The Working Capital Fund is a self-sustaining revolving fund that provides services to National Forests, research experiment stations, and when necessary, to other Federal agencies, and as provided by law, to State and private agencies and persons who cooperate with the Forest Service in fire control and other authorized programs.

The forestry related supply and support services include:

Equipment Services.—The fund owns, operates, maintains, replaces, and repairs common use motor driven and similar equipment. This equipment is rented to administrative units, that is, National Forests, research experiment stations, and other units, and in some cases to the other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of operation, repair and maintenance, management, and depreciation. The rates also include an increment which provides additional cash which, when added to depreciation earnings and the residual value of equipment, provides sufficient funds to replace the equipment.

Aircraft Services.—The fund operates, maintains, and repairs Forest Service owned aircraft used in fire surveillance and suppression and in other Forest Service programs. The aircraft are rented to National Forests, research experiment stations, and in some cases to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of depreciation, operation, maintenance, repair, and improvements in the airworthiness of the aircraft. Aircraft replacement costs are financed from either appropriated funds or the Forest Service Working Capital Fund, or a combination of both.

Supply Services.—The fund operates the following common services:

Photo reproduction laboratories that store, reproduce, and supply aerial photographs, aerial maps, and other photographs of National Forest lands. The photographic reproductions are sold to National Forests, experiment stations, and others at cost.

Sign shops that manufacture and supply special signs for the National Forests for use in regulating traffic and as information to the public and other users of the National Forests. The signs are sold to National Forests and experiment stations at cost.

Subsistence services that prepare and serve meals to Forest Service crews working in areas where adequate public restaurant facilities are not available.

Seed supply services that provides tree seed for direct seeding or sowing in nurseries for the production of trees. Includes purchase or collection of cones, extraction of seeds, cleaning and testing, and storage and delivery. Operates in conjunction with tree nurseries.

Tree nurseries that operate forest tree nurseries and cold storage facilities for storage of tree seedlings. Tree seedlings are sold to National Forests, State foresters, and other cooperators at cost.

¹ Adjustments represent transfers from Economic development assistance programs of $2,335 thousand in 1990, and $3,200 thousand in 1991.

Interest on loans; principal repayments from loans made under the Area Redevelopment Act, the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965, and the Trade Act of 1974; and proceeds from the sale of collateral are deposited in this fund. Interest payments on the amounts receivable on outstanding loans are made to the Treasury from the fund. Repurchases of loans guaranteed by EDA that have been terminated for default are made from this fund.

No new loan or guarantee activity is proposed for 1992. At present, the agency is reviewing its portfolio to determine the cost-effectiveness of conducting a major loan-asset sale.

The activities of this appropriation provide for the collection, compilation, and publication of a broad range of current statistics dealing with economic, demographic, and social data. The 1992 Economic Statistics Initiative will make fundamental improvements in the quality of economic statistics.

Current economic statistics programs—

Business statistics.—This program provides current information on sales and related measures of retail and wholesale trade and selected service industries. The 1992 increase will improve the methods of reducing non-sampling problems in the Advanced Retail Sales Survey, and expand the collection of corporate financial data, as well as collect annual detail for additional service industries. In addition, the increase will improve the measurement of services purchased by industry and small company financial data and will allow the Census Bureau to identify and publish new data for specific growth industries.

Construction statistics.—Reports are provided on significant construction activity such as housing permits and starts, value of new construction, residential alterations and repairs, and quarterly price indexes for new, single-family houses. The 1992 initiative will improve coverage of non-residential additions and alterations; and will improve the quality of industrial plant construction data. The initiative will also allow the development of new methodologies to measure construction price changes.

Manufacturing statistics.—Surveys of key industrial commodities and manufacturing activity provide current statistics on the quantity and value of industry output.

General economic statistics.—This subactivity provides a Standard Statistical Establishment List (SSEL) of all U.S. business firms and their establishments, uniform classification data, annual county business data, participation in the development and operation of the National Trade Data Bank, and corporate financial data. The 1992 budget reduces new business classification activities through improved coordination with other agencies. The 1992 initiative will provide for Standard Industrial Classification research, and will allow Census to perform comparison studies with the Bureau of Labor Statistics' list of establishments.

Foreign trade statistics.—Monthly, cumulative, and annual reports are published on the quantity, shipping weight, and dollar value of imports and exports, by mode of transportation, detailed commodity category, customs district, and country of origin or destination. Commodity classifications are being improved for comparability and other activities in support of the Trade Act of 1974. The 1992 initiative will enhance the quality of foreign trade statistics through follow-up programs designed to reduce underreporting in exports.

Government statistics.—Reports are published annually regarding the revenue, expenditures, indebtedness and debt transactions, financial assets, employment, and payrolls of State and local governments. Quarterly information on State and local tax revenue is furnished on the national level by type of tax and governmental level, and information is provided on financial assistance programs of the Federal Government.

Agriculture statistics.—The collection of agriculture statistics on cotton ginning will be transferred to the Department of Agriculture in 1992.

Current demographic statistics programs—

Demographic surveys.—This program provides information on the number, the geographic distribution and the social and economic characteristics of the population.

Demographic reports.—This program provides current reports on the geographic distribution and on the demographic, social, and economic characteristics of the population, as well as current estimates and future projections of the population of the United States. The program also provides special analyses of demographic, social, and economic trends.

International statistics.—This program provides estimates of population, labor force, and economic activity, including spatial distribution, and analyses concerning aspects of demographic policies, economic policies, and trends for various countries.

Housing statistics.—This program compiles statistics on the Nation's housing inventory and provides national and regional estimates of housing vacancy rates.

Other programs and publications.—

Statistical abstract and supplements.—The Statistical Abstract, prepared annually, summarizes Government and private statistics of the industrial, social, political, and economic activities of the United States.

General research.—Research is conducted on survey methods and techniques to find ways of improving the efficiency, accuracy, and timeliness of statistical programs.

Data systems development.—This program provides advanced data capture, data processing, and information retrieval technology to meet Bureau program requirements.

Reimbursable program.—The Bureau of the Census undertakes work for other governmental agencies when it is more appropriate or efficient to have the work performed by the Bureau. Significant work includes collection of labor force and consumer expenditure data for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, national education and health program data for the Department of Education and the Department of Health and Human Services, and annual housing data for the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

This appropriation funds legislatively mandated censuses of economic and demographic areas once or twice each decade and other authorized periodic activities.

Economic statistics programs—

Economic censuses.—The economic censuses provide data on manufactures, mineral industries, retail and wholesale trade and service industries, construction, and transportation. The censuses are taken every fifth year, covering calendar years ending in two and seven.

Fiscal year 1992 is the third year in the six year cycle of the 1992 Economic Censuses. Funds provide for planning and preparatory activities. The 1992 census will collect and publish information for the finance, insurance, and real estate sectors; utilities; communications; and transportation industries.

Census of governments.—This census collects State and local government data on taxes, tax valuations, governmental receipts, expenditures, indebtedness, and number of employees. This census is taken every fifth year for calendar years ending in two and seven.

The FY 1992 budget provides for further planning of the content, collection, and processing of data for the government finance, public employment, governmental organization and taxable property value phases of the Census of Governments.

Census of agriculture.—This census covers the agricultural sector of the economy and includes the census of irrigation.

Fiscal year 1992 is the third year in the six year cycle of the 1992 Census of Agriculture. Funding provides for the completion of the preparation of the mailing list, completion of final procedures for clerical processing, and the specifications for computer processing and tabular presentation. Planning will continue for the Censuses of Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands and Guam.

table allocation of funds by various Federal programs and for other purposes.

Decennial census.—In 1992, the Census Bureau will continue to provide the results of the census to the Nation. One of the goals for the 1990 Decennial Census is to expedite the availability of the census data to users. The Census Bureau will continue to develop and release 1990 census data products, both from questionnaires sent to everyone as well as data from the sample questionnaires that provide greater detail. In addition, 1992 is a critical year for the Census Bureau to ensure it has the benefits of evaluating census programs in preparing for future censuses. The 1992 budget request terminates funding for promotion and outreach activities of the 1990 Census. Funding is continued for product development, evaluation, and data dissemination.

2000 Decennial Census.—Planning for the 2000 Decennial Census is an important priority in 1992. Social, demographic, and economic changes, such as shifts in the composition of the Nation's labor force, changing living arrangements, and new technology will necessarily call for changes in the conduct of the next census. Timing constraints dictate that research must be conducted promptly to ensure that results are available in time to implement any significant changes. The 1992 increase is to: examine the cost and effectiveness of using administrative records; explore innovative techniques for collecting and processing large volumes of data; develop alternatives to increase respondent cooperation in hard-to-enumerate areas; and maintain a Master Address List for use in the 2000 Decennial Census and other censuses and surveys.

Sample redesign.—

This program provides for revisions to the statistical samples used for monthly, quarterly and annual surveys.

Geographic support.—

This activity provides for the geographic requirements of the various periodic programs and involves accurate identification of both political and statistical areas, preparation of maps, and maintenance of geographic data base files.

Data processing systems.—

This program provides the resources necessary to improve the data processing installation of the Bureau of the Census.

Economic analysis.—The objective of this activity is to provide a clear picture of the state of the economy through the preparation, development, and interpretation of the economic accounts of the United States. The 1992 Economic Statistics Initiative will make fundamental improvements in the quality of economic statistics. The principal programs are:

National economic accounts.—The national income and product accounts, summarized by the gross national product (GNP), provide an up-to-date overall view of national production, its distribution, and its use as shown by the inter-related receipts and expenditures of producers, consumers, investors, government, and the foreign customers of the United States. In 1992, increases are provided to maintain the quality of the GNP estimates, and to modernize and extend the U.S. national economic accounts focusing on improvements recommended by the Economic Policy Council's Working Group on Economic Statistics.

Analysis of economic trends.—This work includes a system of leading, coincident, and lagging business cycle indicators and analyses of the economic situation.

International economic accounts.—The balance of payments accounts provide a comprehensive and detailed view of economic transactions between the United States and foreign countries. Work on international investment consists of the preparation, development, and analysis of estimates of U.S. direct investment abroad and foreign direct investment in the United States.

Regional economic accounts.—Regional economic measurement consists of the preparation, development, and analysis of economic accounts that show detail by region, State, metropolitan area, and county. Work on regional economic analysis consists of the preparation of analyses and projections of States and local areas.

Policy support.—The objective of this activity is to support the Secretary, Under Secretary for Economic Affairs, and other Government officials in interpreting the state of the economy, and on matters relating to economic policy.

Reimbursable.—ESA provides economic and statistical data and analyses on a reimbursable and advance payment basis to other Federal agencies, individuals, and firms requesting such information. Funds received for these services cover the cost of performing this work.

The activities of the International Trade Administration in the Department of Commerce are intended to develop the export potential of U.S. firms in a manner consistent with national security and foreign and economic policy and to promote an improved trade posture for U.S. industry.

Trade development.—The trade development program assesses the competitiveness of various U.S. industries; performs trade and investment analyses in support of industry programs and trade policy; and conducts export promotion programs directed toward industry sectors.

International economic policy.—This program develops regional and multilateral economic policies; provides marketing services directly and through the Foreign Commercial Service which assist U.S. businesses in expanding exports; identifies long range trade and investment problems and develops remedial strategies. In 1992, an increase is requested to better support firms entering or expanding in the Mexico market. This increase will allow full participation in any negotiations related to a U.S.-Mexico Free Trade Agreement.

Import Administration.—Import Administration investigates antidumping and countervailing duty cases to ensure compliance with applicable U.S. statutes and administers certain other statutory programs relating to imports and foreign trade zones. In 1992, an increase is requested for Import Administration to support implementation of provisions of the 1988 Trade Act as they relate to Department of Commerce administration of the antidumping and countervailing duty laws. Additionally, an increase is requested to enable the timely processing of an increased antidumping/countervailing caseload for timely processing of Foreign Trade Zone applications.

U.S. and foreign commercial service.—The U.S. and foreign commercial service counsels U.S. businesses on exporting through 48 District Offices in the United States and overseas offices in 67 countries. The program's goals are to increase the number of U.S. firms that export and the number of foreign markets to which they export; to provide export market information; to promote and facilitate participation of U.S. firms in trade shows; and to encourage and sponsor additional involvement by private, State and local organizations. Furthermore, in 1992, ITA will continue its counseling services to U.S. businesses through its automated Commercial Information System (CIMS) that will provide customized and proactive export assistance to U.S. businesses. An increase is requested to improve this system and provide access to the National Trade Data Bank while improving this program's office automation technology base. An increase is requested to continue expansion of the Foreign Commercial Service in key overseas markets including Japan, Hong Kong, as well as Latin America and the Soviet Union.

Reimbursable program.—This account includes receipts for services rendered to other Federal agencies and receipts received on a cost recovery basis from private entities for trade events and export information services.

The activities of the Bureau of Export Administration are designed to enforce U.S. export trade laws consistent with national security, foreign policy, and short supply objectives. The program strives to achieve a balance between the interests of U.S. exporters, the U.S. economy and U.S. national security requirements.

Management and policy coordination.—The management and policy coordination program controls the development, analysis, coordination, and consolidation of policy initiatives and responses within the Bureau of Export Administration. A decrease of $720,000 and 9 positions is proposed in response to the anticipated decline in workload in the export licensing area.

Export administration.—The export administration program assures that export activity is consistent with national security and foreign policy requirements. In 1992, we are proposing a decrease of 47 positions and $4,583,000 in light of an anticipated decline in the workload relating to export licensing activities. We are also proposing an increase of 9 positions and $888,000 to address additional responsibilities related to the Export Control List, Export Control List review and decontrol issues.

Export enforcement.—The export enforcement program detects and prevents the illegal distribution of controlled U.S. goods and technical data in violation of the export administration provisions of the U.S. Code. Responsibilities also include enforcement of prohibitions against participating in unsanctioned boycotts against countries friendly to the United States. Decreases are proposed in the number of positions in this activity.

Industrial resource administration.—The industrial resource administration program ensures the availability of industrial resources for national defense under the authority of the Defense Production Act.

In 1992 an increase of 11 positions and $835,000 is being proposed to meet legislatively mandated requirements related to the review of offsets in defense trade, defense Memoranda of Understanding, and direct foreign investments in U.S. defense-related industries.

In its leadership role of coordinating the minority business development program, the Minority Business Development Agency (MBDA) seeks to create improved national conditions within which the minority people of the United States will have an equal opportunity to participate in the American business system. In 1992, increased emphasis will be placed on expanded private sector and Federal Government involvement in the promotion of minority business development.

Enterprise Development.—This activity provides direct, general business services to minority individuals and firms seeking business information, counseling, financial packaging assistance and assistance in identifying and exploiting business opportunities, new and/or expanded markets and selected growth industries. Increases are provided to improve the quality of services provided by the Minority Business Development Centers.

Resource Development.—This activity provides for the indirect business assistance programs conducted by MBDA. These programs encourage minority business development by identifying and developing private markets and capital sources; decreasing minority dependence on government programs; expanding business information and business services through trade associations; promoting and supporting the mobilization of resources of Federal agencies and State and local governments at the local level; and assisting minorities in entering new and growing markets.

Advocacy, Research, and Information.—Within this activity, MBDA provides advocacy efforts, a research program, and information systems for formulating policy decisions and for reducing information barriers to improve the participation rate of minority-owned businesses in the U.S. economy.

The FY 1992 budget proposes to fund USTTA from direct appropriations. However, the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act, P.L. 101-508, passed by Congress in October of 1990 amended the International Travel Act of 1961 to require the Secretary of Commerce to charge each domestic and foreign commercial airline and passenger ship line transporting passengers to the United States a quarterly fee based on the number of foreign visitors they carried to the United States. The fee will enable USTTA to offset the costs of its operations and programs with receipts from those who benefit from its activities. The activities to be supported fall into two broad categories:

International tourism development.—These activities include planning, developing and executing tourism promotion programs designed to stimulate U.S. earnings through international tourism and to facilitate the entry of medium and small American travel businesses into the international market.

Executive direction.—These activities include policy guidance, executive management, and administrative support in the areas of fiscal planning, program implementation, management and evaluation.

National Ocean Service.—The National Ocean Service provides for the management of ocean and coastal resources, particularly in the 200-mile Exclusive Economic Zone; improvements in the quality, quantity, geographic distribution and timeliness of ocean observations; the conservation, rational use, and charting of the Nation's coastal regions; production of aeronautical and nautical charts; and geodetic surveys. Increases are proposed to continue the integrated NOAA program in coastal ocean science which will continue to improve the monitoring, prediction, and understanding of the environmental degradation of the coastal oceans, to fulfill NOAA's responsibilities as a natural resources trustee in Prince William Sound, and to initiate a multi-agency coastal wetlands management initiative. Other program changes involve decreases for multipurpose cadastre surveys, Gulf of Maine data collection and the Tampa Bay mapping project. Starting in 1992, some Coastal Zone Management grants will be funded from the Coastal Zone Management Fund.

National Marine Fisheries Service.—These programs provide for the management and conservation of the Nation's living marine resources and their environment, including marine mammals and endangered species. Increases are proposed in certain areas to meet statutory requirements and marine resource conservation and management objectives. Also included is funding to support a joint NOAA/FDA seafood safety program. Consistent with NOAA priorities, decreases are proposed in those areas not essential to meeting conservation and management objectives in fiscal year 1992.

Oceanic and atmospheric research.—These programs provide: the understanding and technique development necessary to improve NOAA services (weather warnings and forecasts, solar-terrestrial services, climate predictions, and marine services); and the understanding of environmental systems necessary for national policy formulation (e.g., acid rain) and the enhanced use of ocean resources (e.g., fisheries, minerals). A proposed increase for an integrated NOAA program in Earth System Science will continue NOAA's coordinated approach to conducting research to improve predictions of global climate change initiated in 1989. The NOAA program is part of the coordinated government-wide, U.S. Global Change Research program. An increase is proposed for research, forecasting and monitoring of solar cycle activity. Other program changes principally involve decreases in research activities which primarily support State, regional or private sector interests.

National Weather Service.—These programs provide timely and accurate meteorologic, hydrologic, and oceanographic warnings, forecasts, and planning information to ensure the safety of the population, mitigate property losses, and improve the economic efficiency of the Nation. Additional funding is proposed for acquisition of Doppler weather radars, the automated surface observing system (ASOS), an information processing and distribution system (AWIPS), a class VII supercomputer, and for a multi-state demonstration project to prove the capabilities of the new field office structure prior to its implementation. These acquisitions are part of a comprehensive program to modernize the National Weather Service. This modernization effort will enable the National Weather Service to provide improved weather forecasts and severe weather warnings through a nationwide network of 115 enhanced Weather Forecast Offices. Specialized weather services which can be conducted by the private sector will be reduced or eliminated. Other proposed decreases in 1992 reflect improved efficiency in the field office management structure.

National Environmental Satellite, Data, and Information Service.—These programs provide for the: operation of environmental polar-orbiting and geostationary satellites; subsidy of a commercially operated Landsat system; and global environmental data and information products and services to users in commerce, industry, agriculture, science and engineering, the general public and Federal, State and local agencies. The 1992 funding will support procurement of replacement satellites for the polar-orbiting and geostationary systems.

The Administration is committed to operating the Landsat 4 and 5 satellites until completing the development and launch of Landsat 6. No funds are proposed for operation of Landsat 6 because these costs will be covered by the contractor, the Earth Observation Satellite Company. Funding is requested for the operation of Landsat 5 as it appears likely that it will continue to operate into FY 1992.

The Administration is considering options for continuing Landsat-type data after Landsat 6. No funds are required in 1992 for additional satellites, consistent with the expected lifetime of Landsat 6.

Program support.—These programs provide for overall NOAA management, NOAA's share of the Regional Administrative Support Centers, and the operational and logistics support of ships, marine centers, and aircraft to support NOAA missions. An increase is proposed to continue the consolidation of selected NOAA facilities in the Washington, D.C. Metropolitan area in Silver Spring, MD, to consolidate NOAA employees in Boulder, CO, to initiate a NOAA-wide program for environmental compliance, and to upgrade NOAA's accounting system as part of a Department-wide program.

This program provides compensation to commercial fishermen for damages to or loss of fishing gear, including loss of profits, related to oil and gas exploration, development, and production on the Outer Continental Shelf. Fees will be increased in 1992 and thereafter to reflect increases in claims and administrative expenses, thereby minimizing the need for a General Fund Appropriation.

The Office administers laws governing the granting of patents for inventions and the registration of trademarks.

Public Law 100-703 provides for a portion of Office operating costs to be recovered through user fee revenues. Collections were $223.8 million in 1990. The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 directed a significant increase in user fees to the point where the PTO is nearly fully fee funded. As a result of the Act fees are estimated to be $351.2 million in 1991 and $462.5 million in 1992.

The 1990 unobligated balance brought forward is $17.2 million, of which $16.3 million is reserved for trademark programs. Remaining funds will be utilized in 1991 for procurement actions delayed from 1990, for program requirements resulting from higher workloads and as directed to offset appropriation requirements.

SALARIES AND EXPENSES—Continued

An Automation Master Plan provides for the automation of the majority of the functions and operations of the Office in the 1990's. The 1992 funds provide for the continued implementation of the recommendations of the Industry Review Panel on the Automated Patent System. Automation resources are distributed among the four activities of the Office.

Patent process.—Applications are examined to determine inventor entitlements to a patent for the claimed invention. Patent application examination also includes quasi-judicial review in appeal and interference proceedings, and the publication of issued patents.

The 1992 increases support programs 1) to maintain patent application pendency time at 18.9 months while maintaining the quality of issuing patents, and 2) to manage increasing workloads especially in emerging technologies.

Key patent application workload and performance data are:

Trademark process.—This activity provides for the examination of applications to determine whether the statutory criteria for the Federal registration of the trademark or service mark have been met. When the criteria are met, a registration is printed and issued to the applicant. Examination also includes inter partes proceedings involving oppositions, cancellations, and interferences. The 1992 funding maintains the reduced pendencies in trademark examination and anticipates a continued increase in the receipt of applications due to the recently implemented Trademark Law Revision Act of 1988. There is also an increase for office automation capabilities and program management.

