meet the same standards regarding the storage and disposition of hazardous wastes as private businesses. Since the focus of attention on this matter has revealed that the Department may have substantial commitments to meet, a central fund has been established so that resources may be allocated to agencies according to priority based on objective criteria.

The Agricultural Research Service conducts research to provide the means for a safer, more economical, and more abundant supply of agricultural products for the Nation. The Service uses coordinated, interdisciplinary approaches to perform basic and applied research on soil and water conservation, plant and animal productivity, commodity conversion and delivery, human nutrition, and integrated agricultural systems. The 1988 budget proposes an increase to enhance plant germplasm and for animal productivity research to reduce production costs and improve product quality.

Research on soil and water conservation.—Research is conducted to improve soil and water management, irrigation, and conservation practices; to protect natural resources from harmful effects of soil, air, and water pollutants and to minimize certain agricultural pollution problems; and to determine the relation of soil types and water to plant, animal, and human nutrition.

Research on plant productivity.—Research is conducted to increase plant productivity by improving plant varieties, developing new crop resources, and improving crop production practices, including methods to control plant diseases, nematodes, insects, and weeds. The program increase proposed for 1988 is to enhance the germplasm collection, maintenance and evaluation system.

Research on animal productivity.—Research is conducted to increase livestock productivity (including poultry) through improved breeding, feeding, and management practices, and to develop methods for controlling diseases, parasites, and insect pests affecting these animals. The increase proposed for 1988 is to reduce the amount of fat in beef, pork, lamb and poultry while retaining the desired quality and quantity of meat.

Research on commodity conversion and delivery.—Research is conducted to develop new and improved foods, feeds, products, and processes for agricultural commodities and to improve the processing, transportation, storage, wholesaling, and retailing of products. Research is also conducted on problems of human health and safety, including means to insure the safety of food and feed supplies, control insect pests of man and his belongings, and reduce the hazards to human life resulting from pesticide residues and other causes.

Human nutrition research.—Research is conducted on subjects as human nutritional requirements and the composition and nutritive value of foods, to promote optimum human health through improved nutrition.

Integration of agricultural systems.—Research is conducted to develop integrated systems for efficiently producing, processing, and marketing agricultural products and to develop alternative agricultural systems that are less dependent upon nonrenewable resources and that are productive, efficient, and sustainable in the long term.

Repair and maintenance of facilities.—Funds are used to restore, upgrade, and maintain Federal facilities to meet OSHA and EPA requirements, provide suitable workspace for in-house research programs, and to retrofit existing structures for better energy utilization.

Contingencies.—Funds available to meet urgent needs that develop unexpectedly during the year when such needs cannot be met by redirection of resources from other projects.

Construction of facilities.—Unobligated balances will be used for this purpose.

Advances and reimbursements.—Agricultural Research Service performs program research activities and services for other USDA, Federal, and non-Federal agencies. These activities and services are paid for on a reimbursable basis.

Cooperative State Research Service participates in a nationwide system of agricultural research program planning and coordination between the State institutions and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. It assists in maintaining cooperation among the State institutions, and between the State institutions and their Federal research partners. The Agency administers grants and payments to State institutions to supplement State and local funding for agricultural research and higher education.

Payments under the Hatch Act.—Funds under the Hatch Act are allocated on a formula basis to agricultural experiment stations of the land-grant colleges in the 50 States, District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Micronesia, and Northern Marianas.

Cooperative forestry research.—These funds are allocated by formula to land-grant colleges or agricultural experiment stations in the 50 States, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, and other State-supported colleges and universities having a forestry school and offering graduate training in forestry sciences.

Payments to 1890 colleges and Tuskegee University.—Funds support agricultural research at the 1890 land-grant colleges, including Tuskegee University.

Special research grants.—These grants are targeted to localized problems. No funding is proposed in 1988.

Competitive research grants.—Research scientists throughout the U.S. scientific community compete for funding under this program. These grants support basic research in biotechnology, plant and animal science, pest science, and human nutrition.

Animal health and disease research.—Funds, distributed by formula, support livestock and poultry disease research in colleges of veterinary medicine and in eligible agricultural experiment stations. No funding is proposed in 1988.

Federal administration.—A coordinating and review staff assists in maintaining cooperation within and among the States, and between the States and their Federal research partners. This staff also administers research grants and payments to States. Federal administration is funded from a combination of program set-asides from formula and grant programs and from direct appropriation for administration.

1890 research facilities.—Funds support the purchase of land and the construction, alteration or renovation of buildings necessary for the conduct of food and agricultural research at colleges eligible to receive funds under the second Morrill Act of 1890, including Tuskegee University. No funding is proposed in 1988.

Higher education.—Funding is proposed for Strengthening Grants to support resident instruction at the 1890 colleges, the Tuskegee University, and the University of the District of Columbia. The Morrill-Nelson and graduate training grants programs receive no funding in 1988.

Forestry competitive grants.—This program emphasizes basic research in the areas of harvesting, wood utilization and forest biology. No funding is proposed in 1988.

Research facilities.—Funds support the construction, acquisition, equipping and remodeling of research facilities at the State agricultural experiment stations and other eligible institutions. No funding is proposed in 1988.

Reimbursable program.—Funds support basic and applied agriculture research and activities performed for other USDA, Federal, and non-Federal agencies.

The Federal Extension Service, States, and localities comprise the Cooperative Extension System. This nationwide system provides out-of-school, applied education in agriculture, home economics, community development, and 4-H youth programs.

Federal funds are distributed primarily by formula to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, Micronesia, Northern Marianas and American Samoa, primarily on the basis of population. Funds are used primarily for the employment of State, area, and county extension workers and paraprofessionals who work with individuals, families, community organizations, marketing concerns, and others by providing advice and assistance in the application of improved methods for production, marketing, nutrition, family living, and community development. Work with youth is accomplished largely through the 4-H program. Most of these funds are matched by the States and provide the Federal share of State retirement and penalty mail costs associated with program activities specifically undertaken with these matched funds.

In fiscal year 1988 formula support to land-grant institutions, including maintenance of operations at the 1890 institutions, Tuskegee University, and the District of Columbia is proposed. All earmarked programs are proposed for elimination.

The Extension Service provides leadership and assistance to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, the District of Columbia, American Samoa, Northern Marianas and Micronesia, in developing extension programs, improving teaching methods, efficient use of available resources, evaluation of programs, and administrative services. These responsibilities are funded from a combination of program set-asides for administering payments to States and from direct appropriations for the Federal Extension Administration.

Crop and livestock estimates.—The Service provides the official National and State estimates of acreage, yield, and production of crops, stocks and value of farm commodities, and numbers of inventory values of livestock items. Data on approximately 120 crops and 45 livestock products are covered in some 300 reports issued each year. Data collected and published on prices paid and received by farmers are basic to computation of parity prices.

The work under this activity is conducted through 44 State offices serving the 50 States; most of these offices are operated as joint State and Federal services. Cooperative arrangements with State agencies provide additional State and county data. Major program modifications in 1988 include: An increase of $800,000 to provide improved quality on the acreage intentions, mid-year acreage, monthly crop reports, and end-of-year crop acreage and production surveys by using probability procedures; and an increase of $500,000 to improve Agricultural Statistics Board Methodology.

Statistical research and service.—This activity is designed to improve crop and livestock estimating techniques by improving sample survey designs and procedures and by testing new forecasting and estimating techniques, such as the use of satellite data.

The World Agricultural Outlook Board (WAOB) was established to provide a single focal point for the Nation's economic intelligence related to domestic and international food and agriculture.

The objectives of the WAOB are to improve the consistency, objectivity, and reliability of outlook and situation material being disseminated to the public and to integrate and coordinate USDA domestic and international economic information assistance.

The WAOB carries out these objectives through daily market surveillance and special analyses of international and domestic agricultural developments, direct participation in the planning of research programs supporting outlook and situation activities, and coordination of all departmental activities relating to weather and climate and remote sensing. The 1988 budget includes an increase of $72,000 for support of integrated economic/meteorological forecasting system.

The Foreign Agricultural Service mission is to help American farmers and traders take maximum advantage of increased opportunities to sell U.S. agricultural commodities abroad and to help increase U.S. farm income.

Activities are conducted within three program areas: Foreign agricultural affairs.—The Service maintains agricultural counselors, attachés or trade officers at 76 foreign posts to assist overseas development of markets for U.S. farm commodities. They work closely with numerous U.S. agricultural trade groups and maintain significant contacts with foreign governments and traders to promote market access for U.S. farm products. They also file annually about 4,000 comprehensive reports regarding foreign agricultural production, supply, demand, marketing and trade policy developments to keep U.S. agriculture, industry, and Government currently informed.

Foreign market information and access.—This program forges a link between the Foreign Agricultural Affairs program and the agency's analytical/informational and market development planning/services functions that serve the U.S. agricultural community and Government decisionmakers. The analysis and timely release of periodicals on world commodity conditions allow U.S. farm and trade groups to have ready access to information that can be used as reliable sources to assess short-term changes in world agricultural supply conditions by commodity.

The analyses of world commodity conditions provide the information necessary to develop export marketing strategies that can be used by the Department not only to gain market access but to enhance the long term market development plans for major U.S. commodities.

Foreign market development.—This program provides funding support to 47 commodity associations (cooperators), 16 contractors participating in the export incentive program, 24 private firms participating in the Value-Added Product Promotion Program, 4 regional groups (representing 47 State departments of agriculture) and the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture. Under FAS guidance and supervision, these organizations conduct an extensive worldwide market development program on behalf of the U.S. farm sector. In addition, the Service develops and operates a worldwide system of multicommodity promotional programs utilizing product exhibits, trade teams,

The mission of the Office of International Cooperation and Development (OICD) is to promote U.S. agriculture and to advance the agriculture of developing countries as parts of a complementary global agricultural system capable of providing ample food and fiber for all people.

International agricultural development.—OICD analyzes agricultural policy issues related to USDA's international agricultural development efforts, and supports the Cancun Presidential Agricultural Task Forces and the International Science and Education Council. The Agency also formulates and reviews food aid development activities supported by Public Law 480 Titles I and III agreements.

International scientific and technical cooperation.—OICD manages the Department's bilateral exchange and cooperative research programs with foreign governments and institutions in order to strengthen the role of science and technology in the ongoing effort to stabilize world food supplies and to increase the efficiency with which world resources are used. Priorities and criteria for these programs are based on domestic research priorities, potential benefits to U.S. agricultural production, and the availability of desired technologies. OICD coordinates USDA's and the U.S. Government's participation in approximately 30 international organizations concerned with food, agriculture and rural development.

Reimbursable program.—OICD, utilizing USDA and university expertise, provides technical assistance and training to developing countries at the request of AID and international organizations. OICD manages technical assistance projects in over 50 countries, focusing on land and water management, crop and livestock production and marketing, forestry, pest control, resource conservation and other areas. OICD offers a technical and management training program in agriculture and rural development to participants from foreign countries and designees of international organizations.

Financing the sale of agricultural commodities for convertible foreign currencies and for dollars on credit terms; for convertible foreign currency for use under section 108; and furnishing commodities to carry out the Food for Progress Act of 1985 (titles I and III).—The Corporation finances all sales made pursuant to agreements concluded under the authority of title I, and may serve as the purchasing or shipping agent, or both, if the purchaser so requests. Sales are made to friendly countries—as defined in section 103(d) of the act—and must not displace expected commercial sales for cash dollars (secs. 103 (c) and (n)).

Agreements may not be made under title I in any calendar year which call for an appropriation to reimburse the Corporation in excess of $1.9 billion, plus unused prior years' authorizations.

Whenever practicable, terms of agreements must require payment at time of delivery of not less than 5% of the purchase price in dollars or in currencies convertible to dollars. These initial payments are applied against costs to reduce appropriation requests.

When U.S.-flag vessels are required to ship commodities under this title, the Corporation will pay the difference between U.S.-flag rates and foreign-flag rates. In limited cases, full transportation costs to port of entry or point of entry abroad may be included along with the cost of the commodity in the amount financed by CCC in order to ensure that U.S. food aid would reach the most needy recipients.

Use of foreign currency (title I).—Certain U.S. uses of foreign currencies are subject to the appropriation process. The Corporation is reimbursed for the dollar value of currencies so used. Proceeds from sales of foreign currencies and from dollar repayments of foreign currency loans are applied as a reduction in appropriation requests.

Financing sales of agricultural commodities for dollars or convertible foreign currencies on credit terms (title I).—Agreements are made with friendly countries for delivery in annual installments for not more than 10 years from the date of the agreement subject to the availability of the commodity.

Credit terms are to be no less favorable than those required by section 122 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, for loans made under that section.

Repayments under dollar credit agreements are not more than 20 years with a grace period of not more than 2 years on repayment of principal. Convertible foreign currency terms permit repayment of up to 40 years with deferral of principal payments for up to 10 years. As payments are received each year, they are applied against current costs to reduce appropriation requests.

Financing sales of agricultural commodities for convertible foreign currencies to be used pursuant to section 108 (title I).—Title I sales may be financed for convertible foreign currencies which are then loaned to financial intermediaries in the recipient country pursuant to agreements whereby the intermediaries would reloan the funds to promote private enterprise institutions. Funds repaid by the financial intermediaries may be used to finance additional private enterprise investment, develop new markets, pay U.S. obligations, or be converted to dollars.

Furnishing commodities to carry out the Food for Progress Act of 1985 (title I).—Funds appropriated to carry out title I may be used to furnish commodities to carry out the Food for Progress Act of 1985. Such commodities may be furnished on credit terms or on a grant basis in order to assist countries that have made a commitment to introduce and expand free enterprise elements in their agricultural economies.

Total title I agreements made since inception to September 30, 1986, amount to $15,967.8 million cost value, including ocean freight for shipment on U.S. ships. Major commodities are wheat, cotton, oils, rice, and feed grains. Payments received during the period amount to $4,200.1 million, of which $2,586.3 million was applied to principal and $1,613.8 million to interest.

The following table reflects the composition of the combined appropriations (in thousands of dollars):

malnutrition. They are furnished through friendly governments, private voluntary agencies, foreign nonprofit voluntary agencies if no such U.S. agency is available, and intergovernmental organizations such as the United Nations World Food Program.

The Corporation is authorized to pay the costs of acquisition, packaging, processing, enrichment, preservation, fortification, transportation, handling, and other incidental costs incurred up to the time of delivery to U.S. ports. The Corporation also pays ocean freight charges, and pays transportation costs to points of entry other than ports in the case of landlocked countries, where carriers to a specific country are unavailable, where ports cannot be used effectively, or where a substantial saving in costs or time can be obtained, and pays general average contributions arising from ocean transport. In addition, transportation costs from designated points of entry or ports of entry abroad to storage and distribution sites and associated storage and distribution costs may be paid for commodities made available to meet urgent and extraordinary relief requirements.

Up to $7.5 million each year may be used to buy foreign currencies accruing under title I of this act to meet costs directed to community and other self-help activities designed to alleviate the causes of the need for such aid. Such costs may not include personnel and administrative costs of cooperating sponsors, distributing agencies and recipient agencies.

Through September 30, 1986, appropriations totaling $17,850 million were authorized. Beginning October 1, 1985, no programs of assistance shall be undertaken under this title during any fiscal year which call for an appropriation of more than $1 billion to reimburse the Corporation. This limitation applies to costs incurred, including its investment in commodities (but only on the basis of a price not greater than the export market price of commodities acquired under a price support program), plus any amount by which programs of assistance undertaken under this title in the preceding fiscal year have called or will call for appropriations in amounts less than authorized during the preceding year. This limitation may be waived if the President determines that a waiver is necessary to undertake programs to meet urgent humanitarian needs. Any incidental sales proceeds and proceeds from loss, damage, and other claims are applied against costs to reflect a reduction in appropriation requests.

This account includes funds to cover expenses of programs administered by, and functions assigned to, the Service. The funds consist of transfers from the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC), user fees, and miscellaneous advances from other sources. This is a consolidated account for administrative expenses of national, commodity, State, and county offices.

Program formulation and appraisal.—The supply adjustment, conservation, and commodity support programs, and the management and merchandising of commodities acquired under the support program, have a tremendous impact on the national and (to a lesser extent) the international economy. This activity provides for constant review of the effectiveness of these programs. It also provides for the analysis of data to formulate more effective programs.

Operation of supply adjustment, conservation, and price support programs.—This activity includes all functions dealing with the administration of programs carried out through the farmer committee system, including: (a) developing program regulations and procedures; (b) holding meetings with employees and producers to discuss new programs or changes in existing programs; (c) collecting and compiling basic data for individual farms; (d) establishing individual farm allotments, bases, and yields; (e) notifying producers of established allotments, bases, and yields; (f) determining farm marketing quotas; (g) handling appeals; (h) conducting referendums and certifying results; (i) accepting farmer certifications and checking compliance; (j) accepting producer applications for participation in commodity price stabilizing programs; (k) issuing marketing cards so that production from the allotted acreage can be marketed without penalty; (l) processing producer requests for conservation cost-sharing and issuing conservation reserve rental payments; (m) processing commodity loan and storage facility loan documents and issuing checks; (n) processing disaster, deficiency, and diversion payments and issuing checks and commodity certificates; and (o) monitoring payment limitations.

Inventory management and merchandising.—This activity includes: (a) overall management of CCC-owned commodities; (b) purchasing commodities; (c) donating commodities; (d) selling commodities; (e) processing the redemption of commodity certificates for CCC inventory; and accounting for loans and commodities.

Warehouse examination.—This activity provides for the examination of warehouses licensed under the U.S. Warehouse Act and non-licensed warehouses storing CCC-owned or pledged commodities. ASCS examiners perform periodic examinations of the facilities and the warehouse records to ensure protection of depositors against potential losses of the stored commodities and to ensure compliance with the U.S. Warehouse Act and any CCC storage agreements.

Automated data processing.—ASCS has introduced a major new ADP and communications system in support of CCC operations. A benefit cost analysis showed that significant savings and increased productivity could be achieved by using automated equipment. A contract award for the automation equipment occurred in fiscal year 1984; delivery and system implementation began in early 1985. Equipment delivery was completed in FY 1986. Most major program applications are expected to be completed by January 1988. Another major facet of the plan is the establishment of a joint ASCS-FAS data base, which includes information on local production of, and foreign demand for, agricultural commodities. Equipment purchases for these new systems represent a capital investment under the statutory authority of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act.

