BUREAU OF INDIAN AFFAIRS—ContinuedPublic enterprise funds—Continued*REVOLVING FUND FOR LOANS—Continued

This fund is used to assist Indians in acquiring livestock, farm, and other equipment and in establishing tribal business enterprises (25 U.S.C. 470, 471, 631). This fund and miscellaneous tribal funds provide the only source of loans for the great majority of Indians who cannot borrow from ordinary commercial credit sources because of their low economic status and lack of bankable security.

Budget program.—As of June 30, 1960, the principal of the fund amounted to $16.5 million, consisting of $13.8 million appropriated, and $2.7 million cattle settlements. Cattle settlements are payments made by the Indians for breeding stock furnished by the Government generally prior to establishment of this fund.

Operating results.—The deficit is a result of expenses exceeding revenues and includes net writeoffs of loans receivable amounting to $188 thousand.

BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

The Bureau plans, constructs, and operates facilities to irrigate lands, furnish domestic water supplies, and develop related hydroelectric power and flood control in the 17 western States and Alaska.

The enactment of legislation to establish a revolving fund for the financing of the reclamation program is recommended in the Budget Message.

Appropriations to the Bureau are made from the general fund and special funds. The special funds are (a) the Reclamation fund, largely derived from certain irrigation and power revenue; receipts from the sale, lease, and rental of public lands; and certain oil and mineral revenue; (b) the Colorado River Dam fund, derived from the revenue of the Boulder Canyon project; and (c) the Colorado River development fund, derived from transfers of money from the Colorado River Dam fund. The estimates of appropriation for the budget year are summarized by source, as follows (in thousands of dollars):

The total appropriation request of $290.3 million represents an increase of $4.7 million compared with the estimated current year appropriations and an increase of $30.1 million compared with the preceding year.

Current authorizations:

For carrying out the functions of the Bureau of Reclamation as provided in the Federal reclamation laws (Act of June 17, 1902, 32 Stat. 388, and Acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto) and other Acts applicable to that Bureau, as follows:

GENERAL INVESTIGATIONS

For engineering and economic investigations of proposed Federal reclamation projects and studies of water conservation and development plans and activities preliminary to the reconstruction, rehabilitation and betterment, financial adjustment, or extension of existing projects, including not to exceed $300,000 for investigations of projects in Alaska, to remain available until expended, [$4,893,000] $5,850,000, of which [$3,943,000] $4,800,000 shall be derived from the reclamation fund and $500,000 shall be derived from the Colorado River development fund: Provided, That none of this appropriation shall be used for more than one-half of the cost of an investigation requested by a State, municipality, or other interest: Provided further, That [$200,000] $250,000 of this appropriation shall be transferred to the United States Fish and Wildlife Service for studies, investigations, and reports thereon as required by the Fish and Wildlife Coordination Act of 1958 (72 Stat. 563-565) to provide that wildlife conservation shall receive equal consideration and be coordinated with other features of water-resource development programs of the Bureau of Reclamation. (43 U.S.C. 391; 43 U.S.C. 485; 16 U.S.C. 661; Public Works Appropriation Act, 1961.)

Note.—Estimate for 1962 excludes $244 thousand for activities transferred in the estimates to "General administrative expenses." The amounts obligated in 1960 and 1961 are shown in the schedule as comparative transfers.

$1 million will be expended in 1962. The general fields in which studies will be conducted include fundamental properties of cement and concrete; hydraulics; soil mechanics; evaporation reduction; rock properties; soil stabilization and drainage; and weed control. This research will complement the regular research work carried on in the domestic laboratories of the Bureau of Reclamation and other Government agencies.

In addition to travel and administrative costs to be funded with foreign currencies, it is estimated that $100 thousand will be provided from other Bureau appropriations for these purposes, of which $50 thousand will be expended in 1962.

2. Relation of costs to obligations.—Year-end balance of unpaid undelivered orders in 1962 is $3,500 thousand.

The program consists of advance planning, design, and construction of authorized projects, operation and maintenance during construction of completed features of projects, and rehabilitation of existing facilities. Investigations and advance planning for units of the Missouri River Basin are included under that project.

Work will be continued in 1962 on 27 projects and 19 units and divisions of the Missouri River Basin project started in prior years and construction will be initiated on 5 new projects with estimated costs totaling $141 million. Three of the five new projects are designed primarily to provide municipal and industrial water; two will furnish supplemental water for lands now inadequately supplied and also serve some new acreage. Six projects and 2 units of the Missouri River Basin project will be completed in 1962. The program also includes rehabilitation and betterment work on 12 projects. During the year facilities for 91,500 acres of irrigated land and 108,500 kilowatts of new power generating capacity will be completed.

The following workload table summarizes the program goals and accomplishments.

The Bureau operates and maintains the power-generation and transmission facilities, and generally the storage dams and reservoirs, of completed projects. Where necessary, irrigation works are operated and maintained until the water users are able to undertake the responsibilities. In 1962 a total of 44 projects and 23 Missouri River Basin units and divisions will be operated and maintained for irrigation, power, municipal and industrial water supplies. Of these, 21 projects and 5 Missouri River Basin units have power facilities. Energy sales from power operations are as follows:

Fiscal year:	Kilowatt-hours of energy (millions)	Gross energy sales (thou- sands)
1960 (actual).....	26,841	$68,754
1961 (estimate).....	31,473	75,721
1962 (estimate).....	32,231	78,974

Commercial power is sold to wholesale customers such as municipalities, Rural Electrification Administration-financed cooperatives, private utilities, and other Government agencies. These revenues are deposited in the reclamation fund, the Colorado River Dam fund, and the general fund.

The programs for 6 power projects include $3,769 thousand in 1962 for the purchase of power and wheeling. The establishment in 1961 of a net billing procedure for certain of these power transactions between the Federal Government and non-Federal utilities precludes the need for an additional $2,523 thousand for this purpose in 1962.

Provision is also made for flood control operations on certain projects, soil and moisture conservation operations, and halogeton control on public lands under jurisdiction of the Bureau.

¹ Includes $25 thousand in 1960 and 1961 for general administrative activities transferred in the estimates in 1962 to "General administrative expenses."

This fund defrays expense of operating the power-generation and transmission facilities of the Fort Peck project, Corps of Engineers—Civil, and emergency expenses to insure continuous operation (16 U.S.C. 833).

Budget program.—Funded operating costs will be $97 thousand less than the current year. The decrease in capital outlay in 1962 is due primarily to the completion of construction of the Fort Peck-Dawson County 230-kilovolt transmission line in 1961.

5. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources as reflected in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

Financing.—The operation of the Fort Peck project power and transmission facilities is financed by this fund and capital outlays for transmission facilities by advances from the appropriation Construction and rehabilitation. The accompanying statements consolidate the financing from the Continuing fund for emergency expenses, Fort Peck project, Montana, and Construction and rehabilitation.

Operating results.—Net income is estimated at $1.8 million for 1962, an increase of $0.5 million over the 1961 estimates. Earnings in excess of current operating needs are retained so as to maintain a continuing emergency fund of $0.5 million. The balance is paid into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts toward amortizing with interest that part of the Government investment allocated to power generation and transmission. Such payments totaled $1.8 million in 1960 and are estimated at $1.5 million in 1961 and $2 million in 1962.

² The Fort Peck project and the Missouri River Basin project interchange power in their marketing operations. Rather than exchange funds for settlement on the balance of the interchange, the revenues of each project are covered into deposit funds pending distribution to the appropriate fund or receipt account.

The fund defrays the cost of construction, operation, and maintenance of the Colorado River storage project and participating projects, a comprehensive basinwide development which will make possible the control and utilization of the water resources of the Upper Colorado River Basin. The storage project will regulate and conserve the flows of the Colorado River and its major tributaries through holdover storage in large reservoirs permitting increased consumptive use of water in the upper basin and the production of hydroelectric power. Excess revenue from the sale of power will be applied to repayment of costs allocated to irrigation which are beyond the ability of the water users to repay. The participating projects consist of irrigation and municipal and industrial water supply developments.

Construction costs of the storage project and participating projects are financed through appropriations advanced to the fund. Project revenue will be credited to the fund and will cover costs of operation and maintenance. Revenue in excess of these costs will be utilized to repay project costs allocated to power, municipal and industrial water supply, and irrigation.

Budget program—1. Operation and maintenance.—The Vernal unit of the Central Utah project is scheduled to move into operational status in 1962. The Bureau of Reclamation will operate the facilities of the unit with funds advanced by the water users.

2. Colorado River storage project.—Work will continue on four units of the storage project with award of the prime contract for the Blue Mesa Dam and powerplant on the Curecanti unit scheduled during the year. Construction of the Glen Canyon-Curecanti and Flaming Gorge-Oak Creek transmission lines will continue. Studies of future lines and discussion of possible wheeling arrangements with utility companies are underway. If satisfactory wheeling arrangements cannot be made, funds will be requested to initiate construction of necessary additional transmission lines. Advance planning will be continued on five participating projects.

3. Participating projects.—During 1962 construction will be completed on the Paonia project and only minor clean-up work will remain on the Hammond project and the Vernal unit of the Central Utah project. Work will continue on three of the participating projects.

7. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources and applicable adjustment as reflected in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

	1959 actual	1960 actual	1961 estimate	1962 estimate
Selected resources at end of year:

Financing.—The total cost of the authorized storage units and participating projects is estimated to be $1,058 million of which $249.3 million has been appropriated. The 1962 appropriation request consists of $60.7 million for the basin fund, an increase of $2 million over 1961. A balance of $748.0 million remains to complete the authorized work.

Operating results.—During the construction period, only minor revenue is realized and expense is capitalized.

Budget expenditures will rise to $77 million in 1962 from $43 million in 1961.

The total investment of the Government in the fund is expected to reach $326 million by the end of 1962.

The Geological Survey provides basic scientific data concerning the water, land, and mineral resources of the Nation, supervises the development and production of minerals and mineral fuels on leased Federal and Indian lands, and enforces the provisions of the Connally Hot Oil Act.

1. Topographic surveys and mapping.—Topographic maps portray the elevation, shape, and position of the natural and manmade features of the earth's surface; provide information for (a) mineral, water, and other natural resources investigations, (b) engineering and industrial development, and (c) military and civil defense. This program will provide topographic maps for those areas where investigations and development are most imminent, and areas to which Federal agencies, as well as State and local agencies have assigned a high priority. In 1962 standard quadrangle maps for an estimated 90,000 square miles of previously unsurveyed or inadequately surveyed areas in the United States will be prepared, and an estimated 14,000 square miles of mapping will be revised. This added to areas surveyed in previous years will result in an approximate total of nearly 2 million square miles completed. Of this amount, at least 185,000 square miles of the older 15-minute maps must be replaced sooner or later by modern, standard-accuracy surveys and maps of the 7½-minute series.

2. Geologic and mineral resource surveys and mapping.—These investigations consist of field and laboratory research in economic geology, regional geology, and geologic processes. The products of the investigations provide basic data essential to (a) the discovery, conservation, and utilization of our natural resources, (b) modern engineering construction and water resource development, and (c) the solution of numerous problems that impinge upon regional industrial development. Over the next decade new geologic knowledge and maps will have increasing importance not only in the exploration, development, and appraisal of the Nation's mineral resources, but also in the fields of public health and safety, and in the vigorous exploration of space and oceans. Basic research in theoretical and experimental geochemistry and geophysics, which must go hand-in-hand with mapping and mineral investigations, will provide new concepts and discoveries in geologic science. The traditional environment of work for geologists is in the field—mapping and studying the rocks, minerals, and ores of the earth. Acceleration in scientific techniques over the past decade has opened up exciting and potentially rewarding areas of new geologic research, both in the field and in the laboratory.

3. Water resources investigations.—This program includes determinations of the flow, stage, and sediment discharge of rivers, reservoir contents; locations and safe yields of underground waters; the chemical quality and temperature of waters; and the availability of water supplies as related to present and future demands. Research is conducted to increase the fund of knowledge concerning the occurrence of water, its movement, and its interaction with the environment. Investigations are planned specifically to obtain water information needed to solve major water problems relating to distribution, supply, chemical quality and sediment load, pollution, floods, and variability. New work proposed for 1962 will consist largely of studies of the hydrology of various types of areas, such as arid zones, coastal areas, limestone and glacial terranes, and research in hydrologic principles.

4. Soil and moisture conservation.—This program provides land management agencies of the Department with basic hydrologic and geologic data needed for maintaining and improving the productive value of public lands.

5. Conservation of lands and minerals.—Prospecting, development, and production of minerals and mineral fuels on leased Federal, Indian, and outer Continental Shelf lands are regulated. Federally owned and controlled lands are classified as to their mineral and water power values. The Federal Petroleum Board conducts investigations in support of State conservation laws to prevent the interstate shipment of contraband oil. In the current year approximately 210,000 leased properties, oil wells, and mines in 40 States are supervised. These leases are expected to produce oil, gas, and other minerals, valued at $1.25 billion, and render royalty returns of about $152 million. The States which produce the minerals receive 37½% of the royalties; the Reclamation fund, 52½%; and 10% is retained in the U.S. Treasury. In 1962 it is anticipated that the workload will aggregate 228,000 leases, wells, and mines, and the production and royalty values will reach $1.38 billion and $167 million, respectively. The classification functions provide the foundation for the system of public-land administration prescribed by mineral leasing and land disposal laws. Owing to the unprecedented rate of development of the Nation's oil and gas resources, increased demands are being made upon the Survey for mineral classification services and for the accelerated classification and restoration of lands previously withdrawn. In 1962 it is expected that some 108,000 technical classification reports will be completed.

Reimbursable obligations.—Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are from States and municipalities for making cooperative topographic and geologic surveys and water resources investigations (43 U.S.C. 48), proceeds from sale to the public of copies of photographs and records (43 U.S.C. 45), proceeds from sale of personal property (40 U.S.C. 481(c)), and reimbursements from permittees and licensees of the Federal Power Commission (16 U.S.C. 797). Reimbursements from other Federal agencies (31 U.S.C. 686) are for special purpose mapping and investigations performed at the request of the financing agency, much of which contributes to the basic objectives of the Geological Survey.

The unobligated balance carried forward each year includes $400 thousand cash advance to pay the expenses of reimbursable work pending collection from cooperating agencies. This advance is not available for obligation.

¹ Includes capital outlay as follows: 1960, $1,218 thousand; 1961, $1,136 thousand; 1962, $1,374 thousand.

Provision is made for conserving, evaluating, and developing mineral resources. A supplemental appropriation for 1961 is anticipated under Proposed for later transmission.

1. Bituminous coal.—Scientific research and engineering investigations are carried out on the chemical and physical properties of coal and its mining, preparation, combustion, carbonization, and gasification. Research will be conducted on the development of a stationary coal-burning gas turbine to provide a method of increasing the efficiency of steam-generating equipment. Laboratory research is conducted to find feasible methods for converting coal to fluid fuels for better utilization in the Nation's machines. Coal samples are analyzed; efficiency of coal-mining methods is evaluated; and economic statistical studies are performed. Research is conducted to discover causes of explosions in coal mines and to improve methods of preventing explosions. Tests are conducted on explosives and blasting devices to determine their permissibility for use in mining operations.

2. Anthracite coal.—Research is conducted to develop new and improve present uses for anthracite; improved mining and preparation methods are developed; and basic economic data are prepared.

3. Petroleum, natural gas, and oil shale.—Research is conducted to conserve these resources by improving the processes of recovery and utilization. Research is coordinated with work done by other Government agencies, educational institutions, and industry. Economic and statistical information is analyzed to provide a factual basis for industry operations and Government policy. Research is conducted on oil shale and shale oil to determine the composition of the various products, to test the applicability of those products to different uses, and to determine the basic chemistry and physics of the refining processes.

4. Ferrous metals.—This includes (a) research on use of low-grade ores, conservation of raw materials, and improved methods for steelmaking; (b) investigation of manganese occurrences and use of low-grade manganese materials; (c) investigation of domestic chromite deposits; (d) studies to lower production costs of offgrade ores; (e) research on use of alloying metals to produce iron and steel products and high-temperature alloys; and (f) the dissemination of data on the production and distribution of these metals.

5. Nonferrous metals.—This includes (a) investigations and development of new sources of copper, lead, and zinc, recovery of tin and mercury from low-grade ore, and new uses for arsenic; (b) research in metallurgy to develop economic and efficient methods for processing complex low-grade and currently submarginal materials; (c) research on resources and utilization of light metals; (d) development of basic information on properties and uses of ores and metals for realization of potential military and civilian uses; (e) development of information on domestic reserves of rare and precious metals and materials; (f) research to improve the quality of rare metals and related products; (g) research to develop economic processes for the recovery of various rare and precious metals; and (h) economic and statistical studies on nonferrous metals.

6. Nonmetallic minerals.—The Bureau's program on nonmetallic minerals is primarily designed to develop adequate supplies of various minerals that are in short supply or must be imported and are therefore vulnerable in emergencies. These problems of nonmetallic mineral supply are attacked by (a) field investigations of mineral deposits; (b) laboratory research on the beneficiation of nonmetallic minerals; (c) research on the development of synthetic minerals as substitutes; and (d) research to develop more efficient methods of using our available nonmetallic minerals.

1. Inspections, investigations, and rescue work.—The objectives for 1962 are to: (a) Inspect, at least once annually, every active coal mine regularly employing more than 14 men underground, take action in accordance with the Federal Coal Safety Act to require compliance with its mandatory provisions, and make recommendations to gain compliance with its voluntary provisions; (b) inspect annually, or as necessary, underground coal mines regularly employing less than 15 men, and all strip mines, and report on observed hazards with appropriate corrective recommendations; and (c) conduct investigations of serious accidents and make recommendations to reduce working hazards, safeguard the health of workers, and promote efficiency in the mineral industries. The Bureau encourages accident-prevention education through safety organizations, exhibits, safety-film productions, demonstrations, instruction by Bureau personnel in accident prevention, and first-aid and mine-rescue methods. Research is conducted on the support of mine roof and control of overburden, and various machines and devices are tested for use in mines and plants where explosive gas may be liberated or explosive atmospheres encountered. The Bureau also conducts field and laboratory studies on ventilation of mines, methods of allaying coal and mineral dusts, and safe blasting practices.

This fund is used for the production, conservation, and sale of helium and for the development of helium properties and reserves. Production is primarily for the Department of Defense and the Atomic Energy Commission which reimburse the fund for products received. Other Federal agencies and non-Federal consumers also buy helium for medical, scientific, and commercial uses.

Budget program.—The Helium Act amendments, approved September 13, 1960, provide for the conservation of helium now going to fuel markets as a noncombustible component of some natural gases from the southwestern part of the United States. To accomplish the conservation program, up to 12 new helium plants will be needed.

Authority to borrow $15 million is being requested to carry out the helium conservation program. In addition, a supplemental of $12 million is proposed for later transmission. Private industry is encouraged to finance, construct, and operate these plants under the amended legislation. However, if private industry does not indicate a willingness and capability to perform in a reasonable time, the Department will undertake the program as a Government operation.

Helium produced by private industry will be purchased by the Government under long-term contracts. Payments required under contracts and agreements for acquisition, processing, transportation, or conservation of helium, helium-bearing natural gas or helium-gas mixtures are proposed to be limited to $60 million in any one year.

Funds borrowed will be used in the early years of the program to supplement the income received from sales of helium. The 1962 estimate of revenue is based on a sale price sufficient to cover costs of production and to provide for future repayment of Government investment, including accrued interest.

Operating results.—The investment of the Government in the helium production facilities has been on a non-interest-bearing basis. This investment becomes interest bearing as of March 1, 1961, at which time it is estimated to be $40,965 thousand. Future investments will be interest bearing.

The total Government investment at the end of 1962 is estimated at $56,640 thousand, an increase of $28,175 thousand from 1960. This increase is primarily due to an increase in retained earnings, estimated at $14,415 thousand which will accrue during 1962 as a result of the establishment of the new sales price structure.

NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

The Service administers national parks and other areas of unusual historic, scenic, scientific, or recreational character in the interest of their preservation as well as their public use and makes studies of the recreation resources of the United States in cooperation with Federal, State, and local agencies.

1962 will be the sixth year of the 10-year program, mission 66, to provide personnel and facilities needed to serve the ever-increasing number of visitors to park areas, and at the same time preserve park values. Visitation to parks is expected to increase from 66 million in 1960 to 83 million in 1966.

Current authorizations:

MANAGEMENT AND PROTECTION

For expenses necessary for the management and protection of the areas and facilities administered by the National Park Service, including protection of lands in process of condemnation; and for plans, investigations, and studies of the recreational resources (exclusive of preparation of detail plans and working drawings) and archeological values in river basins of the United States (except the Missouri River Basin); [$18,575,000] $21,790,000. 1. Management of park and other areas.—The estimate contemplates the administration of 193 park and other areas comprising about 24½ million acres located in 42 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. The increase proposed is to provide for (a) administration of 4 new areas for which funds are not now provided and additional funds for 1 new area partially provided for in the 1961 appropriation; (b) wage rate increases; (c) leasing commercial communication facilities; (d) operation of newly constructed mission 66 facilities; (e) operating costs brought about by increased visitor use and extension of operating season; (f) more adequate coordination of protection functions; and (g) for increasing the manpower of the U.S. Park Police force. Actual and estimated visitors and revenue receipts follow (in thousands):

1960 estimate.....	71,381	5,867
1961 estimate.....	72,711	6,077

2. Forestry and fire control.—Forests, brushland, or grassland of over 11 million acres are protected from fire, destructive insects, diseases, and other preventable damage. The increase proposed is to provide for (a) leasing of commercial communication facilities; (b) management supervision in regions 1 and 3; (c) operation of newly constructed mission 66 facilities; and (d) to strengthen existing organizations and facilities. A supplemental appropriation for 1961 is anticipated under Proposed for later transmission.

3. Soil and moisture conservation.—The 1962 program will permit corrective measures on 20 of the most critical problem areas.

4. Park and recreation programs.—Studies are made of the park, parkway, and recreation potentialities of the United States and its territories, frequently in cooperation with Federal, State, and local agencies; technical and scientific services and guidance essential to management, protection, and public use of the park areas are provided in the fields of biology, geology, history, and archeology. Surveys are made of historic American buildings and sites for the purpose of acquiring and preserving data relative thereto. Investigations are made to determine whether agencies receiving surplus Federal real property with a recreational potential are utilizing those properties in conformity with terms of the transfer agreements. Studies and investigations are carried out leading to establishment and acquisition of rights to sources of water supply. The increase proposed is to provide for: (a) a recreational survey in the State of Hawaii; (b) for contract work in connection with the programs for the nationwide recreation planning and cooperation with States and other agencies; (c) expansion of water resource studies to keep pace with the expanded mission 66 construction programs; (d) for additional general expenses for the land use studies carried on at the regional office level; and (e) printing of reports already completed and to complete studies of aboriginal sites and structures under the historic sites survey program.

5. Concessions management.—There are approximately 175 major concessioners operating in the parks and other areas. Contracts are negotiated or permits issued; rates are established; services to be rendered are determined and records are audited. The increase proposed is to provide for management supervision in regions 1 and 2 offices; augment general expense funds for the existing management staff, and more adequate travel funds for the audit staff operating servicewide.

6. Relation of costs to obligations.—Year-end balances of unpaid undelivered orders are as follows: 1959, $658 thousand; 1959 (adjusted), $634 thousand; 1960, $614 thousand; 1961, $614 thousand; 1962, $614 thousand.

2. Acquisition of lands and water rights.—Approximately 423,000 acres of privately owned lands are located within the areas administered and should be acquired to facilitate public use of these areas. Status of land acquisition present and projected is as follows (in acres):

Rights to water must be obtained, frequently by purchase, in many of the areas for use of visitors and employees, and for fire protection.

3. Parkways.—The obligations for this activity are against the carryover balance of prior appropriations authorized by the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1952. The program authorized by title 23, U.S. Code is obligated against the contract authority provided by that title and is shown under the appropriation Construction (liquidation of contract authorization).