Key trademark application workload and performance data are:

Information dissemination.—Materials and services which assist in the examination of patent and trademark applications and in the transfer of technological information are provided in this activity. Specific materials and services include art documents; maintenance of a scientific library and public search rooms; preparation of copies of patents, trademark registrations, and official documents; assignment of patents and trademark rights; and administration of printing.

The 1992 increases provide funds for the processing of increased volume of work; to expand user access to products and services, to maintain paper search files, to enhance classification services, and to expand on-line commercial data services.

Executive direction and administration.—Management and administration of the Office are provided by this activity. The 1992 increases address legal requirements to handle the increasing number of applicants desiring admittance to practice before the PTO and increasing court workloads and Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) requests. Management Planning has been increased to recruit, retain and train quality employees and to replace financial management systems of the steadily increasing staffing levels of the PTO. Administrative services have been enhanced to provide essential program support. The Automation staff has been increased to support implementation of the Master Plan. Patent Quality Review has been increased to keep pace with the increased allowances from the patent examiners. There is also an increase for space acquisition and management.

The National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) is responsible for the measurement foundation which supports U.S. industry, government, and scientific establishments. NIST efforts are organized into the following program activities:

Measurement and engineering research and standards.—

Electronics and electrical engineering.—Research in electronics and electrical measurements to support fundamental electronic technologies that underlies all modern electronic systems. In 1992, increases will: provide measurement, technology standards and services for the components of fiber optic systems, high temperature superconductors, advanced semiconductors, microwave technology, and to develop methods to measure the physical characteristics and performance of high density recording on magnetic films.

Manufacturing engineering.—Research in areas of high precision dimensional measurement, precision engineering, robotics and intelligent machines, manufacturing data description, data administration, information processing, and advanced sensors for manufacturing processes produces measurement methods calibration standards, and a technical research base for U.S. industry. Increases in 1992 will allow the development of measurement standards for future generations of intelligent machines and processes, and specifications (PDES), which will help U.S. industry by allowing the exchange of digital data through various computer and manufacturing systems.

Materials science and engineering.—Research in materials characterization, nondestructive evaluation, metallurgy, polymers, and ceramics produces measurement methods, standards, data and other technical information on processing, structure, properties, and performance of materials. These activities are in support of generic materials technologies which will permit industry to improve productivity and competitiveness in the manufacture of new advanced materials through increased reliability and quality at lower cost. The 1992 increase will expand the development of measurement methods and standards to produce and use advanced materials more reliably.

Applied mathematics and scientific computing.—Research in mathematical modeling, statistics, numerical analysis, and scientific computing enhances the efficiency and productivity of all laboratory-based programs and interactions with users of NIST services and scientific computing provides for the more efficient use of computers for data acquisition, analysis, computations, and management services.

Building and fire research.—Research in the construction, performance, and fire safety of buildings including materials, components, and systems producing new engineering knowledge, techniques, and databases for design and development of construction and fire safety standards and practices. Increases provide for seismic design and construction standards to reduce vulnerability to earthquakes. Funding for studies in general toxicity will not be continued in 1992.

Physics.—Basic and applied research produces new physical standards, measurement methods and reference data that are the foundation for U.S. industry, commerce, and science to achieve levels of accuracy and compatibility required to support technological development, quality control and equity in trade.

Chemical science and technology.—Research in the composition and behavior of chemical and biochemical systems produces measurement methods and standards for high accuracy chemical analysis to assist U.S. industry, measurement services to support technological development, and efficient processing, to introduce competitive technology to the marketplace. In 1992, increases will allow for the production of reference methods and reference materials critical to improving the accuracy of chemical compositional measurements and will produce supporting technologies for the identification and effective use of alternatives to present refrigerants (CFC's).

Computer systems.—Research in computer science and engineering establishes government-wide automated data processing (ADP) standards and technical support for the development of national and international voluntary industry standards which lead to more productive use of computers and networks, and the maintenance of the competitive posture of the U.S. computer industry. The 1992 increases will address responsibilities assigned by the Computer Security Act of 1987, establish an emergency response capability to computer virus threats, and provide industry-wide coordination of standards for multivendor Integrated Services Digital Networks (ISDN).

Technology assistance.—This activity formulates and implements policy guidelines related to national and international standardization development activities and commercial measurement and supports the primary means by which NIST transfers its developed measurement techniques, standards and data to industry, university, and government. Funds for the non-energy inventions programs will not be requested in 1992.

Research support activities.—This subactivity groups the centrally managed programs that provide support to all other NIST programs. This support includes developing technical competence in NIST mission oriented areas of research and services, providing scientists and engineers from industry and universities the opportunity to participate in the Research Associate program, providing computing support to NIST programs, maintaining a satisfactory facilities environment for conducting the NIST technical programs, and constructing a cold neutron research facility for advanced materials research. The 1992 increases will provide for continuing the upgrade of the NIST scientific computer to meet rapidly expanding needs for scientific computing capability and for safety, system capacity, and obsolescence requirements of the NIST physical plant.

The National Telecommunications and Information Administration (NTIA) is the principal executive branch adviser to the President on domestic and international communications policy. Additionally, it manages the Federal Government's use of the radio frequency spectrum and performs extensive research in telecommunications sciences.

Domestic and international policies.—

Domestic policies.—In 1992, NTIA will continue to develop and advocate policies to decrease regulation and increase competition in the domestic telecommunications marketplace. NTIA will place special emphasis on emerging technologies, including advanced video and radio applications, and will develop and advocate policies in the common carrier and mass media fields to offer increased consumer choices. Particularly, NTIA will conduct policy and technical research which will assist the Federal Communications Commission in developing effective regulations and standards.

International policies.—In 1992, NTIA will continue to develop and advocate policies for the advancement of U.S. interests in the international telecommunications regulatory and policy areas. NTIA will place emphasis on promoting U.S. Government positions at international radio conferences, aiding in the enhancement of telecommunications infrastructures in developing countries; and furthering U.S. objectives to liberalize telecommunication regulations and laws worldwide. In coordination with the Department of State, the agency will continue to discharge the Presidential responsibility for oversight of the Communications Satellite Corporation (COMSAT) in its role as the U.S. Signatory to INTELSAT.

Spectrum management.—

Spectrum plans and policies.—In 1992, NTIA will continue to prepare for, participate in, and implement the results of international, regional, and national conferences addressing spectrum allocation and utilization. In addition, NTIA will formulate, in coordination with the FCC, long range plans and policies for efficient use of the spectrum and continue its efforts in the identification and analysis of spectrum available for new communication requirements and emergency communications systems.

Spectrum management, analysis and operations.—In 1992, NTIA will continue to authorize frequency assignments, review and certify spectrum for proposed Federal radio communications systems, conduct frequency band studies and compliance activities and operate the necessary automated data facilities to support the above.

Telecommunication sciences research.—

Spectrum research and analysis.—In 1992, NTIA will continue to conduct applied research and analysis as a basis for developing spectrum use concepts and models that lead to more efficient use of the radio spectrum, and electromagnetic wave and propagation models that lead to improvement in radio systems performance.

Systems and networks research and analysis.—In 1992, NTIA will assess and develop domestic and international technical performance standards to facilitate competition in telecommunications products and services. In addition, NTIA will enhance its telecommunications evaluation facility (ITEF) in order to better serve government and industry users of telecommunications systems and networks. Also, analytical methods and automated models will be employed to assist in the development of credible and defensible positions before international conferences and committees.

(3) that prior to filing such an action, the recipient project director has determined that the government entity is not likely to change the policy or practice in question, that the policy or practice will continue to adversely affect eligible clients, that the recipient has given notice of its intention to seek class relief and that responsible efforts to resolve without litigation the adverse effects of the policy or practice have not been successful or would be adverse to the interest of the clients:

except that this proviso may be superseded by regulations governing the bringing of class action suits promulgated by a majority of the Board of Directors of the Corporation [who have been confirmed in accordance with section 1004(a) of the Legal Services Corporation Act]: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated in this Act made available by the Legal Services Corporation may be used—

(C) to influence the conduct of oversight proceedings of the recipient or the Corporation;

(4) to pay for any personal service, advertisement, telegram, telephone communication, letter, printed or written matter, or any other device intended or designed to influence any Member of Congress or any other Federal, State, or local elected official to favor or oppose any Act, bill, resolution, or similar legislation, except that this proviso shall not preclude funds from being used to provide communication directly to a Federal, State, or local elected official on a specific and distinct matter where the purpose of such communication is to bring the matter to the official's attention if—

(A) the project director of a recipient has expressly approved in writing the undertaking of such communication to be made on behalf of a client or class of clients in accordance with policy established by the governing body of the recipient; and

(B) the project director of a recipient has determined prior to the undertaking of such communication, that—

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE—MILITARY

MILITARY PERSONNEL

ACTIVE FORCES

These appropriations finance the personnel costs of the active duty forces of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force. Changes in financial requirements are primarily related to military personnel strengths. In addition, these appropriations finance the future retirement benefits of the current active forces. While most of the entitlements financed by these appropriations are set by statute, the estimates reflect continuing efforts to improve management including implementation of audit recommendations, improved management of military travel, and prudent use of bonus programs, and other pay programs.

The numbers of active duty military personnel provided for are shown in the following table. Included in the 1990 actual yearend numbers are 25,652 National Guard and Reserve Personnel called to active duty pursuant to 673b U.S.C. 10:

RESERVE FORCES

These appropriations finance the personnel costs of the National Guard and Reserve forces, including the future retirement benefits of the current Reserve forces. The estimates reflect continuing efforts to improve management efficiency including, for example, more economical use of training and recruiting resources as well as the undertaking of active missions at lower costs.

The number of National Guard and Reserve personnel estimated to participate in the Selected Reserve training programs and the number of full-time active duty military personnel provided for are summarized in the following table. Excluded from the 1990 actual yearend numbers are 25,652 National Guard and Reserve Personnel called to active duty pursuant to 673b U.S.C. 10.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps program provides training for reserve and regular officer candidates who have enrolled in the course while attending a college at which an ROTC unit has been established. College graduates who satisfactorily complete the advanced course of the program are commissioned and may be ordered to active duty for a minimum of 3 years.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps Vitalization Act of 1964, as amended, authorizes a limited number of scholarships for ROTC students on a competitive basis. Successful candidates for the scholarships generally serve a minimum period of 4 years on active duty upon graduation and appointment as a commissioned officer. A number of scholarship recipients will fulfill their entire obligation in the Reserve components.

The Armed Forces health professions scholarship program provides a source of active duty commissioned officers for the various health professions.

The numbers of commissioned officers graduated from these programs are summarized below:

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

These appropriations finance the costs of operating and maintaining the Armed Forces, including the Reserve components and related support activities of the Department of Defense, except military personnel pay, allowances and travel costs. Included are amounts for pay of civilians, contract services for maintenance of equipment and facilities, fuel, supplies, and repair parts for weapons and equipment. Financial requirements are influenced by many factors, including the number of aircraft squadrons, Army and Marine Corps divisions, installations, military strength and deployments, rates of operational activity, and the quantity and complexity of major equipment (aircraft, ships, missiles, tanks, et cetera) in operation.

The purpose of this account is to allow transfers to operation and maintenance appropriations available for Defense activities in foreign countries to finance upward adjustment of recorded obligations due to foreign currency fluctuations above the budget rate. Transfers are made, as needed, to meet disbursement requirements in excess of funds otherwise available for obligation adjustment. Net gains resulting from favorable exchange rates are returned to this appropriation and are available for subsequent transfer when needed. General provision language is proposed to permit transfer to military personnel accounts.

PROCUREMENT

The procurement appropriations of the Department of Defense finance the acquisition of weapons, equipment, munitions, spares, and modification of existing equipment.

Procurement continues in 1992 for the Army's ATACMS tactical missile system, TOW and Hellfire antitank missiles, Multiple Launch Rocket System launchers, UH-60 Blackhawk helicopters and improved conventional munitions.

Modernization of our naval forces in 1992 and 1993 includes continued procurement of the F-18 air combat fighter and E-2C early warning aircraft. Procurement of the Trident strategic missile, Tomahawk missile and standard missile continues. General purpose ships to be acquired include the SSN-21 nuclear attack submarine, DDG-51 guided missile destroyers, coastal minehunters and the AOE replenishment ship. Advance procurement is included in 1993 for a new nuclear powered aircraft carrier.

Significant Air Force programs include procurement of AMRAAM air-to-air missiles, Advanced Cruise Missiles, B-2A bombers, F-16 air combat fighters, C-17 and C-130H airlift aircraft, satellites and space launch vehicles.

In 1992 and 1993, procurement of tactical missile defense systems has been consolidated and placed under the central management of the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization in recognition of the increased worldwide tactical missile threat.

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for those appropriations that are available for obligation for more than one year. In 1992 and 1993, it presents, by budget activity, the value of the program requested for the life of the multiple-year appropriation, with comparable amounts in 1990 and 1991.

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

Programs in this title support modernization through military research, exploratory development, fabrication of technology-demonstration devices, and development and testing of prototypes and full-scale preproduction hardware. This work is performed by industrial contractors, Government laboratories and facilities, universities and nonprofit organizations. Research and development programs are funded to cover annual needs.

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for that appropriation. Funds for each fiscal year are available for obligation for a two-year period beginning on the first day of that fiscal year.

The 1992 program provides for major technology and development efforts. These include the National Aerospace Plane, Balanced Technology Initiative, the Advanced Launch System, Small ICBM, the Short Range Attack Missile, the B-2 Advanced Technology Bomber, the Strategic Defense Initiative, Armored System Modernization Program, advanced anti-tank weapons, Light Helicopter, the Advanced Tactical Fighter, the Advanced Air-to-Air Missile, C-17 transport aircraft, the SSN-21 nuclear attack submarine, the Fixed Distributed System, the High Performance Computing program, AWACS upgrades and modifications of F-16's for close air support. Funds are also requested for product improvement to systems which have already been fielded or are in production, such as the F/A-18 fighter, and the M1A1 tank.

For expenses necessary for basic and applied scientific research, development, test and evaluation, including maintenance, rehabilitation, lease, and operation of facilities and equipment, as authorized by law; [$5,607,379,000] $6,236,400,000, to remain available for obligation until September 30, [1992, of which not less than $5,480,000 is available only for the Vectored Thrust Combat Agility Demonstrator flight test program utilizing the Vectored Thrust Ducted Propeller] 1993.

Further, for the foregoing purposes, $5,867,300,000, to become available for obligation on October 1, 1992 and to remain available for obligation until September 30, 1994. (10 U.S.C. 2353, 4503; Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1991; additional authorizing legislation to be proposed.)

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for those appropriations that are available for obligation for more than one year. In 1992 and 1993 it presents, by budget activity, the value of the program requested for the life of the multiple-year appropriations, with comparable amounts in 1990 and 1991.

The direct military construction programs for the Armed Forces, both Active and Reserve, shown in the individual schedules of this title are summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

	1990 actual	1991 est.	1992 est.	1993 est.
Active Forces.....	3,056,255,000	2,817,637,000	2,591,500,000	2,485,400,000
Reserve Forces.....	665,931,000	690,117,000	281,400,000	186,000,000
Interservice activities.....	1,457,327,000	1,832,088,000	1,684,000,000	1,063,000,000
Total.....	5,179,513,000	5,339,842,000	4,556,900,000	3,734,400,000

The Military Construction programs are intended to provide facilities required as a result of new weapon systems entering the inventory including naval vessels, to support chemical demilitarization and other high priority initiatives. The program continues initiatives to improve living and working conditions, to reduce operating costs, increase productivity, and conserve energy by upgrading or replacing facilities which have become functionally obsolete or can be made more efficient through relatively modest investments in improvements. Also included in this request are resources required to realign and close bases consistent with the recommendations of the Base Realignment and Closure Commission.

FAMILY HOUSING, DEFENSE

These appropriations finance all costs associated with construction, improvements, operations, maintenance and leasing of all military family housing. The program contains initiatives to reduce operating costs and conserve energy by upgrading or replacing facilities which can be made more efficient through relatively modest investments in improvements.

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for those appropriations that are available for obligation for more than one year. In 1992 and 1993 it presents, by budget activity, the value of the program requested for the life of the multiple-year appropriation, with comparable amounts in 1990 and 1991.

The National Defense Stockpile is planned and operated under the authority of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stockpiling Act. The purpose of the Stockpile is to decrease or preclude a dangerous and costly dependence by the United States upon foreign sources for supplies of strategic and critical materials in times of national emergency. The quantities of the materials stockpiled are to be sufficient to sustain the United States for a period of not less than three years during a national emergency situation that would necessitate a total mobilization of the economy for a sustained conventional global war of indefinite duration.

The National Defense Stockpile Transaction Fund provides for the financing of acquisition and upgrading of strategic and critical stockpile materials, and all related expenses such as transportation, development of specifications, testing, quality studies, and relocations of materials. Operational expenses will be financed commencing in 1992.

SEC. 8047. During the current fiscal year, upon a determination by the Secretary of Defense that such action is necessary in the national interest, he may, with the approval of the Office of Management and Budget, make transfers from appropriations available to the Department of Defense to the fund established by section 1013(d) of the Demonstration and Metropolitan Development Act of 1966 (42 U.S.C. 3374(d)), to be merged with and be available for the same purposes, and for the same time period, as the appropriations to such fund.

SEC. 8048. During the current fiscal year and hereafter, none of the funds appropriated for intelligence programs to the Department of Defense which are transferred to another Federal agency for execution shall be expended by the Department of Defense in any fiscal year in excess of amounts required for expenditure during such fiscal year by the Federal agency to which such funds are transferred.

Funds are requested to continue and initiate surveys, preconstruction engineering and design, data collection, interagency coordination and research activities to determine the need, engineering feasibility, economic justification, and the environmental and social suitability of solutions to water and related land resource problems.

Funds are requested for nine new environmental restoration studies, many of which will address restoring fish and wildlife resources; for a study addressing the economic impacts of global climate change; and for a new four-year demonstration program to increase privatization in the provision of environmental infrastructure services.

No new traditional reconnaissance studies are proposed for 1992, to accommodate follow-on funding requirements for the large number of water resources studies added in the 1991 Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act.

In the area of infrastructure, funds are proposed to continue participation with the Department of Transportation in the development of magnetically levitated rail transportation (MAGLEV). Proposed legislation would authorize the continuation of the conduct of research and development activities on magnetic levitation technology in fiscal year 1992 and beyond. Also, funds are requested to continue the construction productivity advancement research (CPAR) program.

Proposed legislation would authorize the Secretary in cooperation with other Federal and non-Federal interests to undertake a market feasibility study for determining private sector development opportunities as part of the new environmental infrastructure demonstration program described above.

Funds are requested for construction, rehabilitation and related activity for water resources development projects having navigation, flood control, water supply, hydroelectric, and other attendant benefits to the Nation. Expected savings from changes in the Davis-Bacon Act are $15.94 million.

Funding is included for new construction work as follows: five new projects with a total Federal cost of $1.1 billion, and six new major rehabilitation projects with a total Federal cost of $102 million. New major rehabilitation projects, including five for inland and coastal waterways for which one-half of the funding will be derived from the Inland Waterways Trust Fund, have been moved from Operation and Maintenance, General to Construction, General.

Funding is included to serve the interests of the environment at completed and ongoing projects, including continuing land acquisition to mitigate environmental losses caused by the construction of the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway Project in Alabama and Mississippi. The budget also includes a package proposal for juvenile fish mitigation in the Columbia River Basin involving funding of passage facilities at six Corps of Engineers hydroelectric dams on the mainstem Columbia and Snake Rivers and a detailed mitigation analysis, prepared in cooperation with regional interests, of juvenile fish losses at Corps dams on the mainstem Columbia and Snake Rivers. Funding is also proposed for environmental restoration at completed projects under the authority of section 1135 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986, as amended. Under Public Law 101-512, the Department of the Interior's National Park Service will transfer funds to the Corps of Engineers for work it accomplishes under authority of the Everglades National Park Protection and Expansion Act.

Funding for Continuing Authorities Projects Not Requiring Specific Legislation is provided for all phases of flood control (Section 205) projects and the orderly phase-out of projects implemented under other authorities. During the phase-out process, the Corps will continue to completion projects currently under construction, projects which the Assistant Secretary of the Army (Civil Works) has previously approved for construction, and emergency streambank and shoreline protection (Section 14) projects where a feasibility study has been initiated, provided any resulting project meets Section 14 construction funding criteria.

Funds are requested for operation, maintenance, and related activities of the Corps of Engineers at the navigation, flood control and multiple purpose projects for which it is responsible. Work to be accomplished consists of dredging, repair, and operation of structures and other facilities, including recreation facilities, all as authorized in the various River and Harbor and Flood Control Acts. Related activities include aquatic plant control, monitoring of completed coastal projects, wetlands research, dredging research, removal of sunken vessels, and the collection of domestic waterborne commerce statistics. This request also includes funds for National Emergency Preparedness as directed in Executive Order 11490. Expected savings from changes in the Davis-Bacon Act are $12.86 million.

A new emphasis would be placed on the maintenance of existing structures and equipment through the major rehabilitation program. However, the new construction work recommended in Fiscal Year 1992 for the repair of hydropower structures and of structures on the inland waterway system would be funded under the Construction, General appropriation. Continuing major rehabilitation projects would remain in the Operation and Maintenance, General appropriation.

Two initiatives would be undertaken in the environmental arena. The first initiative would be Coastal America Partnership to be funded for $7,000,000 and would be a joint cost shared management demonstration of coastal environmental restoration and improvement in seven geographical regions of the United States. This program would involve five Federal Agencies: Corps, EPA, NOAA, USFWS and the USGS. The initiatives would provide for joint actions to address three major natural resource problems along the coasts of the United States, (1) managing contaminated sediments, (2) reducing the loss and alteration of coastal habitats, including wetlands, and (3) managing pollution from non-point sources.

