

BUDGET OF THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

APPENDIX

Fiscal Year 1995

THE BUDGET DOCUMENTS

Budget of the United States Government, Fiscal Year 1995 contains the Budget Message of the President and presents the President's budget proposals.

Analytical Perspectives, Budget of the United States Government, Fiscal Year 1995 contains analyses that are designed to highlight specified program areas or provide other significant presentations of budget data that place the budget in perspective.

It includes economic and accounting analyses, such as a balance sheet-type presentation; information on Federal receipts and collections, including user fees and tax expenditures; analyses of Federal spending; detailed information on Federal borrowing and debt; the Budget Enforcement Act preview report; current services estimates; and other technical presentation, such as the national income and product accounts.

It also includes information on management improvements; the budget system and concepts; a listing of the Federal programs by agency and account; and a glossary of budget terms.

Historical Tables, Budget of the United States Government, Fiscal Year 1995 provides data on budget receipts, outlays, surpluses or deficits, and Federal debt covering an extended time period—in many cases beginning in fiscal year 1940 and ending in fiscal year 1999. These are much longer time periods than those covered by similar tables in other budget documents. The data in this volume and all other historical data in the budget documents are consistent with the concepts and presentation used in the 1995 Budget, so the data series are comparable over time.

Budget of the United States Government, Fiscal Year 1995—Appendix contains detailed information on the various appropriations and funds that constitute the budget. The Appendix contains more detailed information than any of the other budget documents. It includes for each agency: the proposed text of appropriation language, budget schedules for each account, new legislative proposals, explanations of the work to be performed and the funds needed, and proposed general provisions applicable to the appropriations of entire agencies or group of agencies. Supplemental and rescission proposals for the current year are presented separately. Information is also provided on certain activities whose outlays are not part of the budget totals.

Automated Sources of Budget Information. Copies of the budget number data in electronic form may be obtained from the U.S. Department of Commerce, National Technical Information Service, Springfield, VA 22161, telephone (703) 487-4650. DETAILED BUDGET ESTIMATES

EXPLANATION OF ESTIMATES

"DETAILED BUDGET ESTIMATES" contains various tables and schedules in support of the budget. It includes explanations of the work to be performed and the money needed. It includes the language proposed for enactment by Congress on each item for which congressional action in an appropriations bill is required. It also contains the language proposed for the general provisions of appropriations acts that apply to entire agencies or groups of agencies.

ARRANGEMENT

The sections in this chapter reflect the branches of Government, the cabinet departments, selected independent agencies, and other activities of the executive branch. The smaller agencies in the executive branch are grouped alphabetically in one section—"Other independent agencies."

A section for a large agency is usually organized by major subordinate organizations within the agency (usually bureaus) or by major program area.

Within each bureau or major program area, accounts usually appear in the following order:

- general fund accounts with current budget authority, in the following order: accounts for which appropriations are requested for the budget year; accounts for which appropriations were made in the current year and not requested in the budget year; other unexpired accounts; expired accounts;
- permanent general fund appropriations;
- special fund accounts with current budget authority, in the following order: accounts for which appropriations are requested for the budget year; accounts for which appropriations were made in the current year and not re-

- quested in the budget year; other unexpired accounts; expired accounts;
- permanent special fund appropriations;
- public enterprise funds;
- intragovernmental revolving funds and management funds;
- credit reform accounts, in the following order: program account, financing account, and liquidating account;
- trust funds;
- trust revolving funds.

By law, the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance and Disability Insurance trust funds are outside the budget totals. These accounts are presented in a separate section, Health and Human Services, Social Security. Also, by law the Postal Service Fund is outside the budget totals. A presentation for the Fund is included in the "Other independent agencies" section.

The proposed language for general provisions of appropriations acts that are only applicable to one agency appear at the end of the section for that agency. In some instances general provisions in an appropriations act may apply to two or more agencies, in which case, the general provisions for all of the agencies will appear at the end of the section for one agency. The following table indicates the location of all general provisions. The first column of the table lists the most recently enacted appropriations and the major agencies responsible for programs funded by each act. The second column provides the location of the general provisions that apply to the agencies listed in the first column. The general provisions that are Government-wide in scope (identified "Departments, Agencies, and Corporations"), normally contained in the Treasury, Postal Service, and General Government Appropriations Act, appear in a separate section following this one.

FORM OF DETAILED MATERIAL

APPROPRIATIONS LANGUAGE

The language proposed for inclusion in the 1995 appropriations acts is printed following the account title. Language for 1994 appropriations, printed in roman type, is used as a base. Brackets enclose material that is proposed for deletion; italic type indicates proposed new language. At the end of the final language paragraph, and printed in italic within parentheses, are citations to any relevant authorizing legislation and to the specific appropriations act from which the basic text of the 1994 language is taken. Where appropriate, a note follows the language indicating that the budget authority proposed is for continuing activities for which additional appropriations authorization is or has been proposed. An illustration of proposed appropriations language for 1995 follows:

OPERATING EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of the Office of Climate Information, [$30,290,000] $28,870,000 of which [$150,000] $400,000 shall remain available until expended. (34 U.S.C. 218 et seq.; Department of Government Appropriation Act, 1993.)

The language proposed for general provisions is presented in the same fashion, except that the previously enacted language is not shown where whole sections or subsections of language are proposed for deletion.

BASIS FOR SCHEDULES

The 1993 column of this budget presents the actual transactions and balances for that year, as recorded in agency accounts.

For 1994, the regular schedules include enacted appropriations. In addition, indefinite appropriations are included on the basis of amounts likely to be required.

The 1995 column of the regular schedules includes proposed appropriations for all programs under existing legislation, including those that require extension or renewal of expiring laws.

Amounts for proposed new legislation are shown generally in separate schedules, following the regular schedules or in budget sequence in the respective bureau. These schedules are headed "Proposed for later transmittal under proposed legislation." Appropriations language is included with the regular schedules, but not with the separate schedules for proposed legislation. Necessary appropriations language will be transmitted later upon enactment of the proposed legislation. In some cases, when the amount requested in the budget is less than the amount required for the program level mandated in existing authorizing legislation (as in the case of certain entitlement programs), the reduced amount is reflected in the proposed appropriations language and the regular schedules.

PROGRAM AND FINANCING SCHEDULE

This schedule consists of several parts. In the "Program by activities" section, obligations generally are shown for specific activities or projects. The activity structure is developed individually for each appropriation or fund account to provide a meaningful presentation of information for the program being financed. That structure is tailored to the individual account and is not uniform across the Government. When the amounts of obligations that are financed from collections credited to an account (reimbursements and repayments) are significant, "Reimbursable program" obligations are shown separately from "Direct program" obligations. When the amounts are significant, "Capital investments" are shown separately from "Operating expenses." The last entry "Total obligations," indicates the minimum amount of budgetary resources that must be available to the appropriation or fund account in that year.

The "Financing" section shows the budgetary resources available or estimated to be available to finance the total obligations. First are unobligated balances of budgetary resources (that have not expired) brought forward from the end of the prior year. Next, those amounts that were available for obligation during the year and were not used, but continue to be available, are shown as an unobligated balance available, end of year. That balance is carried forward and usually obligated in a subsequent year. Other adjusting entries may be included. The residual is the amount of new budget authority required to finance the program. Where more than one kind of budget authority is provided, that information is shown. In some cases, provisions of law other than the appropriations language for the account increase or reduce the budget authority provided. In such cases, the public law number is usually indicated in the stub entry. For example, P.L. 99-177 refers to the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, as amended, also known as the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act. In some cases, the availability of budgetary resources may be restrained by legally binding limitations on obligations. Such limitations are usually included in appropriations language.

The "Relation of obligations to outlays" section shows the difference between obligations, which may not be paid in the same year in which they are incurred, and outlays. The amount of obligations that were incurred in previous years but not paid are entered as an obligated balance, start of year. Similarly, an end of year obligated balance is entered. Certain adjusting entries may be included. The residual is the amount of outlays resulting from the payment of obligations incurred in that year and previous years.

The "Adjustments to budget authority and outlays" section shows deductions for offsetting collections for those accounts that are credited with such collections. The amounts are listed by source—Federal funds, trust funds, non-Federal sources, or off-budget Federal accounts. The total amount of collections is deducted from gross budget authority and from gross outlays to derive net budget authority and outlays. For accounts with limitations on the authority to spend offsetting collections, the balance of any amount of that is unavailable for obligation is shown in a separate "Schedule on Unavailable Collections."

NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Narrative statements present briefly the objectives of the program and the work to be financed primarily for 1995. Measures of expected performance may be included, and the relationship to the financial estimates is described.

SCHEDULE OF OBJECT CLASSIFICATION AND PERSONNEL SUMMARY

There is shown for each account a schedule of obligations, according to the following uniform list of object classifications:

10 PERSONAL SERVICES AND BENEFITS	25.3 Purchase of goods and services from other Government accounts
11 Personnel compensation	25.4 Operations of GOCOs
12 Personnel benefits	25.5 Research and development contracts
13 Benefits for former personnel	26 Supplies and materials

24 Printing and reproduction	42 Insurance claims and indemnities
25.1 Consulting services	43 Interest and dividends
25.2 Other services	44 Refunds

These object classes reflect the nature of the things or services purchased, regardless of the purpose of the program for which they are used. Several of the object classes are divided into subclasses—personnel compensation, for example, is shown separately for full-time permanent employees, for other than full-time employees, and for certain other payments. Except for revolving funds, reimbursable obligations are aggregated in a single line and not identified by object class. Data, classified by object, are illustrated in the following schedule:

When obligations for personnel compensation are shown in the object classification schedule, a personnel summary generally will follow the object classification schedule, as illustrated below:

Federal civilian employment generally is stated on a full-time equivalent (FTE) basis for the executive branch. It is the total number of hours worked (or to be worked) divided by the number of compensible hours applicable to each fiscal year.

BUSINESS-TYPE BUDGET STATEMENTS

Business-type budget statements are presented for activities specifically required by the Government Corporation Control Act and generally for other revolving and trust revolving funds conducting business with the public. They are occasionally presented for funds conducting business within the Government.

Statement of Revenue and Expense

For many revolving funds there is a statement of revenue and expense that shows the resulting net income or loss for the year. This statement usually includes accrued revenue (e.g., revenue earned) and accrued expenditures (e.g., including costs incurred but not yet paid), whether funded or unfunded.

Total net income or loss (-)	20,795	24,250	30,980

Statement of Financial Condition

The statements of financial condition show assets, liabilities, and equity for the fund at the close of each fiscal year. In addition to this information, which is similar to commercial balance sheet data, budget needs also require additional information, shown in the equity section. A disclosure is made of obligations incurred that have not yet accrued into liabilities (undelivered orders) and of budgetary resources for which no funding has been received (unfinanced budgetary resources). Unfinanced budgetary resources include orders from Federal customers that have not been filled (unfilled orders), and unfinanced budget authority in the form of authority to borrow for which borrowing has not taken place, and contract authority for which liquidating cash has not been received. Orders received from the public must be accompanied by advance payment. The amounts in the 1991 column are unaudited and subject to change at the end of June 1992.

FEDERAL CREDIT SCHEDULES

Federal credit programs provide benefits to the public in the form of direct loans and loan guarantees. The Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990 requires that the estimated costs arising from the direct and guaranteed loans of a program be calculated on a net present value basis, excluding administrative costs. For most programs, direct loan obligations and loan guarantee commitments cannot be made unless appropriations for the cost have been provided in advance in annual appropriations acts. In addition, annual limitations on the amount of obligations and commitments may be enacted in appropriations language.

Appropriations for costs are recorded as budget authority in credit program accounts. The administrative expenses associated with a credit program are also financed in the program account, but on a cash basis. All cash flows arising from direct loan obligations and loan guarantee commitments are recorded in separate financing accounts. The transactions of the financing accounts are not included in the budget totals. Program accounts make subsidy payments, recorded as on-budget outlays, to the financing accounts at the time of the disbursement of the direct or guaranteed loans.

The transactions associated with direct loan obligations and loan guarantee commitments made prior to 1992 continue to be accounted for on a cash flow basis and are recorded in liquidating accounts. In most cases, the liquidating account is the account that was used for the program prior to the enactment of the 1990 requirements.

Program and Financing schedules (described above) are shown for program, financing, and liquidating accounts. In addition, a Summary of Loan Levels, Subsidy Budget Authority, and Outlays by Program schedule is shown for program accounts. Status of Direct Loans and Status of Guaranteed Loans schedules (as applicable) are shown for liquidating accounts and financing accounts. Examples of these schedules are shown below. Summary information on Federal credit programs is provided in the chapter entitled "Credit and insurance" in the "Analytical Perspectives" volume."

ALLOCATIONS BETWEEN AGENCIES

In some cases, funds appropriated to the President or to an agency are allocated to one or more agencies that help to carry out a program. Obligations incurred under such allocations are included in the data for the account to which the appropriation is made in the allocating agency. The object classification schedule for such accounts identifies the amount of such obligations by performing agency. A note at the end of a bureau or equivalent grouping identifies allocations received from other agencies.

BUDGETS NOT SUBJECT TO REVIEW

In accordance with law or established practice, the presentations for the Legislative Branch, the Judiciary, the Milk Market Orders Assessment Fund of the Department of Agriculture, the Farm Credit Administration, and the International Trade Commission have been included, without review, in the amounts submitted by the agencies.

The budgets of the privately owned Government-sponsored enterprises and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, are not subject to review; they are included for information purposes only.

The Judiciary Office Building Development Act, Public Law 100-480, among other purposes, authorizes the Architect of the Capitol to contract for the design and construction of a building adjacent to Union Station in the District of Columbia to be leased to the Judicial Branch of the United States. This schedule reflects the transfer of funds authorized by the Act and the costs associated with the construction of the building. Costs of construction were financed by an initial $125,392 thousand of Federal agency debt (sales price less unamortized discount) issued in 1989.

Estimates prepared by the Legislative Branch assumed the financial arrangements to be a lease-purchase, which would distribute outlays associated with acquisition of the building over a period of thirty years. However, the arrangements involve federally guaranteed financing and other characteristics that make them substantively the same as direct federal construction, financed by direct federal borrowing. Because estimated expenditures of the Legislative Branch are required to be included in the budget as submitted and without change, this separate schedule is included as an adjustment to reflect direct construction costs and associated interest costs, consistent with standard budget concepts and scoring conventions.

Personal services and necessary expenses to provide support for the basic operations of the Library are financed from this appropriation.

Collections services.—The largest administrative unit of the Library of Congress, both in budget and in staff, has as its mission the acquisition of materials; the cataloging, classification, and preparation of materials for use; the preservation of materials for use now and in the future; and serving the public and managing the Library's universal collections, which are the largest in the world. Support services—network development, automation planning, in-service training activities, technical processes research, and, in conjunction with Constituent Services, the Library-wide collection development planning and operations—complement the mission work of the service unit. Collections Services provides many basic technical services to the Library of Congress as well as the world's research and library communities.

Constituent services.—This program serves the public by maintaining the general collections and the general reading rooms. It also develops, produces, markets, and distributes the printed catalog cards, cataloging data in machine-readable form, book catalogs, technical publications, and selected bibliographies made available from the automated data bases. In cooperation with the Collections Services program, this program sets collections policy. This program also coordinates Federal library and information resources.

The Copyright Office is responsible for registering and recording copyright claims, assignments, and renewals, for supplying copyright information to the public, for collecting and accounting for copyright fees, and for publishing complete and indexed catalogs for each class of copyright entries. The Office is conducted for the most part on a self-sustaining basis. The amount requested is substantially counterbalanced by fees received for services rendered and the value of books and other library materials deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act and transferred to the Library of Congress. The income and obligations for 1993, and estimates for 1994 and 1995 are as follows:

Income:
Gross receipts	$16,460,717	$16,833,000	$17,427,000
Estimated value of materials deposited and transferred to the Library of Congress	13,547,455	13,000,000	13,000,000
Total income	$30,008,172	$29,833,000	$30,427,000
Obligations	$25,742,000	$26,244,000	$27,956,000

The efforts described under each of the activities are predicated on an estimated 620,000 copyright registrations during 1995, an estimated 620,000 during 1994, and registrations of 620,000 during 1993.

Receiving and accounting for applications, fees, and correspondence.—Materials received by the Copyright Office are assembled and routed; accounts are maintained for all moneys received; records relating to the registration of copyrights are filed; and materials are deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act.

Examining copyright applications.—All applications and deposits are examined before issuance of registration certificates or recordings of documents to determine whether the provisions of the Copyright Act have been satisfied.

Indexing and cataloging materials received.—The Register of Copyrights is required to publish complete and indexed catalogs of all items registered. The catalog entries prepared by the Copyright Office are made available to the public and the Library. It is estimated that for 1995 the number of items to be cataloged will be 620,000.

Reference service.—The Copyright Office makes information available to the public concerning the provisions of the Copyright Act, including procedures, policies, and rulings. Information concerning registrations is furnished on a fee basis.

Publishing the catalog of copyright entries and bulletins of decisions.—Catalogs for each class of copyright entries and bulletins of copyright decisions are published and made available to the public.

General supervision and legal services.—The work of the Copyright Office includes legal supervision and research into the present copyright law and international copyright relations. It also involves a study of improvement of the domestic law and our international copyright relations.

Licensing Division.—The Licensing Division performs the responsibilities connected with the licensing activities of cable television stations and satellite carriers and the licensing of digital audio recording devices and media. The division also shares with the Register's Office the responsibilities formerly entrusted to the Copyright Royalty Tribunal and now administered by the Copyright Office and the Library of Congress; this involves the convening of arbitration panels for rate making and distribution of royalties under various compulsory licenses of the copyright law.

Acquisitions.—The Copyright Acquisitions Division is responsible for the acquisition of domestic and international materials in various formats for the collections of the Library of Congress through the enforcement of the mandatory deposit requirement as stated in section 407 of the Copyright Act of 1976 (Title 17, U.S.C.).

Policy analysis and research.—The Congressional Research Service provides objective, nonpartisan analytical and consultative services to the Members and committees of Congress, assisting them in the analysis, appraisal, and evaluation of any subject matter of legislative concern, including recommendations submitted to the Congress by the Executive Branch. Research services are also provided to assist Congress with its oversight, representative, and other responsibilities. Support takes the form of background studies, in-depth policy analyses, consultations, briefings, legal research, continuous liaison with committees, assistance with committee hearings, public policy seminars for Members and congressional staff, and related data and materials. In order to respond most effectively to the broad range of congressional inquiries, the Service supplements individually tailored products with Issue Briefs, Reports, Committee Prints, and "Info Packs", which are collections of both CRS products and carefully selected materials from outside sources that provide background material on issues of very high congressional interest. Lists of subjects and policy areas that a committee might profitably pursue are periodically made available to each congressional committee. As provided by statute, the Service prepares decennially the Constitution of the United States—Analysis and Interpretation, and supplements at 2-year intervals, prepares compendiums for the annual national high school and college debate topics, and provides assistance to the Congressional Budget Office, the Office of Technology Assessment, and the General Accounting Office.

Documentation and status of legislation.—The Service prepares summaries of all public bills and resolutions introduced in Congress, the status of bills receiving action, and various pertinent indexes. The information is made available to Congressional offices on SCORPIO, the Library's online system. Daily additions and changes keep the file current with the latest summaries and bill status. Upon request, the Service prepares legislative history memorandums on bills for which hearings have been announced, and compiles and makes available to each committee reports on legislatively authorized programs and activities within that committee's jurisdiction that are scheduled to terminate during the current Congress.

Information and reference service.—The Congressional Research Service provides extensive information and reference assistance to Members and committees. Reference files containing clippings, pamphlets, and documents and automated information services are maintained for rapid information retrieval. Lists of selected reports, prepared by CRS staff on legislative issues, are regularly distributed to congressional offices. To provide faster responses and in-person services, the Service also maintains reference centers in congressional office buildings and the Congressional Reading Rooms in the Madison and Jefferson Buildings of the Library of Congress.

Executive direction and support.—Providing overall supervision and administrative support to the entire Congressional Research Service is the responsibility of the Office of the Director and the administrative personnel.

The Office of the Superintendent of Documents operates under a separate appropriation, which provides funds for: (1) the mailing for Members of Congress and other Government agencies of certain Government publications, as authorized by law; (2) the distribution of Government publications to designated depository libraries; (3) the compilation of catalogs and indexes of Government publications; and (4) the distribution of Government publications in the International Exchange Program. These four functions are related to the publication activity of other agencies and to the demands of the public, Members of Congress, and depository libraries. Consequently, the Office of the Superintendent of Documents can exercise little control over the volume of work which it may be called upon to perform. A description of these four functions follows:

Distribution for other Government agencies and Members of Congress.—The Office of Superintendent of Documents maintains mailing lists and mails, at the request of Government agencies and Members of Congress, certain publications specified by public law.

Depository library distribution.—As required, Government publications are supplied to libraries which are designated as depositories for Government publications.

Cataloging and indexing.—The Office of Superintendent of Documents is charged with preparing catalogs and indexes of all publications issued by the Federal Government. The principal publication is the "Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications."