4. Roads and trails.—Obligations scheduled for 1961 represent the amount provided during 1960 for construction of parking areas for the District of Columbia Stadium and a small amount against the program authorized by the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1952. The 1962 program provides for recreational developments in the Upper Colorado River Storage project. The program authorized by title 23, United States Code, is obligated against the contract authority provided by that title and is shown under the appropriation Construction (liquidation of contract authorization).

5. Undistributed costs.—These costs represent end-of-year variations in clearing accounts involving operations such as automotive shops, corrals, and facilitating services. The costs are distributed to the various activities served based on predetermined rates. Such rates are studied and adjusted at least once annually to provide for adequate operations.

6. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources as reflected in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

1. Management of fishery resources.—A total of 94 fish-cultural stations are operated for the propagation of food and game fishes. This activity also covers administration of the Black Bass Act encompassing shipments of all fishes across State boundaries.

2. Extension and training.—This activity covers (a) technical assistance to Federal, State, and other public or private entities in the management of sport fishing and fish propagation; and (b) cooperative development, with the States, of fish-stocking programs for major public streams and lakes.

3. Fishery research.—This activity covers studies of nutrition and diseases of salmon, trout, and warm-water fish; improved methods of fish husbandry; scientific management of public water areas for fishing; conservation of marine sport fishes; and effects of environment and pesticides on fish. Direct appropriations for this activity are supplemented by funds of the permanent account Federal aid in fish restoration and management. In 1960, these supplementary funds totaled $106 thousand. The 1961 estimate is $112 thousand and the 1962 estimate is $50 thousand.

4. Administration of wildlife resources.—This activity covers: (a) The operation and maintenance of 277 wildlife refuges, consisting of more than 17 million acres, for the conservation of migratory waterfowl and the preservation and propagation of rare birds and mammals. Of the total, 3.5 million acres are primarily for waterfowl. Direct appropriations for this subactivity are supplemented by funds of the permanent accounts Management of national wildlife refuges and Migratory bird conservation account (the latter through 1960). In 1960, these supplementary funds totaled $3,212 thousand. The 1961 estimate is $1,089 thousand and the 1962 estimate is $1,003 thousand. (b) Enforcement of the Migratory Bird Treaty and Lacey Acts for the protection of migratory birds and regulation of interstate and foreign shipments of game; and migratory game bird surveys. Direct appropriations for the enforcement function are supplemented by funds of the permanent accounts Management of national wildlife refuges and Migratory bird conservation account (the latter through 1960). In 1960, these supplementary funds totaled $1,046 thousand. The 1961 and 1962 estimates are $382 thousand. Direct appropriations for migratory game bird surveys are supplemented by funds of the permanent accounts Migratory bird conservation account and Federal aid in wildlife restoration through 1960. These funds totaled $231 thousand. (c) Administration of Alaska game law which was eliminated in 1961 because of transfer of certain functions to the State of Alaska, effective January 1, 1960, and a shift of financing of continuing Federal functions to other Bureau activities. A supplemental appropriation for 1961 is anticipated under Proposed for later transmission.

5. Control of predatory animals and injurious rodents.—Predatory animals and injurious rodents are controlled on public lands. Technical information and supervision of cooperative programs are provided to protect livestock, game, poultry, forage crops, forests, structures, foods, and feeds from destruction by harmful animals.

6. Wildlife research.—Research is conducted on migratory birds and in wildlife management and conservation practices. Wildlife research units are also maintained in cooperation with Wildlife Management Institute and land-grant colleges at 16 locations to give technical training in wildlife management, conduct research, and demonstrate improved management practices. Direct appropriations for this activity are supplemented by funds of the permanent accounts Federal aid in wildlife restoration and Migratory bird conservation account (the latter through 1960). In 1960, these supplementary funds totaled $817 thousand. The 1961 estimate is $73 thousand and the 1962 estimate is $53 thousand.

7. Soil and moisture conservation.—This activity covers long-range work on 47 national wildlife refuges in combating erosion and depletion of nearly 2.2 million acres of soil.

8. River basin studies.—This activity covers studies of the effects on fish and wildlife resources of power, navigation, irrigation, drainage and other water-use projects of Federal agencies and licensees under the Federal Power Act. Recommendations are made for measures to protect and improve these resources. Direct appropriations for this activity are supplemented by funds of the Migratory bird conservation account (through 1960). In 1960, these supplementary funds totaled $206 thousand.

This fund is used for making loans to segments of the fishing industry unable to obtain commercial loans on reasonable terms for financing and refinancing operations, maintenance, replacement, repair, and equipment of fishing gear and vessels, and for research into basic problems of fisheries. Loans bear interest of 5% annually and will mature in not more than 10 years. Loan commitments against the fund are made on approval of the Secretary of the Interior, and referred to the Small Business Administration for closing in the field and rendering loan servicing functions required (70 Stat. 1119).

Budget program—Loan commitments.—It is estimated that this program can be carried through 1962 without additional financing. As of August 31, 1960, a total of 795 applications amounting to $24.6 million had been received. Of these 432 loans totaling $10.5 million had been approved and 208 applications amounting to $6.1 million had been declined.

Administrative expenses.—These expenses include processing of loan applications, closing of loans, and collection of repayment and interest.

Financing.—An appropriation of $10 million was made in 1957 to provide initial capital for the fund. An additional $3 million was appropriated for 1960. Additional financing is provided from repayments and interest on outstanding loans.

Operating results.—The existing deficit is expected to be eliminated by future interest earnings.

The population exclusive of Saipan and Tinian is approximately 75 thousand. The Department of the Interior is responsible for administration of all the territory except the islands of Saipan and the Tinian group which are under Navy jurisdiction as critical defense areas.

An air service between Guam and district centers is provided by three Government-owned amphibious aircraft which are operated under contract with a private concern. A supplemental appropriation for 1961 is anticipated under Proposed for later transmission.

Loans are made to local trading companies for purchase of Micronesian products for resale in the world market, purchase of trade goods for resale in Micronesia, and purchase of vessels (55 Stat. 151).

The 1956 appropriation language for the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands made available for 1 year $500 thousand of the proceeds from liquidation of the Island Trading Company of Micronesia for establishment of this fund. This amount was later reduced to $300 thousand and $200 thousand no longer required was returned to Treasury. The availability has been continued since 1956, and it is proposed to extend it again for 1962.

Interest charged is 4% per annum on the unpaid balance.

The Virgin Islands Corporation promotes the economic development of the U.S. Virgin Islands. Appropriations not to exceed $11 million are authorized to be made to a revolving fund based on annual budgets submitted by the Corporation. An appropriation of additional funds as grants to finance non-revenue-producing activities and to reimburse the Corporation for operating losses is also authorized (48 U.S.C. 1407).

Budget program—1. Loan program.—Loans are made to aid farmers in agricultural diversification and to improve livestock production; provided such loans are not available from other Federal or private sources.

2. Sugar program.—The principal business of the Corporation is the growing of sugarcane, and the production and sale of raw sugar. A serious drought in 1960 resulted in a drastic decrease in sugar production. The estimates for 1961 and 1962 anticipate normal conditions during those years. Under Public Law 86-913, during 1960 power generating facilities were transferred from the Navy at a value of $301 thousand as approved by the Bureau of the Budget. 5. Miscellaneous revenue-producing activities.—These consist of (a) certain Navy properties transferred to the Department of the Interior under a revocable permit and managed by the Corporation; (b) leases and rentals of property; and (c) miscellaneous sales of supplies and materials.

6. Non-revenue-producing activities.—These include water and soil conservation programs, particularly the construction of dams and land clearance, and forest development program.

8. Water distillation.—The construction of a modern salt water distillation plant will be completed and will be ready for trial runs in 1962.

Administrative expenses.—Administrative expenses for the fiscal year 1962 will be held within a limitation of $180 thousand.

Financing.—In addition to the receipts from operations, appropriations are made for the Corporation as follows (in thousands of dollars):

	1960 actual	1961 estimate	1962 estimate
Grants for non-revenue-producing activities.....	130	130	130
Grants to restore impairment of capital.....	---	561	539
Total appropriation.....	130	691	669

The sum of $11 million has been authorized to a revolving fund for the Corporation, of which $9,051 thousand has been appropriated. Through fiscal year 1960, $6,513 thousand was withdrawn from these appropriations. There was also appropriated $1,225 thousand for the water distillation project. The budget program for 1962 calls for an appropriation of $881 thousand.

Legislation will be proposed to increase the authorization for appropriations in order to provide for additional capital outlay requirements, particularly for power facilities.

Operating results.—Substantial losses were incurred in the sugar program due to a serious drought in 1960, the second within the past 3 years. The power program was operated at a slight loss. The net loss for 1960 amounted to $539 thousand. This amount consists of a loss on sugarcane and sugar of $636 thousand; on power, $6 thousand; and $20 thousand on other activities. These losses are partially offset by a profit of $123 thousand on the sale of buildings. An appropriation of $539 thousand is requested to be applied against this loss. An analysis of the deficit account is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

This fund is derived from the earnings of the Railroad and used for operating and maintenance expenses as well as improvements and additions (48 U.S.C. 301-308).

Budget program.—1. Rail line program.—The railroad mainline extends 470.3 miles from Seward to Fairbanks and 12.4 from Whittier to Portage Junction. Branch lines, passing tracks, spurs, and yards total 194.8 miles. Operating cost is estimated to increase from $14.5 million in 1960 to $15.3 million in 1961 and 1962, respectively. The increase in 1961 and 1962 represents additional operating costs of producing projected revenue. Revenue is expected to increase from $14.1 million in 1960 to $14.7 million in 1961 and 1962, respectively, by reason of increases in tonnage due to continued military construction projects and economic growth of Alaska.

Capital outlay totaled $3.7 million in 1960 and is estimated at $3.5 million in 1961 and $1.3 million in 1962, principally for track maintenance and repairs and for purchase of rolling stock equipment.

2. Other programs.—These consist of costs mainly for sale of excess property and maintenance of rental properties in the amount of $0.3 million in 1960.

Operating results and financial conditions.—A slight decrease in the volume of traffic in 1960 was due to a drop in local military tonnage, although freight handled by the Railroad from other than local sources showed a gradual increase. The Alaska Railroad received for performing these freight and passenger services and other nonoperating programs an income totaling $14.5 million, an increase of 7.4% over the sum realized in 1959.

Retained earnings at year-end are estimated to be $50 thousand which is substantially lower than earlier forecasts and is principally attributable to operational losses due to increases in depreciation rates and labor costs. Earnings are retained to meet future needs.

6. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources as reflected in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

2. Administrative review and appeals.—In addition to reviews of requests for pardon, these include the work of the Board of Parole and of the Board of Immigration Appeals. Recent legislation (indeterminate sentencing acts and the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act) has added review and determination functions regarding eligibility for parole and eligibility to hold office in labor unions. The following tables show the actual and projected workloads of these boards:

3. Administrative services.—The administrative division serves as the focal point for departmentwide management and administration. This division also furnishes administrative services to the smaller offices and divisions, including alien property activities, and for the larger divisions and bureaus when such functions can be more effectively and economically performed centrally. The Department's Library, containing over 223,000 volumes of legal and related reference material, is included within this activity.

4. Alien property liquidation and litigation.—The Office of Alien Property was transferred, effective July 22, 1960, into the Office of the Attorney General. Despite rapid progress in reducing the workload, a hard core of work remains which will go on indefinitely. Alien enemy property such as interests in business enterprises, real estate, securities, life insurance, and other tangible personal property vested during World Wars I and II is still being liquidated. Certain active properties are being managed pending their disposition. There were five of these properties operated in 1960; there will be two left at the end of 1961, and only one at the end of 1962. Claims against vested property are administratively adjudicated. Suits for the return of vested property are defended.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is the investigative branch of the Department of Justice and obtains evidence for use in civil litigation and prosecution of criminal violations of Federal law. It has primary responsibility for the internal security of the Nation. It assists all law enforcement agencies in identification and technical matters.

The appropriation request for 1962 totals $127.2 million. Broadened responsibilities occasioned by the enactment of new legislation, such as the Civil Rights Act of 1960 and the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959, will considerably add to the Bureau's workload commitments.

1. Security and criminal investigations.—This activity includes the Bureau's investigative responsibilities, the coordination and maintenance of the data gathered, and the maintenance of the Bureau's communications system. Data is disseminated to other Government agencies having an official interest in it. During 1960, the Bureau received 1,571,834 names for search through its files. An increase in name searches is anticipated.

The volume of fingerprint work is expected to increase. Sets of fingerprints on file on July 1, 1960, totaled 156,118,699.

3. Criminal and scientific laboratory.—The laboratory provides technical and scientific assistance to the Federal Bureau of Investigation and all duly constituted law enforcement agencies and other Federal agencies which desire to avail themselves of the service. During 1960, scientific examinations totaled 210,745, a new alltime high. The upward trend is expected to continue.

The Service administers and enforces the laws relating to immigration and naturalization. Recent legislation and rising volumes of international traffic have increased workloads.

1. Inspection for admission into the United States.—Control is maintained at border points, seaports, and airports over the entry of persons into the United States. Provision is made for the construction of 12 border stations under the joint Immigration and Naturalization Service—Bureau of Customs construction program.

This appropriation will provide for the custody and care of an average of 24,000 prisoners and the maintenance and operation of 30 institutions and the central office. An average of 5,028 employees will be employed with the funds in this appropriation. The medical care of prisoners is provided by the U.S. Public Health Service.

These include the costs of all food, clothing, education, custodial requirements, welfare services, release transportation, and related personal services. The funds required, exclusive of salary costs, are in direct relation to the estimated number of prisoners expected to be maintained in 1962 which is 24,000 at an estimated cost per man-day of $0.80. The average daily population for 1960 was 22,604 as compared to 21,891 in 1959. A supplemental estimate for 1961 is anticipated under Proposed for later transmission.

2. Maintenance and operation of institutions.—This activity includes administrative expenses, all utility services, operation of motor vehicles, the repair and maintenance of all buildings and facilities, and equipment replacements. The cost of personal services attributable to this activity is also included.

3. Medical services.—Funds are allocated to Public Health Service for the cost of medical, psychiatric, and technical services.

7. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources and applicable adjustment as reflected in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

Intragovernmental funds:

FEDERAL PRISON INDUSTRIES, INCORPORATED

The following corporation is hereby authorized to make such expenditures, within the limits of funds and borrowing authority available to such corporation, and in accord with the law, and to make such contracts and commitments without regard to fiscal year limitations as provided by section 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended, as may be necessary in carrying out the program set forth in the budget for the fiscal year [1961] 1962 for such corporation, except as hereinafter provided: (Department of Justice Appropriation Act, 1961.)

PRISON INDUSTRIES FUND

This is a wholly owned Government corporation under the Attorney General. A board of six directors appointed by the President controls its policies. Supervision is by the Director of the Bureau of Prisons, who has jurisdiction over industrial enterprises and vocational training programs in Federal penal and correctional institutions. Products manufactured by inmates are sold only to the penal institutions and to other Government agencies.

The corporation is authorized to establish and operate industries in Federal penal and correctional institutions and in disciplinary barracks under jurisdiction of the Department of Defense (18 U.S.C. 4121-4128). The basic objectives of the corporation are stated in the law as follows: "Such forms of employment shall be provided as will give the inmates of all Federal penal and correctional institutions a maximum opportunity to acquire a knowledge and skill in trades and occupations which will provide them with a means of earning a living upon release." In addition, Federal Prison Industries operates a placement service to assist released inmates to secure jobs.

Budget program.—During 1962 a new print shop will start at Lompoc, Calif., and a new furniture refinishing shop will begin operation at Petersburg, Va. There will then be a total of 54 shops and factories at 24 locations. This total includes the 49 establishments at 23 locations operated during 1960, and the 3 started as scheduled during the current year, as follows: a metal equipment factory at Terminal Island, Calif.; a glove factory at Sandstone, Minn.; a pillow factory at Chillicothe, Ohio. The following table indicates the scope of employment and training effort in the total prison program:

Operating results.—The corporation has always operated at a profit and is expected to continue to do so. Earnings of the fund pay expenses of the corporation, which include general administration and vocational rehabilitation. These two activities, although financed from fund receipts, are subject to annual appropriation limitations. Earnings in excess of operating requirements are paid into the U.S. Treasury. As of June 30, 1960, the cumulative earnings amounted to $62.5 million, of which $19.5 million had been retained as working capital and $43.0 million had been paid into the Treasury. Earnings are estimated to be $4.3 million in 1961 and $4.6 million in 1962. Payments to the Treasury are expected to be $3.0 million in 1961 and $3.4 million in 1962.

This appropriation covers activities necessary to the administration and enforcement of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959.

1. Reports and disclosure.—Report forms, instructions, and procedures are devised. Reports from labor organizations, union officers and employees, employers and labor relations consultants are examined. Reports are made available to the public. Comprehensive analysis is made of a limited number of reports to determine conformance to the law. It is estimated that 71,000 reports will be filed in 1961 and 74,000 will be filed in 1962. Research is conducted on union structure, procedures, financing, and other aspects of labor-management practices. Technical advice and guidance are provided. Disclosure and technical assistance functions are implemented mainly through regional and area offices.

2. Regulations and administrative determinations.—Questions of interpretation are studied; interpretations, and regulations are developed. Rules of procedure are developed for conducting hearings, making determinations, and supervising the conduct of elections. Administrative hearings are conducted and elections are supervised. Investigation reports are reviewed to determine adequacy for civil or criminal litigation. Determinations are prepared of violations cases arising under the trusteeship and election provisions of the Act.

3. Compliance and enforcement.—Investigations are conducted of complaints alleging violation of the law. An estimated 2,100 cases will be opened in 1962. Included in the program are special investigations in areas where strong evidence exists of persistent willful violations. Technical assistance is rendered concurrently with investigations. Compliance conferences are held in cases of nonwillful violations. These activities operate principally from the Bureau's field offices.

5. Relation of costs to obligations.—Year-end balances of unpaid undelivered orders are as follows: 1959, $0; 1960, $55 thousand; 1961, $55 thousand; 1962, $55 thousand.

1. Training promotion and service to industry.—Management and labor are encouraged and assisted to develop more highly skilled employees through the organization and improvement of programs of apprenticeship and training. Among 190 thousand plants and other industrial establishments, more than 200 thousand apprentices and other workers are in training. About 1,200 apprenticeship programs and 1,000 training programs are developed and installed annually.

2. Training research and technical services.—Information on skill requirements, training needs and technology, and apprenticeship labor standards is provided. Training aids and other techniques designed to increase effectiveness of apprenticeship and training are made available. About 50 pamphlets, articles, and reprints are published annually to call attention to skill needs of various industries, and to describe superior programs.

4. Relation of costs to obligations.—Year-end balances of unpaid undelivered orders are as follows: 1959, $8 thousand; 1960, $60 thousand; 1961, $10 thousand; 1962, $10 thousand.

BUREAU OF EMPLOYMENT SECURITY

As a result of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1960, necessary funds for administration of the employment security program of the Department of Labor and the States will be derived from the newly created Employment Security Administration account in the Unemployment trust fund. Unemployment compensation payments will continue to be made in accordance with State laws through about 1,800 local offices which also provide job placement services and labor market information.

Under this Federal-State system, 100% grants are made by the Bureau of Employment Security in the Department of Labor which is responsible for the proper and efficient administration of the system. Both the grants to States and the expenses of the Bureau of Employment Security for 1960 and previous years have been financed from appropriations out of the general funds of the Treasury.

Under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act, payrolls of employers covered by State law are now subject to a Federal tax of 0.4%. In 1960 and prior years, the revenue from this source was deposited in the Treasury and earmarked for the expenses of the employment security system; any excess of tax receipts over expenses was automatically appropriated to the Unemployment trust fund. Thus, both the receipts from the Federal unemployment tax and the expenditures for administrative costs flowed through the general budget even though these tax receipts could only be used for the employment security program.

The recent amendments to the Social Security Act shifted these earmarked receipts and administrative expenses to the Unemployment trust fund commencing with 1961. Thus, financing of administrative costs will be similar to that applicable to programs of the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, and the Railroad Retirement Board. Since both expenditures and tax receipts were transferred to the trust fund, there is no net effect on the budget surplus or deficit.

The summary table of budget authorizations and expenditures on pages 813-814 and the schedules on pages 824-827 reflect the details of the shift to trust fund financing on new obligational authority and budget expenditures for the Department of Labor. As indicated in these schedules, revised appropriation language will be proposed to the Congress in January to convert the general fund appropriations already made for 1961 to authorizations to spend from the newly created trust account.

Federal Unemployment Tax Act receipts will be received in the Unemployment trust fund after January 1 of each year. In order that funds would be available for administrative expenses during the first half of the fiscal year, the Congress created a revolving fund from which advances, with interest, are authorized to the employment security administration account in the Unemployment trust fund. The detailed schedules for these advances appear on page 831. Generally, these advances will be repaid in the same year in which they are made. However, in 1961, tax receipts will not be sufficient to repay all of the 1961 advances but will be repaid in 1962.

The Bureau of Employment Security supervises the administration of the Federal-State system of employment security consisting of 53 State agencies and about 1,800 local offices assisting workers in finding jobs, assisting employers in recruiting workers, and paying unemployment compensation. Commencing in 1961 the expenses of this program will be paid from the Unemployment trust fund.

1. Veterans placement service.—This service helps State local employment offices in giving suitable counseling and placement services to veterans and promotes the interest of employers in employing veterans.

2. Farm placement service.—In cooperation with the State farm placement offices, this service develops and uses special recruitment and farm placement programs to assist farmworkers in finding continuous employment to meet agriculture's need for year-round and seasonal workers. In 1962 emphasis will be placed on (a) determining that the agricultural workers are not recruited for work into areas which offer substandard wages and working conditions; (b) evaluating State and local office farm programs with special attention to areas employing foreign agricultural workers; and (c) the impact on the farm labor work force of mechanization and other technological changes.

3. Collection and interpretation of labor market information.—Information is analyzed on the administrative operations of the unemployment insurance and employment service programs and on the supply, demand, and utilization of labor by areas, industries, and occupations. In 1962 emphasis will be placed on program and labor market research directed toward the improvement of employment service operations.

4. Assistance in maintaining public employment services.—States are assisted in (a) recruitment and placement of workers in all occupations; (b) interstate recruitment of workers in shortage occupations; and (c) counseling and testing of applicants, including youth, veterans, handicapped, and older workers. In 1962 emphasis will be placed on strengthening local office management and developing improved methods of operation to help the State agencies to ready the national system for serving an economy of growing magnitude and complexity.

5. Unemployment insurance service.—State laws and interpretations are reviewed to assure conformity with the Federal law requirements. Surveys are made to assist States in improving administrative procedures. The Bureau directs State and Federal agencies in the administration of Federal benefits programs for unemployed Federal employees and ex-servicemen. In 1962, emphasis will be placed on assisting the State agencies in improving their operations in the face of rising claims filing and increased tax collection workloads. In addition, special attention will be paid to analyzing various proposals made in the States for modification of unemployment insurance programs to meet the problem of persistent unemployment.

6. Field guidance, financing, and auditing of State operations.—The 53 State employment security agencies are assisted in improving their programs, organization, and management. Agencies are audited annually.

8. Relation of costs to obligations.—Year-end balances of unpaid undelivered orders are as follows: 1959, $42 thousand; 1960, $32 thousand; 1961, $22 thousand; 1962, $20 thousand.

Grants are made to the States for administration of the unemployment compensation and employment service programs. Commencing in 1961, the Social Security Act amendments shift the financing of these grants from the general budget to a newly created trust account within the Unemployment trust fund. Requirements in 1961 are now estimated at $366,469 thousand. Of this amount, $18,924 thousand was advanced to the States in June of 1960 for State requirements in July of 1960 from the 1961 appropriation of $325,819 thousand. The remainder, $347,545 thousand is proposed as a limitation on expenditures from the new administration account in the Unemployment trust fund.