The second initiative would be a study to develop a Wetlands Action Plan and Demonstration Program. The study would include reviews of existing mitigation banks, and their merits and problems. The study would recommend any authorization necessary to implement mitigation banking demonstrations associated with Federal activities (projects and permits). The Action Plan would be developed in cooperation with the EPA, NOAA, USFWS and other Federal agencies. The outcome of the study would be to propose, in cooperation with interested States, two wetlands banking demonstration sites.

Proposed legislation would expand authority to collect recreation user fees and to encourage more non-Federal participation in the operation and enhancement of recreation areas by the establishment of a Challenge Cost Share Program. The increase in revenues, to become effective on October 1, 1991, would allow construction, operation and maintenance of recreation facilities consistent with public demand. Under the proposed Challenge Cost Share Program, the Secretary of the Army would be authorized to enter into cooperative arrangements with non-Federal public and private entities and to accept funds, materials and services at projects where recreation facilities and natural resources are being maintained with Federal funds.

This activity provides for flood emergency preparation, flood fighting and rescue operations, and repair of flood control and Federal hurricane or shore protection works. It also provides for emergency supplies of clean water where the source has been contaminated and, in drought distressed areas, provision of adequate supplies of water for human and livestock consumption. In the event of a major flood or coastal emergency, additional funds may be requested.

The Harbor Maintenance Trust Fund is established in accordance with the Harbor Maintenance Revenue Act of 1986 (Public Law 99-662, Title XIV, as amended). Under law, revenue is derived from: (1) receipts from a 0.125 percent ad valorem user fee imposed on commercial cargo loaded and unloaded at specified U.S. ports open to public navigation, and (2) collection of charges and tolls imposed by the Saint Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation. Expected savings from changes in the Davis-Bacon Act are $6.40 million.

The Harbor Maintenance Revenue Act also authorized expenditures from the Trust Fund to fully finance the operation and maintenance of the Corporation, to finance up to 100 percent of Corps of Engineers' harbor operation and maintenance (O&M) costs, including O&M costs associated with Great Lakes navigational projects, and to rebate the U.S. portion of tolls paid on the Seaway.

For appropriation language, see the following accounts: Army Corps of Engineers, Civil "Operation and Maintenance, General"; St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation "Operation and maintenance"; and Department of the Treasury "St. Lawrence Seaway toll rebate program".

During the coming year, legislation to authorize payment of up to $5 million annually for administrative costs of the Corps, Treasury and Commerce will be proposed. Details of this legislation will be forthcoming after the submission of the FY 1992 Budget.

The Coastal Wetlands Restoration Trust Fund is established to receive these funds and finance the appropriate activities.

Educational improvement.—

State block grants.—States and outlying areas receive grants, according to a statutory formula based on school-age population, to improve the quality of elementary and secondary education for children in public and private schools. Under proposed legislation, States would reserve for State-administered activities 50 percent of their grant funds, the majority of which would support activities to promote educational choice. The remaining funds would be distributed to local school districts.

National programs.—

Inexpensive book distribution.—One award is made to Reading Is Fundamental, Inc. to support the distribution of books to children and other reading motivation activities.

Arts in education.—Funds support arts education activities of the John F. Kennedy Center and the Very Special Arts organization.

Drug-free schools and communities.—

State grants.—Under this program, States and outlying areas receive grants, according to a statutory formula based on school-age population and previous year's share of allocations under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, to assist in combating the abuse of drugs and alcohol by the Nation's children and youth.

School personnel training.—Funds are used to establish, expand, or enhance programs and activities for the training of teachers, counselors, and other school personnel in drug and alcohol abuse education and prevention.

National programs.—Funds support programs at institutions of higher education, programs for Indian youth, regional centers, and Federal activities for preventing alcohol and drug abuse.

Emergency grants.—Grants are awarded to provide special assistance to school systems with a high incidence of drug abuse.

Eisenhower mathematics and science education State grants.—Funds available for this activity are used by State and local educational agencies to carry out programs to train teachers and improve instruction in mathematics and science. States and outlying areas receive grants based on their school-age population and previous year's share of allocations under chapter 1 of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. Each State must spend 75 percent of its grant for elementary and secondary education programs and 25 percent for higher education programs.

Christa McAuliffe fellowships.—This program provides fellowship awards to outstanding teachers to enable and encourage them to continue their education or to develop educational projects and programs. In 1990, 75 fellows received awards.

Magnet schools in desegregating districts.—Funds are provided to local educational agencies for use in operating magnet school programs that are part of approved desegregation plans. In 1990, 54 local educational agencies received awards.

Women's educational equity.—1992 funds would support the National Publishing Center, which would ensure that products developed over the last 14 years continue to be available to States, school districts, and colleges.

Training and advisory services.—Grants are made to State educational agencies and regional desegregation assistance centers to enable them to provide technical assistance, at the request of school districts, in the preparation, adoption, and implementation of plans for the desegregation of public schools and in the development of effective methods of coping with special educational problems occasioned by desegregation.

Dropout prevention demonstrations.—Funds in 1992 would support the second of four planned years of funding for structured demonstration projects to test new approaches to dropout prevention and reentry. Funds would also support an evaluation of the program.

General assistance to the Virgin Islands.—Under this program, an award is made to the U.S. Virgin Islands to improve public education.

Bilingual education.—These programs support the establishment, operation, and improvement of programs in local schools to prepare children of limited English proficiency to enter an all-English-language educational program. Aid is also given to train educational personnel and parents to serve limited English proficient children, to build State capacity to improve educational services for limited English proficient children in school districts, and for information dissemination, studies, and evaluations.

Immigrant education.—The immigrant education program provides grants to school districts to help finance educational services for immigrant students. Participation is limited to districts with 500 immigrant students or districts in which immigrant children represent at least 3 percent of the enrollment. Awards are made to State educational agencies, which make subgrants to eligible local educational agencies. Legislation is proposed to reduce the current double counting of these students under other Federal programs and to require that funds be used to supplement, not supplant, local educational funds.

State grants.—

Grants to States.—This formula grant program assists States in providing special education and related services to children with disabilities. In order to participate in the program, States must provide services to all children with disabilities ages 6 through 17. States must be providing services to all children ages 3 through 5 with disabilities in order to count 3- through 5-year olds for allocations. Children with disabilities ages 18 through 21 must also be served, except when such services would be inconsistent with State law or practice, or the order of any court. To be eligible for a grant, each State is required to submit an acceptable State plan that requires the development and use of an individualized education program for each student with a disability, the establishment of procedural safeguards for all children with disabilities and their parents, and the training of personnel for these special education programs.

Chapter 1 handicapped program.—Under chapter 1 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, States receive formula grants to help them provide early intervention services to children, ages birth through 2 years, and special education and related services to children, ages 3 through 21 years, who have disabilities and who are served by State agencies. The Administration believes that this program duplicates services to children with disabilities under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act and that funding for these children should be provided under the Grants for Infants and Families and Grants to States programs. Therefore, beginning in 1992, this program is being phased out over a four-year period. Amounts no longer requested for the Chapter 1 handicapped program will be added to the Grants to States program.

Preschool grants.—This formula grant program provides additional funds to States to further assist them in providing special education and related services to children with disabilities ages 3 through 5 who are counted under the Grants to States program. To receive awards under this program, States must serve all 3- through 5-year olds with disabilities.

Grants for infants and families.—This formula grant program assists States: (1) in developing and implementing a statewide program of early intervention services for infants and toddlers with disabilities, from birth through age 2, and their families; (2) in enhancing their capacity to provide quality early intervention services; and (3) in expanding and improving existing early intervention services. The statewide program must be implemented by the fourth year of a State's participation and services must be provided to all infants and toddlers with disabilities by the fifth year of a State's participation. Primary funding for services is provided by other Federal, State, local and private sources. As part of the program's reauthorization, the Administration will propose legislation to encourage States to establish sliding fee scales for direct services based on a family's ability to pay.

Special purpose funds.—

Deaf-blindness.—Awards are made to support activities to improve special education services for children with both deafness and blindness.

Serious emotional disturbance.—Projects are supported to improve special education services for children with serious emotional disturbance.

Severe disabilities.—The program supports activities to improve special education services for children with severe disabilities.

Early childhood education.—Awards support activities to expand and improve early intervention and special education services for children with disabilities from birth through age 8.

Secondary and transitional services.—Projects improve secondary school special educational services and assist youths with disabilities in moving from school to work, further education, and adult services.

Postsecondary education.—The program supports demonstration projects to assist persons with disabilities in pursuing postsecondary, vocational, technical, continuing, and adult education.

Innovation and development.—Support is provided for research and related activities to improve special education and early intervention services.

Media and captioning services.—Funds are used for a variety of media related purposes including captioning films and television for individuals with hearing impairments, and de-

This account finances several programs of aid to students in postsecondary education. The Administration is proposing reauthorizing legislation for the expiring Higher Education Act. When new authorizing legislation is enacted, funds will be requested for the Student financial assistance account. The narrative and tables below reflect the Administration's budget and legislative proposals. See the "Proposed for later transmittal, proposed legislation" schedule for additional details.

The budget and legislative program includes substantial policy changes affecting award amounts and eligibility for awards for all the programs to be funded. Major reforms include: establishing minimum performance standards for all aid recipients students in the bottom 10 percent of their postsecondary class would not be eligible for aid, limiting the maximum aid available at one year or less vocational programs to community college costs; establishing minimum standards of quality for school eligibility for Federal aid; and tightening the definition of independent student.

Pell grants.—Undergraduate students establish eligibility for these grants through application to a federally managed system of assessment of need. This need assessment evaluates the individual and parental ability to contribute towards a student's postsecondary education.

The 1991 appropriation includes up to $362 million for unfunded Pell costs in prior year programs. The 1991 appropriation is projected to be insufficient to meet eligible awards for the 1991-92 award year. Current estimates project a funding shortfall of between $36 to $129 million. The Administration is requesting supplemental language to enable the Secretary to reduce all awards by a uniform amount to ensure that funding is sufficient. See chapter XIII.B for further details.

The budget and legislative program significantly increases Pell grant aid to the lowest income students. The request of $5,775 million provides for a substantial increase in the maximum award, from $2,400 to $3,700; an increase in the minimum award, from $200 to $400; two award rules designed to direct the largest aid awards to those least able to contribute to postsecondary costs—varying percent of "need" (cost of attendance less estimated family contribution) by income, and maximum award minus estimated family contribution; a minimum student contribution for all Pell recipients, except those with very low family and/or student income; and a proposed revised general need analysis, also known as "Congressional Methodology", assess the level of need for applicants to all student aid programs.

Presidential achievement scholarships.—The budget and legislative program proposes to reward recipients of Pell grants for above-average educational achievement. Pell grant recipients ranking in the top 10 percent of their high school graduating class or scoring highly on national standardized tests would be eligible for a $500 award in their first year of postsecondary study. In subsequent years, Pell grant recipients ranking in the top 20 percent of their college class would be eligible. These awards would provide additional incentives to low-income students to excel while in high school, to seek admission to institutions of higher education, and to excel while in attendance there.

Work-study.—Federal grants are awarded by formula to qualifying institutions, which develop and provide part-time jobs for eligible undergraduate and graduate students with demonstrated need. Federal grants in most cases pay 70 percent of a student's earnings and the remainder is paid by the employer. Hourly earnings must not be less than the Federal minimum wage. The budget and legislative program proposes to increase the institutional matching share to 50 percent, in recognition of the significant benefits institutions receive from decreased labor costs.

Supplemental educational opportunity grants.—Funds are allocated by formula among qualifying institutions, which use these funds at their discretion to award grants to undergraduate students, with priority for those students with exceptional need. The Federal share of such grants may not exceed 85 percent of the total grant. The budget and legislative program proposes to increase the institutional matching share to 50 percent, in recognition of the significant benefits institutions receive from this campus-based aid.

Income contingent loans.—Under the income contingent loan (ICL) program, institutions operate revolving loan funds capitalized in part with Federal contributions distributed to participating institutions. Loans are made at the institution's discretion, usually to students with demonstrated need, and carry unsubsidized interest rates. Repayment rates depend on post-school earnings: as income increases, so does the percentage of income required for repayment. In 1992, the requested increase in Federal contributions would increase the number of institutions and students served.

Perkins loans—Cancellations.—Under the Perkins loan (formerly national direct student loan (NDSL)) cancellation program, institutional revolving funds are reimbursed for indebtedness cancelled as a result of a borrower engaging in certain public service occupations. Appropriations in 1991 were not needed because sufficient unobligated balances were available to fund expected cancellations in that year. The budget and legislative program proposes to eliminate cancellations for Perkins loans made after 1991. Loan forgiveness has not been proven to have a positive effect on inducing individuals to pursue desired occupations.

The following tables display student aid funds available, the number of aid awards, average awards, and the unduplicated count of students receiving awards, including aid under the guaranteed student loan (GSL) program, under the budget and legislative program request. The tables include the effects of matching funds wherever applicable. ICL and Perkins loan amounts also reflect other available capital in institutional revolving funds, including loan collection and loan cancellation receipts. Guaranteed student loan amounts reflect the capital actually loaned, not the Federal costs of those loans.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this program account records the subsidy costs associated with guaranteed student loans (GSL) committed in 1992 and beyond, as well as administrative expenses of the GSL program. Administrative expenses include discretionary expenses for salaries, expenses and overhead of employees working directly on the GSL program and mandatory administrative expenses such as administrative cost allowances and supplemental preclaims assistance payments. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis. An explanation of credit reform, including a discussion of how subsidies are calculated, is included in Part Two, Chapter VIII.A of the Budget.

The guaranteed student loan (GSL) program is designed to promote the availability of loans from banks and other lenders to students and their parents to help meet the costs of attending participating universities, colleges, and other postsecondary institutions after taking into consideration family financial resources and student self-help. This is accomplished through the provision of Federal reinsurance against borrower default as well as through substantial Federal interest subsidy payments to lenders. In general, the program is administered by State and private nonprofit guarantee agencies that serve as intermediate loan insurers, defaulted loan collectors, and providers of various services to lenders. The Government also provides substantial subsidies to these agencies. Through July 1984, the Federal Government also provided direct loan insurance and, in such cases, continues to be responsible for defaulted loan collection and providing assistance to lenders.

The Administration is proposing reauthorizing legislation for the expiring Higher Education Act. When new authorizing legislation is enacted, funds will be requested for the Guaranteed student loans program account.

Three types of guaranteed loans are currently available through the program: under the Stafford loan component, students may borrow highly subsidized loans; under the PLUS loan component, parents can borrow less-subsidized loans; and under the Supplemental Loans for Students (SLS) component, formerly part of PLUS, students also may borrow less-subsidized loans. Each program has both annual and cumulative limits on loan amounts. All loans can be used only to meet educational expenses. Evidence of financial need is required for a student to receive a Stafford student loan.

The Federal Government pays lenders a quarterly special allowance throughout the life of each Stafford loan. This allowance generally assures lenders a total yield on new loans equal to the current 91-day Treasury bill rate plus 3¼ percentage points or the interest rate to the borrower, whichever is higher. The budget and legislative program propose a reduced lender yield of 91-day Treasury bill rate plus 3 percentage points for lenders with high default rates. The Government is also liable for up to 100 percent of costs related to borrower default, death, disability, and bankruptcy.

Under the Stafford loan component, the Federal Government pays the interest obligation (generally 8 percent on new loans) of eligible borrowers while they are in school and during grace and certain deferment periods. Federal interest benefit costs are partially offset by an origination fee of 5 percent of loan principal which is charged to borrowers.

Under the PLUS and SLS loan components, all students, and parents of dependent students, may borrow to meet the student's educational expenses without any demonstrated financial need. Unlike the Stafford loan program, the borrower's interest obligation (up to the 52-week Treasury bill rate plus 3¼ percentage points, not to exceed 12 percent) during in-school, grace and deferment periods is not paid by the Federal Government.

Under a fourth component, consolidation loans, student borrowers that meet certain debt level criteria and have loans from multiple sources may consolidate these loans into a single new long-term loan. Borrowers may consolidate Stafford, Perkins (formerly NDSL), and SLS loans, PLUS loans made to students prior to enactment of the SLS program, and Health Professions Student Loans (HPSL). The interest rate is the greater of 9 percent or the weighted average of the interest rates of the loans discharged by consolidation, rounded to the nearest whole percent. Most consolidation activity is a roll-over of current debt from a Federal perspective, with only Perkins and HPSL consolidation constituting new Federal loan guarantees. Since this new loan volume is minimal (less than $100 million a year), consolidation loan data are included in Stafford loan data.

The Federal Government also pays administrative cost allowances to guarantee agencies. Funds for "administrative expenses subject to limitation" requested in the Guaranteed student loans program account support administration of the GSL program in the Office of Postsecondary Education. Funding is requested in this account pursuant to the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990.

Under the 1990 sequester, pursuant to Public Law 99-177, for new loans made between October 1, 1989 and December 31, 1989, first year special allowance payments were reduced by .25 percentage point, and the origination fee paid by students was increased by .5 percentage point to 5.5 percent.

Federal receipts primarily include collections on defaulted loans and reimbursements from guarantee agencies for their default collections. One-time savings of $197 million was achieved in 1988, 1989, and 1990 by applying excess guarantee agency reserves to agency default claims against the Government and by other means. In addition, outstanding advances (interest-free loans) of $17 million to guarantee agencies will be repaid in 1991; $14 million was repaid in 1990. Also included are Student Loan Marketing Association (Sallie Mae) repayments of loans from the Federal Financing Bank; these transactions are treated as part of the cost of the GSL program. Sallie Mae annual payments are $30 million until 1995. The remaining balance of $4.3 billion is due in 1996.

Total loan volume insured under all program components under the President's program is expected to be $11.7 billion in 1992, resulting in outstanding loans at the end of 1992 of $57.6 billion.

The 1990 Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act enacted significant changes to reduce default costs. These reforms include: eliminating from eligibility for GSL loans students at schools with unacceptably high default rates; better screening of students without a high school diploma or GED for true ability to benefit from a postsecondary program; and delaying disbursement of loans for first year students.

For 1992, the budget and legislative program builds on these positive changes with a wide-ranging set of strategies in order to restore integrity to the GSL program, continue the attack on defaults and eliminate waste and abuse, strengthen the guarantee agency structure and tighten the links between States and guarantee agencies, impose State and bank risk-sharing for excessive defaults, and improve default collection.

The text tables that follow provide additional information on the GSL program and reflect the effect of proposed legislative changes. These text tables include 1990 and 1991 data from the Guaranteed student loans (liquidating) account and 1992 data from the Guaranteed student loans program account.

Each major cost in the GSL program is reduced to some degree by cost offsets of varying kinds. ¹ 1990 and 1991 data reflect program obligations and cost offsets for those years displayed in the Guaranteed student loans (liquidating) account. 1992 data reflect 1992 cash flows for loans guaranteed in 1992, as calculated under credit reform requirements, plus 1992 costs associated with loans made prior to 1992.

² Includes direct Federal collections and collections due to Federal tax refund offset. Some of these collections are displayed below as offsets to Federal administrative costs, principally for collections work by Federal contractors.

³ These collections are net of amounts retained by guarantee agencies to cover their collection costs. This "collections retention allowance" is reflected in the section on guarantee agency administrative costs.

⁴ Includes repayment of agency advances, elimination of excess agency reserves through direct payments to the Government and through reduced reinsurance payments to the agencies, and purchase of rehabilitated loans by the agencies.

* Agency collection costs are not directly reimbursed by the Government; instead, they are financed by retained agency collections, and are thus reflected in reduced net agency collections transmitted to the Government. The transactions are displayed here on a gross and net basis for completeness.

* Federal contract collection costs are payments to debt collection contractors. The payments are financed in entirety by collections.

* Includes administrative costs for the default reduction or "Special Payoff" program mandated by the 1989 Omnibus Reconciliation Act. These costs were financed in entirety by "Special Payoff" collections.

Increased efforts are being made to collect outstanding defaults and to reduce the incidence of default. Final default reduction regulations were issued in 1989 to curb defaults at participating schools. Full implementation is expected to occur toward the end of 1991. Legislative changes in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Acts of 1989 and 1990 focus on decreasing defaults in the Stafford and/or SLS programs. Increased administrative efforts to collect outstanding defaults include: referring both insured and reinsured defaulted loans to private collection agencies; sharing information on defaulted loans with consumer credit bureaus; computer matches to locate defaulters; increased litigation; increased lender and guarantee agency due diligence requirements; closer monitoring of collection activity; review of debt compromise policies to ensure maximum collections on defaults; and deduction from Federal income tax refunds of defaulted loan amounts.

The following tables reflect data from the Guaranteed student loans (liquidating) account on loans made prior to 1992 and the Guaranteed student loans program account on loans made after 1991. No defaults on loan commitments in 1992 are projected to occur in 1992. Outstanding defaults owed to the Federal Government in 1990-92 are as follows:

Frequently used GSL default rate measures are the gross and net cumulative default rates. The former represents cumulative defaults divided by cumulative loans that have matured (i.e., entered repayment). The latter represents cumulative defaults minus cumulative collections on defaults, divided by cumulative matured loans. These rates are the best measures of the long-term default costs of the entire GSL portfolio and the best indicators of longer term trends in default costs. The following table displays these gross and net default rates.

Gross default rate.....	15.7%	16.7%	17.0%
Net default rate.....	11.2%	11.8%	11.7%

Another measure represents defaults in a given year divided by the average amount of loans in repayment during that year. This annual rate is more comparable to default rates calculated by commercial lending institutions. The volatility of this rate, depending as it does on annual flows into and out of repayment, makes this a less useful indicator in assessing longer term default trends.

Other aid for institutions—

Program development.—In 1992, funds would be used in the Overseas International Education programs to provide research and study opportunities in foreign countries for American graduate students, faculty members, and teachers of foreign languages.

Special grants.—In 1992, funds would be used to assist the Robert A. Taft Institute of Government in developing education programs to train elementary and secondary teachers in the principles of democracy and the governmental and political processes of the United States.