International exchange.—The Office of Superintendent of Documents distributes Government publications to foreign governments which agree, as indicated by the Library of Congress, to send to the United States similar publications of their governments for delivery to the Library of Congress.

The bulk of the Court's work is the trial and adjudication of controversies involving deficiencies in income, estate, and gift taxes. The Court also has jurisdiction to redetermine deficiencies in certain excise taxes; to issue declaratory judgments in the areas of qualification of retirement plans, exemption of charitable organizations and the status of certain governmental obligations; and to decide certain cases involving disclosure of tax information by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Additional jurisdiction was conferred on the Court by the Taxpayer Bill of Rights in 1988. The Court is authorized to hear and decide appeals by taxpayers from decisions by the Internal Revenue Service denying awards for reasonable administrative costs incurred in connection with administrative proceedings within the Internal Revenue Service. In addition, if a timely petition for the redetermination of a deficiency is pending before the Court, the Court is authorized to restrain the premature assessment and collection of the disputed tax, to review certain jeopardy assessments and jeopardy levies, and to review the Commissioner's determination that certain seized property may be sold notwithstanding the pendency of the deficiency action. Finally, the Court is authorized to enforce its decisions determining overpayments in taxpayers' favor, to resolve disputes involving interest on deficiencies which were previously the subject of disputes before the Court, and to modify decisions in estate tax cases involving certain payment extensions.

For 1995, the Court proposes a trial program of 390 weeks consisting of 175 weeks of regular trial sessions and 115 weeks of small tax case sessions. In addition, the Court proposes scheduling special sessions for lengthy trials consisting of approximately 100 weeks. Trials are held in approximately 80 cities throughout the United States.

Statistics on the actual and estimated number of cases before the court are presented in the following tabulation:

The United States Sentencing Commission was established pursuant to provisions of the Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984 (Public Law 98-473, Title II), as amended. The purposes of the Commission are to establish and amend sentencing guidelines for the United States district courts and other sentencing policies and practices for the Federal criminal justice system. The Commission is also charged with developing means of measuring the degree to which the sentencing, penal, and correctional practices are effective in meeting the purposes of sentencing as set forth in new section 3553(a)(2) of Title 18, United States Code, by section 212(a) of the Act.

This includes a broad spectrum of research related to prison impact, recidivism, deterrence, rehabilitation, just punishment, incapacitation, and other areas. The Commission has specific responsibilities to: develop and maintain a comprehensive data base in order to analyze court application of the guidelines; evaluate the effects of guideline implementation in meeting statutory goals; develop training programs and provide assistance to probation officers and others in the criminal justice system on the application of sentencing guidelines. Various other criminal statutes, such as the Crime Control Act of 1990 (Public Law 101-647), contain provisions which the Commission must implement.

This appropriation would fund compliance oversight activities under the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA). This is consistent with the Administration's support for legislation that would amend NEPA to replace CEQ with a new office more narrowly focused on NEPA compliance oversight activities. The White House Office on Environmental Policy, funded through the Office of Policy Development, will continue to serve as the focal point for environmental policy development within the Administration.

National security and international affairs; Economics and government; Natural resources, energy, and science; Human resources; and Health.—Agency programs, budget requests, and management activities are examined, appropriations are apportioned, proposed changes in agency functions are studied, and special studies aimed at establishing goals and objectives that would result in long- and short-range improvements in the agencies' financial, administrative, and operational management are conducted.

Director's office/OMB-wide offices.—Executive direction and coordination for all Office of Management and Budget activities is provided. This includes the Director's immediate office as well as staff support in the areas of administration, external affairs, legislative reference, legislative affairs, economic policy, and General Counsel.

General management.—Government-wide supply and facility acquisition and personnel management policies and budgets are evaluated. Also, leadership and support is provided for program evaluation, Federal-State-local relations, and privatization.

Information and regulatory affairs.—Agency proposals to implement or revise Federal regulations and information collection requirements are reviewed and coordinated. Information resources management and statistical policies and practices are analyzed and developed.

Procurement policy.—The Office of Federal Procurement Policy is responsible for promoting economy, efficiency, and effectiveness in the procurement of property and services by and for the Executive branch.

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (World Bank) finances development projects in less developed countries. By applying banking principles to the achievement of development goals, it promotes increased economic productivity and helps developing economies meet more of the basic needs of their people. Since being founded in 1945, the Bank has made loan commitments of approximately $265 billion.

The Bank's FY 1993 lending program included new loan commitments of $16.9 billion to 48 countries. About half of IBRD lending attracted some form of co-financing from official or private lenders.

The Global Environment Facility (GEF) was created as a three-year pilot collaboration among the World Bank, the United Nations Development Program and the United Nations Environment Program. Originally capitalized with approximately $1.3 billion in resources from both direct contributions to the Global Environment Trust Fund of the GEF and co-financing arrangements, the GEF provides concessional financing to developing countries to address the problems of global warming, ozone depletion, the loss of biodiversity and the pollution of international waters. The pilot phase of the GEF will expire in 1994.

International negotiations are underway to restructure the GEF as a permanent entity. The Administration is committed to the successful conclusion of these negotiations and to the creation of a transparent and accountable GEF that can serve as the funding source for achieving global environmental benefits, including those related to the Climate Change and Biodiversity conventions.

The Administration's request for 1995 consists of: $23.3 million in budget authority for paid-in capital subscriptions and $753 million in program limitations for callable capital subscriptions to make the final remaining payment to the U.S. share of a $74.8 billion general capital increase. The 1995 request for the GEF will be transmitted later when the negotiations for the first replenishment are completed.

The International Development Association (IDA), a member of the World Bank Group, provides development financing on highly concessional terms to the world's poorest and least creditworthy nations. IDA is the largest source of multilateral lending that is extended on concessional terms to developing countries. Projects have to meet the same economic, financial, and environmental standards as other World Bank projects.

By June 30, 1993, IDA had extended credits totaling $78 billion for development projects. IDA operations place special emphasis upon poverty alleviation, economic adjustment and growth, and environmental protection. During World Bank FY 1993, IDA made new commitments of almost $6.8 billion.

The Tenth Replenishment of IDA will provide donor country resources of about $18 billion. The United States has pledged $3.75 billion (20.86 percent share of all donor contributions) to the replenishment. The $1.25 billion requested in FY 1995 would pay the second of three U.S. installments to the IDA-10 replenishment.

The International Finance Corporation (IFC), a member of the World Bank Group, was established in 1956 to further economic development by encouraging the growth of private enterprise in developing countries. IFC provides and mobilizes loans and equity investments for promising ventures, and provides technical assistance. The IFC is now playing an important role in the former Soviet Union and Eastern Europe's transition to free markets and private enterprise, due to the IFC's special expertise in foreign investment, capital markets development, and privatization.

During World Bank FY 1993 the Corporation approved 185 new investments totalling $3.9 billion and net investments for the IFC's own account were $2.1 billion. For every dollar invested by the IFC, an average of nearly $7 was supplied by other lenders and investors. Total project costs were $17 billion.

The 1995 request includes budget authority of $50.0 million for the fourth installment of the U.S. share of the $1.0 billion General Capital Increase, and $38.7 million for arrears.

The first installment ($56.25 million in paid-in capital and $318.75 million in callable capital) on the U.S. share will be made in FY 1995. This tranche was funded in advance as part of the NAFTA Implementation Act.

The NADBank will finance environmental infrastructure projects that have been certified by the U.S.-Mexican Border Environment Cooperation Commission (BECC), a new institution designed to assist border states and local communities in coordinating border clean-up. Based on its paid-in and callable capital, the NADBank will be able to provide partial guarantees of private sector financing and borrow in capital markets to provide loans to help finance the projects certified by the BECC.

In addition, 10 percent of the U.S. and Mexican shares of NADBank will be available for NAFTA-related community adjustment and investment in both countries, which need not be in the border region. The U.S. Government will implement the community adjustment program through existing federal credit programs, such as the Small Business Administration and the Rural Development Administration. An Advisory Committee, which will include low income community representatives and non-governmental organizations, will help ensure broad public participation in the community adjustment window of the NADBank.

Sustainable Development.—$2,409,000,000 is requested for this newly proposed program, which will provide economic resources to foster growth and development in developing countries. Sustainable Development supports bilateral assistance, administered by the United States Agency For International Development (USAID), to promote broad-based economic growth, protect the environment, enhance human capabilities, uphold democratic values, and improve the quality of life for future generations. The amount requested also includes funding for voluntary contributions to the United Nations and other international organizations that carry out development, humanitarian, environmental and scientific activities.

Four interrelated and mutually reinforcing areas that are critical to achieving sustainable development are proposed as follows: (1) $1,295,000,000 of the total will fund Broad-

Based Economic Growth to strengthen access to markets, expand opportunities for women, the poor and minorities and invest in people through improved education and health. (2) $350,000,000 will fund programs to protect the Global Environment by addressing the root causes of environmental harm, promoting environmentally sound patterns of growth and supporting improved management of the environment and natural resources including long-term threats such as climate change and loss of biological diversity. (3) $179,000,000 of the total will fund programs that support Democratic Participation by promoting a climate of respect for human rights, peaceful competition for political power, free and fair elections, respect for rule of law, accountable government and an environment that encourages participation. (4) $585,000,000 will fund programs to help reduce excessive population growth rates through voluntary family planning, reproductive health care, and other directly related activities. Authorization for this program is being sought in the Administration's proposed rewrite of the Foreign Assistance Act. Appropriations language will be transmitted later.

The African Development Foundation is a public corporation authorized to provide grants, loans, and loan guarantees directly to African organizations and individuals for self-help development activities aimed at improving the living standards and conditions of disadvantaged people. Organizations and individuals receiving support must demonstrate their commitment to self-help development programs by encouraging the substantive participation of the poor in all phases of the development process, particularly in the design, implementation, and management of projects. Grants range from $700 to $250,000 in the following project sectors—agriculture, cottage industry development, vocational skills training, resource conservation, education, credit, communications, and energy. The Foundation plans to fund development projects in 22 African countries in 1995.

Direct development assistance.—Funds associated with this activity are used to award grants to African grassroots organizations to fund development projects. In 1995, the Foundation plans to award 90 new grants in 22 countries.

Development studies and technical assistance.—This activity represents the cost of grants and cooperative agreements to individuals or organizations in Africa that provide technical assistance for recipients of Foundation funds. Grants and fellowships for African researchers and other funding for the study and evaluation of the Foundation's projects are also included in this activity.

Program management and operation.—This activity includes Foundation expenses for salaries and benefits, rent and other support costs.

For the poorest and most heavily indebted countries, debt reduction will be undertaken in concert with the Paris Club of creditor nations. The Administration anticipates that $7 million in appropriations will permit deeper debt reduction than currently being provided under Enhanced Toronto Terms, should the Paris Club agree.

For Latin America and the Caribbean, current tight budget resources lead the Administration to propose that debt reduction be effected at no budget cost through buybacks of eligible debt, concurrent with commitment of local currency payments to support environmental projects or other U.S. policy objectives. Eligible countries with limited resources for debt buybacks may also be offered the alternative of annual debt service relief, at minimal budget cost.

Resulting cash flows are recorded in three financing accounts. The first follows immediately below. The accounts for the Export-Import Bank and for foreign military loans appear with the other accounts for these programs, respectively. Authorization for a part of this program is being sought in the Administration's proposed rewrite of the Foreign Assistance Act. Appropriations language will be transmitted later.

This program is designed to advance democracy, free markets and regional stability throughout the world. We are especially concerned that stable democracies and viable economies develop in the former Soviet Union and in Central and Eastern Europe. It is also in the interest of the United States to nurture and sustain democratic development not only in the emerging democracies of Europe but in Asia, Africa and Latin America. A concentration on European countries transiting to democracy does not obviate the need to foster democracy elsewhere. Indeed, threats to U.S. security must be contained in neighboring states of Central and South America, in the Pacific Rim and Asia and in Africa. Our economic security rests on the creation of equitable global trading systems based on a strong foundation in market economies in developing and developed countries.

The goal of this program is to invest in policies and programs to achieve effective protection from the global repercussions of instability. Unstopped, it can vitiate even the most established democratic societies and undermine global economic progress. Failure to respond effectively threatens not only the future of those countries but the security and economic interests of the United States. Authorization for this program is being sought in the Administration's proposed rewrite of the Foreign Assistance Act. Appropriations language will be transmitted later.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated for foreign military financing committed in 1992 and beyond, as well as the administrative expenses of this program. The foreign military financing credit program provides loans that finance sales of defense articles, defense services, and design and construction services to foreign countries and international organizations. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

Authorization for this program is being sought in the Administration's proposed rewrite of the Foreign Assistance Act. Appropriations language will be transmitted later.

As part of a general increase in IMF quota resources, the U.S. quota was increased in December, 1992 to SDR 26,526.3 billion (about $37 billion). The increase in the U.S. quota involved no net budget outlays. Similarly, use by the IMF of the quota commitment does not result in net budget outlays, because the United States receives an increase in its international monetary reserves corresponding to any transfer of dollars under the U.S. quota subscription. The United States can use these interest-bearing reserves automatically to meet a balance of payments financing need.

Members of the IMF are obligated to maintain the value of their currency, held by the IMF, in terms of the SDR—the unit of account of the IMF. When the dollar appreciates (depreciates) against the SDR, the cost of maintaining these holdings decreases (increases), and an appropriate adjustment is made in the U.S. account with the IMF. This valuation adjustment occurs at the end of the IMF fiscal year, April 30th. Budget authority is provided in years when the maintenance of value adjustment results in an increase in the value of IMF dollar holdings, but such adjustments do not result in any immediate cash transfers to the IMF. In fiscal year 1993, the maintenance of value adjustment resulted in an increase in the dollar value of IMF dollar holdings equivalent to $754 million.

The General Arrangements to Borrow (GAB) were established in 1962 by 10 industrial countries, including the United States, as a means of supplementing the IMF's resources when needed to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary system. GAB members agreed in early 1983 to increase their financial commitments to the GAB from approximately SDR 6.3 billion to SDR 17 billion, with the U.S. share rising from $2.0 billion to SDR 4.250 billion, approximately $5.92 billion at the October 1993 exchange rate. Financing extended by the United States under the GAB does not result in any net budget outlays because the United States receives an increase in its international reserve assets corresponding to any transfer to the IMF under the U.S. credit line.

During 1993, no calls were made on the U.S. commitment under the GAB, and no U.S. loans were outstanding at the end of the fiscal year.

The Enhanced Structural Adjustment Facility (ESAF) was created in 1987 to enable the International Monetary Fund to provide balance of payments assistance on concessional terms to low-income developing countries with protracted payment problems which are prepared to adopt multi-year economic and structural reform programs. It is a critical element of international efforts to address the serious economic problems confronting the poorest countries, particularly in Sub-Saharan Africa.

The resources of the ESAF are being provided through loans and special interest subsidy contributions by member countries. Loans will be disbursed over a three-year period with repayments in 10 equal semiannual installments beginning 5½ years and ending 10 years from the date of disbursement. It is envisaged that total loans will amount to SDR 5.3 billion (nearly $7.5 billion) and that interest subsidy contributions will help achieve a concessional interest rate of ½ of 1 percent.

The U.S. contribution of approximately $150 million is taking the form of a payment to the ESAF interest subsidy account.

Funds support programs authorized by the Alternative Agricultural Research and Commercialization Act of 1990 (7 U.S.C. 5901 et seq.). This Act authorizes the provision of assistance on a competitive basis to foster the development and commercialization of new nonfood, nonfeed products derived from agricultural and forestry commodities. Development of nontraditional uses for farm, ranch and forestry products provides an opportunity to improve U.S. competitiveness in foreign markets, create development and employment opportunities in rural areas, address environmental concerns and lower farm program costs. Programs are managed by the Alternative Agricultural Research and Commercialization Center. Program policy and oversight is provided by a Board which is composed of private and public sector scientists, producers and business experts. In FY 1995, $1.8 million will be available to support the Administration's Empowerment Zones and Enterprise Communities Initiative.

Personnel.—This activity provides direction and leadership in formulating and issuing Department policy, standards, rules, and regulations relating to all personnel functions. Personnel develops and implements management plans and programs responsive to Departmental needs. In addition, operational services are provided to the Office of the Secretary, Office of the General Counsel, Office of Public Affairs, Office of Budget and Program Analysis, and those staff offices under Departmental Administration reporting to the Assistant Secretary for Administration.

Finance and management.—This activity provides Departmental leadership, development, and evaluation of programs in finance, accounting, travel, management control, Federal assistance, management and productivity improvement, metrication, audit follow up activities, occupational safety and health and for the management and operation of the National Finance Center. The Director serves as the Department's management improvement officer, and comptroller of the Working Capital Fund. Finance and Management also provides budget, accounting, and fiscal services for the Departmental staff offices, Office of the Budget and Program Analysis, Office of Public Affairs, and the Office of the Secretary.

Operations.—This activity provides leadership, oversight, and policy development in the areas of real and personal property, procurement, contracts, transportation, supplies, motor vehicles, and internal energy conservation to the USDA agencies, including those in the Washington, D.C., complex. Operations also provides procurement, contracting, and other administrative support services to the Office of the Secretary, Departmental Staff Offices, and USDA agencies.

Civil Rights.—This activity provides overall guidance, leadership, direction, and coordination for the Department's programs for equal opportunity and civil rights, which include program delivery, compliance and equal employment opportunity, and for efforts to further participation of minority colleges and universities in Departmental programs.

Small and disadvantaged business utilization.—This activity provides oversight of all procurement activities to ensure maximum participation of small and disadvantaged businesses in the process, and directs and monitors agency compliance in promoting full and open competition in procurement.

Administrative law judges and judicial officer.—The administrative law judges hold hearings on new regulations and orders and on disciplinary complaints filed by the Department or on some petitions filed by private parties. The Judicial Officer serves as final decision officer in regulatory proceedings.

Emergency Programs.—This activity is the focal point of contact with the Federal Emergency Management Agency and all other Federal departments and agencies having emergency program responsibilities and provides oversight, coordination, and guidance to USDA agencies in their emergency planning, training, and activities.

Info Share.—This activity provides funds for the USDA Info Share program, a new customer-oriented method for USDA agencies to test, evaluate and acquire new technologies which will implement one-stop customer service and integrated data sharing. In the past, USDA agencies independently acquired or developed data systems, hardware, and software to accomplish agency missions. This resulted in redundant business processes, a paperwork burden on USDA customers, high financial investments, and the inability of agencies to share information in an effective time frame. Info Share is a cooperative effort between the farm service and rural development agencies (ASCS, SCS, FmHA, RDA, ES, and FCIC) and Departmental staff offices. The basic goals of the collective Info Share initiatives are to reduce duplication, speed up delivery of customer services, and realize short- and long-term savings with the financial investments that are necessary for automation improvements. By sharing technologies and strategies, USDA Info Share will be able to take advantage of advancing technologies and modern business processes.

Under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act and the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act, the Department has the responsibility to meet the same standards for storage and disposition of hazardous wastes as private businesses. Since the Department has substantial commitments under these Acts, a central fund has been established so that resources may be allocated to the Department's agencies. Allocations are made according to objective criteria.

This account finances the General Services Administration's fees for rental of space and related services. The appropriation covers all fees for all regular appropriated accounts within the Department of Agriculture with the exception of the Forest Service. This account also finances the operation and maintenance of four buildings in the Headquarters area. In fiscal year 1994, the Congress allocated $19,700,000 of the Department's request for payments to GSA in order to fund modernization of laboratory facilities at the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center. Beginning in fiscal year 1995, the account will include funds for the construction, repair, improvement, extension, alteration, and purchase of fixed equipment or facilities as necessary to carry out the programs of the Department of Agriculture.

The Federal Advisory Committee Act (Public Law 92-463) was passed in 1972 to recognize a means by which committees and similar groups provide expert advice to officers of the Federal Government. This account provides for direction and financial support of all authorized Department of Agriculture advisory committee activities other than those included in the Forest Service or financed by other than appropriated funds. The FY 1995 appropriation would permit the Forest Service to share in the support of the Forestry Research Advisory Council.

Agricultural estimates.—The Service provides the official National and State estimates of acreage, yield, and production of crops, stocks, and value of farm commodities, and numbers of inventory values of livestock items. Data on approximately 120 crops and 45 livestock products are covered in nearly 400 reports issued each year. Detailed data are also collected on agricultural chemical use, labor, and expenditures. Data collected and published on prices paid and received by farmers are basic to computation of farm program payments.

The work under this activity is conducted through 45 State offices serving the 50 States; most of these offices are operated as joint State and Federal services. Cooperative arrangements with State agencies provide additional State and county data. The FY 1995 program includes increases of $3,300,000 for additional pesticide data and $2,900,000 for restricted use pesticide data.

Statistical research and service.—This activity is designed to improve agricultural estimating techniques by improving sample survey designs and procedures and by testing new forecasting and estimating techniques, such as the use of satellite data.

The World Agricultural Outlook Board (WAOB) was established to provide a single focal point for the Nation's economic intelligence related to domestic and international food and agriculture.

The objectives of the WAOB are to improve the consistency, objectivity, and reliability of outlook and situation material being disseminated to the public, and to integrate and coordinate USDA domestic and international economic information assistance.