Since the appropriation was made for 1961, claims for unemployment compensation have been filed at a higher rate than the amount appropriated will finance. An additional $40,650 thousand is requested to process these additional claims. Of this amount $24,181 thousand is proposed under existing legislation and $16,469 thousand under legislation which will be proposed to amend Public Law 86-778, which established a ceiling of $350 million.

An increase of $1,531 thousand is requested over the 1961 revised estimate primarily for restoration of the contingency fund, increased tax and auditing workloads, and increases in the average annual salary rate, offset by a reduction for fewer claims to be filed in 1962. The average annual salary rate is expected to rise from $4,680 in 1961 to $4,800 in 1962.

1. State unemployment insurance service.—State funds are used to make unemployment compensation payments to unemployed workers eligible under State laws. Federal grants in 1960 provided State administrative costs of collecting $2.2 billion in taxes and paying $2.4 billion in benefits. Claims filing is expected to decrease in 1962.

The benefit payments are provided under the appropriation Unemployment compensation for Federal employees and ex-servicemen.

3. Employment service.—Federal grants finance an employment service for persons seeking jobs and to provide workers for employers who need them. This is accomplished by selecting and referring workers to jobs, providing services to employers in the analysis of jobs and staffing problems, and by counseling and testing services.

6. Obligations incurred for programs of other years, net.—Because of State legal requirements funds for July operations must be made available to the States before the year begins. In 1960, obligations were increased by $668 thousand because $18,924 thousand had been advanced to the States in 1960 from 1961 funds, while only $18,256 thousand from 1960 funds was advanced to the States in 1959.

Since the appropriation was made for 1961 claims for benefits have been filed at a higher rate than the amount of the appropriation will finance. An additional $37 million is proposed for later transmission. Workloads shown below for 1961 include those to be financed from the proposed supplemental.

1. Payments to Federal employees are made in accordance with the State unemployment compensation laws. The cost of the program will be increased by $1 million due to a higher average weekly benefit amount.

Mexican agricultural labor is imported for use in areas having a shortage of domestic agricultural workers. All costs, except for Compliance activities, are paid from the Farm labor supply revolving fund. Such costs for supplying a Mexican agricultural worker averaged $10.41 in 1960 and is estimated to be $13.04 in 1961 and $11.84 in 1962. Authorization for this purpose was extended to December 31, 1961 (74 Stat. 934).

1. Determining Mexican labor requirements.—The agricultural areas needing Mexican workers and the number of workers required are determined. Farm labor reports are developed, controlled, and analyzed to evaluate the Mexican labor program. Technical assistance is provided the States in the preparation of these reports.

2. Supplying Mexican labor.—Workers are recruited in Mexico and transported to centers in the United States where employers contract for their use. In 1960, 427,353 workers were contracted. An estimated 332,000 workers will be contracted in 1961 and 380,000 in 1962. The small reduction in expenses in 1961 and 1962 resulting from contracting fewer workers than in 1960 will be applied to correcting operating deficiencies in reception and recruiting centers.

4. Relation of costs to obligations.—Year-end balances of unpaid undelivered orders are as follows: 1959, $2 thousand; 1960, $4 thousand; 1961, $3 thousand.

This fund covers transportation and other costs directly involved in importing Mexican farmworkers (7 U.S.C. 1461-1468). Public Law 86-783, dated September 14, 1960, extends the authority until December 31, 1961.

Budget program.—The program involves the recruitment, selection, and importation of Mexican workers for agricultural work on farms in the continental United States. Mexican workers recruited and selected by the Mexican Government are sent to three migratory stations in Mexico where they are examined for ability to do farmwork, screened for subversive activities, vaccinated, and transported to five reception centers in the United States where they are X-rayed, examined and treated for disease, and contracted to employers. This requires the establishment and operation of reception centers to provide housing, subsistence, and medical care. An estimated 332 thousand Mexican farmworkers will be imported in 1961 and 380 thousand in 1962.

8. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources as reflected in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

Financing.—The costs of operating this program are met by fees charged the employer for each worker contracted. On January 1, 1960, the fee for initially contracting a worker was established at $10 per worker, reduced from $12. The fee for recontracting a worker was set at $5, a reduction of $1.50. The rates provide for the cost of importing workers; and for the serological testing administered by the Public Health Service.

Operating results and financial conditions.—Revenue from operations exceeded expenses by $1,034 thousand in 1960. Revenue is estimated to be approximately $604 thousand less than expenses in 1961 and approximately $345 thousand less in 1962. These deficits will be met by surplus carried over from prior years. Retained earnings as of June 30, 1962, are estimated to be $2,140 thousand. Earnings are retained to meet future requirements.

This fund established by the Employment Security Act of 1960 (74 Stat. 970) makes advances without fiscal year limitation to the employment security administration account in the Unemployment trust fund. The purpose of this fund is to finance the Federal and State administrative costs of the employment security programs on a repayable basis from the beginning of the fiscal year until the Federal unemployment tax receipts become available in February of the same fiscal year.

During the first year of operations the estimated Federal unemployment tax receipts will be about $38.8 million less than the estimated expenditures. The balance of the fund will be used to finance the program during 1962 until the Federal unemployment tax receipts are received during February 1962.

This fund will be needed until the employment security administration account accumulates a carryover balance of $250 million for this purpose.

1. Manpower and employment.—The level and trend of nonagricultural employment, hours, earnings, and labor turnover are analyzed. The Bureau also analyzes and publishes the Monthly Report on the Labor Force. In 1962 new programs will provide information on (a) employment by industry for significant occupations, including scientific, engineering, and technical personnel, and (b) on characteristics of unemployed persons. Publications include the Occupational Outlook Handbook, employment and earnings, estimates of manpower requirements and supply, and reviews of long-range employment and labor force trends.

2. Prices and cost of living.—The Consumer Price Index is published, covering the urban wage earner and salaried clerical workers families of the United States, for the Nation (based on 46 cities) and for 20 selected large cities. Trends of primary market prices are published for 2,000 industrial and agricultural products. The Consumer Price Index is incorporated in many labor-management contracts for wage determining purposes, and indexes of primary market prices are used in escalating costs for commercial contracts. Attention will continue to be given to providing price information necessary for improving the national economic accounts.

3. Wages and industrial relations.—Information is provided on wages by occupation for 80 major industrial centers, and for about 20 selected major industries; monthly developments in industrial relations, wages, and work stoppages. Annual reports are issued on employer expenditures on wage supplements (fringe benefits). In 1962 a series of comprehensive studies of conditions of employment incorporated in labor-management agreements will be inaugurated.

4. Measurement of productivity.—Annual indexes of output per man-hour are prepared, together with an analysis of productivity trends, and studies of automation and other technological developments. Recent emphasis is on the development of productivity indexes in greater industrial detail. Studies are issued for labor requirements for selected types of construction.

5. Industrial hazards.—Quarterly and annual data are published on industrial injuries, together with an analysis of the causes of injuries for selected industries. These constitute comprehensive and reliable basic data for industrial safety programs, both public and private. Special emphasis is placed on the development of a more extensive State-Federal program of injury statistics.

6. Foreign labor conditions.—Summary information on labor in foreign countries is made available, including data on prices, employment, unemployment, wages, labor unit costs, labor law and labor standards, living costs, and current labor developments generally.

7. Program staff services.—Bureau policies are established for the maintenance of statistical standards and improvement of statistical methodology. Special economic reports are prepared for the Commissioner, the Secretary, the Council of Economic Advisors, and other Government agencies. Beginning in 1962 analysis will be made of the net effect of U.S. imports and exports on domestic employment. Research and reports are coordinated and publications are planned and edited.

9. Relation of costs to obligations.—Year-end balances of unpaid undelivered orders are as follows: 1959, $50 thousand; 1960, $149 thousand; 1961, $45 thousand; 1962, $32 thousand.

2. Consumer expenditure and price surveys.—A revision of the Consumer Price Index based on current patterns of consumer expenditures is underway which will modernize the index to meet the demands for its use in present day domestic, economic, and industrial planning. The revision begun in 1960 will extend over a 5-year period. Expenditure surveys of urban families, begun in 1961, will be completed. Examination of pricing problems anticipated for the revised index and test-pricing will be continued on an expanded basis. Collection of expenditure data from farm and rural nonfarm families will be initiated. Bureau of Labor Statistics will survey rural nonfarm families in metropolitan counties, and the Department of Agriculture will collect data from farm families and rural nonfarm families in nonmetropolitan areas. This phase of the activity will extend over a 2-year period.

The Bureau analyzes and reports on the factors affecting women's employment and their civil and political status; provides information and advisory services on standards; promotes new employment opportunities for women; encourages training for shortage occupations; and makes information available to counselors, organizations, and agencies working in related fields at both the national and local levels.

1. Enforcement.—Information media are used to inform employers and employees of their rights and responsibilities under the law. Investigations are made to correct violations and to assist employers in meeting legal requirements and workers in recovering wages due. During 1960 a total of 45,729 establishments were investigated and 186,997 employees were found to be due wages in the amount of $28,032,314 of which employers have agreed to pay $13,895,377. The investigation program will continue at about the same level in 1961 and 1962.

2. Wage determinations.—During 1961 and 1962 a total of five industry committees will be convened each year to recommend minimum wage rates under the Fair Labor Standards Act in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and American Samoa to review all minimum wage rates (less than $1.00) on these islands biennially. Regulations governing subminimum wages for learners, apprentices, messengers, and handicapped workers are being constantly reexamined. It is estimated that 1,900 applications for subminimum wage certificates will be received in 1961 and 1962, as compared to 2,100 in 1960. The wage determinations program under the Walsh-Healey Act will be conducted at a level of five or six determinations in 1962.

3. Regulations and research.—Regulations and interpretations are prepared to give effect to the Fair Labor Standards Act. Emphasis will be directed to development and revision of issuances affected by amendments to the act and changes in industry practices. Economic research and analysis and development of statistical data, necessary in the consideration of administrative problems and legislative proposals, is provided. The report of studies of effects of the $1 minimum wage, required by law to evaluate the present minimum wage and to determine the ability of employers to absorb wage increases, was completed in 1960. Further studies will be conducted in 1961 and 1962 to provide current data for reports to the Congress. In addition, during 1962 a pilot study of the economic effects of Public Contracts Act wage determinations will be conducted.

5. Relation of costs to obligations.—Year-end balances of unpaid undelivered orders are as follows: 1959, $31 thousand; 1960, $53 thousand; 1961, $42 thousand; 1962, $35 thousand.

In keeping with the Postal Policy Act of 1958 (39 U.S.C. 2301) this budget calls for financing out of postal revenue all 1962 postal service obligations except those for public services. Legislative and administrative postal rate increases at an annual rate of $843 million are required to achieve this goal. The estimates contemplate that the rate increases can be made effective by April 1, 1961, thereby reducing the postal fund deficit for 1961, otherwise projected at $839 million, by $160 million.

The Postal Policy Act also provides that the postal fund be reimbursed from the general fund of the Treasury for losses deemed attributable to public service activities as determined by the Congress. The estimate for this purpose of $63 million for 1962 is based on the interpretations of the law used by the Congress in previous appropriations. Payments for public services were $37 million in 1960 and $49 million in 1961.

Mail volume.—It is estimated that mail volume will approximate 68.1 billion pieces in 1962. This is an increase of 3.8% over the 65.6 billion pieces estimated for 1961 and 6.9% over the 63.7 billion pieces handled in 1960.

The 1962 forecast includes 35.3 billion first class letters and cards, 1.5 billion airmail items, 7.9 billion magazines and newspapers, 1 billion parcels, 19.8 billion pieces of advertising circular matter, and 2.6 billion pieces in all other categories of mail. Comparisons of this workload with the actual 1960 volume and that estimated for 1961 appears in the table, Estimated volume of mail and special services, and postal revenue.

Postal obligations.—Obligations for 1962 are estimated to be $4,436 million, compared with $4,281 million for 1961 and $3,874 million for 1960. Congress authorized postal employee pay increases and health benefits, effective early in fiscal 1961, costing $273 million for fiscal 1961 and $280 million on a full-year basis. In addition, the Interstate Commerce Commission approved rate increases to the railroads for transporting the mails effective September 1, 1960, totaling $31 million for fiscal 1961 and $38 million for a full year. For 1962, the principal causes of the increase in obligations are the increase in mail volume, additional rents under the modernization program, mandatory within-grade salary increases, and the full-year effect of the various legislative and other increases occurring in 1961. Obligations for capital and research activities have been held to approximately the 1961 level approved by the Congress. The average operating obligations per million pieces of mail (excluding capital and research obligations) are estimated to be approximately $63 thousand in 1962, or slightly less than the 1961 estimate.

Postal revenue.—Net postal revenue for 1962 is estimated at $4,436 million, compared to $3,602 million in 1961 and $3,277 million in 1960. The revenue increase for 1962 includes $683 million from the full year effect of postal rate increases commencing April 1, 1961, and the effect of the 3.8% projected increase in the volume of mail.

Postal fund deficit and budget expenditures.—The postal fund deficit is the difference between postal obligations and net postal revenue. Beginning in 1960, postal revenue includes reimbursement from the Treasury for public service losses. A postal fund deficit thus indicates the extent to which postal rates fail to produce sufficient funds to finance postal services after such reimbursement.

Net budget expenditures for the postal service as a whole, on the other hand, include Treasury payments for public service losses as well as net expenditures from the postal fund. The following table shows the principal elements in the postal fund deficit and budget expenditures for 1960 to 1962 (in millions of dollars):

Net expenditures from postal fund.....	488	737	-----

Amounts for proposed rate increases have been included only in the summary tables and do not appear in the schedules covering the details of revenue and of the postal fund.

Deposit fund.—Money order and postal savings funds entrusted to the postal service are accounted for separately as a deposit fund. Transactions of this fund are excluded from the budget tables and are included instead in part III of this document.

PAYMENT FOR PUBLIC SERVICES

For payment into the postal revenues for public services, in accordance with section 104 of the Postal Policy Act of 1958 (39 U.S.C. [270b] 2303), for the loss resulting from the transmission of matter in the mails free of postage or at reduced rates, and for the additional cost of transporting mail by foreign air carriers, [$49,000,000] $62,700,000. The Postal Policy Act of 1958 identifies as "public services" certain types of services traditionally rendered by the Post Office Department and provides that the loss thereon should not be considered a charge against users of the mail. An appropriation, to be paid into postal revenue out of the general fund of the Treasury, is requested to cover these losses. This appropriation does not augment the Department's obligating authority, as it is used only for payment into postal revenue.

In developing estimates for public service loss for 1962 the Post Office Department follows the interpretations of the law used by the Congress in making previous appropriations for this purpose. Thus funds now being requested cover (a) the revenue loss from rate concessions on free and preferred-rate mail and (b) excess rates paid to foreign air carriers as a matter of public policy. The amounts appropriated become the statutory public service losses which are excluded from any postal deficit.

Public enterprise funds:

CONTRIBUTION TO THE POSTAL FUND

For administration and operation of the Post Office Department and the postal service, there is hereby appropriated the aggregate amount of postal revenues for the current fiscal year, as authorized by law (39 U.S.C. [786, 794a] 2201, 2202), together with an amount equal to the difference between such revenues and the total of the appropriations hereinafter specified and the sum needed may be advanced to the Post Office Department upon requisition of the Postmaster General, for the following purposes, namely: (Post Office Department Appropriation Act, 1961.)

POSTAL FUND—Continued

Revenue from mail and other services of the Post Office Department is placed in the postal fund, which was established as a revolving fund in 1950 (39 U.S.C. 2202). The fund is available for obligation and expenditure by the Post Office Department in accordance with limitations established in appropriation accounts (often referred to as appropriations out of the postal fund). The fund is also used without annual action by Congress for purchase of stamp-embossed envelopes and for payment of certain indemnities, claims, and judgments.

Postal revenue comes primarily from private postal patrons. Postal revenue also includes receipts from various Federal agencies for the handling of official mail and payment from the Treasury for statutory public service losses as previously stated. Reimbursements for certain nonpostal services and other recoveries are applied directly against the related costs and are not reported as revenue.

The aggregate of postal revenue has been insufficient to cover the expenses authorized for payment from the postal fund. An indefinite appropriation is made from the general fund of the Treasury to make up any difference. The effect of a proposed rate increase on this appropriation is described elsewhere.

The request for this appropriation is $88.8 million, an increase of $4.4 million compared with obligations for 1961 and $6.7 million over 1960 obligations.

Two basic changes are proposed in this appropriation for 1962: (1) All personnel now paid from the appropriation Modernization and improvement of buildings and equipment will be transferred to this appropriation in 1962, and (2) contract research, development, and engineering currently carried in the Modernization and improvement of buildings and equipment appropriation will be merged with the corresponding activities in this appropriation.

1. Executive direction and administration.—This activity provides for the overall direction and administration of the postal service, including all offices and bureaus at Washington headquarters, the headquarters engineering and modernization staffs, the field personnel of the internal audit division, and the money order center at Kansas City. The estimate for 1962 proposes increases in the administration and modernization staffs, and a reduction in the money order center.

This activity also includes claims settled administratively under the Federal Tort Claims Act, the payment of compromise settlements and damage suits, and for 1960 and 1962, the biennial fidelity bond premium of all bonded employees.

2. Field inspection service.—This activity covers all field investigative and inspection functions pertaining to violation of the postal laws, prevention and detection of mail loss and mistreatment and of losses of Government funds and property, field audit of all postmasters' accounts, personnel security and suitability investigations, and special surveys and investigations.

3. Contract research, development, and engineering.—An industrial research and engineering program for the Postal Establishment is carried on. This includes (a) the design, development, and testing of new types of postal equipment and materials; (b) the development of better work methods, production measurement standards, and manpower utilization systems; and (c) the recommendation of general location, functional design, building modifications, developing layouts, and mechanization requirements of facilities. This activity covers the portion of the program performed by contracts with private firms, research institutions, and Federal agencies. Research, development, and engineering funds for the accelerated program of modernizing the postal plant are now included in this activity.

4. Regional operation.—There are 15 regional offices which direct and take final action on all aspects of postal management—personnel, operations, transportation, finance, engineering, modernization, equipment, supplies, and facilities within each region—except for specific areas primarily involving policy and technical guidance reserved to the bureaus and offices at headquarters.

The funds provided in this appropriation pay for the operation of post offices, stations, and branches; for the operation and maintenance of vehicles used in the collection and delivery of mail; and for the handling of mail en route. The amount requested is $3.452 billion, an increase of $97.559 million over 1961. The increase is due primarily to the estimated increase in volume of mail to be handled, the continued expansion of city delivery service, and the carryover cost of the pay increase and health benefits legislation which became effective July 9, 1960.

1. Administration of postal installations.—This activity is for the local management and supervision of post offices and their stations and branches, distribution of mail in transit, railway mail terminals, airmail transfer offices, truck terminals, and vehicle maintenance and repair facilities. The employees included in this activity are postmasters, assistant postmasters, supervisors, and technical personnel. The postmasters and their assistants are primarily responsible for the overall direction and supervision of mails, finance, buildings, personnel, and related postal services in main post offices and stations and branches. The supervisors provide direct supervision over the processing of incoming and outgoing mail, over financial and related postal services, and over the operation of stations and branches of the main post office and terminals. They also provide supervision over the dispatch, scheduling, repair, and maintenance of vehicles used in the collection, delivery, and transportation of mail. Technical personnel consist primarily of chief accountants; station examiners; and medical, safety, and personnel officers.

2. Mail handling and window service.—The service provided under this activity includes the separation and distribution of mail at post offices, stations, branches, and other postal units and on highway and railway post offices. It also includes the rendering of window service to the public, operation of contract stations, dispatch control of vehicles, and reimbursement to Federal Reserve banks for handling direct deposits of postmasters and processing paid money orders. The employees paid under this activity are postal clerks, mail handlers, and vehicle fleet administrative clerks. It is expected that continued benefits from the mechanization program, from the work measurement system, and from additional service facility improvements will enable the increase of 3.8% in mail volume to be handled with an increase of only 2.6% in manpower in this activity.

The following table shows a comparison of clerical employment and workload. The extra leap year day in 1960 has been excluded from the data for comparability.

3. Collection and delivery service.—This service provides for delivery of mail to residences and business places in cities and their suburbs, collection of mail from street letter boxes and other collection boxes in these areas, delivery of mail on rural routes, and delivery of special delivery articles. This service also includes the local pickup and delivery of mail between stations and the post office and other installations. The tables below, for purposes of comparability, exclude the extra leap year day in 1960.

This appropriation covers the transportation of mail by air, land, and water. The request is $605.6 million, an increase of $26 million over the obligations for 1961. Of this increase $6.7 million is due to the full year effect of the railroad rate increase granted in 1961. The remainder is due to increased mail volume and to the expansion of transportation services.

1. Surface transportation.—This includes transportation of mail by water, highway, and rail.

(a) Water.—Water transportation includes transportation by powerboat within the United States and by steamship to foreign countries.

Powerboat service is utilized for the transportation of mail on the inland and coastal waterways at per annum contract rates ($0.9 million in 1962) and at pound rates ($3.5 million in 1962). Pound rate service is utilized only for Alaska and Hawaii, where statehood is resulting in substantial increases in mail volume.

(b) Highway.—This includes transportation of mail by star routes (including short-haul truck service), mail messenger, and highway post offices. Star route service is provided between post offices where other means of mail transportation are not available or are inadequate. In 1962 the trend in star route expansion will be at a lower rate than that experienced in 1960.

The increase in the average ton-mile rate in 1962 for domestic airmail is due to the increase in volume of regular airmail costing 42 cents per ton-mile without a proportionate increase in airlift mail costing 18 cents per ton-mile.

This appropriation provides for expenses of building occupancy (other than personal services), for supplies and certain types of contractual services required by the postal service, and for field personnel assigned to the several service organizations operated by the Bureau of Facilities. The amount requested is $167.7 million, an increase of $25.6 million over 1961 and $45.1 million over 1960.

1. Building occupancy.—This activity provides for rental of real estate; for utilities, fuel, and communication costs; and for the acquisition and resale of post office building sites under the commercial leasing program. The recoveries from the resale of such land are shown under Advances and reimbursements and are available for the lease program. Increased rental costs result from (a) the acquisition of additional postal space, (b) increased rental rates, and (c) replacement of inadequate or sub-standard space in Government buildings.

This appropriation is the former Modernization and improvement of buildings and equipment appropriation with certain refinements. The refinements serve to consolidate all capital items into this one appropriation and to limit the appropriation to capital items. Plant and equipment differs from Modernization and improvement of buildings and equipment in that (1) the estimate for contract research, development, and engineering is now shown under that item in the Administration, regional operation, and research appropriation; (2) personnel costs under engineering and technical services are transferred to the Administration, regional operation, and research appropriation, and charged to the activity to which the personnel are assigned; (3) the estimate for the regular capital program is transferred to this appropriation from the Facilities appropriation; and (4) the estimate for the purchase of motor vehicles is likewise transferred from the Facilities appropriation.

This appropriation of $122 million provides for the continuation of the program to modernize postal plant and equipment, for the purchase of equipment and vehicles to replace worn-out and obsolete equipment and vehicles, and for additional equipment required by the normal growth of the service.

1. Building and equipment improvement.—Alteration, air conditioning, and rehabilitation of Government-owned buildings and the general installation of comprehensive systems of modern mail-handling equipment constitute the major costs of the modernization program.

2. Regular capital program.—This activity covers the normal item by item replacement of worn-out or obsolete equipment and the purchase of additional equipment required by the growth of the service. This activity was formerly a part of the Facilities appropriation.

3. Vehicle program.—This activity covers the replacement of worn-out and obsolete motor vehicles and garage equipment and the acquisition of new vehicles and garage equipment in connection with the expansion of the program for mechanization of the city delivery service. This activity was formerly a part of the regular capital program of the Facilities appropriation.