This account also records collections on outstanding prior year loans under the Cuban Loan program and Law Enforcement Education program. No new loans have been made under these activities since 1980. Even though most of the cumulative portfolio has been in default for many years, and is being written off under standard procedures, the Department is continuing to pursue collection efforts against borrowers. Outstanding defaults, as well as delinquent loans, are as follows:

In 1992, funds would also support the continuation of an evaluation of the Student Support Services program.

Scholarships.—In 1992, funds would support: the National Science Scholars program for outstanding undergraduate students studying in the areas of mathematics and science; Robert C. Byrd honors scholarships for outstanding students who show promise of continued excellence; and Paul Douglas teacher scholarships for outstanding students who intend to teach at the elementary and secondary level.

National Graduate Fellowships.—Funds would support National Graduate Fellowships (which would consolidate the graduate fellowship programs currently authorized under the Higher Education Act) to assist needy graduate students, particularly those from groups traditionally underrepresented, who are studying in areas of national need.

Howard University is a private, nonprofit educational institution consisting of 18 schools and colleges. Federal funds are used to provide partial support for the University programs as well as for the teaching hospital facilities. In 1990, direct Federal appropriations represented 67 percent of the University's educational and general expenditures. Policies to reduce the Federal tuition subsidies to foreign students were implemented in 1990.

Program operations.—Title VII, Part C, of the Higher Education Act of 1965 authorizes direct loans at 5.5 percent interest, repayable within 50 years, to colleges, universities, and higher education building agencies for the construction, reconstruction, or renovation of academic facilities. No new loan commitments have been made since 1981, and no new commitments are planned for 1992 and beyond.

Financing.—Loan capital for this program has been provided both through appropriations and the sale of participation certificates which are backed by pools of existing higher education facilities loans held by the Federal Government. All participation certificates held by this account were redeemed as of September 30, 1988.

Interest is payable to Treasury on the amount of appropriations paid out for loan capital and remaining outstanding, less the average undisbursed cash balance in the fund during the year. The interest rate certified by Treasury for payment from the account was 8.125 percent in 1990 and is 9.0 percent in 1991.

The appropriation, along with repayments on outstanding loans, interest revenue, and investment income, is used to pay operating expenses and to repay interest costs to Treasury. The status of defaulted loans is shown in the table below:

This program finances direct loans at 5.5 percent interest to schools and colleges for construction and renovation of undergraduate academic facilities, student and faculty housing, and other educational facilities.

Under section 761(d) of the Higher Education Act, capital to finance new loans is borrowed from the Treasury at an interest rate based on the average yield for long-term Treasury securities during the month before loan commitments are made to schools. Loan commitments are usually made in the fourth quarter of the fiscal year. The Secretary pays 8.86 percent interest on funds borrowed for 1990 loans. Appropriations finance the difference between the total interest received from borrowers and the higher amount of interest owed to Treasury each year.

No new loans are proposed for this program in 1992.

Program operations.—Loans in this account were made for construction and renovation of college housing facilities prior to 1987 under title IV of the Housing Act of 1950. The Higher Education Amendments of 1986 repealed title IV and gave the Secretary authority to manage outstanding college housing loans under title VII, Part F of the Higher Education Act. There is no new loan activity in this account. New loans made after 1986 under Part F are financed in the College Housing and Academic Facilities Loans Account.

Financing.—Loan capital for this program was provided primarily through Treasury borrowings and the sale of participation certificates which were backed by pools of college housing loans held by the Federal Government. The participation certificates sold by the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) and held by this account, were redeemed as of September 30, 1988. As of September 30, 1990, $653 million in loan capital is still due the Treasury under a note that comes due January 1, 1991 that bears interest at 2.75 percent annually. The outstanding Treasury debt will be refinanced.

Available resources (loan repayments, interest revenue, and other income in excess of operating expenses) will be used to redeem a portion of the agency's debt in outstanding Treasury borrowings, as is being done in 1991 and as was done in the three preceding years. Approximately $55 million will be repaid to Treasury in 1991 and $10 million will be repaid in 1992; $62 million was repaid in 1990.

The budget provides $20 thousand in 1992 to fund facilities management and property disposition expenses related to loan collection action.

A total of $2.2 million in defaulted loans was converted to current status in 1990 from institutions in default. The status of defaulted loans is shown in the table below:

Defense programs.—This program includes the following activities:

Weapons activities.—This activity provides for the research, development, engineering, testing, and production of all U.S. nuclear weapons; maintenance of these weapons for their stockpile life, and retirement and disposal of nuclear weapons from the stockpile and promotes the transfer of nonsensitive defense programs' funded technology to the private sector. This program also provides for the certification of safety, reliability, and performance of new weapon systems and surveillance of the existing stockpile. In addition, this program provides for facility construction, maintenance, and restoration for the weapons research and development, testing, and production activities.

Verification and control technology.—This activity supports the development and execution of U.S. national security and foreign policy in the areas of treaty verification and implementation, intelligence, and arms control. The program consists primarily of detection technology, analytical support, and intelligence. Detection technology efforts include research, development and fabrication of seismic, nonseismic, and satellite devices. Analytical support provides technical support to both arms control and intelligence concerns.

Materials production.—This activity provides nuclear materials for national defense and nondefense requirements.

To accomplish this mission, it must operate and maintain a complex of production reactors, chemical processing plants, and support facilities.

Nuclear safeguards and security.—This activity provides for the development of measures for the protection of nuclear weapons, nuclear materials, and facilities against theft, sabotage, espionage, and terrorist activity. Also provided is technical support to international activities designed to minimize the proliferation of nuclear weapons. In the area of classification and technology policy, this program protects classified and unclassified sensitive information critical to the National security and controls nuclear energy-related exports.

Security investigations.—This activity ensures that the common defense and the security of the United States will not be endangered by the granting of security clearances for personnel who, in the performance of their official duties, must have access to restricted data, National security information or special nuclear material, or who occupy a designated critical sensitive position. Security investigations are used as a basis to determine whether individuals are an acceptable security risk for such access.

Environmental restoration and waste management.—This program encompasses the following defense-related activities:

Corrective activities.—Provides for those activities needed to bring active and standby defense facilities into compliance with applicable local, State and Federal requirements and internal Department of Energy requirements in an expeditious manner.

Environmental restoration.—Provides for assessments and cleanup of facilities and sites that are no longer a part of active operations. Various amounts and types of waste have accumulated at these facilities and sites as a result of activities spanning nearly five decades, in connection with past defense programs efforts.

Waste management.—Provides for the management of wastes generated by defense activities, through treatment, storage or disposal of various waste types including radioactive, hazardous, mixed or sanitary wastes in compliance with applicable local, State and Federal requirements and internal Department of Energy requirements.

Technology development.—Provides for research and development activities which will develop and apply more effective technologies for meeting the Department of Energy's 30-year environmental restoration and waste management goals.

Transportation management.—Responsible for assuring the safe, secure, and economical transportation of DOE materials, including radioactive and other hazardous materials and waste.

Program direction.—Provides salaries and expenses for program staff at Headquarters for administration and oversight of environmental restoration and waste management programs.

New production reactors.—This program provides for the acquisition and construction of New Production Reactor capacity to meet National security requirements. It provides for the planning and development of a program to insure safety, quality and environmental protection as well as timely completion of the new facilities. During 1992 activities will include: selection of a reactor technology and a site; compliance with National Environmental Policy Act requirements, continuation of the design process for the selected reactor technology; further development and implementation of the safety review process, continuation of facility engineering and design, and tritium target development.

Naval reactors.—This program provides for the design, development, and testing of improved naval nuclear propulsion plants and reactor cores having increased reliability, improved performance, and simplified operating and maintenance requirements. These reactors are necessary to meet a variety of military requirements. During 1992 work will continue to improve existing submarine and surface ship reactors and plant components and to develop advanced reactor concepts and propulsion plants. This program also continues facility upgrading and provides equipment to support ongoing reactor design and testing activities and provides highly enriched uranium needed to manufacture fuel for cores used in Naval nuclear powered ships.

Office of Security Evaluations.—This program provides independent assessment of the safeguards and security posture of the DOE. This program is the principal focal point within the Department for all safeguards and security inspection and evaluation matters. Oversight is accomplished through the conduct of inspections at field sites and Headquarters to evaluate the status of protection provided national security interests, public safety, and program operations. Assessments, evaluations, and special studies of the effectiveness of protection policies and programs are conducted to provide a consolidated statement of the status of protection programs throughout the DOE complex. The program also includes the Radioactive Materials Packaging Certification (RAMPAC) Staff, which is responsible for certifying that radioactive material packages are in safety compliance with Federal Regulations and for maintaining a technology base to support certification activities.

Education programs.—Provides support for science and mathematics education at the precollege, undergraduate, and graduate levels. These education programs will be supported by the Offices of Nuclear Energy and Energy Research in FY 1992.

High energy physics.—Research in this program focuses on the fundamental constituents of matter, the fundamental forces in nature and the transformations between matter and energy at the most elemental level. The program includes experimental and theoretical particle physics research and related advanced accelerator and detector technology R&D. The primary mode of experimental research involves the study of collisions of energetic particles using large particle accelerators or colliding beam facilities by means of advanced multiparticle detector systems and associated electronics. Research in 1992 will continue studies of known fundamental constituents of particles, initiate searches for new particle constituents, and continue to pursue a unified description of the four fundamental forces in nature.

The 1992 high energy physics budget request provides for continued research at the Tevatron, the Stanford Linear Collider (SLC), the Alternating Gradient Synchrotron (AGS) and advanced accelerator and detector R&D related to next generation high energy particle accelerators. The operation of the Tevatron will provide the capability for utilizing Fermilab's superconducting synchrotron as a 900 GeV on 900 GeV proton anti-proton collider and as a 800 GeV fixed target facility, while Stanford Linear Accelerator Center's SLC will produce 50 GeV on 50 GeV electron-positron collisions. Both facilities will allow access into previously unexplored areas of high energy physics. The request also provides continuing support for effective participation by university based groups in experimental research including accelerator user group efforts and non-accelerator experiments, and for theoretical research efforts. The 1992 high energy physics capital equipment request provides for meeting the highest priority needs associated with the detectors required to implement the research programs using the new capabilities being provided by the Tevatron proton anti-proton collider at Fermilab and by the SLC electron-positron collider at SLAC. The construction request provides for continuation of the upgrade of the linear accelerator at the Fermi National Laboratory and initiation of construction of a new Main Injector ring which will further enhance the capability of the Tevatron.

Superconducting Super Collider.—The Superconducting Super Collider (SSC) is a new powerful particle accelerator capable of exploring the TeV mass region essential to advancing understanding of the fundamental nature of matter and energy. In 1992, R&D efforts will continue on magnet design, testing and fabrication, design and testing of other collider technical systems and on detector R&D. The request for capital equipment is in support of these R&D programs. Construction funding requested in 1992 will be used for the magnet industrialization program and the technical systems fabrication.

Nuclear Physics.—The goal of this program is to understand the interactions and structure of atomic nuclei and to investigate fundamental particles and forces of nature as manifested in nuclear matter. Program emphasis in 1992 centers on the role that quarks play in the makeup and interactions of nuclei, application of nuclear physics to astrophysical problems and properties of neutrinos, and the mechanisms by which colliding nuclei exchange mass, energy and angular momentum. The program supports and provides experimental equipment to qualified scientists and research groups conducting experiments in nuclear physics accelerator facilities around the world.

The 1992 nuclear physics budget requests continuation of construction for the Relativistic Heavy Ion Collider (RHIC) at Brookhaven and for the Continuous Electron Beam Accelerator Facility at Newport News, Virginia.

The request provides for research and operations of the LAMPF facility at Los Alamos, AGS/Tandem facility at Brookhaven, the Bevalac at Lawrence Berkeley, and smaller low energy heavy ion facilities. The program also supports the operation of dedicated university accelerator facilities.

General science program direction.—Provides direction, management, and administrative support to HEP and NP programs within general science.

The purpose of energy supply research and development activities is to develop new energy technologies and improve existing energy technologies. Included in this mission are basic and applied research along with selected technology development.

This account provides funds for operating expenses, capital equipment and construction projects for the research and technological development of the various energy technologies under examination in the energy supply, research and development mission.

Solar and renewable energy technology base.—The 1992 budget incorporates a modest reorganization of the Conservation and Renewable Energy budgets. This restructuring puts all of the activities on a consistent conceptual basis, revolving around end-use sectors of the economy. The Conservation programs were largely organized this way already, with Buildings, Industry, and Transportation programs; the Solar and Renewable Energy program has been focused mainly on electric utility-related technologies, and therefore most of it has been transformed into a Utility Technologies program, described below. The remaining activities have been placed in Buildings, Industry, Transportation, and Technical and Financial Assistance programs, corresponding to programs of the same nature in the Conservation account. The restructured programs offer simplified management and reduced chances of redundancy or overlap, which will help to achieve a more results-oriented and market-sensitive management approach.

Nuclear fission.—In 1992 the Civilian Reactor Development program continues on two parallel and complementary paths to ensure that nuclear energy continues to make a vital contribution to national energy security. The Light Water Reactor (LWR) program will focus on institutional and regulatory reform through supporting technology efforts and legislative initiatives. Cooperative programs with industry have the objective of providing certified advanced LWR designs in the early 1990's that could be ordered by utilities. The Advanced Reactor R&D program will focus on the development of the Modular High Temperature Gas Reactor (MHTGR) program and Integral Fast Reactor (IFR) for the Advanced Liquid Metal Reactor (ALMR) program. The space and defense and advanced radioisotope power systems programs will continue to develop and produce nuclear power systems for use in U.S. space missions and in support of military and civilian applications. The space exploration initiative provides for Departmental support of the President's new initiative, to be conducted in cooperation with NASA and DOD to develop nuclear power sources and nonnuclear technologies for moon and Mars exploration. The early program will focus on technology development with a search for new innovative approaches and technologies.

Environment, safety and health.—The Office of Environment, Safety and Health is made up of three programs: Environment, Safety and Health; Environmental Policy Analysis; and Scientific and Engineering Recruitment, Training and Development.

Environment, Safety and Health.—Environment, Safety and Health is responsible for oversight of all Department of Energy (DOE) activities to determine whether they are being conducted in conformance with applicable environmental laws and regulations and in a manner designed to ensure that the health and safety of workers and the public are protected. The Office also ensures that National environmental protection goals are incorporated in all DOE program areas; ensures that environmental, health and non-nuclear safety concerns are identified, prioritized and addressed through corrective and remedial actions; and provides liaison with other Federal agencies, such as the Environmental Protection Agency, the Department of Labor, and the Department of Health and Human Services, concerning regulatory efforts and specific actions of those agencies that may have an effect upon the Department's operations.

As a result of the Secretary's Ten Point initiative, the Office will continue to implement the Environment, Safety and Health Compliance Assessment ("Tiger Team") program. This program will provide the Secretary with current assessments of the status of DOE operating facilities' compliance with applicable orders, statutes, and regulations pertaining to environment, safety and health (including OSHA) considerations. In addition, baseline audits will be conducted at small DOE sites which will not be subjected to Tiger Team assessments.

Efforts will continue with the review of environmental legislation and regulations to ensure DOE-wide understanding and compliance with environmental laws and regulations. DOE-wide environmental policies, standards and directives will be developed as well as environmental guidance and training programs which cover the full range of environmental statutes, regulations, and internal requirements.

The Office continues to support the timely implementation of the Department's proposed actions by ensuring compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) and related environmental review requirements that are necessary prior to project commitment. The NEPA review workload is expected to increase significantly as a result of DOE project development and environmental compliance activities in support of the Secretary's Ten Point initiative, and as a result of the Secretary's NEPA policy statement, SEN-15.

Establishing effective compliance agreements with the States and the Environmental Protection Agency continues to be a focus of environmental issues coordination and oversight. Oversight of the environment, safety and health aspects of the DOE award fee system will continue in 1992. Similar oversight efforts are continuing relative to the development and implementation of the Environmental Restoration and Waste Management Five-Year Plan.

The Office will continue to provide independent internal oversight of DOE line programs for occupational safety, aviation, firearms, high explosives, industrial safety, facility safety, packaging and transportation safety, and quality assurance conducted by program offices, operations offices, power administrations, and operating contractors. Independent appraisal, reviews, and technical evaluations of the operation and management of DOE's facilities (exclusive of nuclear reactor and non-reactor nuclear facilities) will be conducted. Diagnostic assessments of DOE line management's safety and health program performance at nuclear and non-nuclear facilities will be conducted, and the Site Resident Program will be expanded to additional sites.

In response to the Secretarial Panel for the Evaluation of Epidemiologic Research Activities (SPEERA), the Secretary established a new Office of Health in Environment, Safety and Health. This new Office conducts a comprehensive DOE occupational health program, a strengthened program of oversight of the occupational medical program of the Department's contractors, and a comprehensive epidemiological and health surveillance program in cooperation with the Department of Health and Human Services.

Environmental Policy Analysis.—This Office is responsible for assessing the effects on the environment of proposed national energy policies. The immediate objective is to ensure adequate energy supplies are produced and used in a manner consistent with national environmental goals, and to assess the effects on energy supply and demand from changing environmental laws and regulations. For 1992, efforts to achieve this objective will involve: (a) assessing the effect of the 1991 National Energy Strategy (NES) implementation on the environment, including potential global climate change, (b) improving the Department's environmental policy analysis capabilities to maintain the U.S. technical advantage during international discussions of global climate and related environmental concerns, (c) providing effective DOE representation on environmental issues, including responses to environmental regulatory proposals, and (d) providing timely, high quality analysis of, and recommendations on, emerging environmental policy issues.

Scientific and Engineering Recruitment, Training and Development.—This Office is responsible for the development and implementation of a five-year plan for the recruitment, training and professional development of technically trained professionals to staff and manage the Department's technically complex programs and facilities. Consistent with this responsibility, this Office will ensure that programs are in place to systematically analyze scientific and engineering job requirements, assess and identify the necessary technical qualifications and skills of each position and target training as appropriate, implement various recruiting initiatives to supply qualified staff for all levels of technical vacancies, and provide a trained cadre from which the Secretary can fill the Department's senior technical managerial positions with qualified executives.

Office of nuclear safety.—On September 28, 1989, the Secretary of Energy established the Office of Nuclear Safety and transferred to it the nuclear safety oversight function previously performed in the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Environment, Safety and Health. In 1992, the Office of Nuclear Safety will continue independent oversight of line management performance, including oversight of the line's self as-assessment activities, to assure proper development and implementation of reactor and nonreactor nuclear facility safety policies and standards throughout the Department. The Office will be responsible for concurrence in restart operations when any Department of Energy nuclear facility has been shut down for nuclear, environmental, chemical, radiological, or fire/safety reasons and for new starts of nuclear facilities. Under the authority of the Price-Anderson Amendments Act of 1988, the Office will continue its enforcement of the Department's nuclear safety rules, regulations and orders. An on-site presence will be established at nuclear facility sites, providing direct and continuing interaction between independent oversight at Headquarters and activities in the field involving nuclear safety.

Biological and environmental research.—This program develops the knowledge base necessary to identify, understand and anticipate the long-term health and environmental consequences of energy use and development and utilizes the Department's unique scientific and technological capabilities to solve major scientific problems in the environment, medicine and biology. Planned 1992 activities include programs in atmospheric processes as they relate to global climate change; terrestrial and oceanographic processes; molecular, cellular and systemic studies on the biological effects of radiation, including radon emissions; structural biology; and medical applications of nuclear technology. Additional funds in 1992 are also provided for the Human Genome Program and for carbon dioxide research to determine the quantitative linkage between the rise of greenhouse gases and global warming.

Spill test facility.—The overall goal is to conduct user-sponsored spill tests in support of safety research associated with the handling, shipping and storage of liquefied gaseous fuels and other hazardous fluids. The 1992 effort will be directed to assuring program continuity and facility responsiveness to user sponsored testing activities and to provide support to the long-range, collaborative, R&D effort among DOE, EPA and DOT.

Fusion energy.—The Department has recently conducted an in-depth review of the fusion program to determine what is an appropriate, practical, enduring policy for fusion. The conclusion was that there are compelling reasons for the U.S. to proceed with a goal-oriented program for development of fusion energy and that the program is technically ready to proceed with its next major step. The fusion energy program will be part of a comprehensive, balanced national energy strategy, with a long-term goal of having an operating demonstration plant by about 2025 and an operating commercial power plant by about 2040. This program includes participation in the International Thermonuclear Experimental Reactor (ITER) engineering design phase, design and R&D for a Burning Plasma Experiment project and proceeding expeditiously with preparations for deuterium-tritium experiments in the Tokamak Fusion Test Reactor. The 1992 budget requests supports this program.

Supporting research and technical analysis.—The role of these programs is to expand the scientific and engineering base for future energy technology development and to provide independent, objective evaluations of energy research activities. Support is also provided for university related research and manpower training including the use of facilities at the national laboratories for student research and education.

Basic energy sciences.—This program funds basic research in the physical, biological, and engineering sciences in support of both the nuclear and non-nuclear technology programs. The principal focus of the basic energy sciences program is energy; however, a number of other important national goals are also supported including U.S. leadership in science and technology,

U.S. economic competitiveness and the training of scientists and engineers. In 1992, work will continue in materials sciences, chemical sciences, advanced energy projects, energy biosciences, and research in engineering systems, applied mathematics, and the geosciences. Research related to advanced materials development, combustion, chemistry of coal, catalysts, photochemistry, and nondestructive evaluation techniques will be continued, as well as expanded research and development for an Advanced Neutron Source. In 1992, an enhancement to the high performance computing program is included.

Funding will also be continued for each of the major national user facilities supported by the Basic Energy Sciences Program. In 1992, construction will continue on the 1-2 GeV synchrotron radiation source at Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory and construction funds also will be provided for construction of the 6-7 GeV synchrotron radiation source at Argonne National Laboratory and to support the associated, on-going R&D programs.

University and Science Education.—This program helps maintain strong scientific/technical research capabilities in support of the Department's long-range energy R&D mission in the university and private sector and the national laboratories. Specific activities supported include: university reactor fuel assistance; university laboratory cooperative science centers; energy manpower development; related education and training activities; and R&D technology transfer activities. This program includes support for the purchase of state-of-the-art scientific instrumentation used in energy-related research areas such as geological sciences, materials characterization, catalysis, and health effects research.