The fiscal year 1988 budget for salaries and expenses reflects the continuing impact of the 1985 Farm Bill, and the impact of zero funding for regular ASCS conservation programs. The continuing administrative impact of the 1985 farm legislation on ASCS fiscal year 1987 operations is covered by a supplemental request in Part II of the Budget.

This experimental Rural Clean Water Program (RCWP), authorized by the Appropriation Acts of 1980 (Public Law 96-108) and 1981 (Public Law 96-528), is a cooperative endeavor among farmers, various USDA agencies and other organizations to develop and test means of controlling agricultural nonpoint source water pollution in rural areas.

Recommended project areas were developed by local and State committees and approved by the Secretary of Agriculture in consultation with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. Full funding has been provided for all approved projects.

In fiscal year 1986, in anticipation of other funds becoming available in the Clean Water Act, RCWP funds were allocated to assist in antipollution activities related to the Chesapeake Bay project. Since related funds did not become available under the Clean Water Act, RCWP funds will not be used to assist in the cleanup of the Bay in 1987 and are therefore proposed for rescission.

The program is administered by ASC county committees, with review and approval by State ASC committees and the Secretary. Technical assistance is provided by SCS and FS.

The 1987 program level of $12,579 thousand will be allocated to States with the greatest need, and is expected to serve 0.6 million acres. Practices are expected to prevent approximately 2.8 million tons of soil erosion and save 55,000 acre feet of water.

The fiscal year 1988 Budget proposes no funding for this program.

This program carries out the purposes of section 202(c) of Title II of the Colorado River Basin Salinity Control Act (43 U.S.C. 1592(c)), as amended, by providing cost-share assistance to landowners and others in the Colorado River Basin. The main objective is to enhance the supply and quality of water in the Colorado River for delivery to downstream users in the U.S. and Mexico.

Practices are recommended by the ASC county committees and approved by the State committees and the Secretary of Agriculture. Technical assistance is provided by the Soil Conservation Service. Education and information activities are provided by the Extension Service.

The 1987 program will continue progress on projects previously funded by the ASCS Agricultural Conservation Program and SCS Conservation Operations and River Basin Surveys and Investigation funds. Under this new program, 30 percent of ASCS cost-share funds will be reimbursed to the U.S. Treasury by the Colorado River Basin States.

The Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) was mandated by sections 1231-1244 of the Food Security Act of 1985 (P.L. 99-198) to establish permanent cover on highly erodible cropland. The primary objectives of the CRP are to help farmers control critical soil erosion that occurs on about a third of America's cropland and to decrease production of surplus agricultural commodities, including wheat, corn, grain sorghum, soybeans, and small grains.

The CRP is authorized in all 50 States, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands on all croplands meeting the eligibility criteria of eroding at three times the soil loss tolerance or higher, or twice the soil loss tolerance with serious gully erosion. Up to 45 million acres of highly erodible land may be entered into the reserve.

The program is administered by State and local ASC committees working under the general direction of ASCS. Technical assistance is provided by the Soil Conservation Service, the Forest Service, the Cooperative Extension Service, and others.

In exchange for entering land into the reserve, program participants will receive annual rental payments in cash or commodities, based on their accepted bids per acre and the number of acres placed under 10-year contracts. In addition, farmers will receive one-time payments of 50 percent of the eligible costs of establishing vegetative cover on the reserve acreage.

To facilitate program implementation, use of the funds and facilities of the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) was authorized for fiscal years 1986 and 1987. Beginning in fiscal year 1988, the services and facilities of CCC may continue to be used, but appropriations must be provided to CCC in advance to carry out the program. Under the Food Security Act, authority is provided to enter into CRP contracts through fiscal year 1990. Appropriations needed to make annual payments will be requested through fiscal year 2000.

During fiscal year 1987, two sign-up periods will be held to enroll acres. The first sign-up period will be held in early 1987 for crop year 1987 acres. A second sign-up, which will be for both crop year 1987 and 1988 acres, will be held later in 1987. The program is expected to enroll a minimum of 6.1 million acres for crop year 1987, bringing total participation through crop year 1987 up to 15 million acres.

The 1988 program is expected to enroll a minimum of 10 million acres of highly erodible cropland. These acres would be enrolled for crop year 1988 or in advance for crop year 1989. Total participation through fiscal year 1988 is projected to be at least the 25 million acres established by the Act. The appropriation requested for fiscal year 1988 would be used for annual rental payments due on prior year contracts, for cost-sharing assistance on crop year 1988 contracts, and for fiscal year 1988 technical assistance payments.

The objectives of the Water Bank Program are to conserve water; preserve, maintain, and improve the Nation's wetlands; increase waterfowl habitat in migratory waterfowl nesting, breeding, and feeding areas in the United States; and secure recreational and environmental benefits for the Nation. The program was authorized by the Water Bank Act, approved December 19, 1970, as amended by Public Law 96-182, approved January 2, 1980.

The Secretary of Agriculture, through designated ASCS county offices, uses program funds to enter into 10-year agreements with landowners and operators for the conservation of specified wetlands. Provisions exist to renew agreements for additional periods, to make annual payments on agreements, and under certain conditions to increase payment rates in the fifth year of a contract or at the time of renewal.

The 1988 Budget proposes no funding for this program.

This program was authorized by the Agricultural Credit Act of 1978 (16 U.S.C. 2201-05). It provides funds for sharing the cost of emergency measures to deal with cases of severe damage to farms and rangelands resulting from natural disasters.

Under the 1986 program, cost-sharing assistance was provided in 33 States to treat farmlands damaged by floods, tornadoes, hurricanes, and drought. The 1987 program is expected to rehabilitate approximately 607,400 acres of farmland damaged by natural disaster.

Under this program indemnification payments are made to dairy farmers and manufacturers of dairy products.

The Dairy Indemnity Program was authorized under 78 Stat. 508 in 1964, and has been extended through September 30, 1990, by the Food Security Act of 1985 (Public Law 99-198). Payments are made to farmers and manufacturers who are directed to remove their milk or milk products from commercial markets because they contain residues of chemicals which have been registered and approved for use by the Federal Government, of other chemicals, of nuclear radiation, or of nuclear fallout. The authority also provides that indemnification may be paid for cows producing such milk.

In fiscal year 1987 estimated payments of $9,190 thousand will be made to producers and manufacturers who have incurred losses due to contamination of milk, milk products, or cows by the pesticide heptachlor.

Due to the emergency nature of this program, funding is requested as needs arise. Therefore, the fiscal year 1988 budget proposes no funding for this program.

timber production, to assure adequate supplies of timber products, and to enhance other forest resources.

The Forestry Incentives Program shares up to 65 percent of the cost of tree planting and timberstand improvement. The percentage cost-shared depends on the rate set in a particular State and county by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, after consulting with the State forester. The program is available in designated counties based on a Forest Service survey of total eligible private timberland available for production of timber products. The program is administered by ASCS. Technical assistance is provided by Forest Service.

Under the 1987 program, cost-sharing will be provided to farmers for planting trees on 169,100 acres and improving the timberstand on 39,300 acres of forest.

The fiscal year 1988 Budget proposes no funding for this program.

This appropriation finances the administrative and operating expenses of the Corporation to provide funds to establish and maintain rates and coverages for 19,400 county programs in over 3,000 counties and to continue development of sales policies. Crop insurance in force is estimated to increase from $8.4 billion in crop year 1987 to $10.1 billion in crop year 1988, and the estimated insured acres are expected to increase from 58.6 million in crop year 1987 to 70.3 million in crop year 1988.

The Corporation's long-term objective is to oversee the private delivery of crop insurance on an actuarially sound basis, develop actuarial rates for use by private insurance companies, and perform compliance activities.

For fiscal year 1988, the appropriation for administrative and operating expenses will enable the Corporation to provide for growth in the expanded crop insurance program to an estimated 26.5 percent farmers' participation, bringing the program closer to attaining its long-term objective. The 1988 appropriation is the first year of a 5-year phase-out of all Federal operating subsidies. The objective is to fully privatize the delivery of crop insurance by 1992.

The major portion of administrative and operating expenses is to support delivery systems which rely heavily on the private sector as provided by the Federal Crop Insurance Act of 1980 under section 507(c).

The delivery systems are:

Reinsured companies which enable insurance companies to provide the insurance marketing, distribution, servicing, training, quality control, and loss adjustment functions. The companies also share with Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, to a limited extent, in both profits and losses. It is estimated that reinsured companies will handle about 90 percent of the total premium during crop year 1988. For crop year 1987, 47 companies or groups will be writing crop insurance with reinsurance from FCIC; and Agency sales and service agreement, also known as the "master marketing agreement." Under this type of agreement, private insurance companies and associations are offered the opportunity to contract with FCIC to provide insurance sales and services. They are compensated on a commission basis. It is estimated that these agreements will account for 10 percent of the total premium for crop year 1988.

In addition, in areas where an adequate private sales and service force is not available, FCIC may ask other

USDA agencies to sell and service all-risk crop insurance through existing county offices.

As the private sector becomes more involved in the all-risk crop insurance program, it is expected that the companies will be able to "risk" more of their funds thus reducing the cost to the Government and at the same time reach the Corporation's goal of having all-risk crop insurance available to as many farm producers as possible.

The 1988 estimate includes savings from consolidation of administrative support services as part of 1987 budget management reforms.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, a wholly owned Government corporation, was created on February 16, 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1501-1520), to carry out the provisions of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended. The purpose of this act is to promote the national welfare by improving the economic stability of agriculture through a sound system of crop insurance, and to provide the means for the research and experience helpful in devising and establishing such insurance.

Crop insurance offered to agricultural producers by the Corporation provides protection from losses caused by natural hazards, such as insect and wildlife damage, plant diseases, fire, drought, flood, wind, and other weather conditions. It does not indemnify producers for losses resulting from negligence or failure to observe good farming practices.

The crop insurance programs are planned, developed, and monitored by the FCIC headquarters office located in Washington, DC and its national operations office located in Kansas City, MO. The program is administered in the field through 18 field operations offices and 11 field actuarial offices. Sales and servicing of contracts at the county level are performed primarily by agents operating under agency sales and service agreements (master marketing agreements) and agents of reinsured companies. In those areas where these delivery systems are not in place, other USDA agencies may be used to market and service the program. The adjustment of losses is performed by FCIC employees, adjusters under contract with FCIC, and reinsured companies under contract with FCIC. Also, as required, ASCS will perform some loss adjustment support on a reimbursable basis for the Corporation. Detailed administrative accounting is performed by the National Finance Center in New Orleans, LA, and program accounting and statistical functions, as well as the underwriting and actuarial analysis work, are performed in Kansas City, MO.

Budget program.—The program for 1988 (crop year 1987) will provide crop insurance protection to farmers amounting to approximately $8.4 billion on the following commodities: Almonds, apples, barley, beans, citrus, citrus trees, combined crop, corn, cotton, ELS cotton, cranberries, flax, forage production, forage seeding, grain sorghum, canning peaches, grapes, table grapes, hybrid seeding, oats, peaches, peanuts, peas (dry and green), peppers, popcorn, potatoes, prevented planting, prunes, raisins, rice, rye, soybeans, sugar beets, sugarcane, sunflowers, sweet corn, sweet corn (fresh), tobacco, tomatoes (fresh), tomatoes (processing), walnuts, and wheat. The program for 1988 is the first year of a five-year phase-out of all Federal premium subsidies. The objective is to fully privatize the delivery of crop insurance by 1992.

The 1987 appropriation provides sufficient funding for crop year 1987 to insure 58.6 million acres with an estimated $500.3 million in total premium income, including $124 million in premium subsidy.

The following table compares the scope of the insurance operations planned for 1987 and 1988, as compared with 1986. Amounts in the 1986 column are actual, and pertain to the 1985 crop year. The 1986 column pertains to the 1986 crop year, and reflects levels of participation that can be achieved with the 1987 appropriations. The 1988 column pertains to the 1987 crop year.

Financing.—The Corporation is authorized under the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended, to use funds from the issuance of capital stock which provides working capital for the Corporation.

Receipts which are for deposit to this fund come mainly from premiums paid by farmers. The principal payments from this fund are for indemnities to insured farmers, the direct cost of adjusting crop losses and agents' commissions. However, an appropriation will be requested in subsequent years for payments made from premium income used for loss adjustment costs and/or agents' commissions as provided by section 516(a) of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended.

Premium subsidies are authorized by section 508(b) of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended. The purpose of the subsidy is to encourage the broadest possible participation of farm producers in the crop insurance program. Subsidies are paid by the Corporation based upon 30 percent of each producer's premium (reduced, where applicable, for hail and fire exclusion or State agency subsidy) on any coverage, under the Corporation's policy of insurance of up to a maximum of 65 percent of the recorded or appraised average yield, as adjusted.

In fiscal year 1986, the Corporation borrowed $450 million from the Commodity Credit Corporation in order to pay heavy crop years 1985 and 1986 losses.

Operating results and financial condition.—As of September 30, 1986, the Corporation reflected a deficit of $1,476.9 million. This compares with a deficit of $937.9 million at September 30, 1985.

For crop years 1948 through 1985, indemnities ($3,291.7 million) exceeded premium income ($2,584.3 million) by $707.4 million; the loss ratio for the period was 1.27. Indemnity costs exceeded premiums in 20 of the 38 years.

NOTES

Contingent liabilities, commitments and other obligations do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowing from Treasury. Only that portion of borrowing authority is available which has not been charged by actual borrowing.

Excludes $1,388,000 thousand in 1988 for activities transferred to: Conservation Reserve Program, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. Comparable amounts for 1986 ($23,146 thousand) and 1987 ($700,000 thousand) are included above.

The Corporation was created to stabilize, support, and protect farm income and prices, to help maintain balanced and adequate supplies of agricultural commodities, their products, foods, feeds, and fibers, and to help in their orderly distribution (15 U.S.C. 714-714p). It may make available materials and facilities required in connection with the production and marketing of agricultural commodities and may be used to administer and to temporarily finance numerous special activities.

The Corporation's capital stock of $100 million is held by the United States. Under present law, up to $25 billion may be borrowed from the U.S. Treasury to finance operations.

The 1988 estimate includes savings from improving the control and timing of disbursements and handling of cash collections as part of continuing budget management reforms. Permanent indefinite appropriation authority is requested to cover all net realized losses. Appropriations to the Corporation for net realized losses have no effect on budget authority.

Budget assumptions.—The following general assumptions form the basis for the Corporation's 1987 and 1988 budget estimates: (a) National income will rise both in 1987 and 1988 from the present level; (b) 1987 crop production will rise from 1986 crop levels, except for corn and grain sorghum; (c) generally, exports of agricultural commodities in 1988 are expected to be slightly higher than 1987 levels; (d) yields for the 1987 crops are based on recent averages adjusted for trend; (e) acreage allotments and marketing quotas will be in effect for the 1987 crops of certain kinds of tobacco; (f) poundage quotas will be in effect for the 1987 crop of peanuts.

It is difficult to forecast with accuracy requirements for the year ending September 30, 1988, since the projections are subject to complex and unpredictable factors such as weather, other factors which affect the volume of production of crops not yet planted, feed and food needs here and overseas, and available dollar exchange.

PROGRAMS OF THE CORPORATION

The basic functions of the Corporation include the following programs for which appropriations are made for net realized losses sustained:

Price support and related stabilization programs.—The Corporation conducts programs to support farm income and prices and stabilize the market for agricultural commodities. Price support is provided to producers of agricultural commodities through loans, purchases, payments, and other means. This is done mainly under the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act, as amended (15 U.S.C. 714 et seq.), the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.), and the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1281 et seq.).

Price support is mandatory for the basic commodities—corn, cotton, wheat, rice, peanuts, and tobacco. The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, also requires support of the following nonbasic commodities: honey, milk, barley, oats, rye, grain sorghum, sugar and soybeans. The National Wool Act of 1954, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1781-87), requires support for wool and mohair. Support for other nonbasic commodities is discretionary. The support program may also include operations to remove and dispose of surplus agricultural commodities in order to stabilize prices at levels not in excess of those permissible by law.

The principal methods of providing support are loans to and purchases from producers. With limited exceptions, loans made on commodities are nonrecourse. The commodities serve as collateral for the loan and on maturity the producer may deliver or forfeit such collateral to satisfy the loan obligation without further payment.

Direct purchases are also made from processors as well as producers, depending on the commodity involved. Also, special purchases are made under various laws for the removal of surpluses; for example, the Act of August 19, 1958, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431 note), and section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431).

Set-aside program and acreage limitation program.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, authorizes the Secretary to establish, through the Corporation, acreage limitation programs for the 1986 through 1990 crops of upland cotton, rice, and ELS cotton. In addition, the Secretary is authorized to implement a set-aside or acreage limitation program for the 1986 through 1990 crops of wheat and feed grains.

Land diversion payments.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, provides that, to assist in adjusting the acreage of commodities to desirable goals, the Secretary is required, with respect to the 1986 crops of wheat and feed grains if certain stock levels exist on the first day of the marketing years for such crop, to make land diversion payments in the form of an "in-kind" payment and may, with respect to the 1987 and subsequent crops of wheat, feed grains, and the 1986 through 1990 crops of upland cotton, ELS cotton, and rice, make land diversion payments, through the Corporation, to producers who devote to approved conservation uses acres of cropland in addition to those required to be so devoted under the acreage limitation or set-aside programs. For the 1987 and subsequent crops, diversion payments may be paid in cash or on a non-cash basis, including payments in the form of commodities or commodity certificates that may be exchanged for commodities owned by the Corporation.

Producer eligibility.—Producers of feed grains and wheat must comply with acreage limitation provisions or acreage set-aside provisions, and normal crop acreage (NCA) requirements, if in effect, in order to be eligible for price support loans and purchases and deficiency payments. Producers of rice must comply with acreage limitation provisions, if in effect, in order to be eligible for price support loans and purchases and deficiency payments. Producers of cotton must comply with acreage limitation provisions, if in effect, in order to be eligible for price support loans and deficiency payments.