The objectives of the foreign buildings program are to provide consolidated office space for the Foreign Service and other Government agencies abroad, and living quarters for American employees in localities where suitable facilities are not available. Through this program the Department has acquired real property valued at approximately $180 million, consisting of 214 office buildings, 147 principal officer residences, 260 residences for senior officers and attachés, and 2,255 staff living units. This program also finances real property leases of 10 years or more (shorter term leases are included in Salaries and expenses, above), procurement of initial furniture and furnishings, and repair, maintenance, and operating costs of these facilities.

Since 1946, the program has been financed primarily through the purchase of foreign currency credits held by the Treasury Department resulting from lend-lease settlements, sale of surplus war property, and other sources. Starting in 1961, a separate appropriation for the purchase of foreign currencies, which accrue under title I of Public Law 480, the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, increased the resources available to the buildings program. These supplemental funds are being used almost entirely to acquire capital assets in the form of real property, thereby accelerating the foreign buildings program. These foreign currencies will supplement the regular appropriation by utilizing both excess and restricted nonexcess currencies authorized for the buildings program to reimburse the regular appropriation account for the full initial funding made possible through this process.

The purpose of the program for acquisition and construction is generally to replace outmoded or otherwise unsatisfactory Government-owned or leased office space. Such space is replaced with structures that are designed specifically to meet the particular needs of the Foreign Service and other oversea Government operations from the standpoint of conducting efficient operations and of providing adequate security protection. In addition, housing is provided American employees in localities where housing either is not available or is substandard in relation to American living standards.

The Department has previously presented to the Congress a 10-year building program estimated to require approximately $100 million for acquiring new office and housing facilities. The status of the program is as follows:

PROJECTED STATUS OF THE 1957-65 FOREIGN BUILDINGS PROGRAM THROUGH JUNE 30, 1962

Current new construction undertakings to be financed by the regular appropriation have been reduced substantially, since the major portion of the 1961 appropriation was virtually all committed for the operation, maintenance and repair of present property holdings, personal services, leaseholds payments, and the completion of construction projects started in prior years, including their initial furnishings. An appropriation of $20 million for 1962 will permit resumption of the program at approximately the same level as in the years prior to 1961.

While an appropriation of $5.3 million for the purchase of Public Law 480 currencies in 1962 will permit acceleration of the foreign buildings program, these funds are limited to a relatively few countries.

Of the requested appropriation for 1962, $10 million has been authorized, and an authorization will be sought for the balance of $10 million.

The United States contributes its share of the expenses of the United Nations and 8 of its specialized agencies, 7 inter-American organizations, 6 regional organizations, and 10 other organizations.

The increases for the United Nations reflects additional technical assistance to the newly emerging independent African states, anticipated recommendations from a committee reviewing the United Nations Pension System, increased activity in the economic and social field and the cost of the proposed Outer Space Conference. Over $6 million of the $10 million increase is accounted for by the appropriation of the U.S. share of the assessed portion of the 1961 costs of the United Nations Emergency Force in the Middle East in 1962, as is done for our contribution for other assessed United Nations activities, rather than in 1961.

Other major contribution increases are for: (1) the United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization for the development of education in Africa, Asia, and the Arab States; (2) the World Health Organization for initial assessments for a new headquarters building, additional medical research, aid to Africa, and an increase in WHO's working capital fund; (3) the Organization of American States to put into effect additional programs recommended by the Inter-American Committee of Presidential Representatives; and (4) the Pan American Health Organization for more field projects in public health administration, vital health statistics and nursing, and an increase in PAHO's working capital fund.

AMERICAN SECTIONS, INTERNATIONAL COMMISSIONS

1. Rio Grande international dams program.—The negotiation of an agreement for construction of Amistad Dam, the second major international storage dam on the Rio Grande contemplated by the 1944 Water Treaty, was authorized by Public Law 86-605. Work will be initiated in 1961 on the preparation of final detailed designs and specifications, railroad relocation, acquisition of rights-of-way, and construction of access roads and the Government camp. This work, preparatory to the actual building of the dam, is scheduled for completion in 1962.

2. Lower Rio Grande flood control.—Work will continue on the modification of the flood control levee system, consisting largely of raising existing levees, constructing new levees, and making floodway channel improvements.

3. Rio Grande gaging stations.—Improvements to water measurement facilities of the gaging stations on the Rio Grande will continue to be made to provide a higher degree of accuracy in measuring river flows.

A survey is being completed by the International Joint Commission as to the economic feasibility of a tidal power project at Passamaquoddy Bay, situated between Maine and New Brunswick Province, Canada. The purpose of the survey is to determine (a) the cost of construction, (b) whether or not such cost would allow hydroelectric power to be produced at a reasonable price, and (c) what contribution such project would make to the national economy and defense.

Three U.S. Government agencies are participating. The Corps of Engineers—Civil, has completed an investigation of powerplant construction and location requirements. The Federal Power Commission, together with the Corps of Engineers—Civil, has studied the potential power market and transmission problems. The Fish and Wildlife Service, in cooperation with the Government of Canada, has studied the potential effect on fisheries in the area. Reports on these phases of the survey have been submitted to the International Joint Commission. During 1961, the International Joint Commission will complete consideration of these reports and finalize its recommendations to the Governments of Canada and the United States.

Carryover funds are being used to complete the survey and report, including preparation and submission of additional economic and engineering analyses by the Corps of Engineers—Civil. Additional hearings, to develop supporting data requested by the two Governments, may be required after the report is submitted.

The new laboratory will provide adequate facilities for analysis of water conditions affecting salmon migration or survival. Engineering studies and architectural plans for the laboratory were made in 1960 but construction, originally scheduled for 1960, was deferred for a year.

The primary objective of the program is the promotion of U.S. foreign policy through the exchange of key persons between the United States and over 80 foreign countries in the fields of teaching, study, research, professional and governmental observation, lecturing, and the acquiring of specialized practical experience. Assistance is provided also to American-sponsored schools abroad and to some private exchange projects. Exchange of persons programs with Africa will be substantially increased in 1962 and include certain new academic exchange programs.

In addition to the regular appropriation for this program covering dollar and certain foreign currency costs, a special foreign currency program appropriation is available to purchase excess and restricted currencies for exchange programs. Note.—The gross foreign currency authorization for 1960 was $33,037 thousand. The schedule above covers foreign currency authorizations for 1960. The appropriation made for 1960 was equal to the unexpended balance of previous foreign currency authorizations as of June 30, 1960. All transactions in 1961 and 1962 relate to appropriations.

Certain foreign currencies derived from the sale of agricultural commodities under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 are available to the U.S. Government for certain international educational and cultural activities when purchased with appropriated dollars. An appropriation of $8.2 million, to remain available until expended, is requested for 1962 for the purchase of such currencies excess to the normal requirements of the United States or restricted by international agreement from use for the general expenses of the United States.

Programs financed from this appropriation will provide for: (1) Aid to American-sponsored schools abroad; (2) educational exchange programs authorized by the Fulbright amendment to the Surplus Property Act of 1944 (60 Stat. 754), and the interchange of persons as authorized under title II of the United States Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948 (22 U.S.C. 1446); (3) special educational development programs between American and foreign universities; and (4) the establishment and support of workshops (seminars) and university chairs of American studies abroad. Totals presented in the program narrative of the regular international educational exchange activities appropriation summarize the total educational exchange program of the Department of State. Dollar support for the latter two of these programs is planned to be obtained principally from private sources. The regular international educational exchange appropriation includes $275 thousand for aid to American-sponsored schools and finances most costs of the exchange of persons programs.

Public Law 86-565, approved June 30, 1960 (74 Stat. 293), authorized membership of the United States in the International Development Association and authorized $320,290 thousand to be appropriated for subscription to the Association.

The International Development Association is an international organization affiliated with the International Bank to provide development financing on flexible terms for the Association's less developed member countries. Most of its initial resources are being provided by countries other than the United States. While the U.S. subscription is about $320 million, the other economically stronger member countries will provide about $443 million of the $763 million to be subscribed by the countries as a group. Total subscriptions, including those of the less developed countries, are scheduled at $1 billion; the U.S. subscription represents about 32% of this total.

Subscriptions are to be paid by the members in five annual installments. The first installment of $73,667 thousand was paid within 30 days after the International Development Association began operations. Four additional installments of $61,656 thousand each are planned for payment in 1962, 1963, 1964, and 1965.

INVESTMENT IN INTER-AMERICAN DEVELOPMENT BANK

For payment of subscriptions to the Inter-American Development Bank, to remain available until expended, $110,000,000 of which $60,000,000 is for the second installment on paid-in capital stock and $50,000,000 is for payment of the second installment of the subscription of the United States to the fund for special operations.

Public Law 86-147, approved August 7, 1959 (73 Stat. 299), provided for membership of the United States in the Inter-American Development Bank, and authorized an appropriation of $450 million to cover the U.S. subscription to the Bank. The Bank is an institution sponsored by the nations of the Organization of American States and is designed to accelerate the economic development of the American republics by providing capital and technical assistance and by encouraging private investment in development projects.

The U.S. subscription falls into three categories. The first is a subscription of $150 million for paid-in shares of capital stock, payable in three installments. The first installment of $30 million was paid in June 1960. The second and third installments of $60 million each are to be paid not sooner than September 30, 1961, and September 30, 1962, respectively. The second category is $200 million of callable capital stock which can be called only to meet obligations of the Bank on securities which it has issued in the private financial market or on loans which it has guaranteed. The third category is a subscription quota of $100 million in the fund for special operations of the Bank. Fifty million dollars was paid in June 1960, and $50 million must be paid in such installments as the Bank may provide but not later than the date fixed for the payment of the third installment of the paid-in capital stock.

Additional funds requested for 1962, will provide $60 million for payment of the second installment on paid-in capital stock to be paid not sooner than September 30, 1961, and $50 million for payment of the second installment of the U.S. subscription to the fund for special operations.

The Bretton Woods Agreements Act of July 31, 1945, authorized the acceptance of membership in the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the subscription of $3,175 million toward its total capital of $9,100 million. On June 17, 1959 (73 Stat. 80), the Bretton Woods Agreement Act was amended to increase the U.S. subscription to callable capital stock in the amount of $3,175 million.

The United States paid $635 million of the original subscription in cash and non-interest-bearing nonnegotiable notes. The remaining balance of obligational authority ($5,715 million) will not be called unless required to meet the Bank's obligations. Calls on unpaid subscriptions must be a uniform percentage of the amounts subscribed by each member country.

Under the provisions of Reorganization Plan No. 1 of 1957, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was abolished as a corporate entity, and its remaining assets, liabilities, and obligations were transferred to the Secretary of the Treasury, the Administrator of Small Business, the Housing and Home Finance Administrator, and the Administrator of General Services. The Secretary of the Treasury is responsible for completing the liquidation of business loans and securities with individual balances of $250 thousand or more as of June 30, 1957, securities of and loans to railroads, and securities of financial institutions, and for the windup of corporate affairs.

Budget program.—Liquidation transactions in 1960 produced net budget receipts of $14,267 thousand and it is estimated that transactions in 1961 and 1962 will produce net budget receipts of $2,067 thousand and $3,792 thousand, respectively.

The progress made and anticipated in the liquidation of the assets transferred to the Secretary of the Treasury is summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

	July 1, 1957	1960 actual	1961 estimate	1962 estimate

Other assets.....	600	200	200	100
Total.....	56,200	20,400	17,400	7,800

A limitation is placed on administrative expenses. The reduction of $10 thousand from 1961 to 1962 is attributable to a declining workload.

Operating results.—Excess proceeds of liquidation are paid into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts. During 1960 these receipts amounted to $15,500 thousand and it is estimated that $3,975 thousand and $3,880 thousand will be paid in 1961 and 1962, respectively.

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to purchase securities or make loans (including participations therein and guarantees thereof) to aid in financing projects for civil-defense purposes upon certification by the Director, Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization (50 App. U.S.C. 2261, and sec. 104, Reconstruction Finance Corporation Liquidation Act). Investments under the program are limited to a total of $250 million outstanding at any one time.

Budget program.—The sole program cost continues to be the payment of interest on borrowings from Treasury. As of June 30, 1960, there were outstanding $904 thousand in loans and $2,129 thousand in commitments to participate in loans made by banks wherein disbursement of Treasury funds is deferred. It is estimated by the close of 1961 that the loans will be reduced to $692 thousand and the deferred participation commitments to $1,660 thousand.

No new loans were authorized in 1960 and it is anticipated that there will be no additional loans authorized during 1961 and 1962.

Financing.—Program activities are financed from borrowings from Treasury. The unobligated balance of such authority at the end of 1962 is estimated to increase slightly to $248 million.

1. Processing deposits of withheld tax payments.—Employers and certain business enterprises deposit monthly, with designated banks, excise, withheld income, railroad retirement, and withheld social security taxes, to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States. The Federal Reserve banks, acting as fiscal agents of the Treasury, issue depository receipts which the employers attach to their returns as evidence of payment of taxes. Of the $1,444 thousand obligations estimated for 1962, $681 thousand will be recovered and credited to miscellaneous receipts by charges against the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund and the Federal disability insurance trust fund. The work volume is estimated at 10,600,000 depository receipts in 1961 and 11,162,000 in 1962 as compared with 10,078,563 in 1960. The increase in obligations estimated for 1962 of $127 thousand over 1961 is due to the increase in the estimated volume of receipts, increase in unit rate and related increase in purchase of additional depository receipts and envelopes.

2. Financial reporting and maintenance of the Government's central accounts.—This activity includes the maintenance of central accounts of appropriations, receipts and expenditures which provide data for financial statements. It also includes the preparation and publication of financial reports on the Government's fiscal operations, such as the annual Combined Statement of Receipts, Expenditures, and Balances; the Monthly Treasury Statement; the Secretary's Annual Report; the Treasury Bulletin; and reports on foreign currencies acquired without payment of dollars. The volume of accounting items is estimated at 4,457,000 in 1961 and 3,724,000 in 1962 as compared with 4,454,441 in 1960.

3. Accounting and reporting development and internal audit.—This activity includes furnishing technical accounting advice and assistance to all bureaus and offices of the Treasury, participation in the governmentwide accounting improvement program, performing internal audit in the Bureau, and coordinating Treasury fiscal internal audit.

4. Processing investments, loans, claims, collections, and surety bonds.—Investments in interest-bearing securities are processed for certain funds, such as the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund, the unemployment trust fund, the veterans insurance trust fund, and various Government retirement funds. The work includes accounting for purchases, sales, and redemptions of securities, processing of capital stock subscriptions of Government corporations, payment of international and other claims, and examination of the financial condition of companies issuing surety bonds in favor of the United States. The number of transactions is estimated at 349,964 for 1962 as compared with 347,502 in 1961 and 344,591 in 1960.

5. Supervision of the Federal depository system.—Banking facilities are provided for all agencies of the Government through the designation of selected institutions to act as official depositories of the Government's funds. Workload is expected to increase in 1962, as follows:

The Division of Disbursement, through 15 regional offices, makes payments for civilian Federal agencies, except the Post Office Department and certain Government corporations, and issues savings bonds for Federal employees under the payroll savings plan.

The increase in 1962 is due to additional work volume, (20.1 million payments) and increases in program activities.

The funds required are determined by multiplying workload by the unit cost as shown in the following tables:

At the end of last year, the Secretary of the Treasury estimated the excess of Federal unemployment tax receipts for the year over expenditures for unemployment compensation and employment service administration. This appropriation transferred the estimated excess into the Unemployment trust fund, where a portion was allocated to the Federal unemployment account to bring the balance of that account to $200 million and the remainder was allocated to the trust accounts of the various States (68 Stat. 668). This payment was determined as follows (in thousands of dollars):

This revolving fund was created as self-insurance to cover losses in shipment of Government property such as coin, currency, securities, certain losses incurred by the Post Office Department, and losses in connection with the redemption of savings bonds (5 U.S.C. 134). Since these claims are only partially offset by recoveries, the net losses have gradually increased to $866 thousand as of June 30, 1960, and are expected to increase to $905 thousand by June 30, 1961. It is estimated that the creation of this fund has resulted in a savings of over $90 million of insurance premiums on shipments of Government property.

The Bureau of Customs collects the duties and taxes on imported merchandise, inspects all international traffic, regulates certain marine and aircraft activities, combats smuggling, undervaluation, and frauds on the customs revenue, and performs related functions in connection with the importation and exportation of merchandise.

Direct obligations are estimated to be $63,400 thousand for 1962, an increase of $7,180 thousand over the amount now appropriated for 1961.

The unobligated balance of $300 thousand is a special fund available to this account when necessary to help pay the expenses of reimbursable customs work pending the collection of receivables from private interests.

A supplemental appropriation for 1961 is anticipated under Proposed for later transmission.

1. Assessment and collection of duties, taxes, and fees.—The collectors of customs assess and collect the duties and taxes on imported merchandise, inspect international traffic, combat smuggling, perform certain marine activities relating to ownership and documentation of vessels of the United States and the movement of vessels in the foreign trade, and enforce the laws of other Government agencies affecting imports and exports.

The Internal Revenue Service is the primary revenue collecting agency of the Federal Government. Gross total collections of the Internal Revenue Service amounted to almost $92 billion in 1960.

The number of tax returns filed has increased over the past 6 years from 88.6 million to 94.4 million. While greater efficiency and the introduction of automatic equipment have enabled the Service to process this larger workload, it has not been possible to increase the more time-consuming enforcement work accordingly. As a part of a program to correct this situation and to recover part of the present annual revenue loss to the Government, the 1962 recommendation provides funds to continue the increase in enforcement personnel authorized in 1961, and to further the installation of an electronic computer system designed to maintain a consolidated master file of taxpayer accounts. These funds, which will allow significant increases in work accomplishment as indicated in the following workload tables (particularly in the collection and audit activities), constitute the second step in a long-range plan to improve the enforcement of our tax laws.

1. Rulings, technical planning, and special technical services.—The Service interprets statutory provisions, issues rulings, and prepares regulations and Treasury decisions. It conducts continuing research on tax loopholes, inequities, and related problems; provides special technical services; and negotiates tax treaties with foreign governments.

REFUNDING INTERNAL REVENUE COLLECTIONS

Under proposed legislation, 1962.—Legislation will be proposed to extend the present rate on certain excise taxes now scheduled for reduction or repeal on July 1, 1961, and to retain all receipts from aviation gasoline in the general fund. The proposed legislation as to rate extensions will cancel refunds which would have been applicable to floor stocks of certain taxable articles on hand as of July 1, 1961. The proposed legislation on aviation gasoline will eliminate refunds which under present law are charged to the Highway trust fund. It is anticipated that refunds of internal revenue tax collections will decrease by $229 million in 1962 as a result of the proposed legislation.

BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING FUND

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing designs, manufactures, and supplies all major evidences of a financial character issued by the United States. It is the sole source of U.S. currency and Federal Reserve notes, certificates of indebtedness, as well as most of the minor evidences of a financial character issued by the United States, such as postage, internal revenue, customs, and savings stamps. In addition, the Bureau prints bonds, commissions, certificates, etc. The Bureau also prints bonds, postage and internal revenue stamps for the governments of insular possessions.

The Bureau finances its operations out of reimbursements received from other agencies for all direct and indirect costs, including administrative expenses (31 U.S.C. 181-181e).

Budget program.—The anticipated work volume is based on estimates of requirements submitted by agencies served. The program comprises the following activities:

1. Engraving and printing—(a) Currency.—The anticipated deliveries reflect an overall decrease of 10.8% in 1961 and 12.5% in 1962 as compared with deliveries made in 1960. Analysis of this decrease by type of currency reflects a reduction in requirements for U.S. currency of 11.9% in 1961 with an additional reduction of 1.6% in 1962. Requirements for Federal Reserve notes decrease 8.7% in the current year with an additional 1.9% in the budget year.

(b) Stamps.—Estimated requirements for this class of work reflect an increase of 11% in 1961 and 14% in 1962 over 1960, due principally to an appreciable rise in the demand for postage stamps.

(c) Securities.—This program encompasses the production of a wide variety of bonds, notes, and debentures for the Bureau of the Public Debt and certain other agencies of the Government. The anticipated requirements of the agencies in 1961 and 1962 are substantially the same as deliveries made in 1960.

(d) Commissions, certificates, etc.—The estimated requirements of the various agencies for this type work indicate an increase of 45% in 1961 and 58% in 1962 as compared with 1960. Although this represents a substantial increase in the volume requirements, the total production cost for all of these items represents only slightly more than 1% of the overall engraving and printing program.

2. Purchase of card checks.—Effective July 1, 1960, all functions formerly performed by the Bureau in connection with the awarding of the annual contract to a commercial firm for the printing of Government checks in punched card form, and exercising administrative control over their procurement was transferred to the Office of the Treasurer of the United States.

3. Operation and maintenance of the incinerator and space utilized by other agencies.—Charges are made to other agencies on an actual cost basis for use of the incinerator and maintenance services provided for the space they occupy in the Bureau's buildings.

4. Other direct charges for miscellaneous services.—Charges for a wide variety of miscellaneous services performed by Bureau personnel are made to the agencies concerned on an actual cost basis.

Operating results and financial condition.—The Bureau sustained a loss of $181 as a result of operations during 1960. This loss, together with a deficit of $64 thousand brought forward from prior years, will be recovered from any profits accruing in subsequent years in accordance with provisions of 31 U.S. Code 181–181e. Budget expenditures are expected to exceed receipts in the amount of $299 thousand in 1961 and estimated to be $201 thousand below receipts in 1962.

The capital of the fund is expected to remain at $25.3 million represented by an appropriation of $3.3 million and donated assets of $22 million.

commerce in navigable waters, promotes the safety of the American Merchant Marine and maintains a state of military readiness to serve as a part of the Navy in time of war or national emergency.

Direct program by activities—1. Vessel operations.—Multifunctional vessels are strategically stationed along the coast and inland waterways for search and rescue; tending aids to navigation; operating an international ice observation and patrol service in the North Atlantic Ocean; performing limited ice breaking in navigable lakes, rivers, canals, and harbors; and for law enforcement.

3. Shore stations and aids operations.—Bases, moorings and lifeboat stations are strategically situated for search, rescue and law enforcement and for maintaining aids to navigation. Port security units control anchorage areas; supervise the loading and unloading of dangerous cargoes; and screen merchant seamen and longshoremen to bar subversive elements from merchant vessels and critical waterfront areas.

Buoys, lightships, lighthouses, fog signal stations, light attendant stations, radiobeacons, and loran stations are maintained as navigational aids in the waters of the United States, its possessions and military bases overseas. Radio stations provide rapid communication incident to all Coast Guard operations. They also maintain a guard on the international maritime distress frequencies. Marine inspection offices and detachments administer laws and issue regulations on safety equipment and inspection of merchant vessels, and on licensing and certification of Merchant Marine officers and crews. They review plans for construction or alteration of merchant vessels, investigate marine accidents, and handle disciplinary cases. These offices also administer the small-boat safety program.

6. Administration and operational control.—This activity provides for administrative services performed by headquarters at Washington, D.C., district and area offices, regional inspection offices and liaison activities with other agencies.

7. Other military personnel expense.—This activity provides for certain military personnel expenses such as social security, the pay of personnel in hospitals and in transit, expense of permanent changes of stations, including travel of dependents and transportation of household effects; and expenses of military separation, training, recreation, and death gratuities.

8. Supporting programs.—This activity consists of procurement of ammunition and maintenance of ordnance; replacement of vehicles, boats, and electronic equipment; transportation of materials; and printing. These programs have such general applicability that they cannot properly be charged to specific units.

10. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship between direct costs and direct obligations is derived from year-end balances of selected resources and applicable adjustment as shown in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

11. Reimbursable program by activities—Operation of ocean stations.—The operation of 6 ocean stations (4 in the Atlantic and 2 in the Pacific), on the basis of 3 cutters per station is financed by the Department of Defense as a defense requirement. These vessels perform the dual function of ocean station duty and search and rescue.