The WAOB carries out these objectives through daily market surveillance and special analyses of international and domestic agricultural developments, direct participation in the planning of research programs supporting outlook and situation activities, and coordination of all departmental activities relating to weather and climate and remote sensing.

The Agricultural Research Service conducts research to provide the means for a safer, more economical supply of agricultural products for the Nation and to provide producers with technologies to competitively supply these products. Technology needs of regulatory, technical assistance and education agencies of USDA and other Federal agencies are supported through ARS research. The Service uses coordinated, interdisciplinary approaches to perform basic and applied research on soil and water conservation, plant and animal sciences, commodity conversion and delivery, human nutrition, and integrated agricultural systems. In FY 1995, the Service proposes new and expanded initiatives in high priority research programs to: ensure the safety of the Nation's food supply; investigate alternatives to methyl bromide; reduce pesticide risk in fruits and vegetables; and enhance the management of natural resources.

Research on soil and water conservation.—Research is conducted to improve soil and water management, irrigation, and conservation practices; to protect natural resources from harmful effects of soil, air, and water pollutants and to minimize certain agricultural pollution problems; and to determine the relation of soil types and water to plant, animal, and human nutrition.

Research on plant science.—Research is conducted to increase plant productivity by improving plant varieties, developing new crop resources, and improving crop production practices, including methods to control plant diseases, nematodes, insects, and weeds.

Research on animal science.—Research is conducted to increase livestock productivity (including poultry) through improved breeding, feeding, and management practices, and to develop methods for controlling diseases, parasites, and insect pests affecting these animals.

Research on commodity conversion and delivery.—Research is conducted to develop new and improved foods, feeds, products, and processes for agricultural commodities and to improve the processing, transportation, storage, wholesaling, and retailing of products. Research is also conducted on means to ensure the safety of food and feed supplies, control insect pests of man and his belongings, and reduce the hazards to human life resulting from pesticide residues and other causes.

Human nutrition research.—Research is conducted on subjects such as human nutritional requirements and the composition and nutritive value of foods, to promote optimum human health through improved nutrition.

Integration of agricultural systems.—Research is conducted to develop integrated systems for efficiently producing, processing, and marketing agricultural products, and to develop alternative agricultural systems that are less dependent upon nonrenewable resources and that are productive, efficient, and sustainable in the long term.

Repair and maintenance of facilities.—Funds are used to restore, upgrade, and maintain Federal facilities to meet OSHA and EPA requirements, provide suitable workspace for in-house research programs, and to retrofit existing structures for better energy utilization.

Contingencies.—Funds available to meet urgent needs that develop unexpectedly during the year when such needs cannot be met by redirection of resources from other projects.

Construction of facilities.—Unobligated balances are used for this purpose. Construction proposals for 1995 are included under Buildings and Facilities.

Reimbursements.—Agricultural Research Service performs program research activities and services for other USDA, Federal, and non-Federal agencies. These activities and services are paid for on a reimbursable basis.

COOPERATIVE STATE RESEARCH SERVICE—Continued

Cooperative State Research Service participates in a nationwide system of agricultural research and education program planning and coordination between State institutions and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. It assists in maintaining cooperation among the State institutions, and between the State institutions and their Federal research partners. The Agency administers grants and payments to State institutions to supplement State and local funding for agricultural research and higher education.

Payments under the Hatch Act.—Funds under the Hatch Act are allocated on a formula basis to agricultural experiment stations of the land-grant colleges in the 50 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Micronesia, and Northern Mariana Islands.

Cooperative forestry research.—These funds are allocated by formula to land-grant colleges or agricultural experiment stations in the 50 States, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, and other State-supported colleges and universities having a forestry school and offering graduate training in forestry sciences.

Payments to 1890 colleges and Tuskegee University.—Funds allocated on a formula basis support agricultural research at the 1890 land-grant colleges, including Tuskegee University.

Special research grants.—This program addresses research areas of national interest. Increased funding is proposed for grant programs in integrated pest management/biological control and sustainable agriculture. Advances in these areas will provide producers with safe, alternative pest control methods. A grant program for global change is requested for research at universities as part of a coordinated Federal initiative. Funding proposed for pesticide clearance and minor use animal drugs will address the growing need for registration of safe pesticides and drugs for minor crops and animals. Funding is also proposed for water quality, pesticide impact assessment, the National Biological Impact Assessment Program, rural development centers, aquaculture centers, rangeland research, and supplemental and alternative crops.

National research initiative competitive grants.—Funding is being proposed for the National Initiative for Research on Agriculture, Food, and the Environment (NRI). Research scientists throughout the U.S. scientific community compete for funding under this program. These grants support research in plants and animals; natural resources and the environment; nutrition, food safety, and health; markets, trade, and rural development; and processing for adding value or developing new products. This Initiative includes funding for a plant genome mapping program for which the Agricultural Research Service will serve as lead agency. Global change research being carried out through the NRI is part of a government-wide program developed by the Committee on Earth and Environmental Sciences.

Animal health and disease research.—Funds, distributed by formula, support livestock and poultry disease research in colleges of veterinary medicine and in eligible agricultural experiment stations.

Federal administration.—A coordinating and review staff assists in maintaining cooperation within and among the States, and between the States and their Federal research partners. This staff also administers research and education grants and payments to States. Federal administration is funded from a combination of program set-asides from formula and grant programs and from direct appropriation for administration. Funding is proposed for a capacity building program at the 1890 institutions as part of a USDA initiative to strengthen these institutions.

Higher education.—Funding is proposed for graduate fellowships grants, competitive challenge grants, Morrill-Nelson permanent appropriation, and a minority scholars program.

Reimbursable program.—Funds support basic and applied agriculture research and activities performed for other USDA, Federal, and non-Federal agencies.

The Cooperative Extension System, a national educational network, is a dynamic organization pledged to meeting the country's needs for research-based educational programs that will enable people to make practical decisions to improve their lives. To accomplish its mission, the Cooperative Extension System adjusts programs to meet the shifting needs and priorities of the people it serves.

The nonformal educational network combines the expertise and resources of federal, state, and local governments. The partners in this unique System are: (a) The Extension Service at the U.S. Department of Agriculture; (b) Extension professionals at land-grant universities throughout the United States and its territories; and (c) Extension professionals in nearly all of the Nation's 3,150 counties. Thousands of para-professionals and nearly 3 million volunteers support this partnership and magnify its impact. Strong linkages with both public and private external groups are also crucial to the Extension System's strength and vitality.

Base Programs are the major educational efforts central to the mission of the System and common to most Extension units. They are the ongoing priority efforts of the System, involving many discipline-based and multi-disciplinary programs. The System's base programs are the foundation of the Extension organization.

National initiatives are the System's commitment to respond to important societal problems of broad national concern with additional resources and significantly increased effort to achieve a major impact on national priorities. They are the most current significant and complex issues on which the Extension System has the potential to make a difference—usually in cooperation with other agencies, groups, and units of government.

Extension resources are provided to the States through formula Funds and competitively awarded programs. Smith-Lever 3(b) and (c) funds and payments to the 1890 colleges and Tuskegee University provide funds to support the Extension infrastructure. Funds for designated programs provide support for the System to address identified priority issues.

Initiatives proposed in 1995 include funding for: sustainable agriculture education programs; expansion of food safety activities; increased efforts on pest management; support for a pesticide applicator training program, and enhancement of the rural health project in Mississippi.

The primary purpose of the National Agricultural Library (NAL) is to acquire, preserve, and disseminate a comprehensive collection of reliable information in all phases of the agricultural and allied sciences.

Agricultural information and library services.—The NAL provides a variety of information products and services through: (1) the administration of a unique collection of books, journals, and other information materials about food and agriculture to ensure accessibility to their contents; (2) the development and maintenance of cooperative efforts in the library and related information areas, with other Federal agencies and with educational institutions in each State; and (3) an active program of information dissemination.

Repairs and maintenance of facilities.—These funds are used for maintaining the library building.

Initiatives are proposed for 1995 to begin a transition from providing information services based on printed materials to producing, managing, disseminating, preserving and storing agricultural information in electronic formats. The 1995 proposal also includes increases to improve library services, including collection development and document delivery.

The major objectives of the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service are to protect the animal and plant resources of the Nation from destructive pests and diseases. This mission is carried out under the five major areas of activity, as follows:

Pest and disease exclusion.—The agency conducts inspection and quarantine activities at U.S. ports-of-entry to prevent the introduction of exotic animal and plant diseases and pests. APHIS develops and conducts preclearance programs to ensure that agricultural products destined for U.S. ports-of-entry do not present a risk to U.S. agriculture. APHIS engages in cooperative programs in foreign countries to control pests of imminent concern to the United States. APHIS also certifies plants and plant products for export and regulates imports and exports of designated endangered plant species. User fees have been implanted to recover the cost of certain agricultural quarantine inspection services.

Plant and animal health monitoring.—The Agency conducts programs to assess animal and plant health and to detect endemic and exotic diseases and pests. The plant and animal health monitoring programs are primarily cooperative efforts of the Federal and State governments, and industry. The Agency also carries out surveys in cooperation with the States to detect harmful plant and animal pests and diseases and to determine if there is a need for pest eradication programs.

Pest and disease management programs.—The Agency carries out programs to control and eradicate infestations and animal diseases that threaten the United States; to reduce agricultural losses caused by predatory animals, birds, and rodents; to provide technical assistance to States, counties, farmer or rancher groups, and foundations; and to ensure compliance with interstate movement and disease control regulations. Interstate shipments of plants, livestock, and related materials are monitored and regulated to prevent the spread of disease. APHIS protects agriculture from detrimental animal predators through identification, demonstration, and application of the most appropriate methods of control.

Animal care.—The Agency conducts regulatory activities which ensure the humane care and handling of animals used in research, exhibition, or the wholesale pet trade. The Agency is also responsible for administering the Horse Protection Act, which prohibits the showing, selling, or exhibition of sore horses.

Scientific and technical services.—APHIS develops methods to control animals and pests that are detrimental to agriculture, other wildlife, and public safety. The agency regulates genetic research to guard against the release of potentially harmful organisms into the environment. APHIS also conducts veterinary diagnostic laboratory activities and biologic regulatory enforcement to ensure that the products developed for combatting disease are potent, safe, and pure. It also provides and directs technology development in coordination with other groups in APHIS and Plant Protection and Quarantine (PPQ) officials to support PPQ programs of the Agency and its cooperators at the State, national, and international levels.

The Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) proposes to reduce the number of plant and pest line items from sixteen to five in order to provide maximum flexibility to respond to changing priorities and needs as they arise, within the major functions appearing in the appropriations request.

In addition, fees collected in the AQI user fee account are proposed to be available without appropriations action, in order to better provide services that are driven by demand.

The major objectives of the Food Safety and Inspection Service are to ensure that meat and poultry products are wholesome, unadulterated, and properly labeled and packaged, as required by the Federal Meat Inspection Act and the Poultry Products Inspection Act.

The meat and poultry inspection program of the Food Safety and Inspection Service provides inplant inspection of all domestic plants preparing meat or poultry products for sale or distribution; reviews foreign inspection systems and establishments that prepare meat or poultry products for export to the United States; and provides technical and financial assistance to States which maintain meat and poultry inspection programs.

The Federal Grain Inspection Service (FGIS) establishes official United States standards for grain, promotes the uniform application thereof by official inspection personnel, provides for an official inspection system for grain, and regulates the weighing and certification of the weight of grain shipped in interstate or foreign commerce as authorized by the U.S. Grain Standards Act (USGSA), as amended, and the regulations thereof, and the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946 (AMA).

Standardization activities include establishing and updating U.S. grain standards, research, and developing and improving methods to ensure the accurate and uniform application of the standards.

The compliance activities ensure the accurate and uniform application of the USGSA and applicable provisions of the AMA. The compliance program functions include: (1) evaluating alleged violations and initiating preliminary investigations; (2) initiating the implementation of corrective actions; (3) conducting management and technical reviews; (4) administering the designations and delegations of State and private agencies to perform official functions and monitoring the performance of the agencies; (5) identifying and, where appropriate, waiving and monitoring conflicts of interest; (6) licensing personnel of delegated States and designated agencies; (7) registering persons/firms engaged in the business of buying grain for sale in foreign commerce, and in the business of handling, weighing, or transporting of grain for sale in foreign commerce; (8) responding to audits of FGIS programs; and (9) reviewing and, when appropriate, approving official agencies' fee schedules.

The International Monitoring Staff briefs foreign buyers, assesses foreign inspection and weighing techniques, and responds to foreign quality and quantity complaints.

An advisory committee consisting of members from the grain industry exists to advise the Agency regarding efficient and economical implementation of the USGSA.

The Grain Quality Improvement Act of 1986 was enacted on November 10, 1986, to improve the quality of U.S. grain by prohibiting the introduction and reintroduction of dockage and foreign material to grain.

For FY 1995, authorizing legislation will be submitted to permit, subject to appropriations, the collection and use of fees to cover the cost of standardization activities.

The Federal Grain Inspection Service provides a uniform system for the inspection and weighing of grain. Services provided under this system are financed through a fee supported revolving fund. This authority has been extended through September 2000.

Fee supported programs include direct services, supervision activities and administrative functions. Direct services include official grain inspection and weighing by FGIS employees at certain export ports as well as the inspection of U.S. grain shipped through Canada. FGIS supervises the inspection and weighing activities performed by its own employees. The agency also oversees the inspection and weighing of grain performed by employees of 8 delegated States and 72 designated State and private agencies. FGIS provides an appeal service of original grain inspections and a registration system for grain exporting firms. Through support from the Association of American Railroads and user fees, FGIS conducts a railroad track scale testing program. In addition, the agency provides grading services, on request, for rice and grain related products under the authority of the Agricultural Marketing Act of 1946 (AMA).

Agricultural Marketing Service activities assist producers and handlers of agricultural commodities by providing a variety of marketing services. These services continue to become more complex as the volume of agricultural commodities increases, as a greater number of new processed commodities are developed, and as the agricultural market structure undergoes extensive changes. Marketing changes include increased concentration in food retailing, direct buying, decentralization of processing, growth of interregional competition, vertical integration, and contract farming. The individual activities include:

Market news service.—The market news program provides the agricultural community with information pertaining to the movement of agricultural products. This nationwide service provides daily reports on the supply, demand, and price of over 700 commodities throughout the country.

Inspection, grading and standardization.—Nationally uniform standards of quality for agricultural products are established and applied to specific lots of products to: promote confidence between buyers and sellers; reduce hazards in marketing due to misunderstandings and disputes arising from the use of nonstandard descriptions; and encourage better preparation of uniform quality products for market. Grading services are provided for cotton and domestic and imported tobacco.

Continuous in-plant inspection of all plants manufacturing liquid, frozen, or dried egg products is provided, with quarterly inspection of egg handlers and hatcheries to ensure the proper disposition of shell eggs unfit for human consumption. Imported egg products are controlled to make certain that the inspection systems in exporting countries have standards equal to those of the United States.

Market protection and promotion.—This program consists of: (1) the research and promotion programs which are designed to improve the competitive position and expand markets for cotton, eggs and egg products, honey, pork, beef, dairy products, potatoes, watermelons, mushrooms, limes, soybeans, pecans, and fluid milk. (2) the Federal Seed Act; and (3) the administration of the Capper-Volstead Act and the Agricultural Fair Practices Act.

The Fresh Cut Flowers and Fresh Cut Greens Promotion and Information Act, (Promoflor) enacted in November 1993, provides legislative authority for the establishment of a promotion program for fresh flowers and greenery.

Federal seed inspectors conduct tests on seed samples to help ensure truthful labeling of agricultural and vegetable seeds sold in interstate commerce.

The Capper-Volstead Act and the Agricultural Fair Practices Act protect producers against discriminatory practices by handlers, permit producers to engage in cooperative efforts, and ensure that such cooperatives do not engage in practices that monopolize or restrain trade.

Wholesale market development.—This program is designed to enhance the marketing of agricultural commodities in the United States by conducting research into more efficient marketing methods for agricultural commodities and by providing technical assistance to urban areas interested in improving their food distribution facilities.

Transportation Services.—The activities are designed to ensure that the Nation's transportation systems will adequately serve the needs of agriculture and rural areas of the United States. A user fee for standardization activities is proposed for this program, and displayed in an adjoining schedule.

License fees are deposited in this special fund and are used to meet the costs of administering the Perishable Agricultural Commodities and the Produce Agency Acts (7 U.S.C. 491-497, 499a-499s).

The Acts are intended to ensure equitable treatment to farmers and others in the marketing of fresh and frozen fruits and vegetables. Commission merchants, dealers, and brokers handling these products in interstate and foreign commerce are licensed. Complaints of violations are investigated and violations dealt with by (a) informal agreements between the two parties, (b) formal decisions involving payment of reparation awards, and/or (c) suspension or revocation of license and/or publication of the facts.

A 1984 amendment to the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act requires traders to have trust assets on hand to meet their obligations to fruit and vegetable suppliers. To preserve their trust and establish their rights ahead of other creditors, unpaid suppliers file notice with both the Department and their debtors that payment is due.

Expenses and refunds, inspection and grading of farm products.—The commodity inspection and grading programs provide grading, examination, and certification services for a wide variety of fresh and processed food commodities using federally approved grade standards and purchase specifications. Commodities graded include poultry, livestock, meat, dairy products, and fresh and processed fruits and vegetables. These programs use official grade standards which reflect the relative quality of a particular food commodity based on laboratory testing and characteristics such as taste, color, weight, and physical condition. Producers voluntarily request grading and certification services which are provided on a fee for service basis.

Note.—The administration fund totals are comprised of 38 separate independent order accounts in 1993. The Marketing Service fund totals are comprised of 36 separate independent order accounts in 1993.

The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, as amended—under certain conditions—to issue Federal milk marketing orders establishing minimum prices which handlers are required to pay for milk purchased from producers.

Market administrators are appointed by the Secretary and are responsible for carrying out the terms of specific marketing orders. Their operating expenses, partly financed by assessments on regulated handlers and partly by deductions from producers, are reported in these schedules. These funds are collected locally, deposited in local banks, and disbursed directly by the market administrator.

Expenses of local offices are met from an administrative fund and a marketing service fund, which are prescribed in each order. The administrative fund is derived from prorated handler assessments. The marketing service fund of the individual order disseminates market information to producers who are not members of a qualified cooperative. It also provides for the verification of the weights, sampling, and testing of milk from these producers. The cost of these services is borne by such producers.

The maximum rates for administrative assessment and for marketing services are set forth in each order and adjustments below these rates are made from time to time upon recommendations by the market administrator and upon approval of the Agricultural Marketing Service to provide reserves at about a 6-month operating level. Upon termination of any order, the statute provides for distributing the proceeds from net assets pro rata to contributing handlers or producers, as the case may be.

The goal of this program is to ensure the integrity of the livestock, meat, and poultry markets and the marketplace in order to protect producers against unfair, deceptive, or discriminatory practices as well as those that are predatory or monopolistic in nature. Consumers and members of the livestock, poultry, and meat industries are also protected against unfair business practices in the marketing of livestock, meat and poultry, and from restrictions on competition which could unduly affect prices. The Agency also carries out the Secretary's responsibilities under Section 1324 of the Food Security Act of 1985 covering "central filing systems" established by States for pre-notification of security interests against farm products.

Authorizing legislation will be submitted that would establish a license fee that, subject to appropriation, would allow the collection and expenditure of funds for all costs associated with administering the Packers and Stockyards Act. Authorizing legislation will also be submitted to establish a Dealers Trust. This would require livestock inventories and accounts receivable due from the sale of livestock to be held in trust for unpaid cash sellers at a time of financial failure.

The Secretary's proposed reorganization plan transfers all of the functions from the former Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation and the farm loan activity of the Farmers Home Administration to the Farm Service Agency. Also, the administrative functions of the Foreign Agricultural Service are proposed for transfer to the Farm Service Agency. The Farm Service Agency will initiate an administrative fee charging producers for services when purchasing basic crop insurance coverage under the new crop insurance program beginning with crop year 1995.

The Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) was mandated by sections 1231–1244 of the Food Security Act of 1985 (Public Law 99–198), as amended by sections 1411–1499 of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990 (Public Law 101–624), and the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 (P.L. 103–66), to establish permanent cover on highly erodible cropland and on cropland posing environmental threats. The primary objectives of the CRP are to help farmers control critical soil erosion that occurs on about a third of America's highly erodible and environmentally sensitive cropland and to decrease production of some surplus agricultural commodities.

The CRP is authorized in all 50 States, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, on all croplands meeting the eligibility criteria of eroding at three times the soil loss tolerance or higher, or twice the soil loss tolerance with serious gully erosion or with an erosion predominance of 66⅓ percent of the field if planted to grass or an erosion predominance of 33⅓ percent if the area is planted to trees. In addition to cropland in areas adjacent to lakes and streams that can be devoted to filter strips, and cropland subject to overflow and suffering from scour erosion, eligible land may include shelterbelts, windbreaks, cropland contributing to water quality problems, and other lands posing environmental threats. Also eligible for the CRP are water quality impaired areas that do not meet the highly erodible land (HEL) criteria, such as the Chesapeake Bay, Great Lakes, and Long Island Sound watershed regions.