Deficiency payments.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, establishes: (1) minimum established "target" prices for the 1986 through 1990 crops of the following commodities—wheat, corn, upland cotton, rice, and ELS cotton; (2) minimum price support loan and purchase levels for wheat, feed grains, and rice; and (3) minimum price support loan levels for upland cotton and ELS cotton. Deficiency payments for each of the commodities are required when the target price for the commodity exceeds the national average market price or the price support loan level, whichever is higher. The target prices for grain sorghum and oats and, if designated by the Secretary, barley, are established at a level which is fair and reasonable in relation to the target prices established for corn. These payments may be paid by cash or on a non-cash basis, including payments in the form of commodities or commodity certificates that may be exchanged for commodities owned by CCC.

Marketing loan and certificate programs.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, authorizes a mandatory marketing loan program for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of rice and upland cotton and a discretionary marketing loan program for each of the 1986 through 1990 crops of wheat and feed grains. Under a marketing loan program, a producer may repay a price support loan at a level which is lower than the original loan rate. The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, also provides that the Secretary may allow honey producers to repay price support loans at a level which is lower than the original loan rate. The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, provides for payments, in the form of negotiable marketing certificates, to persons holding free stocks of upland cotton as of August 1, 1986, and to first handlers of upland cotton (persons regularly engaged in buying or selling upland cotton). The Food Security Act of 1985, as amended, provides for a marketing certificate program for rice producers and sellers.

Grain reserves.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, authorizes a producer-owned grain reserve program for wheat and feed grains that provides 3-year extended loans to producers. Producers receive annual storage payments under the contract. Program provisions establish when interest is charged. Storage payments cease and producers may repay their loans when market prices reach the higher of 140 percent of the nonrecourse loan rate for the commodity or the established price for the commodity. Under section 5 of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act, as amended, a Special Producer Storage Loan Program is conducted which allows producers with maturing producer-owned grain reserve loans to pledge the collateral securing such loans as collateral for extended storage loans for a period determined by the Secretary.

Dairy.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, provides for a revised dairy price support program. The support price is $11.35 per hundredweight for the period January 1, 1987 through September 30, 1987. During the period October 1, 1987 through December 31, 1990, the support price will be $11.10 per hundredweight. The Secretary will, on January 1 of calendar years 1988, 1989, and 1990, reduce the support price in effect by 50 cents per hundredweight if estimates of CCC purchases of milk or milk products for the twelve-month period beginning on such date is in excess of five billion pounds milk equivalent. However, the price support level may not be reduced unless the milk production termination program implemented for the 18-month period of April 1, 1986 through September 30, 1987 achieved a reduction in production of at least 12 billion pounds by program participants, or the Secretary certifies to Congress that reasonable contract offers were extended but that such offers were not accepted by a sufficient number of producers to achieve the 12 billion pound reduction. In addition, if the Secretary estimates on January 1 in any of the calendar years 1988, 1989, and 1990 that the level of purchases of milk and milk products by CCC for such calendar year will not exceed 2.5 billion pounds, the Secretary shall increase the support price in effect on such date by 50 cents per hundredweight. Under the production termination program, producers may submit bids for payments by CCC in return for the full termination of production by such producers. To encourage the adjustment of milk production to levels consistent with national demand, and finance the production termination program, the Secretary is required to provide for a reduction of 40 cents per hundredweight in the support price received on all milk marketed for commercial use by producers to be made during the period April 1, 1986 through December 31, 1986 and 25 cents per hundredweight for the period January 1, 1987 through September 30, 1987.

Storage facilities.—Pursuant to sections 4(h) and 5(b) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act, as amended, the Corporation has authority to make secured loans for the purchase, construction, or remodeling of facilities for storage and care of commodities on the farm.

Conservation Reserve Program.—The Food Security Act of 1985, as amended, provides that the Secretary shall carry out a Conservation Reserve Program by entering into 10- to 15-year contracts with owners or operators of highly erodible cropland to assist them in conserving and using the soil and water resources of their farms. Non-erodible lands which pose an off-farm environmental threat or cause productivity degradation due to soil salinity may also be included. In return for placing land in the reserve, farmers receive cost-share and rental payments, as well as technical assistance from USDA agencies. Annual rental payments may be paid in cash or on a non-cash basis, including payments in the form of commodities or commodity certificates that may be exchanged for commodities owned by the Corporation. Total acres to be included in the reserve by the end of fiscal year 1988 are 25 million. The facilities, services and funds of CCC are being used to carry out the program in fiscal year 1986 and fiscal year 1987. The services and facilities of the Corporation may be used in subsequent years, but appropriations must be provided in advance to carry out the program. Beginning in fiscal year 1988, a separate appropriation for advances to CCC is being requested to carry out the program. See "Special Activities" section.

Payment limitations.—The Food Security Act of 1985, as amended, provides that the total amount of deficiency and land diversion payments, excluding any deficiency payment received as the result of a reduction of the wheat or feed grain price support loan level, which a person is entitled to receive under one or more of the annual programs for feed grains, wheat, upland cotton, ELS cotton, and rice for each of the 1987 through 1990 crops of these commodities shall not exceed $50 thousand. For each of the 1987 through 1990 crops, the total amount of: (1) with respect to wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, ELS cotton, rice, and honey, deficiency payments; land diversion payments; disaster payments; loan deficiency payments; inventory reduction payments; and gains realized from a marketing loan repayment; and (2) with respect to other commodities, gains realized by a producer from repaying a loan at less than the original loan level that a person shall be entitled to receive under one or more of the annual programs for such commodities shall not exceed $250 thousand, except as otherwise may be authorized by the Secretary. Annual rental payments made under the Conservation Reserve Program are limited to $50,000 per person.

Loan limitations.—The total amount of loans on a crop of honey which a person may have outstanding at any one time under the annual program established for a crop of honey may not exceed $250,000, less the amount of gains realized by a producer from repaying a honey loan at less than the original loan level.

Supply and foreign purchase.—The Corporation can procure from domestic and foreign sources food, agricultural commodities, and products and related materials to supply the needs of Federal agencies, foreign governments, and private and international relief agencies, under section 5 (b) and (c) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act, as amended.

Commodity export.—The Corporation promotes the export of agricultural commodities and products through sales for dollars or foreign currency, payments, extension of credit, assumption of certain risks, and conduct of other operations with respect to the exportation of commodities. Such commodities and products may be those held in private trade channels as well as those acquired by the Corporation. These programs are carried out under the Corporation's charter and other specific legislation.

Foreign donations.—Under the authority of section 416(b) of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, the Corporation may furnish eligible commodities for carrying out programs of assistance in developing and friendly countries and may pay costs associated with making the commodities available. Such commodities may also be used to carry out the Food for Progress Act of 1985 or furnished in connection with (1) sales under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development Act of 1954, as amended; (2) agricultural export bonus or promotion programs; or (3) agreements by recipient countries to acquire additional agricultural commodities from the United States through commercial arrangements.

Operating expenses.—The Corporation carries out its functions through utilization of employees and facilities of other Government agencies. Administrative expenses are incurred for the services of: the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, General Sales Manager, and other agencies of the Department engaged in the Corporation's activities; and the General Accounting Office for audit. Additional expenses are incurred for ASCS county offices for work related to programs of the Corporation, other ASCS expenses offset by revenue, custodian, and agency expenses of the Federal Reserve banks and lending agencies, and miscellaneous costs.

Expenses are incurred for acquisition, operation, maintenance, improvement, or disposition of property which the Corporation owns or in which it has an interest. These expenses are treated as program expenses. Such program expenses include inspection, classing and grading work performed on a fee basis by Federal employees or Federal- or State-licensed inspectors; work relating to Commodity Credit Corporation programs performed on a contract or fee basis by Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service; and special services performed by other Federal agencies within and outside this Department. Most of these general expenses, including storage and handling, transportation, inspection, classing and grading and producer storage payments, are included in program costs. They are shown in the program and financing schedule in the entries entitled "Storage, transportation, and other obligations not included above," and "Producer storage payments."

The Corporation receives reimbursement for grain requisitioned pursuant to Public Law 87-152 (7 U.S.C. 447-449) by the States from Corporation stocks to feed resident wildlife threatened with starvation through the appropriation reimbursement for net realized losses. There have been no requisitions in recent years, however.

SPECIAL ACTIVITIES

These activities are carried out under authority of section 5(g) of the Corporation's charter act and specific statutory authorizations or directives with respect thereto which are currently in effect or which may subsequently be enacted.

The Corporation receives appropriations or reimbursement for cost of these activities as described under each.

Activities currently being carried out are as follows (see Foreign Assistance programs for details of items (1) and (2) and see Conservation Reserve Program for details of item (4)):

(1) Financing sales of agricultural commodities for convertible foreign currencies and for dollars on credit terms (titles I and III, Public Law 480).

(2) Commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad (title II, Public Law 480).

(3) National Wool Act.—Under the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended, support of prices of wool and mohair is mandatory. The Corporation makes payments to producers in order to bring the national average price received by all producers up to the support price required under the act.

(4) Conservation Reserve Program.—The Food Security Act of 1985, as amended, provides that the Secretary shall carry out a Conservation Reserve Program by entering into 10- to 15-year contracts with owners and operators of highly erodible cropland to assist them in conserving and using the soil and water resources of their farms. In return for placing land in the reserve, farmers receive cost-share and rental payments, as well as technical assistance from USDA agencies. Beginning in fiscal year 1988, a separate appropriation for advance to CCC is being requested to carry out the program.

FINANCING

Borrowing authority.—The Corporation has an authorized capital stock of $100 million held by the United States and currently is authorized to borrow up to $25 billion. The Budget include proposed legislation to increase the limit on outstanding borrowing to $40 billion.

Funds are borrowed from Treasury and may also be borrowed from private lending agencies and others. The Corporation reserves a sufficient amount of its borrowing authority to purchase at any time all notes and other obligations evidencing loans made by such agencies and others. All bonds, notes, debentures, and similar obligations issued by the Corporation are subject to approval by the Secretary of the Treasury as required by the Act of March 8, 1938 (15 U.S.C. 713a-4).

Interest on borrowings from the Treasury (and on capital stock) is paid at a rate based upon the average interest rate of all outstanding marketable obligations (of comparable maturity date) of the United States as of the preceding month. Interest is also paid on other notes and obligations at a rate prescribed by the Corporation and approved by the Secretary of Treasury.

The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1966, made provision for terminating interest after June 30, 1964 on the portion of the Corporation's borrowings from the Treasury equal to the unreimbursed realized losses recorded on the books of the Corporation after the end of the fiscal year in which such losses are realized.

¹ Assumes enactment of $6,653,189,000 supplemental for reimbursement of CCC realized losses.

Note.—Accounts payable, accrued liabilities and other outstanding obligations not reflected on this table do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowings from the Treasury.

Contract authority.—Price support and other programs required by statute may result in the Corporation incurring obligations in excess of available funds and borrowing authority. Such obligations are liquidated from subsequent appropriations and other funds which may become available to the Corporation. Any increase in obligations in excess of available fund resources is reported as contract authority in the year involved; a decrease is reported as the application of appropriations and other funds to liquidate the authority.

Appropriations.—Under section 2 of Public Law 87-155 (15 U.S.C. 713a-11), annual appropriations are authorized for each fiscal year to reimburse the Corporation for net realized losses incurred as of the close of each year.

The special activities are financed as indicated in the program descriptions above. In addition to certain reimbursements from other agencies, appropriations are made for the National Wool Act (see above) and for foreign assistance programs.

The Rural Electrification Administration, under authority of the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, as amended, makes subsidized direct loans and guarantees loans made by other qualified lenders to rural electric and telephone systems for electric and telephone service in rural areas.

In order to protect the Government's loan security on over $57 billion of loans and guarantees made to borrowers, and to assure that construction and operation projects conform to approved standards, REA furnishes business management and technical assistance on a regular basis to its borrowers. This objective is carried out through regulations, personal visits to the borrowers, and training. REA has personnel in the Washington office and a field staff who have expertise in the electric or telephone industry and who are available to assist borrowers in specialized areas.

Since the existing programs are being phased out and substituted with a program of 70 percent REA guarantees of private capital and since current and projected demand for new REA loans has declined, staff resources necessary to carry out these programs are proposed for reduction.

REIMBURSEMENT TO THE RURAL ELECTRIFICATION AND TELEPHONE REVOLVING FUND

For an additional amount to reimburse the rural electrification and telephone revolving fund for interest subsidies and losses sustained in prior years, but not previously reimbursed, in carrying out the provisions of the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, as amended (7 U.S.C. 901-950(b)), $20,000,000. This appropriation reimburses the rural electrification and telephone revolving fund for interest subsidies and losses which, by law, are not incurred by the revolving fund.

This fund has not incurred a loss since its inception in 1973, because it is exempted by the Act from paying billions in annual interest costs to the Treasury on advances totaling $7.9 billion. Rural electric and telephone loan assistance has actually cost the Federal Government billions in interest subsidies and losses since 1973. However, these costs have been sustained by the Treasury, not by the revolving fund. Therefore, no appropriation is requested for 1988.

PURCHASE OF RURAL TELEPHONE BANK CAPITAL STOCK

For the purchase of Class A stock of the Rural Telephone Bank $28,710,000, to remain available until expended (7 U.S.C. 901-905(b)). (Agriculture, Rural Development and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1987, as included in Public Laws 99-500 and 99-591, section 101(a).)

The Rural Electrification Act of 1936, as amended, authorizes appropriations for the purchase of Class A stock in the Rural Telephone Bank by the U.S. Government.

No appropriation is requested for 1988. The Federal Government has already provided $477 million in heavily subsidized capital (2% interest) to the Bank—$177 million over the amount in the original statute establishing the Bank. The subsidy cost to the Federal Government of the Treasury Class A stock purchases is $24 million in FY 1987. Bank lending will be phased out in 1989 and most of its loans and assets sold by 1990 with the proceeds used to repay outstanding Treasury loans of $759 million and to pay Treasury for outstanding Class A stock of $477 million. Most Bank borrowers will be eligible for the proposed REA 70% guarantee of principal of privately originated loans.

The Rural Development Insurance Fund was established on October 1, 1972, pursuant to section 116 of the Rural Development Act of 1972 (Public Law 92-419) approved August 30, 1972, to make community facility and business and industrial loans and guaranteed loans to both profit and nonprofit organizations.

The Rural Communication Development Fund, an account under the Rural Development Insurance Fund authorities, was established pursuant to Secretary's Memorandum No. 1988 approved May 22, 1979. This memorandum transferred certain financing authorities under the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 1921 et seq.) from the Farmers Home Administration to the Rural Electrification Administration for the purpose of financing and administering community antenna television services or facilities in rural areas. Funding is required for losses from operation of the program.

² These disbursements of new guaranteed loans result from loan guarantee commitments in previous years.

The Rural Electrification Administration conducts two loan programs: (1) The rural electrification program and (2) the rural telephone program.

Direct electric and telephone loans from the Rural Electrification and Telephone Revolving Fund (RETRF) bear interest at a 5 percent rate. Some loans may be made at a lesser rate. RETRF loans must be repaid within a period not to exceed 35 years. REA also guarantees loans made directly by the Government through the Federal Financing Bank (FFB) or by other qualified lenders at rates agreed upon by the lender and the borrower.

Loans from the RETRF are financed from available receipts or, when necessary, by interim Treasury borrowings. Loans made from the RETRF are held in a pool as security for certificates of beneficial ownership (CBO's) which are sold to investors.

Rural electrification.—This loan program is financed through REA direct and guaranteed loans for the construction and operation of generating plants, electric transmission, and distribution lines or systems. Electric demand growth as well as demand for REA direct and guaranteed loans have decreased over the past several years. The reduction in the 1988 loan level from 1987 reflects the phase out of the costly RETRF loan and loan guarantee program and the substitution of a loan program which allows for a 70 percent REA guarantee of principal of privately originated loans.

Legislation will be proposed to phase out the costly 5 percent interest direct REA loans and 100 percent guarantees of Federal Financing Bank loans and substitute guarantees of 70 percent of loans made by the private sector. Direct loans would be phased out by the end of 1989. Interest rates would be increased on these loans and fees assessed to cover REA administrative costs. REA borrowers serving largely urban, suburban or recreational areas or affiliates of larger telephone holding companies will no longer be eligible for REA assistance. Proposed legislation would permit the sale of REA loan assets. The proceeds would be used to repay Treasury loans.

Legislation will also be proposed to allow (1) the sale of REA loan assets at market value, and (2) REA borrowers to prepay their outstanding FFB and REA guaranteed loans without penalty and to repay their direct loans at a discount determined by the Administrator, provided that they become ineligible for any type of REA assistance in the future.

The Rural Telephone Bank (RTB) provides a subsidized source of financing for the REA telephone loan program. The bank charges an interest rate based on the average cost of money to the bank, but not less than 5 percent per annum. The weighted average interest rate on cumulative loans through September 30, 1986, was 8.26 percent. During the first quarter of 1987, loans were made at 7.0 percent interest.

Equity capital of the bank consists of class A stock purchased by the United States of $477 million with a 2 percent dividend and classes B and C stock purchased by bank borrowers, organizations eligible to become borrowers and organizations controlled by borrowers, and retained earnings. The Bank has borrowed $759 million from the Treasury. In addition, the $477 million in capital stock is heavily subsidized by the Federal Government.

Administrative support is a further subsidy provided without charge for the general operations of the bank by REA employees and the Office of the General Counsel, without cost to the bank, as provided for in the enabling legislation. Certain incidental administrative expenses, such as expenses of the elected members of the Board of Directors, postage fees and the audit by the General Accounting Office, must be borne by the bank.

Bank loans totaled $128 million in 1986. After almost 14 years in operation, loans to 591 borrowers have been approved, totaling over $2.269 billion. Telephone bank loans are estimated at $177 million for 1987 and $93 million for 1988. The Administration proposes to phase out the Bank's costly lending program at the end of 1989, sell Bank assets, and use the proceeds to repay Treasury debt and Class A stock. Most Bank borrowers will be eligible for REA guarantees of 70 percent of principal of privately originated loans. Bank borrowers who are affiliates of large telephone holding companies or who largely serve urban or suburban areas would no longer be eligible under proposed legislation. Borrowers will be permitted to prepay without a premium if they agree to seek no more assistance from REA.