12. Miscellaneous services to other accounts.—Various activities of the Coast Guard are financed by other agencies. They include, in part, operation of one vessel for the United States Information Agency.

13. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship between reimbursable costs and reimbursable obligations is derived from year-end balances of selected resources and applicable adjustment as reflected in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

This appropriation provides for the acquisition, construction, rebuilding, and improvement of vessels, aircraft, shore stations, and aids to navigation.

Direct program by activities—1. Vessels.—A program for replacement of the 83-foot wooden-hulled patrol craft with 82-foot steel-hulled craft was begun in 1960. The 1962 request will provide for construction of 10 of these craft. Some of these boats will replace the remaining 83-foot patrol boats and the balance will provide interim replacements for certain old and deteriorated larger vessels. The replacement programs for buoy boats and harbor tugs begun in 1960 and 1961, respectively, will be continued in 1962 with the construction of two buoy boats and four tugs. A vessel replacement program will be further augmented with the construction of two medium-endurance vessels.

2. Aviation facilities.—Implementation of the Revised Joint Report on the Requirements of Coast Guard Aviation will be continued in 1962 by the procurement of three fixed-wing (SC-130B) and two helicopter (HUS) replacement aircraft, and by the establishment of a helicopter detachment at Los Angeles, Calif. The new detachment will require procurement of two additional helicopters (HUS) and supporting facilities. Additional life-of-type spare parts will be procured to cover the extended 5-year life of four recently modified, fixed-wing (UF-2G) aircraft. At the same time, a warehouse will be constructed at the Aircraft Repair and Supply Base, Elizabeth City, N.C., for storage of aircraft spare parts.

3. Shore stations and navigational aids.—Aids to navigation will be established in waterways improved and developed by the Corps of Engineers. Other aids will be established or replaced as made necessary by the natural shifting of channels and the changing needs of marine commerce. Fixed light structures will be constructed on marine sites to replace Savannah and Stone Horse

Lightship stations. In addition, minor rebuilding and improvements will be affected to the existing systems of fixed aids and to one lifeboat station.

4. Repair and supply facilities.—Quarters and necessary facilities for officers and enlisted men will be constructed at base, Miami Beach, Fla. Major repairs will be made to the drydocks at the yard and essential improvements will be made to the facilities of the bases at St. Louis, Mo., and Morehead City, N.C.

5. Training and recruiting facilities.—One 500-man barracks will be constructed at receiving center, Cape May, N.J., in the first phase of a long-range program to rehabilitate the facilities at that unit. The program for expansion of permanent facilities at the academy, New London, Conn., will be continued in 1962 with the construction of new barracks, galley, mess, and recreation facilities for enlisted personnel and the conversion of the present enlisted men's barracks building to classrooms.

Reimbursable programs—6. Loran to meet Department of Defense requirements.—This program is accomplished by the Coast Guard with reimbursement from the Department of Defense. Reimbursements of $21.8 million in 1961 provide for construction of 11 additional stations; construction of permanent facilities at 3 existing stations; acquisition of related support facilities for 10 stations; the training of personnel; and the manning and initial operation of the stations during the shakedown period. The 1962 estimate contemplates reimbursement of $10 million to continue the Loran construction program.

The Reserve training program is designed to provide a trained force of 39,600 officers and enlisted personnel in the Ready Reserve available for active duty in time of war or national emergency and at such other times as the national security requires to fill the needs of the Coast Guard.

The training program is organized into categories analogous to the required phases of mobilization. The primary category is designed to provide trained units and personnel for specific assignments within 15 days of the outset of mobilization. This program provides 48 paid drills of at least 2 hours' duration and 2 weeks active duty for training for personnel assigned to organized training units who occupy positions that require continued training in critical specialties in order to maintain a high degree of proficiency for unit or individual mobilization assignments. The second category is designed to provide specialized training to additional individuals, scheduled for early mobilization, in nonpay units and/or 15 to 30 days' periodic active duty for training. The third and final category is comprised of personnel scheduled for mobilization within 6 months of the outset of mobilization who, due to previous training either in units or on active duty and in some cases whose civilian occupations are closely allied to their military specialties, do not require frequent training.

The proposed program for 1962 will provide a total of 31,760 officers and enlisted personnel in all categories of the Ready Reserve by the end of the fiscal year. This figure represents a reduction of 1,490 personnel from that attained by the end of 1961 due to the high rate of attrition among those reservists whose enlistments expire or whose obligations are completed.

Direct program by activities—1. Trainee expense.—The program for 1961 provides for an increase from 16,187 to 16,777 in the number of reservists to receive training of the types required for mobilization purposes. 1962 provides a decrease from 16,777 to 16,556 in the number to receive the same types of training. This reduction results from a decrease of 281 in the number of trainees to receive 6 months' active duty for training, an increase of 55 to perform 15-30 days' active duty for training, an increase of 5 trainees to receive paid training in organized training units, and normal attrition.

2. Operation of training facilities.—This activity encompasses the operation of facilities for the training of Reserve personnel at the receiving center, Cape May, N.J.; training station, Groton, Conn.; base, Alameda, Calif., and Reserve Training Center, Yorktown, Va. It also includes the operation of 2 training vessels and 223 Organized Reserve training units.

These facilities were utilized to provide training to reservists in 1961 and will be utilized in 1962. Increased utilization of centralized training centers, such as Reserve Training Center, Yorktown, Va., for the 2 weeks active duty for training programs has enabled the Coast Guard to more closely align its training program with mobilization objectives. Both the proficiency of units and the individuals assigned are expected to improve as a result of this training program change.

The decrease in number of 6-month personnel to receive training permits the reduction of 22 enlisted instructors, and funds for maintenance and ammunition at the various training facilities utilized for this purpose. The savings realized through this reduction has been reallocated to other items under this activity to offset increased costs of temporary instructors for the summer active-duty-for-training program; increased costs for the operation and maintenance of organized training units; and for 6 additional personnel required to administer enlisted correspondence courses at the Coast Guard Institute.

3. Construction of training facilities.—There will be no construction, activation or improvements projects undertaken in 1962.

4. Administration.—This activity encompasses all administrative costs at both headquarters and district offices associated with the management of the Reserve training program, recruitment of personnel, and the "in training and ineffectives" billets for personnel in school, in transit, etc. This program provides for the same level of administration as the previous year.

5. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources and applicable adjustment as reflected in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

Intragovernmental funds:COAST GUARD SUPPLY FUND

The Coast Guard supply fund, in accordance with 14 U.S.C. 650, finances the procurement of uniform clothing, commissary provisions, general stores, and technical materials. The fund is financed by reimbursements from Coast Guard appropriations for goods purchased.

Costs of approximately $15.6 million to be incurred under this fund in 1962 are divided: 12% for uniform clothing, 68% for commissary provisions, 22% for general stores and technical materials.

Sales are expected to be $771 thousand more in 1961 than in 1960. For the most part this increase is attributable to an overall increase in personnel. Sales in 1962 are expected to be $300 thousand above 1960, but $500 thousand below the 1961 sales.

Since very little variation is expected between sales and purchases, the inventory level will remain near the 1960 level.

PART III

ESTIMATES FOR TRUST FUNDS

Table 10. Trust Receipts and Expenditures
Detailed Estimates

INTRODUCTION TO PART III

Part III of the budget contains a summary table on trust and deposit funds, and detailed schedules and explanatory statements on the various trust funds. It excludes the detail on trust fund programs which require annual action by Congress (shown in part II) and the detail on the District of Columbia municipal government funds (contained in a separate budget volume).

TRUST AND DEPOSIT FUNDS DISTINGUISHED

The funds which are covered in this part of the budget are of two types, as follows:

Trust funds are those funds established to account for receipts which are held in trust by the Government for use in carrying out specific purposes and programs in accordance with a trust agreement or a statute. Within the category of trust funds, there is a subcategory of trust revolving funds, which are trust funds used to carry on a cycle of business-type operations, including certain corporations which are partly owned by the Government and partly by private interests.

Deposit funds are those funds established to account for collections that are either (a) held in suspense temporarily and later refunded or paid into some other fund of the Government, or (b) held by the Government as banker or agent for others, being paid out in lump sums at the direction of the owner. Such funds are not available for paying salaries, expenses, grants, or other expenditures of the Government.

While the transactions in these groups of funds are a part of the financial program of the Government, trust and deposit funds are not fully owned by the Government; hence these transactions are excluded from budget totals.

TRUST FUND RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES

Receipts.—Like budget receipts, trust fund receipts are based upon collections received and deposited, including U.S. Government securities received in lieu of cash and contributions to the trust funds from the general fund. The conversion of U.S. Government securities on hand into cash is excluded from receipts, but such sales and redemptions are listed in special analysis F of part IV on a net basis.

Expenditures.—Like budget expenditures, trust fund expenditures are stated on a checks-issued basis, less refunds collected. Net investments in U.S. Government securities are excluded from the figures, and are listed in special analysis F of part IV.

Trust revolving funds.—The small group of funds which constitute trust revolving funds are reported on a net expenditure basis. The collections of trust revolving funds, instead of being taken into the tables as receipts, are deducted from expenditures. The gross figures are shown in a supplementary summary table and in the detailed schedules.

OBLIGATIONAL AUTHORITY FOR TRUST FUNDS

Trust fund receipts must be appropriated before they can be obligated or spent, with the exception of those few cases where the law grants a contract authorization in advance (for example, the highway trust fund).

Most trust funds are appropriated by permanent law, not requiring further action by Congress. Usually the appropriations equal the receipts of the year. In a few cases receipts of trust funds can be spent only in accordance with appropriations enacted by Congress from year to year. Examples are the highway trust fund, funds of the United States Soldiers' Home, and the municipal revenues of the District of Columbia (which are accounted for as trust funds by the Federal Government). In a few other cases, trust fund receipts are permanently appropriated for benefit payments, but limitations on administrative expenses payable out of the trust funds are imposed by annual action of the Congress.

DEPOSIT FUND EXPENDITURES

Table 10 includes deposit fund expenditures by department or agency. These expenditures are on a net basis; that is, the collections are deducted from checks issued, and the resulting figure is shown as an expenditure. Checks issued include transactions to move money into other funds, as well as refunds and the return of money to depositors. When the collections are larger than the gross expenditures, the amount shown as an expenditure is a negative item.

NET ACCUMULATION IN TRUST AND DEPOSIT FUNDS

Table 10 shows the net accumulation during each year in all the trust and deposit funds. This represents the result obtained when the trust and deposit fund expenditures are subtracted from the trust receipts of the year. Since trust and deposit funds, as well as Federal funds, affect the total cash balance of the Treasury and the total public debt, the final figures in table 10 are carried forward into table 4 of part I. Data on the unexpended balances of the largest trust funds are appended to the table.

DETAIL OF TRUST FUND ESTIMATES

The detailed material in part III covers the trust funds which do not require annual action by Congress. Consolidated schedules are used for the smaller trust funds of each bureau or independent agency.

The material here follows the general format of the similar material in part II, with the principal exception that these schedules show receipts in place of showing appropriations. In cases where the receipts are not permanently appropriated as the money is collected, the schedules identify the portion of the unobligated balances on hand which is appropriated and the portion which is unappropriated. Also, no appropriation language appears here, and the narrative statement of program and performance usually consists only of an explanation of the sources of money for the fund, the purposes for which it is authorized to be spent, and the legal citations.

TRUST FUNDS

Trust funds are not federally owned and their transactions are therefore excluded from budget receipts and expenditures. Nevertheless, trust funds are significant parts of the Government's program, particularly in labor, welfare, and highway activities. Table 5 of part I of this budget shows budget expenditures, trust expenditures, and total Federal payments to the public for 1962.

Trust receipts and expenditures are both estimated at about $25.2 billion in 1962. The bulk of the transactions and most of the money are in the eight major trust funds discussed below.

Social security and Federal employee staff programs for retirement, disability, or death.—The Federal disability insurance, Federal old-age and survivors insurance (OASI), the Railroad retirement account, and the Federal employees trust funds provide insurance against the loss of income due to retirement, disability, or death. Payments are made primarily from moneys derived from payroll taxes on employers, employees, and the self-employed. Receipts not immediately needed for benefit outlays are invested in securities of the Federal Government and earn interest, while a deficit is financed by cashing holdings of such securities. The first two trust funds are authorized by the Social Security Act of 1935, as amended, and comprise the Federal old-age, survivors, and disability insurance (OASDI) program. The 1960 amendments to the Social Security Act liberalized the insured status requirements for benefits, authorized benefits for disabled workers—regardless of age—and their dependents, provided increases in children's benefits, and liberalized the retirement test for beneficiaries. As a result of the amendments 1.3 million additional beneficiaries will be on the rolls at the end of 1962, bringing the total number of persons receiving benefits to 17.2 million.

Expenditures from the OASDI trust funds will increase by \$1.1 billion in 1962 due to the normal year-to-year increase in the number of beneficiaries and as a result of the increased benefit outlays resulting from the 1960 amendments. Expenditures of the OASI trust fund, alone, are expected to exceed receipts in 1961 and 1962. The combined tax rate paid by employers and employees (including $\frac{1}{4}\%$ on each for disability insurance) is scheduled to increase on January 1, 1963, from 6% to 7% and should enable the fund to resume building up reserves after 1962.

The railroad retirement system is closely coordinated with OASDI and serves as a combined social insurance and staff retirement system for workers in the railroad industry. Payrolls are taxed at $6\frac{1}{4}\%$ on both employers and employees. Receipts of the Railroad retirement account were abnormally high in 1960 because of a special payment from the Federal OASI trust fund for both 1959 and 1960.

Most Federal civilian workers are covered under either the Civil Service Retirement Act or the Foreign Service Retirement Act. Since 1957, Armed Forces personnel have been covered under both the OASI system (on a contributory basis) and under the military retirement system (financed directly from appropriated budget funds).

The following table indicates the number of individuals receiving monthly benefits from these trust funds at the end of each year (in thousands):

Unemployment trust fund.—Unemployment insurance was also initiated for most workers by the Social Security Act, and for railroad workers by the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act. Payroll taxes paid by employers are deposited in the unemployment trust fund. The States and the Railroad Retirement Board draw upon this fund to pay weekly benefits to eligible unemployed workers. The Railroad Retirement Board and, starting in 1961, the Bureau of Employment Security also draw upon the fund for unemployment insurance administrative expenses and the portion of taxes earmarked for these purposes are deposited in the fund.

Expenditures of the Unemployment trust fund are estimated to be $4.2 billion in 1961 and $3.8 billion in 1962, a decrease of $0.4 billion due to an anticipated decline in the number of claims filed for compensation as present levels of insured unemployment recede. Receipts are estimated at about $3.6 billion for both 1961 and 1962, resulting in a decline in the year-end balance of the fund from $6.7 billion at the end of 1960 to $6.1 billion at the end of 1961 and $5.9 billion at the end of 1962.

Receipts from the Federal Unemployment Tax Act are estimated at $470 million in 1962, an increase of $123 million over 1961 due mostly to an increase in the rate of the tax from 0.3% to 0.4%. Receipts not needed for current administrative expenses will be used to rebuild the Federal unemployment account from which loans are made to State reserve accounts under specified conditions.

Veterans life insurance.—The trust accounts in the Veterans Administration consist mainly of two life insurance programs: The National service life insurance fund for veterans of World War II and the United States Government life insurance fund for veterans of World War I.

Both funds are operated largely on a commercial basis. Receipts come from premiums, interest on investments, and transfers from budgeted funds of the Federal Government to cover losses resulting from war hazards. Payments from the fund are made for dividends, death, and disability claims and for termination of policies in force.

In 1962, an estimated $258 million will be paid in dividends and $410 million in death and disability claims and other expenses. The funds represent about 5.5 million policies in force at a value of $35 billion.

Highway trust fund.—Receipts from certain excise taxes on motor fuels, tires, and trucks are used to finance expenditures for Federal-aid highways.

The Highway Act of 1959 increased motor fuel taxes by 1 cent to 4 cents per gallon, for the period October 1, 1959, through June 30, 1961. In addition, from July 1, 1961, to June 30, 1964, half of the excise on passenger automobiles and five-eighths of the tax on parts and accessories are scheduled for diversion from the general fund to the trust fund. At present tax rates the diversion would yield $810 million in 1962.

It is again proposed that the motor fuel tax be increased to 4½ cents per gallon effective July 1, 1961, to continue through 1972. Revenue increases under this proposal are estimated to be about $780 million in 1962 and will be adequate in later years to permit completion of the Interstate System by 1973. This action will also make unnecessary the scheduled diversion of excises from the general fund and legislation is proposed to rescind this tax provision of the Highway Act of 1959.

Legislative proposals will also be submitted to finance authorizations for forest and public lands highways from the Highway trust fund and to retain revenues from aviation gasoline taxes in the general fund.

Federal National Mortgage Association secondary market operations.—In the secondary market part of its operations the Association buys and sells federally insured or guaranteed mortgages at prices prevailing in the market. These operations are, over a period of time, self-supporting in accordance with statutory objectives. Funds required for mortgage purchases in 1962 will be obtained: (a) from private sources through the sale of the Association's debentures; (b) through mortgage sales and repayments; (c) through the sale of common stock which all mortgage sellers are required to purchase; and (d) by sale of preferred stock to the Treasury in accordance with the statutory requirement that the Association maintain a minimum ratio of capital to debt of 1 to 10. Net trust expenditures are estimated to increase by $238 million in 1962 as a result of increased mortgage purchases.

This fund is used to pay annuities to eligible widows and dependent children of deceased judges of the United States, to make refunds to former judges who elected to come under the Judicial Survivors Annuity System but who have left the service, and to pay claims of survivors of member judges for any unpaid amounts credited to the individual accounts of such judges (28 U.S.C. 376).

On June 30, 1960, there were 350 judges participating in the system as compared with only 338 as of June 30, 1959. The increase is due primarily to a reduction in the number of judgeship vacancies from 24 at the beginning of the year to 13 at the end of the year.

There were 129 survivor annuitants on the roll as of June 30, 1960, as compared with 130 at the close of the 2 previous years. Although the number of annuitants on the rolls has remained at approximately the same level during the past 2 years, the average annuity during this same period has increased. It is expected the average annuity will continue to increase for the reason that future awards to annuitants will be computed on the basis of a higher 5-year average annual salary of judges, whereas, the present roll of survivor annuitants reflects the reduced annuities granted to existing widows at the beginning of the system.

1. Advances, Mutual Security Act.—Payments are received from foreign nations for military supplies, equipment, and services which the United States military departments transfer from their stocks or procure under contract. In most cases, cash payments are made before delivery. However, when determined by the President to be in the best interests of the United States, payments for deliveries of materiel from stock may be made within a reasonable time after delivery, not to exceed 3 years. Normally, this period is limited to 120 days. In the case of new procurement, the foreign governments must advance sufficient funds to meet required contract payments and, in addition, must provide the United States with a dependable undertaking to assure that no loss will accrue to the United States in case of contract cancellation or termination (Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, 22 U.S.C. 1816).

2. Philippine assistance.—By agreement with the Philippine Government, the International Cooperation Administration acts as its agent, utilizing dollars advanced by the Philippines to procure commodities for them (Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, 22 U.S.C. 1795(b)).

3. Technical assistance, U.S. dollars advanced from foreign governments.—Funds advanced by foreign countries are used to pay some local costs of technical cooperation programs in those countries in accordance with bilateral agreements (Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, 22 U.S.C. 1795(b)).

EMPLOYEES HEALTH BENEFITS FUND

This fund finances the payment of subscription charges to approved carriers of the costs of health benefits protection as provided by the Federal Employees Health Benefits Act of 1959 (73 Stat. 713), together with expenses incurred by the Civil Service Commission in administration of the act.

Budget program.—The act provides that beginning in 1962 the Employees health benefits fund will be available to pay for administrative expenses incurred by the Commission, within such limitation as may be specified by the Congress. It is estimated that there will be approximately 1.8 million employee participants in this country and overseas, or approximately 90% of those eligible. In addition, approximately 116,000 eligible employee and survivor annuitants will be participating by the end of 1962. It is estimated that during 1962, approximately $317.3 million will be deposited in the Employees health benefits fund. Of that amount, covered active employees will pay $187 million, participating annuitants $9.8 million, and the Government $120.5 million. On the basis of these forecasts, $305.6 million will be paid from the fund to approved health benefit plans. Amounts not to exceed 3% of the total contributions toward each plan will be set aside in the fund to provide a contingency reserve which will be used to defray increases in future rates, or to reduce contributions, or to provide increased benefits. An amount not to exceed 1% of all contributions will be set aside in the fund for any expenses incurred by the Civil Service Commission in the administration of this act.

Financing.—The fund will be financed by contributions from participants and the Government. In 1960 and 1961 administrative expenses were financed by loans from the Employees life insurance fund, which are to be repaid by the end of 1961.

Operating results.—Earnings will be retained to meet the cost of administration and future benefits.

LIMITATION ON ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES, EMPLOYEES HEALTH BENEFITS FUND

Note.—The supporting detail of the above item is shown in the Independent Offices chapter in part II, p. 132.

EMPLOYEES LIFE INSURANCE FUND

This fund finances the payment of group life insurance premiums to private insurance companies under the Federal Employees' Group Life Insurance Act of 1954 (5 U.S.C. 2091-2103) and any expenses incurred by the Civil Service Commission in administration of this act as annually authorized by Congress. In 1960, 1961, and 1962, loans are made from this fund to the health benefits funds for administrative expenses. These loans are to be repaid with interest in 1961 and 1963.

Budget program.—Through June 30, 1960, a total of $417.6 million was withheld from the salaries of covered employees and $208.8 million was contributed by the Government to the fund. It is estimated that, in 1962, a sum of $86 million will be paid into the fund by employees and $43 million by the Government. As of June 30, 1960, a total of $363 million had been paid by the insurer in benefits. An estimated $90 million in benefits will be paid in 1962.

Most of the difference between receipts and benefit payments is held by the insurer as a contingency reserve. Upon completion of the annual policy accounting at the end of each policy year this reserve is reduced to $100 million by refunding the excess for redeposit in the Treasury of the United States for credit to the insurance fund. As of June 30, 1960, such refunds amounted to $112.2 million which represented the accumulated excess computed through the fifth policy year ended November 28, 1959. The estimated returns of $41 million in 1961 and $42 million in 1962 netted against premium payments result in the substantial increase in retained earnings which will be used to meet the cost of future benefits.

A summary statement of the operations of the contingency reserve for the three most recent policy years, 1957 through 1959 and the total at the end of the fifth policy year follows:

RETIRED EMPLOYEES HEALTH BENEFITS FUND

This fund established in accordance with the Retired Federal Employees Health Benefits Act of 1960 (74 Stat. 849) finances (1) the payment of subscription charges to an approved carrier for those qualified employees and survivors who enroll in the uniform governmentwide health benefits plan; (2) the contribution to qualified employees and survivors who retain or purchase non-government approved health insurance plans; and (3) the payment of expenses incurred by the Civil Service Commission in administration of the act.

Budget program.—Expenses necessary for administering the health benefits program are authorized commencing in 1961; however, the provisions relating to health benefits are effective on July 1, 1961. The act authorized the Commission to use money from the Employees life insurance fund, without regard to limitation on expenditures from that fund, through June 30, 1962, for administrative expenses in carrying out the provisions of the act. It is estimated that there will be approximately 380,000 retired Federal employees and survivors who will elect to participate in the program, half of whom will enroll in the governmentwide plan. During 1962, at least $31,150 thousand will be deposited in the fund. Participating retired employees will pay at least $10,250 thousand and the Government will pay $20,900 thousand. It is estimated that at least $20,500 thousand in subscription charges will be paid to the carrier of the governmentwide plan. An amount up to 2% of the Government's contribution toward benefits is provided for administrative expenses.

