Federal Reserve Board,
Dec. 13, 1919.

BANK DEBITS

Below is given the Federal Reserve Board's weekly statement of debits to individual account, reported through the Federal Reserve banks by over 150 of the country's more important clearing houses. Transactions cover the weekly periods ending Wednesday December 10 and 3, of the present year, and in case of most of the reporting centers also the weekly period ending a year earlier, i.e., December 11, 1918.

Aggregate debits to individual account were slightly smaller than the week before (which had only 5 business days), the daily average for the week under review being about 300 millions less than for the preceding week, and all the important centers reporting smaller average daily debits.

As compared with 1918 figures, available for 147 cities, aggregate debits to individual account were more than 2 billions larger, all important centers, except St. Louis and Minneapolis, reporting higher figures than a year ago.

The statement closes with a recapitulation giving comparative figures by reserve districts for 156 centers reporting complete data for the two most recent weeks, also like figures for the 147 centers for which data are available for the past week and the week ending December 11 of last year.