The program is administered through the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) by State and local committees working under the general direction of the Secretary.

Under the Food Security Act, as amended by Public Laws 101–624 and 103–66, authority is provided to enter into CRP contracts through the 1995 crop year. Appropriations needed to make annual payments on 10- to 15-year contracts and for useful life easements will be requested through 2008.

From program inception in 1986 through 1993, approximately 36.4 million acres were enrolled. During 1994, no funds were provided for new sign-ups.

The appropriation requested for FY 1995 will be used for annual rental payments due on 1993 and prior crop years' contracts and for cost-share assistance. No signup is planned for FY 1995.

Beginning in 1995, most activities formerly carried out by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service will be covered by the Farm Service Agency. Conservation programs, with the exception of the Conservation Reserve program, will be administered through the Natural Resource Conservation Service.

This account includes funds to cover expenses of programs administered by, and functions assigned to, the Farm Service Agency. The funds consist of direct appropriations, user fees, and miscellaneous advances from other sources. This is a consolidated account for administrative expenses of national, commodity, State, and county offices.

Program formulation and appraisal.—The supply adjustment, conservation, and commodity support programs, and the management and merchandising of commodities acquired under the support program, have a tremendous impact on the national and (to a lesser extent) the international economy. This activity provides for constant review of the effectiveness of these programs. It also provides for the analysis of data to formulate more effective programs.

Operation of supply adjustment, conservation, and price support programs.—This activity includes all functions dealing with the administration of programs including: (a) developing program regulations and procedures; (b) holding meetings with employees and producers to discuss new programs or changes in existing programs; (c) collecting and compiling basic data for individual farms; (d) establishing individual farm allotments, bases, and yields; (e) notifying producers of established allotments, bases, and yields; (f) determining farm marketing quotas; (g) handling appeals; (h) conducting referendums and certifying results; (i) accepting farmer certifications and checking compliance; (j) accepting producer applications for participation in commodity price stabilizing programs; (k) issuing marketing cards so that production from the allotted acreage can be marketed without penalty; (l) processing producer requests for conservation cost-sharing and issuing conservation reserve rental payments; (m) processing commodity loan and storage facility loan documents and issuing checks; (n) processing disaster, deficiency, and diversion payments and issuing checks and commodity certificates; and (o) certifying payment eligibility and monitoring payment limitations.

Inventory management and merchandising.—This activity includes: (a) overall management of CCC-owned commodities; (b) purchasing commodities; (c) donating commodities; (d) selling commodities; (e) processing the redemption of commodity certificates for CCC inventory; and (f) accounting for loans and commodities.

Warehouse examination.—This activity provides for the examination of warehouses licensed under the U.S. Warehouse Act and non-licensed warehouses storing CCC-owned or pledged commodities. ASCS examiners perform periodic examinations of the facilities and the warehouse records to ensure protection of depositors against potential losses of the stored commodities and to ensure compliance with the U.S. Warehouse Act and any CCC storage agreements.

Automation.—Most farm and producer data are currently maintained on ASCS county office computers and are automatically accessed, used, and updated while servicing producers.

The Dairy Indemnity Program was authorized under 78 Stat. 508 in 1964, and has been extended through September 30, 1995, by the Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990 (Public Law 101-624). Payments are made to farmers and manufacturers who are directed to remove their milk or milk products from commercial markets because they contain residues of chemicals that have been registered and approved for use by the Federal Government; other chemicals, nuclear radiation, or nuclear fallout. The authority also provides that indemnification may be paid for cows producing such milk.

In 1994, an estimated $100 thousand will be paid to producers and manufacturers who file claims under the program.

Since available carryover funds are sufficient to cover normal claims, the 1995 budget requests no additional funding for this program.

This appropriation finances the administrative and operating expenses of the Corporation which provides crop insurance to farmers.

The major portion of administrative and operating expenses is to support a delivery system that relies heavily on the private sector as provided by the Federal Crop Insurance Act of 1980 under section 507(c). The delivery system is composed of:

(a) Reinsured companies that enable insurance companies to provide the insurance marketing, distribution, servicing, training, quality control, and loss adjustment functions. The companies also share with the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, to a limited extent, in both profits and losses.

In areas where an adequate private sales and service force is not available, FSA may ask other USDA agencies to sell and service multiple peril crop insurance through existing county offices.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, a wholly owned Government corporation, was created on February 16, 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1501-1520), to carry out the provisions of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended. The purpose of this Act is to promote the national welfare by improving the economic stability of agriculture through a sound system of crop insurance.

Crop insurance offered to agricultural producers by the Corporation provides protection from losses caused by natural hazards, such as insect and wildlife damage, plant diseases, fire, drought, flood, wind, and other weather conditions. It does not indemnify producers for losses resulting from negligence or failure to observe good farming practices.

The program for crop year 1994 will provide crop insurance protection to farmers amounting to approximately $11.3 billion on the following commodities: Almonds, apples, barley, beans (dry and C&P), citrus, citrus trees, corn, cotton, ELS cotton, cranberries, figs, flax, forage production, forage seedling, grain sorghum, grapes, table grapes, hybrid seedling, macadamia nuts, macadamia trees, nursery stock, oats, onions, peaches, peanuts, pears, peas (dry and green), peppers, plums, popcorn, potatoes, prevented planting, prunes, raisins, rice, rye, safflower, soybeans, stonefruit (CA only—apricots, nectarines and peaches), sugar beets, sugarcane, sunflowers, C&P sweet corn, sweet corn (fresh), tobacco, tomatoes (fresh), C&P tomatoes, walnuts, and wheat.

The 1994 appropriation provided sufficient funding for crop year 1994 to insure 83.9 million acres with an estimated $852.4 million in total premium income, including $213.6 million in premium subsidy.

The following table compares the scope of the insurance operations planned for 1994. Amounts in the 1993 column are as of September 30, 1993, and pertain to the 1993 crop year.

The Corporation's budget is presented in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, the Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB) Statement No. 60, "Accounting and Reporting by Insurance Enterprises," and Statement No. 5, "Accounting for Contingencies."

Financing.—The Corporation is authorized under the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended, to use funds from the issuance of capital stock which provides working capital for the Corporation.

Receipts, which are for deposit to this fund, come mainly from premiums paid by farmers. The principal payments from this fund are for indemnities to insured farmers, and agents' commissions.

Premium subsidies are authorized by section 508(b) of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended and are received from both those insured and through appropriations.

In 1993, the Corporation received a transfer of $500 million from the Commodity Credit Corporation as a reserve against losses in excess of premium in crop year 1993 for extremely heavy losses due to flooding in the Midwest.

Operating results and financial condition.—As of September 30, 1993, the Corporation reflected a deficit of $3,607.6 million. This compares with a deficit of $3,258.8 million at September 30, 1992.

For crop years 1948 through 1992, indemnities ($10,569.0 million) exceeded premium income ($7,706.0 million) by $2,863.0 million; the loss ratio for the period was 1.37. Indemnity costs exceeded premiums in 25 of the 44 years.

Proposed legislation for the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation would change the funding of public relief to alleviate the effects of agricultural disasters. Farmers who participate in any farm price support program or who borrow from the Farmers Home Administration will be required to enroll in catastrophic crop insurance protection as a condition of eligibility for those programs. Catastrophic protection will be fully subsidized with the exception of a minor processing fee to be paid by the farmer. This will compensate the farmer for yield losses exceeding 50 percent of a yield and at a price equal to 60 percent of a maximum price established by FCIC. Farmers will be required to obtain the catastrophic coverage on all crops of economic significance to the farming operation, a level that is defined as contributing at least 10 percent of the farm income from crops.

Additional coverage at higher levels of coverage will be offered through commercial insurance companies. The premium costs for these higher coverage levels will be subsidized with an amount of premium equal to that needed to purchase protection equivalent to 50 percent of yield loss and 75 percent of the maximum price. This reduces the cost of purchasing the higher levels of coverage compared to the present program. For example, the farmer's cost of buying 65 percent yield coverage and 100 percent price decreases by about 17 percent.

Compensation to commercial insurers for delivering this protection will be computed on the amount of premium paid directly by the producer, i.e., on that amount of premium that exceeds the subsidy. This amount of compensation will be included in the premium, thereby transferring funding for this program cost from the discretionary to the mandatory account.

A standing disaster assistance program will be available to all farmers who cannot purchase Federal crop insurance because it is not offered for the crop they produce. This assistance would be available whenever the yield of the commodity (or equivalent measure in the event yield data are not available) for any year is less than 65 percent of the long-term average for the area. Farmers would be indemnified for individual losses exceeding 50 percent yield at a price equal to 60 percent of an established price once the area trigger is activated.

¹ This entry reflects write-off of Polish debt.² This entry includes commodities received as the result of loan forfeitures valued at $43.3 million for fiscal year 1993. It also includes adjustments for loans to peanut associations.

The Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) was created to: stabilize, support, and protect farm income and prices; help maintain balanced and adequate supplies of agricultural commodities, their products, foods, feeds, and fibers; and help in their orderly distribution.

The Corporation's capital stock of $100 million is held by the United States Treasury. Under present law, up to $30 billion may be borrowed from the U.S. Treasury to finance operations.

Current, indefinite appropriation authority is requested to cover all net realized losses. Appropriations to the Corporation for net realized losses have no effect on budget authority as they are used to repay debt directly with the Treasury.

Budget assumptions.—The following general assumptions form the basis for the Corporation's 1994 and 1995 budget estimates: (a) National income will rise both in 1994 and 1995 from the present level; (b) 1994 crop production will increase from 1993 crop levels; (c) generally, exports of agricultural commodities in 1995 are expected to be slightly higher than 1994 levels; (d) yields for the 1994 crops are based on recent averages adjusted for trend; (e) acreage allotments and marketing quotas will be in effect for the 1994 crops of certain kinds of tobacco; (f) poundage quotas will be in effect for the 1994 crop of peanuts; and (g) the ethanol use regulation, proposed by the Environmental Protection Agency in December 1993, will be in effect.

It is difficult to forecast with accuracy requirements for the year ending September 30, 1995, since the projections are subject to complex and unpredictable factors such as weather, other factors which affect the volume of production of crops not yet planted, feed and food needs here and overseas, and available dollar exchange.

The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (OBRA) authorizes and in some cases directs the Administration to modify various agricultural commodity programs in the event that a Uruguay Round agreement on agriculture under the General Agreement on Tariffs Trade (GATT) is not concluded by June 1992, or is not entered into force by June 1993, if appropriate and to the extent needed to remain internationally competitive. A Uruguay Round agreement was not in force by June 1993 or by the time the FY 1995 CCC baseline was constructed. Accordingly, CCC estimates include an allowance for increased spending in 1994-95 on domestic and export commodity programs to accommodate possible costs of certain adjustments in the Federal commodity programs.

Appropriations are made to reimburse the Corporation for net realized losses sustained in carrying out its operations:

PROGRAMS OF THE CORPORATION

Price support and related stabilization programs.—The Corporation conducts programs to support farm income and prices and stabilize the market for agricultural commodities. Price support is provided to producers of agricultural commodities through loans, purchases, payments, and other means. This is done mainly under the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act, as amended, the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, and the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended.

Price support is mandatory for the basic commodities—corn, cotton, wheat, rice, peanuts, and tobacco. The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, also requires support of the following nonbasic commodities: honey, milk, barley, oats, rye, grain sorghum, sugar and oilseeds. The National Wool Act of 1954, as amended requires support for wool and mohair. Support for other nonbasic commodities is discretionary. The support program may also include operations to remove and dispose of surplus agricultural commodities in order to stabilize prices at levels not in excess of those permissible by law.

One method of providing support is loans to and purchases from producers. With limited exceptions, loans made on commodities are nonrecourse. The commodities serve as collateral for the loan and on maturity the producer may deliver or forfeit such collateral to satisfy the loan obligation without further payment.

Direct purchases are also made from processors as well as producers, depending on the commodity involved. Also, special purchases are made under various laws for the removal of surpluses; for example, the Act of August 19, 1958, as amended, and section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended.

Acreage limitation program.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, authorizes the Secretary to establish, through the Corporation, acreage limitation programs for the 1991 through 1995 crops of wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, extra long staple cotton, and rice. The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 amended the Agricultural Act of 1949 to authorize the Secretary to also establish, through the Corporation, acreage limitation programs for the 1996 and 1997 crops of upland cotton.

Marketing Assessments/Loan Origination Fees.—The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 and the Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990 amended the National Wool Act of 1954 and the Agricultural Act of 1949 to require marketing assessments for wool and mohair, malted barley, peanuts, tobacco, honey, dairy, and sugar. A two percent loan origination fee is required for oilseeds. The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 amended the National Wool Act of 1954 and the Agricultural Act of 1949 to eliminate marketing assessments for wool and mohair effective with the 1993 marketing year and for honey effective with the 1994 crop year. The two percent loan origination fee for oilseeds was also eliminated effective with the 1994 crop year. Marketing assessments for peanuts, tobacco, and sugar were also increased.

Options Pilot Program.—The Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-624), as amended, authorizes the Secretary to conduct a pilot program for the 1991 through 1995 crops of corn and for the 1993 through 1995 crops of wheat and soybeans to determine whether options trading can be used by producers to obtain protection from price fluctuations and the impact of such trading on market prices of the commodities. An Options Pilot Program was implemented for the 1993 crops of corn, wheat, and soybeans.

Land diversion payments.—The Secretary is authorized to establish paid land diversion programs for wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, extra long staple cotton, and rice.

Producer eligibility.—Producers of wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, extra long staple cotton, and rice must comply with acreage limitation provisions in order to be eligible for price support loans and purchases, deficiency payments and other program benefits.

Deficiency payments.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, establishes: (1) minimum established "target" prices for the 1991 through 1995 crops of the following commodities—wheat, corn, upland cotton, rice, and ELS cotton; (2) minimum price support loan and purchase levels for wheat, feed grains, and rice; and (3) minimum price support loan levels for upland cotton and ELS cotton. The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 amended the Agricultural Act of 1949 to also establish minimum target prices for the 1996 and 1997 crops of upland cotton. The Extra Long Staple Cotton Program, however, as a result of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, will end after the 1995 crop of cotton. Deficiency payments for each of the commodities are required when the target price for the commodity exceeds the national average market price or the price support loan level, whichever is higher. The target prices for grain sorghum and oats and, if designated by the Secretary, barley, are established at a level which is fair and reasonable in relation to the target prices established for corn. These payments may be paid by cash or on a non-cash basis, including payments in the form of commodities or commodity certificates that may be exchanged for commodities owned by CCC.

Disaster payments.—

The Dire Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for FY 1992 (P.L. 102-229) made an additional $1,750,000,000 available for 1990 crop losses as authorized by the Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990 and for 1991 and 1992 crop losses under the same terms and conditions. The act specified that $995,000,000 be made available for 1990 or 1991 crop payments, at the producer's option, and that an additional $755,000,000 for 1990, 1991, or 1992 crop payments, at the producer's option, would be available if and only to the extent that the President declares such funds to be an "emergency requirement" under the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 and submits a budget request. The act further specified that $100,000,000 of this $755,000,000 be made available for 1991 crop payments. The President submitted a budget request for the additional $755,000,000 on September 2, 1992.

The second Dire Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for FY 1992 (P.L. 102-368), enacted September 23, 1992, provided additional funding for eligible crop losses associated with natural disasters such as Hurricanes Andrew and Iniki and Typhoon Omar. An amount of $382,000,000 was made available immediately, with an additional amount of $100,000,000 to be made available only to the extent the President declares such funds to be an "emergency requirement" under the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 and submits a budget request. P.L. 102-368 also provided a separate appropriation of $48,000,000 for the Tree Assistance Program. The Supplemental Appropriations Act of 1993, P.L. 103-50, enacted July 2, 1993, authorized payments using the remaining balances from P.L. 102-229 and P.L. 102-368 for 1990, 1991, and 1992 crop quality adjustments and for 1993, 1994, and 1995 crop losses related to Hurricanes Andrew and Iniki and Typhoon Omar. On July 4, 1993, the President submitted a budget request for the additional $100,000,000 appropriated by P.L. 102-368. These funds were to fund losses from natural disasters such as those resulting from the Midwest flooding.

The Emergency Supplemental Appropriations for Relief from the Major, Widespread Flooding in the Midwest Act of 1993, P.L. 103-75, enacted August 12, 1993, appropriated funds for 1993 crop losses due to damaging weather and related conditions. The Act also required the $100,000,000 released on July 4, 1993, remain available until June 30, 1994, and be used for 1993 crop disaster losses only. An amount of $1,050,000,000 was made available immediately, with an additional amount of $300,000,000 to be made available only to the extent the President declares such funds to be an "emergency requirement" under the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 and submits a budget request. The use of CCC funds through exercise of the Corporation's existing borrowing authority was also authorized if extraordinary circumstances existed that warranted further assistance from CCC. The President submitted a budget request for the additional $300,000,000 appropriated by P.L. 103-75 on August 12, 1993. The use of CCC funds was also authorized on the same day.

Given these recent developments in providing crop loss disaster payments, the 1995 budget assumes that the Secretary of Agriculture will use USDA's existing authority to make a determination of economic loss from damaging weather and provide mandatory disaster payments to farmers under the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended. These disaster payments are included as annual outlays in the CCC mandatory baseline through FY 1999.

Marketing loan and certificate programs.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, provides for a mandatory marketing loan program for each of the 1991 through 1995 crops of rice, upland cotton, and oilseeds and a discretionary marketing loan program for each of the 1991 through 1995 crops of wheat, feed grains, and honey. Under a marketing loan program, a producer may repay a price support loan at a level that is lower than the original loan rate. Section 1302 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 provides that the Secretary shall permit producers to repay price support loans for 1993 through 1995 crops of wheat and feed grains at such a lower level under certain circumstances relating to achievement of an agricultural trade agreement in connection with the Uruguay Round of multilateral trade negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, provides for payments, in the form of negotiable marketing certificates, to first handlers of upland cotton (persons regularly engaged in buying or selling upland cotton) and also provides for a marketing certificate program for rice producers.

The Food Security Act of 1985, as amended, authorizes the Dairy Export Incentive Program (DEIP) through calendar year 1995. DEIP provides subsidies to exporters of U.S. dairy products to help them compete with other subsidizing nations.

The following table itemizes CCC certificate payments by program:

Grain reserves.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, authorizes a producer-owned grain reserve program for wheat and feed grains that provides 27 month extended loans to producers. Producers receive quarterly storage payments under the contract. Program provisions establish when interest is charged and storage payments are earned.

Dairy.—The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, provides for a dairy price support program which sets the minimum support price for milk at $10.10 per hundredweight through December 1996. If, on January 1 of each year, a milk surplus is estimated at less than 3.5 billion pounds, milk equivalent, the support price will be increased by 25 cents per hundredweight. If the surplus is estimated to be more than 5.0 billion pounds, milk equivalent, the support price will be decreased by 25 to 50 cents per hundredweight. The support price will be unchanged if the estimated surplus is estimated to be between 3.5 and 5.0 billion pounds, milk equivalent.

Payment limitations.—The Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990 and the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 amended the Food Security Act of 1985 to provide that the total amount of deficiency and land diversion payments, excluding any deficiency payment received as the result of a reduction of the wheat or feed grain price support loan level, that a person is entitled to receive under one or more annual programs for feed grains, wheat, upland cotton, ELS cotton, and rice for each of the 1991 through 1997 crops of these commodities shall not exceed $50,000. For each of the 1991 through 1997 crops of wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, rice, and oilseeds, gains from repaying a loan at a lower level than the original loan level, loan deficiency payments, and any deficiency payment received as a result of a reduction of the wheat or feed grain price support level shall not exceed $75,000. For each of the 1991 through 1997 crops the total amount of: (1) deficiency payments, land diversion payments, payments for resource adjustment (excluding diversion payments) or public access for recreation, disaster payments, loan deficiency payments, inventory reduction payments and gains realized from a marketing loan repayment with respect to wheat, feed grains, upland cotton, ELS cotton, rice, and oilseeds; and (2) gains realized by a producer from repaying a loan less than the original loan level with respect to other commodities, that a person shall be entitled to receive under one or more of the annual programs for such commodities shall not exceed $250,000, except as otherwise may be authorized by the Secretary. Annual rental payments made under the Conservation Reserve Program are limited to $50,000 per person. The Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, limits the total amount of benefits that a person may receive annually under one or more of the emergency livestock assistance programs to $50,000. Starting with the 1991 crop, the total amount of benefits that a person may receive under one or more of the emergency livestock assistance programs will be $50,000 per crop year rather than calendar year.

The Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990 also amended the National Wool Act of 1954 to establish payment limitation provisions for the 1991 through 1995 marketing years of wool and mohair and also amended the Agricultural Act of 1949 to establish payment limitation provisions for the 1991 through 1995 crops of honey. The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 further amended the National Wool Act of 1954 to extend payment limitation provisions to the 1996 and 1997 marketing years and decrease the payment limitations for the 1994 and 1995 marketing years. The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 also amended the Agricultural Act of 1949 to extend payment limitation provisions to the 1996 through 1998 crops of honey and to decrease the payment limitation for the 1995 marketing year. The annual payment limitations for these commodities are: $200,000 in 1991; $175,000 in 1992; $150,000 in 1993; $125,000 in 1994; $100,000 in 1995; $75,000 in 1996; and $50,000 in 1997. The annual payment limitations for honey is also $50,000 in 1998. The National Wool Act Amendments of 1993 (P.L. 103-130), repealed the National Wool Act of 1954 effective on December 31, 1995. Legislation has been submitted by the Administration to eliminate price supports for honey after December 31, 1995.