Financing.—The fund will be financed by contributions from those participants enrolled in the governmentwide plan and by Government contributions. During 1961, it is estimated that $305 thousand will be loaned by the Employees life insurance fund for administrative expenses, and $315 thousand in 1962.

Operating results.—Expenses for administering this program are being financed in 1961 by the above-mentioned loan, since the Government contribution is limited to 2% and begins in 1962, the projected deficit as of June 30, 1962, amounts to $224 thousand. It is anticipated that this fund will carry a deficit through 1963.

In addition, funds from private sources for maintenance and operation of air navigation and related facilities are credited to this fund. These funds are expended through the pertinent appropriations. Amounts are not projected for 1962, as it is anticipated that these activities will be financed through reimbursement to the appropriations under which the activities are provided.

3. Aeronautical training of foreign students.—Advances from foreign governments are used in the training of students in aeronautical and related subjects (31 U.S.C. 725s) and (62 Stat. 452).

This fund serves as a clearinghouse for payments by U.S. communications companies and other telecommunication users, including the Federal Government, to foreign governments for receiving and relaying radio-telephone and radiotelegraph messages. The charges of foreign governments against U.S. users are received by the Commission and billed to the users. The Commission then consolidates and disburses all telecommunication payments to a particular government.

NATIONAL CAPITAL HOUSING AUTHORITYOPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, PROPERTIES AIDED BY PUBLIC HOUSING ADMINISTRATION (TRUST REVOLVING FUND)

The National Capital Housing Authority operates the low-rent public housing program in the District of Columbia under the authority of the Housing Act of 1937 and title II of the District of Columbia Alley Dwelling Act (48 Stat. 930). The 1962 program consists of the operation of 7,907 dwelling units and the development of 1,412 additional units. Management and development operations are financed through rental income, loans, and annual contributions. There is no debt service on Federal projects conveyed to the Authority for low-rent use; all other projects are permanently financed through the sale of Housing Authority bonds which are supported by the pledge of the Public Housing Administration to pay annual contributions equal to the debt service less any excess operating receipts over operating expense.

Income.—The income of the Railroad retirement account consists of taxes paid by railroad employers and employees; interest on investments; repayments on amounts loaned to the Railroad unemployment insurance administration fund; and payments from the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund. The railroad retirement system has a reinsurance arrangement of financial interchanges with the social security system.

Budget program—1. Retirement and survivor benefit payments.—Payment estimates reflect the continuing growth in the beneficiary rolls.

2. Administrative expenses.—Such expenses are subject to annual limitations in appropriation acts (see "Limitation on salaries and expenses," Railroad Retirement Board, in pt. II of the budget).

3. Payment to "Federal disability insurance trust fund".—Payments are made between the Railroad retirement account and the Federal disability insurance trust fund and the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund so as to place these funds in the same position in which they would have been if railroad employment had been included in social security coverage. Under current conditions, the Railroad retirement account receives payments from the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund and makes payments to the Federal disability trust fund (65 Stat. 687; 70 Stat. 837).

4. Loan to "Railroad unemployment insurance administration fund".—The Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act provides that when the balance in the Railroad unemployment insurance account is insufficient to pay benefits due under that act, necessary amounts are to be borrowed from the Railroad retirement account. When the balance in the Railroad unemployment insurance administration fund permits, borrowed amounts are to be repaid to the Railroad retirement account, with interest at 3% per annum.

The Board administers an unemployment and sickness insurance system and an employment service to find jobs for unemployed railroad workers. The administrative expenses are shown as a separate account in the Unemployment trust fund and are financed through a permanent appropriation of 0.2% of taxable payroll. As of each June 30, the unobligated balance in this fund in excess of $6 million is transferred to the Railroad unemployment insurance account in the Unemployment trust fund (45 U.S.C. 361).

1. Maintenance of earnings accounts.—The amounts of insurance payments for unemployment, sickness, and maternity benefits are based upon individual records of earnings and daily wage rates. This workload fluctuates with the level of employment in the railroad industry, rates of turnover, and similar factors. The costs are shared on a measured basis with the retirement program. Compensation items processed were 1,665 thousand in 1960 and are estimated to be 1,698 thousand in 1961 and 1,732 thousand in 1962.

2. Processing of unemployment insurance claims.—Workers' claims for unemployment compensation are filed locally and certified for payment through regional offices. Regular unemployment claims were 2,026 thousand in 1960 and are estimated at 2 million in 1961 and 1.5 million in 1962. In 1960 there also was processed a large one-time load created by the 1959 amendments, which increased benefits retroactively.

3. Processing of sickness and maternity claims.—These claims are filed by mail and certified for payment through the regional offices of the Board. Sickness claims were 880 thousand in 1960 and estimated to be at about the same level in 1961 and 1962.

4. Claimant placement services.—The Board conducts an employment service for unemployed benefit claimants. In 1960, manpower was diverted from this activity to meet a critical need in processing amendment workloads. In 1961 and 1962 this work is reverting to normal levels, with an expected increase in placements from 28 thousand in 1960, representing savings in benefit payments of $1,900 thousand, to 45 thousand placements and $3,500 thousand in savings in each of the years 1961 and 1962.

5. Administration.—The costs of administration are shared between this and the retirement program on a measured basis.

6. Relation of costs to obligations.—Relation is derived from year-end balances of selected resources as reflected in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

This fund was established in 1940 as the financing mechanism for World War II servicemen's and veterans' insurance program authorized by the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940. Over 22 million policies were issued under this program of which about 5.3 million, totaling approximately $34.6 billion, remain in force. Because issuance of new policies was ended in 1951 the insurance in force will continue to decline. The general decline in the activity of the fund is indicated in the following table:

The assets of the fund, which are largely invested in special Treasury interest-bearing securities and in policy loans are expected to increase from $6,136 million as of June 30, 1960, to $6,475 million as of June 30, 1962. The current actuarial estimate of policy obligations totals $5,645 million, leaving a balance of $491 million for contingency reserves.

The income of the fund derives from premium receipts, interest on investments, and payments which are made to the fund from the appropriation Veterans insurance and indemnities, for claims (1) resulting from extra hazards of the veterans' service, and (2) arising on certain policies held by personnel on active duty. Administrative expenses are charged to the appropriation General operating expenses.

The fund is operated on a commercial basis to the greatest possible extent consistent with law. In the program and financing statement above, the noncash transactions, which are offset by other claims of the fund, are subtracted from program costs in order to show obligations of the fund. The following business-type statements of income and expense and financial condition include these noncash transactions relating to the status of insurance policy accounts.

This fund was established in 1919 to receive premiums and pay claims on insurance issued under the provisions of the War Risk Insurance Act. Approximately 323,000 policies of U.S. Government life insurance, providing coverage of more than $1.4 billion, remain in force. The general decline in the activity of the fund is indicated in the following table:

The assets of the fund, which are largely invested in interest-bearing securities and policy loans, are estimated to decline from $1,222 million as of June 30, 1960, to $1,174 million as of June 30, 1962, as an increasing number of policies mature through death or disability. The actuarial evaluation of policy obligations as of June 30, 1960, totals $1,128 million, leaving a balance of $94 million for contingency reserves.

The income of the fund derives from premium receipts, interest on investments, and payments which are made to the fund from the appropriation Veterans insurance and indemnities, for claims (a) resulting from the extra hazards of the veteran's service, and (b) arising on certain policies held by personnel on active military duty. The secondary market operations of the Federal National Mortgage Association were authorized by the Housing Act of 1954 to provide limited liquidity for Government insured and guaranteed mortgages and to improve the distribution of investment capital available for home mortgage financing. Mortgage purchases under these operations are financed by the proceeds from (a) the sale of obligations to private investors, or to the Secretary of the Treasury (the Secretary of the Treasury may not at any one time hold more than $2.25 billion of such obligations), (b) subscriptions by the Secretary of the Treasury to FNMA preferred stock ($92.8 million was subscribed in 1955, $50 million in 1957, and will be increased in 1961 by $28 million and in 1962 by $40 million to a total of $210.8 million), (c) mandatory subscriptions to the Association's common stock, by mortgage sellers, (d) the sale of mortgages to the investing public, (e) repayments and prepayments of mortgage principal, and (f) income from operations. Government management is intended to be transitional, to be succeeded by private operations when the Government's investment is retired. The present interim program, financed by private as well as Government investment, is treated as a trust fund. Operations are discussed in part II of the budget in connection with the program's general fund financing and effect on budget expenditures.

FARMERS HOME ADMINISTRATIONSTATE RURAL REHABILITATION FUNDS

These funds are administered by the Farmers Home Administration, under agreements with 40 individual States, for use in carrying out titles I and II of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act. In these States, operating type loans are made at 5% interest. In some States, farm ownership type loans are made from these funds and insured under the regular Farmers Home Administration insured loan program at 5% of which 1% represents an insurance charge that is retained by the Government. The entire assets of the 40 State corporations are being administered by the Farmers Home Administration, with the exception of $11.8 million in cash and other assets returned to States for rural rehabilitation purposes agreed upon between each corporation and the Federal Government.

Declining activity is expected in 1961 and 1962 as a result of the further return of assets to State corporations. Actual and estimated loan operations for the fiscal years 1959, 1960, 1961, and 1962 are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

In connection with the insurance of loans and mortgages which are for construction, reconstruction, or reconditioning of vessels, and which are financed by sale of bonds to the general public, section 1111, Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended (73 Stat. 272, 273), authorizes the Secretary of Commerce to accept deposits in escrow of the proceeds from such sale of bonds, together with interest due to the bondholders.

Funds so deposited are to be used to make payments becoming due (a) on the construction, reconstruction, or reconditioning of the vessels, (b) for interest on the loan or mortgage, or (c) payments on account of principal in cases of default. Investments of the fund may be made in obligations of the United States with any income realized paid to the borrower or mortgagor.

Establishment of the fund was authorized by Public Law 86-127, enacted July 31, 1959. Through August 31, 1960, $49,348 thousands had been deposited into the fund covering construction of eight vessels. No additional deposits into this fund are anticipated to be made through 1962.

Note.—The supporting detail of the above item is reflected under "Salaries and expenses, general administration," legal activities and general administration, in the Department of Justice chapter in part II, p. 798.

ALIEN PROPERTY FUND, WORLD WAR II (TRUST REVOLVING FUND)

Seized property in the United States, of the governments or nationals of Germany and Japan, vested in the name of the Attorney General, is prepared for liquidation as soon as practicable (50 U.S.C. App.). At June 30, 1960, there had been transferred to the War claims fund $228.7 million. In 1960, a total of $6.2 million in claims and settlements was made from such property operations and it is anticipated that $2 million will be paid in 1961 and $1.8 million in 1962. Interest in vested property is estimated to be $181.4 million at June 30, 1962, decreasing $3.7 million from 1961 and $7.6 million from 1960.

These trust funds consist of amounts received from employers for the death of an employee where no person is entitled to compensation for such death and for fines and penalty payments. In 1960 receipts were $10 thousand and interest was $26 thousand (33 U.S.C. 908; 31 U.S.C. 725; 33 U.S.C. 944). Receipts are used to pay additional compensation for second injuries resulting in permanent total disability and to provide maintenance for employees undergoing vocational rehabilitation. In addition, under the subactivity Administration of rehabilitation, provision is made for the costs of necessary rehabilitation services not otherwise available to disabled longshoremen and harbor workers.

The fund is maintained through (a) contributions by participants, including all Foreign Service officers and eligible Foreign Service staff officers and employees; (b) interest on investments; and (c) Government (employer) contributions from appropriated funds. Participants contributed 5% of their basic annual salaries through October 15, 1960, when the rate became 6.5%. Government contributions were in the form of a specific appropriation for that purpose through 1961. Beginning in 1962, Government contributions will match participant contributions and will be paid from the same appropriations from which salaries are paid.

It is estimated that approximately 954 annuitants will be paid retirement benefits from this fund during 1962 compared with 625 at the end of 1960 and 822 at the end of 1961. Gratuities represent payments made to Foreign Service officers in classes 4, 5, 6, and 7 who are selected out of the Service.

1. Benefit payments.—The Social Security Act provides disability insurance benefits for certain disabled individuals and their dependents. An amount equal to one-half of 1% of wages paid and three-eighths of 1% of self-employment income is deposited to this fund for benefit payments and administrative expenses. The excess of income over outgo and annual interest are invested in Government securities.

2. Administration.—The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare determines, at the end of each year, that portion of the administrative expenses of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare which is a proper charge to this fund. The amount shown herein for the administrative expenses includes interest on the unpaid charges and is subject to further refinement of the processes for allocating costs between the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund and the Federal disability insurance trust fund (42 U.S.C. 401).

Payments are made between this account and the Railroad retirement account so as to place these funds in the same position in which they would have been if railroad employment had been included under social security coverage.

Under the Federal old-age and survivors insurance system, workers, employers and self-employed individuals make annual contributions in the form of taxes on earnings toward the benefits which will be payable when the worker retires or when he dies. An amount equal to the annual contributions is deposited in this trust fund for benefit payments and administrative expenses. Any excess of income over outgo together with annual interest is invested in Government securities (42 U.S.C. 401).

Payments are made between this trust fund and the Railroad retirement account so as to place this fund in the same position in which it would have been if railroad employment after 1936 had been included in social security coverage (45 U.S.C. 228E).

Commencing in 1961, in accordance with the Social Security Act Amendments of 1960 (Public Law 86-778 approved Sept. 13, 1960), the administrative expenses of unemployment compensation and employment services under the Federal-State system will be paid from the new account, largely by means of grants to States. Also, receipts from the Federal Unemployment Tax Act will be deposited in this account. In 1960 and previous years both the administrative expenses of this program and the Federal Unemployment Tax Act receipts were a part of the general budget, even though the receipts were earmarked for this program. These amendments also provide for reimbursement to the general fund of the Treasury for the expenses incurred by the Treasury Department, mostly for collecting this tax.

The Social Security Act Amendments of 1960 also increased the limit on the balance maintained in the Federal unemployment account from $200 million to $550 million. This account is maintained in order to make loans to States whenever benefit payments made by any State seriously deplete the balance in its unemployment trust account. The Federal unemployment account grows when tax receipts exceed State and Federal administrative expenses or when outstanding loans are repaid.

1-7. Foreign claims settlement.—The Foreign Claims Settlement Commission is authorized to adjudicate claims of American nationals against Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Italy, Poland, Rumania, and the Soviet Union. Upon certification by the Commission, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to make payments on awards.

8. Losses in melting gold.—Out of the receipts to be covered into the Treasury under section 7 of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934, an amount is made available sufficient to cover the difference between the volume of gold as carried in the general account of the Treasurer of the United States and the volume of such gold after melting and refining (48 Stat. 1061).

9. National defense conditional gifts.—The Secretary of the Treasury accepts, on behalf of the United States, conditional gifts of money or other intangible property to be used for a particular defense purpose. Intangibles other than money are converted at the best terms available. The moneys held in trust are paid to those appropriation accounts which best effectuate the intent of the donors (68 Stat. 566).

10. Payment of pre-1934 bonds of the Government of the Philippines.—This trust account provides for payment of principal and interest on outstanding bonds of the Philippines and its provinces, cities, and municipalities issued prior to May 1, 1934, under authority of acts of Congress. The value of unmatured outstanding bonds is $889 thousand (22 U.S.C. 1393(g)(5)).

11. Payment of unclaimed moneys.—Payments are made to individuals who establish their right to moneys held in trust pending claims of owners.

Unclaimed moneys of individuals whose whereabouts are known.—Amounts are held in trust awaiting settlement of allowances of claims (31 U.S.C. 725).

Matured obligations of the District of Columbia.—Funds from inactive accounts are transferred to this account to meet matured obligations of the District of Columbia when and if presented (31 U.S.C. 725s). As of June 30, 1960, there was a balance of $8 thousand in the fund.

To promote the education of the blind.—The $250 thousand uninvested credit, on the books of the Treasury, is an unexpendable endowment fund established to promote the education of the blind in the United States. A permanent annual appropriation of $10 thousand being equivalent to 4% on the principal, is paid to the American Printing House for the Blind (20 U.S.C. 101).

INTRODUCTION TO PART IV

Part IV of the budget contains a limited number of special analyses of budget data, which supplement material appearing in other parts of the budget. Most of the analyses include explanatory material which expands and elaborates these introductory notes.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT RECEIPTS FROM AND PAYMENTS TO THE PUBLIC

Special analysis A presents information on the flow of money between the public and the Federal Government as a whole, including both Federal funds and trust (and deposit) funds. In addition, certain transactions of five Government-sponsored enterprises are included. Major intragovernmental and noncash transactions are excluded in this consolidation. This analysis also presents a reconciliation with Treasury cash deposits and withdrawals as reported in the Daily Statement of the U.S. Treasury. The information here provides one measure of the impact of Government activities on the economy, and it serves as the basis for table 5 of part I, which summarizes the data for fiscal year 1962 only.

ANALYSIS OF BUDGET RECEIPTS

Special analysis B presents details on the budget receipts summarized in table 1 of part I. It includes a statement explaining the receipt estimates, together with a table giving a classification of receipts by source. The figures include receipts of both the general fund and the special funds. The text pertaining to taxes, customs, and refunds is prepared by the Treasury Department.

ANALYSIS OF THE BUDGET BY FUNCTION AND AGENCY

Special analysis C gives the details for the functional classification of new obligational authority and budget expenditures used in the budget message and in some of the tables of part I. It is compiled by regrouping the figures found in the chapter summaries of part II. The code numbers in the chapter summaries are the key to the grouping in this analysis.

CHARACTER ANALYSIS OF BUDGET EXPENDITURES

Special analysis D analyzes budget expenditures in terms of the duration and nature of the benefits derived. Expenditures yielding benefits over a period of years, that is, those of an investment type, are shown in two major categories—one for acquisition and improvement of Federal assets, and the other for developmental purposes such as additions to State, local, and private assets, and expenditures for research, education, and health. Expenditures yielding current benefits are also grouped in two major categories—one for aids and special services to various groups, and the other for the remaining current operating expenses. No adjustments are made for depreciation, obsolescence, allowances for losses on loans, and other items not reflected in current expenditure data.

FOREIGN CURRENCY AVAILABILITIES AND USES

Special analysis E presents information on foreign currencies accruing to the United States without purchase with dollars, and the disposition of such currencies. It covers currencies both for "country uses" (grants to and loans in the country from which the currencies are obtained) and for "U.S. uses." For 1960 currencies were in some cases made available to various agencies for U.S. uses without being reflected in the budget accounts; for 1961 and 1962, currencies for U.S. uses are generally in the budget accounts. The special analysis coordinates and supplements the information presented elsewhere in the budget on this subject.

SELECTED INVESTMENT AND INTERFUND TRANSACTIONS

Special analysis F sets forth certain investment and interfund transactions which are not reflected in the budget totals. The first group of transactions are the investments by public enterprise funds in U.S. securities (both Treasury issues and the securities of wholly owned Government enterprises) and the net borrowing or repayment of their debt held outside the Government. The second group covers similar transactions of trust funds. The foregoing transactions cause changes in cash balances and therefore the totals from these two sections of the table are included in computations shown in table 4 of part I.

The third group of transactions are the expenditure payments from revolving funds into the general fund, included in detailed expenditures and receipts, but deducted in total in table 1 of part I. The final portion of this analysis covers the nonexpenditure transfers by revolving funds to the general fund, representing the return of capital and the distribution of earnings.

HISTORICAL COMPARISON OF BUDGET RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES

Special analysis G presents a 10-year comparison of budget receipts and expenditures. Receipts are classified by source and expenditures by function. As in special analysis C, the code numbers in the chapter summaries of part II are the key to the grouping of items in the expenditure section of this analysis.

NOTE

In addition to the special analyses appearing in this part of the budget document, the analyses listed below are being published separately and single copies of each may be obtained, upon request, from the Bureau of the Budget.

- Federal Research and Development Programs.
- Federal Credit Programs.
- Federal Aid to State and Local Governments.

SPECIAL ANALYSIS A

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT RECEIPTS FROM AND PAYMENTS TO THE PUBLIC

This analysis presents information on the flow of money between the public and the Federal Government as a whole, representing, in effect, a consolidated cash statement of Federal transactions—other than borrowing—with the public. Included in this consolidation are the transactions of trust and deposit funds (which are not fully owned by the Federal Government), and net expenditures of Government-sponsored enterprises, as well as the Federal funds included in budget receipts and expenditures. (For a description of the differences between budget, trust, and other types of funds, see the introductions to part I and part III, pp. 2-3 and 920.) In consolidating these funds, major intragovernmental transactions which are reported as both expenditures and receipts are eliminated.

The transactions of the Federal Government on a consolidated cash basis are expected to result in an excess of Federal receipts from the public of $1.3 billion in the fiscal year 1962 as compared with an excess of receipts of $1.1 billion in the current year. This concept of Federal income and outgo is described in detail on pages 981-982 of this analysis. In general, in addition to consolidating budget, trust fund, and other transactions, it eliminates certain intragovernmental payments and transactions which do not represent cash flows between the Federal Government and the public.

The increase in the excess of receipts between 1961 and 1962 results mainly from the estimated increase in the budget surplus, with the net accumulation in the trust funds expected to be slightly higher in 1961 than in 1962. (For trust fund receipts and expenditures, see part III of this document, especially pp. 921-922.)

Receipts from the public are expected to rise to $103.1 billion in 1962, which is $4.1 billion higher than in the current fiscal year. Payments are estimated at $101.8 billion, an increase of $3.9 billion above the current fiscal year.

Federal receipts from the public by major source and payments to the public by major function: 1948-62.—Since 1948, receipts from and payments to the public have both increased at a faster rate than budget receipts and expenditures, with the growth of existing trust fund programs accompanied by employment tax increases (particularly old-age and survivors insurance) and the creation of new trust funds (principally the Highway trust fund). Both receipts from and payments to the public in 1962 will be more than double the comparable amount in any of the years 1948-50.

Income taxes have provided most of the increase in receipts from the public, and have more than doubled since 1948. Individual income taxes in 1962 will have risen by $26.2 billion and corporate income taxes by $11.2 billion over their 1948 levels. Employment tax receipts are estimated to be $13.1 billion in 1962, more than 5 times the 1948 level. This growth is accounted for by (1) increases in both the rates and income bases of these taxes, (2) the wider extension of social security coverage, and (3) generally higher incomes.

With two exceptions, payments for each major governmental function will be higher in 1962 than in 1948. The exceptions are international affairs and finance, and veterans services and benefits; and in both of these cases expenditures in 1948 were very high because of special post-World War II conditions. In absolute amounts, the largest increases since 1948 are $34.8 billion for major national security, and $20.1 billion for labor and welfare. The largest proportionate changes since 1948 are for commerce, housing, and space technology programs and for agriculture and agricultural resources. Outlays for commerce, housing, and space technology programs (including highways) in 1962 are estimated to be 16 times the 1948 total, while payments for agriculture will have increased 10 times from the exceptionally low 1948 amount.

Comparison with the budget.—The estimated excess of receipts in 1962 is approximately the same as the budget surplus, because the trust fund and other items added to the budget totals to compute the consolidated cash totals approximately balance and have little net effect in that year. Trust fund receipts are expected to be about equal to trust fund expenditures, and the net expenditures of Government-sponsored enterprises are offset by the amount of net accrued (and unpaid) interest and other noncash budget expenditures.

As in the budget, income taxes provide the largest portion of receipts from the public, and payments to the public for major national security exceed payments for any other function.

Federal payments to the public for commerce and housing exceed comparable budget totals considerably, primarily because of the expenditures from the Highway trust fund. Payments for labor and welfare also exceed budget totals substantially, because of the benefit payments of the social security trust funds. On the other hand, cash payments to the public for interest are considerably smaller than budget outlays, mainly because a large amount of interest on the public debt is paid by the Treasury to trust funds on their holdings of public debt securities, and does not go to the public directly.