Energy research analysis.—This activity involves the independent assessment of existing or proposed technological initiatives, including examination of the base of research that underlies energy supply and utilization technologies.

Multiprogram energy laboratories facilities support.—The goal of the multiprogram energy laboratories facilities support program is to provide funds for rehabilitating and replacing deficient common-use utilities, roads, and buildings at the multiprogram laboratories.

In-house energy management.—This program funds energy conservation retrofit projects at Department facilities. These projects are designed to improve the efficiency of DOE energy use and set an example for other Federal agencies and the private sector. Surveys are conducted to identify cost-effective candidate projects and projects are then selected on a competitive basis using as the primary criterion the greatest economic return.

Technical information management program.—This program contributes to DOE's missions in advancing energy and nuclear defense technologies and protecting U.S. economic and military security through the effective management and control of the Department's scientific and technical knowledge which is contained in its information resources. Major objectives which are structured to meet the overall purpose are the effective management, control, and use of the results of DOE's multibillion dollar research program, and the acquisition and management of results of worldwide investment in energy R&D.

Facilities infrastructure replacement and modernization program.—This program supports a departmental initiative to conduct a condition assessment survey of all Department of Energy facilities.

Environmental restoration and waste management.—The Environmental Restoration and Waste Management Program encompasses the following non-defense activities:

Corrective Activities.—This program provides for those activities needed to bring active and standby Energy Supply facilities into compliance with applicable local, State and Federal requirements and internal Department of Energy Requirements in an expeditious manner.

Environmental Restoration.—This program provides for assessments and cleanup of facilities and sites that are no longer a part of active operations. Various amounts and types of waste have accumulated at these facilities and sites as a result of activities spanning nearly five decades, in connection with past Nuclear Energy and Energy Research efforts.

Waste Management.—This program provides for the management of wastes generated by Energy Supply activities through treatment, storage or disposal of various waste types including radioactive, hazardous, mixed or sanitary wastes in compliance with applicable local, State and Federal requirements and internal Department of Energy Requirements.

Policy and management.—Provides executive direction, management assistance and administrative support to all programs within energy supply activities.

Solar and renewable energy utility technologies.—The Utility Technologies program for 1992 will focus on renewable energy technologies and energy management and control technologies that have the potential to contribute to reliable and plentiful electricity supplies in the future. This includes an array of near, mid, and long-term research and development activities addressing energy supplies such as photovoltaics, solar thermal, wind, municipal solid waste gasification, and geothermal, as well as electric grid systems technologies such as high-power superconductors, energy storage, and automated electric-systems control. The work spans the range from basic research university and national laboratories to industrial proof-of-concept. The 1992 budget incorporates an increased emphasis on industry participation, both in R&D planning and in cost-sharing of activities.

The 1992 solar energy program represents a major commitment to exploiting the energy supply potential of photovoltaics, biofuels, energy from municipal solid wastes, low and moderate temperature solar thermal, wind energy technologies and solar space conditioning and lighting for energy efficient buildings. Important research support activities including technology transfer, international cooperative activities, resource assessment, program support and program direction, and capital improvements at the Solar Energy Research Institute are also supported within the utility program.

Proper handling and disposal of municipal solid waste (MSW) has the potential for significant energy, economic, and environmental benefits. The MSW bioprocessing activity will develop new technology having promise to combine MSW and sewage sludge disposal (two of a city's major problems) at a single site while providing methane (synthetic natural gas) for export and sewage treatment plant operation. Concern over MSW combustion emissions has slowed the development of waste-to-energy plants in the U.S. The 1992 program includes an initiative to address those environmental issues.

The 1992 geothermal program will place increasing emphasis on near-term, cost-shared research with industry at operating hydrothermal fields. Efforts will focus on enhancing energy production from hydrothermal resources through improvements in reservoir engineering, drilling technology, and energy conversion. These efforts will be complemented by a new initiative to expand the economic hydrothermal resource base by a factor of ten over today's generating capacity. Continued research on long-term, advanced technologies for hot dry rock and geopressed resources and an expanded technology transfer effort will round out the program.

The 1992 hydroelectric program represents a commitment to resolving technical and institutional regulatory impediments to developing and maintaining hydroelectric capacity. Studies and coordinating activities will address environmental evaluation criteria and methodologies; and quantifying the effectiveness of environmental mitigation licensing conditions including dissolved oxygen below hydroplants, instream flow requirements, and fish passage.

The Utility Electric Systems program will continue to study potential health effects from exposure to electric and magnetic fields due to electric transmission and distribution, and also will conduct research to improve the capacity, reliability, efficiency and control of the electric transmission and distribution systems. The 1992 Superconductivity Systems program represents a continued commitment to the development of high-temperature superconductivity technology for power systems. The Energy Storage program includes battery research and development for utility applications and hydrogen research for more efficient chemical energy storage and distribution technologies.

Solar and renewable energy—Buildings Technologies.—“Solar Buildings” technologies will be continued under a consolidated management framework with the buildings programs in the Energy Conservation account. The activities funded in Energy Supply focus primarily on efficient use of day-lighting in buildings.

Solar and renewable energy—Industrial Technologies.—Besides producing electricity, solar thermal energy can be used for industrial process heat, and lately breakthroughs have been made in the use of concentrated solar energy to break down toxic wastes such as dioxins in aqueous solutions. The 1992 program will support the scale-up of mobile prototype equipment that can be used to test the effectiveness of this process at a variety of waste sites around the country.

Solar and renewable energy—Transportation Technologies.—Management of biofuels research targeted at transportation fuels (ethanol and methanol) has been merged with the Conservation transportation program, which will help to achieve a clearer market focus, and better integration of fuel and vehicle development. Funding, however, is still received through this account. The 1992 program supports the scale-up of a wood-to-ethanol bioreactor, whose target is ethanol competitive with petroleum at $30/barrel. The transportation technologies program also continues the past Energy Supply support for basic battery research in support of the applied battery research in the Conservation electric vehicle program.

Solar and renewable energy—Technical and Financial Assistance.—Non-R&D activities such as funding for CORECT (solar energy trade promotion) and the Regional Biomass program are continued in 1992. Management responsibility for the Regional Biomass program will be merged with other non-R&D activities in the Conservation program, and trade promotion activities from all areas of the Department will be coordinated and managed by the Assistant Secretary for International Affairs.

Uranium Enrichment.—The goal of this program is to meet domestic, foreign, and U.S. Government requirements for uranium enrichment services (enrichment of uranium and uranium compounds in the isotope U-235) in the most economical, reliable, safe, secure and environmentally acceptable manner possible. This program is comprised of seven subprograms: (a) gaseous diffusion operations and support; (b) corrective actions; (c) environmental restoration; (d) waste management; (e) Uranium—Atomic Vapor Laser Isotope Separation (U-AVLIS); (f) Alternate applications; and (g) program direction.

The budget estimate for offsetting collections assumes that DOE will price enrichment services at the ceiling price formula contained in the current contracts.

tional laboratories to applied R&D and proof-of-concept projects in private sector firms.

Reductions in the Fossil Energy R&D programs are proposed in the 1992 budget that will reduce Federal in-house R&D at the Energy Technology Centers and will continue limited Federal support of company-specific technology development and demonstration activities. The program continues to fund high-priority, high risk and cross-cutting research that will improve the Nation's ability to cleanly and efficiently use coal, and to enhance the economic recovery of our oil and gas reserves.

Coal R&D.—The objectives of this program will be to continue generic, technology base and environmental research to provide an adequate scientific and engineering knowledge base to foster technological advances by the private sector. The 1992 research program provides for a continued, limited Federal role in high-risk R&D that supports technology development by the private sector. These efforts will include the Advanced Research and Technology Development program, with additional advanced research efforts conducted in the Advanced Research portions of the Coal Liquefaction, Control Technology and Coal Preparation, Combustion Systems, Fuel Cells, and Surface Coal Gasification programs. Another main thrust of the 1992 program will focus upon environmental technology R&D that will help ameliorate growing environmental concerns. Therefore, the Control Technology and Coal Preparation program will share with Advanced Research and Technology Development a major portion of the funding request, as will fuel cells. Efforts will also continue to more effectively utilize our coal resources by continuing programs in the areas of Coal Liquefaction and Surface Coal Gasification. Many of the pilot-plant and scale-up activities, such as the Wilsonville and LaPorte liquefaction plants, have new requirements for 50 percent industry cost-sharing.

Oil, gas and shale.—Advanced extraction technology development efforts will continue within the Advanced Extraction and Process Technology (AEPT), Enhanced Oil Recovery (EOR), and Unconventional Gas Recovery (UGR) programs. The 1992 program emphasizes support of the oil and gas implementation plans in cooperation with industry and leading universities.

Program direction and management support.—This program provides the funding for both Headquarters and field personnel and overhead expenses in Fossil Energy. In addition, it provides support for the day-to-day project management functions.

Federal Inspector for the Alaska natural gas pipeline.—Activities formerly included under the Office of the Federal Inspector for the Alaska natural gas pipeline are now funded in this line item, in accordance with the 1986 appropriation.

Environmental restoration.—The Department of Energy is assisting in payments for the environmental clean-up of former Fossil Energy projects as required by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Fuels conversion.—This program will continue regulatory reviews and oversight of the transmission of natural gas and electricity across the U.S. borders and processes certification of alternate fuel capability.

This program includes those activities necessary to operate, explore, conserve, develop, and produce the naval petroleum reserves at the maximum efficient rate and to conserve the oil shale reserves. This includes routine operation and maintenance, development and exploration drilling, environmental and conservation work, and construction and installation of on-reserve facilities and related systems required for the collection, storage, and distribution of produced petroleum and related products. The 1992 budget proposes to lease NPR-1 competitively at the end of 1992. The field would be leased competitively to the highest bidder at a royalty rate of 12.5 percent. The budget includes a lease bonus estimated at $2.5 billion. One billion dollars of the bonus bid would be payable in 1992; the balance would be payable in four equal annual installments between 1993 and 1996. The proposal also includes the creation of a 10 million barrel Defense Petroleum Inventory to be funded from lease proceeds. In addition, the State of California would share in the lease proceeds receiving 50 percent of the lease royalties and 7 percent of the lease bonus.

The 1992 budget for Conservation programs is significantly higher than the 1991 request, and for the R&D programs it is significantly higher than 1991 appropriation. This emphasis reflects the Administration's commitment to research and development of promising technologies for improving energy end-use efficiency in the buildings, industry, transportation and utility sectors of the economy, and to the establishment of viable technical and financial assistance activities. The program will support activities designed to strengthen the technology base upon which industry can draw in developing new products and processes for the commercial market. These activities range from basic research in universities and national laboratories to applied research and development and proof-of-concept projects with industrial firms. An aggressive, balanced program is proposed for 1992 to contribute toward strengthening the nation's energy security, promoting energy efficiency, and increasing industrial competitiveness and Federal technology transfer.

The 1992 budget incorporates a modest reorganization of the Conservation and Renewable Energy budgets. This restructuring puts all of the activities on a consistent conceptual basis, revolving around end-use sectors of the economy. The Conservation programs were largely organized this way already, with Buildings, Industry, and Transportation programs; the Solar and Renewable Energy program (in Energy Supply) has been focused mainly on electric utility-related technologies, and therefore most of its activities are transformed into a Utility program, although it also contains buildings, industry, and transportation activities related to the activities in this account. The restructured programs offer simplified management and reduced chances of redundancy or overlap, and will help to achieve a more results-oriented and market-sensitive management approach. Reorganization of specific activities are discussed in the paragraphs below.

Buildings and community systems.—This program area has been transferred almost in its entirety to the Building Technologies activity below. Least-Cost Utility Planning, now called Integrated Resources Planning, has been transferred to the Utility program in Energy Conservation, below. The Municipal Energy Management activity has been transferred to the Technical and Financial Assistance program below.

Industrial.—This program area has been transferred in its entirety, along with some activities from other programs, to the Industrial Technologies program below.

Transportation.—This program area has been transferred in its entirety, along with some activities from other programs, to the Transportation Technologies program below.

State and local assistance.—This program area has been transferred in its entirety, along with some activities from other programs, to the Technical and Financial Assistance program below.

Multisector.—The majority of this program has been transferred to the Industrial Technologies program below. Some ceramics and high-temperature materials activities have been transferred to related materials activities within the Transportation Technologies program below. The Energy-Related Inventions and Energy Innovations programs have been transferred to the Technical and Financial Assistance program below.

Building technologies.—The 1992 Building Technologies program contains most of the activities formerly in the Buildings and Community Systems program. The 1992 activities for the development of energy-efficient buildings will include research in materials and structures, lighting and appliances, heating and cooling equipment, indoor air quality, solar cooling technologies and building systems interactions. These activities will address both new and existing buildings. Research will continue for the integration of renewable energy technologies with energy-efficient building practices. An expanded effort is planned to encourage the implementation of building energy conservation standards and guidelines, and the program to achieve greater energy efficiency in Federal facilities will also be accelerated. Technology transfer activities will focus on information dissemination to architects, builders, and engineers, the business community, and the general public, including the development of programs to encourage the purchase of energy-efficient housing through energy-efficient mortgages and home energy rating systems.

Industrial technologies.—Industry accounts for about one-third of total energy use in the United States. In 1989, over 29 quads of energy were used by industry, at a cost of about $100 billion. Process improvements which minimize the production of waste materials and which utilize wastes by upgrading them to higher-value products are achievable in a variety of industrial settings. The DOE Office of Industrial Technologies supports industrial research and development of technologies that are directed towards these opportunities. These activities address both efficiency of energy demand and alternative energy supplies, and also the reduction of infrastructural barriers.

The 1992 Industrial Technologies program incorporates all of the activities previously funded in the Industrial Conservation program, biocatalysis, industrial applications of superconductivity, and other industrial R&D for the Conservation Multisector program, and plus R&D on the combustion of municipal solid wastes (MSW). MSW combustion is, in essence, a mix of industrial process technology and cogeneration, both of which have been previously funded in the Industrial program.

The 1992 activities related to energy demand reduction are aimed at important new technologies in both the near and long term. Near-term technologies include advanced drying systems for textiles and paper production, improved high-temperature heat pumps, improved steel-making processes, and advanced sensors for on-line process measurement. Long-term technologies include corrosion-resistant ultra-high temperature materials, low energy sulfur-free paper pulping, and materials and catalysts "by design."

Activities focused on supply will pursue technologies for the near- and mid-term, such as improved combustion and ash emissions management for waste-to-energy (MSW) systems, a solvent-recovery system, MSW cogeneration, and conversion of waste wood and plastic to feedstock chemicals.

Transportation technologies.—In 1992 the Transportation Technologies program incorporates all of the activities previously funded in Transportation Conservation, and also includes tribology and ceramics research in support of gas turbines and adiabatic diesels formerly funded in the Conservation Multisector program.

The 1992 program will support cross-cutting research and development on high-temperature materials, including work performed at the High Temperature Materials Laboratory and in alternative vehicle propulsion concepts such as the automotive gas turbine and adiabatic (low heat rejection) diesel. It will also support expanded activities required by the Alternative Motor Fuels Act.

A major initiative in 1992 will be the expansion and restructuring of the electric vehicles program to provide support for a four-year, $300 million program to accelerate development of advanced batteries for electric vehicles. This program is being initiated in 1991 by a cooperative R&D venture comprised of the major U.S. auto manufacturers, and including some electric utilities, using primarily industry funds in 1991. Industry will provide at least 50 percent cost-sharing.

Technical and financial assistance.—The 1992 Technical and Financial Assistance program combines all of the grants programs previously funded in the State and Local Assistance program, plus several other non-grant activities not specifically oriented toward any one end-use sector. The grants program will provide funds authorized under the Petroleum Overcharge Distribution and Restitution Act in order to support each State's management of its Oil Overcharge Funds. These Oil Overcharge Funds are used in DOE's four energy conservation grant programs and in the Department of Health and Human Services Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program.

There are four non-grant programs incorporated into Technical and Financial Assistance from other programs. The Energy-Related Inventions/Energy Innovations program, formerly funded through the Conservation Multisector program, assists independent inventors to further develop their ideas. Information and Communications supports technical information "hot-line" services such as CARIERS and NATAS to respond to inquiries on conservation and renewable energy from individuals, small businesses, and other organizations. The Municipal Energy Management program is designed to encourage municipal government managers to adopt energy efficiency technologies into municipal fleet and buildings operations. The Federal-State Ventures program will support cost-shared demonstrations through joint ventures among industry, State governments, and DOE.

Utility technologies.—The Integrated Resource Planning program (formerly Least-Cost Utility Planning) provides technical assistance to utilities and regulators to encourage a market environment in which demand-side and supply-side options compete equally to meet energy service requirements. District heating and cooling efforts focus on the development of more efficient and environmentally benign systems.

Policy and management.—Provides for overall management guidance and program evaluation for energy conservation programs to ensure effective program delivery.

The objective of this program is to decrease the vulnerability of the United States to disruptions in world petroleum markets by creating a crude oil stockpile to be used in the event such disruptions occur.

The account provides for petroleum reserve storage facility construction, ongoing operations and maintenance activities, planning studies, and program administration. Funds are provided for the acquisition of facilities to implement 42 U.S.C. 6240(g) near existing Gulf Coast Strategic Petroleum Reserve facilities.

This account provides for the acquisition, transportation, and injection of petroleum into the Strategic Petroleum Reserve and for its drawdown and distribution. During 1991, the Department conducted a test sale of SPR oil, and the Reserve is being maintained in readiness for possible further use at the direction of the President. The budget proposes no additional appropriations in 1992 for SPR oil purchases. Existing budgetary resources will be relied on when decisions are made to resume SPR fill. Funds are provided for the acquisition of petroleum product to implement 42 U.S.C. 6240(g) near existing Gulf Coast Strategic Petroleum Reserve facilities.

This program supports energy information activities which are designed to provide timely, accurate and relevant energy information for use by the Administration, the Congress, and the general public. The activities funded in this program include the design, development and maintenance of information systems on petroleum, natural gas, coal, nuclear, electricity, alternate fuel sources, and energy consumption. This includes collecting data and ensuring its accuracy; preparing short-term forecasts; and preparing reports on energy sources, end-uses, prices, supply and demand, and associated economic, international, and financial matters. This program also includes the operation of the Energy Information Administration (EIA) computer facility, telecommunications support, customer services, and ADP software support to the Department of Energy and others. In addition, the National Energy Information Center disseminates publications, analytic reports, information directives, and public use tapes, and responds to public inquiries. Finally, this activity provides survey and statistical design standards, documentation standards, and energy data public-use forms clearance and burden control services.

Economic regulation.—The Economic Regulatory Administration (ERA) is responsible for pursuing and finalizing any remaining enforcement actions to ensure that oil companies complied with petroleum regulations in effect prior to decontrol of oil in January 1981. In January 1989, the Office of Fuels Programs, OFP, was transferred from the Economic Regulatory Administration (ERA) to the Fossil Energy Research and Development program.

Hearings and appeals.—The Office of Hearings and Appeals issues all final orders of an adjudicatory nature other than those over which the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission or the Board of Contract Appeals has jurisdiction. It decides appeals of petroleum enforcement actions and adverse Freedom of Information Act and Privacy Act determinations, examines requests for exception relief, and administers refund proceedings involving funds obtained as a result of petroleum enforcement actions.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) is charged with regulating certain interstate aspects of the natural gas, oil pipeline, hydroelectric, and electric industries. Such regulation includes issuing licenses and certificates for construction of facilities, approving rates, inspecting dams, implementing enforcement activities and providing other services to regulated businesses. In 1992, these businesses will pay fees and charges sufficient to fully offset the Commission's cost of providing licenses, inspections and other services.

Pipeline and producer regulation.—The Commission regulates 150 natural gas pipeline companies, more than 9,700 natural gas producers, and 130 common carrier oil pipelines companies, including the Trans-Alaska Pipeline System (TAPS). Responsibilities include issuing certificates of public convenience and necessity for natural gas pipelines, determining rates for the transportation and sale of natural gas and rates for the transportation of oil, administering wellhead pricing provisions in accordance with the Natural Gas Policy Act, and establishing curtailment and other provisions. Producer certificates and rates are also reviewed by the Commission.

Hydropower regulation.—The Commission issues preliminary permits and exemption licenses for hydroelectric projects, enforces the terms and conditions, and performs dam safety inspections. The Commission regulates more than 1,700 hydroelectric projects which supply about 10 percent of the electric energy generated in the United States. The Commission also performs investigations of headwater benefits that are derived from Federally-owned or licensed headwater improvements.

Electric power regulation.—The Commission is responsible for determining rates for the interstate sale or transmission of wholesale electric energy for more than 200 electric utilities and for overseeing electric utility corporate transactions. The Commission approves rates for all Federal power marketing agencies except TVA. The Commission also certifies cogenerators and small power producers.

This loan guarantee program was intended to subsidize loans for geothermal energy projects too risky to acquire private sector financing on their own. From 1979 to 1986, 8 loan guarantees were executed. Of those, 3 have been repaid and 5 have defaulted. The new budget authority in the fund in recent years has only been needed to support one FTE to monitor the remaining agreements and assets of the program. For 1992, that one person's position is being incorporated into the geothermal R&D activity, so no new budget authority will be needed in this account.

Public Law 99-190, making continuing appropriations for 1986, provided $400 million from funds in the Energy Security Reserve in the Department of the Treasury for a new Clean Coal Technology Program in the Department of Energy. This program was authorized under the Clean Coal Technology Reserve proviso of Public Law 98-473 to subsidize the construction and operation of facilities to demonstrate the potential commercial feasibility of such technologies.

Of the $400 million, $100 million was made available for obligation beginning in 1986, $150 million in 1987, and $150 million in 1988. These amounts were reduced by .6 percent pursuant to section 325 of the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1986, as included in section 101(d) of Public Law 99-190.