Supply and foreign purchases.—The Corporation can procure from domestic and foreign sources food, agriculture commodities, and products and related materials to supply the needs of Federal agencies, foreign governments, and private and international relief agencies, under section 5(b) and (c) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act, as amended.

Commodity exports.—The Corporation promotes the export of agricultural commodities and products through sales for dollars or foreign currency, payments, extension of credit, assumption of certain risks, and conduct of other operations with respect to the exportation of commodities. Such commodities and products may be those held in private trade channels as well as those acquired by the Corporation. These programs are carried out under the authority of the CCC Chapter Act and other specific legislation.

Foreign donations.—Under the authority of section 416(b) of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, the Corporation may furnish eligible commodities for carrying out programs of assistance in developing and friendly countries under the Food for Progress Act of 1985 and titles II and III of the Agricultural Trade Development Act of 1954, as amended. CCC may pay costs associated with making the commodities available. Not to exceed $10 million of CCC funds or commodities may be used each fiscal year to enhance the development of private sector agriculture in countries receiving commodities under the Food for Progress Act of 1985.

Operating expenses.—The Corporation carries out its functions through utilization of employees and facilities of other Government agencies. Administrative expenses are incurred by: ASCS (and the proposed Farm Service Agency under the Secretary's reorganization plan); General Sales Manager; other agencies of the Department engaged in the Corporation's activities; and the Office of Inspector General for audit. Additional expenses are incurred by ASCS county offices for work related to programs of the Corporation, other ASCS expenses offset by revenue, custodian, and agency expenses of the Federal Reserve banks and lending agencies, and miscellaneous costs. Beginning in 1995 administrative expenses of the Foreign Agricultural Service that previously were funded by transfers from CCC will be funded directly through the FAS appropriation, excepting credit program account transfers.

Expenses are incurred for acquisition, operation, maintenance, improvement, or disposition of existing property that the Corporation owns or in which it has an interest. These expenses are treated as program expenses. Such program expenses include inspection, classing, and grading work performed on a fee basis by Federal employees or Federal- or State-licensed inspectors; and special services performed by Federal agencies within and outside this Department. Most of these general expenses, including storage and handling, transportation, inspection, classing and grading, and producer storage payments, are included in program costs. They are shown in the program and financing schedule in the entries entitled "Storage, transportation, and other obligations not included above," and "Producer storage payments." In 1995, administrative equipment purchases by ASCS and FAS will only be funded by direct appropriation.

The Corporation receives reimbursement for grain requisitioned pursuant to Public Law 87-152 by the States from Corporation stocks to feed resident wildlife threatened with starvation through the appropriation reimbursement for net realized losses. There have been no requisitions in recent years, however.

SPECIAL ACTIVITIES

These activities are carried out under authority of section 5(g) of the Corporation's charter act and specific statutory authorizations or directives with respect thereto that are currently in effect or which may subsequently be enacted.

Total payments made under the National Wool Act cannot at any time exceed an amount equal to 70 percent of the accumulated totals, as of the same date, of the gross receipts from import duties collected on and after January 1, 1953, on wool and wool manufactures. Actual or estimated payments compared with this limitation are as follows:

(In thousands of dollars)

Item	1993 actual	1994 est.	1995 est.
70% of customs receipts on wool and wool manufactures, cumulative from Jan. 1, 1953, to end of preceding calendar year	5,524,832	5,836,573	6,151,814
Cumulative incentive payments on marketings to end of preceding calendar year	2,513,876	2,707,276	2,840,976
Balance of limitation available for payments in succeeding marketing years	3,010,956	3,129,297	3,310,838

Funds of the Corporation are used to carry on this program. Section 705 of the act appropriates each fiscal year an amount equal to amounts expended by the Corporation during the preceding year and to amounts expended in all prior fiscal years not previously reimbursed, but not to exceed an amount equal to 70 percent of the gross receipts from total duties collected on wool and wool manufactures during the calendar year preceding the fiscal year. The National Wool Act Amendments of 1993 (P.L. 103-130) repealed the National Wool Act of 1954 effective December 31, 1995.

FINANCING

Borrowing authority.—The Corporation has an authorized capital stock of $100 million held by the United States and, effective in 1988, authority to have outstanding borrowings up to $30 billion at any one time.

Funds are borrowed from Treasury and may also be borrowed from private lending agencies and others. The Corporation reserves a sufficient amount of its borrowing authority to purchase at any time all notes and other obligations evidencing loans made to the Corporation by such agencies and others. All bonds, notes, debentures, and similar obligations issued by the Corporation are subject to approval by the Secretary of the Treasury as required by the Act of March 8, 1938.

Interest on borrowings from the Treasury (and on capital stock) is paid at a rate based upon the average interest rate of all outstanding marketable obligations (of comparable maturity date) of the United States as of the preceding month. Interest is also paid on other notes and obligations at a rate prescribed by the Corporation and approved by the Secretary of Treasury.

The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1966, made provision for terminating interest after June 30, 1964 on the portion of the Corporation's borrowings from the Treasury equal to the unreimbursed realized losses recorded on the books of the Corporation after the end of the fiscal year in which such losses are realized.

POSITION WITH RESPECT TO BORROWING AUTHORITY, END OF YEAR

(In thousands of dollars)

Item	1993 actual	1994 est.	1995 est.
Statutory borrowing authority	30,000,000	30,000,000	30,000,000
Deduct: Borrowings from Treasury	24,745,298	18,495,216	11,729,923
Net statutory borrowing authority available	5,254,702	11,504,784	18,270,077

Note.—Accounts payable, accrued liabilities and other outstanding obligations not reflected on this table do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowings from the Treasury.

Contract authority.—Price support and other programs required by statute may result in the Corporation incurring obligations in excess of available funds and borrowing authority. Such obligations are liquidated from subsequent appropriations and other funds that may become available to the Corporation. Any increase in obligations in excess of available fund resources is reported as contract authority in the year involved; a decrease is reported as the application of appropriations and other funds to liquidate the authority.

Appropriations.—Under section 2 of Public Law 87-155 annual appropriations are authorized for each fiscal year to reimburse the Corporation for net realized losses incurred as of the close of each year.

The special activities are financed as indicated in the program descriptions above. In addition to certain reimbursements from other agencies, appropriations are made for the National Wool Act (see above) and foreign assistance programs.

Deficit.—The net realized losses of the Corporation have previously been reimbursed as follows:

The Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund Program Account's loans are authorized by title III of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act, as amended.

This program account includes subsidies to provide direct and guaranteed loans for farm ownership, farm operating, emergency, and soil and water loans to individuals. Associations, Indian tribes and tribal corporations are eligible for the following types of loans: Indian land acquisition, watershed protection, flood prevention, and resource conservation and development.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated and loan guarantees committed in 1992 and beyond (including credit sales of acquired property), as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

Technical assistance.—Technical assistance is provided through 2,955 conservation districts or special districts to land users and decisionmakers, including individual landowners and operators, community groups, units of government, Indian tribes, and others for the planning of conservation programs and installation of needed conservation systems on the land, including design, layout, installation, and consultation services.

Combinations of needed soil and water conservation systems are planned in relation to each other to achieve well-balanced conservation programs. Technicians explain the various soil conditions, develop alternative uses and treatments, help to evaluate the costs and returns of conservation work, and furnish onsite assistance to farmers, ranchers, and others in applying the needed treatments. About 70 percent of the total annual investment in conservation practices applied through the conservation technical assistance program is made by private landusers. During 1995, the Service will receive direct funding to provide technical assistance to implement the Conservation Reserve Program, the Wetlands Reserve Program, and the highly erodible land and wetland conservation provisions of the Food Security Act of 1985 as amended by the Food, Agriculture, Conservation and Trade Act of 1990.

MAIN WORKLOAD FACTORS

	1993 actual	1994 est.	1995 est.
Decisionmakers receiving technical services	1,227,216	1,250,000	1,230,000
Acres treated with conservation technical assistance	62,112,316	63,500,000	62,200,000
Tons of soil erosion reduced	321,429,852	340,000,000	335,000,000

Also included in this item are the inventory and monitoring, resource appraisal, and program development activities. Resource inventories are conducted to provide soil, water, and related resource data for evaluating land-use changes and trends; and for guidance in the development and implementation of Federal, State, and local resource conservation programs. Resource appraisal and program development provides for periodic reports to the public and Congress as required by the Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act of 1977 as amended.

Soil surveys.—Soil surveys and investigations are made of the Nation's soil resources, with interpretations and publications that provide physical land facts needed for program development, resource conservation planning, installation of planned practices, and for use by other Federal, State, and local agencies in making land-use decisions. National leadership is provided for digitizing soil surveys in cooperation with States, and other users of soil survey data.

MAIN WORKLOAD FACTORS

Acres mapped annually	27,936,321	26,300,000	25,700,000
Soil surveys ready for publication (number)	48	55	53

Snow survey water forecasting.—Water supply forecasts prepared from snow surveys in western states are used in making efficient seasonal use of water for irrigation, flood control, fish and wildlife, recreation, power generation, municipal and industrial water supply, and water quality management.

Operation of plant materials centers.—The selection and evaluation of plant materials are made at 25 plant materials centers through field trials to determine their suitability for erosion control, conservation, and other environmental improvements.

The Department makes surveys of proposed small watershed project and work plans are prepared in cooperation with local sponsors. These plans outline the soil and water management problems in the watershed, the steps that have been or are authorized to be taken to alleviate these problems, the proposed works of improvement to be installed, the estimated benefits and costs, cost sharing, operation and maintenance arrangements, and other information necessary to justify Federal participation in project development. Watershed planning will emphasize water quality protection and improvement. This emphasis will better enable States to focus on watersheds in fulfilling the requirements of the Clean Water Act and in maintaining clean water.

These programs provide for cooperation between the Federal Government and States and their political subdivisions to reduce damage from floodwater, sediment, and erosion, for the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water, and for the conservation and proper utilization of land.

Watershed operations authorized by Public Law 534.—The Department cooperates with soil conservation districts and other local organizations in planning and installing works of improvement for flood prevention in 11 watersheds authorized by the Flood Control Act of 1944. The Federal Government shares the cost of works of improvement for flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife development. No funds are proposed for this activity.

Within the 11 authorized projects, 428 subwatershed areas have been identified for planning purposes. Installation progress in these subwatersheds is as follows:

Emergency watershed protection operations.—This program authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to undertake such emergency measures for runoff retardation and soil erosion prevention as may be needed to safeguard life and property from floods and the products of erosion on any watershed whenever natural elements or forces cause a sudden impairment of that watershed. An emergency is considered to exist when a watershed is suddenly impaired by flood, fire, wind, earthquake, or other natural cause and consequently life and property are endangered by floodwater, erosion, or sediment discharge. The emergency area need not be declared a national disaster area to be eligible for emergency watershed protection. Emergency watershed protection is applicable to small scale, localized disasters as well as large scale disasters. State environmental, natural resource, fish and game, and other agencies participate in planning and coordinating emergency work.

WATERSHED AND FLOOD PREVENTION OPERATIONS—Continued

Small watershed operations authorized by Public Law 566.—The Department provides technical and financial assistance to local organizations to install measures for watershed protection, flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife enhancement. This account is proposed to be phased out.

Watershed work plans are prepared by sponsoring local organizations with the Department's assistance or through State and local resources. After work plans are approved by the Department or Congress (projects where the estimated Federal contribution will exceed $5 million require congressional approval), financial assistance is provided for specific works of improvements.

The following tabulation shows the status of Public Law 566 projects:

Loan services.—Loans are made to local sponsoring organizations to finance the local cost of installing works of improvement in Public Law 534 and approved Public Law 566 watershed projects. Repayment with interest is required within 50 years after the principal benefits of improvements first become available. Loans are made from funds available for this purpose from the Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund Program account.

Under this program, the Department assists States, local units of government, groups and individuals in developing area plans for resource conservation and development (RC&D).

RC&D areas are provided technical and financial assistance to help States and local units of government prepare plans for resource development and economic improvement and to plan and install community-type conservation projects or measures. Financial contributions, loans, and other Federal assistance are used to help carry out measures specified in RC&D area plans. Loans have previously been made through the Farmers Home Administration to qualified local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of installing the measures.

The following tabulation shows the status of RC&D areas authorized to receive technical and financial assistance.

GREAT PLAINS CONSERVATION PROGRAM—Continued

This program provides cost-share assistance to participating landowners or operators in the Great Plains area in the development and installation of long-term conservation plans and practices for their land under contracts entered into in prior years. It is a voluntary program in 556 designated counties of 10 Great Plains States. Contracts with individual landowners range in time from 3 to 10 years.

Number of acres under contracts	19,884,202	21,453,000	19,473,000

As of September 30, 1993, there were 6,761 active contracts on hand. Co-landowners or operators finance the entire cost of installing recurring management-type practices and pay a specified part of the cost-shared practices installed on their land. Program regulations provide that cost-share rates offered in any contract shall not exceed 80 percent of the cost of installing eligible practices within the designated county. There is a cost-sharing limitation of $35 thousand for any contract.

Beginning in FY 1995, funding for Soil Conservation Service (SCS) technical assistance formerly included under this account will be requested by the SCS.

The primary objectives of the program are to conserve soil and water resources. Along with annual agreements, cost sharing is authorized for long-term agreements of 3–10 years.

The program is administered by county committees, with review and approval by State committees and the Secretary.

The 1994 program level of $194,650 thousand will be allocated to States based on the highest priority soil and water resource problems, and is expected to serve 9.8 million acres. Practices are expected to prevent approximately 29 million tons of soil erosion and save 605,000 acre-feet of water.

The 1995 budget proposes funding for activities consistent with the Government-wide water quality initiative as well as practices that help solve soil and water conservation problems identified in State and county ACP plans. The 1995 budget directs funding for water quality incentive projects on eligible lands to meet water quality standards or goals.

This program was authorized by the Cooperative Forestry Assistance Act of 1978 (16 U.S.C. 2101). The objectives of the program are to bring private, nonindustrial forest land under intensified management, to increase timber production, to ensure adequate supplies of timber products, and to enhance other forest resources.

The Forestry Incentives Program shares up to 65 percent of the cost of tree planting and timberstand improvement. The percentage cost-shared depends on the rate set in a particular State and county by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, after consulting with the State forester. The program is available in designated counties based on a Forest Service survey of total eligible private timberland available for production of timber products. The program is administered by ASCS. Technical assistance is provided by Forest Service.

Under the 1994 program, cost-sharing will be provided to farmers for planting trees on 153,500 acres and improving the timberstand on 39,900 acres of forest.

The 1995 program will provide cost-sharing for tree planting on 77,100 acres and timberstand improvement on 20,100 acres.

Beginning in FY 1995, funding for Soil Conservation Service (SCS) technical assistance formerly included under this account will be requested by the SCS.

The objectives of the Water Bank Program are to conserve water; preserve, maintain, and improve the Nation's wetlands; increase waterfowl habitat in migratory waterfowl nesting, breeding, and feeding areas in the United States; and secure recreational and environmental benefits for the Nation. The program was authorized by the Water Bank Act of 1970, as amended by Public Law 96-182, approved January 2, 1980.

The Secretary of Agriculture, through designated county offices, uses program funds to enter into 10-year agreements with landowners and operators for the conservation of specified wetlands. Provisions exist to renew agreements for additional periods, to make annual payments on agreements, and under certain conditions to increase payment rates in the fifth year of a contract or at the time of renewal. During the period of the agreement, the landowner agrees not to drain, burn, fill, or otherwise destroy the wetland character of such areas.

In fiscal year 1995, USDA plans to enter into approximately 464 agreements on about 48,300 acres of wetlands.

Beginning in FY 1995, funding for Soil Conservation Service (SCS) technical assistance formerly included under this account will be requested by the SCS.

This program carries out the purposes of section 202(c) of title II of the Colorado River Basin Salinity Control Act (43 U.S.C. 1592(c)), as amended, by providing cost-share assistance to landowners and others in the Colorado River Basin. The main objective is to enhance the supply and quality of water in the Colorado River for delivery to downstream users in the U.S. and Mexico.

Practices are recommended by the county committees and approved by the State committees and the Secretary of Agriculture.

The 1994 program will focus on nine project areas in Colorado, Nevada, Utah, and Wyoming.

The 1995 budget will provide financial assistance in promoting the Government-wide water quality initiative. The funding level of $8.4 million will fund nine existing projects.

Under this program, 30 percent of cost-share funds will be reimbursed to the U.S. Treasury by the Colorado River Basin States.

Beginning in FY 1995, funding for Soil Conservation Service (SCS) technical assistance formerly included under this account will be requested by the SCS.

The Wetlands Reserve Program is authorized by Title XIV, Section 1438 of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation, and Trade Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-624), as amended by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 (P.L. 103-66). The 1993 Omnibus Reconciliation Act authorizes the enrollment of not less than 330,000 acres by the end of calendar year 1995, and not less than 975,000 total cumulative acres enrolled by the end of calendar year 2000. The primary objectives of the program are to preserve and restore wetlands, improve wildlife habitat, and protect migratory waterfowl.

The Secretary of Agriculture, through designated county offices, uses program funds to enter into contracts with landowners that operate farmed or converted wetlands, farmed wetlands, or prior converted wetlands and adjoining land or riparian corridors. The contracts are for permanent easements or easements of thirty years or the maximum allowable under State law. Technical assistance will be provided by the Soil Conservation Service and Fish and Wildlife Service.

Under the 1992 program, 49,888 acres were tentatively accepted in 9 pilot States. No funding was provided for operating a fiscal year 1993 program.

The 1994 program will provide funding for enrolling 75,000 acres in 20 States, including the nine pilot States.

The 1995 budget will provide funding for enrolling an estimated 300,000 acres. The President's Budget recommends enrollment through 1995 of 425,000 acres. Program participants will receive payments for wetlands easements, in a lump sum payment for permanent easements. Compensation will be in cash as specified in the contract, but not to exceed the fair market value of the land. The program provides cost-share assistance to landowners for carrying out the establishment of conservation measures and practices. The program cost-shares 75 percent to 100 percent of eligible costs of a permanent easement. The program also provides reimbursement to the landowner for overhead costs associated with acquiring an easement.

Beginning in FY 1995, funding for Soil Conservation Service (SCS) technical assistance formerly included under this account will be requested by the SCS.

This program was authorized by the Agricultural Credit Act of 1978 (16 U.S.C. 2201-05). It provides funds for sharing the cost of emergency measures to deal with cases of severe damage to farmlands and rangelands resulting from natural disasters.

Under the 1993 program, cost-sharing assistance was provided in 39 States to treat farmlands damaged by floods, tornadoes, wildfires, earthquakes, and drought. In addition, to meet emergency needs in five States damaged by Hurricanes Andrew and Iniki and Typhoon Omar, supplemental funding was available through FY 1993. Late in fiscal year 1993 many States in the Midwest suffered severe damage due to flooding. Because of the devastation in those areas, another supplemental of $30 million was provided, which is available through June 1994. Rehabilitation of the affected farmland is expected in fiscal year 1994.

The 1995 budget will provide cost-sharing to farmers and ranchers to rehabilitate approximately 328,200 acres of damaged farmland.

This experimental Rural Clean Water Program, authorized by Public Law 96-108 and Public Law 96-528, is a cooperative endeavor among farmers, various USDA agencies, and other organizations to develop and test means of controlling agricultural nonpoint source water pollution in rural areas.

Recommended project areas were developed by local and State committees and approved by the Secretary of Agriculture in consultation with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. Full funding has been provided in previous budgets for all approved projects.

The 1995 budget requires no additional funding for implementing this program. Similar activities will be carried out through the Agricultural Conservation Program.

The Secretary of Agriculture plans to reorganize the Department and streamline its operations both in the field and at the Headquarters level. Under this proposal, four new entities would be created: the Farm Service Agency, the Rural Utilities Service, the Rural Housing and Community Development Service, and the Rural Business and Cooperative Development Service. This would result in more efficient service delivery to FmHA and REA clients, significant personnel reductions, and administrative cost efficiencies. The Rural Utilities Service Salaries and Expenses account combines activities formerly performed by REA and RDA.

Beginning in FY95 the Rural Electrification Administration will be organized under the Secretary's Reorganization Plan and become part of the Rural Utilities Service (RUS) along with certain programs formerly administered by the Rural Development Administration.

The RUS, under authority of the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, as amended, makes direct loans and guarantees loans made by other qualified lenders to suppliers of electric and telephone service in rural areas. RUS also makes grants and loans for the purpose of promoting rural economic development and job creation projects and grants to provide access to advanced telecommunications services and computer networks for distance learning and medical link facilities.