Federal net cash borrowing from the public.—The amount of Federal net cash borrowing from the public (or net repayment of such borrowing) is determined primarily by the excess of payments to (or receipts from) the public, and also varies with changes made in the Treasury's cash balances. Receipts from the exercise of monetary authority, not included in receipts from the public, provide a relatively small additional amount of available revenue.

The figures shown in the preceding table for net cash borrowing from the public include not only the change in the amount of publicly held U.S. Government securities issued by the Treasury, but also the change in securities of various kinds issued to the public by other Government agencies and by Government-sponsored enterprises. Changes in the public debt that do not represent direct cash borrowing or repayment of borrowing from the public are excluded. Major examples of such noncash debt transactions are the issuance of U.S. Government notes and securities to the International Monetary Fund and to the trust funds. The trust funds now hold about one-fifth of the public debt.

Coverage.—For purposes of this analysis, the public is defined to include individuals, banks, other private corporations and associations, unincorporated businesses, the Federal Reserve System, the Postal Savings System, State and local governments, foreign governments, and international organizations. Interfund transactions eliminated from both receipts and payments in making the consolidation are: (1) payments between Federal funds and trust funds, such as interest paid to the Unemployment trust fund by the general fund on its holdings of public debt securities; and (2) payments between trust funds, such as the payment by the Old-age and survivors insurance fund to the Railroad retirement account.

Receipts of the Government from the exercise of monetary authority (mainly seigniorage) do not represent cash received from the public and are therefore deducted in making this consolidation. The bulk of these receipts represent the difference between acquisition cost to the Treasury and the monetary value of silver and other metals minted into coins.

This analysis also includes on a net basis the estimated expenditures of five Government-sponsored enterprises which are exempt from the budgeting requirements of the Government Corporation Control Act of 1945, as amended—The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation; the Federal home loan banks; the Federal land banks; the banks for cooperatives; and the Federal intermediate credit banks. The expenditures of these enterprises are estimated from their security transactions in the following manner: security purchases (both net investment by an enterprise in U.S. securities and net redemption by the enterprise of its own obligations) are used as a measure of net receipts from operations; security sales (net cashing by the enterprise of U.S. securities and net sales of its own obligations) are used as a measure of net expenditures.

Also included on a net basis in this analysis, but as part of trust fund expenditures, are the transactions of the Federal National Mortgage Association secondary market operations (a mixed-ownership enterprise).

Budget expenditures are for the most part on a "checks issued" basis but also include a few noncash transactions. In calculating total Federal payments to the public, these noncash items are excluded. On the other hand, actual cash outlays are included in payments to the public even though they are not part of budget expenditures for the year in question. The three main transactions of this type are: (1) U.S. securities issued in payment of obligations and the redemption of these securities for cash at a later date. This is the case with the U.S. Treasury notes used to pay the U.S. subscription to the International Monetary Fund in 1959—notes which will be redeemed in later years as the International Monetary Fund needs the money; (2) interest on savings bonds, which is a budget expenditure at the time of accrual and a payment to the public when the bonds are redeemed; and (3) net changes in the clearing accounts for outstanding checks and similar items. In any given year the aggregate of the accruals may be larger or smaller than total disbursements for previously accrued items.

Use and limitations.—Because the totals of Federal Government receipts from and payments to the public are more comprehensive than the budget totals, they are of particular importance in evaluating the impact of Federal transactions on the economy. For example, Federal receipts from the public classified by source indicate the sectors of the economy or the kinds of transactions other than borrowing which provide funds for the Government. Federal payments to the public by function indicate the relative importance of the major Government programs in terms of total cash outlays. The excess of receipts from the public or payments to the public tends to reflect the net impact of Federal financial transactions on the income of the public as a whole.

“Federal receipts from and payments to the public” tend to understate the scope of Federal transactions, because the totals include only the net expenditures of wholly owned and of Government-sponsored enterprises. Receipts from operations of these enterprises, such as postal receipts or interest on and repayment of loans, are deducted from disbursements, such as postal expenditures or new loans, in measuring net expenditures. Since this netting reduces receipts and payments by equal amounts, the excess of receipts or payments is not affected.

This measure of Federal transactions differs from the national income account treatment in two major respects—coverage and timing. With respect to coverage, capital (financing) transactions, such as loans and loan repayments and sales and purchases of existing assets, are excluded from receipts and expenditures on national income and product account but are included in the consolidated cash statement. With respect to timing, the national account treatment records many transactions on an accrual basis, while in the consolidated cash series an effort is made to record only cash transactions.

Users of the data in this analysis should recognize that no single measure can describe completely the economic impact of the Federal Government. Since the various receipt and expenditure transactions have different economic effects, a given aggregate will have an economic impact which depends on the composition of the total. In addition, many Government activities besides receipts and expenditures have a bearing on the economy. For example, a rapid expansion in new appropriations and in Government orders could stimulate a rise in business activity long before the authorized funds were paid to the public. Likewise, the enactment of a tax measure or even the expectation of a change in tax rates may affect business planning or activity well before the cash flows between the Federal Government and the public occur. Federal guarantees and insurance of private loans may also affect activity in the economy, even though they normally entail relatively small Government expenditures. Aside from the significance of interest payments to the public, the management of the public debt is a further important factor which has particular impact in the money and credit markets of the economy.

Reconciliation with Treasury cash deposits and withdrawals.—The Daily Statement of the Treasury presents a consolidated cash statement of Treasury operating transactions similar in general concept to “Federal receipts from and payments to the public.” However, it is limited in coverage to those transactions affecting the accounts of the Treasurer of the United States.

² Includes only net sales by Government agencies and trust funds which were not reflected in the accounts of the Treasurer of the United States.

Receipts from exercise of monetary authority, since they constitute funds available to the Treasurer, are included in Treasury cash deposits.

The adjustment “net difference in actual year due to reporting method,” which appears in both preceding reconciliation tables, is necessary because of the method used by the Treasury in reconciling its accounts for checks being cleared and the corresponding adjustment made in the preparation of the “receipts from and payments to the public” data. This adjustment is applied to payments instead of adjusting receipts and payments separately, and is used to change the Treasury “checks issued” data to a “checks paid” basis.

A further adjustment is necessary in the reconciliation of “payments” with “withdrawals” since the concept of payments to the public is more inclusive than Treasury cash withdrawals and includes payments by Government agencies from their own cash balances or from accounts in commercial banks. These payments are measured by net changes in cash held outside the Treasury and by net proceeds realized by Government agencies and trust funds, from sales of securities in the open market, that were not reflected in the Treasurer’s account.

Note.—A detailed reconciliation of the differences between the budget totals, Federal Government receipts from and payments to the public, and Treasury cash deposits and withdrawals is available on request from the Bureau of the Budget.

SPECIAL ANALYSIS B

ANALYSIS OF BUDGET RECEIPTS

Estimates based on existing and proposed legislation

This special analysis provides supporting detail for the figures on budget receipts by source which are included in the budget message and in table 1 of part I.

The estimates of receipts from taxes and customs for the current and coming fiscal years are prepared by the Treasury Department. In general, the estimates of miscellaneous receipts are prepared by the agencies depositing these receipts in the Treasury.

The revenue estimates assume for fiscal year 1962 that proposed legislation will be enacted extending present corporation income and excise tax rates for a year beyond June 30, 1961; that the pending diversion of general fund receipts to the Highway trust fund will be repealed, and replaced by an increase in highway motor fuel taxes; that aviation gas taxes will be increased and a new tax imposed on jet fuels, with receipts from these taxes credited to the general fund; and that adequate fees and charges will be established for certain special services and benefits, as recommended by the President.

Detailed estimates of budget receipts under both existing and proposed legislation are contained on pages 986 to 988.

BUDGET RECEIPTS

Receipts in the fiscal year 1960, reflecting the substantial expansion of personal incomes and corporate profits from 1957-58 recession levels, rose $9.8 billion above receipts of the previous fiscal year. Further rises in personal incomes occurred in 1960 and are expected in 1961, but corporate profits in the calendar year 1961, as in 1960, are not expected to reach the levels attained in the calendar year 1959. Principally because of this, the increases in receipts estimated for 1961 and 1962 are much less than for 1960. Individual income taxes, excise taxes, and estate and gift taxes are estimated to show increases throughout the 1960-62 period. Corporation income taxes, miscellaneous receipts, and customs are expected to dip in fiscal year 1961 and then increase in fiscal year 1962.

RECEIPTS BY MAJOR SOURCES

Actual receipts for 1960 and estimated receipts for 1961 and 1962 are compared by major sources in the accompanying table. The amount shown for each receipt source is the net amount after deduction of refunds and transfers to trust funds.

Individual income taxes.—Over two-thirds of individual income tax revenue is collected through withholdings by employers on a current basis. The remainder is collected through quarterly declarations by the self-employed and others, and in end-of-year returns due on April 15 of the following year. Because of this timing, individual income taxes collected in a fiscal year partly reflect income of the current calendar year and partly the income of the preceding calendar year.

Individual income taxes remain by far the most important source of revenue. They are twice as large as the next most important source of revenue—corporation income taxes—and alone account for over one-half of net budget receipts. Together the two income taxes account for over three-quarters of net budget receipts.

Individual income tax receipts are estimated to show increases of over $2 billion in both fiscal years 1961 and 1962. These increases result from the expected growth in personal incomes over the period affecting receipts in these years.

Corporation income taxes.—Receipts from corporation income taxes in each fiscal year are determined primarily by corporate profits of the calendar year ending in the fiscal year. Thus, receipts in fiscal year 1961 largely reflect calendar year 1960 profits, and receipts in fiscal year 1962 depend mainly on calendar year 1961 profits. Because of somewhat reduced profits in the third and fourth quarters, profits for calendar year 1960 will average moderately below those for calendar year 1959. As a result, corporation income tax receipts are estimated to recede from $21.5 billion in fiscal year 1960 to $20.4 billion in 1961. It is expected that profits will recover in calendar year 1961, averaging somewhat higher for the year than in 1960. This will result in an increase of $0.5 billion in corporation income taxes, to a total of $20.9 billion, for fiscal year 1962.

Net excise taxes.....	9,137	9,322	9,725	+403

Gross excise tax receipts are estimated to increase by $526 million in 1961 and to rise further by $704 million in the fiscal year 1962. A substantial part of the increase in 1961 is due to the full-year effect of the increase in the motor fuel taxes from 3 to 4 cents per gallon, effective October 1, 1959. A further increase in the motor fuel taxes to 4½ cents per gallon and the imposition of a new tax on jet fuel effective July 1, 1961, under proposed legislation, account for part of the rise in receipts in fiscal year 1962.

Net excise tax receipts, after deduction of transfers to the Highway trust fund and refunds, are estimated to rise by $185 million in 1961 and $403 million in 1962. Generally, excise taxes are expected to increase moderately in 1961 but, based on collections so far this year, receipts from alcohol taxes—a major tax source—are expected to decline somewhat. In 1962, increases are estimated for virtually all tax sources.

Employment taxes.—Receipts from the Federal Insurance Contributions Act and the Self-Employment Contributions Act are estimated to increase by $1,290 million in fiscal year 1961 reflecting the full-year effect of the rate and base increases effective January 1, 1960, and also because of the rising levels of taxable wages. The increase in fiscal year 1962 results from an expected continued rise in taxable wages.

Starting with fiscal year 1961 the receipts from the Federal Unemployment Tax Act are being transferred to the Unemployment trust fund. Thus, employment taxes in total will have no effect on net budget receipts from 1961 on.

The yield of the employment taxes is shown in the following table:

Estate and gift taxes.—Receipts from the estate and gift taxes are expected to show a substantial increase to $1,900 million in 1961 and to rise to about $1,950 million in fiscal year 1962. Because of the predominance of estate taxes in the total and the length of time after date of death permitted in the filing of estate tax returns, the income from this source does not respond quickly to changes in security and other asset values.

Customs.—Customs receipts are estimated to dip slightly in fiscal year 1961 and then show a moderate increase in fiscal year 1962, reflecting an anticipated expansion in dutiable imports.

Miscellaneous receipts.—The estimated decrease of $367 million in 1961 is mainly due to lower deposits with the Treasury of Federal Reserve System earnings, which are now estimated to decline by $308 million from 1960 to 1961, chiefly because of a nonrecurring deposit of past earnings made in 1960.

In 1962, miscellaneous receipts are estimated to increase by $112 million. Some further decline in dividends and other earnings is estimated to be more than offset by increased receipts from rentals, sales of property and products, and collections on loans and other investments. The 1962 estimate includes proposed legislation to increase charges for certain Government services which provide special benefits to identifiable individuals or groups.

A more detailed breakdown of miscellaneous receipts by source than shown in this analysis is available on request from the Bureau of the Budget.

SPECIAL ANALYSIS C

ANALYSIS OF THE BUDGET BY FUNCTION AND AGENCY

This special analysis gives the details for the functional breakdown of new obligational authority and budget expenditures used in the budget message and in some of the tables of part I.

For each function and subfunction, data are listed by agencies. In order to find the appropriation items which make up the amounts shown for the agency, it is necessary to look in the chapter summary for that agency in part II. Each entry in the chapter summary is coded to indicate the subfunction in which it is classified.

For purposes of this classification each appropriation account and each revolving and management fund is treated as a unit. Exceptions are made, and accounts are split into two or more categories, in only selected cases. This necessarily involves some close decisions in borderline cases, and it means that programs with secondary significance for some major functions will be included in another category because another objective predominates in the particular appropriation. Thus, to secure a comprehensive total of all Government programs related to education, for example, it would be necessary to provide a special tabulation, counting some appropriations which might be even more relevant to other categories.

Whereas this special analysis presents both authorizations and expenditures for major functions, subfunctions, and agencies over a 3-year period, special analysis G shows expenditures for the major functions and subfunctions over a 10-year period. Special analysis A shows Federal Government payments to the public, classified by major function.

The allowance for contingencies constitutes an additional entry in the tabulations for the years 1961 and 1962.

SPECIAL ANALYSIS D

INVESTMENT, OPERATING, AND OTHER BUDGET EXPENDITURES

This special analysis is designed to contribute to a general understanding of the Federal budget by dividing Government expenditures into two major categories: (1) expenditures yielding benefits primarily in the current year and (2) expenditures yielding benefits primarily beyond the year in which they are made.

Expenditures yielding benefits over a period of years, that is, those of an investment type, are shown in two main classes—the first for acquisition of assets by the Federal Government, and the second for other broad developmental purposes. Additions to Federal assets include expenditures for loans, for public works, for increases in major commodity inventories, for major equipment (such as ships, aircraft, and missiles), and for other physical assets. Expenditures for other developmental purposes are defined as those which add to State, local, and private physical assets or otherwise contribute to the general productivity of the economy. Included in this category are outlays for research and development, education and health, and other programs which add to the Nation's fund of knowledge and technical skills.

Expenditures which yield mainly current benefits are also grouped in two main classes—the first for aids and services to specific groups, such as agriculture, business, and veterans, and the second for services and current operating expenses of a more general nature.

In each category of this analysis, major national security expenditures are reported separately from those for all other (civil) programs. Such a distinction is especially helpful in appraising Federal expenditures for assets and other developmental purposes, since military outlays generally have different objectives from civil outlays in comparable categories. Similarly, expenditures for direct Federal programs are separated from grants-in-aid or loans to States and local governments.

Comparison with a capital budget.—The present analysis is not intended to be a capital budget. A capital budget as prepared by some foreign governments and some State and local governments usually provides separate financing for major capital outlays. Capital outlays of these governments may be entirely excluded from the current budget, or they may be amortized over a period of years by annual charges to the budget. In its concept of the budget totals and in its summary tables, however, the United States Federal Budget treats investment items in the same way as outlays for other purposes; both types are considered as expenditures in determining the budget surplus or deficit.

Moreover, a capital budget might well include annual allowances for depreciation and obsolescence on existing physical assets, allowances for anticipated losses on loan programs, recognition of assets received as gifts or donated to others, and cognizance of profit or loss on sales of assets at figures different from their book values. This analysis makes no such provision for depreciation or other changes in the value of assets. Hence, it does not indicate the extent to which new investment is offset by the consumption of existing assets.

Recovery of certain types of expenditures.—Certain expenditures for assets are offset in whole or in part by receipts to the Treasury in the form of sales, specific charges, or recoveries. This is the case with respect to many loans, investment in commodity inventories, construction of powerplants, and outlays for range and forest improvements on the public domain. Where such activities are carried on through revolving funds, receipts are credited directly against the expenditures, and the expenditure amounts in the budget and in special analysis D are net of receipts. In other cases, the receipts are counted as miscellaneous receipts to the Treasury rather than as offsets to expenditures.

Federal expenditures for most investment type programs are not generally expected to be recovered by specific revenues. Nonetheless, investment and developmental expenditures increase the wealth and income of the Nation, both directly and indirectly, thus expanding potential Federal revenues over a period of years.

SUMMARY

Expenditures for the acquisition of assets and for other developmental purposes are estimated to be $32 billion in 1962, compared to $29.9 billion in 1961. Current expenses for aids, services, and operations will total about $49.5 billion, compared to $49.7 billion for 1961.

compared to $19.5 billion in 1961. As in other recent years, the bulk of the total (77% in 1962) is for major national security programs, mostly for military equipment. Public works account for 45% and loans for 43% of estimated additions to civil assets in 1962.

Loans.—In addition to direct loans by Federal agencies, this category includes financial investments such as capital subscriptions to mixed-ownership or international organizations, but does not include loans or investments of such enterprises. The direct loans which are included consist primarily of loans to farmers and homeowners, to public and private agencies serving these two groups, and to foreign governments.

For two reasons, net expenditures for loans as reported in this analysis reflect only a fraction of total Government lending activity. First, although expenditures under a few loan programs, such as those of the Rural Electrification Administration and the Farmers Home Administration, are shown on a gross basis, most direct loan programs in the budget are financed on a revolving fund basis and are shown net of receipts. Second, the mortgage acquisitions of the Federal National Mortgage Association trust fund are not included in this analysis, which deals only with budget expenditures. In 1962 an estimated $720 million of net expenditures will be made from this trust fund in support of the Association's secondary mortgage market operations.

Net budget expenditures for loans in 1962 are estimated to be $2.1 billion, compared to $1.6 billion in 1961. Most of this increase is for lending and related financial assistance to foreign borrowers, estimated to rise from $424 million in 1961 to $751 million in 1962, reflecting greater lending activity by the Development Loan Fund under the mutual security program, a shift from net recoveries to net loan disbursements of $89 million by the Export-Import Bank, and a payment of $110 million by the Treasury Department as the second installment of the U.S. subscription to the Inter-American Development Bank. Loans by the Commodity Credit Corporation are expected to exceed repayments by $83 million in 1962, while repayments are expected to exceed disbursements by $151 million in 1961. CCC loans are secured by agricultural commodities. Forfeitures of such collateral are regarded as loan repayments, but result in additions to CCC inventories shown elsewhere in this special analysis.

A more comprehensive analysis of major Federal credit programs, which includes loan guarantees as well as direct loans, and which summarizes also new commitments, outstanding loans and guarantees and other relevant facts about 22 major Federal credit programs, is being published separately and can be obtained upon request from the Bureau of the Budget.

Public works—sites and direct construction.—Included in this category are Federal expenditures for sites, for Federal civil public works projects, and for military installations and other national security facilities, including those outside the continental United States. Estimated expenditures for direct Federal public works in 1962 are $3.8 billion, compared to $3.6 billion in 1961. Civil public works expenditures will be about $2.2 billion, or $215 million higher than in 1961, reflecting mainly increases for water resources projects of the Bureau of Reclamation, for power and navigation facilities to be constructed by the TVA, and for construction of Federal office buildings. Expenditures for water resources and related projects in 1962 will amount to approximately $1.2 billion. Total outlays will be mostly for work already under way; starts on 37 proposed new projects by the Corps of Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation entail estimated expenditures of $11 million for 1962.

Major national security construction, which accounts for 42% of 1962 Federal public works, is expected to decrease slightly. Construction of Strategic Air Command dispersal bases and alert facilities and construction of basic air defense installations will be virtually completed. Decreased expenditures in these areas will be only partly offset by increases for missile base construction.

A more comprehensive analysis of Federal activities in public works and other construction is being published separately and can be obtained upon request from the Bureau of the Budget.

Major commodity inventories.—Net expenditures for major purchases of commodities held for resale or in stockpiles are expected to be $263 million in 1962, the same as in 1961. Net additions to the inventory of farm commodities held by the Commodity Credit Corporation under its farm price-support program are estimated to be $202 million, little changed from 1961. Such additions to CCC inventories amounted to over $1 billion in 1960, offset in that year by decreases in outstanding CCC loans. Expenditures for the stockpiling of strategic and critical materials (other than fissionable) and for purchases of defense materials are expected to decline from $49 million in 1961 to $46 million in 1962, since most of the objectives for the strategic stockpile have been met.

Major equipment.—Expenditures for major equipment are estimated at $12.5 billion in 1961 and at $13 billion in 1962. These expenditures are almost entirely for aircraft, missiles, ships, and other major national security equipment. While military missiles have many of the characteristics of such expendable supplies as ammunition, their acquisition cost is included in this analysis under additions to assets because they may remain in inventory for several years and are in many cases replacing aircraft or other durable assets. Purchases of office equipment, furniture, fixtures, automobiles, and similar items are not included in this category, but are treated as current operating expenses.

Other physical assets—acquisition and improvement.—Expenditures for other physical assets are estimated to be $1.6 billion in both 1961 and 1962. The major national security portion, which includes mainly the procurement of uranium concentrates and production of special nuclear materials and weapons by the Atomic Energy Commission, is expected to account for 85% of these expenditures in 1962. Civil expenditures in this category, which include reforestation and range improvements on Federal lands and the acquisition of real property, are estimated to increase by $66 million, mainly because of the purchase by the Forest Service of certain forest lands of the Klamath Indians as required by law.

EXPENDITURES FOR OTHER DEVELOPMENTAL PURPOSES

This category includes Federal expenditures which augment State and local or private physical assets or which add to the productivity of the economy over a period of years, but which do not directly augment Federal physical and financial assets. Disbursements which appear to yield the bulk of their benefits in the current year are excluded, even though they may also contribute to the longer run economic development of the Nation.

State and local physical assets.—In 1962 the Federal Government will spend an estimated $346 million through grants-in-aid for additions to physical assets of State and local governments, primarily for the construction of hospitals, airports, waste-treatment works, watershed protection projects, schools in federally affected areas, and other facilities. This amount does not include estimated grants of $3 billion in 1962 for the Federal-aid highway system, which are made from the separately financed highway trust fund rather than from budget funds.

Private physical assets.—Federal expenditures which directly augment privately owned physical assets consist predominantly of (1) payments and technical assistance for conservation and improvement of private farms, including rental payments under the conservation reserve program and cost-sharing payments under the agricultural conservation program; (2) grants to States for the building of private hospitals and other health facilities; and (3) construction subsidies for merchant ships. Total outlays in this category are estimated at $957 million in 1962, compared to $908 million in 1961.

Education, training, and health.—Included in this category for 1962 are an estimated $1 billion of budget expenditures, about one-half of which take the form of grants to State and local governments. These include school operating aid to local school districts affected by the presence of Federal Government installations, grants under the National Defense Education Act of 1958, and grants to States for public health, vocational education, maternal and child welfare, and agricultural extension work. The largest of the direct Federal programs are the activities of the Public Health Service and the support of science education by the National Science Foundation.

A number of programs classified elsewhere in this special analysis have similar developmental aspects which are, however, secondary to their principal purposes. Examples are the veterans educational activities, the operating expenses of military and veterans hospital services and medical care programs, and the training of military and civilian personnel in Government service.

Research and development.—The Federal Government also contributes to technological progress through the conduct of varied programs of research and development. Expenditures for these programs are estimated at $8.8 billion in 1962, or $703 million more than in 1961, not including expenditures for research and development equipment and facilities shown elsewhere in this special analysis. Most of the 1962 total is for the research and development activities of the Department of Defense and the Atomic Energy Commission, where the emphasis will be on missiles, nuclear weapons, nuclear propulsion systems, civilian atomic power reactors, and basic research in the physical sciences. Civil space projects carried on by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration entail estimated expenditures of $819 million for 1962, an increase of 26% over the amount for 1961. Other research and development efforts include—but are not limited to—programs for health, agriculture, basic scientific research, and mineral products.