This grant program is authorized by subtitle A of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act, as amended. Grants are authorized to be made to associations, including nonprofit corporations, public and quasi-public agencies, and certain Indian tribes to finance storage, treatment, purification, or distribution of water or the collection, treatment, or disposal of waste in rural areas. The amount of any development grant may not exceed 75 percent of the eligible development cost of the project.

The major objectives of the rural water and waste disposal grant programs are: (1) to provide assistance to attain basic human amenities, (2) to alleviate health hazards, (3) to promote stability of rural areas by meeting the need for new and improved rural water and waste disposal systems, and (4) to meet national safe drinking water and clean water standards. No program is proposed for 1988 because adequate credit sources are available to finance needed facilities.

This assistance was authorized by section 7 of the Cooperative Forestry Assistance Act of 1978. Grants are made to public bodies to organize, train, and equip local firefighting forces, including those of Indian tribes or other native groups, to prevent, control, and suppress fires threatening human lives, crops, livestock, farmsteads or other improvements, pastures, orchards, wildlife, rangeland, woodland, and other resources in rural areas. In 1986, 1,729 grants were obligated for a total of $3.019 million. It is anticipated that in 1987, 1,717 grants will be obligated for a total of $3.091 million. No program is proposed for fiscal year 1988 because adequate credit sources are available to finance needed facilities.

This is a new program proposed for implementation in FY 1988. It replaces the rural rental assistance payments program which was authorized under section 521 of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended. The objective of that program was to reduce rents paid by low-income families living in FmHA financed rental projects and farm labor housing projects. Under that program, low-income tenants contributed the higher of (1) 30 percent of monthly adjusted income, (2) 10 percent of monthly income, or (3) designated housing payment from a welfare agency. Payments were made to the project owner to make up the difference between the tenants' rent payments and the approved rental rates for the units.

Therefore, funding for the purpose of providing rental assistance for newly constructed units was provided in limited amounts in 1986 and 1987 under the Rural housing insurance fund. The Fund continues in fiscal year 1988 to finance existing rental assistance contracts.

In fiscal year 1988, a housing voucher program authorized under section 8(o) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended (42 U.S.C. 1437f), will be implemented. This program will support 21,200 units annually, including 1,200 units of voucher assistance to families displaced by prepayment of section 515 rental assistance projects.

The housing voucher program provides tenants the flexibility to choose housing to meet their needs and to determine the appropriate level of expenditure to be made for housing. Further, unlike the rental assistance program, the housing voucher goes with the tenant should he or she decide to move.

Authority for the Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund was extended from fiscal year 1986 through 1988 by the Food Security Act of 1985, Public Law 99-198, signed December 23, 1985. This legislation also provided levels of funding for emergency disaster loans. The loan levels reflected for 1988 are consistent with those established by the Food Security Act of 1985.

The Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund is used to insure or guarantee farm ownership, soil and water, farm operating, and emergency loans to individuals. Associations, Indian tribes and tribal corporations are eligible for the following types of loans: Indian land acquisition, watershed protection, flood prevention, and resource conservation and development.

The 1988 budget proposes to maintain approximately a $4 billion program level each year. Funding is proposed to be limited to farm operating and emergency disaster loan purposes. By 1992, all farm operating loans will be provided on a guaranteed basis.

The following table shows the 1986 actual and estimated 1987 and 1988 number of loans and program levels. The guaranteed program levels reflect the full principal amount of the loan of which part is guaranteed by the U.S. Government.

Rural housing insurance fund.—This fund was established in 1965 (Public Law 89-117) pursuant to section 517 of title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended. This fund may be used to insure or guarantee rural housing loans for single family homes, rental and cooperative housing, farm labor housing, rural housing sites and to make rental assistance payments authorized by Section 521(a). Loan programs are limited to rural areas which include towns, villages, and other places which are not part of an urban area and which have a population not in excess of 2,500 inhabitants, or is in excess of 2,500 but not in excess of 10,000 if rural in character, or has a population in excess of 10,000 but not more than 20,000 and is not within a standard metropolitan statistical area and has a serious lack of mortgage credit for low- and moderate-income borrowers.

The 1988 budget proposes to terminate all programs under this account. A new FmHA rural housing voucher program is being proposed at 20,000 units annually to replace these programs. It is targeted to low income rural families most in need. In addition, 16,000 to 20,000 HUD housing voucher units will be available to assist such families in non-metropolitan areas. Finally, the budget includes 1,200 rural housing voucher units to take care of families displaced by prepayment of rural rental housing unit loans, which had rental assistance contracts.

The major programs currently funded through the Rural housing insurance fund are:

Section 502 very low and low to moderate income home ownership loans; section 514 domestic farm labor housing loans; section 515 rural rental housing loans; section 521 rural rental assistance; and section 524 rural housing site loans.

Starting in fiscal year 1987, the FmHA will sell loan assets without recourse to institutional and individual investors.

The following table shows 1986 actual and estimated 1987 number of units and program levels.

MEMORANDUM

2299 U.S. contingent liability for guaranteed loans outstanding, end of year.....	2,210,569	1,974,385	1,552,967
---	-----------	-----------	-----------

¹ Includes $19,140,000 in unused limitation on guaranteed loans for 1987 transferred from FY 1986 pursuant to section 641(b) of P.L. 99-500 and 99-591.

The Rural Development Insurance Fund (RDIF) was established on October 1, 1972, pursuant to section 116 of the Rural Development Act of 1972 (Public Law 92-419), approved August 30, 1972, which also provided for transfer of the assets and liabilities of the Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund applicable to loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities to this fund. The 1985 farm bill, signed December 23, 1985, extends authorization of the RDIF through fiscal year 1988.

The fund is used to insure or guarantee loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities, community facilities, and industrial development in rural areas.

No program is proposed for FY 1988 because adequate credit sources are available to finance such facilities.

The Food Security Act of 1985, Public Law 99-198, provided for rural development finance corporation loans to be made in conjunction with rural development finance grants authorized under the Rural development loan fund. The objective of this program is to guarantee loans made by public agencies to nonprofit national rural development and finance corporations that establish statewide rural development and finance programs for the purpose of providing loans, guarantees, and other financial assistance to local businesses to improve business, industry and employment opportunities in rural areas.

Starting in fiscal year 1987, the Agency will sell the loan portfolio without recourse to institutional and individual investors.

The following table shows the number of loans and the program levels for 1986 actual and estimated for 1987 and 1988. The guaranteed program levels reflect the full principal amount of the loans of which part is guaranteed by the U.S. Government.

This fund was transferred to FmHA from the Department of Health and Human Services pursuant to Public Law 99-198, the Food Security Act of 1985. This Act mandated that the unobligated balance in the Fund, as of the date of enactment (December 23, 1985), be made available for grants to rural development finance corporations. These grants are to be made in conjunction with rural development finance corporation loans authorized under FmHA's Rural development insurance fund. No rural development finance corporation loans or grants were made in 1986. It is estimated that $14.3 million in grants will be made in 1987. In addition, Public Law 99-425, the Human Services Reauthorization Act of 1986, reauthorized the making of loans in fiscal year 1987, out of repayments or other funds made available to the Rural development loan fund by FmHA. It is estimated that $4 million in loans will be made in 1987.

Technical assistance.—Technical assistance is provided through 2,935 conservation districts to land users and decisionmakers, including individual landowners and operators, community groups, units of government, Indian tribes, and others for the planning of conservation programs and installation of needed conservation systems on the land, including design, layout, installation, and consultation services.

Combinations of needed soil and water conservation systems are planned in relation to each other to achieve well-balanced conservation programs. Technicians of the Soil Conservation Service explain the various soil conditions, develop alternative uses and treatments, help to evaluate the costs and returns of conservation work, and furnish onsite assistance to farmers, ranchers, and others in applying the needed treatments. About 70 percent of the total annual investment in conservation practices applied through the conservation technical assistance program is made by private landusers. Since 1981, accelerated technical assistance has been provided to targeted geographic areas with severe erosion, water conservation and water quality problems. During fiscal year 1988, SCS will continue to emphasize work on critical resource problems caused by excessive soil erosion and inefficient use of limited water supplies. Personnel funded within this account will be providing technical assistance to implement the Conservation Reserve Program and the highly erodible land and wetland conservation provisions of the Food Security Act of 1985.

Inventorying and monitoring.—Inventorying and monitoring provides soil, water, and related resource data. All activities under this program will be terminated by the end of fiscal year 1988.

Soil surveys.—Soil surveys and investigations are made of the Nation's soil resources, with interpretations and publications that provide physical land facts needed for program development, resource conservation planning, installation of planned practices, and for use by other Federal, State, and local agencies in making land-use decisions. This program is being continued in the fiscal year 1988 budget.

Snow survey water forecasting.—Water supply forecasts prepared from snow surveys in western states are used in making efficient seasonal use of water for irrigation, flood control, fish and wildlife, recreation, power generation, municipal and industrial water supply, and water quality management. This program is being continued in the fiscal year 1988 budget.

Operation of plant materials centers.—The selection and evaluation of plant materials are made at 20 plant materials centers through field trials to determine their suitability for erosion control, conservation, and other environmental improvements. This program is being continued in the fiscal year 1988 budget.

Resource appraisal and program development.—The Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act of 1977 as amended provides for periodic reports to the public and Congress beginning January 1980. A report was developed and submitted in December 1982. All activities under this program will be terminated by the end of fiscal year 1988.

The Department makes surveys of proposed small watershed projects, and work plans are prepared in cooperation with local sponsors. These plans outline the soil and water management problems in the watershed, the steps that have been or are authorized to be taken to alleviate these problems, the proposed works of improvement to be installed, the estimated benefits and costs, cost sharing, and operation and maintenance arrangements, and other facts necessary to justify Federal participation in project development. All activities of this program will be terminated by the end of fiscal year 1988.

This program provides for cooperation between the Federal Government and States and their political subdivisions to reduce damage from floodwater, sediment, and erosion, for the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water, and for the conservation and proper utilization of land. The fiscal year 1988 budget proposes to terminate all activities under these programs by the end of fiscal year 1988.

Watershed operations authorized by Public Law 534.—The Department cooperates with soil conservation districts and other local organizations in planning and installing works of improvement for flood prevention in 11 watersheds authorized by the Flood Control Act of 1944. The Federal Government shares the cost of works of improvement for flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife development.

Within the 11 authorized projects, 406 subwatershed areas have been identified for planning purposes. Installation progress in these subwatersheds is as follows:

MAIN WORKLOAD FACTORS

Subwatershed status	1986 actual	1987 est.	1988 est.
Projects in preconstruction, end of year	21	17
Projects in construction, start of year	84	89
Projects completed construction during year	6
Projects in preconstruction and construction, end of year	105	100
Projects continuing land treatment, end of year	65	66
Projects completed, end of year	160	165
Projects not started, end of year	76	75
Total subwatershed projects	406	406

Emergency watershed protection operations.—This program authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to undertake such emergency measures for runoff retardation and soil erosion prevention as may be needed to safeguard life and property from floods and the products of erosion on any watershed whenever natural elements or force causes a sudden impairment of that watershed. An emergency is considered to exist when a watershed is suddenly impaired by flood, fire, wind, earthquake, or other natural cause and consequently life and property are endangered by floodwater, erosion, or sediment discharge. The emergency area need not be declared a national disaster area to be eligible for emergency watershed protection. Emergency watershed protection is applicable to small scale, localized disasters as well as large scale disasters. State environmental, natural resource, fish and game, and other agencies participate in planning and coordinating emergency work.

Small watershed operations authorized by Public Law 566.—The Department provides technical and financial assistance to local organizations to install measures for watershed protection, flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife enhancement.

Watershed work plans are prepared by sponsoring local organizations with the Department's assistance or through State and local resources. After work plans are approved by the Department or Congress (projects where the estimated Federal contribution will exceed $5 million require congressional approval), technical services and financial assistance are provided for specific works of improvements.

The following tabulation shows the status of Public Law 566 projects:

MAIN WORKLOAD FACTORS

Status of projects approved for operations	1986 actual	1987 est.	1988 est.
Projects in preconstruction	145	170
Projects under construction, start of year	384	394
New construction starts	10	20
Projects completed during year	15	10
Projects Land Treatment continuing	41	31
Subtotal projects requiring funds	595	625
Projects not requiring funds	154	154
Projects completed in prior years	633	648
Total approved projects	1,382	1,427

Loan services.—Loans are made to local sponsoring organizations to finance the local cost of installing works of improvement in Public Law 534 and approved Public Law 566 watershed projects. Repayment with interest is required within 50 years after the principal benefits of improvements first become available. Loans are made from funds available for this purpose from the Agricultural credit insurance fund of the Farmers

Home Administration. Loan services related to processing and making loans are financed from this appropriation.

The 1988 Budget proposes to terminate funding for construction starts and does not provide for new obligations for on-going projects after January 1987.

the entire cost of installing recurring management-type practices and pay a specified part of the cost-shared practices installed on their land. Program regulations provide that cost-share rates offered in any contract shall not exceed 80 percent of the cost of installing eligible practices within the designated county. There is a cost-sharing limitation of $35 thousand for any contract. The fiscal year 1988 budget does not include funding for this program. The budget proposes termination of the Great Plains Program by the end of fiscal year 1988.

This program provides for the Department to assist States, local units of government, groups and individuals in developing area plans for resource conservation and development (RC&D).

RC&D areas are provided technical and financial assistance to help States and local units of government prepare plans for resource development and economic improvement and to plan and install community-type conservation projects or measures. Financial contributions, loans, and other Federal assistance are used to help carry out measures specified in RC&D area plans. Loans were made through the Farmers Home Administration to qualified local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of installing the measures.

Under this proposal, the RC&D program would be terminated by the end of 1988.

The following tabulation shows the status of RC&D areas authorized to receive technical and financial assistance.

The major objectives of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service are to protect the animal and plant resources of the Nation from destructive pests and diseases.

Plant disease and pest control.—Through inspections at ports of entry, insects, plant diseases, nematodes and animal pests and diseases harmful to agriculture are prevented from entering this country. Cooperative programs with the States are conducted to prevent the spread of and/or to eradicate certain plant pests already established in this country. The 1988 estimates maintain support for plant disease and pest control efforts, by increasing the agricultural quarantine inspection, medfly and witchweed programs, while decreasing the boll weevil, grasshopper and pink bollworm programs and eliminating the imported fire ant, and noxious weeds programs. Legislation will be proposed to recover $67.0 million in fees for agricultural quarantine inspection.

Animal disease and pest control.—Inspections and programs are conducted to keep communicable diseases of foreign origin from entering this country and to prevent the spread of diseases through interstate shipments of livestock or distribution of impure or impotent veterinary biologics. In cooperation with States, programs are directed at the control and eradication of livestock diseases present in this country. Foreign animal diseases, should they enter this country, are rapidly diagnosed and outbreaks which are of economic significance and for which the Secretary of Agriculture declares a national emergency are controlled and eradicated. The 1988 estimates propose increases for animal health compliance and enforcement and foot-and-mouth (DG) programs and decreases for brucellosis and animal welfare. The budget proposes elimination of the pseudorabies program. Legislation will be proposed to recover total costs for the import-export and veterinary biologics programs through user fees, as well as $1.6 million for diagnostic activities.

Animal damage control.—Conducted to reduce wild-life-caused damage to agricultural interests and protect land use and wildlife resource values through the maintenance of a Federal presence in cooperation with the States and other cooperators. The Department of the Interior conducted the program prior to 1986. The budget proposes a decrease for this program in fiscal year 1988.

Biotechnology.—This Agency has the responsibility to coordinate the development and implementation of all matters and functions pertaining to the Department's regulation of biotechnology and the responsibility to act as liaison on all matters and functions pertaining to the regulation of biotechnology between agencies within the Department, between the Department and governmental and private organizations. Additionally, this agency has been designated the lead agency within USDA for regulating and evaluating applications of biotechnologically derived products for test permits and commercial licenses. The budget proposes initial funding of $4.0 million.

Construction of facilities.—In 1981, the Congress appropriated funds under a separate account to APHIS, Buildings and Facilities. The activity reflected shows obligations from prior year funds.

Contingencies.—The 1988 estimates provide a contingency fund of $4.5 million.

The FGIS provides for the establishment of official United States standards for grain, promotes the uniform application thereof by official inspection personnel, provides for an official inspection system for grain, and regulates the weighing and certification of the weight of grain shipped in interstate or foreign commerce as authorized by the U.S. Grain Standards Act (USGSA), as amended, and the regulations thereof, and the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946.

Standardization activities include establishing and updating U.S. grain standards and research and developing and improving methods to ensure the accurate and uniform application of the standards.

Compliance activities include: evaluating alleged violations and initiating preliminary investigations; initiating preliminary investigations; initiating the implementation of all necessary corrective actions; conducting management and technical reviews; administering the designation of agencies and the delegation of State agencies to perform official functions; identifying conflicts of interest; licensing agency personnel; responding to audits of FGIS programs; and reviewing and, when appropriate, approving fee schedules.

The International Monitoring Staff will brief foreign buyers, assess foreign inspection and weighing techniques, and respond to foreign quality and quantity complaints.

An advisory committee consisting of members from the grain industry was established to advise the agency regarding efficient and economical implementations of the USGSA.

The Grain Quality Improvement Act of 1986 was enacted on November 10, 1986, to improve the quality of U.S. grain by prohibiting the introduction and reintroduction of dockage and foreign material to grain. FGIS will draft action plans for implementation of the provisions of the new law which becomes effective May 1, 1987. The financial impact of this legislation is under analysis.

services include official grain inspection and weighing by FGIS employees at certain export ports as well as the inspection of U.S. grain shipped through Canada. FGIS supervises the inspection and weighing activities performed by its own employees. The agency also oversees the inspection and weighing of grain performed by employees of 8 delegated States and 80 designated State and private agencies. FGIS provides an appeal service of original grain inspections and a registration system for grain exporting firms. Through support from the Association of American Railroads and user fees, FGIS conducts a railroad track scale testing program. In addition, the agency provides grading services on request for rice and grain related products under the authority of the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946 (AMA).