In order to administer the RUS loan programs and to ensure that construction and operation projects conform to approved standards, RUS furnishes, without cost to the borrower, business management and technical assistance on a regular basis. This objective is carried out through regulations, personal visits to the borrowers, and training. RUS has personnel in the Washington office and a field staff who have expertise in the electric or telephone industry and who are available to assist borrowers in specialized areas including rural development.

The Food, Agriculture Conservation and Trade Act Amendments of 1992, P.L. 102-237, and Secretary's Memorandum 1020.34, dated December 31, 1992, established the Rural Development Administration. This Agency is devoted to the efficient delivery of programs of financial and technical assistance to rural communities concerning water and waste disposal, essential community facilities, other community services, and business financing. This Agency also provides national leadership for rural development by focusing attention on high priority development opportunities and facilitating collaborative operations among government agencies and other development organizations.

During FY 1993 and FY 1994, these programs were delivered at the state and local level by Farmers Home Administration staff and through the Regional Offices of the Rural Development Administration. In FY 1995, under the proposed Departmental reorganization, these activities will be performed by staff in the Rural Housing and Community Development Service, the Rural Utilities Service, and the Rural Business and Cooperative Development Service.

The Rural Utilities Service conducts the following loan programs: (1) the rural electrification program; (2) the rural telephone program. The rural electrification loan program is financed through RUS direct loans for the operation of generating plants, electric transmission, and distribution lines or systems. The rural telephone loan program is financed through RUS direct loans for construction, expansion, acquisition, and operation of telephone lines and facilities or systems. In 1995, RUS will maintain $25 million in 5 percent direct electric loans, and provide $200 million in municipal rate rural electric loans. The remaining electric and telephone loans will be provided at the Treasury interest rate. In addition, electric and telephone loans will also be made at the FFB rate, which is the Treasury rate plus one-eighth of one percent.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for Rural Electrification and Telephone program, the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated and the loan guarantees committed in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of direct loans or loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year), as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for the Rural Telephone Bank, all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from direct loans obligated prior to 1992. This account is shown on a cash basis. All new activity in this program in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of direct loans or loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year) is recorded in corresponding program and financing accounts.

The Rural Telephone Bank (RTB) provides a supplemental source of financing for rural telephone borrowers. The Bank charges an interest rate based on the cost of money to the Bank, as prescribed by law, but not less than 5 percent per annum. The composite interest rate on cumulative loans through September 30, 1993, was 7.27 percent. The long-term interest rate on advances made during FY 1993 for loans approved after October 1, 1987, is 6.05 percent.

Equity capital of the Bank consists of class A stock purchased by the United States of $592 million with a 2 percent dividend and classes B and C stock purchased by bank borrowers, organizations eligible to become borrowers and organizations controlled by borrowers. The Bank has borrowed $759 million from the Treasury. The $592 million purchase of capital stock has been financed through appropriations.

Administrative support is provided for the general operations of the Bank by RUS employees and the Office of the General Counsel.

Bank loans totaled $175 million in 1993. After almost 21 years in operation, loans to 613 borrowers have been approved, totaling over $3.037 billion.

The Rural Development Insurance Fund (RDIF) was established on October 1, 1972, pursuant to section 116 of the Rural Development Act of 1972 (Public Law 92-419).

The fund is used to insure or guarantee loans for water systems and waste disposal facilities, community facilities, and industrial development in rural areas. Communities unable to afford low interest loans for water and waste disposal facilities are also able to obtain water and waste water disposal grants.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from direct loans obligated and loan guarantees committed prior to the 1992. New loan activity in 1992 and beyond is recorded in corresponding program and financing accounts.

These funds are used to administer the direct loan, loan guarantee, and grant programs of the Farmers Home Administration and the Rural Development Administration. In 1994 Congress eliminated direct funding to the Agricultural Cooperatives Service (ACS).

In 1995, funding is included in this account for the ACS and, under the Secretary's reorganization plan, will be funded through the Rural Business and Cooperative Development Service. Activities include reviewing applications, servicing the loan portfolio, and for activities relating to cooperatives including research and analysis, and providing technical assistance and guidance to borrowers; and activities to assist in extending other Federal programs to people in rural areas.

In 1994, Congress separately funded the administrative costs for the Office of the Administrator. Separate funding is eliminated in 1995 and the Administrator's costs once again are funded from the Farmers Home Administration Salaries and Expenses appropriation.

The following tables show total administrative funding available to the FmHA and RDA and personnel:

Rural housing insurance fund—This fund was established in 1965 (Public Law 89-117) pursuant to section 517 of title

V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended. This program account is used to provide direct and guaranteed rural housing loans for single family homes, rental cooperative housing, farm labor housing, and rural housing sites and, formerly, to make rental assistance payments authorized by section 521(a). Loan programs are limited to rural areas that include towns, villages, and other places which are not part of an urban and that have a population not in excess of 2,500 inhabitants, or is in excess of 2,500 but not in excess of 10,000 if rural in character, or has a population in excess of 10,000 but not more than 20,000 and is not within a standard metropolitan statistical area and has a serious lack of mortgage credit for low- and moderate-income borrowers.

The major programs funded through the Rural housing insurance fund program account are: section 502 very low and low to moderate income ownership loans and guarantees; section 504 very low-income housing repair loans; section 514 domestic farm labor housing loans; section 515 rural rental housing loans; and section 524 housing site loans. Under the Administration's USDA reorganization proposal, loan activity under this program would appear in the Rural Housing and Community Development Service Program Account.

Grants will be used to promote the development (through technological innovation, cooperative development, and adaptation of existing technology) and commercialization of new services and products that can be produced or provided rural areas; new processes that can be utilized in the production of products in rural areas; and new enterprises that add value to on-farm production through processing or marketing. RBCDS proposes to fund up to 75 percent of any project funded for technology development and require at least a 25 percent matching share from the applicant which must be from non-Federal sources.

The FY 1994 program was funded at $1.5 million in the Extension Service. The Administration proposes the FY 1995 program be funded in the new Rural Business and Cooperative Development Service.

This grant program, authorized through section 306(a)(11)(A) of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act, as amended, is designed to assist in the economic development of rural areas by providing technical assistance for business development and economic development planning. Grant funds may be used to identify and analyze business opportunities that would use local economic and human resources; provide technical assistance to existing or prospective rural entrepreneurs; establish business support centers and otherwise assist in the creation of new rural businesses; and, to conduct regional, community and local economic development planning and coordination, and leadership development. RBCDS proposes to fund up to 75 percent of the project costs while requiring the applicant's contribution be at least 25 percent which must be cash from non-Federal sources.

These grants are designed to stimulate economic development and rural employment while challenging State, local, and private sources to invest in rural economic development activities thus allowing program grant funds to reach a broader range of rural economic development efforts.

The Agricultural Cooperative Service provides the Secretary with information relating to agricultural cooperatives. The agency also provides cooperatives with research studies and technical assistance on economic, financial, organizational, managerial, legal, social, and policy related issues that affect cooperatives. Data on membership, business volume, and financial condition are collected to detect changes in the structure, operation, and growth trends of cooperatives.

For FY 1995, authorizing legislation will be submitted, to permit, subject to appropriations, the collection and use of fees for technical assistance provided to larger cooperatives with high annual revenues. Fee levels will be determined through appropriations action. In FY 1995, this program will be included within the Rural Business and Cooperative Development Service.

Loans from the Rural Development Loan Fund are made to intermediary borrowers (i.e., small investment groups), who in turn relend the funds to small rural businesses, community development corporations, or other organizations for the purpose of improving economic opportunities in rural areas. Through the use of local intermediaries, this program is able to serve small-scale enterprises and give preference to those communities with the greatest need.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from direct loans obligated prior to 1992. New loan activity in 1992 and beyond is recorded in corresponding program and financing accounts.

In accordance with P.L. 103-111 and Secretary's Memorandum No. 1029-39, funding and programs managed by the Office of International Cooperation and Development were merged into the Foreign Agricultural Service effective October 1, 1993.

The Foreign Agricultural Service mission is to help American farmers and traders take maximum advantage of increased opportunities to sell U.S. agricultural commodities abroad and to help increase U.S. farm income.

Activities are conducted within three program areas:

Foreign agricultural affairs.—The Service maintains agricultural counselors, attachés, or trade officers at 75 foreign posts to assist overseas development of markets for U.S. farm commodities. They work closely with numerous U.S. agricultural trade groups and maintain significant contacts with foreign governments and traders to promote market access for U.S. farm products. They also file annually about 5,000 comprehensive reports regarding foreign agricultural production, supply, demand, marketing, and trade policy developments to keep U.S. agriculture, industry, and Government currently informed.

Foreign market information and access.—Under this broad program heading, the Service initiates, directs, and coordinates the Department's formulation of trade policies and programs with the goal of maintaining and expanding world markets for U.S. agricultural products. The Service is responsible for the development and maintenance of the USDA statistical data base encompassing foreign production estimates, trade data, export forecasts, economic indicators, price data and export sales reporting. These data are collected, analyzed, and disseminated to U.S. farm and trade groups providing ready access to reliable information to assess short-term changes in world agricultural supply and demand conditions by commodity.

The analyses of world commodity conditions provide the information necessary to develop export marketing strategies that can be used by the Department not only to gain market access but to enhance the long term market development plans for major U.S. commodities. Administrative expenses that previously were funded through CCC will be funded directly through the appropriation for this account.

Foreign market development.—This program provides funding support to 41 commodity associations (cooperators), 5 regional groups (representing 47 State departments of agriculture) and the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture. Under FAS guidance and supervision, these organizations conduct an extensive worldwide market development program on behalf of the U.S. farm sector. In addition, the Service develops and operates a worldwide system of multicommodity promotional programs utilizing product exhibits, trade teams, trade services, market information programs, and trade referral services to expand overseas markets.

International Cooperation and Development.—Under this program heading and the activities formerly carried out by the Office of International Cooperation and Development. This activity promotes U.S. agriculture and the advancement of agriculture in developing countries through a number of complementary programs. Direct program activities include the administration of the Cochran Fellowship Program which provides food industry training to senior and mid-level professionals from the public and private sectors of selected middle-income countries and emerging democracies, and management of USDA's bilateral exchange and cooperative research programs with foreign governments and institutions.

At the request of the Agency for International Development, international organizations and foreign governments, technical assistance and training in agriculture and rural development is provided on a reimbursable or advance of funds basis. Programs are ongoing in over 80 countries focused on such activities as land and water management, pest control, crop and livestock production and conservation.

The General Sales Manager was established pursuant to section 5(f) of the Charter Act of the Commodity Credit Corporation and 15 U.S.C. 714-714p. The funds allocated are used for conducting the following programs: (1) CCC Export Credit Guarantee Program (GSM-102), (2) Intermediate Credit Guarantee Program (GSM-103), (3) Export Enhancement Program, (4) Market Promotion Program, (5) Public Law 480, (6) Section 416 Overseas Donations, (7) Food for Progress, (8) Dairy Export Incentive Program, (9) Sunflowerseed Oil Assistance Program, (10) Cottonseed Oil Assistance Program, and (11) programs authorized by the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act including barter, export sales of CCC-owned commodities, export payments and other programs as assigned to encourage or cause the export of U.S. agricultural commodities. The General Sales Manager is funded through a direct appropriation and funds made available from the CCC Export Guarantee Program Account and P.L. 480 Program Account.

See 1994 and 1995 activities under International Cooperation and Development in the Foreign Agriculture Service section of the budget.

The mission of the Office of International Cooperation and Development (OICD) is to promote U.S. agriculture and to advance the agriculture of developing countries as parts of a complementary global agricultural system capable of providing ample food and fiber for all people.

International agricultural development.—OICD analyzes agricultural policy issues related to USDA's international agricultural development efforts, reviews food aid development activities supported by Public Law 480, and provides food industry training to senior and mid-level professionals from the public and private sectors of selected middle-income countries.

International scientific and technical cooperation.—OICD manages the Department's bilateral exchange and cooperative research programs with foreign governments and institutions in order to strengthen the role of science and technology in the ongoing effort to stabilize world food supplies and to increase the efficiency with which world resources are used. Priorities and criteria for these programs are based on domestic research priorities, potential benefits to U.S. agricultural production, and the availability of desired technologies. OICD coordinates USDA's and the U.S. Government's participation in approximately 30 international organizations concerned with food, agriculture, and rural development.

Reimbursable program.—OICD, using USDA and university expertise, provides technical assistance and training to developing countries at the request of the Agency for International Development and international organizations. OICD manages technical assistance projects in over 80 countries, focusing on land and water management, crop and livestock production and marketing, forestry, pest control, resource conservation and other areas. OICD offers a technical and management training program in agriculture and rural development to participants from foreign countries and designees of international organizations.

Debt reduction for outstanding Title I direct credit as of January 1, 1990 is authorized for Latin American and Caribbean countries which meet certain eligibility requirements including pursuing economic reform programs with the International Monetary Fund and World Bank, placing into effect major investment reforms in conjunction with an InterAmerican Development Bank Loan and, if applicable, arranging with its commercial bank lenders a debt service reduction. In fiscal year 1993, the U.S. government signed EAI agreements with El Salvador and Uruguay reducing P.L. 480 Title I debt outstanding by 80% and 40%, respectively.

As part of a comprehensive package of U.S. assistance for Russia announced by the President in April 1993, $700,000,000 in commodity and related transportation assistance was proposed to be furnished under the Food for Progress (FFP) authority. To achieve this, $385,000,000 was transferred from CCC to Food for Progress under provisions of the Secretary of Agriculture's Interchange Authority (7 U.S.C. 2257). The amount transferred exceeds the seven percent of funds authorized based on the Secretary's determination of an extraordinary emergency situation.

Sales under the credit portion of the Food for Progress program for Russia carry a term of fifteen years, including a seven year grace period. The interest rates are three percent during the grace period and four percent thereafter. Funding for commodity and ocean freight financing is under P.L. 480 Title I FFP and is subject to credit reform budgeting.

Financing sales of agricultural commodities to developing countries for dollars on credit terms, or for local currencies (including for local currencies on credit terms) for use under sec. 104; and for furnishing commodities to carry out the Food for Progress Act of 1985, as amended (title I).—Funds appropriated for P.L. 480 are used to finance all sales made pursuant to agreements concluded under the authority of Title I. The Corporation may serve as the purchasing or shipping agent, or both, for the importing country or may award contracts for freight agent services on behalf of the Corporation to handle shipping of commodities under P.L. 480.

Sales are made to developing countries as defined in section 402(4) of P.L. 480 and must not displace expected commercial sales (secs. 403(e) and (h)). Agreements are made with developing countries for delivery in accordance with the terms of the agreement.

When U.S.-flag vessels are required to ship commodities under this title, the Corporation will pay the difference between U.S.-flag rates and foreign-flag rates. In limited cases, full transportation costs to port-of-entry or point-of-entry abroad may be included along with the cost of the commodity in the amount financed by CCC in order to ensure that U.S. food aid can reach the most needy recipients.

Financing sales of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms (title I).—Payment by recipient countries may be made over a period of not less than 10 nor more than 30 years with a deferral of principal payments for up to 7 years. Interest accrues at a concessional rate as determined appropriate.

Section 411 of P.L. 480 authorizes the President to waive payments of principal and interest under dollar credit sales agreements for countries that meet certain enumerated requirements. Such debt relief may be provided only if the President notifies Congress and may not exceed the amount approved for such purpose in an Act appropriating funds to carry out P.L. 480.

Financing sales of agricultural commodities for local currency, including for local currency on credit terms.—Payment by a recipient country may be made in local currencies for use in carrying out activities under section 104 of P.L. 480.

Foreign currency received in payment for credit extended may be used for payment of U.S. obligations abroad, subject to the appropriation process. The P.L. 480 program is reimbursed for the dollar value of currencies so used.

The financing of sales of agricultural commodities for local currencies on credit terms is subject to the same terms that are applicable to dollar credit financing.

Furnishing commodities to carry out the Food for Progress Act of 1985, as amended (title I).—Funds appropriated to carry out title I may be used to furnish commodities to carry out the Food for Progress Act of 1985. Such commodities may be furnished on credit terms or on a grant basis in order to assist developing countries and countries that are emerging democracies that have made a commitment to introduce and expand free enterprise elements in their agricultural economies.

Total title I agreements made since inception of the program to September 30, 1993 amount to $20,487.3 million cost value, including ocean freight for shipments on U.S. flagships. Major commodities are wheat, cotton, oils, rice and feed grains. Payments received during the period amount to $7,350.6 million, of which $4,201.7 million was applied to principal and $3,148.9 million to interest. The following table reflects the composition of the combined appropriations (in thousands of dollars):

Commodities supplied in connection with dispositions abroad (title II).—Under title II, agricultural commodities are furnished to meet famine or other emergency relief needs, combat malnutrition, carry out activities to alleviate the causes of hunger, mortality and morbidity, promote economic and community development, promote sound environmental practices, and carry out feeding programs. Agricultural commodities are provided through governments for emergencies only, and for non-emergencies through public and private agencies, including intergovernmental organizations.

The Corporation is authorized to pay the costs of acquisition, packaging, processing, enrichment, preservation, fortification, transportation, handling, and other incidental costs incurred up to the time of delivery at U.S. ports. The Corporation also pays ocean freight charges, and pays transportation costs to points of entry other than ports in the case of landlocked countries, where carriers to a specific country are not available, where ports cannot be used effectively, or where a substantial savings in costs or time can be effected, and pays general average contributions arising from ocean transport. In addition, transportation costs from designated points of entry or ports of entry abroad to storage and distribution sites and associated storage and distribution costs may be paid for commodities made available to meet urgent and extraordinary relief requirements.

Through September 30, 1993, appropriations totaling $24,850 million were authorized. Any incidental sales proceeds and proceeds from loss, damage, and other claims are applied against costs to reflect a reduction in appropriation requests. The following table reflects the composition of the appropriations (in thousands of dollars):

The 156 National Forests, 20 National Grasslands, and 9 land utilization projects located in 44 States, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are managed under multiple use and sustained yield principles. The natural resources of timber, minerals, range, wildlife, outdoor recreation, watershed, and soil are utilized in a planned combination that will best meet the needs of the Nation, without impairing productivity of the land or damaging the environment. These management and utilization principles are recognized in the Multiple-Use Sustained-Yield Act of 1960 (16 U.S.C. 528-531).

Ecosystem planning, inventory and monitoring.—Provides for broad area planning, inventory and monitoring to support an ecological approach to management of National Forest System lands.

Operations and maintenance.—Provides for the delivery of goods and services associated with principle NFS programs, including recreation, wilderness, aquatic and terrestrial habitat, range, timber, watershed, road system operation and maintenance, and minerals; maintains the capability to manage in a manner consistent with ecological principles; and fulfills general land ownership responsibilities.

Capital investments.—Provides the infrastructure for managing National Forest System lands, including the construction of recreation and other facilities, trails and roads, and the enhancement of ecosystems and resource productivity through vegetative manipulation and structural improvements.

¹ Funding for pest suppression and cooperative fire suppression are not requested in this account for FY 1995. Funding is included for general administration activities to support the programs in this account.

Cooperative forestry assistance programs are designed to provide assistance to help manage, use and protect forest resources on State, urban, and private lands to meet domestic and international demands for goods and services. Assistance is provided to a wide-range of customers including all states, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands and the Trust Territory of the Pacific.

Cooperative forestry.—Improves the stewardship of non-Federal forest resources through direct technical assistance and financial incentives; emphasizes the comprehensive management of urban natural resources in cities, towns and communities; helps strengthen the economic base of rural communities through a more diversified use of the forest resource; and provides a collaborative approach to planning assistance and intergovernmental operations.

Education and land conservation.—Focuses on environmental management through education and progressive land use. The programs of Education and Land Conservation include technical and financial assistance and are available to all States, trusts and territories. The specific program elements include the Forest Legacy Program and Natural Resource Conservation Education. The Forest Legacy Program is designed to protect environmentally important forest areas through conservation easements. The Forest Legacy Program is a key incentive tool for forest stewardship on non-Federal forest lands. The Natural Resource Conservation Education Program helps people of all ages understand and appreciate our country's natural resources and how to conserve those resources for future generations.

¹ Includes funds previously appropriated to Forest Service Fire Protection and Emergency Forest Service Firefighting Fund accounts.

² Includes funding for law enforcement and pest suppression activities previously requested in the National Forest System and State and Private Forestry accounts. Also includes fire protection and firefighting activities and general administration activities to support the programs in this account.

Protection from fire and pest outbreaks is provided to National Forests and other Federal lands and, in cooperation with States, to non-Federal lands. Law enforcement on National Forest System lands is provided by the agency, and in cooperation with State and local officials.

Forest health management.—Protects forest resources and processed wood from insects and diseases on Federal and cooperative lands and, if necessary, provides for the emergency suppression of pests.

Fire management.—Provides on a discretionary basis for management, planning, and presuppression costs for the Forest Service's Fire Program. Helps State Forestry organizations to achieve fire protection efficiency through activities of national interest on non-Federal wildlands. Provides for the emergency and unpredictable aspects of the Forest Service's firefighting programs, wildfire suppression and emergency rehabilitation. Suppression includes the costs of emergency suppression of wildfires or for escalated presuppression funding based on abnormally extreme fire potential, and of monitoring natural fires permitted to burn within preestablished fire prescription criteria. Rehabilitation includes the costs incurred to prevent land degradation, resource losses, and other situations caused by damage by fire (e.g., reseeding, felling damaged trees).