The fiscal year 1992 program includes a continuation of funding for the second and third rounds of cost-shared Innovative Clean Coal Technology projects and initiation of funding for a fourth round of projects. These projects demonstrate technologies appropriate for replacing, retrofitting or modernizing existing coal-fired facilities to provide significantly reduced emissions of potential acid rain precursors. Projects are cost-shared, with industry providing at least half of the funding, and with provisions for the Government to recoup its investment through a share of revenues if the technology is commercialized. The Clean Coal Technology program's goal of obtaining $5,000,000,000 in combined industry/government funding will be met ahead of schedule and at the end of round four. Therefore, the advance appropriation of $600,000,000 for round five shall be transferred to, and used to offset appropriations for, Fossil Energy Research and Development activities.

This program was established in 1980 for the purpose of expediting the development and production of alternative fuels.

When the Synthetic Fuels Corporation was declared to be operational in 1982, the uncommitted and unobligated funds remaining in the program were transferred to the Energy Security Reserve for use by the Synthetic Fuels Corporation, with the exception of the loan guarantee for the Great Plains Gasification Project, which remained under the jurisdiction of the Department of Energy. The Department exercised its authority to borrow from the Treasury to repay the Federal Financing Bank upon default of the borrower in 1985. This loan was repaid, along with accrued interest, by a Supplemental appropriation in 1986. The Department acquired ownership of the Great Plains plant by foreclosure, which was completed on July 14, 1986, and continued operation of the plant without the expenditure of appropriated funds. On October 31, 1988, the Department completed the process of returning the Great Plains Gasification Plant to the private sector by settlement with Basin Electric Power Cooperative Association.

Under the terms of the agreement a check for $85 million was provided to the Government as an initial payment. In addition, this transaction has a potential return, to the Government, of approximately $1.8 billion in immediate and long-term payments, tax credit waivers, and income taxes. The sales agreement also includes a commitment to keep the facility operating through the year 2009 as long as revenues exceed expenses.

The Isotope Production and Distribution program is directed towards the production, sale and distribution of isotope products and services to the user community utilizing Government-owned facilities. The isotopes produced by the Department of Energy are those that can be produced in existing DOE production and research facilities dedicated to the products required by the Isotope Production and Distribution program. The isotopes are sold at their market value or at a price determined to be in the best interest of the government for use in industrial applications, hospital and medical facilities, and Government, university, and industrial research programs.

Legislation will be proposed to create a revolving fund that would be responsible for maintaining a reliable and economical domestic source of enrichment services (enrichment of uranium and uranium compounds in the isotope U-235). The fund would be self-financing and would not require appropriations or other sources of Government financing. The fund would also continue to meet the paramount objectives of ensuring the Nation's common defense and security, to conduct research and development and other activities necessary to meet the objectives of the fund, as defined in the proposed legislation.

In 1992, the budget provides for: (1) operation of the gaseous diffusion plants at Paducah, Kentucky and Portsmouth, Ohio; (2) continuation of the Atomic Vapor Laser Isotope Separation demonstration program at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in Livermore, California and in Oak Ridge, Tennessee; (3) continuation of corrective actions, environmental restoration and waste management activities at the gaseous diffusion sites; and (4) to collect offsetting collections and return to the Treasury in interest on its debt.

Note.—The proposed fund will take over responsibility for the programs funded under the Uranium Supply and Enrichment Activities account.

The Alaska Power Administration (APA) is responsible for operation and maintenance and power marketing for the Eklutna and Snettisham hydroelectric projects in accordance with the authorizing legislation for each project.

The agency's normal activities will continue in 1992. Proprietary receipts are estimated to be $9,393,000 in 1992.

In 1992 the Administration will continue to work with the State of Alaska and local customers and companies in an effort to complete arrangements to sell assets of the Alaska Power Administration. Legislation is expected to be submitted in 1991. The budget assumes authorization and completion of the sale at the end of 1992.

The Southeastern Power Administration (SEPA) markets power generated at Corps of Engineers hydroelectric generating plants in a 10-State area of the Southeast. Deliveries are made by means of transmission facilities owned by others. There are 22 projects now in operation. A schedule of kilowatt capacity of projects in operation or under construction follows:

Projects in operation.....	3,092,375
Project under construction: Russell B. Russell (pumping units).....	300,000
Total.....	3,392,375

SEPA sells power at wholesale primarily to publicly and cooperatively-owned electric distribution utilities using wheeling and pooling agreements with the region's large private utilities to provide firm power to its customers. SEPA does not own or operate any transmission facilities. Its long-term contracts provide for periodic electric rate adjustments to insure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of operation and all capital invested in power, with interest, in keeping with statutory requirements.

The Administration is proposing that SEPA modify its debt repayment practices so that the full cost of providing power is borne by the power customers. Beginning in 1992, $20,382,000 in revenues would be used by SEPA to eliminate past debt financing subsidies and place power repayment practices on a more business-like basis. The proposal provides a mortgage-type amortization approach to Federal investment with interest on unpaid debt balances accruing at the historic Treasury interest rates in effect at the time each investment was placed in service. Long term Treasury interest rates would be applied to all future investments with the exception of construction loans which would be granted at the appropriate shorter term Treasury interest rates.

The SEPA program includes the following activities:

System operation and maintenance.—Provision is made for negotiation and administration of power contracts, collection of revenues, development of wholesale power rates, the amortization of power investment, investigation and planning of proposed water resources projects, scheduling and dispatch of power generation, scheduling storage and release of water, administration of contractual operation requirements, and determination of methods of operating generating plants individually and in coordination with others to obtain maximum utilization of resources. Proprietary receipts deposited in the Treasury were $128,143,539 for 1990 and are estimated to be $139,244,000 for 1991. Proprietary receipts are expected to be $146,228,000 for 1992.

Purchase power and wheeling.—Provision is made for the payment of wheeling fees and for the purchase of electricity in connection with disposal of power under contracts with utility companies.

The Southwestern Power Administration (SWPA) operates as a marketing agent for hydroelectric power produced at Corps of Engineers dams in a six-State area. It also operates and maintains some 1,380 miles of high voltage transmission lines, 24 substations and switching stations and 35 radio and microwave stations. Southwestern sells its power at wholesale primarily to publicly and cooperatively owned electric distribution utilities. Its long-term contracts provide for periodic rate adjustments to insure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of operation and all capital invested in power, with interest, in keeping with statutory requirements.

Southwestern also is responsible for scheduling and dispatching power, negotiating power sales contracts, and constructing facilities required to meet changing customer load requirements.

The Administration is proposing that SWPA modify its debt repayment practices so that the full cost of providing power is borne by the power customers. Beginning in 1992, $27,300,000 in revenues would be used by SWPA to eliminate past debt financing subsidies and place power repayment practices on a more business-like basis. The proposal provides a mortgage-type amortization approach to Federal investment with interest on unpaid debt balances accruing at the historic Treasury interest rates in effect at the time each investment was placed in service. struction loans which would be granted at the appropriate shorter term Treasury interest rates.

Systems operation and maintenance.—Provision is made for investigating and planning proposed water resources projects, scheduling and dispatching power generation, scheduling storage and release of water, administering contractual operation requirements, and determining methods of operating generating plants individually and in coordination with others to obtain maximum utilization of resources. Provision also is made for maintenance of the transmission system and related facilities to assure reliable service, negotiation and administration of power contracts, collection of revenue, development of wholesale power rates and the amortization of the power investment. Estimated proprietary receipts which are deposited in the Treasury are $84,625,000 in 1990, and $97,493,000 (not including repayment increases) in 1991. Proprietary receipts are expected to be $98,107,000 in 1992 (not including repayment increases).

Purchase power and wheeling.—Provision is made for the payment of wheeling fees and for the purchase of energy in connection with the marketing of power under contracts with utility companies.

Construction.—The construction program provides transmission, substation and switching facilities to transmit power generated at Corps of Engineers' hydroelectric projects in the Southwest. This program is coordinated with the Corps of Engineers' construction program and customer requirements in order that transmission and related facilities will be in place when these power projects are completed and available for marketing. This program also provides for the purchase of capital electrical equipment used for upgrading the established system to meet changing customer load requirements.

Reimbursable program.—This program involves services provided by Southwestern Power Administration to others under various types of reimbursable arrangements. In 1992 the reimbursable program primarily provides for operation and maintenance, construction, and power and energy services. The power and energy service supports the requirements of three government agencies: Ft. Sill, Vance Air Force Base and McAlester Army Ammunition Plant, and direct purchase of energy for the Oklahoma municipalities.

The Western Area Power Administration (Western) markets electric power in 15 western States from federally owned power plants operated primarily by the Bureau of Reclamation, Corps of Engineers and the International Boundary and Water Commission. Western operates and maintains over 16,000 miles of high-voltage transmission lines and over 260 substation/switchyards and constructs transmission facilities, including new transmission lines, substations and essential additions and modifications to existing facilities.

Western sells power at wholesale to electric distribution utilities. In keeping with statutory requirements, Western's long-term power contracts provide for periodic rate adjustments to ensure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of operation and all capital invested in power facilities, with interest.

Systems operation and maintenance.—A total of 13 power systems will be operated and maintained. Revenue will be available from Boulder Canyon project operations for Western's power marketing and transmission expenses, without further appropriation, as provided in the Hoover Power Plant Act of 1984 (Public Law 98-381). Western will continue to participate in conservation and renewable energy programs in 1992.

Power is sold to wholesale customers such as municipalities, cooperatives, irrigation districts, public utility districts, State and federal government agencies, and private utilities. Receipts are deposited in the Reclamation fund, the General fund, the Colorado River dam fund, the Lower Colorado River Basin development fund, and the Upper Colorado River Basin fund.

Energy sales and revenues resulting from these Western power systems operations, excluding the Colorado River Storage project and the Colorado River Basin project, are as follows:

	1990 actual	1991 est.	1992 est.
Energy sales (millions of kilowatt hours)	26,215	25,840	28,944
Revenues from energy sales (in thousands of dollars)	$469,258	$550,756	$619,390

The Administration is proposing that WAPA modify its debt repayment practices so that the full cost of providing power is borne by the power customers. Beginning in 1992, $44,956,000 in revenues would be used by WAPA to eliminate past debt financing subsidies and place power repayment practices on a more business-like basis. The proposal provides a mortgage-type amortization approach to Federal investment with interest on unpaid debt balances accruing at the historic Treasury interest rates in effect at the time each investment was placed in service. Long term Treasury interest rates would be applied to all future investments with the exception of construction loans which would be granted at the appropriate shorter term Treasury interest rates.

Purchase of power and wheeling.—The program provides for purchase of power and wheeling. Financing of this program consists of $105,857,000 of new budget authority, $2,080,000 of permanent budget authority, $14,312,000 associated with net billing procedures, $78,000,000 associated with customer bill crediting, $43,350,000 associated with reimbursement from other Federal entities, $2,327,000 associated with Bonneville Power Administration power transfers, for a total program cost of $245,926,000.

System construction.—Construction of transmission facilities is necessary to maintain system reliability and for marketing electric power produced from generating plants of others. Funding is provided in 1992 for system interties, joint construction participation, replacement of deteriorated wood poles and damaged wood or steel structures, reconductoring and upgrading transmission lines to increase system capacity and reliability, construction of operation and maintenance facilities, and system security additions.

Reimbursable program.—This program involves services provided by Western to others under various types of reimbursable arrangements. In 1992, the reimbursable program primarily provides for construction and operation and maintenance services for the Bureau of Reclamation and for construction services associated with the California-Oregon Transmission project being built for non-Federal entities, for jointly financed activities with non-Federal entities under the Contributed Funds Act, and for power purchases for other Federal entities.

Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) is the Federal electric power marketing agency in the Pacific Northwest. BPA markets hydroelectric power from 21 multipurpose water resource projects of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and 9 projects of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, plus some energy from non-Federal generating projects in the region. These generating resources and BPA's transmission system, planned by the end of 1992 to consist of an estimated 14,779 circuit miles of high-voltage transmission lines and 388 substations, are operated as an integrated power system with operating and financial results combined and reported as the Federal Columbia River Power System. BPA is the largest power wholesaler in the Northwest and provides about four-fifths of the region's electric power transmission capacity.

BPA is responsible for meeting the net firm power requirements of its requesting customers through a variety of means, including energy conservation programs, acquisition of renewable and other resources, and power exchanges with utilities both in and outside the region.

BPA will finance its operations on the basis of the self-financing authority provided by Federal Columbia River Transmission System Act of 1974 (Transmission Act) (Public Law 93-454) and the new borrowing authority provided by the Pacific Northwest Electric Power Planning and Conservation Act (Pacific Northwest Power Act) (Public Law 96-501) for energy conservation, renewable energy resources and capital fish facilities. Authority to borrow is available to the BPA on a permanent, indefinite basis. The amount of borrowing outstanding at any time cannot exceed $3,750,000,000.

Operating expenses: Energy resources.—Provides for the orderly planning, acquisition, and oversight of reliable, cost-effective, environmentally acceptable resources, including resources purchased prior to the Pacific Northwest Power Act, as well as cost-effective conservation measures, including home energy efficiency, commercial energy efficiency, industrial technology transfers, solar energy applications and conservation measures for new home and commercial building construction. These resources are needed to serve BPA's portion of the region's forecasted net electric load requirements.

Residential exchange.—Provides for extending the benefits of low-cost Federal power to the residential and small farm customers of investor-owned and publicly-owned utilities, in accordance with the Pacific Northwest Power Act.

Transmission system development.—Provides funding from revenues for electric transmission research and development and program support of the capital investment program described below for transmission system development.

System operation.—Provides for operating an estimated 14,779 miles of line and 388 substations of the BPA transmission system during 1992.

System maintenance.—Provides for the annual expenses of maintaining the facilities and equipment of the BPA transmission system in 1992.

Power marketing.—Provides for forecasting regional demand; negotiating power sales and wheeling, billing, and servicing these contracts; reviewing and establishing wholesale power and wheeling rates; and encouraging public participation in the formation of BPA policies and programs.

Power scheduling.—Provides for the scheduling of power.

Fish and wildlife.—Provides funding from revenues in support of the capital investment program described below for fish and wildlife.

Planning Council.—Provides for activities of the Pacific Northwest Electric Power and Conservation Planning Council required by the Pacific Northwest Power Act.

Interest.—Provides for payments to the U.S. Treasury for interest on borrowings to finance BPA's transmission system development, system maintenance, conservation related costs previously capitalized, capital equipment, and fish and wildlife programs under $3,750,000,000 borrowing authority provided by the Transmission Act as amended by the Pacific Northwest Power Act and replenished by Public Law 98-50. This category also includes, interest on Corps of Engineers, BPA and U.S. Bureau of Reclamation appropriated debt.

Associated project costs.—Provides for repayment of the operation and maintenance (O&M) costs of the 30 U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and U.S. Bureau of Reclamation power generating projects, and amortization on the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation capital investment in power generating facilities.

Reimbursable.—Provides for reimbursable power purchases, and for services such as construction, operation and maintenance of transmission facilities when requested and financed by other entities. Also includes the coordination agreement payments to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Capital investments Energy resources.—Provides for funding conservation measures including home and commercial energy efficiency, industrial technology transfers, solar energy applications and conservation measures for new home and commercial building construction.

Transmission system development.—Provides for planning, design and construction of transmission lines, substation and control system additions, and enhancements to the FCRPS transmission system for a reliable, efficient and cost-effective regional transmission system. During 1992, BPA plans no new line or substation energization, although a variety of upgrades and additions to existing facilities will be energized during the year.

System replacements.—Provides for planning, design, and construction work to repair or replace existing transmission lines, substations, control systems, and general facilities of the FCRPS transmission system.

Capital equipment.—Provides for general purpose ADP equipment, office furniture and equipment, and software development in support of all BPA programs.

Fish and wildlife.—Provides for protection, mitigation and enhancement of fish and wildlife affected by hydroelectric facilities on the Columbia River and its tributaries, in accordance with the Pacific Northwest Power Act.

Contingencies.—Although contingencies are not specifically funded, the need may arise to provide for purchase of power in low-water years; for repair and/or replacement of facilities affected by natural and man-made emergencies, including the resulting additional costs for contracting, construction, and operation and maintenance work; for unavoidable increased costs for the planned program due to necessary but unforeseen adjustments, including engineering and design changes, contractor and other claims and relocations, or for payment of a retrospective premium adjustment in excess nuclear property insurance.

Financing.—The Transmission Act provides for the use by BPA of all receipts, collections, and recoveries in cash from all sources, including the sale of bonds, to finance the annual budget programs of BPA. These receipts result primarily from the sale of power and wheeling. The Transmission Act also provides for authority to borrow from the U.S. Treasury at rates comparable to borrowings at open market rates for similar issues. As amended by the Pacific Northwest Power Act and replenished by Public Law 98-50, it allows for $3,750,000,000 of borrowing to be outstanding at any time. The 1992 capital program obligations are estimated to be $385.7 million, of which $340.3 million is new borrowing authority. To the extent BPA capital borrowing authority is insufficient in 1992, BPA would use cash reserves generated by revenues from customers to finance some of these investments.

In 1990 BPA made payments to the Treasury of $618.2 million and also expects to make payments of $624.3 million in 1991 and $677.9 million in 1992 on a current services basis. The 1992 payment will be distributed as follows: U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service O&M ($116.9 million), interest expense on bonds and appropriations ($312.0 million), allowance for funds used during construction—capitalized interest ($9.2 million) and amortization ($239.8 million).

The Administration is proposing that BPA modify its debt repayment practices so that the full cost of providing power is borne by the power customers. Beginning in 1992, $285,300,000 in revenues would be used by BPA to eliminate past debt financing subsidies and place power repayment practices on a more business-like basis. The proposal provides a mortgage-type amortization approach to Federal investment with interest on unpaid debt balances accruing at the historic Treasury interest rates in effect at the time each investment was placed in service. Long term Treasury interest rates would be applied to all future investments with the exception of construction loans which would be granted at the appropriate shorter term Treasury interest rates.

Direct loans.—There will be no direct loans in 1992.

Operating results.—Total revenues and reimbursements are forecast at approximately $3,182.9 million in 1992.

It should be noted that BPA's revenue forecasts are based on several critical assumptions about both the supply of and demand for Federal energy. Deviation from the assumed conditions may result in variation in actual revenues of several hundred million dollars from the forecast. Estimated net operating income for 1992, based on BPA's current revenue and expense estimates, is $120 million.

The Administration will propose legislation to modify the repayment criteria that applies to the outstanding Federal investment funded through appropriations to be repaid to the U.S. Treasury by the Bonneville Power Administration. The proposed legislation will provide that, beginning in 1992, amortization of the Federal investment funded through appropriations excluding irrigation assistance, would be made according to a mortgage-type repayment schedule with interest rates on unpaid appropriations being set at the historic yields of long-term government securities in effect during the year the investment was placed in service.

Western's operation and maintenance and power marketing expenses for the Colorado River storage project, the Colorado River Basin project and the Fort Peck project are financed from power revenues.

Western operates and maintains approximately 3,000 miles of transmission lines and over 40 substations associated with these projects. Wholesale power is provided to utilities over interconnected high-voltage transmission systems. In keeping with statutory requirements, long-term power contracts provide for periodic rate adjustments to ensure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of operation and all capital invested in power, with interest.

The Administration is proposing that WAPA modify its debt repayment practices so that the full cost of providing power is borne by the power customers. Beginning in 1992, $15,646,000 in revenues would be used by WAPA to eliminate past debt financing subsidies and place power repayment practices on a more business-like basis. The proposal provides a mortgage-type amortization approach to Federal investment with interest on unpaid debt balances accruing at the historic Treasury interest rates in effect at the time each investment was placed in service. Long term Treasury interest rates would be applied to all future investments with the exception of construction loans which would be granted at the appropriate shorter term Treasury interest rates.

Colorado River storage project.—Western markets power and operates and maintains the power transmission facilities of the Colorado River storage project. Western also purchases electricity and pays wheeling fees to meet firm and nonfirm commitments.

Colorado River Basin project.—The Colorado River Basin project includes Western's expenses associated with the Central Arizona project and the United States entitlement from the Navajo coal-fired powerplant. Revenues in excess of operating expenses are deposited in the Lower Colorado River Basin development fund.

Fort Peck project.—Revenue collected by Western is used to defray construction, operation and maintenance and power marketing expenses associated with the power generation and transmission facilities of the Fort Peck project, Corps of Engineers—Civil, and emergency expenses to ensure continuous operation. The Corps operates and maintains the power generating facilities, and Western operates and maintains the transmission system and performs power marketing functions.

Energy sales and revenue from the Colorado River storage project and the Colorado River Basin project are shown in the table below. Revenue from the Fort Peck project is integrated with Pick-Sloan Missouri Basin program revenue and included in the revenue totals shown in Western's construction, rehabilitation operation and maintenance account.

The Health Education Assistance Loan (HEAL) program guarantees loans from private lenders to health professions students to help pay for the costs of their training. As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for the HEAL program, the subsidy costs associated with HEAL loan guarantees committed in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of HEAL loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year), as well as administrative expenses of the program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis. An explanation of credit reform, including a discussion of how subsidies are calculated, is included in Part Two, Subpart IV-A of the Budget.

Proposed legislation would provide for accrual funding of the Public Health Service Commissioned Corps retirement system and establish a retirement trust fund similar to the Department of Defense Military Retirement Fund established through Public Law 98-94. The fund would be financed through: (a) contributions from employing agencies, determined by a normal cost accrual percentage applied to the basic pay of active duty officers, to cover future benefit costs; (b) contributions from the General Fund of the Treasury, based on an amortization schedule established by the Secretary of Health and Human Services, to cover the unfunded liability for retired and active duty officers incurred prior to establishment of the trust fund; and (c) interest on investments.