AMS activities assist producers and handlers of agricultural commodities by providing a variety of marketing services. These services continue to become more complex as the volume of agricultural commodities increases, as a greater number of new processed commodities are developed, and as the agricultural market structure undergoes extensive changes. Marketing changes include increased concentration in food retailing, direct buying, decentralization of processing, growth of interregional competition, vertical integration, and contract farming. The individual activities include:

Market news service.—The market news program provides the agricultural community with information pertaining to the movement of agricultural products. This nationwide service provides daily reports on the supply, demand and price of over 400 commodities throughout the country.

Inspection and standardization.—Nationally uniform standards of quality for agricultural products are established and applied to specific lots of products to: promote confidence between buyers and sellers; reduce hazards in marketing due to misunderstandings and disputes arising from the use of nonstandard descriptions; encourage better preparation of uniform quality products for market; and furnish consumers with more definite information on the quality of products they buy. Grading services are provided for cotton and domestic and imported tobacco.

Continuous in-plant inspection of all plants manufacturing liquid, frozen or dried egg products is provided with quarterly inspection of egg handlers and hatcheries to ensure the proper disposition of shell eggs unfit for human consumption. Imported egg products are controlled to make certain that the inspection systems in exporting countries have standards equal to those of the United States.

A uniform government food specification system is maintained to provide a more efficient Federal food procurement service.

Market protection and promotion.—This program consists of: (1) the research and promotion programs which are designed to improve the competitive position and expand markets for cotton, eggs, and egg products, honey, pork, beef, milk and dairy products, wool, mohair, and potatoes; (2) the Federal Seed Act, Plant Variety Protection Act, and the Export Fruit Acts; and (3) the administration of the Capper-Volstead Act and the Agricultural Fair Practices Act.

Amendments to the 1985 Food Security Act provided legislative authority for the beef, pork, and watermelon research and promotion programs. Assessments on producers to fund the beef and pork programs began in 1986. Hearings on the watermelon program will be held in 1987.

Federal seed inspectors conduct tests on samples to help assure truthful labeling of agricultural and vegetable seeds sold in interstate commerce. Plant variety protection provides for the issuance of certificates to assure that developers of novel varieties of sexually reproduced plants have exclusive rights to sell, reproduce, import and export such varieties for a period of 18 years.

The Export Fruit Acts promote U.S. foreign trade of various fruits by protecting the reputation of U.S. grown fruit in foreign markets and by preventing deception as to the quality of such products moving in foreign commerce.

The Capper-Volstead Act and the Agricultural Fair Practices Act protect producers against discriminatory practices by handlers, permit producers to engage in cooperative efforts, and assure that such cooperatives do not engage in practices that monopolize or restrain trade.

Grants are made on a matching fund basis to State departments of agriculture to carry out specifically approved programs designed to enhance marketing efficiency. Under this activity, specialists have worked with farmers, marketing firms, and other agencies in solving marketing problems and in using research results. Since State agencies are now able to carry on these activities by themselves, no program is being proposed in 1988.

License fees are deposited in this special fund and are used to meet the costs of administering the Perishable Agricultural Commodities and the Produce Agency Acts (7 U.S.C. 491-497, 499a-499s). The current annual license fee is set at $216 plus $108 for each additional business facility operated by the applicant in excess of nine facilities, up to a maximum of $1,800.

The Acts are intended to assure equitable treatment to farmers and others in the marketing of fresh and frozen fruits and vegetables. Commission merchants, dealers, and brokers handling these products in interstate and foreign commerce are licensed. Complaints of violations are investigated and violations dealt with by (a) informal agreements between the two parties, (b) formal decisions involving payment of reparation awards, and/or (c) suspension or revocation of license and/or publication of the facts.

A 1984 amendment to the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act requires traders to have trust assets on hand to meet their obligations to fruit and vegetable suppliers. To preserve their trust and establish their rights ahead of other creditors, unpaid suppliers file notice with both the Department and their debtors that payment is due.

Under section 32 of the act of August 24, 1935, as amended (7 U.S.C. 612c), an amount equal to 30 percent of customs receipts collected during each calendar year is automatically appropriated for expanding outlets for nonbasic commodities. An amount equal to 30 percent of receipts collected on fishery products is transferred to the Department of Commerce. Most of the funds are transferred to the Food and Nutrition Service and are used to purchase commodities under section 6 of the National School Lunch Act and other authorities specified in the child nutrition appropriation. If unforeseen commodity surpluses should develop, unobligated reserve balances are available for surplus removal.

Expenses and refunds, inspection and grading of farm products.—The commodity inspection and grading programs provide grading, examination, and certification services for a wide variety of fresh and processed food commodities using federally approved grade standards and purchase specifications. Commodities graded include poultry, livestock, meat, dairy products, and fresh and processed fruits and vegetables. These programs use official grade standards which reflect the relative quality of a particular food commodity based on laboratory testing and characteristics such as taste, color, weight and physical condition. Producers voluntarily request grading and certification services which are provided on a fee for service basis.

Note.—The administration fund totals are comprised of 44 separate independent order accounts in 1986. The Marketing Service fund totals are comprised of 35 separate independent order accounts in 1986.

The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, as amended—under certain conditions—to issue Federal milk marketing orders establishing minimum prices which handlers are required to pay for milk purchased from producers.

Market administrators are appointed by the Secretary and are responsible for carrying out the terms of specific marketing orders. Their operating expenses, partly financed by assessments on regulated handlers and partly by deductions from producers, are reported in these schedules. These funds are collected locally, deposited in local banks, and disbursed directly by the market administrator.

The expenses of each local office are met from an administrative fund and a marketing service fund which are prescribed in each order. The administrative fund is derived from prorated handler assessments. The marketing service fund of the individual order provides for the expense of disseminating market information to producers who are not members of a qualified cooperative. It also provides for the verification of the weights, sampling, and testing of milk from these producers. The cost of these services is borne by such producers.

The maximum rates for administrative assessment and for marketing services are set forth in each order and adjustments below these rates are made from time to time upon recommendations by the market administrator and upon approval of the Agricultural Marketing Service to provide reserves at about a 6-month operating level. Upon termination of any order, the statute provides for distributing the proceeds from net assets pro rata to contributing handlers or producers as the case may be.

As of October 1, 1986, as required by the Food Security Act of 1985 and the Food Security Improvements Act of 1986, the Agricultural Marketing Service, as agent for the Commodity Credit Corporation, collected over $287 million by charging 52 cents per hundredweight on all milk produced in the forty-eight contiguous States and marketed by producers for commercial use. These funds were used to partially offset the costs of the Dairy Termination Program.

Milk sold by regulated handlers supplied almost 177 million persons in calendar year 1985.

The principal purpose of the Office of Transportation is to facilitate an efficient domestic and international transportation system for U.S. agricultural products. This is done by providing assistance to exporters and firms by helping to solve international transportation problems relating to agriculture; assisting agricultural shippers and carriers in the new deregulation environment; and providing technical assistance to producers, producer groups, and rural communities to help them solve specific transport problems. Because the process of deregulation of the transportation industry is virtually complete, this program is proposed for termination at the end of fiscal year 1988.

The major objectives of the Food Safety and Inspection Service are to assure that meat and poultry products are wholesome, unadulterated, and properly labeled and packaged, as required by the Federal Meat Inspection Act and the Poultry Products Inspection Act.

The Meat and Poultry Inspection program of the Food Safety and Inspection Service provides continuous inplant inspection of all domestic plants preparing meat or poultry products for sale or distribution; reviews foreign inspection systems and establishments that prepare meat or poultry products for export to the United States; and provides technical and financial assistance to States which maintain meat and poultry inspection programs.

Legislative changes which will permit collection of user fees to fund FSIS programs and provide for more efficient inspection are included in the 1988 FSIS budget proposal to allow recovery of full program costs.

The goal of this program is to assure the integrity of the livestock, meat, and poultry markets and the marketplace in order to protect producers against unfair, deceptive, or discriminatory practices as well as those that are predatory or monopolistic in nature. Consumers and members of the livestock, poultry, and meat industries are also protected against unfair business practices in the marketing of meat and poultry, and from restrictions on competition which could unduly affect meat and poultry prices. The Agency also carries out the Secretary's responsibilities under Section 1324 of the Food Security Act of 1985 covering "central filing systems" established by States for pre-notification of security interests against farm products.

The Agricultural Cooperative Service performs research and provides technical assistance and advice to farmer cooperatives.

The agency's research program includes studies of economic, financial, organizational, managerial, legal, social, and policy related issues that affect cooperatives. Data on membership, business volume, and financial condition are collected to detect changes in the structure, operation, and growth trends of cooperatives.

Technical assistance is provided in response to requests from cooperative boards of directors or steering committees. Such assistance includes feasibility analyses, merger and other organizational studies, strategic assessment and planning, and review of operations.

Educational materials are prepared by ACS to promote the knowledge of cooperative principles and practices.

The 156 National Forests, 19 National Grasslands, and 18 land utilization projects located in 44 States, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are managed under multiple use and sustained yield principles. The natural resources of timber, minerals, range, wildlife, outdoor recreation, watershed, and soil are utilized in a planned combination that will best meet the needs of the Nation, without impairing productivity of the land or damaging the environment. These management and utilization principles are recognized in the Multiple-Use Sustained-Yield Act of June 12, 1960 (16 U.S.C. 528-531). Work programs and budget estimates reflect the increased demands for specific National Forest resource needs through 1987 and for long-term objectives for the year 2020. Increases are provided in the budget for further attainment of these program objectives.

Land and resource protection.—Provides for the protection and/or maintenance of National Forest System users, resources, lands and facilities, including roads and trails.

Renewable resource management and utilization.—Provides for the management and utilization of the timber, mineral, range, recreation, wildlife, watershed, and soil resources on National Forest System lands.

General administration.—This activity represents that share of the cost which contributes to the support of programs financed from National forest system, Construction, Forest research, State and private forestry, and Land acquisition appropriations.

For 1988, funding will be reduced because of eliminating resource improvement and investment activities not cost effective and reducing forest fire protection costs.

Construction of facilities—

Recreation facilities.—Provides facilities necessary to safely meet recreation demand without sacrificing environmental values and without unduly impinging upon other resource uses of the National Forests.

Other facilities.—Provides for construction and acquisition of fire, administrative, and other improvements and related facilities necessary to carry out National Forest and State and private forestry programs. Includes fire lookouts, offices, dwellings and barracks for employee housing, service, and storage buildings, insectories, tree nursery buildings, dams, and other forest resource management projects. Efforts to make buildings more energy efficient (retrofit) will be continued.

Research construction.—Provides for construction, alteration, and improvement of research laboratories and related facilities, and for procurement and installation of necessary initial equipment needed to put the facility into operating condition. Efforts to make research facilities more energy efficient (retrofit) will be continued.

Mt. Elden Work Center.—Provides for contract administration and overruns resulting from the construction of administrative improvements at the Mt. Elden Work Center, Flagstaff, Arizona.

Road and trail construction—

Road and trail construction.—Roads and trails are essential to the protection and management of the National Forest System, as well as providing access to National Forest System areas for recreation and utilization of their resources. Of the revenues received annually from National Forest activities, 10 percent is being transferred to the General Fund with a comparable amount appropriated to the construction program for road and trail construction activities.

Timber purchaser construction.—Roads may be constructed and/or reconstructed by a timber purchaser who in turn receives credit against timber value as a reimbursement. These roads are those required within a timber sale area specifically for the removal of the timber, but which will remain on the National Forest development road system for resource management purposes after the timber sale contract is completed. (16 U.S.C. 535, 1608.)

For 1988, construction will be reduced by eliminating all new facility construction and reducing road construction slightly.

Research is conducted and disseminated through eight regional forest experiment stations and the Forest Products Laboratory and includes both in-house and extramural programs.

Fire and atmospheric sciences research.—Research is conducted to develop improved methods to prevent and control wildfires; reduce loss of life, property, and forest resources; reduce wind and weather-related losses; and use fire to achieve forest and range objectives.

Forest insect and disease research.—Research is conducted to provide technology to optimize productivity, value, and land resource usefulness and to protect wood in use and in storage.

Forest inventory and analysis research.—Research is conducted to provide comprehensive, continuing information about forest land resources of the United States.

Renewable resources economics research.—Research is conducted to provide economic methodology and analyses for forest and rangeland activities and for related forest product distributed systems.

Timber management research.—Research is conducted to develop improved silvicultural alternatives and management guidelines to increase the productivity and multiple-use benefits of forest lands, maximize tree growth and quality, and maintain land productivity.

Watershed management and rehabilitation research.—Research is conducted to provide and test methods for protecting, managing, and improving forest and rangeland watersheds and to rehabilitate lands disturbed by mining.

Wildlife, range, and fish habitat research.—Research is conducted to maintain or improve wildlife and fish habitat; increase forage production; improve soil stability and vegetation cover; and integrate wildlife, fish, and livestock with other uses.

Forest recreation research.—Research is conducted to provide land managers with the technology for increasing and improving outdoor recreation experiences; and to develop knowledge to manage urban vegetation to obtain optimum benefits.

Forest products and harvesting research.—Research is conducted to provide technology to harvest and utilize timber more efficiently and in ways that are environmentally acceptable, to improve the performance of wood products, and to expand opportunities for wood products exports.

For 1988, forest research will be reduced by focusing on basic research thus allowing the private sector to concentrate on developmental and applied research. Competitive research grants will be terminated.

Cooperative forestry assistance is provided to all the States, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands and the Trust Territory of the Pacific to promote protection and management of forest lands.

Forest pest management.—Protects forest resources and processed wood from insects and diseases directly on National Forests and other Federal lands and in cooperation with States on non-Federal lands.

Fire protection.—Helps State forestry organizations to achieve fire protection efficiency through activities of national interest on non-Federal wildlands.

Forest management and utilization.—Improves management of non-industrial private forest resources; increases wood utilization; increases seedling production and nursery capacity of State tree nurseries; expands State tree improvement programs; and provides management and planning assistance.

Special projects.—Assistance will be provided to Minnesota for forestry impacts of the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness.

For 1988, financial assistance to the States will be terminated and limited technical assistance will be provided. State forestry programs have matured sufficiently to justify reduced Federal assistance.

Outdoor recreation occurs throughout National Forest System lands. Legislation will be proposed to provide for the operation and maintenance of National Forest recreation areas and facilities from recreation receipts. Recreationists who enjoy National Forest System lands will receive direct benefit from the revenues collected. Land and Water Conservation Fund receipts will be used in 1988 to provide time for sufficient funds to accrue.

Recreation lands and interests are acquired within areas of the National Forest System, wilderness, wild-life habitat management areas, endangered species and other areas for public outdoor recreation purposes.

The land acquisition program includes a rescission of the fiscal year 1987 congressional increase of $49 million. The 1988 program will initiate a 3-year moratorium on new land acquisitions, complete purchases already started, and meet the most critical court deficiency awards.

Payment to Minnesota.—At the close of each fiscal year the State of Minnesota is paid 0.75 percent of the appraised value of certain Superior National Forest lands in the counties of Cook, Lake, and St. Louis for distribution to these counties (16 U.S.C. 577g).

Legislation will be proposed to change the method of calculating the annual payment to the States and counties from National Forest and National Grassland receipts. Under existing legislation, 25 percent of all moneys received from the National Forests and National Grasslands during the fiscal year is paid to the States and counties in which the forests or grasslands are located, for the benefit of public schools and public roads of the county or counties in which such National Forests or National Grasslands are situated. The proposed legislation would make these payments more equitable by first considering Government costs for timber, minerals, range and land management necessary to generate gross timber, mineral, range and land receipts. Recreation receipts would still be shared with the States on a gross basis.

the Forest Service in fire control and other authorized programs.

The forestry related supply and support services include:

Equipment services which own, operate, maintain, replace, and repair common use motor driven and similar equipment. This equipment is rented to administrative units, that is, National Forests, research experiment stations, and other units, and in some cases to the other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of operation, repair and maintenance, management, and depreciation. The rates also include an increment which provides additional cash which, when added to depreciation earnings and the residual value of equipment, provides sufficient funds to replace the equipment.

Aircraft services which operate, maintain, and repair Forest Service owned aircraft used in fire surveillance and suppression and in other Forest Service programs. The aircraft are rented to National Forests, research experiment stations, and in some cases to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of depreciation, operation, maintenance, repair, and improvements in the airworthiness of the aircraft. Aircraft replacement costs are financed from either appropriated funds or the Forest Service Working Capital Fund, or a combination of both.

Supply services operate the following common services:

Photo reproduction laboratories which store, reproduce, and supply aerial photographs, aerial maps, and other photographs of National Forest lands. The photographic reproductions are sold to National Forests, experiment stations, and others at cost.

Sign shops which manufacture and supply special signs for the National Forests for use in regulating traffic and as information to the public and other users of the National Forests. The signs are sold to National Forests and experiment stations at cost.

Subsistence which prepare and serve meals to Forest Service crews working in areas where adequate public restaurant facilities are not available.

Seed supply which provides tree seed for direct seeding or sowing in nurseries for the production of trees. Includes purchase or collection of cones, extraction of seeds, cleaning and testing, and storage and delivery. Operates in conjunction with tree nurseries.

Tree nurseries which operate forest tree nurseries and cold storage facilities for storage of tree seedlings. Tree seedlings are sold to National Forests, State foresters, and other cooperators at cost.

【As authorized by existing law, and within the funding levels provided by this Act, for disasters occurring in 1986, the Secretary of Agriculture shall, in the case of any farmer or rancher suffering a major loss from such disaster, direct the Administrator of the Farmers Home Administration to, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary may determine as long as the objective of enabling farmers to stay in business is carried out:

(1) Refinance existing debt at the lowest allowable interest rate and such term as will give the borrower a reasonable chance to repay;

(2) Provide loans for financing 1987 crop production;

(3) Stretch out loan payments over a period of years, and base such payments on regaining our normal fair share of world markets; and

(4) Coordinate disaster assistance programs with the Administrator of the Small Business Administration to assure that all individuals affected by natural disaster are provided with the appropriate financial assistance.

(B) Within the funds made available by this section, the Secretary of Agriculture shall:

(a)(1) As soon as practicable, but not later than forty-five days after the date of application by an eligible producer, make available to eligible producers for losses of production due to drought, excessive heat, floods, hail or excessive moisture in 1986 payments determined in accordance with this subsection.