Law enforcement operations.—Provides for the enforcement of laws and regulations on National Forest System lands by Forest Service agents and through cooperative agreements with State and local law enforcement agencies.

Recreationists who enjoy National Forest System lands will receive direct benefits from the revenues collected. Revenues collected in 1995 and prior years will be available for appropriation beginning in 1996.

Land and water conservation fund.—Recreation lands and interests are acquired within areas of the National Forest System, wilderness, wildlife and fisheries habitat management areas, and endangered species and other areas for public outdoor recreation purposes.

Acquisition of lands for national forests (Special Acts).—On the basis of various public laws and agreements with certain counties in Utah, Nevada and California, National Forest receipts, including the portions which would normally be paid to the State to benefit county roads and schools, are used by the Federal Government for purchase of privately owned lands within the National Forest boundaries to aid in the control of soil erosion and flood damage.

Acquisition of lands to complete land exchanges.—This is a special account for deposits made by State, county, or municipal governments, public school districts or other public school authorities for cash equalization of certain land exchanges. When appropriated, the funds are used to acquire similar lands suitable for National Forest System purposes in the same State as the National Forest lands conveyed in the land exchange.

The Working Capital Fund is a self-sustaining revolving fund that provides services to National Forests, to research experiment stations, to other Federal agencies when necessary, to State and private agencies as provided by law, and to persons who cooperate with the Forest Service in fire control and other authorized programs.

The forestry related supply and support services include:

Equipment Services.—The fund owns, operates, maintains, replaces, and repairs common use motor driven and similar equipment. This equipment is rented to administrative units, that is, National Forests, research experiment stations, and other units, and, in some cases, to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of operation, repair and maintenance, management, and depreciation. The rates also include an increment which provides additional cash which, when added to depreciation earnings and the residual value of equipment, provides sufficient funds to replace the equipment.

Aircraft Services.—The fund operates, maintains, and repairs Forest Service owned aircraft used in fire surveillance and suppression and in other Forest Service programs. The aircraft are rented to National Forests, research experiment stations, and in some cases to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of depreciation, operation, maintenance, repair, and improvements in the airworthiness of the aircraft. Aircraft replacement costs are financed from either appropriated funds or the Forest Service Working Capital Fund, or a combination of both.

Supply Services.—The fund operates the following common services:

Photo reproduction laboratories that store, reproduce, and supply aerial photographs, aerial maps, and other photographs of National Forest lands. The photographic reproductions are sold to National Forests, experiment stations, and others at cost.

Sign shops that manufacture and supply special signs for the National Forests for use in regulating traffic and as information to the public and other users of the National Forests. The signs are sold to National Forests and experiment stations at cost.

Subsistence services that prepare and serve meals to Forest Service crews working in areas where adequate public restaurant facilities are not available.

Seed supply services that provide tree seed for direct seeding or sowing in nurseries for the production of trees. Includes purchase or collection of cones, extraction of seeds, cleaning and testing, and storage and delivery. Operates in conjunction with tree nurseries.

Tree nurseries that operate forest tree nurseries and cold storage facilities for storage of tree seedlings. Tree seedlings are sold to National Forests, State foresters, and other co-operators at cost.

The administration of EDA's economic development assistance programs, including the direct loans and loan guarantee portfolio, is carried out through a network of headquarters and regional personnel.

During 1995, EDA will further improve its operations through functional realignments and enhancements to its automated data processing and management information system. Both actions are geared towards faster and better service delivery. In addition, EDA will expand its Office of Economic Conversion Information (OECI). The OECI serves as a national clearinghouse of information needed by communities, businesses and workers to anticipate, plan for and respond to defense downsizing and other economic dislocations.

Reimbursable program.—EDA provides both data processing and accounting services to other Federal agencies on a reimbursable basis. Funds received cover the cost of performing this work.

The programs of the Economic Development Administration (EDA) provide grants for public works and development facilities, other financial assistance, and the planning and coordination needed to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in economically distressed areas and regions. In 1995, EDA will continue to encourage development that maximizes the utilization of the Nation's manpower and capital, protects the environment, and alleviates the adverse impact caused by technological changes, structural decline, economic dislocation, and natural disasters.

Within the areas served, EDA strives to meet its program objectives through the use of a broad range of activities.

Planning grants.—Support the design and implementation of effective economic development policies and programs by local organizations.

Technical assistance grants.—Provide for local feasibility and industry studies, natural resource development and export promotion. At the national level, provide for studies of topical issues such as technology transfer and business financing. In addition, provide funding for a network of university centers that assist public bodies, nonprofit organizations and businesses to plan and implement activities designed to generate jobs and income in distressed areas.

Development grants.—Provide for infrastructure projects that foster the establishment or expansion of industrial and commercial businesses providing long-term employment to the unemployed and underemployed residents of communities experiencing high unemployment, low per-capita income, and outmigration.

Economic adjustment grants.—Provide a package of assistance tools to help communities counteract either a gradual erosion or a sudden dislocation of their local economic structure.

Research, evaluation and demonstration.—Funds are used to support studies of national and regional economic and industrial trends that will increase knowledge about the causes of economic distress and approaches to alleviating such problems.

Defense economic investment.—Provides communities impacted by DOD downsizing with a full range of flexible economic development tools for developing integrated plans to adjust to economic dislocations and further assist in the implementation of these plans.

Trade adjustment assistance.—In 1995, this program is proposed for termination.

The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

In FY 1995, EDA will leverage private financing as a source of economic development funding by targeting its development guaranteed loan program towards those firms whose financing needs exceed the SBA limitation on dollar value and which are located in urban areas and, therefore, excluded from the FmHA program. Particular emphasis will be put on assisting firms impacted by defense adjustment, natural disasters, and government actions such as enactment of the North America Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

The activities of this appropriation provide for the collection, compilation, and publication of a broad range of current statistics dealing with economic, demographic, and social data. The Economic Statistics Initiative will make fundamental improvements in the quality of economic statistics.

Current surveys and statistics.—

Current economic statistics.—The business statistics program provides current information on sales and related measures of retail and wholesale trade and selected service industries. The 1995 initiative for business statistics will improve and expand service statistics by improving the measurement of services purchased by industry, expanding corporate financial data, and extending the coverage of the Service Annual Survey to include industries previously included only in the quinquennial Census of Service Industries.

Construction statistics reports are provided on significant construction activity such as housing permits and starts, value of new construction, residential alterations and repairs, and quarterly price indexes for new single-family houses. The 1995 initiative will improve coverage of non-residential additions and alterations; and will improve the quality of industrial plant construction data. The initiative will also allow the development of new methodologies to measure construction price changes.

Manufacturing statistics survey key industrial commodities and manufacturing activity, providing current statistics on the quantity and value of industrial output. The Census Bureau will produce monthly Census reports relating to cotton fiber and soybean, cotton, and other fats and oils—M22P, M20J, and M20K reports. This 1995 initiative will allow us to expand coverage of pollution abatement investment and operations costs survey to include nonmanufacturing industries. This will give us a more comprehensive measure of environmental spending by businesses. General economic statistics provide a Standard Statistical Establishment List (SSEL) of all U.S. business firms and their establishments, uniform classification data, annual county business data, and corporate financial data. The purpose of this 1995 initiative is to develop a restructured industry classification system and create a commodity classification system for the United States.

Foreign trade statistics provide for publication of monthly, cumulative, and annual reports on the quantity, shipping weight, and dollar value of imports and exports, by mode of transportation, detailed commodity category, customs districts, and country of origin or destination. The Census Bureau will improve commodity classifications for comparability and other activities in support of the Trade Act of 1974.

Government statistics reports are published annually regarding the revenue, expenditures, indebtedness and debt transactions, financial assets, employment, and payrolls of State and local governments. The Census Bureau provides quarterly information on State and local tax revenue on the national level by type of tax and governmental level, and provides information on financial assistance programs of the Federal government.

Current demographic statistics.—Household surveys provide information on the number, geographic distribution, and the social and economic characteristics of the population.

Population and housing analyses provide current demographic reports on the geographic distribution and on the demographic, social, and economic characteristics of the population, as well as current estimates and future projections of the population of the United States, and special analyses of demographic, social and economic trends. International statistics provide estimates of population, labor force, and economic activity, including spatial distribution, and analyses concerning aspects of demographic policies, economic policies, and trends for various countries. The Census Bureau compiles housing statistics on the Nation's housing inventory and provides national and regional estimates of housing vacancy rates.

Survey development and data services.—The Statistical Abstract that the Census Bureau prepares annually summarizes Government and private statistics of the industrial, social, political, and economic activities of the United States. The Bureau conducts general research on survey methods and techniques to find ways of improving the efficiency, accuracy, and timeliness of statistical programs. Data systems development provides advanced data capture, data processing, and information retrieval technology to meet Census Bureau program requirements.

Reimbursable program.—The Bureau of the Census undertakes work for specific individuals, groups or organizations, State and local governments, and other Federal agencies when it is more appropriate or efficient to have the work performed by the Bureau. Significant work includes collection of labor force and consumer expenditure data for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, national education and health program data for the Department of Education and the Department

This appropriation funds legislatively mandated censuses of economic and demographic areas once or twice each decade and other authorized periodic activities.

Economic statistics programs.—

Economic censuses.—The economic censuses provide data on manufactures, mineral industries, retail and wholesale trade and service industries, construction, and transportation. The censuses are taken every fifth year, covering calendar years ending in two and seven. FY 1995 is the sixth and last year in the 6-year cycle of the 1992 Economic Census. The focus of activity for FY 1995 will be on the publication and dissemination of information collected and processed in the previous two years. FY 1995 is also the first year in the 1997 Economic Census cycle. We will begin planning activities related to design and content of forms for 1997.

Census of governments.—This census collects State and local government data on taxes, tax valuations, governmental receipts, expenditures, indebtedness, and number of employees. This census is taken every fifth year for calendar years ending in two and seven. FY 1995 is the first year in the 5-year cycle of the 1997 Census of Governments. This year marks the onset of planning for the government organizations, taxable property values, government finance and employment parts of the 1997 Census of Governments.

Census of agriculture.—This census covers the agricultural sector of the economy. FY 1995 is the final year in the 6-year cycle for the 1992 Census of Agriculture and the first in the cycle for the 1997 census. In 1995 for the 1992 census, we will concentrate on completing the additional tabulations and reviews for remaining publications. In 1995 for the 1997 census we will concentrate on identifying the specific data user needs for both the state-side census and the outlying areas and we will begin evaluating and testing possible changes to the census.

Demographic statistics programs.—

Intercensal demographic estimates.—This program provides updated population estimates for general purpose governmental units for use in the equitable allocation of funds by various Federal programs and for other purposes.

1990 Decennial census.—In FY 1995, there are no funds requested for the 1990 Decennial census.

Decennial Census.—During FY 1995, our proposed activities include completing the Research and Development Program for the 2000 census, and initiating a low level of effort for the 2010 census; beginning operational planning for the 2000 census; and conducting a full Census Test in order to select by December 1995 the features that will be used for the decennial census. Both the 2000 research and development program and 1995 Census Test are organized around fundamental features of the census. Computer Assisted Survey Information Collection (CASIC) will maximize the use of automation and telecommunications to integrate collection, capture, and processing of data.

Sample redesign.—This program provides for revisions to the statistical samples used for monthly, quarterly and annual household surveys.

Geographic support.—This activity provides the geographic information and capabilities needed to correctly assign all houses, farms, and businesses to a census block and to determine which blocks belong in each of the numerous governmental units and statistical areas used to report the results of each census and sample survey. This is done using the Topologically Integrated Geographic Encoding and Referencing (TIGER) System and a geographically-linked permanent file of residential addresses; the Master Address File (MAF). The requested funds provide for: developing additional or refined software that is portable among all computers operating under open systems standards; collecting new boundaries for counties and large places that had changes since January 1, 1994; performing, in cooperation with the U.S. Postal Service (USPS), automated matches of address information held by the USPS as well as state and local governments; beginning activities required to locate the new streets and addresses identified in the address matches; entering the updated street, address, and boundary information into the TIGER System and the MAF to accomplish the geographic assignment and classification tasks; and, sharing the updated street and boundary information with the U.S. Geological Survey and others as part of the Census Bureau's obligation to support the Federal Geographic Data Committee and the National Spatial Data Infrastructure.

Data processing systems.—The mid-decade modernization initiative will allow us to plan and implement a Census Bureau-wide processing architecture guided by open systems principles. It will ensure that newly developed applications are portable between different platforms.

Economic analysis.—The objective of this activity is to provide a clear picture of the state of the economy through the preparation, development, and interpretation of the economic accounts of the United States. The principal programs of the Bureau of Economic Analysis (BEA) are:

National economic accounts.—The national accounts, summarized by the gross domestic product (GDP), provide a comprehensive, detailed view of the U.S. economy.

International economic accounts.—The balance of payments accounts provide a comprehensive, detailed view of economic transactions between the United States and foreign countries. Work on international investment consists of the preparation, development, and analysis of estimates of U.S. direct investment abroad and foreign direct investment in the United States.

Regional economic accounts.—Regional economic measurement consists of the preparation, development and analysis of gross State product and of total and per capita personal income by region, State, metropolitan area, and county. Regional economic analysis includes the preparation of regional impact analyses and economic projections for States and local areas.

Analysis of economic trends.—This work consists of the preparation of analyses of the economic situation and outlook, the publication Survey of Current Business, and the provision of information services.

Develop and acquire source data.—This work consists of upgrading the economic accounts by the development and acquisition of new and improved source data.

Policy support.—ESA headquarters supports the Secretary, Under Secretary for Economic Affairs, and other Government officials in interpreting the state of the economy, and on matters relating to economic policy.

The Economic Information Infrastructure Initiative.—Our measurements of economic performance are perforated with gaps in areas of vital importance, areas of public policy concern are poorly measured if measured at all, the data gathering system imposes too great a workload on both the agencies that gather the data and the firms that provide it, and the resulting product goes underutilized in a world in which timely and accurate information is often the key to competitive business success. The Economic Information Infrastructure Initiative is a set of initiatives aimed at improving the nation's economic information infrastructure in four fundamental ways:

Strengthen the Existing Program by Making Our Statistics More Accurate and Dependable.—We must strengthen our understanding of the economy by improving the timeliness and accuracy of the National income and product accounts and related data, and by improving our measurement of such areas as services and international trade.

Launch New Initiatives That Reflect New Concerns.—The issues of concern to both business and public policy change continually, but our measurement of the economy and questions that our statistical system answers lag behind. Issues such as environmental accounting, international competitiveness, and research and development and health policy must be incorporated into the statistical system while preserving the integrity of its existing measurements.

Re-engineer the Data-Gathering Process.—The way in which economic information is collected and utilized can be redesigned to improve its reliability, and reduce both the cost of collecting it and its burden on business respondents, by consolidating surveys, providing greater scheduling notice, and using more extensive electronic reporting.

Make Information a Competitive Asset.—Business and the general public can have widespread access to ESA's information using electronic technologies that build on existing data dissemination programs and that will link them to the "electronic highways" of the future.

Reimbursable.—ESA provides economic and statistical data and analyses on a reimbursable and advance payment basis to other Federal agencies, individuals, and firms requesting such information. Funds received for these services cover the cost of performing this work.

The activities of the International Trade Administration in the Department of Commerce are intended to develop the export potential of U.S. firms in a manner consistent with national security and foreign and economic policy and to promote an improved trade posture for U.S. industry.

Trade development.—The trade development program assesses the competitiveness of various U.S. industries; performs trade and investment analyses in support of industry programs and trade policy; and conducts export promotion programs directed toward industry sectors. In 1995, Trade Development will continue the Market Development Cooperator Program. In 1995, an increase is requested that will enable ITA to implement a strategic international marketing program to increase U.S. exports of environmental technology, products and services. An increase is also requested that will enable Trade Development to create a modern, downsized replacement for the current Trade Policy Information System. A decrease is proposed to eliminate the Consortia of American Businesses in the Newly Independent States (CABNIS) program.

International economic policy.—This program develops regional and multilateral economic policies; provides marketing services directly and through the Foreign Commercial Service which assist U.S. businesses in expanding exports; identifies long range trade and investment problems and develops remedial strategies. The Department will continue to provide policy support to the U.S. Trade Representative on issues related to the North American Free Trade Agreement. In 1995, an increase is requested to aid in building American market share and aid the transition to market democracy in the Newly Independent States.

Import Administration.—Import Administration investigates antidumping and countervailing duty cases to ensure compliance with applicable U.S. statutes and administers certain other statutory programs relating to imports and foreign trade zones.

U.S. and foreign commercial service.—The U.S. and foreign commercial service counsels U.S. businesses on exporting through 47 District Offices in the United States and overseas offices in 69 countries. The program's goals are to increase the number of U.S. firms that export and the number of foreign markets to which they export; to provide export market information; to promote and facilitate participation of U.S. firms in trade shows; and to encourage and sponsor additional involvement by private, State and local organizations. Furthermore, in 1995, ITA will continue its counseling services to U.S. businesses through its automated Commercial Information System (CIMS) that will provide customized and proactive export assistance to U.S. businesses. An increase of $11,293,000 is requested to improve delivery of export promotion assistance to U.S. firms and expand opportunities for U.S. exporters in critical growth markets, trade finance and defense production conversion.

Reimbursable program.—This account includes receipts for services rendered to other Federal agencies and receipts received on a cost recovery basis from private entities for trade events and export information services.

The activities of the Bureau of Export Administration are designed to enforce U.S. export trade laws consistent with national security, foreign policy, and short supply objectives. The program strives to achieve a balance between the interests of U.S. exporters, the U.S. economy and U.S. national security requirements.

Management and policy coordination.—The management and policy coordination program controls the development, analysis, coordination, and consolidation of policy initiatives and responses within the Bureau of Export Administration.

Export administration.—The export administration program assures that export activity is consistent with national security and foreign policy requirements. In FY 1995, resources are requested to fund the Trade Promotion Coordinating Committee (TPCC) initiatives that will reform the Federal export control system.

Export enforcement.—The export enforcement program detects and prevents the illegal distribution of controlled U.S. goods and technical data in violation of the export administration provisions of the U.S. Code. Responsibilities also include enforcement of prohibitions against participating in unsanctioned boycotts against countries friendly to the United States. In FY 1995, an increase is requested to fully fund BXA's existing enforcement field offices and maintain an effective level of enforcement activities.

Industrial resource administration.—The industrial resource administration program ensures the availability of industrial resources for national defense under the authority of the Defense Production Act.

The Minority Business Development Agency (MBDA) has the lead role in the Federal Government of coordinating all minority business development programs. The mission of the Agency is critical to the national economy. The Agency was created to promote private and public sector investment in the development of competitive minority businesses in this country.

Enterprise Development.—This activity provides management and technical assistance to minority Americans and firms seeking to establish or expand their businesses through 100 Minority Business Development Centers (MBDCs) located throughout the country. The services which these centers provide are business planning; marketing to help sell the firms' products and services; financial planning to assure adequate financing for the business ventures; loan and business packaging to acquire capital to finance the business activities; bid and proposal estimating and preparation, especially for construction projects; and management counseling to operate personnel, accounting and inventory supplies; plus a variety of other services. An increase is requested to support the Minority Enterprise Growth Assistance (MEGA) Centers to provide an increased level of services in support of job creation.

Resource Development.—This activity provides for the indirect business assistance programs conducted by MBDA. These programs focus on increasing minority business access to capital, management and market resources; expanding business information and business services through trade associations; promoting and supporting the mobilization of resources of Federal agencies and State and local governments at the local level; and assisting minorities in entering new and growing markets. An increase is requested to expand the Minority Business Opportunity Committees (MBOC) program to increase procurement opportunities. MBDA also requests an increase to address the problem of access to capital from the perspectives of equity and debt financing and surety bonding.

Advocacy, Research, and Information.—Within this activity, MBDA provides advocacy efforts, a research program, and information systems for formulating policy decisions and for reducing information barriers to improve the participation rate of minority-owned businesses in the U.S. economy. An increase is requested to fund a study on Commercial Lending Market discrimination to guide and assist in implementing public policy.

Advance Short-Term Warnings and Forecast Services.—These programs provide for improved accuracy and lead time of warning and forecast services and advanced environmental services. Funding is proposed for (1) completing ongoing weather service modernization activities; (2) executing a well formulated program of research, observation, and prediction enhancements designed to reduce the Nation's vulnerability to environmental events of all kinds; and (3) developing a dissemination system designed to allow other agencies and the private sector to take full advantage of these forecast improvements.

Build Sustainable U.S. Fisheries.—These programs support NOAA's statutory responsibilities under the Magnuson Fishery Conservation and Management Act and provide for the management and wise use of the Nation's fishery resources. The Administration proposes to charge users of its Fisheries management programs, fees which will be directed at rebuilding U.S. fisheries and maintaining the productivity of healthy fisheries. Activities include (1) assessing the status of fishery resources; (2) advancing fishery predictions; (3) managing marine fisheries for economic growth; (4) ensuring adequate compliance with fisheries regulations; (5) reducing wasteful bycatch; and (6) accelerating the growth of U.S. Aquaculture.