The status of the fund would be as follows:

SURVEY AND CERTIFICATION REVOLVING FUND

There is hereby established in the Treasury of the United States a Revolving Fund. Amounts in the Fund shall be available to the Secretary, without fiscal year limitation, to finance the costs of carrying out Federal and State survey and certification activities under Titles XVIII and XIX of the Social Security Act and activities under section 353 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 263a). Fees authorized by this paragraph and section 353 (m) of the Public Health Service Act shall be deposited in and credited to the Fund. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, including but not limited to sections 1903 and 1919 (g) of the Social Security Act, annually the Secretary shall establish and collect user fees from all providers and suppliers of services or items requesting certification under Titles XVIII or XIX of the Social Security Act (except clinical laboratories otherwise inspected and certified under section 353 of the Public Health Service Act) and payment thereof shall be made a condition of participation under said Titles. Such fees shall be determined in an amount sufficient to cover the estimated full cost of survey and certification activities not otherwise covered by fees collected pursuant to section 353 (m) of the Public Health Service Act. These fees shall be collected annually from each provider or supplier, regardless of whether the provider or supplier will be surveyed in the year for which the fees are being charged. Fees may be collected through deductions from payments to be made under Titles XVIII and XIX of the Social Security Act. Fees may vary by group or classification of provider or supplier, or by the relative complexity, type, or estimated cost of planned surveys, based on such considerations as the Secretary deems appropriate. Fees established under this paragraph and section 353 (m) of the Public Health Service Act shall be set and collected to maintain a minimum balance in the Fund equal to one month's estimated expenses.

There are two legislative proposals for social security: one would increase the social security earnings limit for those age 65 through 69 by $800 from $10,200 to $11,000 in 1992, by $200 from $10,800 to $11,000 in 1993, with a return to the current law projected $11,400 level in 1994; the other would pay social security benefits to rail beneficiaries who are denied basic social security protection under railroad retirement law. These ineligible rail beneficiaries include certain divorced spouses, widows, the children of disabled employees or retirees, and survivors of rail sector annuitants. Amounts that would have been transferred under the financial interchange to the rail system fund ($57 million) would be applied to payments to beneficiaries.

DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

This chapter presents the budget and program estimates for the Department of Housing and Urban Development. The major divisions of this chapter conform to the following Department activities:

Housing programs cover the Department's major housing subsidy programs except for those activities under the public and Indian housing programs. This includes the new initiatives for Homeownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere Grants (HOPE Grants), the HOME Investment Partnerships Program and Shelter Plus Care. The mortgage insurance activities of the Federal Housing Administration, including loan management and property disposition activities, are also included under this heading. Other activities included under this heading are the Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration and manufactured home inspection and monitoring programs.

Public and Indian housing programs cover public housing management and development activities (including modernization, drug elimination efforts, and resident management programs) and provision of Indian housing assistance. Also included are credit and financing activities related to development and modernization.

Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) covers the Department's programs to assist in the availability of mortgage credit and stabilize financing of selected types of mortgage loans including the guarantee of mortgage-backed securities.

Community planning and development covers the community development grant program authorized by the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended, and the homeless grant programs. This heading also includes the administration of the rental rehabilitation grant, urban homesteading, and rehabilitation loan (section 312) programs repealed in the 1990 National Affordable Housing Act, as well as earlier terminated categorical community development programs, including urban development action grants, and the revolving fund for liquidating programs.

Fair housing and equal opportunity includes the Fair Housing Assistance Program authorized by title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, as amended, and the Fair Housing Initiatives Program.

Policy development and research includes the policy development, economic analysis, program evaluation, and research activities of the Department.

Departmental Management includes the Department's Salaries and Expenses and the Inspector General accounts.

A total of $9.1 billion is being requested for 1992 under Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing. In order to more clearly illustrate the impact of activities being proposed for 1992, the programs included under "Subsidized Housing" have been divided between two program and financing schedules. The financial data summarized above relate to those programs for which funds are being requested in 1992—the Section 8, Section 202 rental subsidy, and Public and Indian Housing programs.

All other subsidized housing programs have been grouped within a separate schedule presented later. These include: Section 235 Homeownership, Section 236 Rental Assistance, the Rent Supplement program, College Housing grants and balances from funds appropriated under the Annual Contributions account for Rental Rehabilitation grants and Rental Housing Development grants (HoDAG).

The funds will be used for rental assistance for approximately 150,900 units and for amendments to existing contracts—including increases resulting from rental adjustments in compliance with "Rainier View" provisions in the Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989.

Included within the total number of units proposed for this budget are 83,680 incremental units. This total is comprised of 5,000 units to assist the elderly or handicapped, 8,680 incremental vouchers in support of the HOPE initiative and 70,000 incremental vouchers.

In addition, funding is being requested elsewhere in support of 1,367 incremental units of Moderate Rehabilitation Single Room Occupancy, 1,000 units for the handicapped under Shelter Plus Care and 5,376 units under Rental Housing Assistance for the Homeless—bringing the total number of incremental units to 91,423.

No new development funding is being requested for either public or Indian housing. However, the total includes amounts for amendments to existing contracts and for lease adjustments. About $2.3 billion is being requested for modernization activities.

Rental assistance for the elderly and handicapped is being proposed in conjunction with 2,000 new construction units provided under a new grant program authorized in the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act (P.L. 101-625). In addition, assistance also will be made available for 3,000 leased units—2,000 for the elderly and 1,000 for the handicapped. The handicapped will be further assisted through 1,000 units of leased housing being requested under the voucher component of the Shelter Plus Care proposal discussed later in this Appendix.

Annual Contributions funding is being requested in support of the HOPE initiative authorized in the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act. Within this context: vouchers will be used to promote public housing homeownership, preservation/prepayment and elderly independence. Furthermore, $10 million is being requested under the HOPE grant program for supportive services to be provided in conjunction with the elderly independence initiative.

In order to address the problems of cash-flow inadequacy, deterioration in physical condition and replacement reserves shortages in HUD-assisted and insured properties, the Department is proposing to implement a low-income resident protection program, starting in 1992. This multi-faceted proposal is aimed at confronting current and anticipated problems so as to minimize losses to project residents, the FHA insurance funds and the public. Annual Contributions assistance is being requested in support of three of the initiative's components—property disposition vouchers, project-based assistance and rent supplement/rental assistance payments conversions.

The budget also reflects proposals for equality between certificate and voucher fees and language requiring that future contract increases be funded from funds already provided. Thus precluding the need for further appropriations for contract amendments in the future.

The program being proposed for Annual Contributions in 1992 is summarized in the following table.

Lower-income housing (section 8).—The budget proposes the reservation of 150,903 units under Annual Contributions, of which 147,903 will be section 8 units, 2,000 units represent rental assistance in support of the new grant program for the elderly and handicapped and 1,000 section 202(h) units for the handicapped.

Included within the 147,903 section 8 units are 38,698 preservation/prepayment, 6,944 Public Housing Homeownership Replacement (incremental) units and 1,736 public housing Non-purchaser (incremental) units under the HOPE initiative. There are 25,625 units as part of a comprehensive strategy to address the physical and financial problems of HUD-assisted and insured multifamily projects under a Low-income Resident Economic Empowerment initiative. In order to expand affordable rental housing opportunities, 70,000 regular incremental voucher units are being proposed. There are 2,000 units of leased housing for the elderly and 2,900 units in other set-asides.

Housing for the elderly and handicapped (section 202).—The Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act authorized a grant program to make new construction assistance available to elderly and handicapped persons. In conjunction with this new development program, rental housing assistance to aid low-income tenants is being requested in 1992 under the Annual Contributions account. According to the terms of the authorizing legislation, the new program was to begin in 1992. However, language included in the 1991 Appropriations Act (P.L. 101-507) both funded and authorized program operations—starting in 1991. In addition legislation is being proposed which will permit the use of leased existing housing to serve the needs of the elderly, handicapped and chronically mentally ill. These leased units will require rental subsidy assistance but will not require grant funding under the section 202 grant program.

Public and Indian housing.—No new development funding is proposed for 1991 for either the public housing or Indian housing programs. However, $121 million is to be set aside under the home program for Indian families. A total of $88 million is requested for amendments to existing contracts and $24 million for lease adjustments. Funding for modernization activities amounting to $2.3 billion is being proposed for 1992.

In order to make resources available for the HOME program authorized in the Cranston-Gonzalez Act, supplemental appropriation action is being proposed which will reduce funding made available for public housing development for 1991 by $500 million. Details of this proposal are included in the Detailed Budget Estimates section of the Appendix, subpart B.

Section 8 funding for the renewal of expiring subsidy contracts and moderate rehabilitation Single Room Occupancy units is being requested under separate accounts.

To more concisely portray budget activity under the subsidized housing programs, the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing account has been split into two accounts: Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing, which proceeds this section, and Other Assisted Housing Programs presented immediately above.

Rent supplement.—Rent supplement assistance payments will continue to be made on behalf of qualified low-income tenants in approximately 20,000 units which have not converted to section 8. The proposed rescission language for Rent Supplement will allow for the rescission of all recaptures from insured projects where the owners elect to convert to Section 8.

Section 235.—The Housing and Urban-Rural Recovery Act of 1983 (Public Law 98-181) authorized a restructured section 235 program based on a 10-year interest reduction subsidy. A total of $150 million of budget authority was provided in the Second Supplemental Appropriations Act of 1984 (Public Law 98-396) to fund the program. Recaptures of budget authority from terminations must be transferred into the Homeownership Assistance Fund account established pursuant to Public Law 98-181. Amounts deposited will be available for use to assist program beneficiaries still in need of assistance at the expiration of their present ten-year assistance contracts. Consistent with the provisions of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Reform Act of 1989, the Department is planning to refinance eligible section 235 mortgages bearing high interest rates.

Section 236.—The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968, as amended, authorizes the section 236 Rental Housing Assistance Program which subsidizes the monthly mortgage payment that an owner of a rental or cooperative project is required to make. This interest subsidy reduces rents for lower income tenants.

In the past, the Rental Housing Assistance Rescission allowed the rescission of not more than $2,000,000 in uncommitted balances. Since recaptures in the Section 236 program vary greatly from year to year, a change in the language is being proposed which will allow the rescission of all recaptures from insured projects. Also, language has been included which will result in permanent rescission of recaptured budget authority.

The Rental Housing Department Grant (HoDAG) program provides assistance to States and units of local government for the development of rental housing. Under language included in the Housing Act of 1987, the HoDAG program was terminated at the end of 1989. However, the 1991 appropriations Act (P.L. 101-507) provided, that funds be made available for two HoDAG projects from previously appropriated funds.

The table below reflects the consolidated outlay total for both the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing Account and the Other Assisted Housing account.

Legislation was enacted in 1990 for the Homeownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere Grants (HOPE Grants). The Budget requests an appropriation of $865.4 million in 1992. Under the program, grants will be used to convert public housing and distressed FHA multifamily properties to homeownership; and to assist non-profits with programs to sell Government-held single family properties to low-income families.

HOPE Grants will be used for acquisition (where appropriate), rehabilitation, replacement reserves, operating reserves, counseling, and technical assistance.

The HOPE Grants appropriation includes $10.4 million to fund the services component of a new program of voucher assistance for the frail elderly. (The housing voucher component is displayed in the housing assistance account.)

Also, section 8 certificates and vouchers will be used to provide replacement housing and transitional assistance for public housing developments that convert to low-income homeownership.

Under the congregate services program the Department contracted directly with local public housing agencies and section 202 housing for the elderly or handicapped sponsors to supply support services, including meals and other services. These 3- and 5-year contracts commenced in 1980 and were evaluated over the life of the contracts. This program did not achieve its primary goal, to prevent premature institutionalization of the elderly. Such activities can more properly be carried out under the Department's HOPE initiative. Therefore, no new funding is being requested for 1992 and it is being proposed that the $9.5 million appropriated for 1991 be rescinded.

The Shelter Plus Care Program provides rental assistance through three components, one of which is an expansion of the Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program for Single Room Occupancy Dwellings for Homeless Individuals (Shelter Plus Care: SRO). Under this component, HUD will provide rental assistance for a ten-year period to assist homeless persons with disabilities (primarily persons who are seriously mentally ill, have chronic problems with alcohol or drugs, or have acquired immunodeficiency syndrome and related diseases) to live in moderately rehabilitated SRO housing. Recipients must match the rental assistance with supportive services that are equal in value to the aggregate amount of rental assistance. Eligible applicants are States, units of general local government and Indian tribes who would submit applications jointly with a Public Housing Agency. These features represent departures from HUD's current Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program for Single Room Occupancy Dwellings for Homeless Individuals. Selection of grant recipients of Shelter Plus Care: SRO funds will be made on a competitive basis nationwide.

This budget requests an appropriation of $53,333,000 for the Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation—Single Room Occupancy of the Shelter Plus Care program. This request is net of the Administration's Davis-Bacon initiative, which would reduce the development costs of construction programs. The gross amount is $54,200,000. The requested amount will support approximately 1,367 rooms in specially designed projects or rooming houses.

The Shelter Plus Care Program provides rental assistance through three components, one of which is a program for rental housing assistance under a Section 202 of the Housing Act of 1959 or its successor program under Section 811 of the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act. Under this component, HUD will provide rental assistance for a five-year period to assist homeless persons with disabilities (primarily persons who are seriously mentally ill, have chronic problems with alcohol or drugs, or have acquired immunodeficiency syndrome and related diseases). Recipients must match the rental assistance with supportive services that are equal in value to the aggregate amount of rental assistance. Eligible applicants are States, units of general local government and Indian tribes. The contract between HUD and the grant recipient will require the recipient to enter into a contract with the non-profit organization that owns or leases housing meeting the requirements of Section 202 or Section 811, as appropriate. Selection of grant recipients of Shelter Plus Care: 202 funds will be made on a competitive basis nationwide.

Supplemental funds of $18,000 thousand are requested in 1991. This Budget requests an appropriation of $37,200 thousand in 1992 for the leased housing component of the Shelter Plus Care program as authorized by the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act, as amended by the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act (P.L. 101-625). This level of funding is expected to assist approximately 1,000 handicapped individuals in the form of vouchers to help them find the housing necessary to meet their special needs.

FHA—MUTUAL MORTGAGE INSURANCE PROGRAM ACCOUNT

During fiscal year 1992, commitments to guarantee loans to carry out the purposes of section 203(b) of the National Housing Act, as amended, shall not exceed a loan principal of $53,592,816,000.

For administrative expenses necessary to carry out the guaranteed loan program, $255,645,000, to be derived from the FHA-Mutual Mortgage Insurance Guaranteed Loans Receipt account, of which not to exceed $250,100,000 may be transferred to and merged with the appropriations for Salaries and Expenses; and of which not to exceed $5,545,000 may be transferred to and merged with the appropriations for the Office of the Inspector General.

The Nehemiah grants program was authorized by the HCD Act of 1987 and funded in 1989, 1990 and 1991 under the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing account. The legislation authorizes a revolving fund into which are deposited appropriated funds. This program and financing schedule indicates the appropriation from 1990 and 1991 as being transferred from the Annual Contributions account to the Nehemiah revolving fund.

The program provides loans to eligible families to assist in the purchase of new or substantially rehabilitated units. The purpose of the program was: (1) to encourage homeownership by families not otherwise able to afford homeownership; (2) to undertake a concentrated effort to rebuild the depressed areas of the cities and to create sound and attractive neighborhoods; and (3) to increase the employment of neighborhood residents. No separate program is being proposed for 1991. Activities eligible under the Nehemiah Program are being included in the new HOPE and HOME programs.

Section 620 of the National Manufactured Housing Construction and Safety Standards Act of 1974, as amended, authorizes enforcement of appropriate construction standards for the construction, design and performance of manufactured homes to assure their quality, durability and safety. All manufactured homes produced since the standards took effect on June 15, 1976 must comply with Federal construction and safety standards. The States are actively encouraged to participate in the program under compliance plans approved by HUD.

A fee is charged to the manufacturers for each manufactured home produced to cover the costs of the monitoring and enforcement activities by HUD contract agents. Fees are deposited in a special fund administered by the Department, and a portion of the fee receipts are transferred to the salaries and expenses account to defray the direct administrative expenses of the program.

The Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act provides protection to the public with respect to purchases or leases of subdivision lots. Statements of record must be filed with the Secretary before subdivisions with 100 or more lots may be sold in interstate commerce, except when the subdivision is eligible for exemption.

The Secretary is authorized to charge a fee, to be paid by the developer when filing a statement of record. The fee receipts are permanently appropriated and have helped finance a portion of the direct administrative expenses incurred in program operations.

¹ Includes the transfer of the GI and SRI Fund Guaranteed Loan balances to a new account.

The Federal Housing Administration (FHA) fund consists of four separate funds. Financial data for each individual fund is maintained for control and reporting purposes. The Department is proposing to split the Federal Housing Administration Fund into two separate accounts beginning in 1992. The existing account will be renamed and will include the Mutual Mortgage Insurance (MMI) and Cooperative Management Housing Insurance (CMHI) Funds. The new account will be comprised of the General Insurance (GI) and Special Risk Insurance (SRI) Funds. The new account structure will present more clearly the operations of the various funds.

The Mutual mortgage insurance fund provides for the Department's basic single family mortgage insurance program.

The Cooperative management housing insurance fund, also a mutual fund, provides mortgage insurance for management-type cooperatives authorized by section 213 of the National Housing Act, as amended.

Losses connected with defaulted notes, assigned mortgages and acquired properties are charged to the appropriate insurance fund. During 1992, it is estimated that applications for single-family and multifamily mortgage insurance covering 1,076,579 units will be received and that mortgage insurance will be written covering 832,853 single-family and multifamily units. In addition, it is estimated that approximately 95,958 single-family and multifamily units will be acquired by the Department during 1992 and that 104,775 single-family and multifamily units will be sold.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from loan guarantees committed prior to 1992. This account is shown on a cash basis. All new activity in this program in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of loan guarantees that resulted from commitments in any year) is recorded in corresponding program and financing accounts.

More detailed activity information follows in the "Program Highlights" table shown below. The highlights table reflects the consolidated activity of all FHA Insurance Funds.

Insurance reserves from operations at the end of 1991 are estimated to be in a surplus position for the Mutual mortgage insurance and Cooperative management housing insurance funds, but in a deficit status of about $15.6 billion for the GI and SRI Funds. The status of estimated insurance reserves from operations (retained income or deficit) through 1991 is as follows:

The fiscal year 1991 Budget stated that the FHA Mutual Mortgage Insurance Program, HUD's major single-family insurance program, was potentially facing billions of dollars in future losses. Based on an independent actuarial analysis of the Fund, the Administration reviewed various proposals to stabilize its financial position. The objective was to rebuild the economic value of the fund while maintaining the following principles: (1) meeting the needs of low- and moderate-income first-time homebuyers; (2) establishing insurance premiums that reflect the risk of default; and (3) requiring homebuyers to make minimum equity contributions to protect them and the Fund from excessive default risk.

The major reforms to this single-family insurance program enacted in the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1990 and the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act of 1990 meet the capital requirements—1.25 percent within 2 years and 2.0 percent within 10 years—and the principles.

Beginning in 1991, FHA homebuyers will pay an annual premium of 50 basis points (0.05 percent) for a specified number of years depending upon the amount of downpayment the homebuyer makes. This annual premium is in addition to the upfront premium. The current 3.8 percent upfront premium will be reduced to 3.0 percent beginning in 1993 and to 2.25 percent in 1995. Homebuyer equity will be increased by limiting to 57 percent the amount of closing costs that can be financed in the loan. Prior policy had allowed 100 percent of closing costs to be financed in the loan. In addition, distributive share payments (mutuality benefits) will no longer be made to FHA-insured homeowners who pay off their loans unless the entire fund is actuarially sound.

Other changes to the single-family program included in the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act of 1990 were the permanent extension of the high-cost home mortgage limit to the lower of $124,875 or 95 percent of the area median house price; and elimination of vacation properties from the insurance program.

Operating Expenses.—Under Credit Reform all administrative expenses for FHA programs are to be reflected in the Program Account. Amounts required for salaries and expenses will be transferred from the Program Account to the HUD Salaries and Expenses and Inspector General Account.

Financial Condition.—The following tables reflect the revenues and financial condition of all four of the FHA funds in 1990 and 1991 based on Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (GAAP). However, amounts in 1992 reflect only the MMI/CMHI Liquidating Account. The 1990 financial statements are considered preliminary pending completion of the annual audit.

The General insurance fund provides for a large number of specialized mortgage insurance programs, including the insurance of loans for property improvements as well as for cooperatives, condominiums, housing for the elderly, land development, group practice medical facilities and nonprofit hospitals.

The Special risk insurance fund provides mortgage insurance on behalf of mortgagors eligible for interest reduction payments who otherwise would not be eligible for mortgage insurance. In addition, the fund provides insurance on mortgages covering experimental housing where strict adherence to State or local building regulations is not observed. Also provided is insurance for high-risk mortgagors who normally would not be eligible for mortgage insurance.

Budget program.—As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from loan guarantees committed prior to 1992. This account is shown on a cash basis. All new activity in this program in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year) is recorded in corresponding program and financing accounts.

This budget proposes the forgiveness of approximately $7.0 billion of Treasury debt expected to be accumulated in the General and Special Risk Insurance Funds by the end of 1991. The debt was incurred over the past twenty years to finance the continuing operations of high risk insurance programs not designed originally to be actuarially sound. There is virtually no likelihood that funds sufficient to retire the debt can be generated by ongoing operation of the two funds. Forgiveness will eliminate annual interest payments by the GI and SRI funds to the Treasury of approximately $600 million. Future insuring activity under the Credit Reform approach will require the provision of subsidy at the time of insurance commitment to cover anticipated future costs of the programs.

Note.—Amounts for direct loan obligations reflect reservations of section 202 funds. Loan obligations shown under the program and financing schedule reflect loans that have reached the initial closing stage of processing.

The housing for the elderly or handicapped fund was established pursuant to section 202 of the Housing Act of 1959, as amended. The fund provides direct loans to nonprofit organizations building and managing housing projects for lower income persons who are elderly or handicapped.

Projects must include an assured range of necessary services for the occupants of such projects. In addition, the section 8 lower income housing assistance payments program have been used in conjunction with the section 202 program. Applications under the two programs have been processed simultaneously.