Engineering and natural resource surveys.—An estimated $87 million of expenditures in 1962 will be devoted to surveys and charts for marine and air navigation, investigations and surveys for public works programs, topographic mapping, geologic and mineral resource surveys, land classification, forest investigations, and other basic surveys. The largest programs of these types are administered by the Bureau of Reclamation, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and the Corps of Engineers.

CURRENT EXPENSES FOR AIDS AND SPECIAL SERVICES

This category covers expenditures which provide aids or special services to specific groups primarily in the year in which they are made, including administrative and other operating expenses attributable to the investment-type programs discussed previously and the costs of maintaining the related physical assets. Benefits accruing to various groups through tax provisions or other Government aids which do not call for expenditures are not included in this analysis.

Significant amounts of expenditures from certain of the trust funds also yield current aid to specific groups. For example, trust fund payments in 1962 are expected to include $12 billion in old-age and survivors insurance benefits and $2.8 billion in withdrawals by States to pay unemployment benefits. (See part III for a more complete treatment of trust fund transactions.) However, these amounts are excluded from special analysis D, which is confined to budget expenditures. Budget expenditures for aids and special services are estimated at $15.2 billion in 1962, compared to $15.7 billion in 1961.

Agriculture.—Budget expenditures for current aids and services to farmers are estimated at $3.3 billion in 1962, compared to $3.4 billion in 1961. These expenditures consist chiefly of costs and losses stemming from the price-support program and the sale of surplus commodities for foreign currencies.

Farmers also derive particular benefits from major expenditures classified elsewhere in this analysis, such as expenditures for loans, acquisition of farm commodities, conservation payments, water development projects, the school lunch program, and various international and other programs not designed primarily for the support of agriculture.

Business.—Expenditures primarily benefiting private business are estimated at $1 billion in 1962, compared to $1.6 billion in 1961. This decrease reflects mainly the proposed increase in postal rates designed to eliminate the postal deficit now covered by budgetary expenditures. The major expenditures in this category are for aids to air and sea navigation and for maritime operating subsidies.

Labor.—In accordance with the Social Security Act Amendments of 1960, grants-in-aid to the States for administering State employment and unemployment compensation services (and the related Federal Unemployment Tax Act receipts) are now accounted for in the unemployment trust fund rather than in the budget. This accounting shift is responsible for the sharp reduction in budget expenditures estimated for labor after 1960. Included in the expenses for aids and special services to labor are the mine safety work of the Bureau of Mines and certain administrative expenses of the Department of Labor.

Homeowners and tenants.—Expenditures classified as yielding current benefits to these groups consist chiefly of (1) capital grants for slum clearance and urban renewal projects; (2) annual contributions to local authorities for low-rent public housing projects; and (3) administrative expenses for all housing programs. Receipts from the insurance of mortgages and saving and loan share accounts and the earnings from holdings of mortgages and other housing loans are estimated to exceed current expenditures for housing in 1962. This estimate reflects proposed legislation to increase by $164 million the premiums paid by insured savings and loan associations to the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, to help build up needed insurance reserves of the Corporation.

Loans and mortgage purchases for the benefit of homeowners and tenants are not included in this category but are classified in this analysis as additions to Federal assets.

Veterans.—Expenditures for current aids and services to veterans are estimated at $5.1 billion in 1962, compared to $5 billion in 1961. Increases in expenditures for pensions and for hospital and medical care are expected to be partly offset by a decrease in readjustment benefits. Compensation and pension benefits combined account for 74% of estimated total expenditures in this category in 1962. Compensation payments made for disabilities or deaths resulting from service will be at about the same level in 1962 as in 1961; expenditures for non-service-connected pensions are estimated to increase by $205 million. Readjustment benefits in this category, which in 1962 will be mainly for those who served in the Korean conflict, include education and training for veterans who enroll in schools and colleges and vocational rehabilitation and other assistance for disabled veterans.

International.—Almost all of the estimated expenditures in this category in 1962 are for grants under the mutual security program. Expenditures of $1.7 billion are estimated in 1962 under the military assistance portion of the program, with which military equipment and training are furnished to friendly nations. Expenditures of $1.4 billion are expected in 1962 for the economic portion of the program (excluding loans); this aid is designed mainly to enable friendly nations to meet the economic burdens imposed by the maintenance of adequate defense forces, maintain political and economic stability, and build the foundations for growth. The amounts in the present category are in addition to loans to foreign countries, counted in this analysis as additions to Federal assets.

Other aids and special services.—Many other Federal programs involve budget expenditures for current aids and special services for more than one of these groups or for other groups. The bulk of these expenditures consists of grants to help provide public assistance to the needy, including the aged, the blind, the permanently and totally disabled, and dependent children. Expenditures for public assistance are expected to increase by $152 million in 1962, mainly because of the new program of medical assistance and the increased Federal grants for medical payments for the aged which were enacted in 1960. Other major programs include grants to States to help finance low-priced school lunches, and various aids to Indians. Total expenditures in this category are expected to amount to $2.6 billion in 1962, compared to $2.4 billion in 1961.

OTHER SERVICES AND CURRENT OPERATING EXPENSES

Expenses for operation and maintenance of military facilities and for pay and subsistence of military personnel comprise about two-thirds of the total spending estimated for this category in 1962. By far the largest component of civil expenditures is interest, which accounts for 25% of the total.

Repair, maintenance, and operation of physical assets.—Expenditures to repair, maintain, and operate physical assets are predominantly for the national military establishment and for general-purpose public buildings. Also included in this category are expenses for operating and maintaining atomic energy facilities, flood control reservoirs, irrigation works, power facilities, public lands, and national forests. Total outlays for these purposes are estimated at $10.5 billion in 1961 and at $10.8 billion in 1962. Where special groups are the main beneficiaries, such as veterans in the case of veterans hospitals, repair and maintenance outlays are not included in the present category but in aids and special services discussed previously.

Regulation and control.—Most of the major departments and agencies and many smaller agencies have regulatory or law-enforcement responsibilities. These include the law-enforcement activities of the Department of Justice, the Treasury Department, and the Judiciary, as well as the operations of the independent regulatory agencies. Expenditures for regulation and control are estimated to total $741 million in 1962, compared to $703 million in 1961.

Operation and administration of other civil activities.—All Governmentwide or multipurpose expenditures for civil programs are estimated to total $1.8 billion in 1961 and $1.9 billion in 1962. These cover expenditures for the legislative branch; the conduct of foreign affairs; tax collection, public debt management, and other financing activities; central procurement and recordkeeping; accident and unemployment compensation for Federal employees; and various other direct Federal programs not elsewhere classified.

Other major national security operation and administration.—These expenditures are estimated to amount to $12.2 billion in 1962, compared to $12 billion in 1961. They represent mainly pay and subsistence for military personnel, together with smaller but substantial expenditures for civilian reserve components, industrial mobilization, and various departmentwide activities of the Department of Defense.

Interest.—Interest expenditures consist almost entirely of interest payments on the public debt. A minor portion is for interest on refunds of receipts and on certain uninvested funds deposited with the Treasury. Because of the lower interest rates on new securities issued to refund maturing obligations, expenditures for interest are expected to decline from $9 billion in 1961 to $8.6 billion in 1962.

FOREIGN CURRENCY AVAILABILITIES AND USES

Many agencies of the Government are engaged in activities throughout the world which may be financed with foreign currencies. From some governmental activities, particularly the sale on concessional terms of surplus agricultural commodities, foreign currencies accrue to the Government without purchase with dollars. In many instances these currencies are restricted in their use by the terms of international agreements. This analysis presents in summary form data on foreign currency availabilities and uses, with special emphasis on those under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended (Public Law 480), the largest source of currencies with the most complex provisions for their use.

Foreign currency availabilities.—As indicated in the following table, the Government had available in 1960 the foreign currency equivalent of $3.3 billion, and somewhat larger amounts are estimated for both 1961 and 1962. Availabilities for U.S. uses hold roughly even at about $1.1 billion, and amounts committed for country uses increase slightly.

Foreign currency availabilities are divided in table 1 in several different ways. All availabilities are divided between those available for U.S. uses and those available for country uses. In both cases the currencies belong to this Government and are kept in Treasury accounts or those of other Government agencies. The country use currencies, however, are committed by the terms of the international agreements under which they are received to be used on a loan or grant basis for mutually beneficial purposes in the country by agreement with its government. U.S. use currencies, on the other hand, are available for the purposes of U.S. agencies without further approval of the other government. The table indicates that country use currencies make up three-fourths of total currency availabilities.

U.S. use currencies are further divided between those which are excess and those which are nonexcess. The excess currencies are those of which the Treasury has found (after reviewing the amounts of currency on hand, prospective receipts for U.S. uses, and prospective requirements) the supply to be great enough to more than cover the demand for the next 2 or 3 years. This analysis reveals a prospective excess condition for 1962 in seven countries: Burma, India, Israel, Pakistan, Poland, UAR (Egypt), and Yugoslavia. In all other countries the availability of U.S. use currencies is either less than the anticipated requirement, or there is no adequate assurance that an anticipated accumulation will in fact be realized.

Nonexcess U.S. use currencies are further divided between those which are restricted and those which are unrestricted. Restricted currencies have had conditions placed on their use by international agreement or by informal understandings in connection with such agreements, which require their use for particular purposes. Such currencies are not, therefore, available to finance regular U.S. activities. Restricted currencies must be reserved, frequently for lower priority programs, at times when appropriated dollars are being used to purchase the same kinds of currencies to meet U.S. obligations abroad. In line with Presidential instructions in the 1961 budget message, restrictions of this nature are being avoided to the extent possible in international agreements. As a result, the availability of restricted currencies for U.S. uses stems from unexpended balances which have accrued under older agreements. These availabilities are decreasing and are largely covered by appropriations enacted or recommended for special foreign currency programs.

Note.—For currencies collected under Public Law 480, the distribution is estimated.

Sources of foreign currencies without purchase with dollars.—Within the limits established by title I of Public Law 480, any agricultural commodity found by the Secretary of Agriculture to be in surplus supply may be sold for foreign currencies, so long as precautions are taken that such sales do not displace normal trade (i.e., regular sales for dollars) or unduly disrupt world market prices. Such sales are covered by intergovernmental agreements which govern the terms of sale including the value of commodities to be purchased, the exchange rate at which payment will be made, the amounts of the sales proceeds which will be reinvested in the purchasing country through loans or grants for economic or common defense purposes, and the amounts which the U.S. Government may use in the country, or possibly elsewhere, for other purposes. The shipment of the commodities is financed by the Commodity Credit Corporation as an extension of its agricultural price support operations. Any dollars received through sale of the currencies to agencies for programs covered by appropriations return to the CCC and reduce the size of the appropriation needed to cover its costs for the commodities shipped.

The Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, also includes several provisions under which foreign currencies accrue to the credit of the United States. Section 402 of that act specifies that a certain amount of the mutual security appropriations shall be used only to purchase surplus agricultural commodities for sale to foreign countries for their currencies. Section 505(a) of the act authorizes the sale of any commodities or services for foreign currencies, and section 103(c) of the act authorizes the sale of military equipment, materials, and services for foreign currencies. These sales are also covered by intergovernmental agreements. However, since the commodities or services sold are supplied as part of the mutual security program and financed by that appropriation, the currency proceeds may be used only for the purposes of that program. These are generally economic development or common defense in the purchasing country, or sometimes in a different aid recipient country when the purchasing country agrees and can supply needed exports.

The Mutual Security Act also requires a country receiving aid to deposit in a special account an amount of its currency equal to either the local sales value of the non-military commodity aid it receives or the commensurate value of our dollar aid expenditures. These deposits are called counterpart. Generally, a share of this counterpart, usually 10% or less, must be transferred to U.S. Treasury accounts and is available for general U.S. use. The remaining 90% is owned by the foreign country and remains in its custody for use for mutual security purposes agreed to by the United States. None of these country-owned currencies is included in the tables herein.

Section 142(a)(9) of the Mutual Security Act also authorizes the receipt of currencies contributed by the foreign government for the local expenses of U.S. military assistance advisory groups abroad.

Other collections of foreign currencies arise from various governmental activities. Sales of U.S. Government surplus property and settlement of World War II lend-lease debts for foreign currencies are authorized under several laws and international agreements. Under the Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948 (Public Law 402), the U.S. Government (informational media guarantee fund) contracts with American exporters of books, periodicals, and motion pictures to exchange dollars for certain foreign currencies received from sale of such materials. Other currencies are also received in payment for consular services, interest on deposits of currencies in foreign banks, etc.

In addition to the above, foreign currencies are acquired as loan repayments. Beginning in 1955, for example, the Mutual Security Act authorized repayment of mutual security loans in foreign currencies. Interest and principal repayments are now also beginning on economic development loans made to foreign countries and on loans to private enterprise under Public Law 480. Development Loan Fund loans and interest often may be repaid in the currency of the borrowing country.

In summary, most currencies accruing to the credit of the United States result from past or current international agreements authorized under several laws. In most cases, these international agreements reflect either sales arrangements, wherein commodities (usually surplus agricultural commodities) are sold to a foreign purchaser for currencies, or they reflect loan agreements, wherein dollars or foreign currencies themselves are lent to foreign borrowers and may be repaid in the currency of the borrower. Currencies also become available in much smaller amounts under special international agreements and the normal operations of the U.S. Government abroad.

Potential availability of foreign currencies.—In contrast to table 1, table 2 is not on a cash basis. It indicates amounts owed to the United States at the beginning and end of each of the 3 years, 1960–62, which are payable in foreign currencies even though the payment may not be due until some future year. Loan agreements, for example, provide for repayment over periods up to 40 years. As shown in the table, balances of loans outstanding and sales agreements under which deliveries had not been completed nor payment received totaled $2.7 billion at the end of 1960 and are estimated to rise to $4 billion by the end of 1961 and further to $4.7 billion by June 30, 1962. The estimated increase reflects largely the effects of loans and surplus agricultural commodity sales under Public Law 480 and the expanding loan activity of the Development Loan Fund. The estimates assume continuation of Public Law 480 at approximately the current level through 1962. This future availability is divided about equally between unrestricted U.S. use currencies, mainly loan repayments, and funds committed to country uses, mainly the proceeds of undelivered agricultural sales.

Limits on uses of foreign currencies.—The amount of foreign currencies accruing to the credit of the United States is large and is increasing, as table 2 illustrates. However, international agreements, and in many cases the nature of the economy on which they are a claim, restrict the use of the greater part of these currencies.

First, sales of agricultural commodities, through which most of the currencies are acquired, are often largely concessional. In these transactions the purchasing country seeks to minimize the real cost of the sales to itself in terms of export of its resources. This practice comes about in part because the sales are generally over and above the amount of exports the United States could sell in the international market on commercial terms (for dollars), and in part because U.S. foreign policy usually has the objective of aiding the economic development of the country involved. As a result, large amounts of currencies acquired by the United States from the sale of farm commodities are restricted by the purchase agreement so they can only be loaned or granted back to the buying country for its economic development. This is true of most of the currency received under the Mutual Security Act and Public Law 480.

Second, virtually all of the currencies are inconvertible under the laws and regulations of the purchasing countries. This means they cannot be freely used to buy goods in third countries. Neither can they be exchanged for another currency which we may be able to use. Similarly, a country which limits convertibility of its currency is usually unwilling to accept its own currency in payment, in any large amount, for exports, which represent a net drain on the country. Indeed the largest amounts of currency accrue in less developed countries where the use of large amounts of local currency for programs which are not of mutual interest might significantly drain scarce resources and result in pressure for increased U.S. aid.

In this regard, it should be pointed out that granting or lending a country its own currency under Public Law 480 and the Mutual Security Act does not provide it with additional external resources as dollar payments do. No labor, capital equipment, and materials are provided which the country did not have before. Additional economic resources from outside a country's borders can only be furnished in the form of goods or dollars or other convertible currencies to be used for the purchase of goods. Thus, a country's own currencies are not a substitute for dollars in the mutual security or other assistance program for that country.

Need for foreign currencies.—Many agencies of the U.S. Government carry on activities overseas in which foreign currencies may be used. These activities include diplomatic representation, the construction, maintenance, and operation of defense establishments, the administration of assistance and informational activities and many other programs. Also included are activities such as agricultural market development, educational exchange, the dissemination of textbooks and certain research and health programs which were undertaken especially because excess or restricted foreign currencies were available which could be used for these purposes. In most instances the need for foreign currencies in U.S. operations does not correspond to their availability on a country-by-country basis. In the normal course of its worldwide operations the Government must purchase large amounts of the currencies of many countries while at the same time accumulating large balances of others.

Recent estimates indicate that Government agencies will require about $2.2 billion of foreign currencies in 1962 to perform their regular operations abroad as indicated in table 3. In addition, $46 million of currencies will be spent for special foreign currency programs of certain agencies.

The supply of currencies available in the Treasury for sale to agencies to meet their regular needs and special program needs is estimated to be approximately $1.1 billion. However, less than $200 million of this amount can be used to meet regular needs because the availability of currencies does not match the needs on a country-by-country basis, and because there will still remain restrictions on some of the currencies which limit their use to special programs. Some $32 million equivalent of these restricted currencies could otherwise be used in 1962 to meet regular needs. Almost $2 billion of foreign currencies will need to be purchased commercially by our disbursing officers abroad.

In 68 of the 92 countries listed in table 3 the approximate supply of currencies available in 1962 is less than our anticipated needs for regular operations with the result that the United States will have to purchase the currencies of these 68 countries. In 34 of these 68 countries, various amounts of currencies are on hand which cannot be used to meet regular operating needs in 1962. These currencies are restricted from such use by provisions of international agreements or are reserved by agency administrative action for certain programs. These reserved amounts include currencies being held for agricultural market development, for educational exchange, for the construction of buildings abroad, and other special programs.

With respect to total value, 85% of the U.S. agency requirements are concentrated in six countries in which the United States receives foreign currencies in much smaller amounts; namely, Germany, Japan, Canada, France, the United Kingdom and Italy. The preponderance of currencies available to the Treasury for sale to agencies for regular operations is in countries such as India, Poland, Spain, Pakistan, Yugoslavia, and Israel, where needs are much less.

In those instances where nonexcess currencies are required to be purchased for use in 1962, the amounts in this column are entirely restricted or reserved.

Procedure for use of foreign currencies.—Currencies received by the United States in the course of its operations are available for general sale by the Treasury to Federal agencies for meeting any foreign currency costs of agency programs, unless there is a specific provision of law or international agreement prohibiting or limiting the use of the currencies. Normally, when an agency requires foreign currencies to carry out its activities, it must, by Treasury regulation, seek to buy such currencies from the Treasury Department. If that Department has the specifically requested currencies available, it sells them to the agency by charging the agency's appropriations accordingly. If the particular foreign currencies required are not available, they must be purchased through banking channels. Treasury sales are generally at the most advantageous rate at which currencies may be legally obtained, and thus foreign currency expenditures are reported on a comparable basis whether obtained from Treasury or commercial sources.

The currencies sold by the Treasury come from many sources, including the U.S. share of mutual security counterpart funds and of Public Law 480 sales proceeds, contributions of foreign governments to the administrative expenses of the military advisory assistance groups, the receipts of the informational media guarantee fund derived from the sale of U.S. publications abroad, interest on deposits of currency funds, the disposal of surplus property, and similar operations.

All currencies purchased by agencies from the Treasury with their regular dollar appropriations or with special appropriations provided to purchase the currencies are reflected in the budget as dollar receipts and expenditures. The dollar proceeds from Treasury sales are either credited to the miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury, or to various revolving funds or appropriations as authorized by law. Public Law 480 requires the dollar proceeds from sale of Public Law 480 currencies to be credited to the Commodity Credit Corporation. Sales of currencies received from the operations of the informational media guarantee fund are credited to that fund, and currencies obtained through the sale of military equipment under the Mutual Security Act are credited to the military assistance appropriation.

U.S. uses of foreign currencies.—Table 4 summarizes foreign currency transactions of U.S. use currencies as they are reflected in the Budget. This table includes all currencies actually available for U.S. uses and all expenditures of foreign currencies including those covered by appropriations—both regular appropriations and special foreign currency program appropriations.

Recommendations for 1962.—Most U.S. uses of foreign currencies are covered by unrestricted dollar appropriations under which needed currencies are purchased from the Treasury, if available, and from outside sources, if not. This is the case for the salaries and expenses of departmental programs overseas which use currencies. For those situations where currencies are available in the Treasury in excess of amounts needed for regular appropriations or where there remain unobligated balances of currencies restricted by international agreement or understanding for particular U.S. uses, separate appropriations are proposed for special foreign currency programs.

The Congress approved such special appropriations for the first time for 1961. Table 5 compares the proposed 1962 program with the appropriations approved by Congress for 1961. The foreign currency programs of the United States Information Agency, the Department of Agriculture, and the Department of State were, prior to 1961, carried on without dollar controls. Table 7 indicates the extent of such authorizations to expend foreign currency in 1960.

Table 6 gives the detail by country of the proposed appropriation for the 1962 special foreign currency programs. A total of $50 million is proposed for use of excess currencies and $4 million is proposed for use of remaining restricted currencies in nine other countries.

The currencies used to finance the special foreign currency programs are either excess or restricted. The availabilities for these programs, as indicated on table 6, are based entirely on Public Law 480 sales proceeds for U.S. use. The availabilities indicated for excess currencies are estimated on the basis of balances on hand, and anticipated collections from agreements already signed or anticipated during 1962. The availabilities of nonexcess currencies represent balances of restricted currencies which will not be needed to finance special foreign currency program appropriations provided through 1961. Since agreements are no longer being negotiated with restrictions on the U.S. share of the sales proceeds, these nonexcess restricted currency availabilities for 1962 have declined substantially below those of 1961.

In arriving at the proposed 1962 program in tables 5 and 6, eligible agencies were notified which currencies were in excess supply and of the remaining amounts of restricted currencies in each country. They were requested to prepare budget submissions indicating the currencies that could advantageously be used for authorized programs. These submissions were reviewed in a manner similar to the review of regular agency dollar budgets. The country amounts are based on the best information currently available. While some modifications may become necessary, it is not expected that the availability of currencies will permit carrying out programs in countries other than those indicated.

U.S. uses without dollar controls.—Prior to 1961, currencies were allocated for U.S. agency programs under statutory authorizations for use not covered by an appropriation. Unexpended balances under most of these allocations were appropriated as of June 30, 1960, and joined with the 1961 special foreign currency program appropriations for the same purposes. In the case of exports to third countries under the mutual security program and family housing for dependents overseas of the Department of Defense, there was no special foreign currency program appropriation for 1961 and none is proposed for 1962. Unexpended balances of these programs have remained available and will continue to be used during 1962. Table 7 summarizes these foreign currency transactions which are not covered by appropriations. Further details are given in informational tables in the appropriate chapters of the budget.

Country uses.—A far larger amount of foreign currencies are used outside of the appropriations process for loans and grants in the host country. These are country use currencies which are committed by the terms of the sales agreements of surplus agricultural commodities to be used for programs of mutual benefit in agreement with the host country. These purposes include the common defense, economic development, and loans to American and certain foreign private enterprise. In addition, the Development Loan Fund will make a small but increasing amount of foreign currency loans financed from its own repayments of past loans.

The authorizations to expend foreign currencies under Public Law 480 are based on sales agreements and, in some cases, are subject to future collections of currencies. Thus amounts shown in table 8 are not on a cash basis and therefore differ from table 1.

In contrast to the previous tables in this special analysis, the amounts shown are in dollar equivalent at the exchange rates provided in the sales agreements rather than at the Treasury selling rate of June 30, 1960.