(2) An eligible producer shall be a producer of the 1986 crop of wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, rice, soybeans, sugar beets, sugar cane or peanuts who—

(A) is eligible to receive price support under section 107D, 105C, 103A, 101A, 201 or 108B of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1445b-3, 1444e, 1444-1, 1446, or 1445c-2); and

(3) Payments made available to each eligible producer shall not exceed $100,000 for all crops (without regard to other limitations in farm program payments) and shall be determined for each crop of such commodities by multiplying—

(A) the payment rate; by

(B) the loss of production of the eligible producer.

(4)(A) Except for sugar beets and sugar cane, the payment rate shall be equal to the level of price support established for the crop of the commodity for the farm.

(B) For purposes of determining the payment rate for sugar beets and sugar cane, the Secretary shall establish a payment rate which is fair and reasonable in relation to the level of price support which is established for the 1986 crop of sugar beets and sugar cane.

(5)(A) The loss of production of the eligible producer shall be the quantity of wheat, feed grains, cotton, rice, soybeans, sugar beets and sugar cane or peanuts that eligible producers on a farm are unable to harvest due to reduced yields or are prevented from planting to such commodity or other nonconserving crops due to drought, excessive heat, floods, hail or excessive moisture in 1986. Such loss of production of the eligible producer for each such crop shall be the difference between—

(i) The result determined by multiplying (I) 50 per centum of the farm program payment yield established for the crop of the commodity, by (II) the sum of the acreage of such crop planted to harvest and the acreage for which prevented planted credit is approved by the Secretary; and

(ii) The actual production on the farm of such crop of the commodity if such quantity is less than the quantity determined in accordance with clause (i).

(B) The sum of the acreage determined in accordance with paragraph (5)(A)(i)(II) shall not exceed—

(i) with respect to wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, or rice, the 1986 permitted acreage determined for such crop of the commodity; and

(ii) with respect to soybeans, peanuts, sugar beets and sugar cane, the acreage so affected but not to exceed the acreage planted in the immediately preceding year to soybeans or peanuts, respectively, for harvest including any acreage that the producer was prevented from planting to such commodity or to other nonconserving crops in lieu of soybeans or peanuts because of drought, excessive moisture, flood, hail, or other natural disaster, or other condition beyond the control of the producer.

(6) Payments determined in accordance with paragraph (3) with respect to any producer with crop insurance shall be reduced to the extent the amount determined by adding the total amount of crop insurance indemnity payments (gross indemnity less premium paid) received by the producer for the loss of production of each crop of such commodities on the farm and the payment determined in accordance with paragraphs (3) through (5) exceeds the amount determined by multiplying—

(A)(i) the quantity determined by multiplying 100 percent of the farm program payment yield established for each crop of such commodities by (ii) the sum of the acreage of each such crop planted to harvest and the acreage for which prevented planted credit is approved by the Secretary (the total not to exceed the quantity determined in accordance with subparagraph (5)(B)); by

(B) the payment rate for each crop of the commodity.

(7) The total amount of payments made under paragraph (3) to producers on a farm with respect to each crop of such commodities and the total amount of price support loans and purchases (and program benefits for sugar beets and sugar cane) made with respect to such crop on such farm may not exceed the amount determined by multiplying—

(A) The farm program payment yield for the crop of the commodity; by

(B) The sum of (i) the acreage of the crop of the commodity planted for harvest and (ii) the acreage for which prevented planted credit is approved by the Secretary, but for each such crop such sum shall not exceed the quantity determined in accordance with subparagraph (5)(B); by

(C) The payment rate for each crop of the commodity.

(8)(A) For purposes of determining the farm program payment yield, the Secretary shall use the 1986 farm program payment yield established for the crop of the commodity or, if such data is not available, a yield determined by the Secretary to be fair and equitable.

(B) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection—

(i) a loss of production of quota peanuts from a farm as otherwise determined under paragraph (5) shall be reduced by the quantity of peanut poundage quota which was the basis of such anticipated production which has been transferred from the farm; and

(ii) payments made under this subsection shall be taken into account whether the lost production for which the loss of production is claimed was a loss of production of quota or additional peanuts and the payment rate shall be established accordingly. Further, notwithstanding any other provision of law, the amount of undermarketings of quota peanuts from a farm for the 1986 crop that may otherwise be claimed under section 358 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 for purposes of future quota increases shall be reduced by the quantity of lost production of such peanuts for which payment has been received under this subsection.

(9) The disaster payments required by this section shall be made in the form of generic, negotiable commodity certificates redeemable from stocks of commodities held by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

(b)(1) notwithstanding any other provision of this section for the 1986 crop year, the Secretary of Agriculture shall utilize certificates redeemable from stocks of commodities held by the Commodity Credit Corporation, for the purpose of making disaster payments to producers of nonprogram crops, in counties in which producers became eligible subsequent to July 1, 1986, to receive disaster emergency loans under section 321 of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 1961) as the result of drought, excessive heat, flood, hail, or excessive moisture, and

(2) the Secretary of Agriculture shall make such payments (not to exceed $100,000 to any individual producer) if the Secretary determines that—

(A) the producer has suffered a substantial loss of production due to drought, excessive heat, flood, hail, or excessive moisture, and

(B) such loss has created an economic emergency for the producer to the extent that additional assistance must be made available to alleviate such economic emergency, and

(c) Within 30 days following the enactment of this Act the Secretary of Agriculture shall issue such rules and regulations as the Secretary determines necessary to carry out the program authorized by subsections (a) and (b) of this section. Such regulations shall provide that the term "nonprogram crops" shall include all crops insured directly or indirectly by the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation for crop year 1986, and in addition—

(1) the term shall include other commercial crops for which such insurance was not available for purchase or, if available, was not purchased by such producers for crop year 1986, if—

(A) in accordance with rules and regulations issued by the Secretary of Agriculture, the producer of such crop(s) provides satisfactory evidence of actual crop yield for at least one of the immediately preceding 3 crop years: Provided, That in the event such data does not exist for any of the three preceding crop years the Secretary shall use county average crop yield data; and

(B) that the producer of such crop(s) also provides satisfactory evidence of 1986 crop year losses resulting from drought, excessive heat, flood, excessive moisture, or hail exceeding 50 per centum of the crop yield established in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, and

(2) that payments made available to producers of such crops shall be based upon the average market prices received by producers of such crops, as determined by the Secretary.

(d)(1) The Secretary shall carry out the program authorized by this proviso through the Commodity Credit Corporation.

(2) Applications for payments made in accordance with this proviso must be filed by January 31, 1987.

(3) Payments made by the Secretary of Agriculture to eligible producers under this section shall be made as soon as practicable but not later than 45 days following the producer's application.

(e)(1) The Secretary of Agriculture shall reduce the amount of funds available for emergency insured and guaranteed loans to meet the needs resulting from natural disasters from funds in the Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund by $400,000,000.

The activities of this appropriation provide for the collection, compilation, and publication of a broad range of current statistics dealing with economic, demographic, and social data.

Current economic statistics programs—

Business statistics.—This program provides current information on sales and related measures of retail and wholesale trade and selected service industries.

The 1988 budget provides for the continued improvement of the annual service trade survey by collecting additional data items for selected industries.

The 1988 budget eliminates funds to conduct a general economic survey of the communication sector.

Construction statistics.—Reports are provided on significant construction activity such as housing permits and starts, value of new construction, residential alterations and repairs, and quarterly price indexes for new, single-family houses.

Manufacturing statistics.—Surveys of key industrial commodities and manufacturing activity provide current statistics on the quantity and value of industry output.

General economic statistics.—This subactivity provides a Standard Statistical Establishment List (SSEL) of all U.S. business firms and their establishments, uniform classification data, annual county business data, and corporate financial data.

The 1988 budget reduces coverage of the Quarterly Financial Report to its 1984 level.

Foreign trade statistics.—Monthly, cumulative, and annual reports are published on the quantity, shipping weight, and dollar value of imports and exports, by mode of transportation, detailed commodity category, customs district, and country of origin or destination. Commodity classifications are being improved for comparability and other activities in support of the Trade Act of 1974.

The 1988 budget provides for further improvement to the Harmonized System of import, export, and domestic production statistics.

Government statistics.—Reports are published annually regarding the revenue, expenditures, indebtedness and debt transactions, financial assets, employment, and payrolls of State and local governments. Quarterly information on State and local tax revenue is furnished on the national level by type of tax and governmental level, and information is provided on financial assistance programs of the Federal Government.

Agriculture statistics.—Information on cotton ginnings and production is compiled and published. Assistance is provided on using the information from the census of agriculture.

Current demographic statistics programs—

Demographic surveys.—This program provides information on the number, the geographic distribution and the social and economic characteristics of the population.

The 1988 budget provides for a limited introduction of computer-assisted telephone interviewing in the Current Population Survey.

Demographic reports.—This program provides current reports on the geographic distribution and on the demographic, social, and economic characteristics of the population, as well as current estimates and future projections of the population of the United States. The program also provides special analyses of demographic, social, and economic trends.

International statistics.—This program provides estimates of population, labor force, and economic activity, including spatial distribution, and analyses concerning aspects of demographic policies, economic policies, and trends for various countries.

Housing statistics.—This program compiles statistics on the Nation's housing inventory and provides national and regional estimates of housing vacancy rates.

Other programs and publications—

Statistical abstract and supplements.—The Statistical Abstract, prepared annually, summarizes Government and private statistics of the industrial, social, political, and economic activities of the United States.

General research.—Research is conducted on survey methods and techniques to find ways of improving the efficiency, accuracy, and timeliness of statistical programs.

Data systems development.—This program provides advanced data capture, data processing, and information retrieval technology to meet Bureau program requirements.

Reimbursable program.—The Bureau of the Census undertakes work for other governmental agencies when it is more appropriate or efficient to have the work performed by the Bureau. Significant work includes collection of labor force and consumer expenditure data for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, national health and education program data for the Department of Education and the Department of Health and Human Services, and annual housing data for the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Fees for other specialized products and services will be increased in 1988.

Economic analysis.—The objective of this activity is to provide a clear picture of the state of the economy through the preparation, development, and interpretation of the economic accounts of the United States. The principal programs are:

National economic accounts.—The national income and product accounts, summarized by the gross national product (GNP), provide an up-to-date overall view of national production, its distribution, and its use as shown by the interrelated receipts and expenditures of producers, consumers, investors, government, and the foreign customers of the United States.

Analysis of business trends.—This work includes surveys of business investment, econometric models of the U.S. economy, a system of business cycle indicators, and analyses of the economic situation.

International economic accounts.—The balance of payments accounts provide a comprehensive and detailed view of economic transactions between the United States and foreign countries. The international investment accounts consist of the preparation, development, and analysis of estimates of U.S. direct investment abroad and foreign direct investment in the United States.

Policy support.—The objective of this activity is to support the Secretary, Under Secretary for Economic Affairs, and other Government officials in interpreting the state of the economy, and on matters relating to economic policy.

Productivity, technology, and innovation.—The objective of this activity is to promote a favorable climate for private sector innovation and improvements in technology, utilization, and productivity. In 1988, the productivity, technology, and innovation program will be reduced. The patent licensing program will continue to be conducted by the National Technical Information Service (NTIS) on a self-supporting basis.

Reimbursable.—ESA provides economic and statistical data and analyses on a reimbursable and advance payment basis to other Federal agencies, individuals, and firms requesting such information. Funds received for these services cover the cost of performing this work. ESA is authorized to perform these services under 31 U.S.C. 1535, 1536 and 15 U.S.C. 1526.

MEMORANDUM

------	---	--------	--------	-------

¹ P.L. 99-272, the Consolidated Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1985, eliminated both direct loan and loan guarantee authority.

² Amounts shown are based on the full principal amount of loans that are partially guaranteed by the U.S. Government. The comparable amount of limitation enacted on the basis of contingent liability is $6,000 thousand in 1986.

The activities of the International Trade Administration in the Department of Commerce are intended to develop the export potential of U.S. firms in a manner consistent with national security and foreign and economic policy and to promote an improved trade posture for U.S. industry.

Trade development.—The trade development program assesses the competitiveness of various U.S. industries; performs trade and investment analyses in support of industry programs and trade policy; and conducts export promotion programs directed toward industry sectors. Trade Adjustment Assistance to firms is proposed for rescission in 1987 and termination in 1988.

International economic policy.—This program develops regional and multilateral economic policies; provides marketing services directly and through the Foreign Commercial Service which assist U.S. businesses in expanding exports; identifies long range trade and investment problems and develops remedial strategies.

In 1988, an increase of 72 positions and $4,081,000 is requested to enable the International Trade Administration to meet its responsibilities in supporting the United States Trade Representative during the Uruguay Round of General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) negotiations.

Trade administration.—Through administration of the Export Administration Act, the trade administration program assures that export activity is consistent with national security, foreign policy, and U.S. material and commodity objectives; enforces the law against participation in foreign boycotts; assures the availability of industrial resources for national defense under the authority of the Defense Production Act; investigates anti-dumping and countervailing duty cases to ensure compliance with applicable U.S. statutes; and administers certain other statutory programs relating to imports and foreign trade zones.

In 1988, ITA proposes to charge a fee for processing export licenses. Fees will be established to recover processing costs.

In 1988, an increase of 28 positions and $1,474,000 is requested for Import Administration to support the U.S.-Japan semiconductor agreement and machine tool Voluntary Restraint Agreements.

U.S. and foreign commercial services.—The U.S. and foreign commercial services counsel U.S. businesses on exporting through 48 U.S. Commercial Service District Offices in the United States and Foreign Commercial Service Offices in 63 countries overseas. The program's goals are to increase the number of U.S. firms that export and the number of foreign markets to which they export; to provide business with information on U.S. and foreign government procurements through the Commerce Business Daily; to provide export market information; to promote and facilitate participation of U.S. firms in trade shows; and to encourage and sponsor additional involvement by private, State and local organizations.

In 1988, an increase of 7 positions and $1,200,000 is requested to conduct pre-export license and post-shipment checks at overseas posts.

Furthermore, in 1988, ITA will improve its counseling services to U.S. businesses by completing the establishment of its automated Commercial Information Management System (CIMS) that will provide customized and proactive export assistance to U.S. businesses through ITA's domestic offices. ITA proposes to charge an annual fee to businesses who wish to take advantage of this system.

Reimbursable program.—This account includes receipts for services rendered to other Federal agencies and receipts received on a cost recovery basis from private entities for trade events and export information services.

In 1988, the activities of the United States Travel and Tourism Administration (USTTA) will be funded primarily by user fees. Legislation will be proposed to establish an International Ticketing Writing Charge of $1 per ticket for international travel to and from the United States, its possessions and territories. Travel to and from Canada, Mexico, and travel originating in the U.S. possessions and territories to the United States will be excluded. The charge will be collected from airlines and cruise ship carriers which are the primary beneficiaries of USTTA. The activities to be supported fall into two broad categories:

International Tourism Marketing.—These activities include the planning, development and carrying out of an international tourism marketing program designed to stimulate and encourage travel to the United States by residents of foreign countries.

Executive Direction.—These activities include policy guidance, executive management, and administrative support in the areas of fiscal planning, program implementation, management and evaluation.

National Ocean Service.—The National Ocean Service provides for the management of ocean and coastal resources, particularly in the 200-mile Exclusive Economic Zone; improvements in the quality, quantity, geographic distribution and timeliness of ocean observations; the conservation, rational use, and charting of the Nation's coastal regions; production of aeronautical and nautical charts; and geodetic surveys. Program changes involve decreases for ocean assessments, the ocean services program, and Coastal Zone Management grants, and increases for the next generation automated nautical charting system. Chart prices will be increased to pay for the new system.

National Marine Fisheries Service.—These programs provide for the management and conservation of the Nation's living marine resources and their environment including marine mammals and endangered species. Program changes, consistent with NOAA's priorities, will reduce information collection and analyses and related research, as well as regulatory and management operations. Programs that primarily support local and private sector interests, e.g., aquaculture research, fisheries trade, and some fisheries grant programs will be terminated. Legislation is proposed to implement a Marine Fisheries Conservation Assurance Program with the revenues being shared by the Federal Government and coastal States for fishery management programs. Additional program funds of $29 million will be requested when this legislation is enacted to support required information and management programs.

Oceanic and Atmospheric Research.—These programs provide: the understanding and technique development necessary to improve NOAA services (weather warnings and forecasts, solar-terrestrial services, climate predictions, marine services); and the understanding of environmental systems necessary for national policy formulation (e.g., acid rain) and the enhanced use of ocean resources (e.g., fisheries, minerals). Program changes principally involve decreases in activities which primarily support State, regional or private sector interests and an increase in mesoscale research.

National Weather Service.—These programs provide timely and accurate meteorologic, hydrologic, and oceanographic warnings, forecasts, and planning information to ensure the safety of the population, mitigate property losses, and improve the economic efficiency of the Nation. Additional funding is proposed for development and acquisition of Doppler weather radars (NEXRAD), automated surface observational equipment, and the Advanced Weather Interactive Processing System. Specialized weather services which can be conducted by the private sector will be reduced or eliminated. Proposed decreases in 1988 include a consolidation of selected regional headquarters, a reduction in staffing levels in selected offices, and a reduction in operations and maintenance for selected data buoys.

National Environmental Satellite, Data, and Information Service.—These programs provide for the operation of environmental polar-orbiting and geostationary satellites; provide for the subsidy of a commercially operated Landsat system; and provide global environmental data and information products and services to users in commerce, industry, agriculture, science and engineering, the general public and Federal, State and local agencies. Increases provide for procurements of replacement satellites and subsidies for Landsat. A decrease in Government funding for the Landsat 4 and 5 system is proposed because the satellites will have reached the end of their design lives in 1987.

Program support.—These programs provide for overall NOAA management, NOAA's share of the Regional Administrative Support Centers, and the operational and logistics support of ships, marine centers, and aircraft to support NOAA missions. Proposed decreases in 1988 include the number of ships and days-at-sea. Air Force hurricane reconnaissance flights will continue to be funded directly by the Department of Defense.

This fund is financed through collections from foreign vessel owners who fish within the U.S. Fishery Conservation Zone. Collections to the fund are used by the Secretary of Commerce to pay the salaries of observers and program support personnel, and the costs of data management and analysis of the observer program. The observers collect scientific information on the foreign catch, and monitor compliance with the provisions of the Fishery Conservation and Management Act (FCMA) of 1976.