The data included in these schedules represent direct loan activities funded under the Housing for the Elderly or Handicapped Loan Fund. Starting in 1991, activities in support of the needs of the elderly and handicapped will be carried out under a new grant program funded in the 1991 Appropriations Act (P.L. 101-507) and authorized in the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act (P.L. 101-625).

While the Cranston-Gonzalez Act provided for implementation of the grant program in fiscal year 1992, the 1991 Appropriations Act permitted the program to begin in 1991.

These schedules reflect the continued funding of the Section 202 direct loan pipeline. The operations of the new grant program are included within new account schedules presented elsewhere in this Appendix.

The program and financing schedule for this account summarizes the Federal government's obligations for this program. The amounts reflected in the following summary of administrative commitments reflect outstanding section 202 fund reservations, whereas, the obligations portion of the program and financing schedule reflects commitments which have reached the initial loan closing stage of processing.

A total of $152.8 million is being requested for capital grants and other expenses for the elderly and handicapped as authorized under sections 801 and 811 of the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act (P.L. 101-625).

This level of funding will support approximately 2,000 units of new construction—1,000 for the elderly and 1,000 for handicapped persons. In addition, funding is being requested under the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing account in order to provide 2,000 units of existing leased housing for the elderly and 1,000 units of leased housing for the handicapped. Funds also are being requested for another 1,000 leased units for the handicapped under the Shelter Plus Care proposal, included elsewhere in this Appendix.

Under the terms of the authorizing legislation, the program was to begin in 1992. However, language included in the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development and Other Independent Agencies Appropriation Act, 1991 (P.L. 101-507) authorized implementation of the program during 1991. Consistent with language in sections 801(a) and 811(l)(1) of the Cranston-Gonzalez Act (P.L. 101-625), funds appropriated for the grant program in 1991 will be transferred to the grant fund established for the new program.

Funding for rental assistance on behalf of low-income tenants of these elderly and handicapped projects is included under the Annual Contributions account. This includes both the amounts appropriated for 1991 and amounts requested for 1992.

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 authorized the Secretary to establish a revolving fund into which rental collections in excess of the established basic rents for units in section 236 subsidized projects would be deposited.

The Housing and Community Development Amendment of 1978 authorized the Secretary, subject to approval in appropriation acts, to transfer excess rent collections received after 1978 to the Troubled projects operating subsidy program, renamed the Flexible Subsidy Fund. Prior to that time, collections were used for paying tax and utility increases in section 236 projects. The Housing and Community Development Act of 1980 amended the 1978 Act by authorizing the transfer of excess rent collections regardless of when collected.

This Budget assumes that the resources from the Rental Housing Assistance Fund will be used to fund the Project Recovery Repair portion of the Department's proposed Low-Income Resident Economic Empowerment Program.

The Flexible Subsidy Fund, formerly the Troubled Projects Operating Subsidy Program, assists financially troubled subsidized projects under certain FHA authorities. The subsidies are intended to prevent potential losses to the FHA fund resulting from project insolvency and to preserve these projects as a viable source of housing for low- and moderate-income tenants.

The Department is proposing a comprehensive Low Income Resident Economic Empowerment Program designed to deal with the growing backlog of multifamily projects which are either financially or physically troubled or have the potential to become so in the near future. The Flexible Subsidy Fund is proposed to serve as the conduit for funds under the revised Program. The Department is requesting an appropriation of $203.4 million for 1992. This request, along with a transfer of an estimated $75 million from the Rental Housing Assistance Fund and an estimated $12.1 million in other income, would support a program level of $290.5 million in assistance to approximately 172 projects.

The new program will provide grant funds, recoverable upon sale, for project repairs that are necessary to bring those projects into compliance with HUD regulatory requirements. The program will provide for increases to project accounts, such as "reserve for replacements", to ensure that funded projects have the necessary resources for anticipated future repairs necessary to promote the long-term longevity of the projects as low-income housing resources.

In exchange for additional assistance, project owners would be required to provide an equity interest in the project for the low-income residents.

The program and financing schedule for this account summarizes the Federal Government's obligations for this program. The amounts shown in the following summary of administrative commitments reflects outstanding uncontracted reservations of flexible subsidy assistance. The obligations portion of the program and financing schedule reflects formally executed assistance.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from direct loans obligated prior to 1992. This account is shown on a cash basis.

The Nonprofit sponsor assistance fund provides interest-free loans to nonprofit organizations to plan housing projects to be financed under the section 202 housing for the elderly or handicapped program. To ensure a sufficient commitment by the sponsor to the proposed project, the fund will only finance up to 80 percent of the start-up costs through these "seed money" loans. Sponsors are required to demonstrate their financial capacity by providing 20 percent from their own funds which is repaid from the initial proceeds of the section 202 construction loan. Loans may not exceed $50,000. The Budget does not propose a loan limitation in 1992 since the new Elderly & Handicapped program provides money for technical assistance to help nonprofit sponsors to finance these "seed" costs.

Operating subsidy payments are provided to assist local Public Housing Agencies (PHAs) and Indian Housing Authorities (IHAs) to meet certain deficits in the operation of PHA-owned and IHA-owned low-income housing. These payments are in addition to the debt service and capital funding provided by HUD for development and modernization of low-income housing.

Funding was included in this account for drug prevention in 1990. A separate appropriation was made available for this purpose in 1991.

The operating subsidy estimates for 1992 are based primarily upon the Performance Funding System (PFS) formula, but include projected savings resulting from vacancy rule changes and other actions.

Drug elimination grants are provided to public housing agencies (PHAs) and Indian housing authorities (IHAs) to promote safe and decent housing communities by ridding PHAs and IHAs of drugs and drug-related crime. Funding for drug elimination grants were included in the "Payments for Operating of Low-Income Housing Projects" appropriation in both 1989 and 1990 and in the "Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing" appropriation in 1990.

In 1991, $150 million was appropriated under the Drug Elimination Grants for Low-Income Housing account. For 1992, $165 million is being requested for such activities under this account. The table below summarizes the funding levels provided and requested for drug elimination under the various funding sources for the period, 1990-1992.

The Low-Rent Public Housing Loan Fund is used to provide direct Federal loans to fund remaining Public Housing Agency (PHA) and Indian Housing Authority (IHA) construction, acquisition, and modernization activities reserved under the Annual Contributions appropriation through 1986. These loans are made from available resources of this fund and from borrowings from the Treasury. Under legislation enacted during 1986 (Public Law 99-272), the borrowings from the Treasury are forgiven at the end of each fiscal year and the loans to PHAs/IHAs are forgiven as construction, acquisition, and modernization activities are completed. Under the provisions of this legislation, $350 million of borrowings from the Treasury were forgiven in 1990, an estimated $200 million will be borrowed from the Treasury and forgiven in 1991 and an estimated $100 million will be borrowed from the Treasury and forgiven in 1992. The table below shows the status of outstanding loans for the period 1990-1992. The $96 million balance at the end of each year represents administrative loans, off-site facility loans, and preliminary loans on projects never undertaken and excess financing.

The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis. An explanation of credit reform, including a discussion of how subsidies are calculated, is included in Part Two, Chapter VIII.A of the Budget.

Public enterprise funds:LOANS TO FEDERAL NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION

The Treasury is authorized to make up to $2.25 billion of loans to the Federal National Mortgage Association. Such loans were made in the first few months of the Association's existence as a private corporation while it arranged lines of credit with commercial banks. No loans have been made since that time and the loan authority will be used only in emergency situations.

The Association is required to manage and liquidate its initial mortgage portfolio and other mortgages, loans or obligations. Liquidation of the portfolio is accomplished through regular principal repayments according to their amortization schedules, by sales of mortgages when they can be absorbed by private investors without disruption of normal market conditions and through principal credits arising from prepayments and foreclosures.

The fund's initial portfolio consisted of mortgages on hand, or purchased under contracts made before November 1, 1954. Certain additional mortgages, loans, and other obligations may be acquired for this portfolio from the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. Residential housing mortgages may also be acquired from any Federal instrumentality.

Budget program.—Congress approved appropriation language included in the 1985 Budget that: (1) forgave all outstanding Treasury borrowing issued under the Special Assistance Functions Fund and Emergency Mortgage Purchase Assistance Fund and (2) transferred all remaining assets and liabilities of these funds to the Management and Liquidating Functions Fund.

The last remaining mortgage commitments were purchased in 1988. The remaining $34 million in mortgages were sold in 1989, leaving an investment portfolio of FHA debentures that were acquired through mortgage foreclosures. However, due to a court order, GNMA is required to reinstate a section 221(d)(3) mortgage that had prepaid. This is expected to take place in 1991. GNMA does not foresee having to reinstate any additional prior mortgages that had either been sold or prepaid.

Financing.—These functions are financed principally by portfolio liquidations and by interest earned on FHA debentures.

Operating results.—Net income of $3.6 million and $4.5 million is expected in 1991 and 1992 respectively.

MEMORANDUM
2299	U.S. contingent liability for guaranteed loans outstanding, end of year	395,093,776	421,298,608	379,883,193

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from commitments to issue guarantees of mortgage-backed securities prior to 1992. This account is shown on a cash basis. All new activity in this program in 1992 and beyond is recorded in corresponding program and financing accounts.

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 authorized the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) to guarantee the timely payment of principal and interest on privately issued securities that are backed by pools of FHA, VA and FmHA mortgages. The GNMA guarantee gives lenders access to the capital markets for funds to originate new loans. Over 95% of new FHA and VA loans are pooled into new GNMA securities.

Budget Program.—Program activity is summarized below:

(In thousands of dollars)

	1990 actual	1991 est.	1992 est.
Commitment Limitation	81,713,500	80,000,000	74,769,293
Commitments Issued	70,275,867	69,932,389	74,769,293
Guarantees Issued	64,039,444	63,002,152	62,307,744
Securities Outstanding	395,093,776	421,298,608	440,944,782

VA Indemnification.—This Budget assumes enactment of a Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) legislative proposal to indemnify GNMA for losses incurred as a result of no-bids on VA single family mortgages in GNMA-acquired pools. No-bids occur when VA elects to pay its guarantee amount rather than bid-in defaulted VA loans at foreclosure sales for the full mortgage amount due.

Financing.—GNMA Issuers are assessed commitment, guarantee and other fees to cover costs incurred by GNMA and to fund a reserve against possible future payments under the guarantee.

Operating results.—Fee collections, interest, and other income are expected to exceed expenses by $396 million and $410 million in 1991 and 1992, respectively. These amounts will be retained to cover future year expenses and as a reserve against losses that may be incurred on guarantees.

The HOME Investment Partnerships program is authorized by the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act (P.L. 101-625). This new program will provide assistance to States and units of local government, through formula allocation, for the purpose of expanding the supply and affordability of housing. Eligible activities would include acquisition, rehabilitation, tenant-based rental assistance, and, under certain prescribed situations, new construction.

Up to $25 million of the available funds may be provided to eligible recipients through competitive grants or contracts for technical assistance or capacity building. Formula funds will be distributed 40 percent to States and 60 percent to eligible local governments after a setaside for Indian tribes. Jurisdictions participating in the program will be required to develop a "Comprehensive Housing Affordability Strategy" in order to receive funding.

Beginning in 1992, the Budget proposes that $25 million of the $1 billion appropriation be set aside for a program of lead-based paint abatement in privately-owned housing. These funds would be made available as grant assistance to local governments on a competitive basis.

The Budget also proposes a supplemental appropriation of $500 million to initiate the HOME program in 1991 (See "Detailed Budget Estimates", Subpart B).

This program is authorized under section 17(a)(1)(A) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended by section 301 of the Housing and Urban-Rural Recovery Act of 1983 (Public Law 98-181). Rental Rehabilitation grants have been made to States, urban counties, and cities with populations in excess of 50,000 to help support the rehabilitation of privately owned rental housing.

The Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act (P.L. 101-625) terminates the Rental Rehabilitation program effective October 1, 1991, and the Budget proposes that the program's unexpended balances will be transferred to the revolving fund (liquidating programs), effective October 1, 1991. The Budget also proposes to rescind the 1991 appropriations of $70 million to offset partially the cost of implementing the new HOPE Grants and HOME Investment Partnerships programs in 1991.

Funding for this program before 1989 was provided under the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing account. A separate appropriation, independent of the Assisted Housing account, was provided beginning in 1989.

For purposes of comparison, the table below presents data for the entire program, including that resulting from appropriations under the Assisted Housing account and also reflects the impact of the proposed rescission of $70 million.

Comparable amounts for 1990 are shown in those accounts as follows: ADAMHA $22,416 thousand; DoED School Improvement—$7,404 thousand; DoED Vocational and Adult Education—$7,397 thousand; and DOL Training and Employment Services—$11,343 thousand. Comparable amounts for 1991 are shown in those accounts as follows: ADAMHA $22,299 thousand; DoED School Improvement—$7,313 thousand; DoED Vocational and Adult Education—$9,759 thousand; and DOL Training and Employment Services—$12,723 thousand.

Title IV, subtitle D, of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (Public Law 100-77), authorizes the Supplemental Facilities To Assist the Homeless program (SAFAH), which provides comprehensive assistance for particularly innovative programs or alternative methods of meeting the immediate and long-term needs of the homeless. Funding is also available to supplement assistance provided under the Supportive housing demonstration program and the Emergency shelter grants program to help meet the needs of special population groups among the homeless and to put underutilized public buildings to use assisting the homeless.

Beginning in 1992, the budget proposes that funding under this program be used to support particularly innovative programs for, or alternative methods of, meeting the immediate and long-term needs of homeless individuals and families. This proposal consolidates funding previously provided for homeless assistance programs of the Departments of Health and Human Services, Education, and Labor. This initiative has the advantage of providing a single source of funding for projects encompassing a variety of needs. Successful applicants for assistance would be chosen competitively by HUD and other Federal agency officials with expertise in the areas for which assistance is requested. Funding under this program would be awarded on a matching basis.

The $11.3 million appropriated for SAFAH in 1991 is being transferred to the Shelter Plus Care Homeless Rental Housing Assistance program, pursuant to section 837(c) of the National Affordable Housing Act (P.L. 101-625).

The Homeless Rental Housing Assistance program, which is a component of Shelter Plus Care, is authorized by title IV (subtitle F, part II) of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (P.L. 101-77), as amended by section 837 of the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act (P.L. 101-625). This new program provides assistance to States, units of local government and Indian tribes, for the purpose of providing rental assistance to the homeless. Funds will be awarded to eligible recipients on the basis of a national competition.

At least 50 percent of all funding for Shelter Plus Care programs will be used for homeless individuals who are seriously mentally ill, have problems with alcohol or drugs, or persons with AIDs and related diseases. Participating jurisdictions are required to supplement the Federal assistance with an equal amount of matching funds for supportive services. Program applicants are also required to submit a plan for identifying eligible persons to be assisted, coordinating the provision of supportive services, and ensuring the adequacy of supportive services. The applicant's plan must also be consistent with the approved housing strategy of the unit of local government within which the rental housing assistance will be provided.

The Budget also proposes a supplemental appropriation of $80 million to initiate the Homeless Rental Housing Assistance program in 1991 (see Chapter XIII. A, "Detailed Budget Estimates"). In addition, $11.3 million appropriated in 1991 for the Supplemental Assistance for Facilities to Assist the Homeless program is being transferred to the Homeless Rental Housing Assistance program, pursuant to section 837(c) of P.L. 101-625, for a total 1991 funding level of $91.3 million.

Guaranteed loans.—Guaranteed loan assistance under section 108 was provided to eligible communities to finance acquisition of real property, rehabilitation of publicly owned real property, and certain related expenses. In the past the Federal Financing Bank financed these guaranteed loans. The Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1985 requires private financing of all loan guarantees committed after July 1, 1986. FFB will continue disbursing loans for commitments approved prior to July 1, 1986. No guarantee commitments are proposed for 1992, and legislation is being proposed to repeal section 108.

State regulatory program grants.—This program activity is to provide grants to States for the operation of permanent enforcement programs under the terms of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977 (the Act). As of September 30, 1990, 24 States with actual or planned coal mining facilities had approved State programs.

Federal regulatory programs.—This activity includes programs for Federal oversight of State permanent regulatory programs, for monitoring State inspection and enforcement, for the provision of technical assistance to States, for the assessment and collection of civil penalties imposed pursuant to the Act, and for the administration of the Federal regulatory program in States without approved permanent enforcement programs. In addition, it also includes funding for the Office of Surface Mining (OSM) to perform reclamation in cases where performance bonds have been forfeited and OSM is the regulatory authority, and funding derived from collections of civil penalties pursuant to the Act, which is used by OSM and the States for reclamation projects.

General administration.—This activity includes: the Offices of the Director and Deputy Directors; the Headquarters staffs for Public Affairs, Equal Employment Opportunity, Congressional Liaison, Information Systems Management, Planning and Analysis, Budget, Correspondence, and Issues Management; and the Divisions of Financial Management; Personnel; and Management Services. This activity represents only that portion of the total General Administration expenses attributable to the Regulation and Technology appropriation. The remainder has been requested from the Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund.

State reclamation program grants.—Each State and Tribe with an approved reclamation program is entitled, subject to appropriation, to receive 50 percent of Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund revenues derived from operating mines in that State or Tribal Land. With grants, States and Tribes assume primary responsibility for addressing problems such as subsidence, underground fires, open shafts, and acid drainage in accordance with priorities set forth in the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977 (the Act).

Federal reclamation programs.—This activity includes fee collection, and assistance to States in developing reclamation programs, abandoned mine lands reclamation projects undertaken directly by the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement and the Rural Abandoned Mine Program (RAMP) administered by the Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service.

Small operator assistance payments.—This activity provides for payments for authorized services to eligible coal mine operators in preparing applications for mining permits under a permanent State or Federal regulatory program. These services include determining the probable hydrologic consequences of the proposed mining operation and analysis of test borings or core samples.

General administration.—This activity includes the offices described for the General Administration activity in the Regulation and Technology appropriation. The funds for this activity represent only that portion of general administration expenses attributable to the Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund.

The Geological Survey provides basic scientific data and information concerning water, land, and mineral resources. Funding for 1992 emphasizes water-quality research, and continues global change research and the development of advanced cartographic systems (ACS).

National mapping, geography, and surveys.—The national mapping program produces and makes available, in printed and digital format, cartographic and geographic base data, multipurpose and special-purpose maps. Map receipts are retained for map printing and distribution.

Geologic and mineral resource surveys and mapping.—The national program of onshore and offshore geologic research and investigations produces: (1) improved methods and instruments for mineral and energy assessments; (2) geologic, geo-physical, and geochemical maps and analyses; (3) information on the chemistry and physics of the Earth, the climate, and the geologic processes by which it was formed and is being modified; (4) information on geologic hazards; and (5) information for use by other Federal and State agencies in the management of public lands and in national policy determinations.

Water resources investigations.—The national program of water resources investigations has the objective of appraising the Nation's water resources and ensuring that the data necessary to develop and manage them efficiently and effectively are available when needed. The program produces data and analyses to support decisions on water planning, water management, water quality, energy development, and enhancement of the quality of the environment.

General administration.—General administrative expenses provide for management, executive direction and coordination, and administrative support.

Facilities.—This activity finances the operation and maintenance, facilities management, and special support services for the operation of the national center headquarters and field centers.

Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are from States and municipalities for cooperative efforts and proceeds from sale to the public of copies of photographs and records; proceeds from sale of personal property; reimbursements from permittees and licensees of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission; and reimbursements from friendly countries and international organizations for technical assistance. Reimbursements from other Federal agencies are for mission related work performed at the request of the financing agency.

The Geological Survey has 15 quarters located at geomagnetic or seismic observatories. The operation and maintenance of these quarters, in the past, have been funded out of rental receipts which were credited to the Survey's annual SIR account. Under the provisions of Public Law 98-473, this account was established to receive rental receipts to remain available until expended for operation and maintenance of these quarters.

al commodities, and also on the minerals-related industries of about 168 countries. In-depth economic, technical, and policy studies that address the worldwide supply and demand for nonfuel minerals are conducted in this program. The Minerals Availability System, a computerized data base system, develops and utilizes methodologies for evaluation of mineral deposits based on quantifiable technical, economic, and social data. The program also includes mineral land assessments on certain lands managed by the Department of the Interior, Department of Defense, and Department of Agriculture in development of land management plans and withdrawal decisions required by the Secretary or other bureaus.

Research.—

Health, safety and mining technology.—This program focuses on long-term, high risk research designed to improve all aspects of the health and safety of miners, including prevention of occupational illnesses, accidents, and disasters, as well as innovations. Research is being concentrated on new concepts that promise revolutionary improvements in health and safety, reduced environmental impacts, increased access to marginal mineral deposits, increasing the domestic mineral reserve base, and increased productivity, including major efforts in automation, robotics, and innovative mining systems.

Minerals and materials science.—Research is conducted to develop basic information on fundamental scientific and engineering principles of minerals processing that will enhance the mineral industry's efforts to investigate new or alternative techniques which increase production and substitution of strategic, critical, and other essential minerals.

Environmental technology.—Research is conducted to mitigate or eliminate adverse environmental impacts associated with mining and mineral processing. Problems addressed include subsidence, acid mine drainage, and neutralization of waste materials. The bureau works closely with other bureaus and government agencies by providing expertise in hazardous waste cleanup and mitigation.

Mineral institutes.—Minerals research and engineering programs conducted at 30 colleges and universities nationwide are supported through public and private resources.

General administration.—The program supports executive direction, and financial and management services for the Bureau of Mines.

The Helium Act Amendments of 1960, Public Law 86-777 (50 U.S.C. 167), authorized activities necessary to provide sufficient helium to meet the current and foreseeable future needs of essential government activities. The program includes production, conservation, sale, and distribution of helium and involves the management of helium program facilities and resources to:

(a) Provide helium to meet current demands of all Federal agencies.

(b) Provide helium to meet the foreseeable future helium requirements of essential Government programs.

(c) Conduct investigations and evaluations to improve the helium program.

The Administration proposes to amend the Helium Act Amendments of 1960, Public Law 86-777 (50 U.S.C. 167) to permit federal government users to purchase refined helium from the private sector.