Recover Protected Species.—These programs support NOAA's statutory responsibilities under the Marine Mammal Protection Act and the Endangered Species Act and provide for the management, conservation and recovery to optimal levels, of the Nation's marine mammals and endangered species. Activities include (1) reducing the impact of human activity on protected species; (2) assessing the status of protected species; and (3) developing and implementing conservation and recovery plans and plans to avoid future listings of endangered species.

Coastal Ecosystems Health.—These programs provide for: (a) support for state coastal management objectives; (b) assessments of population change, economic conditions, land use patterns, contaminant sources, habitat requirements, and natural resources at risk in coastal ecosystems; (c) development of comprehensive regional information systems, including geographic information systems; (d) monitoring at the ecosystem level; (e) development of the understanding to construct predictive and management support models at the ecosystem level; (f) establishing a biodiversity baseline in coastal ecosystems and special protected areas; (g) determining the threats from aquatic non-indigenous species and develop control protocols; (h) implementation of a national outreach effort to transfer new technologies and information on ecosystem valuation, restoration, and monitoring to the public and private sectors; and (i) active translation and dissemination of new information to the public. In addition, fees will be charged to support the operation of the National Marine Sanctuaries.

Education and Human Resources.—These programs support NOAA's stewardship of the environment role through development of its human resources; and through educational, dissemination and outreach activities. Activities include science education at the undergraduate and graduate levels as well as post-doctoral appointments in NOAA laboratories; teacher training and materials development to enhance science skills of K-12 teachers; and science outreach to the general public.

Environmental Technology.—These programs seek to strengthen the U.S. environmental technology industry by expanding the technology base of U.S. firms, and expanding the scientific basis for development of marine biotechnology and its application in management of natural resources. The activities in marine biotechnology include the use of molecular biomarkers for stock assessment, the application of biotechnology to the enhancement of commercial aquaculture programs, the development of new commercial production methods and the development of new natural products for industrial materials.

Modernize Navigation and Positioning Services.—Included within this activity are six programs: Nautical Charting, Coastal Mapping, National Water Levels, Coastal Circulation, Aeronautical Charting, and the National Spatial Reference System. Their objectives are to: provide accurate and timely marine, coastal, and aeronautical data in various map and chart formats; to increase the efficiency and safety of marine and air transportation; and to maintain the National Geodetic Reference Systems for accurate geographic positions, elevations, and gravity values for national defense and space activities, mapping and charting, infrastructure maintenance, public works, land information systems, and Earth science investigations. In addition, fees will be charged to support the production of aeronautical charts.

Implement Seasonal-to-Interannual Climate Forecasts.—Seasonal and longer range temperature and precipitation predictions are prepared on an experimental and operational basis in conjunction with research to provide a better understanding of climate change and variability. Activities include the development of global coupled air-ocean numerical models and development of oceanic and atmospheric observational and data systems as well as data centers to archive scientific and operational data.

Predict and Assess Decadal-to-Centennial Change.—This program provides science-based advice to governmental and industrial decisionmakers on actions affecting decadal-to-centennial changes in the regional and global environment. The activities focusing on the global environment include research on long-term global change including, the role of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gasses on climate, the detection of climate change, the development of global models for understanding and prediction of changes, and the understanding and reduction of stratospheric ozone depletion. These activities are part of the U.S. Global Change Research Program. The regional research addresses understanding of atmospheric chemistry and processes including acid precipitation.

Environmental Information.—This program provides for greatly improved dissemination of NOAA information products and services. It builds on NOAA planning and design efforts currently underway, including: implementing enhanced network connectivity, through the Internet and as part of the National Information Infrastructure; modernizing NOAA's existing data management system; exploiting advances in emerging high performance computing technology; developing new pilot data dissemination systems; improving NOAA's base of expertise in advanced computing and communications; and developing, together with other Federal agencies, a Governmentwide environmental information dissemination system.

This fund is financed through collections from foreign vessel owners who fish within the U.S. Exclusive Economic Zone. Collections to the fund are used by the Secretary of Commerce to pay the salaries of observers and program support personnel and the costs of data management and analysis of the observer program. The observers collect scientific information on the foreign catch and monitor compliance with the provisions of the Magnuson Fishery Conservation and Management Act (MFCMA) of 1976 as amended. This fund supports the Build Sustainable U.S. Fisheries strategic initiative.

Prior to the enactment of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990, a portion of Office operating costs were recovered through user fee revenues. This Act directed a significant increase in user fees to the point where the Office is now fully fee funded. Legislation to reauthorize PTO programs in 1995 will be proposed.

Fees in 1994 are estimated to be $518.69 million of which $14.67 million will be held in reserve in the Patent Surcharge Fund and $571,439 million in fees are estimated to be collected in 1995.

An Information Technology Plan provides for the automation of the majority of the functions and operations of the Office in the 1990's. The 1995 funds provide for the continued implementation of the Automated Patent and the Automated Trademark Systems. Automation resources are distributed among the four activities of the Office.

Patent process.—Applications are examined to determine inventor entitlements to a patent for the claimed invention. Patent application examination also includes quasi-judicial review in appeal and interference proceedings, and the publication of issued patents.

The 1995 increases support programs (1) to maintain reduced patent application pendency time while maintaining the quality of issuing patents, (2) to broaden the quality review program to focus on examiner actions and (3) to begin implementing the Patent Application Management (PAM) module of the Automated Patent System.

Key patent application workload and performance data (excluding design patent applications) are:

Trademark process.—This activity provides for the examination of applications to determine whether the statutory criteria for the Federal registration of the trademark or service mark have been met. When the criteria are met, a registration is printed and issued to the applicant. Examination also includes inter partes proceedings involving oppositions, cancellations, and interferences. The 1995 funding allows for reduced pendencies in trademark examination and anticipates a continued increase in the receipt of applications.

Information dissemination.—Materials and services which assist in the examination of patent and trademark applications and in the transfer of technological information are provided in this activity and include art documents; maintenance of a scientific library and public search rooms; copies of patents, trademark registrations, and official documents; assignment of patent and trademark rights; and administration of printing.

The 1995 increases provide funds for the processing of increased volumes of work; to expand user access to products and services; to maintain paper search files; to enhance classification services; and to expand the availability of search tools to patent examiners; and to develop connectivity to the High Speed Computing and Communications Technology for eventual public access to PTO's technology information and search services.

Executive direction and administration.—Management and administration of the Office functions are supported in this activity. Funds in 1995 will provide for the executive leadership of the Office; for the provision of legal services, including litigation and the registration of patent attorneys and agents; for the development and implementation of intellectual property policies and proposals in the U.S. and abroad; for the provision of administrative, personnel, financial, and planning services throughout the Office; for the implementation of the Office's Information Technology Plan; and for the acquisition and management of leased space.

The Technology Administration serves as the premier civilian technology agency working with U.S. industry to address competitiveness. This is done by advocating integrated policies for maximizing the impact of technology on economic growth, by carrying out technology development, diffusion and commercialization programs with U.S. industry, and by disseminating technological information.

The Under Secretary for Technology Policy provides leadership and direction for the Technology Administration's three component parts: the Office of Technology Policy, the National Institute of Standards and Technology and the National Technical Information Service.

The Salaries and Expenses appropriation covers funding for the Office of the Under Secretary and the Office of Technology Policy (OUS/OTP). As summarized in the Commerce Advanced Civilian Technology Strategy, Commerce's civilian technology goals are: development of advanced technologies in partnership with the private sector; rapid commercialization and deployment of new technologies; building a 21st century technological infrastructure; and leadership in both government and the private sector. OUS/OTP will contribute to completion of these goals through: Development of policies to increase industry access to foreign science and technology through programs such as the Japan Technology and Manufacturing Technology Fellowship Programs, and International Science and Technology Agreements (such as Israel and Korea); Development of strategies to enhance U.S. manufacturing competitiveness through leadership and participation programs such as the Partnership for the New Generation of Vehicles, the National Science and Technology Council and its Committee on Industry and Technology and coordinating the U.S. role in the Intelligent Manufacturing Systems; and Development of policies to enhance specific industry competitiveness and promote technology development and commercialization through activities such as completion of the Biennial Report to Congress on Federal Technology Transfer and promotion of government-industry partnerships. Two year funds shall be used to increase flexibility in entering into contractual agreements.

This appropriation supports the extension of technology to American industry and fosters the development of broad-based high-risk technology by industry.

Extramural programs.

Advanced technology program.—The ATP is the focus of a national effort to help accelerate the commercialization of broad-based, high risk technologies with significant commercial potential. The ATP is a cost-shared partnership program which provides financing to U.S. businesses and joint R&D ventures to assist them in improving their competitive position. The program will focus on particular technology areas chosen in cooperation with industry and having significant potential for stimulating U.S. economic growth.

Technology transfer and outreach.—This includes both the Manufacturing Extension Partnership (MEP) program and the Quality program. The MEP program emphasizes NIST's role in transferring developed technologies to small- and medium-sized business through Government-industry partnerships and extension services and by improving the competitiveness of existing American business. The Quality program extends U.S. competitiveness through quality technology development, information transfer, and administration of the Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award.

The National Telecommunications and Information Administration (NTIA) is the principal executive branch adviser to the President on domestic and international communications policy. Additionally, it manages the Federal Government's use of the radio frequency spectrum and performs extensive research in telecommunications sciences.

Domestic and international policies.

Domestic policies.—In 1995, NTIA will continue to develop and advocate policies to improve and expand domestic telecommunications services and markets. NTIA will place special emphasis on emerging technologies, including advanced video and radio applications, and will develop and advocate policies in the common carrier and mass media fields to offer increased consumer choices. Particularly, NTIA will conduct policy and technical research which will assist the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) in developing effective regulations and standards.

International policies.—In 1995, NTIA will continue to develop and advocate policies for the advancement of U.S. interests in the international telecommunications regulatory and policy areas. NTIA will place particular emphasis on the U.S. preparatory process for the ITU's 1995 World Radio Conference. NTIA will continue its advocacy of U.S. interests in other international and regional fora affecting telecommunications standards, infrastructure development and market access. NTIA also will represent executive branch concerns related to international telecommunications regulation before the FCC. In coordination with the Department of State and the FCC, the agency will continue to discharge statutory responsibilities for oversight of the Communications Satellite Corporation (COMSAT) in its role as U.S. Signatory to INTELSAT and INMARSAT.

Spectrum management.

Spectrum plans and policies.—In 1995, NTIA will continue to manage the government's spectrum with the advice of the Federal agencies; resolve spectrum management problems among the Federal agencies; conduct long-range strategic Federal and private sector spectrum planning in coordination with the FCC; prepare for, participate in, and implement the results of international, regional, and national conferences addressing spectrum allocation and utilization. NTIA will also maintain the openness program by which the private sector can obtain information on the Federal government's use of the spectrum, comment on spectrum sharing issues and provide information on new innovative radiocommunications developments.

Spectrum management, analysis and operations.—In 1995, NTIA will continue to authorize frequency assignments, review and certify spectrum for proposed Federal radio communications systems, conduct frequency band studies and operate the necessary automated data facilities to support the above.

Telecommunication sciences research.

Spectrum research and analysis.—In 1995, NTIA will continue to conduct applied research and analysis as a basis for developing spectrum use concepts and models that lead to more efficient use of the radio spectrum, and electromagnetic wave and propagation models that lead to improvement in radio systems performance.

Systems and networks research and analysis.—In 1995, NTIA will assess and develop domestic and international technical performance standards to facilitate competition in telecommunication products and services.

The National Endowment for Children's Educational Television (NECET), a grant program established by Title II of the Children's Television Act of 1990, awards grants to support the creation and production of television programming specifically directed toward the development of "fundamental intellectual skills" in children. In doing this, the Endowment's efforts are intended to supplement the children's educational programming funded by other government entities and the private sector. Administration of the NECET is to be overseen by a ten-member Advisory Council on Children's Educational Television, appointed by the Secretary.

The public broadcasting facilities program awards grants to noncommercial entities for the planning and construction of broadcasting facilities throughout the U.S. and its territories. PBFP has three major responsibilities: (1) to extend public broadcasting services to as much of the population as possible; (2) to improve the facilities at public broadcasting stations; (3) to increase public broadcasting services and facilities available to, operated by, and owned by minorities and women. Funding from PBFP also supports the Pan-Pacific Educational and Cultural Experiments by Satellite [PEACESAT] program which provides educational, medical and cultural telecommunications services to the Pacific island nations.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE—MILITARY

MILITARY PERSONNEL

ACTIVE FORCES

These appropriations finance the personnel costs of the active duty forces of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force. Changes in financial requirements are primarily related to military personnel strengths. In addition, these appropriations finance the future retirement benefits of the current active forces. While most of the entitlements financed by these appropriations are set by statute, the estimates reflect continuing efforts to improve management including implementation of audit recommendations, improved management of military travel, and prudent use of bonus programs, and other pay programs.

The numbers of active duty military personnel provided for are shown in the following table.

The estimates reflect continuing efforts to improve management efficiency including, for example, more economical use of training and recruiting resources as well as the undertaking of active missions at lower costs.

The number of National Guard and Reserve personnel estimated to participate in the Selected Reserve training programs and the number of full-time active duty military personnel provided for are summarized in the following table.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps program provides training for reserve and regular officer candidates who have enrolled in the course while attending a college at which an ROTC unit has been established. College graduates who satisfactorily complete the advanced course of the program are commissioned and may be ordered to active duty for a minimum of 3 years.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps Vitalization Act of 1964, as amended, authorizes a limited number of scholarships for ROTC students on a competitive basis. Successful candidates for the scholarships generally serve a minimum period of 4 years on active duty upon graduation and appointment as a commissioned officer. A number of scholarship recipients will fulfill their entire obligation in the Reserve components.

The Armed Forces health professions scholarship program provides a source of active duty commissioned officers for the various health professions.

The numbers of commissioned officers graduated from these programs are summarized below:

Included are amounts for pay of civilians, contract services for maintenance of equipment and facilities, fuel, supplies, and repair parts for weapons and equipment. Financial requirements are influenced by many factors, including the number of aircraft squadrons, Army and Marine Corps divisions, installations, military strength and deployments, rates of operational activity, and the quantity and complexity of major equipment (aircraft, ships, missiles, tanks, et cetera) in operation.

PROCUREMENT

The procurement appropriations of the Department of Defense finance the acquisition of weapons, equipment, munitions, spares, and modification of existing equipment.

Procurement continues in 1995 for the Army's ATACMS tactical missile system, Hellfire antitank missiles, SINGARS radios, UH-60 Blackhawk helicopters and improved conventional munitions. Upgrade programs are also included for the M-1 tank and Bradley Fighting Vehicle. Long lead funding begins for the Longbow Apache helicopter.

Modernization of our naval forces in 1995 includes continued procurement of the F/A-18 air combat fighter, T-45 trainer aircraft, remanufacture and upgrade of AV-8B vertical/short takeoff and landing close air support aircraft. Procurement of Trident strategic missiles and conventional Tomahawk missiles continues. Procurement of DDG-51 guided missile destroyers continues and full funding is included for a nuclear powered aircraft carrier.

Significant Air Force programs include procurement of AMRAAM air-to-air missiles, C-17 airlift aircraft, E-8B ground surveillance aircraft, satellites, space launch vehicles, and the Tri-Service Standoff Attack Missile (TSSAM).

In 1995, procurement of tactical missile defense systems continues under the central management of the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization in recognition of the increased worldwide tactical ballistic missile threat.

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for those appropriations that are available for obligation for more than one year. In 1995, it presents, by budget activity, the value of the program requested for the life of the multiple-year appropriation.

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

Programs in this title support modernization through military research, exploratory development, fabrication of technology-demonstration devices, and development and testing of prototypes and full-scale preproduction hardware. This work is performed by industrial contractors, Government laboratories and facilities, universities and nonprofit organizations. Research and development programs are funded to cover annual needs.

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for that appropriation. Funds for each fiscal year are available for obligation for a two-year period beginning on the first day of that fiscal year.

The 1995 program provides for major technology and development efforts. These include Science and Technology programs emphasizing the Technology Reinvestment Project and economic growth initiatives, stealth technologies, the B-2 Bomber, the Ballistic Missile Defense Initiative, Armored System Modernization Program, advanced anti-tank weapons, RAH-66 Helicopter, the F-22 Advanced Tactical Fighter, the F/A-18 E/F improved multirole fighter aircraft, Joint Advanced Strike Technology (JAST) program, C-17 transport aircraft, development for a new design, lower cost submarine, the V-22 tiltrotor aircraft, the Tri-Service Standoff Attack Missile, and new space based communications systems. The Department will continue to emphasize technology efforts that ensure that the Nation will maintain a technological advantage when compared to potential adversaries. Dual-use technologies will receive particular emphasis. Development and evaluation of technologies will be pursued through prototyping with further development and production based on identifiable threats and maturity of the technology.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for those appropriations that are available for obligation for more than one year. In 1995 it presents, by budget activity, the value of the program requested for the life of the multiple-year appropriations, with comparable amounts in 1993 and 1994, which has been adjusted to reflect proposed rescissions.

The budget authority for military construction programs for the Armed Forces, both Active and Reserve, shown in the individual schedules of this title is summarized in the following table:

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

	($ in thousands)
	1993 actual	1994 est.	1995 est.
Active Forces	1,524,937	2,241,966	1,368,359
Reserve Forces	608,198	351,769	171,154
Interservice activities	2,420,565	3,369,648	3,509,887
Total	4,553,700	5,963,383	5,049,400

The Military Construction programs are intended to provide facilities required as a result of new weapon systems entering the inventory including naval vessels, to support chemical demilitarization and other high priority initiatives. The program continues initiatives to improve living and working conditions, reduce operating costs, increase productivity, and conserve energy by upgrading or replacing facilities which have become functionally obsolete or can be made more efficient through relatively modest investments in improvements. Also included in this request are resources required to realign and close bases consistent with the Base Closure Acts of 1989 and 1990, and the expected land revenues which partially offset the one-time costs of closures.

FAMILY HOUSING, DEFENSE

These appropriations finance all costs associated with construction, improvements, operations, maintenance and leasing of all military family housing. The program contains initiatives to reduce operating costs and conserve energy by upgrading or replacing facilities which can be made more efficient through relatively modest investments in improvements.

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for those appropriations that are available for obligation for more than one year. In 1995 it presents, by budget activity, the value of the program requested for the life of the multiple-year appropriation, with comparable amounts in 1993 and 1994.

Federal FundsGeneral and special funds:*FAMILY HOUSING, ARMY

The National Defense Stockpile is planned and operated under the authority of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stockpiling Act. The purpose of the Stockpile is to decrease or preclude a dangerous and costly dependence by the United States upon foreign sources for supplies of strategic and critical materials in times of national emergency. The quantities of the materials stockpiled as required by the Stockpiling Act are to be sufficient to sustain the United States for a period of not less than three years during a national emergency situation that would necessitate a total mobilization of the economy for a sustained conventional global war of indefinite duration.

The National Defense Stockpile Transaction Fund provides for the financing of acquisition and upgrading of strategic and critical stockpile materials, and all related expenses such as transportation, development of specifications, testing, quality studies, and relocations of materials.

Section 662 of the Defense Authorization Act for 1992 and 1993, Public Law 102-190, established the Voluntary Separation Incentive (VSI) Fund to help reduce and reshape military personnel levels during the force drawdown. VSI provides annual payments to selected active-duty Service members with more than six but less than 20 years of service who leave the service voluntarily. The Act provided that after January 1, 1993, all voluntary separation incentive payments shall be made from the fund. The fund is financed through: (a) actuarially-determined Government contributions from the Department of Defense personnel appropriations to cover the unfunded liability and the present value of future benefits for those separating, and (b) interest on the investments. The Act requires that the total present value costs of VSI benefit payments be deposited in the fund by September 30, 1999 when the authority to approve VSI benefits ends. The authority to make VSI payments is effective only as provided in Appropriations Acts. This authority is contained in section 8073 of the FY 1994 Defense Appropriations Act and is proposed to be made a permanent provision in the Act for FY 1995.

The National Security Education Act of 1991 established a program for undergraduate scholarships, graduate fellowships, and grants to educational institutions in critical area studies, foreign languages and other international fields.

The Act will enhance the quality of U.S. educational programs in these fields and, by making it possible for more U.S.-citizen students to study abroad, develop a pool of potential U.S. Government employees with knowledge of particular cultures, languages, and governments. The program is to be carried out by the Secretary of Defense in consultation with a National Security Education Board. The Board will establish the criteria for awards.

Undergraduate scholarships. Scholarships will be awarded to permit students to study for at least one academic semester in foreign countries that are critical countries.

Graduate fellowships. Fellowships will be awarded to permit students to pursue critical languages, area studies, and other international fields.

Grants to educational institutions. Grants will be awarded to permit institutions of higher learning to establish and/or improve programs in critical foreign languages, area studies, and other international fields.

Other. The activity covers all costs of administering the program. The activity includes: costs for reimbursable personnel; program development and promotion; selection; awards; monitoring student progress; and job placement for students who have a service agreement.