The Office administers laws governing the granting of patents for inventions and the registration of trademarks.

Public Law 97-607 provides for a portion of Office operating costs to be recovered through user fee revenues. Since 1983, all fees are retained in the PTO appropriation and are available along with appropriated funds. Collections were $127.9 million in 1986 and are estimated to be $139.9 million in 1987 and $146.8 million in 1988.

An Automation Master Plan revised for this budget submission provides for the automation of the majority of the functions and operations of the Office by the 1990's. The Plan proposes a phased approach to complete the progressive development and installation of system capabilities. The 1988 increases will provide for the expansion of the Automated Patent System and the Data Input/Output System. Automation resources are distributed among the four activities of the Office.

Patent process.—Applications are examined to determine inventor entitlements to a patent for the claimed invention. Patent application examination also includes quasi-judicial review in appeal and interference proceedings, and the publication of issued patents.

The 1988 increases support programs to reduce patent application pendency time to 18 months by 1989; to shorten appeals decision time; and to support the automated patent system and the automated data input/output system.

¹ Includes inventory adjustment (2,403) in 1986 to reflect new withdrawal counting procedures.

Trademark process.—This activity provides for the examination of applications to determine whether the statutory criteria for the Federal registration of the trademark or service mark have been met. When the criteria are met, a registration is printed and issued to the applicant. Examination also includes inter partes proceedings involving oppositions, cancellations, and interferences. The 1988 funding maintains the reduced pendencies in trademark examination, provides for the integrated Automated Trademark System, and provides increases for a key entry contract and staff increases for the Trial and Appeal Board.

Information dissemination.—Materials and services which assist in the examination of patent and trademark applications and in the transfer of technological information are provided in this activity. Specific materials and services include the maintenance of subject matter search files of prior art documents; maintenance of a scientific library and public search rooms; preparation of copies of patents, trademark registrations, and official documents; assignment of patents and trademark rights; and administration of printing.

The 1988 increases provide funds to support micro-filming the increased volume of patent applications, processing the increased volume of maintenance fees and updating the master classification file.

Executive direction and administration.—Management and administration of the Office are provided by this activity. The pre-examination correspondence processing function and the fee accounting function are expanded to keep pace with increased application filings and enhanced examiner production. The automation function is enhanced to carry out initiatives identified in the Automation Master Plan revised in 1987.

The National Bureau of Standards (NBS) is responsible for the measurement foundation which supports U.S. industry, government, and scientific establishments. NBS efforts are organized into the following program activities:

Measurement and Engineering Research and Standards—

Measurement research and standards.—Research in physics, radiation, analytical chemistry, and chemical properties and processes produces fundamental measurement know-how which enables industry and science to achieve levels of accuracy and compatibility required in the laboratory, during production, and in buying and selling. A 1988 increase will provide new and improved measurement services to increase the effectiveness of industrial process and quality control. Another increase will support a pilot program to produce selected computerized standard reference data bases to enhance access to reliable technical data.

Materials science and engineering.—Research in materials characterization, nondestructive evaluation, metallurgy, metals processing, polymers, and ceramics produces organized data and technical know-how which permit more rapid industrial adoption of new materials with efficient high quality production that contribute to improved productivity and competitiveness. The 1988 increase will fund the development of critically needed measurement methods and standards to produce and use high performance composite materials more reliably.

Engineering measurements and standards.—Research in electronic and electrical measurements, chemical engineering, manufacturing engineering, mathematical sciences, construction and performance of buildings and fire prevention produce engineering know-how and databases for design, development, prediction, and control of industrial processes. A 1988 increase will provide measurement technology and services for the components of fiber optic systems. Another increase will fund development of reliable measurement techniques and data to support the engineering design, scale-up, and optimal control of biochemical manufacturing processes. In 1988 the building research and fire research programs will be combined into a new Center for Fire and Building Safety Research at a funding level of $5 million.

Computer sciences and technology.—Research in computer science and engineering establishes government-wide automated data processing (ADP) standards and provides technical support for the development of national and international voluntary industry standards which lead to more productive use of computers and networks, and the maintenance of the competitive posture of the U.S. computer industry.

Research support activities.—This subactivity groups the centrally managed programs that provide support to all other NBS programs. This support includes developing technical competence in NBS mission oriented areas of research and services, providing scientists and engineers from industry and universities the opportunity to participate in the Research Associate program, providing computing support to NBS programs, maintaining a satisfactory facilities environment for conducting the NBS technical programs, constructing a cold neutron research facility for advanced materials research, and formulating and implementing product standards policy and guidelines related to international standardization and legal metrology.

The National Telecommunications and Information Administration (NTIA) is the principal executive branch adviser to the President on domestic and international communications policy. Additionally, it manages the Federal Government's use of the radio frequency spectrum and performs extensive research in telecommunications sciences.

Domestic and international policies—

Domestic policies.—In 1988, NTIA will continue to develop and advocate policies to decrease regulation and increase competition in the domestic telecommunications marketplace. NTIA will place special emphasis on emerging technologies and will develop and advocate policies in the common carrier and mass media fields which offer increased consumer choices. Special emphasis will be placed on emerging technologies.

International policies.—In 1988, NTIA will continue to develop and advocate policies for the advancement of U.S. interests in the international telecommunications area. In coordination with the Department of State, the agency will continue to discharge the Presidential responsibility for oversight of the Communications Satellite Corporation (COMSAT). The increase in 1988 will permit NTIA to continue international conference preparation activities and increase bilateral trade negotiations support.

Spectrum management—

Spectrum plans and policies.—In 1988, NTIA will continue to prepare for, participate in, and implement the results of international, regional, and national conferences addressing spectrum allocation and utilization. In addition, NTIA will formulate, in coordination with the FCC, plans and policies for efficient use of the spectrum and continue its efforts in the identification and analysis of issues affecting emergency communications planning. The increase in 1988 provides for implementation of a telecommunications protocol with China.

Spectrum management, analysis and operations.—In 1988, NTIA will continue to authorize frequency assignments, review proposed Federal radio communications systems, conduct frequency band studies and compliance activities.

Telecommunication sciences research—

Spectrum research and analysis.—In 1988, NTIA will continue to conduct applied research and analysis as a basis for improving the efficiency of spectrum use.

Systems and networks research and analysis.—In 1988, NTIA will assess and develop domestic and international technical performance standards to facilitate competition in telecommunications products and services. Additionally, analytical methods and automated models will be employed to assist in the development of credible and defensible positions before international conferences and committees.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE—MILITARY

MILITARY PERSONNEL

ACTIVE FORCES

These appropriations finance the personnel costs of the active duty forces of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force. Changes in financial requirements are primarily related to military personnel strengths. In addition, these appropriations finance the future retirement benefits of the current active forces. While most of the entitlements financed by these appropriations are set by statute, the estimates reflect continuing efforts to improve management including implementation of audit recommendations, improved management of military travel, and prudent use of subsistence, bonus programs, and other pay programs.

The numbers of active duty military personnel provided for are shown in the following table:

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps program provides training for reserve and regular officer candidates who have enrolled in the course while attending a college at which an ROTC unit has been established. College graduates who satisfactorily complete the advanced course of the program are commissioned and are ordinarily ordered to active duty for a minimum of 3 years.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps Vitalization Act of 1964, as amended, authorizes a limited number of scholarships for ROTC students on a competitive basis. Successful candidates for the scholarships generally serve a minimum period of 4 years on active duty upon graduation and appointment as a commissioned officer. A number of scholarship recipients will fulfill their entire obligation in the Reserve components.

The Armed Forces health professions scholarship program provides a source of commissioned officers for the various health professions.

The numbers of commissioned officers graduated from these programs are summarized below:

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

These appropriations finance the costs of operating and maintaining the Armed Forces, including the Reserve components and related support activities of the Department of Defense, except military personnel costs.

Included are amounts for pay of civilians, contract services for maintenance of equipment and facilities, fuel, supplies, and repair parts for weapons and equipment. Financial requirements are influenced by many factors, including the number of aircraft squadrons, Army and Marine Corps divisions, installations, military strength and deployments, rates of operational activity, and quantity and complexity of major equipment (aircraft, ships, missiles, tanks, et cetera) in operation.

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

Programs in this title support modernization through military research, exploratory development, fabrication of technology-demonstration devices, and development and testing of prototypes and full-scale preproduction hardware. This work is performed by industrial contractors, Government laboratories and facilities, universities and nonprofit organizations.

Research and development programs are funded to cover annual needs. The following table shows RDT&E funding by activity:

Budget Plan (in thousands of dollars) Summary of program by activities: 1986 actual, 1987 est., 1988 est., 1989 est.

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for those appropriations that are available for obligation for more than one year. In 1988 and 1989, it presents, by budget activity, the value of the program requested for the life of these multiple-year appropriations, with comparable amounts in 1986 and 1987.

During the development of weapon systems, special management emphasis is placed on achieving savings through increased testing, increased competition, and developing realistic budgets.

The 1988/1989 program provides for increased development efforts on the Small Intercontinental Ballistic Missile and hardened mobile launcher, Peacekeeper Follow-on Basing, the Short-Range Attack Missile, the Advanced Technology Bomber, the MILSTAR Communications Satellite System and the Strategic Defense Initiative as well as an advanced Anti-Tank Weapon, a light helicopter (LHX), an advanced tactical fighter, the next generation airlifter (C-17), and the new nuclear attack submarine. Funds are also requested for product improvement to systems which have already been fielded or are in production; such as A-6 Upgrade, F-14D, F-15, and the M1A1.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for those appropriations that are available for obligation for more than one year. In 1988 and 1989, it presents, by budget activity, the value of the program requested for the life of these multiple-year appropriations, with comparable amounts in 1986 and 1987.

The direct military construction programs for the Armed Forces, both Active and Reserve, shown in the individual schedules of this title are summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM
	1986 actual	1987 est.	1988 est.	1989 est.
Active Forces.....	4,641,070	3,882,745	4,757,672	5,052,426
Reserve Forces.....	370,540	479,958	579,337	522,323
Interservice activities.....	211,998	786,170	1,295,200	1,350,000
Total.....	5,223,608	5,148,873	6,632,209	6,924,749

The 1988 and 1989 military construction programs will support new construction needed to accommodate force structure changes such as the Navy's strategic homeporting initiative and the Army's conversion to light infantry divisions. The Military Construction programs are also intended to provide facilities required as a result of new weapon systems entering the inventory including naval vessels, Ground Launched Cruise Missiles, Peacekeeper, and the Trident II Weapon System. The program continues initiatives to improve living and working conditions, to reduce operating costs, increase productivity, and conserve energy by upgrading or replacing facilities which have become functionally obsolete or can be made more efficient through relatively modest investments in improvements.

FAMILY HOUSING, DEFENSE

These appropriations finance all costs associated with construction, improvements, operations, maintenance and leasing of all military family housing. The family housing indebtedness information schedules show the status of indebtedness assumed by each military department to acquire family housing for assignment as public quarters. The program contains initiatives to reduce operating costs and conserve energy by upgrading or replacing facilities which can be made more efficient through relatively modest investments in improvements.

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for those appropriations that are available for obligation for more than one year. In 1988 and 1989, it presents, by budget activity, the value of the program requested for the life of these multiple-year appropriations, with comparable amounts in 1986 and 1987.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE STOCK FUNDS

Department of Defense stock funds finance the purchase of materials for resale to the military services and other authorized customers (10 U.S.C. 2208). These inventories are stocked at various Defense activities. Mobilization reserve materials are also purchased through the stock funds.

Budget program.—Inventories rise in 1988 and 1989 over 1987 for increased non-fuel inventory levels to support an expanding force structure, the modernization of the existing force, and other logistics initiatives. Efforts continue to achieve efficiencies in spare parts procurement through acquisition reform. The following table shows the stock fund inventories (in millions of dollars) resulting from the budget program.

Financing the budget program.—The budget program is financed primarily from sales to customers. Gross expenditures in 1988 and 1989 are projected to be higher than in 1987 to support an expanding force. Estimated expenditures are shown below (in millions of dollars):

	Gross outlays
	1986 actual	1987 est	1988 est.	1989 est.
Army stock fund.....	6,809.0	7,289.6	7,523.8	7,786.8

Total Department of Defense stock funds...	36,988.3	37,259.3	40,212.2	40,392.7

Procurement leadtime for material acquisition is greater than the time required to fill and collect customers' orders. As a result, Department of Defense stock funds are authorized to incur obligations in anticipation of future years' sales (10 U.S.C. 2210(b)). Pursuant to this authority, the outstanding balance of contract authority was $11,359.5 million at the end of 1986, and is estimated to remain at $11,359.5 million in 1988 and 1989.

Operating results and financial conditions.—Revenue and expenses for 1987, 1988, and 1989 are projected on a break-even basis. It is estimated that by the end of 1989, there will be $59,261.2 million in inventory and other assets. Liabilities will be $4,280.1 million and invested capital from appropriations, capitalized resources and retained income will be $54,981.1 million.

INDUSTRIAL FUNDS

Department of Defense industrial funds finance various Defense activities that perform industrial or commercial type functions on a reimbursable basis (10 U.S.C. 2208). Workload at these activities is generated by orders from various customers who provide reimbursement through progress payments for the full cost of the work performed. This enables the industrial funds to maintain the level of working capital needed for continued operations.

Budget program.—The policy of stabilizing the rates charged to customers will continue. Estimated total obligations are projected to decrease by over $170 million and $540 million in 1988 and 1989 respectively, reflecting changes in customer workload requirements and the transfer of certain functions to an appropriated fund status. Yearend totals are shown in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

Hydraulic mining in California, debris fund.—Fees paid by mine operators in the Sacramento and San Joaquin basins for depositing mine debris in restraining works, are used for their maintenance.

Maintenance and operation of dams and other improvements of navigable waters.—License fees are levied by the Department of Energy for private construction, operation, and maintenance of dams, conduits, and reservoirs. Half of the fees collected are used for maintenance and operation of Federal dams and other navigation structures, and for improvement of navigable waters. License fees are also levied by the Department of Energy for benefits accruing directly as the result of headwater improvements by Federal projects. One hundred percent of these fees collected are used for maintenance and operation of Federal dams and other navigation structures, and for improvement of navigable waters.

Payments to States.—Three-fourths of the money received from lease of Federal lands acquired for flood control, navigation, and allied purposes is paid to the State in which such property is situated for public schools, roads, or other expenses of county government.

The fund provides for the acquisition, operation, and maintenance of plant and equipment used in civil works functions; for temporary financing of services chargeable to civil appropriations; and for furnishing facilities and services for military functions of the Department of the Army, other governmental agencies and private persons (33 U.S.C. 576).

Budget program—

Operating expenses.—Operating costs include plant operations, warehousing, shops and facilities performing common services, and general administrative support including payrolls. Operating costs will increase about 4 percent in 1987.

Capital investment.—The 1988 program contains $31 million for the design, rehabilitation, and construction of structures; $10 million for the design, construction and rehabilitation of dredges, $15.7 million for the design, rehabilitation and construction of floating plant other than dredges; $29.3 million for the design and procurement of various land based equipment, including the Corps of Engineers Automation Plan; and $3 million for a variety of relatively small tools, office furniture, and equipment.

Financial condition.—Capital Government equity of the fund amounted to $725.5 million on September 30, 1986. Capital was increased by net earnings of $21 million in 1986. Increases are principally due to earnings reserved for plant replacement which are wholly reinvested in assets.

The Harbor Maintenance Trust Fund was established in accordance with the Harbor Maintenance Revenue Act of 1986 (Public Law 99-662, Title XIV). Under existing law, revenue is derived from: (1) receipts from a 0.04% ad valorem user fee imposed on commercial cargo loaded and unloaded at those U.S. ports open to public navigation, and (2) collection of charges and tolls imposed by the Saint Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation.

The Harbor Maintenance Revenue Act also authorized appropriations from the Trust Fund to fully finance the operation and maintenance of the Corporation, to finance up to 40 percent of Corps of Engineers' harbor operation and maintenance costs, including costs associated with Great Lakes navigational projects, and to rebate the U.S. portion of tolls paid on the Seaway.

Legislation will be proposed to restore financing of the Corporation's operation and maintenance to its status prior to passage of the Act. Pursuant to the proposed legislation, the Corporation would retain its tolls to finance operation and maintenance. Rebates would continue to be paid out of this Trust Fund.

For appropriation language, see the following accounts: Army Corps of Engineers, Civil "Operation and maintenance, general"; St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation "Operation and maintenance"; and Department of the Treasury "St. Lawrence Seaway toll rebate program".

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

Appropriations in this title shall be available for expenses of attendance by military personnel at meetings in the manner authorized by section 4110 of title 5, United States Code, uniforms, and allowances therefor, as authorized by law (5 U.S.C. 5901-5902), and for printing, either during a recess or session of Congress, of survey reports authorized by law, and such survey reports as may be printed during a recess of Congress shall be printed, with illustrations, as documents of the next succeeding session of Congress; not to exceed $2,000 for official reception and representation expenses; and during the current fiscal year the revolving fund, Corps of Engineers, shall be available for purchase (not to exceed [250] 225 for replacement only) and hire of passenger motor vehicles.

GENERAL PROVISIONS, CORPS OF ENGINEERS

In section 4(c) of Public Law 99-469, the word "Secretary" is deleted each time it appears and the words "United States" are inserted in lieu thereof.

[SEC. 101. None of the funds appropriated in this title, except as specifically contained herein, shall be used to alter, modify, dismantle, or otherwise change any project which is partially constructed but not funded for construction in this title.]

[SEC. 102. The Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of Engineers, is directed to continue with planning, design, engineering, construction and the operation and maintenance of the Des Moines Recreational River and Greenbelt project as described in Conference Report 99-236 using funds heretofore, herein and hereafter appropriated. Notwithstanding the language contained in the 1985 Supplemental Appropriations Act, Public Law 99-88, the Corps of Engineers shall continue their work on the General Design Memorandum, which shall be completed by October 1987 to serve as a master plan for the overall project. The design memorandum must address all enhancements contained in the list prepared by the Des Moines Recreational River and Greenbelt Advisory Committee. The project after construction will be operated and maintained at full Federal expense.]

[SEC. 103. Notwithstanding any conditions to the contrary in executed local cooperation agreements, where such agreements exist, initiation of construction of new Department of the Army water resource projects funded and authorized by Public Law 99-88 shall not be contingent upon enactment of legislation imposing a Federal port use charge or increasing the tax imposed by section 4042 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. Upon fulfillment of all other conditions and subject to such other terms as might appear in a local cooperation agreement, where required, for such a project, the Secretary shall initiate and complete construction of the project. Once construction has been initiated, no work in connection with such project shall be considered a "new start" for budgetary or funding purposes.]

[SEC. 104. None of the funds provided in this act, or any other act, may be used by the Corps of Engineers to lease, contract or otherwise transfer to a non-government entity any parks or recreation resources, or the management or operation thereof, located at Greers Ferry Lake or Little Red River in the State of Arkansas, for which such arrangements did not exist on or before September 1, 1986, until the Corps has studied the economic, environmental and public use impact of leasing to private enterprise the parks and other recreation resources at lakes, reservoirs and reaches of river under its jurisdiction and such study has been reviewed by the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate, the Committee on Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Environment and Public Works in the Senate.]

[Sec. 105. None of the funds made available by this Act or any other Act for any fiscal year may be used hereafter to study, to plan, to implement, to construct, or to issue any permit for the Northfield Mountain Water Supply Project, Massachusetts or the Millers and Tully Rivers Water Supply Project, Massachusetts: Provided, That this section shall not apply to environmental studies undertaken by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service: Provided further, That this shall not be construed as a precedent for any other Corps permit in any other State or region.]

[Sec. 106. Within available funds, the Secretary of the Army acting through the Chief of Engineers is authorized and directed to modify the Black Warrior and Tombigbee Rivers, Alabama, project, to provide a safe channel and general navigation facilities in the vicinity of Jackson, Alabama, at an estimated cost of $8,200,000. Necessary training works to provide a safe channel shall be constructed at full Federal expense as part of the Operation and Maintenance, General program. Development of general navigation facilities to provide a spur canal for a port facility at Jackson, at an estimated cost of $2,300,000, shall be part of the Construction, General program and shall be cost shared under terms and conditions acceptable to the Secretary of the Army as set forth in a binding agreement with a non-Federal sponsor desiring to participate in project construction.] (Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act, 1987, as included in Public Laws 99-500 and 99-591, section 101(e).)

Construction.—Budget authority of $5 million is requested for 1988 for construction of school facilities in school districts that serve children who reside on Indian lands.

Drug-free schools and communities.—

State grants.—States and outlying areas receive grants, according to a statutory formula based on school age population, to assist in combating the abuse of drugs and alcohol by the Nation's school age population. Grants will provide resources to reinforce and coordinate the efforts of State and local officials, community organizations, and concerned parents to end the use of drugs by young people.

Of the total allotted to each State, 70 percent is reserved for distribution and use by State and local educational agencies; the remaining 30 percent is reserved for programs coordinated by the Governor.

National programs.—Funds support programs at institutions of higher education, programs for Indian youth, programs for Native Hawaiians, regional centers, and Federal activities for preventing alcohol and drug abuse.

Magnet schools assistance.—Funds are provided to local educational agencies for use in operating magnet school programs that are part of approved desegregation plans. Currently, 44 school districts are receiving awards of up to $4,000,000.

Teacher training and improvement.—

State grants.—Under proposed legislation, funds will be made available to the States for programs to provide opportunities for in-service education of teachers and administrators in order to improve their subject matter competence and professional skills, attract qualified persons into the teaching profession, and provide retraining for teachers who wish to move into new subject areas.

National programs.—The Secretary, under the proposed legislation, would use discretionary funds for nationally significant projects of research, development and testing, demonstration, data collection, and dissemination related to improvement of teaching and teacher education.

Note.—The activities previously financed in three accounts under Department of Education, Special Institutions—American Printing House for the Blind, National Technical Institute for the Deaf and Gallaudet College—in 1986 and 1987 are presented in these schedules and are proposed to be financed in this account in 1988. Budget authority and outlays are distributed by account above.

This new account consolidates three prior accounts, each of which included a grant to a particular institution which serves handicapped students. These institutions share a special relationship with the Federal Government including congressional recognition of each institution in law. In addition, these grants are the largest single source of funds for each institution.

American Printing House for the Blind.—The Federal appropriation supports the production of free educational materials for blind students below the college level. In 1986, the direct Federal appropriation represented 42 percent of the institution's operating budget. Legislation has been proposed to eliminate the $10 thousand annual payment to the Printing House based on a 1879 trust fund. An offsetting increase of $10 thousand is included in the regular appropriation request.

National Technical Institute for the Deaf.—This national residential center provides postsecondary technical education for deaf people to prepare them for successful employment. In 1986, Federal appropriations represented 85 percent of the institute's operating budget. The budget display shows separately the costs of educating a temporary increase in students due to the rubella epidemic of 1964-65. Legislation was enacted in 1986 to create an endowment matching grant.

Gallaudet University.—This private, nonprofit educational institution provides an undergraduate higher education program for deaf persons, a preparatory program for students who need such training to qualify them for college admission, a graduate program in fields of study related to deafness, and continuing education and public service programs appropriate to its postsecondary education mission. The budget display shows separately the costs of educating a temporary increase in students due to the rubella epidemic of 1964-65.

Gallaudet also operates on campus the Model Secondary School for the Deaf, which serves deaf students of high school age, and the Kendall Demonstration Elementary School for younger children. In connection with their instructional programs, these schools also develop materials and methods for teaching deaf children.

In 1986, Federal appropriations represented 74 percent of the university's operating budget and 100 percent of the operating budgets of the related elementary and secondary schools. Legislation was enacted in 1986 to create an endowment matching grant.

Legislation has been proposed to eliminate the $10 thousand annual payment based on a trust fund initially established in 1879 (no actual trust fund now exists). An offsetting increase of $10 thousand is requested in the regular appropriation. Separate administration of the annual payment, which now amounts to less than one-tenth of 1 percent of the annual operating budget of this institution, is no longer cost effective.

Vocational education—State programs.—

Basic grants.—This program provides State grants for vocational education expansion, innovation, and improvement and for providing greater access to vocational education for underserved populations. Funds under the Indian and Hawaiian natives programs are awarded to federally recognized Indian tribes and to organizations primarily serving and representing Hawaiian natives. Services funded by these set-asides are in addition to services provided under other provisions of the Perkins Act.

Community-based organizations.—This activity provides assistance to joint programs of eligible recipients and community-based organizations for a variety of vocational activities, primarily for disadvantaged youth.

Consumer and homemaking education.—These funds are used to prepare youths and adults for the occupation of homemaker.

State councils.—Councils are funded for the purpose of advising on and evaluating State vocational education programs. Each council is composed of 13 individuals, 7 of whom represent the private sector.
National programs.—

Research.—Funds are awarded on a competitive basis for research activities which contribute to improved access to vocational education for underserved populations and to improved vocational education in the nation. Activities include a national center for research in vocational education, a national assessment of vocational education, and a program of discretionary research projects.

Demonstration programs.—Funds are used to support a displaced workers training program in Johnstown, Pennsylvania. Other vocational training demonstration projects may also be funded.

Data systems.—Funds are allocated annually to the Department of Labor for joint support of the National Occupational Information Coordinating Committee and 57 State occupational information coordinating committees. Funds also contribute to the support of the vocational education data system.

Bilingual vocational training.—Grants are awarded on a competitive basis for projects which provide job and language training to limited English proficient persons. A portion of the funds are also used to train instructors for bilingual vocational training programs and to develop instructional materials and methods for bilingual vocational training.

The Smith-Hughes Act of 1917 (Public Law 64-347), as amended, provides a permanent appropriation for vocational education basic grants and national programs.

Adult education.—Formula grants are made to States to eliminate functional illiteracy among the nation's adults and to assist adults in obtaining a high school diploma or its equivalent. Funds may be used to increase the involvement of the private sector in the delivery of adult education services. Funds are also requested for the Secretary to support discretionary research, demonstration and evaluation activities.

Note.—Public Laws 99-500 and 99-591, section 101(i), provide funds to the extent and in the manner provided for in the conference version of H.R. 5233, Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1987.

¹ The 1986 loan level was subject to sequestration under Public Law 99-177. The post-sequestration loan level constituted a de facto limitation of $181,830 thousand.

² Represents in all years institutional matching share of defaulted loans assigned to the Education Department. In addition, 1987 reflects reclassification of direct loan capital contributions to schools as grants (-$4,793,462 thousand) as well as funds transferred to Guaranteed student loans (-$16,009 thousand) for 1988 advances for guarantee agency reserve funds.

This account finances several programs of aid to students in postsecondary education.

Pell grants.—Undergraduate students establish eligibility for these grants through application to a federally managed system of assessment of need, including individual and parental ability to contribute. In 1987 a proposed transfer of budget authority would eliminate the unfunded shortfall. If this transfer is not approved, a "linear reduction" of $287 million will be required. In 1988 legislative changes are proposed to increase targeting of these grants on the neediest students.

Direct student loans.—Income-contingent loans.—

Under the income-contingent loan (ICL) program, schools operate revolving loan funds capitalized in part with Federal contributions distributed to participating schools. Loans are made at the school's discretion to students with demonstrated need and carry unsubsidized interest rates. Repayment rates depend on post-school earnings: as income increases, so does the percentage of income required for repayment. In 1988, the increase in Federal contributions would increase the number of schools and students served. Legislative changes are proposed to allow use of a variety of program-related revenues for additional ICL loan capital.

Perkins loans.—Under the Perkins loan (formerly national direct student loan (NDSL)) program, schools operate similar revolving loan funds. Most loans are financed by repayments and other income in the funds. The interest rate is 5 percent, with repayment generally beginning after leaving school. Certain deferments to delay repayment are available. Legislative changes are proposed to raise effective borrower interest rates to increase solvency of institutional revolving funds.

Funds requested under the Perkins loan cancellation authority reimburse school revolving funds for indebtedness cancelled as a result of the borrower engaging in certain public service occupations.

The following tables display aid funds available and number of aid awards, including aid under the guaranteed student loan (GSL) program, under the budget request. For work study and direct loans, the chart includes the effect of matching funds. Direct loan amounts are all loans from revolving funds, regardless of source of capital. Guaranteed loan amounts are loan capital, not the Federal costs of those loans.

notwithstanding section 428(c) of the Higher Education Act, the maximum amount that the Secretary shall reimburse any agency in any year with respect to losses as a result of default on the unpaid balance of the principal and accrued interest of any loans made for periods of enrollment beginning on or after July 1, 1987 under part B of title IV shall be ninety per centum of the amount expended by such agency in discharge of its guarantee obligation, provided that if the ratio of the agency's cumulative net defaults, as defined by the Secretary, as of the end of the prior fiscal year to the cumulative amount of the agency's reinsured loans that have entered repayment as of the end of the prior fiscal year exceeds five per centum, the reimbursement rate shall be reduced to eighty per centum, and that if the ratio is nine per centum or more, the reimbursement rate shall be reduced to seventy per centum: Provided further, That notwithstanding section 428(c) of the Higher Education Act, the Secretary's reinsurance reimbursements made to an agency after September 30, 1987 shall be reduced to the extent that the agency's reserves exceed the greatest of fifty per centum of enrollment beginning on or after July 1, 1987 under section 427 or 428: Provided further, That a borrower for any award year after 1986-87 under section 427 or 428 shall pay to the Federal Government a guarantee fee, equal to nine per centum of the amount of such loan, to cover Federal default and other program administrative costs, and a borrower for any award year after 1986-87 under section 428A or 428B shall pay to the Federal Government a guarantee fee, equal to two per centum of the amount of such loan, to cover such Federal costs: Provided further, That notwithstanding section 484(d) NOTES

Excludes $6,800 thousand in 1988 for activities transferred to Departmental Management, Salaries and expenses. Comparable amounts for 1986 ($6,326 thousand) and 1987 ($6,800 thousand) are included above.
Administratively, proposed guarantee fees would be deducted from agency billings for current default claims, just as origination fees are deducted from lender billings for current special allowance payments. Conceptually, guarantee fees are intended to be equal to the present value of future defaults arising from new loans. When loan volume is growing, therefore, guarantee fees in a given year might exceed default claims. In such a case, fees in excess of claims would be an offsetting collection; this occurs in the PLUS/SLS component in 1987.

The guaranteed student loan (GSL) program is designed to promote the availability of loans from banks and other lenders to students and their parents to help meet the costs of attending participating universities, colleges, and other postsecondary institutions after taking into consideration family financial resources and student self-help. This is accomplished through the provision of Federal reinsurance against borrower default as well as through substantial Federal subsidy payments. In general, the program is administered by State and private nonprofit guarantee agencies that serve as intermediate loan insurers, defaulted loan collectors, and providers of various services to lenders. Through July 1984, the Federal Government also provided direct loan insurance and, in such cases, continues to be responsible for defaulted loan collection and providing assistance to lenders.

Three types of guaranteed loans are currently available through the program: under the regular loan component, students may borrow highly subsidized loans; under the PLUS loan component, parents can borrow less-subsidized loans; and under the Supplemental Loans for Students (SLS) component, formerly part of PLUS, students also may borrow less-subsidized loans. Each program has both annual and cumulative limits on loan amounts. All loans can be used only to meet educational expenses. Evidence of financial need is required for a student to receive a regular student loan.

The Federal Government pays lenders a quarterly special allowance throughout the life of each regular loan. This allowance assures lenders a total yield on new loans equal to the current 91-day Treasury bill rate plus 3¼ percent or the interest rate to the borrower, whichever is higher. Under budget proposals, the special allowance would be reduced to the Treasury bill rate plus 2¾ percent; no allowance would be paid after the second year of repayment. The Government is also liable for up to 100 percent of costs related to borrower default, death, disability, and bankruptcy. The budget proposes borrower user fees and increased lender and guarantee agency default liability to shift a significant portion of this risk to the beneficiaries of the program.

Under the regular loan component, the Federal Government pays the interest obligation (generally 8 percent on new loans) of eligible borrowers while they are in school and during grace and certain deferment periods. Federal interest benefit costs are offset by an origination fee of 5 percent of loan principal which is charged to borrowers. The budget would end this interest benefit payment but would, accordingly, also terminate the origination fee.

Under the PLUS and SLS loan components, graduate students, independent undergraduate students, and parents of dependent students may borrow to meet the student's educational expenses. Unlike the regular loan program, the borrower's interest obligation during in-school, grace, and deferment periods (the 91-day Treasury bill rate plus 3¾ percent) is not paid by the Federal Government. The budget proposes that both annual and cumulative PLUS and SLS loan limits be eliminated.

Finally, the Federal Government pays administrative cost allowances to guarantee agencies and provides them with reserve fund advances. No funds are requested for these activities and outstanding advances are gradually recalled through 1990. One-time savings are proposed in 1988 by applying excess guarantee agency reserves to agency default claims against the Government.

Federal receipts primarily include collections on defaulted loans and reimbursements from guarantee agencies for their default collections. Also included are Student Loan Marketing Association (Sallie Mae) repayments of loans from the Federal Financing Bank because these transactions are treated as part of the cost of the GSL program.

Proposals to improve the design and operation of this program would substantially modify program activity and cost. Total loan volume insured under such proposals is expected to be $8,965 million in 1988, resulting in outstanding loans at the end of 1988 of $41,063 million. The following tables all reflect the proposed program improvements.

Increased efforts are being made to collect outstanding defaults and to reduce the incidence of default. These efforts include: expanding collection activities by referring both insured and reinsured defaulted loans to private collection agencies; sharing information on defaulted loans with consumer credit bureaus; computer matches to locate defaulters; increased litigation; increased lender due diligence requirements; and closer monitoring of collection activity. A major initiative begun recently involves the deduction from Federal tax refunds of defaulted loan amounts. This initiative resulted in repayments of $91 million in 1986 and is expected to result in repayments of $128 million in 1987 and $143 million in 1988. Outstanding defaults owed to the Federal Government in 1986-88 are as follows:

Costs to the Federal Government related to a particular loan accrue throughout the period the loan is outstanding, which can be extended up to 25 years. Federal costs on regular loans are significantly reduced through the origination fees, used to offset interest subsidy costs, and would similarly be reduced under a proposed default guarantee fee, intended to reinforce insurance features of the program by having borrowers share more of the risk of default costs. Indeed, as the following table illustrates, net first year obligations may in fact be negative. Costs in the budget year, therefore, are determined largely by the cost of loans outstanding at the start of the year.

Repayments	-301,467	-442,581	-520,417
Writeoffs and other adjustments	-83,068	-335,631	-626,372

Note.—Same as "Status of Direct Loans" table above, but excludes advances to guarantee agency reserve funds.

Despite these many efforts, defaults remain unacceptably high. Frequently used GSL default rate measures are the gross and net cumulative default rates. The former represents cumulative defaults divided by cumulative loans that have matured (i.e., entered repayment). The latter represents cumulative defaults minus cumulative collections on defaults, divided by cumulative matured loans. These rates are the best measures of the long-term default costs of the entire GSL portfolio.

Aid for institutional development—

Set-aside for historically black colleges and universities.—Funds under this heading are set aside to help historically black institutions equalize educational opportunity and strengthen their management and fiscal operations so they may become self-sufficient. In 1988, funds would be available to historically black colleges and universities for formula grants and endowment grants.

Other.—In 1988, only unobligated 1987 funds will support endowment grants for institutions other than historically black colleges and universities.

Other aid for institutions—

Program development.—In 1988, grants under the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education would support projects which address problems and encourage improvements in postsecondary education. Grants under the minority institutions science improvement program would support projects to improve science education at predominantly minority institutions.

Academic facilities—Interest subsidy grants.—Funds will meet mandatory interest subsidy costs of construction loan commitments made prior to 1974.

Aid for students—

Special programs for the disadvantaged.—This program helps individuals from disadvantaged backgrounds enter and complete college. In 1988, funds would support grants to postsecondary institutions that participate in the special services and upward bound programs.

Scholarships and fellowships.—In 1988, funds would support Robert C. Byrd honors scholarships for outstanding students.

Cuban and law enforcement education loan collection costs.—No new loans are made under these activities. Collections on outstanding prior year loans continue. Outstanding defaults, as well as delinquent loans, are as follows:
